THE COLLEGE OF WILLIAM AND MARY

Professors explain why our freshman writing program is the nation's best.

"Writing is the hot area of English. That's where the need is and that's where the jobs are."

For a scholar with several books to her credit, Lynn Z. Bloom, the new director of freshman writing at William and Mary, has a refreshingly succinct way about her. But then she fits in well in a department that places a special priority on written communication.

Bloom and another professor in the Department of English, Michael S. Reynolds, a visiting Hemingway scholar from North Carolina State University, both came to William and Mary from state universities. And to them, the freshman writing program at the College is like being in "another world."

"The difference here is extraordinary," says Reynolds.

Adds Bloom: "This is a first-rate program, on par with the Ivy League schools. It is one of the few schools I would send my own kids to."

LeRoy Smith, the chairman of the Department of English, is used to hearing those kinds of accolades from colleagues at other universities. He says William and Mary is the "absolute envy" of English department chairmen he meets at conferences.

Mrs. Bloom is an alumna of the English Department faculty at the University of New Mexico, where, she says, 63 per cent of the freshmen were in remedial English. At William and Mary, there is no such course.

Both Bloom and Reynolds say their former schools had large numbers of students in freshman composition sections -- 24 at North Carolina State University and 25 at New Mexico. Moreover, both schools use graduate students to teach the courses, which consist mostly of lecture with little or no personal consultation.

The difference couldn't be more striking at William and Mary. All members of the English department faculty, including full professors, teach a section of 101. No graduate students are used, and sections are limited to 15 students.

"It makes a world of difference in what you can do," says Reynolds.

And, except that he should emphasize expository prose and use the conference as the principal teaching method, each professor is given considerable freedom to teach the course the way he wishes. "We are pragmatically-oriented here," says Smith. "We encourage our professors to teach the course in the way they get the best results."

That can mean a semester of individual conferences with no lectures, or combinations of individual and group conferences and lectures.

Smith, for instance, holds one class meeting to organize his section and then meets students on an tutorial basis for the rest of the semester. They write a connected series of papers on a subject of interest to them, which requires library research, personal experience, and a good deal of thought to synthesize and analyze what they have learned.

He says professors are interested not just in the rudiments of composition and writing, nor just in the mechanics but the organization and thought processes as well. "We want our program to be a learning as well as a writing experience," says Smith.

With so much personal attention, Smith says it is impossible for a student not to become involved in the course. "There is no way a student can fake it, stay aloof, or coast through," he says. "We have had students come in antagonistic or afraid, but they change pretty quickly."

"It is hard work," says Smith, "but it gives me as much satisfaction as any course I teach because you cannot work with students this closely and not see progress."

Three forces seem to have converged at William and Mary to make the writing program as good as -- Smith unabashedly asserts -- any freshman writing program in the country: an excellent faculty, top quality students, and an institutional philosophy that places priority on the ability to write.

In the 1970 curriculum revision, writing was designated as one of three proficiencies that students had to exhibit. If they enrolled with 1300 or better SAT scores, if they scored at least a 4 or 5 on the advanced Placement English Test, or if they passed a local essay exemption test they were excused from taking a writing course. But only about a third of William and Mary's traditional class of about 1000 entering freshmen do not take 101. And those who do score a superior proficiency rating are encouraged to take the course anyway.

"The ability to write is one of the principal attributes of the liberally-educated person," says Smith.

That philosophy encouraged the Department to make some changes in its own approach to freshman composition in 1970. Instead of requiring a two-semester course -- combining composition and introduction to literature -- the Department recommended a single semester of intensive writing. In effect, says Smith, the department put its resources where it felt they would do the most good -- into the writing program.

Limiting sections to 15 students is rare by the standards of other colleges, and Smith admits that it is an expensive approach. But with the elimination of the two-semester requirement, the overall cost evens out. And, says Smith, the College and the students get much more for their money.

Reynolds agrees. "This is an incredibly good program from a teacher's point of view. In terms of working with the students, I can give them more of myself, much more reading, and much more critical advice. I could not do this with 24 students to a section; if I did there would be nothing left of me."

"I realize it costs money to keep a writing class at 15," adds Reynolds, "but what you are getting is a far superior product."

Says Bloom: "I don't know of any other state university in the country that offers this level of TLC. (Tender Love and Care)."

