THE COLLEGE OF WILLIAM AND MARY

Queens for a Day Through 32 Years

The Only Real Duty of the Homecoming Queen
Is To Enjoy Herself

"Homecoming Queen"--at William and Mary, those words conjure up images of a beautiful girl being crowned and kissed on the cheek by the President of the College, with all the razzle-dazzle that the William and Mary Band, the Queen's Guard, and a stadium full of students and alumni can muster at halftime.

Although women have brightened the campus scene since 1918, a look through the yearbooks reveals that the Homecoming Queen and her Court are a relatively new tradition. Only since 1946 has the student body chosen a coed to officially reign over the Homecoming festivities, with a retinue of beauties representing each class.

Fashions may have changed over the years from the pompadours and pearls of the '40's to the natural look that is now in style, but one element has remained the same in photographs of each Homecoming Queen--her smile. With this in mind, the Alumni Gazette interviewed some of William and Mary's royalty about their impressions of a once in a lifetime experience.

In the 1940's, students showed their spirit at Homecoming dramatically, with flaming torchlight parades and snack dances around a bonfire. Even so, William and Mary's first official Homecoming Queen, Mrs. Richard Spencer '49, says, "I don't think Homecomings have changed that much."

Mrs. Spencer, the former Mary Joan Wattles, reigned in 1946 and again in 1948. As a part-time model for Seventeen, Glamour and Harper's Bazaar magazines, she must have been an obvious choice for royal honors.

Now a native of Columbus,

Ohio, Mrs. Spencer says that then and now, the Homecoming Queen has one real duty--to "thoroughly enjoy herself."

Another alumna who shares Mrs. Spencer's feelings is Mrs. Richard Lewis '52 of Newport News, who was Queen Peggy Anne Derring in 1951. Mrs. Lewis says, "The whole thing makes you feel like Queen for a Day."

A member of Alpha Chi sorority, Mrs. Lewis remembers that "they called me at the sorority house to tell me, and I was thrilled and surprised--I felt it was such an honor." As they are today, Mrs. Lewis says that the dance, the parade and the football game were the three big events. "The parades were really big then," she recalls, "with all the sororities and fraternities trying to outdo each other." Mrs. Lewis and the Homecoming princesses rode on a special float Saturday morning, and the Alumni Gazette pronounced her "appropriately decorative."

Her memories of Homecoming are matched by those of daughter Susan Lewis '77, now a graduate student in the School of Business Administration at William and Mary. Mrs. Lewis says that she's seen her daughter's enthusiasm for Homecoming grow since Susan's undergraduate days. "Now she likes it because of the parties and reunions for the alumni--we're a real William and Mary family."

William and Mary's Homecoming Queen for 1966, the former Patricia Carol Burleigh '67, also has an alumnus in the family--her husband David S. McDougal '63, who works for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in Hampton.

"About the early '70's, Homecoming dropped off for a while, and the students were apathetic. Students now are turning back to the whole college routine."

Mrs. McDougal, who did graduate work at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science, recalls Homecoming in the '60's as "a bigger event than it is now," although some things haven't changed. "The Homecoming Parade was one of the big things, and at halftime, everyone was introduced--that's still the same," she says. "As I remember it, there were two different crowns, a specially made flowered crown for the game, and a rhinestone crown for the dance. There were two dances, and the one on Friday night was when they crowned the Queen."

In retrospect, Mrs. McDougal says, "About the early '70's, Homecoming dropped off for a while, and the students were apathetic. Students now are turning back to the whole college routine."

The former Jackie Sivertsen '72, who is now married to Robert W. Woolridge, Jr. '72, a third-year student at Marshall-Wythe School of Law, witnessed significant changes in students' attitudes toward Homecoming while she was at the College. "As the '70's hit and the years went on, I don't think it held the awe of previous years--not that same excitement. It was more of a low-key thing. I think that the College itself shifted in mood.

"When I first came, sororities and fraternities were very popular, and then people started doing fewer group things--there was more of an individual trend." By 1972, Mrs. Woolridge says, the pattern reversed itself. "It was going back to groups, but with people keeping a sense of individuality," she says.

Elected to Who's Who in Colleges and Universities in her senior year, Mrs. Woolridge was also chosen to receive a "different kind of award" at graduation--the Algernon Sydney Sullivan Award for humanitarianism, which she says "meant a great deal to me."

About her "royal" experience, Mrs. Woolridge remarks, "It was one of those things that had never happened to me before. To me, I didn't seem like the type of person they choose to be Homecoming Queen--I was excited."

While she has happy memories of that Homecoming, Mrs. Woolridge doesn't talk about it to friends and acquaintances. "In a way I feel like I'm patting myself on the back," she says. "I didn't have to go out and prove myself to become Homecoming Queen--I was just lucky enough to be elected."

Alumni Reveal Support

Survey Shows Private Funds Are Needed

William and Mary is "prestigious, traditional, rigorous, nationally ranked and friendly," in the eyes of its alumni.

This composite of descriptive words and phrases was derived from a new survey of alumni attitudes and opinions toward their alma mater.

In their eyes, the College is not "behind the times, unfriendly, too large and impersonal."

The survey, conducted in late spring by the Office of University Communications, found alumni generally supportive of the College's mission and goals. In one sense, the survey produced evidence that alumni would run William and Mary no differently, if they were in charge of making policies.

The survey was limited to a statistical sample of all alumni. Detailed questionnaires were mailed to about 400 randomly selected alumni, and responses from nearly 62% made up the analysis.

The respondents gave highest priority to improving and supporting faculty salary supplements and fringe benefits. Second priority was given by the respondents to assistance for needy undergraduates.

Other priorities, in order of alumni preference, were library acquisitions, faculty research, aid for needy graduate students, support for special lectures, concerts and theatre, athletic grants-in-aid, and operating support for the Society of the Alumni.

About 60% of the respondents said they believe academics and athletics are currently properly balanced at William and Mary. However, 17% disagreed and 17% were unsure.

A total of 94% of the respondents indicated they would encourage their children to consider application to William and Mary. A similar question raised recently among Notre Dame alumni, for example, produced only a 53% favorable response to that question.

The respondents were questioned about their attitudes toward private financial support for state colleges and universities. About 91% of them agreed that public colleges and universities must raise private money to enrich their programs. Yet only about 65% of the respondents had ever made a financial contribution to the College.

The questionnaire asked whether the Alumni Gazette was a helpful means of keeping up on developments at William and Mary. A total of 91% said "yes."

Directory Due Late October

The Bernard C. Harris Publishing Company, publishers of the William and Mary Alumni Directory, have scheduled its release for late October. At that time, copies will be mailed to all alumni who placed an order.

In late May and June, alumni were contacted by telephone for verification of the information to be printed in the Directory, and offered the opportunity to purchase a copy or advertise in it. Nearly 5,000 alumni have purchased copies of the volume, and only enough copies are being printed to fill these pre-publication orders.

Alumni will be listed alphabetically, geographically, and by class year with each entry to include name, class, degree(s), home address and telephone, and business or professional information.

For alumni who have placed an order but do not receive a copy by November 15, the Harris Publishing Company has requested that they contact the publisher direct at 170 Hamilton Avenue, White Plains, New York 10601.

Books Added To Library

Books added to the Paschall Library recently are Franklin County Public Schools: A Century of Progress and Profiles of Teachers I Have Known, by Harold W. Ramsey, '27, and Nicholas I, Emperor and Autocrat of All the Russias and Nikolai Miliutin, An Enlightened Russian Bureaucrat, by W. Bruce Lincoln, '61.

The Alumni Office archives is seeking a copy of the WINTER 1956 issue of the Royalist. Also needed are copies of any issues of the Alumni Gazette from 1933-1938, and copies of any of the Flat Hats for 1931-1963. Alumni who can help are urged to contact the Paschall Library, Alumni House, Post Office Box 60, Williamsburg, Virginia 23185.

The College recently received an Italian Renaissance wedding chest, a family heirloom from the estate of Norma Dow Eades Pollock, '27. The acquisition was assisted by her sister, Mary Elizabeth Eades, '23, of Williamsburg. The chest is located in the George Hallway of the Alumni House. Above the chest is hung the oil portrait of W. Brooks George, '32, Chairman of the Board of Larus & Brother Company, of Richmond; past President of the Society of the Alumni; past Rector of the Trustees of the Endowment Association. He received the Alumni Medallion in 1954 and an honorary degree in 1972. The portrait is on loan from the College Art Collection. George was the national chairman of the "New Era" campaign of the Society which raised the funds to renovate and decorate the Alumni House social rooms and the national offices of the Society.

Handsome engravings of Presidents of the United States who were associated with the College were given to the Alumni House by the Class of 1928 on their Fiftieth Reunion in June of this year. From the left are shown: George Washington, 1st President of the United States, who received his surveyor's commission from the College and was the first American Chancellor of the College of William and Mary, thus holding his first and last public offices through the College; Thomas Jefferson, 3rd President, who was a student at the College from 1760 to 1762, and was later a member of the Board of Visitors and recipient of an honorary degree; James Monroe, 5th President, who was a student at the College, 1774-1776; John Tyler, 10th President, who was a student in 1806, and later a member of the Board of Visitors, recipient of an honorary degree, and was the 2nd American Chancellor of the College after Washington.

The Class obtained the prints, engraved in 1903, from a distinguished curator of prints and historic documents in Boston, and had them appropriately framed with identifying plaques. The prints are shown as they hang in the J. Wilfred Lambert Hallway of the Alumni House.

A Change in Moral Standards?

Dear Editor:

My husband Ken and I returned from a trip to Williamsburg recently, and it is always wonderful to visit our Alma Mater and relive our past a bit, as well as see what is going on in the present. This trip made me almost want to go back to the past at William and Mary, for I was heart-sick at some of the present conditions at the college. I discovered - from a student and also an older adult - that William and Mary has "joined the crowd" and now allows mixed housing. I heard the story of one young girl who was horrified to meet a young man clad only in a towel coming out of her bathroom.

I want to ask WHY has William and Mary lost its old standards of moral decency? Is it because of student demands? Why should students demand something more from a school whose rules are plainly written out and understood before matriculation? I commend Dr. Sliger, President of Florida State University, who recently changed a coed dorm back to a dorm for women at parental requests and in spite of student demands. It was a step forward in my estimation, and I hope it is one which will be followed by other university and college presidents.

I cannot contribute to the funding of a school which does not uphold moral standards. I would gladly contribute once more to the William and Mary Fund if an all-out effort were made to build up a student's whole person... body, mind, and spirit. No one of the three can be rightfully omitted, for we would be leaving out one part of God's creation. Intelligence and health are enhanced by character.

I love the William and Mary of old. I still love William and Mary, but I cannot love some of the things which I see there now.

Sincerely,

Marion Beavers, '37
Tallahassee, Fla.

Editor's Note

Coeducational housing at William and Mary was introduced in the Academic Program, Project Plus, in 1972. At the present time approximately one third of the available residence hall spaces are in coeducational facilities. As a matter of policy, however, men and women in these residences live on alternating floors of the buildings or in separate wings. There is no coeducational living in adjacent suites or rooms. The specific incident cited in this letter (a male student taking a shower in a women's bathroom) is prohibited by residence hall regulations and would have been actionable, if reported. The College has been careful to plan for the privacy of its students through its housing policies and to provide sufficient options for residential living to insure that no student who does not choose to do so is forced to reside in the limited coeducational housing William and Mary offers.

and I cannot imagine anyone reading this publication and not feeling a little bit better." He also wrote that he plans to put the booklet in the permanent Archives of the College. I was indeed pleased by his wonderful letter and felt so gratified that he thought this booklet worthy of such an honor.

Three Cheers For Spottswood

Dear Editor:

I greatly enjoy the Gazette and like its new form. I read with pleasure in the June edition the quotes of the writings from the 1933 edition, especially the one on old Spottswood. Spottswood was a very popular part of any celebration of the (few) football games won in my time (1904-08) from Richmond, Hampden-Sydney and Randolph-Macon. It was an episode with Spottswood that spawned the popular words, "Old Spottswood got to come out of the wilderness," that were so happily used in the fall of 1907. That episode was the real course of his being decommissioned. Dr. Tyler took away his firing power by plugging him up. The whole of this episode and the consequences of it are interesting.

Yours Truly,
S. A. MacDonald '08

Pardon the intrusions.
These are just an old man's thoughts from early life's happy days.

Editor's Notebook

As reported elsewhere in the Alumni Gazette, a random sampling of alumni attitudes was undertaken this spring. The sampling involved distribution of a detailed questionnaire to 400 individuals from the total alumni population of 30,000.

The results are being used to help in planning the future alumni programs, contents for the Alumni Gazette, and assessing development strategies. The data is also being shared with a variety of College administrators and Board of Visitors members.

Dozens of alumni took the opportunity to write comments about the College and its various facets. They frequently expressed appreciation for having been asked their views, and many also lamented that they were too much out of touch with William and Mary to be completely responsive. Some disliked the amount of detail in the questionnaire.

Some passed along criticism of a specific nature, which reflected personal concerns.

Among the younger alumni, who seemed to offer written comments more readily than others, there were some interesting thoughts. Some of these are being shared below.

From a 1971 Virginia alumna: "I did enjoy the classes taken there, instructors and students were most helpful and a real pleasure to know and great to work with in and out of class. I have encouraged several boys and girls to select William and Mary, and always enjoy their reports when they are home on vacations."

From a 1976 alumnus of West Virginia: "I am proud to have attended William and Mary."

From a 1974 alumnus of Virginia: "I have always considered William and Mary a warm, humane and qualified academic institution and I hope you are able to maintain its ambience."

A 1971 Virginia alumna: "I would like to see the College maintain its high academic standards."

From a 1975 Virginia alumnus: "My college experience was good and my attitude toward the College is positive. I hope it can be for others what it was for me. The best thing about W&M is the fine quality of people who are members of the college arena."

A 1966 alumnus from New Jersey: "My vacation requires a close association with all the nationally ranked colleges and universities in the U.S. It is my opinion that the quality of W&M undergraduates compares very favorably with that of the leading institutions. In its long history the College has been dedicated to producing well-trained, humanistically educated undergraduate students. I hope W&M will continue to emphasize a quality undergraduate education, and not dilute its financial resources on graduate programs, increasing enrollments, etc."

A 1965 Connecticut alumna: "I would not like to see W&M lose what I consider to be its greatest asset-its emphasis on the undergraduate liberal arts program."