At many other schools, says Bloom, students get a "cheap course." At William and Mary, "we are on a par with the Ivy League schools in the way we run the courses."

Professors say that they find William and Mary students a pleasure to teach. They ask a higher level of question, says Reynolds, and they "push you to your limits. As a result, you become a better teacher."

Smith says that the problems students experience at William and Mary have less to do with the mechanics of writing than with language, organization, and logical thinking -- carrying an argument of some complexity to an appropriate conclusion.

"It is a superior kind of problem," says Smith.

The popularity of the writing courses illustrates the strength of the rest of the Department of English. Even traditional courses in the core area are filled to capacity; often students have to be turned away because sections can accommodate no more students.

"Our department has had no decline in majors," says Smith, unlike other universities. The English department now has 200 concentrators, an all time high. The trend has been strong for years," says Smith. "We are not trying to find things for our professors to do."

Cheryl Peralta of Jericho, N.Y., a senior, is one of those majors. She is also a part-time staff member of the Times-Dispatch, whose by-line has appeared in the Richmond newspaper, the largest in Virginia.

"The neatest thing about the writing program," says Cheryl, "is the personal attention. We met only a handful of times, and the rest of the time was spent in conferences diagnosing our writing. There was no way the professors could have told us as much about our writing through a less personal approach."

Resident Expert on Biography

That's Lynn Bloom, Who's Also an Expert on Babies -- and Dr. Benjamin Spock

For some of her career, says Lynn Z. Bloom, she was "alternating books and babies." Now the books have taken over in quantity she says if not importance, in her life.

Mrs. Bloom, who came to William and Mary from the University of New Mexico this year, is the author of several books, including a definitive biography on pediatrician Benjamin Spock (1972). In fact, babies have always played an important part in her life. She signed her first book contract in the hospital the day after her first son was born.

Mrs. Bloom's husband is a social psychologist on the staff of Virginia Commonwealth University. Their move to Virginia has brought them much closer together. For the past several years, while she taught English at the University of New Mexico, her husband was on the staff of Washington University in St. Louis. As a result, she spent much of her time commuting between Missouri and New Mexico.

Mrs. Bloom is the new director of the freshman writing program at William and Mary, and she couldn't be happier with the working environment. Having come from a large state university where, she says, 63 per cent of the students were in remedial English and freshmen composition sections had a minimum of 25 students in them, she is delighted by the high calibre of the William and Mary student and the ideal limit on the size of the writing sections.

"When you have students writing at the college level," says Mrs. Bloom, "you can do more things. Our students are fairly sophisticated about the rudiments of writing. Consequently, we can work on problems that are associated with college-level writing."

To be a good teacher, Mrs. Bloom believes she must practice what she preaches "because it helps me experience what the students are experiencing." She has been doing just that since she completed her Ph.D. at the University of Michigan where she wrote her dissertation on how literary biographers write biography. While she lived in Cleveland, she researched her book on Dr. Spock, who was a resident of the same city. Dr. Spock and his wife granted Mrs. Bloom weekly interviews for most of the spring and fall of 1966-67 - he in the spring and she in the fall.

Mrs. Bloom is also the co-author of "The New Assertive Woman" (1975). She has edited two books on William Faulkner; two textbooks on world literature; and has in process three projects: the revision of a manuscript on "Strategies for Composition" for Random House, the editing of a book: "Natalie Crouter: Diary of Internment: 1941-45," and a bibliography on American biography: 1945-1980.

In addition to her prolific writing, Mrs. Bloom is one of only a handful of academicians doing research on "writing anxiety," the fear of putting words and thoughts onto paper for someone else to read. She conducts workshops at which participants learn to stop worrying and start writing. She says writing anxiety "can occur to anybody, from novices to experienced or professional writers."

At William and Mary, Mrs. Bloom says she hopes the Department of English can retain its 1:15 faculty-student ratio in the freshman writing sections. Describing the College as "one of the few schools I would send my own kids to," she says, "writing is a concern of the faculty, and one they deliver on."

Three Selected to Receive Medallions

Three senior members of William and Mary's alumni body will receive the Alumni Medallion at Homecoming at the annual meeting of the Society of the Alumni on the evening of October 13.

The Medallion, the highest honor given by the Society of the Alumni, will be conferred on E. Ralph James '16, Hampton; Thomas C. Clarke '22, Norfolk, and William L. Person, '24 Williamsburg.

A practicing attorney in Hampton for more than 50 years, Mr. James is a graduate of the University of Richmond law school. He is the senior member of the law firm of James, Richardson, James, Sawyer and Quinn.

A member of the College's Board of Visitors from 1966 to 1970, James received the Lower Peninsula Alumni Medallion in 1968 for his work on behalf of the Society and Lower Peninsula chapter activities. He has been a lifelong booster of William and Mary athletics and is a familiar figure at all Tribe football and basketball games, as well as an active member of the Athletic Educational Foundation. In 1976 the AEF honored him for his lifelong support of the athletic program.

James served in the Virginia House of Delegates from 1951 to 1965, and was named the "Outstanding Freshman" member of the House by newsmen covering the 1952 General Assembly.

Mr. Clarke is the retired chairman of the Board, president and owner of the Royal Crown Bottling Company of Norfolk. A current member and vice rector of the Board of Visitors, he has been a trustee of the Endowment Association since 1967 and is a member of the President's Council. Clarke was a charter member of the Board of Directors of the Athletic Educational Foundation.

A generous contributor to all phases of life at the College, Clarke established the T.C. Clarke Scholarship Fund in 1968 to assist deserving students.

Clarke has served his community through numerous boards, fund drives, and other activities. He is former president of the Virginia Soft Drink Association and served his country as a lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve.

Mr. Person, president of Person Ford, Inc., of Williamsburg, is well-known to alumni as a member of the Board of Directors of the Society from 1971 to 1978 and as one of the prime movers of the New Era Campaign to establish the Alumni House.

His service to the College and to the Williamsburg community is legion. Besides his membership on the board of the Alumni Society, he has served on the board of the Athletic Educational Foundation, as a trustee of the Endowment Association, and currently as a member of the Development Council of the Campaign for the College and as a member of the President's Council.

He has been active in the Williamsburg community on the City Council, Chamber of Commerce, Community Hospital Board, the Recreation Board, the James City County Planning Commission, the Selective Service Board, and as a member of the Methodist Church.

The election of James, Clarke and Person brings to just 158 the number of alumni of the College awarded the Alumni Medallion for loyalty and service since its inception in 1933 -- out of a known alumni body of more than 32,000.

That's What Students and Alumni Are Doing to Boost The William and Mary Fund

The 1978-79 William and Mary Fund got off to an exciting start in mid-September when the first 2,500 alumni contacted in a phonathon increased their giving by 90% over last year.

The 2,500, all in the mid-Atlantic states, were asked for their Fund pledges as part of the "Williamsburg Calling" phonathon. Eventually, volunteers in Williamsburg will try to telephone about 13,500 alumni on behalf of the Fund.

The 1978-79 goal for the William and Mary Fund is $400,000, an increase of 33% over last year. It has now become the largest annual giving program conducted by the College.

"Williamsburg Calling" takes advantage of low-cost telephone facilities which allow volunteers to call anywhere in the United States for a toll of 17 cents per minute or less. The operation is expected to cost less than $6,000, or less than the cost of two mailings to the same alumni.

After the first five nights of telephoning -- out of a projected 30 nights -- the volunteers obtained pledges of $20,300, or 89% above the $10,800 contributed by the same alumni last year. Among the responses were dozens of first-time gifts from alumni.

"The early success indicates that alumni are convinced, more than ever, that their support for William and Mary is essential if the College is to continue along its carefully planned direction of quality and high standards," said Harriet N. Storm '64, chairman of this year's Fund.

Mrs. Storm, who is president of the Society of the Alumni, and President Graves helped kick off the "Williamsburg Calling" phonathon on September 18 and 19 by making a number of the calls themselves. Most of the calling is being done by volunteers from a number of student organizations.

This year's William and Mary Fund is being directed by the staff of the Office of University Communications and Information, with the assistance of the Society of the Alumni and in coordination with the Campaign for the College.

The William and Mary Fund supports projects among undergraduates and the graduate programs of arts and sciences, along with the Society of the Alumni's programs.

While the "Williamsburg Calling" operation was starting, another 14,000 alumni in 14 major metropolitan areas were being contacted by volunteers working on behalf of the Campaign for the College. The Campaign seeks both increased giving to the Fund and a one-time gift to endowment. Next spring, alumni reached by "Williamsburg Calling" will be asked for a pledge to endowment to help complete the three-year $19,000,000 Campaign.