Other recent alumni also offered comments--complaining about academic standards and grading policies as being undesirably stiff, and others lamenting publicity which gave the impression that football was more important to the College than academics. The quotes reprinted above, however, were representative of the responses from the under-35 age group. Clearly, it is a group which is supportive of the College and interested in its future.

Memoirs Join College Archives

Editor:

I recently completed "My Memoirs." I had planned to have them only sent to a few of my close friends, but it looked as if many of my associates wanted a copy so I had to have another printing made.

I sent a copy to President Graves and his wife. He wrote me such a nice letter upon receiving them and said, "Your memoirs are a beautiful and sensitive reflection on your life

Alumni Board Gathers at College

Directors Approve Recipients of Medallion at Semi-Annual Meeting

In a busy two-day flurry of activity at the Alumni House in September, the Board of Directors heard reports from several different areas on which board members will make decisions in coming months.

At its semi-annual meeting, the board discussed college and alumni society matters with several college administrators including President Graves, Athletic Director Ben L. Carnevale, Dean of Students W. Samuel Sadler '64, and Ross L. Weeks, assistant to the President and director of University Communications.

The board learned of the progress of a new William and Mary magazine, which it approved during the past year. The 32-page slick cover magazine, which will be published twice a year beginning early in 1979, will be distributed by the Society of the Alumni to all contributors to the William and Mary Fund. It will replace two issues of the Alumni Gazette, which the board voted to reduce to 8 issues per year.

Weeks and Gordon C. Vliet, Society Executive Vice President, also briefed the board on another of its initiatives which it launched last year -- the Public Affairs Communications Team, which was organized in cooperation with the College to build political support for William and Mary in the state's various legislative districts. PACT now has alumni working actively in all but two districts in the state.

The board endorsed the College's efforts to increase the goal of the William and Mary Fund in 1978-79 by one third, to $400,000. A phonathon designed to reach at least 14,000 alumni will be in progress during the fall months. The extra $100,000 in the Fund goal will be directed toward supporting research in the Faculty of Arts and Sciences.

In addition, President Graves expressed his appreciation for the board's support of the Campaign for the College, which is in its final year. This is "the Year of the Alumni," Graves reminded the board, and dinners and receptions have now begun in an effort to reach alumni personally in major cities across the country. The effort includes a slide show narrated by TV star Linda Lavin and discussion by President Graves of the future of the College.

Ben Carnevale described the athletic program as in excellent shape, noting William and Mary had experienced one of its best years in terms of revenue. He said the College is now deeply involved in considering how to improve the football stadium. The College, with the board's input, is looking at two alternatives: renovation and expansion of Cary Stadium and the construction of a new stadium.

The board approved the recipients of this year's Alumni Medallion. They will be announced in the October Gazette. Theme of this year's Homecoming Parade is "That's Entertainment."

The board also heard reports on the travel and merchandising programs which make low-cost charter travel and William and Mary oriented merchandise available to alumni.

Members of the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni took time from their busy schedule at the September meeting to gather for a group picture. From left to right, front row, are Elaine Elias Kappel '55, Pittsburgh; Harriet Nachman Storm '64, Hampton, president; Patricia King Sell '58, La Jolla, Calif., secretary; John H. Garrett Jr., '40, Irvington, vice president; Denys Grant '58, treasurer, Richmond, and Dr. Henry D. Wilde Jr. '53, Houston. Back row: J. W. Hornsby Jr. '50, Newport News; R. Bradshaw Pulley '39, Virginia Beach; R. Stanley Hudgins '43, Virginia Beach; Jane Spencer Smith '48, Grosse Pointe Shores, Mich.; Jean Canoles Bruce '48, Norfolk; James E. Howard '43, Richmond; Marilyn Miller Entwisle '44, Meadowbrook Pa., and Dr. Marvin F. West '52, Williamsburg. Not shown is Norman Moomjian '55, New York City, who was in New York attending one of the kick-off dinners for alumni for the Campaign for the College.

Harriet Storm Heads Fund Drive

Society President Announces 1978-79 Fund Goal of $400,000.

Harriet Nachman Storm, '64, a free-lance writer and current president of the Society of the Alumni, will chair the 1978-79 William and Mary Fund, the most ambitious annual fund drive in the history of the College.

Mrs. Storm announced that the goal for the William and Mary Fund has been set at $400,000, an increase of 33 percent over last year's contributions. She noted that the annual fund supports undergraduate programs in the arts and sciences as well as the service programs coordinated by the Society of the Alumni.

The 1978-79 William and Mary Fund is a part of the final year of the Campaign for the College, a capital campaign which began in Spring 1976 with a goal of $19 million. As of June 30, the Campaign has received $13,782,324, or approximately 68 percent of its goal.

Mrs. Storm has served the College in many capacities and has been active with the American Cancer Society and the Virginia Press Women. She is a former staff member of the Newport News Daily Press, currently chairs the Women's Division of the Peninsula United Fund Campaign, and is on executive committees for Reading Is Fundamental and the Peninsula Legal Aid Center. She serves on the Board of Trustees of the William and Mary Athletic Educational Foundation and is now on its executive committee.

Mrs. Storm, in accepting the leadership role for the 1978-79 fund, said it was an ideal time to increase alumni support for the College.

"William and Mary as an institution is more highly regarded among the general public than ever. Its management of resources is considered in Virginia to be a model for other state colleges and universities," she said. "But resources are becoming too scarce to assure that the College will continue its exciting progress.

"This is a crucial period for William and Mary, and our alumni have a long record of responding when help is needed."

Mrs. Storm

Circle K Wins Highest Honor

The Circle K service organization at the College of William and Mary has been awarded the Circle K International Award for the outstanding service project in the United States.

Richard Sherman of Williamsburg, a second-year law student at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, returned this fall from the annual Circle K International Convention in Orlando, Fla., with the winning trophy.

This is the third time the William and Mary club has won the award, and according to Sherman, his club is probably the only one to win the award three times. The club also won in 1970 and 1971.

The award went to the club this year for its "Senior Opportunities" program, which provides transportation and companionship for senior citizens in the community. The club held several get-togethers for senior citizens last year and at Thanksgiving held a banquet for 80 senior citizens in the Dodge Room of Phi Beta Kappa Hall.

Lisa Weathersbee, also of Williamsburg, a senior this year, serves as chairman of the senior citizens program.

Tri Delta Celebrates 50th

Founded at William and Mary during the "flapper" era year of 1928, the local chapter of Delta Delta Delta sorority will celebrate its golden anniversary this year. The William and Mary chapter, Alpha Mu, was instituted with 19 charter members. Since its founding more than 1000 girls have enjoyed the fellowship of the sorority.

At William and Mary the sorority has constantly stressed its unity with the College community. Emblematic of this is the attention the College received in the Summer 1976 issue of The Trident sorority quarterly. "William and Mary--the Alma Mater of a Nation" constituted the center piece of the bicentennial issue. The cover photo and article outlined William and Mary's impact on the growth of Virginia in the South and the nation, as well as citing the college's observance of the nation's Bicentennial.

On October 15, in conjunction with Homecoming, the full spectrum of Tri Deltas from 1928 to 1978 will gather to commemorate the 50 years of sisterhood at the College. Following the breakfast, Tri Deltas will enjoy an anniversary program staged by current members of the chapter.

Alumnae Chapter President Carolyn Topp, a graduate of Louisiana State University whose husband is a William and Mary graduate, organized this anniversary program.

Faculty Newsmakers

Faculty members at William and Mary will be on leave during the 1978-79 year fulfilling a variety of commitments.

Scott Donaldson, professor of English, will be in Italy for the spring semester on a Fulbright Grant. He is working on a new book on F. Scott Fitzgerald.

Several faculty members will be away as visiting professors. Peter

O'Neil, professor of mathematics and computer science, will teach in the department of mathematics at the University of Alabama at Birmingham.

The South rises again in Division and Reunion: America 1848-1877, an unconventional interpretation of the origins, nature, and outcome of the Civil War written by Professor Ludwell H. Johnson of the Department of History.

The bright stars and stripes of the Confederate flag which adorn the cover of the paperback text boldly foreshadow Professor Johnson's pro-Southern sentiments. Johnson, who admits that some may see the book as less than impartial, and only half-jokingly suggests that the words, "Warning: May be dangerous to the mental health of Yankees," should have been included on the cover.

Johnson makes no bones about his support of the Confederacy and his belief that the war was one of Northern aggression. In his narrative and analysis, he skips the moonlight and magnolias and uses 100,000 carefully chosen words that are bound to give devotees of the "Lost Cause" surefire ammunition.

"It's not just a textbook recital of facts," asserts Johnson. "People who write textbooks generally try to go down the middle between opposing interpretations. I don't bother to do that."

Johnson's book, a part of the Wiley American Republic Series, is the result of his life-long fascination with the period.

"I have enjoyed every association that involved William and Mary, but I have enjoyed most the opportunity to meet and talk with the remarkable young people who are seeking a better life on our campus. Whenever I recommend William and Mary, I am secure in the knowledge that when compared with other colleges and universities, she is "as good as the best and better than the rest."

It will take the best efforts of all our alumni, past, present and future, to maintain this coveted position. We must continue to give generously of our time, our talents and our resources, as it is in our means to do so; thus we insure that the College of our Fathers will be as vital for the new generation as it was for us. For William and Mary, simply to survive is not enough - there must be excellence - and THE CHOICE IS OURS."

Aubrey L. Mason

Campaign for the College

"Encouraging Words..." is a new series of short statements by successful alumni of the College, written in support of the Campaign for the College and its goals. The Campaign's monetary goal of $19,000,000 reflects the need to sharply increase private support for faculty development and research, program enrichment, and student assistance. Later this year, all alumni will be asked to make their commitments on behalf of the Campaign, in addition to increasing their annual gifts for support of College priorities and the Society of the Alumni.

Alumni Make Beautiful Music-- Together

At Least Once Each Year, Members of the Alumni Band Say "One More Time"

One special group of William and Mary alumni doesn't just watch the halftime show at the Homecoming game each year--they're part of it. Since 1971, the William and Mary Band has been joined for halftime activities by a smaller crew of band alumni in boaters and jackets. This stalwart collection of professional and amateur musicians comes from places as far away as California and as near as Williamsburg to participate in the Alumni Band. While their fellow alumni relax in the stands, members of the Alumni Band often brave cold weather and rain to provide a little halftime nostalgia.

Although the Alumni Band members perform like troopers, they have only one short rehearsal on the morning of the game to learn what music they'll be playing in the afternoon. Due to rain, the band has had no pregame marching practice for the last two years, even though they perform on the field before the game and at halftime. Instead, band members rely on the morning instructions of band director Charles Varner and the on-field signals of Jim Anthony '52, who has been drum major of the Alumni Band since it began in 1971.

Anthony's dedication to the band is shared by many of its members. Clarinetist Michael Smith '73 says he does it out of habit. "I love it--I've done it each year since 1973. I come back to see Mr. Varner, and I like to see what's going on in the band--how large it is, how small it is." Mike adds, "The regular band seems to have a great time, too. I bet they're tickled pink to see us old fogies come out on the field and stumble around."

Ken Royston '74, a trumpet player, comes back because of Band Director Charles Varner, who celebrated his 25th anniversary with the William and Mary Band last spring. "He's really been an inspiration to me," Royston says.

Jane Nolan Mathis '65 agrees. "He's just a great person. Mr. Varner knows each person individually and can still call them by name after years. He's a friend as well as a teacher. I've come back every year except the second, when I was pregnant."

Mark Poland '72, a band director at Colonial Heights, Virginia, and his wife Diana Leamer Poland '72, also come back each year "to see Mr. Varner." Mark recalls, "My senior year he started the Alumni Band. I was helping with it and after graduation it seemed natural to come back and be part of it. This is our seventh year, which is 'perfect attendance.' There are the same people every year and a few new faces."

Barbie Taylor '74, a clarinetist, says that she comes back "because the Band tears me up. I'm a sucker for a marching band, and for Mr. Varner, too."

The Alumni Band's attachment to Director Varner inspired a fund drive to purchase new instruments, uniforms and other necessary equipment in his honor last spring. Led by co-chairmen Ken Royston, Mark Poland and honorary Chairman Jim Anthony, the drive netted over $3,900 in donations.

At the Carl Hibbard Memorial Band Concert in March, co-chairmen Royston and Poland presented Varner with a plaque honoring him for 25 years of dedicated service, and a card of congratulations signed by all the Alumni Band members in the audience.

This thriving organization shows no signs of slowing down as another Homecoming approaches. Anne-Marie Gill '75, a fluteplayer and former head majorette, sums up the Alumni Band's enduring quality. "There have been no changes in the Band. The William and Mary tradition hangs on. Just faces change--the techniques and styles of marching stay the same." She adds, "I come back to see my old friends, and it's so much fun. Why else would this group come back--not knowing our parts, not knowing the music, and not even knowing when to go on the field?"

Born with a Baton in his Hand

(That's What Happens When There's Twirling in Your Genes)

Jim Anthony '52, who is well known to thousands of William and Mary alumni and students as the drum major of the Alumni Band at Homecoming, began twirling when he was nine years old, and he hasn't stopped since.

Each year, his flashy style of baton twirling is a highlight of the Homecoming halftime show. He alternately leaves the audience gasping and cheering as he throws 20-foot aerials effortlessly, or so it appears. The hard metal baton that Anthony uses is a far cry from the superlight-weight models that most twirlers use today. He has had sprains and fractures in his fingers that prove how much heavier it is.

In 1976, as he was practicing for the upcoming Homecoming performance, Anthony's baton landed on one finger with hard impact, leading to a trip to the Emergency Room at Williamsburg Community Hospital. As Anthony remembers it, the Emergency Room receptionist was rather incredulous when she learned the cause of his injury. "When she asked, 'How did you do this?', I answered, 'I'm a twirler.' She looked at me as if to say, 'Do you do ballet, too?'"

"As I was in the course of explaining that I twirled fire baton and two batons, the Emergency Room physician said suddenly, 'Are you that guy? You're the only reason why I come to the football game--I thought they flew you in from Chicago or someplace.'"

The physician turned out to be Dan Barton '62, a former William and Mary quarterback himself. Thanks to Dr. Barton, Jim's twirling went right on schedule that Homecoming.

When asked how he came by his skill with a baton, Anthony replies, "It's weird--there must be something in the genes."

When he was a nine-year-old, Anthony cut off a broom handle and started teaching himself to twirl in the backyard, and his interest never flagged.