"Williamsburg Calling" will conclude December 1, after focusing its efforts on a region-by-region basis concluding with those sections of Virginia which are not involved in the Campaign for the College program.

President Graves and Alumni Society Executive Vice President Gordon C. Vliet teamed on one of the opening nights of the Phonathon to call alumni and ask for their help with the William and Mary Fund.

Editor's Notebook

If he has his way, Governor John N. Dalton '53 will be remembered in the future for halting the growth of State government. His effort to curtail State expenditures is rapidly becoming the hallmark of his administration.

As with all governments, the Commonwealth's budget has grown in recent years by significant proportions. Only a decade ago, it seems, Virginia had its first billion-dollar State budget. Now, it has a biennial budget of 4.5 billion dollars from tax sources alone, not including other income such as college and university tuitions.

As the chief executive of Virginia's biggest business, Governor Dalton has begun installing new management strategies and policies to carry out the commitment to halt, where possible, government growth. The General Assembly is also looking at measures it can take to achieve the same goal.

Those who are familiar with government know how difficult his job has become.

As he told a Williamsburg audience in September, the State found that it could save $80,000 by not mounting the certificates which are awarded to fishermen who make record catches. The sports fishing lobby objected so strenuously that the cost-saving measure has not been carried out.

Most of the publicity that has surrounded the Governor's program, however, has been devoted to higher education. State colleges and universities have been the subject of a variety of announced management directives--coming from the Governor's Cabinet rather than through the State Council of Higher Education, and often announced publicly before the colleges and universities are told of them.

In a State system of higher education that has traditionally allowed each institution, and its governing board, considerable latitude in policy-making, the directives have inspired some discomfort and concern. For professors whose studies and research involve foreign travel, they must now obtain the approval of the State Secretary of Education before making trips abroad even when the trip is authorized by the specific university. Applicants for federal grants for research and other purposes must now get the Secretary's approval before the application for funds can be made, if the project involves funds for new personnel as part of the grant. If more than five faculty or staff from any college or university attend a professional meeting 300 miles away from Virginia, prior approval is required through the Secretary.

The effects of these and other measures on William and Mary, specifically, are minimal. Out of necessity, travel funds available within the College have been depressed for at least the last six years and many faculty pay their own costs when they attend professional meetings. Foreign travel, to the extent it is possible, is paid from non-State funds earmarked for specific projects.

In combination with relatively recent guidelines imposed in the budgeting process by the State, however, the Governor's measures are a part of the picture which has prompted William and Mary to seek private funds on an increasing scale. Virginia is still less restrictive of higher education than most states, and recognizes the tradition of institutional diversity more than most. William and Mary receives thoughtful support from the State, and yet the effects of guidelines and other measures are now being felt. The size of the faculty has been reduced in the last two years, and administrative staffing is being studied for the possibility of further curtailment. Stringent controls already exist in such areas as printing, equipment and supplies.

Yet, as Dean Jack D. Edwards noted in his letter to alumni in August, an optimistic spirit pervades the faculty and College community. Despite discouraging news nearly every week, a commitment has been made to protect the College's standards if the resources can somehow be found.

--Ross Weeks, Jr.

Harriet Nachman Storm '64, president of the Society of the Alumni, attended the opening night of the Phonathon, and, along with Alumni Executive Vice President Gordon C. Vliet, made a number of calls to alumni.

Ackerman Joins Business School

Lennis C. "Bud" Ackerman, former chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the Newport News Shipbuilding Company, and a long time friend of the School of Business Administration, has been named associate dean of the School with responsibility for the external affairs of the School.

Ackerman was a charter member of the School's Sponsors, Inc. board and served as its first chairman, 1970-73.

Ackerman was chief executive officer of the Newport News Shipbuilding Company from 1969-73 when he became automotive group vice president of Questor Corporation.

While Ackerman's prime responsibility will be in the area of fund-raising, he will also serve as advisor to the M.B.A. Alumni Association and will coordinate its activities.

For much of his business career, Ackerman has been associated with the Walker Manufacturing Company of Racine, Wis., which he joined in 1952. In 1966, after a number of executive positions, he became president of the company. He was general manager of the Canadian subsidiary from 1958-62 and vice president and general manager of the international group for Walker, 1962-65. Just before becoming president he served one year as vice president for international operations and marketing.