His belief that "it's in the genes" stems from an extraordinary coincidence that came to light. One day, Jim was twirling with an ivory-headed cane, wearing a top hat as he practiced. Upon seeing him, a visiting aunt, who hadn't seen him for years because she was a nun, fainted dead away. As he was reviving her, Anthony asked his aunt what happened. He recalls, "She looked at me and said, 'Didn't anyone ever tell you about Uncle Albert?'" As it turned out, no one in Anthony's family had mentioned Anthony's uncle to him when he was growing up. "Give him something you could twirl, he'd twirl it, from ukeleles to banjos," Anthony says. "Uncle Albert was drum major of the Richmond Light Infantry Blues and the Richmond Elks Band, and he died six years before I was born."

Residence Hall Renovations Finally Complete

After Six Years of Refurbishing, Five Halls Look and Feel More Modern

For the first time in five years, students at the College returned to campus this fall without finding construction workers busy renovating their residence halls.

More than 4,450 undergraduate and about 1,600 graduate students entered the College this fall. Orientation for new students was held August 27, and classes began September 1.

A $4.5 million residence hall renovation and refurbishing program has been completed, and 650 student spaces have been improved in five different residence halls. Over the last five years, an additional 350 student spaces have been created by conversion of 250 spaces formerly used for administrative and academic purposes and by leasing 100 additional spaces in privately-owned apartments near the campus.

But the calm in construction will not last long. The College has advertised an invitation to contractors to submit construction bids for a new 280-student "student village," scheduled to open in 1980. The complex of eight buildings will be a distinct departure from the "egg crate" dormitories so prevalent on campuses across the nation. The total cost of the project, including construction, site development, furniture and equipment, architect and engineering fees and other costs is expected to be more than $3.5 million.

In addition, bulldozers and drill hammers are going full speed at the site of the new building for the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, which is also scheduled to be finished in 1980.

In recent years, the College has not been able to keep pace with the growing demand for on-campus housing for undergraduate students. Since 1973 when the renovations were started, William and Mary has been forced to use a lottery system to decide which students will be denied College-owned housing. With all the refurbishing completed, the College will have space for 3,719 students during the 1978-79 term. Every student desiring on-campus housing has been accommodated, although some will still reside in converted houses and in privately-owned apartments leased by the College. Students are housed in approximately 40 different buildings, including two buildings housing 250 students at James Blair Terrace, which are located about three miles from campus and are leased by Eastern State Hospital to the College.

William and Mary, unlike most other state universities, remains determined to retain its relatively small size and residential character, according to President Thomas A. Graves, Jr. About 80 percent of the undergraduate student body lives on campus.

The new "student village" will give the College a flexibility it has never experienced before. It will include an activities center and residence hall choices for private rooms, double rooms grouped around common study areas, and typical rows of rooms along a single hall. William J. Carter, vice president for business affairs, said the village will be designed to "meet the changing and varied social and living needs of today's more mobile and better informed student body."

The new village will be constructed between Yates and Dupont residence halls on New Campus Drive near William and Mary Hall.

The separate units will be arranged around a wooded courtyard, and each will be accessible to the handicapped. Windows will be double glazed to conserve energy, and plans call for the complex to include air-conditioning.

College officials predict that the new rooms will be the most popular—and most expensive—on campus. By the time the complex opens in 1980, rooms in the village will rent for about $500 per semester, according to David G. Healy, director of auxiliary enterprises.

Residence halls at state universities are not funded by the state. The College will pay for the new project by borrowing $3 million in state revenue bonds and repaying the loan over the next 20 years from student rental fees. The half-million dollar balance of the $3.5 million will be paid from replacement and renovation funds generated from the same source.

Even the boxed lunches prepared by Shamrock Food System seemed to go over big among the freshmen students.

Theta Delta Chi Celebrates 125th

After Suffering from the Civil War, Fraternity Revives a Strong Tradition

*"When off your son to college goes, you'll look him squarely in the eye
and say to him,
all the Greek you need to know is Theta Delta Chi!"*

Members of Theta Delta Chi at William and Mary have been singing the same old song since the fraternity was founded at the College in 1853. And this month, Theta Delt from across the country will join in at the national fraternity's annual meeting in Williamsburg.

Virtually every graduate of William and Mary knows that the nation's first Greek-letter fraternity, Phi Beta Kappa, was founded at the College in 1776. But it was not until 1853 that the first unit of a modern social fraternity was established on campus.

During the pre-Civil War period, only about 75 men enrolled at the College each year. Yet the fledgling fraternity managed to attract 55 men between 1853 and 1861, according to Col. John Hodges '39. "Forty-two of them are known to have worn the Confederate Gray during that social earthquake which we call the Civil War," states Hodges.

Like most institutions in the South, William and Mary suffered immensely from the hazards of war and remained in "hibernation" during most of the reconstruction period. Theta Delta Chi at William and Mary fell by the wayside and would not be firmly re-established on campus until 1904.

Since then, Theta Delta has grown to be one of the largest and most active of the 12 fraternities on campus. Its colorful history is being brought out of the scrapbooks this year as the Epsilon charge celebrates its 125th anniversary on the William and Mary campus.

A 1922 edition of the Epsilon Hokum edited by John G. Pollard Jr. '23 tells the story of a fire that destroyed part of the home of President J. A. C. Chandler and left two fraternity brothers homeless. "Brothers Duke and Chandler got burned out on the evening of April 3 when the home of Dr. J. A. C. Chandler caught fire. These two prominent members of our fraternity live on the third floor of the President's House, and unfortunately for them, the third floor was burned the worst of all. Joe was at the movies while the fire was eating his clothes; but Duke was on the scene and saw the flames swallow his brand new $60 suit which he hadn't even worn. Brother Duke managed to save a pair of white flannels which he wore with a borrowed coat for the next couple of days. I believe Brother Chandler saved a pair of shoes, but the soles were worn out."

Another issue of the Hokum, this one published in January 1951, leads off with a headline that declares "New Pledges Unruly, In Spite of Training." It then recounts a colorful egg-nog party for the administration and faculty. Pledge Robert Wallace '54 donated a beautiful cedar tree that the brothers decorated with a few ornaments, several socks and a host of beer cans. The long gift under the tree was a five-gallon bottle of Seagram's Seven donated by Brother Robert Hackler '52.

Hokum editor Richard B. Crowell '51 reports, "At 12 midnight the party was officially over, the girls went back to their dorms, and the brothers came back to help finish off the few gallons of egg-nog still remaining. Their mission was accomplished in a short time, and by the next morning the party was just a memory, and the egg-nog, by all avowed to be the best we'd ever had, had gone the way of all good drinks."

The drinking and carousing that fraternities across the country are known for did not always exist, says Charlie Pollard '25, who attended the College during prohibition. "I only saw drinking in the public areas of the fraternity house one time, and that was when an army officer had a canteen of liquor attached to his canvas belt. Things were really quite strict in those days, and any brother who was caught feeling the effects of alcohol was quickly thrown out of a Theta Delt party."

Women students were almost as safely guarded as the illegal alcohol. "A girl was not allowed in the fraternity house and couldn't even ride in a brother's car unless it was raining outside and he was taking her straight home," remembers Pollard.

Pledges had the most difficult time of all. Pollard recalls a special "walk the plank" trick Theta Delt would stage at Lake Matoaka. A blindfolded pledge was led to the end of a plank and told to jump into the cold, less-than-inviting waters of the lake.

In reality, the plank was only a foot or so over dry land. The trick seemed to work perfectly, as each pledge grimaced, jumped to safety, and then let go with a sigh of relief. Unfortunately, one pledge decided to be original--he dived head first and was saved from injury by two brothers who cushioned his fall. All three rolled off the bank into about two feet of water.

Pollard has lived to see the Epsilon charge move from three houses. During the early 1900's, Theta Delta Chi occupied a house next to the College bookstore across from Jefferson Hall on Jamestown Road. Then the chapter moved to the beautiful Sussex House, a spacious, comfortable home on Richmond Road. In the early forties, the governor decided the state's fraternities were becoming a little too elite, and forced Theta Delt and the other William and Mary fraternities to sell their houses and take up residence in the small lodges behind Cary stadium. The fraternities remained in the lodges until 1968, when the modern fraternity complex was completed across from Yates Hall.

After a few rough years during the late 1960's when many liberal-minded students classified fraternities as establishment-oriented, the Greek system staged a comeback across the South. Today it is as strong as ever. At William and Mary, nearly one out of every three male students has been initiated into a social fraternity. Together with the 10 national sororities, fraternities still play a leadership role in planning the social events for the school year. In addition, they support local and national philanthropies and hold several campuswide events, including the Pike Bike Marathon and Derby Day.

Indians Win Cross Country

William and Mary's Cross Country team recently captured the Campbell College Cross Country Carnival title.

Each team entered a man in seven separate races over the four mile course. William and Mary won six of the seven races led by Rick Rothschild (20:05), Mike Ellington (20:34.4), Jim Coogan (20:36.3), Stan Rogers (20:38.8), Tim Dowd (20:48.1), and Kevin Ellis (21:00.1).

The Tribe's number one runner, Jim Shields, finished second (20:04) to NAIA champion Gary Henry (19:35) of Pembroke State.

"Mo" Weber Named Coach

Maynard "Mo" Weber, a Williamsburg stockbroker who coached the William and Mary baseball team in 1965, will return to the reservation next year to become head coach of the Tribe once again.

Weber succeeds Ed Jones, coach of the Indians for the past 3 years. Jones, who had a combined record of 43 wins and 67 losses, resigned this summer to devote full time to the expanding intramural program at the College and to his classroom duties.

Weber has been active in baseball for 30 years from the Little League to the semi-pro level. A former semi-pro player, he has been assistant coach for the Newport News American Legion team which won the state title in 1976 and was runnerup in 1977.

A native of Great Neck, N.Y., Weber has been associated with Legg, Mason at its Williamsburg office for the past five years.

Weber says baseball is in his blood.

"I have always been active in baseball," said Weber, "and I am looking forward to returning to the College." Weber says he does not recall the team's record when he coached it in 1965.

"We had a 20-man roster," he said, "and they all gave the game a 110 per cent."

Indians Top Keydets in Season Opener

Fullback Alvis Lang slithers through the outstretched arms of several VMI line men as Rob Muscalus (81) leads the blocking enroute to a six-yard gain that helped make Lang the top ground-gainer in William and Mary's opening 10-3 victory over the favored Keydets at Cary Stadium on Sept. 9. The game was a battle between two determined defenses in temperatures of nearly 100 degrees. The Tribe had possession of the ball for 21 of 30 minutes in the second half, and the sustained drives paid off as Tom Rozantz scampered 11 yards around the right end for the winning score with 2:35 left in the game to win it for the Indians.

"An International Community"

That's Coach Al Albert's Description of the Wonderful World of Soccer

"The world of soccer is an international community," says William and Mary coach Al Albert. "If you can establish some contacts, it can be a great way to see Europe."

Albert, the highly-successful coach of the Indian soccer team for the past 7 years, took 26 of his players and a touring party of 35 to England and Holland in August. For about $600 per person, including air fare, they spent two weeks in Europe, played 10 games, and won a group of new friends in both countries.

The English and the Dutch were superb hosts, says Albert. They put the players up in their homes, fed them, and treated them as guests of their countries. The Dutch, who are better off than the English, were especially hospitable, noted Albert.

"I don't believe one of our people bought a single meal during the week we were in Holland."

The tour began at Gatwick airport where the Americans were greeted by representatives of the Marwand Lions, a soccer club comprised of the best amateur soccer players in the city of Reading, a community of approximately 100,000. They were bussed to Reading where families put up the players, with bed and breakfast, for the next week.

Albert's team did not return the hospitality -- the Tribe's "A" team tied the flashy Marwand team 2-2 in the first of 7 games in Reading, the first time the Marwand Lions had been held to less than a victory in two years of competition with American teams.

"They were impressed by our play," said Albert. "They had a higher skill level, but we were equal to them in endurance and quickness."

In the five days in Reading, the two William and Mary teams (a second "B" team was filled out with local high school players) won three and lost four.

The William and Mary party crossed the channel by boat to Holland. Since no berths were available, the Americans had to sleep on the floor of the cafeteria only to wake up to a four-hour train ride to the city of Alkmaar, a town of 70,000 about 20 miles north of Amsterdam.

The Dutch, however, made up for the minor inconveniences by warmly receiving the Albert party. Albert describes the visit to Alkmaar as "tremendous" and jests that if he could speak Dutch he would move to Holland and live.

The hospitality was matched by the exceptional government - subsidized soccer facilities in the city which, like the rest of Holland, a finalist in the last two World Cups, is soccer crazy.

"Alkmaar has 19 men's soccer teams," says Albert, "plus kids' teams of all ages."

The Tribe's "A" team, which included Kip Germain and Billy Watson, surprised the Dutch, too. They defeated one of Alkmaar's best amateur teams the first night and went on to win two of their four games. Overall, the two William and Mary teams played .500 soccer for the whole of the tour.

Albert arranged the tour to England and one of his players, Chris Maher of New York, and his father, who is a soccer coach, arranged the Holland part of the tour. Ironically, two days before the team departed, young Maher broke his ankle while playing soccer and spent the tour on crutches. But that was the only mildly negative aspect of the tour, which Albert says he hopes to repeat in two years.

Tribe Schedules T-D Tourney

Basketball Schedule Includes 14 Games Against the Likes of South Carolina

William and Mary's 26-game basketball schedule features 14 home games, seven of which will be on Saturdays, beginning November 25th.

The Indians will play in the Richmond Times Dispatch Tournament, December 29-30, along with VCU, Old Dominion, and Richmond.

The Tribe's home slate figures to be one of the best ever. Always powerful South Carolina will be joined by the likes of Navy, James Madison, Davidson, Virginia Tech, Old Dominion, East Carolina, and Virginia.

Head Coach Bruce Parkhill calls the schedule "attractive but demanding." The Tribe mentor points to the second week of February as looking like an NBA schedule.

"We play five games in nine days, and that is going to be rugged especially when the opponents include VPI and North Carolina," he said.

"Links" with the Past

Did Sleeve Buttons Belong to Wythe, Washington or Someone Else?

Like the plot of an Agatha Christie novel, an antique desk in the President's House at the College has become a source of mystery, complete with secret drawers, hidden letters and silver sleeve-buttons that may have belonged to a Virginia patriot.

In this case, however, the baffled detectives are members of the committee to furnish the 246-year-old residence with eighteenth-century American and English antiques.