During his tenure as president of Walker, the company was acquired by Tenneco, Inc., of Houston, Texas. Ackerman was transferred by Tenneco, the shipyard's parent company, to Newport News and he served concurrently as executive vice president of Tenneco.

To live among the natives of a South Seas island is an unfulfilled fantasy of many people.

For Vinson H. Sutlive, Jr., an anthropology professor at the College of William and Mary, that fantasy was very much a reality during his years as a missionary on the island of Borneo. Sutlive's new book, which describes his varied experiences among the island natives, demonstrates that native culture on a South Seas island is not totally unlike the culture in America today.

Sutlive's adventures half way around the world among the Iban of Sarawak on the island of Borneo convinced him that people tread on common ground. "We tend to romanticize 'primitive' peoples at times," said Sutlive. "But we found that the Iban share many of the same anxieties, frustrations, and inconsistencies of which we are all so capable. It's reassuring to find that other groups are as human as yours." Part of the Worlds of Man series, The Iban of Sarawak describes the many similarities that exist between the Iban and American cultures.

Two physicists at William and Mary have received an additional grant of $52,000 from the National Science Foundation, boosting to $102,800 the total funds the Foundation has committed to the study of positive muon reactions in solids.

W. Jack Kossler and Kenneth C. Petzinger, both members of the physics department, will receive support for the project through January 1980. They will continue to study muon diffusion and trapping, magnetic field distributions and related research topics.

A psychology professor at William and Mary has written a book designed to change current attitudes concerning one of the world's most misunderstood mental disorders--schizophrenia.

Glenn Shean, an associate professor of psychology at William and Mary and a research psychologist at Eastern State Hospital, has worked with schizophrenic patients for over 10 years. He is a firm believer in the concept that schizophrenia is not a disease, but a breakdown of an individual's ability to distinguish between reality and fantasy.

Shean also believes that all humans have the potential to become schizophrenic if the pressures of everyday life become too overpowering. His book, entitled Schizophrenia: An Introduction to Research and Theory, includes several case histories of patients Shean interviewed to discover what causes a person to become schizophrenic.

He concludes that there is no single cause experts can agree on. "We have made a serious mistake in talking about schizophrenia as an illness, because this implies a biological cause," says Shean. Patients are hospitalized and given medical treatment rather than the "medicine" they really need--patience and understanding.

"We often put schizophrenic patients into institutions to be drugged until they recover, and then send them back into the community with no provisions for the situations they'll come up against," says Shean.

Shean recommends more individualized treatments that can provide long-lasting improvement in a person's ability to cope with day to day pressures.

Two distinguished professors have joined the faculty this year under the Eminent Scholar Program which provides state funds augmented through the Endowment Association of the College. Gordon Wright, William H. Bonsall Professor of History at Stanford University, is the James Pinckney Harrison Professor of History, and Robert Deryck Williams, professor of classics at Reading University, is teaching in the Department of Classical Studies.

Wright has written 10 books including "France in Modern Times: From the Enlightenment to the Present," published by the Chicago University Press in 1960 and revised in 1974. Williams, who was president of the Virgil Society, 1972-76, has published widely and has held professorships at several universities in the United States and abroad.

Michael Mott, author of "The Notebooks of Susan Berry," and "Helmet and Wasps," is the writer-in-residence in the English department this year.

Michael S. Reynolds, a Hemingway scholar from Duke University, is a visiting faculty member in the English department this year, as is Wayne Glausser, who has been a teaching fellow at Yale for the past three years.

In the Law School Delmar Karlen, professor of law at New York University since 1953, has been designated Tazewell Taylor Professor of Law for the fall semester.

"William and Mary gave me a basic, well-diversified education in liberal arts, taught by stimulating professors, in an idyllic physical environment. The associations and friends formed there have been a source of assistance and pleasure. The rewards, both tangible and intangible, from the period of 1926 - 1930, have increased in significance as the years have rushed by. And today the College has achieved a stature of excellence, recognized world wide, that merits optimum financial assistance from its friends and alumni."