According to tradition, the black walnut desk, dated between 1780 and 1790, was given to Bishop James Madison, eighth President of the College, by George Wythe, famed in Virginia as a lawyer, judge and signer of the Declaration of Independence.

While no proof has come to light to support this claim, Wythe is known to have had a number of desks in his Williamsburg home for the students he instructed there. Following his appointment as sole judge of the Chancery Court of Virginia in 1788, it became necessary for Wythe to move to the new capital after the frequent trips between Williamsburg and Richmond became too tiring for the aging judge.

The single thread of evidence linking Wythe to the handsome piece of furniture now in the front sitting-room of the President's House is a silver sleeve-button inscribed with the initials "GW." Paired with a sleeve-button, or cufflink, of a different design, the little piece of jewelry has been connected with the desk since it was bought in Petersburg for the President's House before World War II.

James L. Cogar, now a committee member aiding the effort to bring authentic period pieces into the President's House, was one of the people who saw the desk when it was purchased.

A former curator at Colonial Williamsburg and lecturer in the College's history department, Cogar was also the one who discovered the sleeve-buttons. "I was very surprised and happy to find them," he said recently. "When we saw the 'GW' we just laughed and said that it was George Washington or George Wythe."

Although George Washington was the first American chancellor of William and Mary, his association with the College was not as close as that of George Wythe, who was its first professor of law. While Wythe shared the Quaker belief in simplicity of dress, sleeve-buttons were a practical part of a gentleman's apparel in the 18th century.

According to experts at Colonial Williamsburg, the initialed sleeve-button can be dated from its style and lettering to the fourth quarter of the 18th century. John D. Davis, curator of metalwork for the department of collections, added, "It may be that the person who owned these lost a link from each set and used them together, since they're about the same size."

Unfortunately, Wythe apparently left no inventories of his belongings, so there is presently no way to determine whether he was the owner.

Another part of the mystery surrounding the desk is a letter found in 1975 when Andrew Graves, son of President and Mrs. Thomas A. Graves, Jr., accidentally found a hidden compartment and sprung it open. Inside he found a brown crumpled business letter dated 1821. While the owner and whereabouts of the desk in 1821 are unknown, it seems likely that the letter remained undisturbed in its secret drawer until nine-year-old Andrew found it.

In recent months, researchers have examined the desk, hoping to discover clues as to its maker or first owner. They discovered the chalk inscription "James Wheeler" in several drawers, which may be the maker's signature or the name of the man for whom the desk was made, since the chalk is the same as that used to mark the construction joints. Another discovery was that the two parts of the piece were not made together, and that the bookcase section is from another desk. The desk section has characteristics of construction that connect it with southeast Virginia, according to Wallace B. Gusler, curator of furniture for the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation.

With clues like these to work with, committee members hope to learn the true history of the desk. If they find its owner was George Wythe, then this antique may be the oldest piece of furniture to return to the President's House at William and Mary.

Did these small sleeve buttons found in the antique desk at the President's House belong to Wythe, Washington, or someone else with the initials "GW"?

Campaign Kicks Off "Year of the Alumni"

The Campaign for the College's "Year of the Alumni" got off to an encouraging start recently with two highly successful kickoff dinners in Williamsburg and New York.

The large turnouts at both meetings have revealed that alumni are rallying behind the Campaign during the third and final year in an effort to reach the $19 million goal.

More than 200 alumni met in the Campus Center Ballroom in Williamsburg, and the following night, the traveling campaign roadshow drew 180 alumni at the Forest Hills Tennis Club in New York City.

William P. McGoldrick, director of special gifts for the Development Office, has planned 14 such regional meetings. Others will be held in Roanoke, Richmond, Newport News, Lynchburg, Hampton, Northern Virginia, Charlottesville, Virginia Beach, Pittsburgh, Washington, Atlanta and Houston.

J. Wilfred Lambert, former Vice President for Student Affairs and consultant on donor records for the Campaign, was master of ceremonies for the Williamsburg meeting. McGoldrick was master of ceremonies in New York.

A portion of the program, which includes a reception and dinner and an opportunity for alumni to meet and chat with President Graves, is a sight-sound show prepared by the Office of University Communications. The script for the show was taped in California by Linda Lavin, star of the TV show "Alice" and an alumna of the College.

In his address to alumni in the various areas, President Graves is seeking support for the major goals of the Campaign and in particular the need for private funding to help raise the level of faculty salaries.

HOMECOMING

COMINGHOME '78

OCTOBER 13-14

ALL ALUMNI ARE WELCOME

To all members of 1978 Reunion Classes:

It is with great anticipation that I remind you that your class is having one of its special reunions this year, as a part of the Homecoming weekend at the College, October 13-14.

I am writing to ask that you mark your calendar and make your plans to come back to Williamsburg. There is a full calendar of events for the fun-filled weekend, and we have allowed time and places for you to get together with classmates and friends.

One of the highlights of course is the Annual Banquet on Friday evening and the featured speaker this year will be Governor John Dalton, '53, who will be here celebrating his 25th Reunion. Preceding the banquet will be class cocktail parties, and after the dinner there will be the Nightcap Party. Starting off Saturday morning we have an "obsolete athlete" Alumni Jog down the Duke of Gloucester Street to the Capitol and back. This is not a race, but a slow-paced two miles down memory lane. That should get everyone in good shape for the President's Continental Breakfast before the Big Parade. Each year the parade gets bigger and better - this year's theme is "That's Entertainment."

Luncheon on the Lawn of the Alumni House will precede the football game with James Madison. Class photographs will be taken so be sure and be there. Saturday night is the Dinner-Dance which tops off a full day with a good meal, good music and good friends. It is a BYOL dance with all set-ups furnished.

Start now to get in shape for the tennis and golf tournaments for alumni and spouses, the jog, the dancing, and an awful lot of partying and talking. Contact your old friends and get a group together, we will do our best to get you rooms nearby, and seat you together at the events. . .but don't worry because with more people coming back every year, there are bound to be a lot of people you will know.

Add to all of this the many other events such as the soccer game on Friday evening if you don't go to the Banquet; the very moving Sunset Ceremony, a memorial service featuring the Queen's Guard and the College Choir; campus update tour; and then. . . throw in the charm of Williamsburg in the fall, a 24 It's true! Over half of 1978 is past, yet it seems but a few days since I thawed out from last winter's record cold. I'm sure, however, I have lots of company in my feeling that time is not merely running out - it's flying. So if this is to make the August deadline, I'd better get going.

A note from Ed Johnson (could that April date be right?) reflects his robust interest in life, something I hope applies to all of us. After retiring from the bench about ten years ago, he continued to teach a law class at the U. of Va. and now has the distinction of being the senior active member of the faculty. He is also active in the American Arbitration Assoc., mostly concerning Maritime matters, and from time to time holds hearings throughout the country. But he lets

A Prospect of William and Mary - Hitchcock artist Mel Morgan has re-created the famous "Millington View" of the college yard as it appeared around 1840. On the left is Brafferton, erected in 1723 with funds from the estate of Robert Boyle and named for his Yorkshire manor which provided rents that supported the Indian School until the time of the Revolution. In the center is the second Wren Building, dating from 1716, which was rebuilt after the original structure of 1695 was destroyed by fire in 1705. Wren is the oldest academic building in continuous use in the United States today. On the right is the President's House (1732), which has been the home of every president of the college.

few things interfere with his golf game and the enjoyment of good sippin' bourbon at the 19th hole. While a few of us can share his legal activities, I'm sure a number of his classmates follow his golf and bourbon routine. I, not the least. I personally award Ed another distinction. He is the first and only one ever to mention missing the class letter when none appears. The ultimate compliment.

Wonder how Red Hancock's golf game is holding up? Changed the grip on my club several weeks ago with excellent results. Even so, I never hope to duplicate his feat of shooting my age.

At a recent party I saw former State Senator Robert L. Myers '51 and his charming Polly - a most attractive pair. Bob is the mainstay of the family law firm and now that the children are teenagers, Polly is starting a new career in the real estate field.

Although Elizabeth Palmer, '26, is not a member of our class, she had a host of friends on campus including many in our group who will be interested to hear about her. A D.C. friend writes that some months ago she and her husband had a grand visit with Elizabeth and her husband, Hugh Thompson, at their home in Waco, Tex. Their daughter, Martha Sue, and her husband, Bill Miller, gave a super supper party on their "barge" on Waco Lake. A delight to remember.

The death recently of Estelle Dinwiddie Morton leaves me very sad indeed. She and her husband, the late Dr. Morton, were one of the most charming and delightful couples it shall ever be my privilege to know. We were friends from my first year at William and Mary, and my association with them greatly nurtured my devotion to the College. I shall miss them.

Mildred and I are holding together pretty well and are looking forward to several weeks visit in Maine the middle of August. My nephew, Brian Phillips, sold his business near Toronto about a year ago and retired to Kennebunk Beach, Maine, where he and Dodie have just about completed a large ultra-modern house. It not only has solar equipment to supplement the conventional heating system, but also a huge windmill to generate electricity. With a very real possibility of a future energy shortage and the cold Atlantic lapping their front lawn, they intend to be prepared for the worst. We are anxious to have a look at it.

Keep well. Hope you had a pleasant summer.

26 We have not been overwhelmed with mail. Beware of the printed word if this reporter is called upon to use his imagination. If modesty impedes personal comment, write us news of someone else in the class. Several letters were received, however, demonstrating that as a class we do get around.

Elizabeth Palmer Thompson wrote from Waco, Tex., where she has been resident these past thirty years. Her husband, Hugh (Cornell '19), established a silk screen printing operation there manufacturing advertising novelties for oil and other companies. Elizabeth extends greetings to the Class and expresses regret at having missed our 50th, but as she said, Waco is "a fur piece from Williamsburg." Her family is of itself something of a novelty--two married daughters, six grandchildren and one great grandson, all resident in Waco. In our restless age it is a rarity for all family members to remain in the same community.

Elizabeth reports that she has found five of our alumni from other classes living in Waco. Recently "Caddo" Kelly Brewster '24 visited her, bringing news of classmates.

Our Anna Johnston Hodges was recently named Bicentennial Belle of Natural Bridge. Anna and her husband moved to Natural Bridge in 1932, at which time a married woman was not permitted to teach (get this ERA). Not to be thwarted, she became active in the work of Home Demonstration Clubs on a local and state basis. Anna received her B.S. in 1949 from Madison.

From Prescott, Ariz., a letter was received attracted by my address shown above. The writer had lost contact with me these past forty years and, as he worded it, had not seen me since I "lived right across from the bar in the Village (NYC) with the saw-dust covered floor." Crash! There goes our image. Now why couldn't Art Matsu '27 have said library. There must be one somewhere in the Village. Art referred to Julius' which was a well known watering place during prohibition and later. Many of the Class of '26 conducted social studies as they were seeking philosophic answers as to why they were in New York City. True - Tony, Pat and, of fond memory, Bob, Chippie, Paul, Bunny, Payne?

It was heartwarming to receive this letter from Art after so long an interval. There were many of you that I had not seen during the period between graduation and our 50th and, regrettably, others who were not at the reunion. Having a strong sentimental attachment to you all, I send greetings and good wishes.

Fiftieth Reunion

28 First for some news that came in just before the reunion. George R. Whitley of Falls Church, Va., wrote that graduation day for the Summer School Class of 1928 was Wednesday, August 29, 1928. Many thanks to George.

Eliza Hunter Trainham of Newport News wrote that I had been spelling her name Elizabeth when it was really Eliza. She also said I had spelled Miriam Silberger Goodman's husband as James when it really is Jesse.

Julia S. Carson of Ashland wrote some information about classmates who had not been receiving my letters.

Dorothy Broughton Brennan of Portsmouth sent me a card from Charlotte Amalie, St. Thomas, Virgin Islands.

Edward C. Joyner, M.D. wrote wishing the Class a happy reunion.

Lucien Ashley Hobbs of Los Gatos, Calif., wrote a very long and interesting letter which I received just before the reunion. Lucien expressed his regrets at not being able to attend.

What a wonderful and nostalgic occasion was our reunion! From the very beginning, the party by Bob Jones and Malvern Omohundro, Jr., through the commencement exercises on Sunday and a final visit by some of us to the Alumni Office and then the departure from the Holiday Inn West. Every moment was crowded with activities which permitted us to get back together and to relive again those wonderful days when we were students at William and Mary. We will all remember our 50th anniversary, and our thanks go to Patricia Giermak and to the others who assisted us in having such a wonderful time. Naturally I was very proud and happy to receive the plaque from the Alumni Association and have it displayed here in my office.

I did not write down the names of those I saw but to the best of my memory, the following list contains most of the names of those who were present. In some cases I may have forgotten names of wives or husbands of some of the class members. I wish to say here that the very happy part of the reunion was the wives and husbands of the class who attended. They did a great deal to make the occasion a happy one. Pat Giermak was kind enough to send me her list of those who attended.

Dr. Eric Herbst

An Anti-Depressant

That's What Teaching Is for Eric Herbst

"If it wasn't for teaching, I might be a manic depressive." For alumni fellow Eric Herbst, assistant professor of chemistry, teaching Physical Chemistry I goes hand in hand with research so advanced that it is far beyond the comprehension of his students.

According to Herbst, whose research centers on molecular collision and reaction, results are a key difference. "Research is a very hit and miss activity," he says. "With research, you may have negative results for months. Teaching is a more steady activity."

Herbst's knack of successfully balancing teaching and research is marked by the awards he has received in both fields. An Alumni Fellow for 1976-78, he was honored for his outstanding teaching ability. At the same time, the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation singled Herbst out from hundreds of nominees on the basis of his "potential to make creative contributions to scientific knowledge." In 1976, Herbst and assistant professor of physics Carl Carlson were the only two faculty members in Virginia to receive the prestigious Sloan Research Fellowships.

In the past year, Herbst has juggled teaching and committee responsibilities with three research projects: theoretical investigations of molecular collisions, laboratory investigations of chemical bond breakage, and theoretical investigation of molecular formation in interstellar space.

Simply put, Herbst says that he is studying "what happens when molecules collide and react." In the air we breathe, billions of molecules collide every second," he adds.

Because the process of collision and reaction can occur in interstellar space as well as on earth, Herbst says that all his research activities are interrelated. He has also found that it can be difficult to put a beginning and an end on projects funded by grants.

"You normally do this by submitting year-end reports, but what often happens is different from what is planned," he adds. "If the research is creative, you can't guess exactly what will happen."

Herbst, whose Sloan Fellowship has been extended to 1980, has previously worked under grants from the National Science Foundation and the Woodrow Wilson Foundation. All of the funds that he has received are designated and used for research--with one exception. Referring to the $500 unrestricted award that accompanied his Alumni Fellowship, Herbst says: "It raises my standard of living, for which I'm grateful."

Lucile Eastham Michie of Charlottesville sent a couple of snapshots she made of me in Alumni Hall on Sunday after the commencement exercises. These were much better than I usually take, and I am most grateful to Lucile for sending them. Lucile sent to me regards from my good friend, Walter N. Chinn, Jr., Class of 1927. Lucile is a member of our class who really keeps busy. At the time she wrote to me she was scheduled to go to Richmond to take an examination for license as a school psychologist and to assist, as a member of the Virginia Board of Psychology, in examining others.

I am sure you all noticed with interest the photograph in the May issue of the Alumni Gazette. The group included our classmate, John R. L. Johnson, Jr.

Ed Hill and Kitty Topping Hill wrote from Plymouth, N.C. that they thought the 50th Anniversary Reunion was a wonderful occasion which they thoroughly enjoyed and that they hope to be at Homecoming in the fall.

Mary Craig (Mrs. Herman E. Wornom) wrote from New York that she regretted very much that health problems prevented her from attending the reunion and seeing her many friends.

E. Hayden Gwaltney has retired from teaching in Petersburg High School. She does volunteer work at the hospital two days a week. In 1977 she took the William and Mary tour to New Zealand, Australia and Tahiti.

Virginia Floyd Beirne sold her farm and in June made a trip to Vermont and Maine. Ginny sent a very substantial contribution to the College in memory of Frankie Roberts, George Mapp, Dot Farrar, Punk Power and Lois Evans.

Pat Giermak wrote that the Class of 1928 donated $1,385.00 toward the class gift. The four portraits and their framing cost a total of $425.00, leaving a balance of $960.00. If you have any suggestions as to how this balance should be spent, send them to Pat at the Alumni Office. I am of the opinion that we should follow whatever recommendation of the Alumni Office.

Dr. Davis Y. Paschall was awarded the third annual "Distinguished Alumnus Award" by the University of Virginia.

Dorothy Broughton Brennan writes from Portsmouth that she thoroughly enjoyed the reunion.

Helen Louise Hostetler Peterson of Wickensburg, Ariz., is another who has lovely memories of the reunion.

Dorothy Bundy (Mrs. Harold C. Turner) of Waynesboro, Va., was unable to attend the reunion, but she plans to visit the college and the Alumni Office. She wishes to see the class gift.

Ruth James Turner's sister, Leah, was kind enough to take a photograph of me in the cap and gown. Ruth also took one of the slide kind, had it developed, and I was delighted to receive it. Ruth contributed greatly to the success of the reunion. She was accompanied at the reunion by her brother and sister. Ruth played the piano at the Alumni Hall for us on Saturday night and we sang (hopefully) like we did when we were students at William and Mary.

Emma Waring Walbridge of Libertyville, Ill., writes that she and her husband greatly enjoyed the 50th reunion. Emma says she is meeting with the Chicago Chapter of the Alumni Association and plans to tell them something of how it was 50 years ago at the then small College of William and Mary at the then sleepy town of Williamsburg. I have just received a beautiful post card from Hiroshima, Japan. Emma writes that she and Bud are visiting one of their two daughters who settled there. They have also been to Tokyo.

Rose Mountcastle (Mrs. Vern L. Flannery) of Mesa, Ariz., expressed the feeling of the 50th reunion beautifully. She said, "Is it possible it was over a half century ago that we scurried across campus to the ringing of the bell by old 'Doc' Billups?" Rose sent me a photo she snapped on Sunday while I was still wearing the cap and gown. On October 2-16 Vern and Rose are escorting a TWA trip to Rome, Athens, Egypt and the Holy Lands. I wish I could get away. I would like to make that trip.

George R. Whitley and his wife, Edna, sent me post cards from Budapest and from Istanbul. Edna is a University of Maryland alumna, and this was a University of Maryland tour. Their trip included a cruise on the Danube on a Russian vessel and the Black Sea.

Many who have written have suggested that the Class of 1928 give an award to Pat Giermak '77 for her unselfish and untiring efforts to make our 50th reunion the great success that it was. I am glad to say this will be done.

You will recall that at the class meeting Hayden Gwaltney of Petersburg, Bob Jones of Richmond and myself were appointed by Bill Thompson, Master of Ceremonies, to nominate a slate of officers for the class. Bob has written to me about the matter, and I have written to Bob and Hayden. I do not know exactly how to handle the matter, but I am going to try to set up a meeting in Richmond of the committee.

At past reunions and at Homecomings Bill Thompson and Tom Burke have given parties for the class. I have just talked to Bill on the phone and he tells me that he and Tom with their wives, Mary and Minna, are planning another party for Homecoming. This will probably be in the West Wing of the Williamsburg Lodge. You will receive more details at a later date.

I cannot close this letter without expressing the very great pleasure it was in seeing my friends and classmates again. All of us owe our gratitude to those who worked so hard to make it such a wonderful occasion. Outstanding was the splendid work of Bill Thompson as Master of Ceremonies. In addition to serving so well in that capacity, he had spent much time in planning the reunion. All of our thanks should also go to the committee: Ralph K. T. Larson, William Thompson, Malvern Omohundro, Robert Randolph Jones, William Linn, William Bozarth, Hayden Gwaltney, Eliza Hunter Trainham, Virginia McAllister Sommer, Page Drinker Hogan and Virginia Vaiden Bowen. And thanks to Bob Jones and Malvern Omohundro, Jr. for the party on Friday night.

The only way that I can get news is for you to write. Hope to see you at Homecoming.

Mrs. Joseph N. James
Eleanor C. Williamson
Millwood, Va. 22646

30 Having just read in the Gazette about the Graduation and 50th Class Reunion of the Class of '28, Thomas A. Hart writes that he is thinking about our reunion in 1980. Great!! Tom, during his career, has spent almost half of his life in Latin America, where he was born of U.S. missionary parents. Since his William and Mary days he has served in the U.S. Army, with AID, as Dean of the School of Arts and Sciences at Roosevelt University, Chicago, and in the School of Education of Pittsburgh Univ., from which he retired. He and Catherine Royer were married Sept. 24, 1976, in San Francisco and are now living in Seattle, Wash., where they both work as volunteers in the Municipal League of Seattle. Recently they joined Platt and Louise Bullard of Richmond on a trip to Banff, Lake Louise, and Emerald Lake, Canada. Platt is a William and Mary alumnus, having been captain of the track team from '34-'36. They had with them another alumnus, Dr. Robert V. Terrell ("Stump") '34, so they had a mini-reunion deep in the Canadian woods overlooking cool Emerald Lake.

Susan Carpenter Carter was elected treasurer of the Mecklenburg Historical Society. She is especially interested in history and antiques and is a collector of old dolls and valuable plates and has scrapbooks full of interesting material. Next year her home will be open for the Virginia State Garden Week. Those who are interested in lovely homes should see "Fern Cliff" April 10, 1979, Boydton, Va.

Laura C. Colvin kept warm in the coldest of winters, 1977, visiting family, friends, libraries and library schools in the West: Texas, Colorado, California, Hawaii, Washington, and Vancouver. In 1978 she was primarily in Myrtle Beach, S.C., the Caribbean and the West Indies, away from the ice and snow of Canada.

Lucy May Boswell Crymble is still active in her church, First Presbyterian of Kingsport, TN., and the Netherlands Inn Assoc., which administers two restorations, a stage coach inn and an 1850 farm. She is also a sustaining member of the Junior League (which does not check on birthdays).

Addison H. Baker has been retired for 7 years and is now living in West Yarmouth, Mass.

Dr. Simon Shubitz, who is a cardiologist and internal specialist in North Hollywood, Ill., has endowed a major cancer research prize and lectureship at the University of Chicago. Bruce Ames, the first winner, is an internationally-recognized biochemist at the University of California at Berkeley. He has done research on cancer-causing chemicals in the environment and has made significant contributions to the solution of the cancer problem.

Joe and I have just returned from a 6000-mile trek, taking our daughter Crellin '63, and her two sons. We went to Albuquerque, NM, where we were joined by our older daughter Cynthia and her family. With our trailers we had a two-trailer caravan into Colorado, the Tetons and Yellowstone Park, where we slept under blankets in the shadow of snow-crested mountains. We returned home by way of the Mt. Rushmore Memorial, the Badlands of South Dakota, the cornfields of Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois, and to the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia.

32 Another summer is over and it is back to school or to work for most of the younger generation. Many of our classmates are on a permanent vacation and a good many are traveling.

A note from Mack Britton (Speedy) of Orlando, Fla., says he has been touring in the West early this summer and will soon leave for an amateur operators' convention in Las Vegas. He is working to establish an alumni chapter for central Florida. Good luck to Speedy.

Charlie Ridout writes that he retired from the hotel business in Chapel Hill, N.C., and now lives in Houston, Tex. (413 South Voss Road, #21 - Zip Code is 77057), to be near his two married daughters. He is enjoying his life there.

I read in the Richmond paper that Caskey Stinette has a new book published. Could this be the Harry C. Stinette of our class?

Speedy wanted to know what happened to me - no letter in the last Gazette. I have been out of the States for five weeks, on a trip with my husband to Austria, Germany, England and Scotland. We spent many happy days visiting with friends, touring, and spent two weeks in beautiful St. Andrews, Scotland, at the University of St. Andrews. We were there during the British Open Golf Tournament. I am no golfer, but I did enjoy the excitement with friends. Now it is back to work for us - a busy time in the dental world.

Hope to see "you all" at Homecoming in October.

Jean Upsall Hill of Fort Meyer, Fla., writes that last year she followed "Seattle Slew," of whom her son was half owner, from track to track watching him win the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness, and the Belmont! Then she set off for Europe, touring the Scandinavian countries and Russia. This year, however, her doctor tells her she must confine her travels to the U.S. She says she shall miss the adventure, but foreign travel has always served to confirm her belief that in spite of our deplorable state we are still the most fortunate nation on earth. She sends greetings to all her classmates.

34 In our last column, we remarked upon the increasing number of our classmates who have retired and who are making their retirement a meaningful new experience. We have recently heard from two more of our group who have joined this elite corps; viz:

Maxine Duvel Tuve writes that both she and her chemist husband have retired to their home in Woodside Park, Silver Spring, Md., where they grow azaleas and orchids (shades of Nero Wolfe!) in their greenhouse. Maxine adds that they visit Williamsburg often, an advantage those of us have who live not too far away from the College.

Nathaniel H. Kates lets us know that he is now retired and living in Palm Beach, Fla.

We do not know how much warning the game fish had of his coming to Palm Beach, but we do know their jeopardy is larger since Nat's arrival.

Ann Pharr Goodykoontz tells us that she and Jack took a sentimental journey through Virginia in August of '77, spending two days in the Williamsburg-Jamestown-Yorktown area, visiting family on both sides and classmates Elizabeth Young Clark, Sue Lancaster McLean, Harriet Pittard Beales, Kitty Embree Howard and Dot Ford Lippincott. Such pleasurable visiting with classmates and schoolmates reminds us to remind you that while it may not be possible to always visit in person, we can always visit in fact, through the good offices of this column. Therefore, good classmates, let's get with it!

LCDR J. L. Kranke USNR (RET)
3910 N.E. 11th Street
Ocala, Fla. 32670

36 Fenton N. Gravely called me and also wrote me a real nice letter. In fact, he made my week for me. He wrote, "In '34, I was a dumb cluck fresh out of high school, squatting in a room in Old Dominion dormitory with an equally dumb oaf from Kansas for a roommate. We did not know the difference from Richmond Road or Jamestown Road, much less where Rogers Hall or even where the Wren Building was. Doubtless you have forgotten, but you took two neophytes into tow, and showed them the way. And your many kindnesses have not been forgotten." Well, after 44 years, please forgive me, Fenton, for my memory failed me and thanks a million. Fenton has had a fine and varied career in construction, Air Force, commercial air line pilot, tobacco buyer, real estate, insurance and finance.

Claudine Moss Gay Bryant, MD, and husband J. Marion Bryant, MD, invited Dot and me for dinner at their home in northwest Washington, D.C., on Sunday, July 30th. Claudine's mother, Rosa Mercer Moss, and Claudine's brother, James M. Moss, MD, were present. Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Fulcher were also guests of the Bryants. Dr. Fulcher was head of Neurosurgery at Georgetown University Hospital for many years. We all reminisced events over the past forty-six years and had a very enjoyable time. Claudine and Marion seem to be on the go almost constantly. In fact, they were preparing for their next trip which is to Berlin, Germany, where Claudine will monitor a medical meeting concerning "The Media and Its Effect on Medicine." We were also preparing to return home to Ocala, Fla.

Visit a classmate - you'll be glad you did - they are great.

Bruce Bredin has been elected Chairman of the Board of Directors and Overseers of Sweet Briar College. He is also a member of the Board of Visitors of the College of William and Mary and serves on the Committee to Furnish the President's House. Bruce has served on the Sweet Briar Board since 1969. I believe that Bruce is one of the top contributors to the College of William and Mary, if not the top.

I surely would appreciate hearing from anyone from the Class of 1936. A postcard will do - just send me some news, please.

Fortieth Reunion October 14-15, 1978

38 Hi, Guys and Dolls, Let's try to make this reunion year as near to 100% in attendance as possible. Make your plans early. Our "recovery area" is the Mount Vernon Motor Lodge on Richmond Road.

The total to date in the Class of 1938 Gift Fund is $150. Let's get it up a lot higher! Please send your donations to our fund before our reunion, so we'll have something to be proud of when we gather at Homecoming. Be thinking of what would be a good gift we could give as our gift to the College. We can take a poll at our class cocktail party at Homecoming.

Joan Thompson Hicks has just retired after six years as head Veterinary Medicine

Librarian, University of Illinois. She is now entering a new field of study: Esperanto, the international language, and invites anyone to correspond with her. "Kiel ni havus la paco (detento) sen keni havas interparolo?" Write to: Joan Thompson Hicks, 8 Burnett Circle, Urbana, Ill. 61801.

Jane McEnally Randle and her husband Jay are enjoying an active retirement, having been involved in secondary education for nearly thirty years together. Jay is a graduate of Western Maryland College, where they both received master's degrees the same day. Their only son, Jaw W., teaches at the university level and will begin a three-year contract teaching basic design and other related courses at the American University in Beirut, Lebanon, when the fall rolls around.