"Encouraging Words..." is a series of short statements by successful alumni of the College, written in support of the Campaign for the College and its goals. The Campaign's monetary goal of $19,000,000 reflects the need to sharply increase private support for faculty development and research, program enrichment, and student assistance. This year, all alumni are asked to make their commitments on behalf of the Campaign, in addition to increasing their annual gifts for support of College priorities and the Society of the Alumni.

Ticket to a Foreign Land

Students are Discovering that the College is Great Preparation for Foreign Service

Moscow, Paris, Brussels, Tokyo, Mogadiscio . . .

State Department figures show that one of the surest routes to faraway cities around the world is through William and Mary, by way of the United States Foreign Service.

While the examination catalog states that "no particular institution" is recommended as preparation for the Foreign Service, official studies clearly show that some institutions can surely help.

On the list of colleges and universities which send the greatest numbers of students to take the written examination, which is the first step toward attaining employment in the foreign service, only two show a higher percentage of students passing than William and Mary. In fact, the College is number 11 in the entire nation for colleges and universities with the highest percentage of passers on the tough and very thorough exam.

Profile information provided by the State Department reveals why the selection process is so grueling. Foreign Service Officers, or F.S.O.'s, have to be ready for just about anything, but what they do is a far cry from the drama and intrigue portrayed in books and movies.

In a week's work, an F.S.O. might serve as a speech writer, travel agent, librarian, editor, talent booking agent, press secretary, and maybe grant a few visas in his or her spare time.

Surprisingly, the salary for all this work starts at $12,336, or $14,479 if you're already fluent in a foreign language. Language fluency is a must, and a new candidate is put on "language probation" if he or she needs more on-the-job training in a native tongue.

Dudley W. Miller, director of recruitment, employment and examination for the Foreign Service, says the screening process is designed to filter out those who don't possess both the qualifications and a sincere desire to serve anywhere in the world.

"Generally, 15 to 20 percent of those who take the written test will pass," he says. "Of those, about 30 percent pass the oral. Only about two percent of those who sat for the written exam will actually be sworn in."

He added that the most common areas of study among those passing the exam are political science-government, history, economics and management. Yet the Department seeks a broad range of majors, as well as a variety of personalities to fill spots in countries that have vastly different cultures.

Professor Emeritus W. Warner Moss remembers well the good success which William and Mary students have had through the years with U.S. government agencies.

"Through the 1950's, William and Mary graduates were taken into the program almost automatically with our recommendation. After about 1960, there was less emphasis on the Foreign Service but still plenty of participation in international programs," said Moss.

Professor Moss also recalls other directions which the "internationally inclined" students pursued. "We've always had our Fulbright Scholars and those involved in the Institute of International Education arranging for study abroad. But some of our grads went into areas and jobs which I couldn't explain through the usual agencies," he said. "Oh, they were nominally employees of the Foreign Service, but I finally guessed that they must be with the C.I.A."

William and Mary has done exceptionally well in placing women in the Foreign Service, particularly in recent years. Two recent graduates, Mary Jean Kelly '78 and Storm Simonson '78, are currently awaiting security clearance and will take up their assignments in the near future. Jan Sanderson '77 is slated to go to Bangladesh, and Laurie Johnston '76 is now in Iraq.

These young F.S.O.'s just beginning their careers join a distinguished group of William and Mary graduates who have served overseas in the Foreign Service.

Douglas Hartwick '72 has had so many foreign addresses that the Society of the Alumni office is hard pressed to keep up with him. His latest address is somewhere in South Africa.

Richard Mueller '66 has served as an advisor in the Saigon Embassy, and is now an economic advisor in the Australian Embassy. Dena Kay Wade '66 recently resigned after 10 years with the U.S. Foreign Service in order to be with her husband, a British Foreign Service Officer.

Charles Dudley '60 was appointed a career F.S.O. by President Johnson, and has recently been serving as a commercial officer in the U.S. Embassy in Venezuela.

Dr. William Helseth '48 was the first secretary to the American Embassy in Tehran, and served for 10 years in the American Foreign Service.

And no article about William and Mary graduates in the Foreign Service could ignore Ambassador John W. Tuthill '32, who after a successful career as an investment banker chalked up impressive credentials as a representative of the United States in Canada, Sweden, Belgium, Brazil, Italy and France.

There are others, but space prohibits listing them all.

The entrance examination booklet states that "broad knowledge of foreign and domestic affairs, and U.S. history, government, and culture," are required to work in the Foreign Service. The record shows that William and Mary can ably provide just that.