Come on! Let's see a big turnout at Homecoming 1978.

40 Noel Patricia Lambert retired December 30, 1977, as a medical librarian with the Center for Disease Control, Atlanta. She says she is ready for travel, volunteer work and bridge.

Jean Clarahan Bratton is planning to move from Wilmette, Ill., to Emory, Va., at the end of the summer and will be working at Emory and Henry College. It's great that you'll be back in the state, Jean.

On a little trip in June, Frank and I spent a delightful day with Mrs. Gilbert Oakley in Roanoke. Mrs. Oakley was Housemother at the Kappa House my senior year and she is truly a lovely and remarkable woman.

We were surprised and pleased to see Carolyn Moses Lucardi and her daughter Deede and a little granddaughter at the wedding reception of Dixon and Nancy Foster's daughter Kate on July 22. We were sorry we didn't have the opportunity of having a lengthier visit.

Only July 12 our son Daniel returned from three months in Detmold, Germany, where he had a job in an electronics plant, lived in a German household and learned the language. Next week he enters the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, and, of course, we are all delighted about that.

Now, how about some news from all of you? I'm sure you would welcome hearing about others than the Hendersons, and I hate to have to pad my letters. O.K.?

42 Dr. Samuel Bessman, long a prolific contributor to professional journals, is Chairman of Nutrition and Pharmacology at USC and professor of Pediatrics. Last year he was involved in the first transplant of an artificial pancreas.

Arthur Keeney, M.D., Dean and Professor of Ophthalmology at the University of Louisville, School of Medicine, has been appointed to the nine-member Board of Trustees of the $100,000,000 James Graham Brown Foundation of Louisville. All trustees are lifetime appointments. It is the largest foundation within the state of Kentucky. The Foundation has contributed four to five million dollars yearly to capital construction projects, commonly related to health and education within Kentucky. He also serves as a trustee of the American Foundation for the Blind and is a member of the Scientific Advisory Committee for the National Council to Combat Blindness. He is a past president of the American Association for Automotive Medicine and was president of the Fourth International Congress on Ultrasonography in Ophthalmology held in Philadelphia. He has authored a textbook, "Ocular Examination: Basis and Technique," in its second edition, and is a prolific contributor in the field of ophthalmics. In 1964, he and his wife Virginia, also a member of the class, received the Citizen Laureate Award of the Younger Women's Club of Louisville. Virginia is an associate professor of Community Health at the University of Louisville School of Medicine.

Dick Davis has received the 1978 Distinguished Virginia Award for volunteerism from the statewide organization of Exchange Clubs. He was nominated by the Portsmouth Exchange Club for his efforts to improve housing.

Malcolm and Patti Sullivan are planning a great retirement program to the sunny shores of Florida. In addition to the enrollment of their son at the University of Miami and the hassles of the PR business losing their luster, the recent winters in Chicago may have had something to do with it. They have a nice three-bedroom villa on the 16th fairway of the #1 course at Quail Ridge in Boynton Beach, between Fort Lauderdale and Palm Beach. Not a bad location. Sully indicates that he plans on just relaxing and retreating for a while and then they may get involved in some outside interests, maybe a few business ventures, and in general being themselves and doing what they feel comfortable doing. It looks like a good time ahead and we wish them all the best.

Paul H. Gantt writes that he has been hospitalized from January through June. We hope that you are again a picture of health.

44 Congratulations to Barbara Ruhl Odland, named Outstanding Educator in Janesville, Wis., for 1976 (Barbara teaches Spanish). Her husband has also achieved great success; he has invented a total ankle orthopedic implant. One son, following in his father's footsteps, has just graduated from med school and their youngest son is a musician in Denver. Daughter Judy '69, is in graduate school at "Thunderbird" in Phoenix. Barbara says that the Odlands are alumni of seven colleges!

Eleanor Ramsdell Van Scherpe and Pete went on a spring Caribbean cruise and spent a week in Puerto Rico where their 17-year-old son participated in a Sun Fish World Championship Invitational. #2 daughter had her first child, the Van Scherpes' second grandson. Eleanor's husband Pete travels frequently to the North Slope of Alaska so they really enjoyed their trip to warm waters. They live in Foster City, Calif.

Elizabeth Birch Allen and husband Earl have also been traveling. They visited Nancy Hale Mortimer in Mt. Solon, Va., and Elizabeth's mother and other relations in southern England. Their daughter Mary met Mary Stuart Mason '46, at a reading conference in Williamsburg in spring '77. Mary was then with Allegheny County schools, and now is a reading specialist in Chesapeake. Son Richard has been at VPI. Daughters Peggy and Anne have two children each.

David and I had a busy spring, flying to "historical" meetings in Miami and Pensacola, and joined eleven other planes for an eight-day air-tour of the Caribbean in May, from the Caicos to Haiti, the Dominican Republic and St. Croix, and in June a week in Kansas City. A visit to Washington in August gave us the opportunity to see Jean Boyd Lacy and Ben in Front Royal. They had a marvelous trip to France, England and Scotland in June with Debbie '78, and Betsy.

The saddest news in a long time is that Pris Schumacher Beringer passed away June 10th in Larchmont. For all of us who were fortunate enough to have known her, something bright and beautiful has gone from our lives. Our deepest sympathy to her husband Marshall and family. Son Bruce, wife and little Kevin live nearby in Rye. Marshall is still very involved in chemical research and may go to Kuwait in the fall.

Hope to see you all at Homecoming.

46 Summer has come and gone and I hope that you got to do exactly what you wanted to--when, where and how!

We've heard from lots of class members and I'll give you the news by state. First, let's hear from the great state of:

MINNESOTA! Robert H. Bryant and his wife (Christine Rentsch '48) are active in church and human rights activities. Bob is involved in writing curriculum materials for Native Americans and Chris has taken courses toward a master's in public health at the U. of Minn. They live in Columbia Heights.

Next, ARKANSAS! Betty Marie Ellett Lile of Little Rock is also active in her church, the 2nd Presbyterian, in community projects and politics. Betty is lecturer and author-- "... mostly Biblical studies, but I also give programs on Colonial Williamsburg, dressed in a costume I made like the ones worn by hostesses in Williamsburg," she writes. About 10 years ago, Betty says, she built a house which resembles the Raleigh Tavern!

And now, GEORGIA! Thomas Lanier Smith of Smyrna has announced his candidacy for the Georgia Public Service Commission. Five members are elected on a statewide basis. This commission regulates all electric, gas, telephone and intrastate freight rates. It is a constitutional level office. Keep us posted, Tommy, and good luck!

Followed by VIRGINIA! From Williamsburg Carol Talbot Egelhoff writes that her youngest child enrolled at William and Mary this past January. This, says Carol, means that all four of her children have attended the College at some point in their careers!

Two weddings of interest to our class took place during the spring. One was that of Carolyn Virginia Herndon, daughter of Clara Whitney Moses Herndon. She married Timothy Wayne Tentry in Appomattox on June 3. Clara and husband William live in Brookneal. The other wedding was that of Martha Geddy Frechette '78, daughter of Fred Frechette. She was married to Carl Edward Tack, III '78, on May 20 in Bruton Parish Church.

And hello, NEW JERSEY! Edith Harwood Smith's son Woody graduated from Princeton in June with a B.S. in Chem. Eng. "... it was an outside ceremony and we had a beautiful day for it," Edie said. Woody is now taking a 3-month new Toyota-Corolla car tour of the U.S. and then will start work in the Baltimore plant of Procter and Gamble, Camay Dept. Wendy, Edie's dancing daughter, is on tour with the chorus of "Guys and Dolls," playing in Ogunquit, ME, Falmouth, Mass., Westport, Conn., and the Poconos until Labor Day. Edie herself keeps busy with gardening and tennis in Westfield.

And MARYLAND! In the first and current issue of Access, the magazine for policy-holders of GEICO, there is a fine article highlighting the work of Bill Trueheart. Bill is the husband of Barbara Jean Adams Trueheart. He is GEICO's (Government Employees Insurance Co.) Director of Rehabilitation. His objective is to manage and coordinate the various kinds of care and attention that a patient needs. The Truehearts live in Ellicott City.

And, da-dah, HAWAII! Ann Johnson Tomkins took an early retirement from her position as librarian in the Palos Verdes Unified School District and, along with a retired school-teacher friend, is "... having a ball on 2 1/4 acres in Pukalani, Maui." Her son Jack is a junior at UCLA; middle daughter Edie lives in Torrance, Calif.; and oldest daughter Peggy is married to a captain in the Army and has two children, ages 8 mos. and 4 yrs.

Last, but not least, PENNSYLVANIA! Congratulations to Tom Duncan, son of Tom and Keith Ann Gamble Duncan of Corraopolis on graduating from UVA Law School this past May.

If we had heard from the '46'ers in New England the very Deep South, we would have lit up the map! Back with you in November. Take care.

Thirtieth Reunion October 14-15, 1978

48 It's that time again! Time to make plans to return for our 30th Reunion. We hope many of you can get back for that exciting time. Don and I are going to squeeze it in before we head for Denver and the Girl Scout National Council meeting.

Just a few notes at this time of year. You must have been too busy to write.

Mary McCarthy Leigh of Duluth, Minn., has retired from teaching and is enjoying spending some time walking and keeping up her home.

Ed Dunbar, Vice President for Finance and the Secretary of the Roanoke Gas Company, has been named one of the new directors of the First & Merchant National Bank - Roanoke regional board.

Charles Teach has been promoted to Vice President, Comptroller's Department of the National City Bank in Cleveland. He joined National in 1969 as Assistant Comptroller.

Susanne Earls Carr is in her own business, "Susanne Earls Carr Interiors," and enjoys it very much. She has a twelve-year-old daughter, Constance, who attends Rumsey Hall School in Washington, Conn. Susanne, who lives in New York, has spent two interesting vacations -- one to St. Marten, W.I., and one to Martha's Vineyard, Vt.

Nancy Holland Blanford and George '43, enjoyed visiting with old friends and seeing William and Mary win at the Tangerine Bowl Basketball Tourney in Orlando during the holidays. Nancy and George are in Tampa.

Franklin A. Bon writes from Montebello, Calif., that he is in his 25th year as a high school teacher and counselor. He has a wife and four children.

This past year I have enjoyed knowing Darlene E. Fawver '73, who is studying for a Master's of Music degree at Indiana University. She has been at our church many times, participating in our music program. She, of course, knew "Pappy" and we have shared many reminiscences.

The time has come for another hearty volunteer to come out of the woodwork and offer to be the Class Reporter. I have given my five years and have enjoyed hearing from classmates. Please let Trudi know you're interested.

See you in October!

Walter Pcheny is living in Salem, Mass. He and his wife are particularly interested in William and Mary activities in the Boston area. They are trying to drum up some interest.

Howard Rayfiel practiced law in New York and California and has been a motion picture studio executive. He is now writing screenplays and just beginning to have his work produced. He and his wife Eileen, son Victor (21), and daughter Amy (16) live at Newport Beach and in New York's Adirondack Mountains. I received this information while I was down at the beach and rode my bike over to see Howard. Nobody was home and a neighbor informed me he was in New York. I will try again in the fall.

Frank Angle is Senior Vice President and Treasurer of J. W. Burrell, Inc., and has been elected to the Board of People Federal Savings & Loan Association in Richmond, Va. He is also Treasurer and a director of Blue Shield of Virginia and a trustee for the Diocese of Southwest Virginia Fund.

Dr. W. Robert Jenkins has been named Dean of Livingston College, where he had been Acting Dean for the past year.

John is currently Vice President of Guardian Life Insurance Company and also serves as President and Director of Lakeland Colony Corporation; Director of Randomatic, Northwest Electronics, and St. Anthony's Printing and Introl, Inc.

As for the Morrisons, yours truly just got her real estate license and cannot decide whether to leave her present simple and easy job or sell houses. I am actually doing both for the present, but one will have to go. Bob and I spent a month at the beach and that was not enough. As usual, all my information came from the Alumni Office. I would really like to hear from some of you. Don't forget Homecoming and to send me a note.

54 As fall and Homecoming approach, we may see old friends and hear of their activities. Be sure to have a scrap of paper to take down the particulars and send to me. I expect to be among you for part of the special October weekend. Next year is the big one; I hope it's in your plans.

Bob Lawrence, as of the past year, has set up his own business as a professional consultant in the area of community planning for facilities and services. He is based in Norfolk.

The Northern Virginia alumni, newly organized, met for a picnic at Haymarket in July on an unbearably hot afternoon.

Gordon Vliet and I represented the Class of 1954, but most of those present were of the younger contingent.

Harold Holland, Chairman and President of American National Holding Company and Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of the American National Bank and Trust Company of Michigan, has been elected a director of the Association of Bank Holding Companies.

56 Lots of news from our classmates. Josh Thompson has been appointed President of the Central-Penn National Bank of Philadelphia. Heard your bank was lending money at 5 per cent, Josh. Is that true? Aubrey Fitzgerald has won re-election to the City Council of Newport News. Now if you can just keep that shipyard busy, Aubrey, the Commonwealth of Va. will be grateful. Mary Myers King opened up a commercial studio in Falls Church, Va., called The Stenciled Pineapple--then they closed it because they had so much work to do they were never there! She and her friend do wall stenciling, which is very popular with the renaissance of the Victorian houses. You need to teach business at the College, Mary, and tell us your secrets of how to keep so busy that you closed your business.

Bill Pfeifer has been named Headmaster at The Derryfield School in Manchester, N.H. Bill formerly was a headmaster in Charlotte, N.C., and had worked for CW for nine years. One day he left the Williamsburg area to do some selling, and the response farther inland led him to set up a series of stations and a supplying service, all still by the roadside.

Carol Jones Smith has been named to the Norelco sales staff of Donovan Hershey Corp. of Los Angeles, working with the Norelco dictation equipment.

Sharon noted that "35 is a special age" and so it is for me. I find myself about to be "suddenly single" after 13 years of marriage as I face an impending divorce. I will remain in Bronxville with my seven-year-old son Spencer and figure out a way to put that long-ago William and Mary education to good use. Speaking of the College, in August my parents took my son and myself on a trip to the N.C. Outer Banks to heal the divorce wounds and we stopped in Williamsburg. The College and town were never lovelier, and my son, seeing it for the first time, was enthralled. Finally, I had a wonderful reunion in Arlington, Va., in June with Marcia Ballard Scott, Ginnie Pierce Volkman, Patty Vaught and Bobbie Mulcahey Frazier. "cut the cord completely," I do have a part-time job as a Special Sales Rep. in Pan Am's New Jersey District Sales Office. Last April, Tom and I enjoyed an outstanding two-week vacation on free tickets awarded me by Pan Am. We flew "around-the-world" . . . Tokyo, Hong Kong, Bangkok, and Tehran. The sights, smells and tastes were experiences to remember!

Tom and I will be at Homecoming this year as his law class celebrates their fifth year reunion. Hope to see you there!

Both Mary and Craig are anxiously awaiting the birth of their first child in September.

Charles Howard is living in Washington, D.C. where he has been studying Japanese, Spanish and the affairs of Nicaragua. He will enter the American University School of Law in the fall.

Residents of Williamsburg need only to look up to catch a glimpse of Gary Shelley flying high in his Piper Tri-Pacer airplane.

Bob Rycroft is teaching at Mary Washington College and received his Doctor's of Economics degree from the University of Maryland in May. Since graduation, David Macfarlan graduated from law school at Wake Forest University and clerked for a judge in Bucks County, Penn. He is now practicing law with a firm in New Britain, Penn. Dave says he keeps in touch with the gang from JBT #42, so let's hear from them, too.

Rich Guardino, a newcomer to political office, has been appointed to the Hempstead Village, N.Y. Board of Trustees, to fill an unexpired term. A Republican Committeeman, he is a member of state, local and national bar organizations. Rich is an attorney with a firm in Mineola, N.Y.

This fall, Meriwether "Buck" Smith will begin the doctoral program in Spanish at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Ginger Dick Seybold has received a two-year post doctoral research fellowship from the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association Foundation. She received her Ph.D. in Pharmacology from the University of Minnesota in 1977 and is currently doing research at the university in diabetic neuropathy and regulation of somatostatin.

He is assigned to Ellsworth AFB in South Dakota where he is with a unit of the Strategic Air Command. Susan Hillard Chase has been with Coty Cosmetics for two years and is now a traveling representative. She gives demonstrations and puts on cosmetic clinics.

After stints in teaching, book sales, carpentry, bicycle repair, probation work and dock building, Randy Porter has settled down as the Director of Camp Baker, a residential camp for mentally retarded children and adults in Chesterfield, Va. Somehow he found time to work on his Master's of Education in Special Education, which he is now completing. He enjoys working at the camp so will probably be there for a while. If you want to get in touch with him, his address is 7600 Beach Road, Chesterfield, Va. 23832.

Joanne Dukeshire Pulliam and husband Don, '71, have done some moving since they left Williamsburg. They lived in Wisconsin for four years while Don earned his Ph.D. in Space Physics from the University of Wisconsin, and Joanne was a disability claims adjuster for the state. Since 1976, they've been in Houston, Tex., where Don has worked as a post doctoral research associate at Rice University in the Space Physics Department. Joanne is using her William and Mary background when she was the captain of the women's tennis team because now she is a tennis pro at an indoor tennis club, and she loves it.

Talking about traveling. . . Andy Evans and his wife lived in Kabul, Afghanistan, for two years and are now living in Jakarta, Indonesia. Andy is a financial analyst for the U.S. Agency for International Development and says that, with much bureaucratic maneuvering, he can sometimes get to the field and visit the projects he is accounting for. Their new daughter keeps them very busy. He extends an invitation to classmates to stop and visit. The Island of Bali is one and a half hours away. He also relates that Gary Carter and wife Cathy Witeck are living in Alexandria.

Pete Malpass now lives in Annandale, Va., and is starting his Ph.D. in Statistics. He is a computer systems analyst for Computer Sciences Corporation working at the Pentagon. He saw Tom Hege in Georgetown and is looking forward to seeing other classmates in the area.

Kathleen has changed jobs and is now working for Smith-Douglass in Norfolk, a division of Borden.

Elizabeth Buckner's job with United Airlines took her to Chicago in 1973. It sounds like she enjoys the city, and she has even found a few William and Mary graduates there.

It was great hearing from so many of you. Keep on writing.

74 Hello again--hope everyone had a nice summer full of news to share! It has been so long since our last issue (April) that the news has been stockpiling at an alarming rate. The news from this month's column comes from as far back as February, so if you find that some is a trifle stale, write and bring us up to date.

Please note our new address: we bought a house this spring. We are living in between Richmond and Williamsburg because Jim and I are now going in opposite directions each day, he to Richmond and I to Williamsburg. I just began a two-year apprenticeship program at William and Mary that involves working for Colonial Williamsburg while getting a Master's in history and I love it thus far--although Homecoming will no doubt find me complaining to everyone about all the work!

It seems as though suddenly everyone is moving: Greg and Linda Ross Sexton have recently purchased a home in Falls Church. Kaethe Post Ferguson moved May 1 to Johnson City, Tenn., where her husband is on the faculty of a new med school there. Kaethe finished her Master's in biology at Tech and has been spending her time househunting in Tennessee. I hear that they finally found one and moved in this summer.

Kathy Todd Wilke and Tom '75, bought a house in Williamsburg in June and found that one of their neighbors is Jim Rees, also working in Williamsburg as the new director of the College News Office. Many a Friday evening finds Jim out at the Williamsburg Auction house carrying off bargains to furnish his new house, while Kathy and Tom manage to hit every antique show, flea market, and auction this side of Richmond. In fact, Kathy, a teacher at Walsingham Academy, is in charge of the school's annual antique show for 1979 and is busy lining up dealers already.

More people moving: Barb Brittain Store is moving to Pittsburgh where husband Pat, a graduate of U.Va. Med. School, will be a resident in orthopedics. John and Lynn Adams Hostetler are Chambersburg, Penn.'s newest residents. John has a job as a physical therapist at the hospital just a few blocks from their newly purchased house. Lynn and John will not be at Homecoming this year, as their first child has inconsiderately chosen that very weekend to arrive, but they hope to make it to a William and Mary football game later in the year. And Bill and Mary Richardson have returned to Richmond from California where Bill went to Hastings College of Law in San Francisco.

And now for some military-type moves: Bill Clark is a Navy pilot now stationed in San Diego enjoying the beaches. His next assignment in Jacksonville, Fla.--sounds like a tough life going from one Sunshine State to another. Danny and Judy Hanson

Graham are in Wurzburg, Germany until 1980 where Danny is a military intelligence officer for the Army. They went to graduate school at the U of Alabama from 1974-1976, where Danny received an MBA while Judy got an MA in English. They were married on Dec. 22, 1976 and were shipped overseas just a few weeks later. Judy found a job as the director of a music and theatre center and teaches English on the side, and both are enjoying this opportunity to see Europe. Jenny Miller Owens, her husband Lee, and their new baby Andrew (born in February) have been transferred to Elizabeth City, N.C., where Lee is a Coast Guard pilot. They have bought a new house and moved in this past August. So much for the Navy, Army, and Coast Guard. . . don't we have any Air Force or Marine classmates out there?

A letter from Tom Langhorne informs us that he received his MA in Anthropology from the State U of N.Y. at Binghamton in 1976 and spent the next year as a research assistant at the Institute of Archeology and Anthropology at the U. of South Carolina. That year he was inducted into Sigma Xi, the Scientific Research Society of North

"When alumni return to campus, it's not what they see and hear that tells them this place is special--it's what they feel."

Gordon Vliet, the man who runs the day-to-day operations of the Society of the Alumni, is known for his outgoing personality and his sharp one-liners. But believe it or not, he can be very serious--particularly when he talks about the future of the College.

"Alumni are too often classified as visitors from the past who like to sit around reminiscing about by-gone eras," says Vliet. "But today, I just don't think that's a fair appraisal. William and Mary alumni do come back to visit old places and see old friends, but the questions they ask show that they are concerned with what's happening now, and what's going to happen tomorrow."

"Their questions about what's going on today are easy to answer," Vliet says. "I ask them to sit down and get comfortable, and then I can talk for several hours about what our faculty and students and alumni are doing that's new, creative and adventurous. But when it comes to what's going to happen tomorrow, it gets tougher; I have to be honest. I usually say I'm excited about the future, but at the same time worried about what lies ahead."

"This College has the potential to be great--even greater than we are today. But it's an expensive challenge, and one which we'll all have to accept if the prospects for the College are to be more than just that."

"We've never had more participation and concern expressed by alumni than we are experiencing today, at all levels, from the Class of '78 to the Class of '08, coast to coast," he says. "I think our alumni sense that we are entering a crucial period, that the College is not going to make it without us."

"It's not hard to convince an alumnus who's been away from campus for three decades that the magic he experienced way back in 1948 is still here, because it is. I'd like to walk around the campus with each alumnus and his family (or hers) to show them what makes William and Mary the kind of school it is--it's something we can all still be proud of. Then I'd like to point out what we're in danger of losing if we can't increase our private support," says Vliet.

"I know there are hundreds of alumni of the College who realize the situation we're in today, and they are doing their part. If those who are not supporting the College would only begin, think what this could mean in terms of our future!

"I think I know them well enough to believe they are not going to let us down, that they'll be willing to offer their help."

Because more than ever, we need it.

The Year of the Alumni

The 1978-79 William and Mary Fund Campaign for the College

America. In September 1977 Tom enrolled in the Ph.D. program at Michigan State where he and his wife, Deborah Ann Croyle of New York, currently reside. Tom hopes to finish that degree sometime in 1980--a long haul! He mentioned some news about Nancy and Bob Snead as well--Bob has finished his Master's degree in Psychology and is working at present on another Master's in Computer Science at the U. of Kansas. Tom and Bob are wondering what has become of Tom Karow--can anyone help?

Jim Person is in Charlottesville and recently finished a Master's in School Administration. He was an intern at Huguenot High School in Richmond for the winter semester of 1977-78. Other Charlottesville residents include Mike and Sarah Beeler Hudson who won a free trip to Paris last May from GE. Mike is a floor manager at the GE dealership in town.

Master's of Hospital Administration degree from MCV was awarded to Thomas J. Rice, III. He will be doing his administrative residency in Portsmouth, Va.

A letter from Phil Jones: "After graduation I attended graduate school at West Virginia Univ., worked for the W. Va. State Legislature, and have since moved to Florida where I graduated from the College of Law, Stetson University." He is presently an associate with Devito & Cohen in St. Petersburg and is living on the beach. No more cold winters for Phil! Another new attorney, Tom Duncan, graduated from U.Va. this year and is working with the House Parliamentarian's Office in D.C. Pam Jamarik is in her third year of law school at Wake Forest Univ. and Scottye Hedstrom is in her third year at U.Va.'s law school with Law Review to her credit. If anyone should see her, please pass the word that John Finta wrote me in April, just missing the last issue's deadline, asking for her address. I'm afraid I don't know it, but John's is 2500 North Van Dorn St., #1101, Alexandria, Va. 22302.

Rob Estes and wife Jean Berger '75, are living in Florence, S.C., where Rob is the manager of a trucking terminal and his wife is a teacher. They go to the nearby metropolis of Dillon for their entertainment. Charlotte, N.C. is the new home of Jim Newell who is with Ford Motor Company's Marketing Division.

New physicians among us include Dr. Wayland Eure, who completed his MD at U.Va. and is doing his residency at the University Hospital, and Dr. David G. Oelberg, a graduate of U. of Maryland's medical school and currently a pediatric resident at Galveston, Tex. I'm sure they aren't the only two new doctors in our class, so let's hear some news from the rest of you.

I want to clarify the rather vague news about Keith Benton which appeared in the April issue--it seems Keith is the Director of Development Services at Eckerd College in St. Petersburg, Fla., not, as I had written, merely an employee in that office. His responsibilities include research, gift recording, donor solicitations, and general management of the office.

Joan Kendrick Wingfield was kind enough to send me all the information she had, and first is her own: Joan is an Employment and Claims Interviewer for the Virginia Employment Commission. She recently accompanied her husband Spot to Alexandria for a soccer clinic (he is a teacher and soccer coach in Mechanicsville) where they visited Peggy Miller, Angie Mason, and Paul and Anne Totty Dayer. Anne and Paul live just five doors down from Chip and Sandy Wilson Yancey in Falls Church. Anne is a paralegal at a large D.C. law firm and Paul is a senior accountant at Arthur Anderson. They had a nice trip to Europe last fall with stops in England, France, Switzerland, and Germany. Charlie Bish was married on April 1 and had his honeymoon in London.

More permanently abroad are Geoy Ailstock, who married an Australian and is returning to Australia to live; and Jeremy and Jean Hudspeth Goddard who have moved to Paris from Alabama. Jeremy has a new job with Chrysler Corp. involving solar energy. Laura Hillock married Victor Haupt of Chile last September and they have been living outside Mexico City where Laura works for a government agency doing bibliographic information retrieval. She is also working on her Master's in Latin American Anthropology and Economics. So now anyone visiting Germany, Paris, Australia, or Mexico City will have a classmate to look up!

Joan also wrote that Elaine Tesko Humphrey and husband John are back in Virginia with their year-old baby girl, Summer Ann; that Jane Pulliam Hay just returned from an IBM class in Dallas where she ran into another IBM employee, John Hollis; that Mark Robertson is getting a Master's in environmental science at U.Va., specializing in coastal areas; that Mark, '71, and Maud Ann Sharp Wilson had a little girl, Julie, last fall; that Tom Monday is the President of the William and Mary rugby team; and that Nancy Stone has a counseling job in Lexington, Va. Thanks for such a mountain of news, Joan!

Joyce Ng is living in Alexandria and working for the General Accounting Office as an auditor. She writes also that Laura Bechtel married Fred Meltzer last February and is working for Bell Labs in New Jersey; and that Jan Wingo married Fred Cousins last fall and is now working for F&M bank in Richmond.

Cary Glass writes that she is teaching high school biology and chemistry in Potsdam, N.Y. in partial fulfillment of the requirements for an M.A.T. degree at Colgate University. And Laurie Smith, a copywriter for a Madison Avenue ad agency, still finds big city life exciting. She says she recently got together with Chuck Taylor for a little William and Mary nostalgia along with some dancing at a local disco.

And a long letter from Billy Lugar just made the deadline: Billy writes that, after several "false starts" as a waiter and teaching English, he landed a "dream job" with Peter Burwash International, Ltd., a company that hires pros to staff resort hotels throughout the world. Out of 2000 applicants, Billy was selected to go to the training session in Honolulu and is now the tennis pro at the Holiday Inn Kauai Beach. He expects to be there up to a year and then to be sent to another resort each year in places like Thailand, Hong Kong, Indonesia, the Caribbean, Malaysia, the Fiji Islands, etc. He adds that he has become totally health-oriented and is a vegetarian. Billy asked specifically for news from Polly Brown and Jean and Jeremy Goddard (back up a few paragraphs for their news) and said we could print his address for those who'd like to get in touch: c/o PBI World Headquarters, 1909 Ala Wai Blvd. Suite 1507, Honolulu, Hawaii 96815.