The Name Gets Around

College Merchandise Can Be Found in Homes, Offices

A widening variety of merchandise carrying the William and Mary name is being made available through the Society of the Alumni, as its program continues to grow.

In this issue of the Alumni Gazette, the items which may now be ordered by mail are displayed in a special insert just in time for holiday gift-giving.

The sale of William and Mary-related products extends back many years, but until the 1970s only chairs and watercolor prints were available by mail through the Society.

"We believe that an increasing number of alumni want to have William and Mary memorabilia in their homes and offices," said Gordon C. Vliet, Society executive vice president, in describing the growth of the merchandise program.

"By offering as wide a variety as possible of such items, we are satisfying a demand, and thus providing a service to our alumni. But the alumni, by purchasing the products, also serve William and Mary by projecting its name throughout the world -- wherever these items are shipped," he said.

"Just as importantly, the Society is able to increase its service to alumni and William and Mary in many other ways, by making allocations of money from the proceeds of our merchandise program," he added.

The amount of "profit" remaining after expenses for each item varies with the product, but prices are kept as low as possible to encourage sales. From the markup is deducted processing costs, administrative overhead and staff costs, and shipping.

What's left over is set aside for allocation by the Society's Board of Directors to specific financial needs. One year, $2,500 from merchandising helped underwrite the College's costs in preparing for the Presidential Debate between President Ford and Jimmy Carter at Phi Beta Kappa Hall. Another year, money was provided to two physicists to support research into 18th-century scientific apparatus, in order to prepare an educational exhibition. Funds go to assist the annual Publications Banquet and Journalist-in-Residence program, to support special costs of such programs as the Bicentennial, and recruiting films for intercollegiate athletics.

This year, a cash award is being made by the Society to the student organization whose volunteers are most successful in the "Williamsburg Calling" phonathon for the William and Mary Fund.

The merchandising program has spawned some interesting trademarks: the Botetourt Boutique (you'll see it only at Homecoming), the King & Queen Press (not really a press, but a publishing activity), and James Driver's Fine Virginia Foods. The latter is the result of Mr. Driver's bequest to the Society of the mail order fine-food business that he conducted until his death.

New York's Hottest Designer

Perry Ellis Turns the "Slouch" Look into a Million Dollar Business

Perry Ellis '61, Student Association vice president in the fall of 1960, was part of the administration of SA president David Bottoms who tried to introduce "Dress Up" days on campus to improve the way students, particularly men, dressed. The effort was met with little enthusiasm.

Students were more interested in hanging the football coach in effigy, campaigning for enough time off from classes to get home for Thanksgiving and getting tickets to hear Les Elgart and his band who played for Homecoming that year.

Today, Perry Ellis, a Coty Award nominee for the past two years, designs clothes for women that are expressions of his honest belief in casual comfort. He is known for the "slouch" look--designs to relax in, feel good in, and to be at ease in which are made of natural fibers, wool, cotton and linen.

Of the years in between, Ellis says: "It's an incredible ocean I've crossed."

Perry Ellis graduated in business administration in 1961 by the process of elimination. "I knew I didn't want English or history," he said, "and I figured there must be something out there in the business world that would attract me."

That "something" turned out to be fashion and design which provide a successful vehicle for his energies and talent.

One fashion writer has called him one of America's brightest fashion talents who brings a fresh sense of style to the clothes he designs. "They are an expression of his belief in casual comfort and, like the man himself, they are quintessentially American."

Designer Oscar de la Renta says Ellis has "a very good design sense, a very American quality."

Ralph Lauren feels Ellis is honest and individualistic in his work, but adds it is too early to tell whether he has the staying power of a great designer.

It was less than three years ago that the president of Portfolio and Vera sportswear asked Ellis if he would be interested in producing his own line of clothes to be manufactured by Vera. "I wasn't so very interested until I met Vera herself," he recalled. "She was an earth mother and I loved her immediately."

Ellis is amazed how quickly success has come to him, but he is neither awed nor overwhelmed by it. His lifestyle remains as casual and unpretentious as his designs.