And as I happened to be paging through The Washington Post last week I stumbled upon a lovely picture and long article of Denise Love's wedding. Denise was married on July 15 to Claude Alexander, a 1969 West Point graduate and former legislative aide to Senator Robert Dole of Kansas. Linda Ross Sexton and Scottye Hedstrom were maids of honor and the newlyweds honeymooned at The Homestead in Warm Springs. They are currently living in McLean.

Robert Fiedler is attending Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, and is a candidate for a Doctor of Ministry degree. His new wife, Hollie, is also a student at Union. She graduated from Agnes Scott and has her MA from Harvard.

Charlie Bish was a speaker at a recent state and local government seminar in Washington, D.C., conducted by Price Waterhouse & Co., for senior government officials and Price Waterhouse management active in the state and local government field. Bish works for Price Waterhouse.

The Reverend Doug Frank is the minister of Millbrooke Christian Church in Hopkinsville, Ky. He was ordained in June at the Hanover Avenue Christian Church in Richmond. He received a Master's of Divinity degree from Vanderbilt University Divinity School in Nashville.

So that's about it! Hoping to see lots of people at Homecoming this fall, and hoping to see lots of news in the mailbox soon.

76 You know it's hard to believe that two years have come and gone since graduation, and now our third Homecoming as alumni is approaching. I hope everyone has had an enjoyable summer. I've been sitting on several letters which were written last spring so let's go on with the news.

Al Buchanan has spent the summer working at Yellowstone National Park dousing campfires and feeding the bears. Following the job there, Al will be going to graduate school in journalism at one of four southwestern universities where he has been accepted. Al had been working for Safeway Stores and doing bits of free lance writing prior to his job at Yellowstone.

He also had some news on Bob Bernstein, who is working for Colonial Heights in the Office of Planning and Zoning. Bob studies at night for his master's degree in Urban Planning at VCU. Word has it that Gerry White has completed his MBA at W&M, just as Maria Ruiz has completed her MBA at ODU. Is it true that Maria vacationed in Hawaii this past May? Luau! Luau!

Remember the nasty spill Bob McDevitt '75, took on the ski slopes in May '76? Bob has recovered and works for the government in D.C. Pete Peterson and Dale Kriebe '77, still take those spills as they "christie" around the ski shop in Breckenridge, Colo. Pete is supposed to be attending an unbeknownst-to-me law school this fall. And I'm just wondering if Kriebel won't be going into the carpenter/construction business.

Rik Bader, who has also done time on the snowy slopes, is working toward his master's degree somewhere in Oregon. Joel Steward probably does skiing of a different type as he is living in Florida, studying for his master's in Marine Biology. And I don't know whether Glenn Willsey or Peyton Wilhoit ski or not, but Peyton has received her master's in Biology from UVA. and Glenn is seeking a master's at Northwestern University.

I received a letter from Kathy Andaa Braaten before she was married in May. Kathy is working for Toscano Imports, importers of china, glass and giftware, in Chicago where she was transferred to a year ago. She is the Illinois sales representative and will continue to work there while husband Ken returns to school for his MBA. Good luck in both pursuits, Kathy.

A note from Barb Baker says she has been with the Montgomery Ward management training program in Norfolk for almost two years. She was promoted to department manager of the Lighting and Electrical Department in the Norfolk store. Barb reports the work is more interesting and challenging than it sounds. And Mary Beck is also in a management training program, with Mutual Federal S&L in Norfolk.

Barb indicated that she received a letter from Don Cox who is in Greece as a 1st Lieutenant in the Army. He is in charge of security at an Army installation near Athens where he has been since January. In another branch of the service, Edgar Campbell has been commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant in the Air Force, having completed officer training at Lackland AFB, Tex. He has been assigned to Mather AFB in California for navigator training.

A trio of alumni find themselves pursuing law degrees at three different schools. Patty De Rosa is in her 2nd year at Camden and was supposed to be married this summer to a fellow classmate from Camden. Rob Billingsley writes that he has completed his first year at the University of Richmond, where the pace was not as relaxing but far more fascinating than his previous job at Chowning's Tavern. Rob spent the summer working as an intern in the Richmond Commonwealth Attorney's Office, getting in on a lot of courtroom action. Finally, Bill Greendyke, who attended W&M a couple of years, is married to a Texas gal and is in law school at Baylor.

Marc Abrams (right), William and Mary's top tennis player the past four years, has been named the recipient of the 1st Edwin R. Drucker Award for 1977-78. The Seiko quartz watch, which is an annual award given to the College's top tennis player, was presented to Abrams, who graduated in June, by Athletic Director Ben L. Carnevale (middle) and Tennis Coach Steve Haynie. Mr. Drucker '47, Indianapolis, is an avid tennis fan and wanted to recognize outstanding tennis achievement by a William and Mary player.

John Weiner reports that he has had an interesting two years since graduation. Having worked as a research assistant, Colgate sales representative in breezy Buffalo, N.Y., pool manager, and display demonstrator among other things, John has given up all those opportunities to try his hand in acting. He has had parts in the chorus of "Carousel," as Will Parker in "Oklahoma," and Charlie Cowell, the anvil salesman, in "The Music Man," all at the Riverfront Dinner Theatre. John also teaches Algebra I and II to the "sweathogs" at his old high school alma mater, Cherry Hill East, in New Jersey.

John also says that Helen Grieve is in the PhD program at the University of Chicago, studying economics. And another former swimmer, Paul Vining, is finishing up with his master's of metallurgical engineering at Columbia University. A letter from Jim Fox discloses that he is a driver and a mover in a moving company in San Diego. Jim says that he's saving up for a six-month stay in Australia where he'll be helping out with the work of the Wycliffe Bible Translators among the Australian Aborigines. In a similar venture, Mark Earley is doing missionary work with the Navigators organization while attending the University of the Philippines. Coleman Tyler was there with Mark for a month in Manila, doing advance work for the ship "Logos." Coleman's next stop on the ship dedicated to evangelism is India.

Kathy Schmidt-Berger has been working in Norfolk as a legal assistant prior to her marriage in May '77 to Glenn Berger '74, who graduated from Marshall-Wythe in '77. They took a 3-month camping trip through the U.S. and Western Canada. Glenn started this past January as Assistant Commonwealth Attorney for Newport News. They have been busy remodeling their new house and spent four days in April at the Prosecutors' Convention at The Homestead. Must be nice!

A postcard from Linda Ashwell and Dave Soller shows that they're in the Cajun Country of New Orleans where Dave is working for Mobil Oil as an exploration geologist. Linda is looking for a job in public relations, following their move from Oxford, Ohio, where Dave got his master's in geology from Miami University. Linda had taught high school American History and Government as well as served as a chapter advisor for a Tri-Delt Sorority chapter.

Jeff Goodrich says he wears three-piece suits instead of blue jeans as he works for Manufacturers Life in Atlanta. Also in Atlanta, Jim Intner works as a computer programmer for the Trust Company Bank; Wayne Plumley '75, is employed by Georgia State University, while he is getting his master's, and Deborah Bowman '77, designs advertisements for one of the local newspapers. Finally, Mark Feit is going for an MBA at the University of Georgia, and they all are wondering where Tom Hooker is stationed in the Army.

Dan Rina is here in Richmond at MCV where he's completing his master's in hospital administration. Raymond Bleday has finished his second difficult year at Illinois College of Pediatric Medicine in Chicago.

Caroline Sparks is currently working for the Army Corps of Engineers, Middle East Division, near Berryville, Va. Marcella Byrne and John Kinzer were married in February, and are in Northern Virginia, where John is employed by U.S. Geological Survey, as a cartographer, and Marcie by TRW, Inc., as a computer programmer. They are both involved in ministry with the New Life Community Church in Fairfax.

Ed Thomas reports that he has been working for about a year at the Orthodox Presbyterian Church in Williamsburg, and hopes to go to a seminary within the next two years. Denise Bourque will be entering the Temple Baptist Theological Seminary this September in the master's in religious education degree program. Since graduation, Denise has been teaching fifth grade at Saunders Elementary in Newport News.

On the sports scene, Susan Mariani says she plays softball in two leagues as well as tennis in Dallas, where she is employed as Systems Engineer for Electronic Data Systems. Steve Staples coached the Moore Jr. High football and baseball teams this year, having the best baseball record in the school's history and finishing second in the district. Steve also teaches social studies in this Prince George County School. And Clarke Franke has been chosen to succeed Al Albert as lacrosse head coach. Coach Albert will be devoting his time solely to soccer as Clarke becomes only the third head coach in W&M lacrosse history.

And somewhere in Cincinnati this past spring, the Class of '76 was represented at the spring meeting of the alumni chapter by John Pollaro, Bob Freymeyer, and Terri Feldman.

Henry G. Crider is attending law school at T. C. Williams (University of Richmond).

Mary Elliott is a missionary journeyman for the Southern Baptists Foreign Mission Board and is employed as a chemistry teacher at Ricks Institute in Monrovia, Liberia. She is doing some graduate work at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, and expects to receive her master's degree in religious education this coming December.

Douglas Barringer has been promoted to the post of Editor of The Journal in Alta Vista. He joined the staff in 1976 and has served as Sports Editor for much of the time.

Terry Coughlin, 2nd Lieutenant, USMC, has graduated from the Basic School at Quantico. William C. Trench received his M.S. in Urban and Environmental Studies from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in May.

Stokes Kirkland received a March of Dimes Grant to research birth defects with a biochemical geneticist at Eastern Virginia Medical School. He became a full-time student at EVMS in July. He also received a master's degree from the College in Biochemistry in May.

See everyone at Homecoming!

78 I trust that above all else, everyone has enjoyed their first few months as "graduates." For some of us it has been a breather from school - graduate school seems to be a popular option for many of us! Others have accepted a variety of permanent and temporary jobs; and still more have complemented these with marriage.

Several people in our class have succeeded in what many of us felt was an impossible mission - finding a job! Chris Weglarz is in Cincinnati, Ohio, where he will be working in brand management for Proctor and Gamble. Betty Fedziuk is working with the C&P Telephone Co. in computer operations in Richmond. Chip Perkins is in Lynchburg with the Fidelity American Bank. Several people have taken jobs with department store chains: Chrys Littleton (Macy's), Diane Andaas and Sue Buzzell (Garfinkles) are in the buyer trainee program while Nancy Smith (Penny's) is a management trainee. Our accountants include Karen Anaya with Ernst & Ernst in Richmond, Kathryn Bova - Peat, Marwick in Roanoke, John Lowenhaupt with Coopers Lybrand in Norfolk, and Mark Finley in Washington, D.C. Wes Frawley and Joan Mernin are also in D.C. as interns on Capitol Hill. John Reilly is in Atlanta, so I'm told - What's the news from there, John? The last I heard while at school, Brian Piper was deciding between Davidson's and IBM - let us know how things worked out. Fran Farmer is in Richmond and working for The Tobacco Co. - a fantastic restaurant in Shockoe Slip. So far, this is all I have on the job market. I certainly hope I've been an accurate reporter. How about the rest of you alums?

Graduate schools are quite popular among many in our class, including myself. Several of us are even studying in the 'Burg, which I guess proves that some people just "can't get enough." Scott Cousino, Elizabeth Wagner, May Graves, Mark Hanley and myself will be in the MBA program. I heard that Joe Agee may join us. John Schilling will also be in town as a law student at Marshall-Wythe. Marie Johnston has begun her graduate work in educational psych., also at W&M. William and Mary will lose some of her best to other schools, however. Roger Crook will be in the MBA program at Northwestern in Chicago. Mark Stanley will begin a course of study in stage design at the University of Wisconsin. He has been working as a puppeteer for Busch Gardens this summer. Robin Wamsley spent this summer studying corrective therapy in Hampton. Anne Byrne will begin an interesting course of study next semester at the Culinary Arts School in New York. She is currently working as a chef's assistant in Towson, MD. Julie Hayden is studying library science at UNC, Chapel Hill. Two quite popular fields for our graduates are law and medicine. Law had attracted Andy Vernick, Chris Kelley, Carl Tack (Chicago) and Bob Rigrish (North Carolina). Ed Amos will be in the dentistry program at MCV while Dave Cooley and Dave Brown will be in the medical school there. Pete Rutledge will also pursue graduate work in medical school. I hope those of you that I did not mention will keep in touch so I can share your progress in graduate work with the class. I'm confident that our four undergraduate years have given us a foundation for serious graduate work.

Some other highlights of our class include: Mike Enoch who will be a graduate assistant for the Indians basketball team this year, Irene Farley and Margie Weber who did some traveling to the West Coast this summer, Colleen O'Neill and Kim DeSampier who stuck out W&M for a few more hours to complete double majors; Lou Wampler, Mary Phillips and Susie Forbes are living and working in Va. Beach; Allison White and Melissa Dozier are living and working in Williamsburg, as well as Nan Eggleston, who is an assistant to a local doctor; and Liz Gessner, who is taking the summer easy in Massillon, Ohio, and doing some traveling around the country.

In closing, I have something very special to share with all of you. As many of you know, John Kratzer passed away May 18 after a two-year fight with cancer. He left for us a verse by St. Ignatius Loyola:

Take, Lord, receive all my liberty,
My memory, understanding, my entire will.

Take, Lord, receive all I have and possess.
You have given all to me;
Now I return it to You.

Take, Lord, receive, all is yours now;
Dispose of it wholly according to your will.

Give me only your love and your grace:
These are enough for me.

And from John's parents:

"Many thanks to you and the Senior Class for your concern and love for John during his illness and at the time of his death. He truly loved William and Mary and his friends there. He was very happy to receive the telegram from you the day of Baccalaureate. John had a good happy life and a very good death, here at home with us. We do appreciate your prayers. Sincerely, Tom and Mary Kratzer."

It is my hope that we may do something in the near future as a tribute to John. I would like to check into the possibility of erecting a memorial plaque in John's memory in W&M Hall. I would appreciate some response from you to this idea as a class effort.

I have been thinking about the best way to write this column for the past three months. I have been torn between feeling like the Rona Barrett of the Class of '78 and an English student working on a composition. I do not want to be a biased reporter but the only way for me to get information is for you to keep in touch.

Good luck . . . we're on our own . . . let's make the best of it.