"I have always felt inwardly creative" he said. "I always cared about art. Fine arts courses were sort of the magic of school. . . in the 50's there was so much of life that I couldn't let out. Everything was set as to what the young man in Virginia had to be like. I liked sports, I played baseball and basketball in the fraternity (Kappa Sigma) but I was never good enough to join a team. I loved sports and still follow them today. I'm a great football fan. But I didn't know that a man could really care about the softer side of life, that a man could cry. . ."

Raised in Portsmouth, Va., Ellis recalls his career steps with some delight. Life has been good; he appreciates that fact. His college days, he said, came in an era when one didn't have to think a lot; patterns were set.

"It was before the revolution of the '60's and all the social changes that came about, changes that were reflected in my business through the changes in clothes. I just had a very good time in college. My education was important but so were the social aspects of the time. I have maintained some of the friendships I made then and I feel I am all the better for their being a part of my career."

"William and Mary made life easy for me. It was a stepping stone. I love New York and it has become so much a part of my life that I just wish I had come here sooner. But if I had not had the preparation and I had gone there sooner, I wouldn't have worked."

The preparation Ellis talks about includes a master's degree in retailing from New York University and four years as a buyer for Miller and Rhoads in Richmond. He went to work for John Meyer for six years before launching out as a full-fledged designer. For the past 11 years he has been co-owner of "A Sunny Day" boutique in the Fan district of Richmond.

There is no mistaking Ellis' creative talents, but he is also a very enthusiastic, energetic person.

"I am convinced that anyone getting involved with any profession that they truly love, almost with a passion, will find it works out," he said.

"I have never been motivated to success just for the sake of succeeding," he told one reporter. "I'm doing what I want to do. That's all. I'm not driven." His philosophy colors his attitude toward clothing in general and the fashion industry in particular. He simply refuses to take it all terribly seriously.

"I think fashion dies when it is taken too seriously," he said. "There's more to life than buying a new bag or a new dress. I really try to put clothes in the proper perspective. . . I design clothes, produce them and sell them, but I am very aware that you can't take them home to bed with you, and make love to them. All of those people who have put their careers before love and health and friends must suffer from an emptiness that I just can't imagine. Clothes come pretty far down on my list of priorities."

Ellis makes his home in New York. He enjoys the bustle of the city from a brownstone in Manhattan furnished with family heirlooms and contemporary designs. He is equally happy at his beach house on Water Island, an isolated part of Fire Island where the sea, dunes and sky provide a solitary environment.

He has his own "shops" opening in Saks and Bloomingdale's this fall and, come November, he expects to launch his own company, Perry Ellis & Co. One of his biggest boosters has been Neiman Marcus, which was one of the first stores to show interest in his designs. Koko Hashim, vice president of the store, says, "Perry is in the forefront of design right now."

Major perfume manufacturers have approached him about marketing a fragrance to complement his designs but he says that is something for the future--he isn't ready for that yet. He isn't about to compromise his style of life and work unless he can continue to enjoy them both equally.

Barbara Ball

The casual look of Perry Ellis' fall Portfolio collection is evident in his selections at a New York show.

Lou Tepper, now with Bill Dooley's staff at Virginia Tech, teamed with Tribe Coach Jim Root for 10 seasons at New Hampshire and William and Mary. Despite his Tech affiliation, Lou says: "I love Jim Root and I love the football program at William and Mary."

Can a Tech Coach Love William and Mary?

Tepper May Be Richer in Blacksburg But His Friends Are Still on the Reservation

(This article was written prior to the Sept. 30 game between William and Mary and Virginia Tech at Blacksburg. It is printed by permission of the Newport News Times-Herald.)

By AL PEARCE
Times-Herald Sports Writer

You have to know Lou Tepper—I mean you really have to know what kind of man he is—before you can begin to appreciate the emotional crisis he and his family are facing this week.

And, too, you have to really know Lou Tepper to fully understand when he says without reservation, "I love Jim Root and I love the football program at William and Mary. All my efforts this week are directed at beating someone and something I love dearly. To say the least, this is a very difficult time for the Teppers."

For 10 seasons Lou Tepper—a quiet, bespectacled man of unswerving Christian persuasion—worked faithfully as an assistant football coach to Jim Root. They were together three years at New Hampshire, then Tepper and his wife, Karen, came to Williamsburg when Root left UNH for William and Mary in 1973. The men's professional and personal lives stayed tightly intertwined until Tepper went to Virginia Tech as an assistant to Bill Dooley last spring.

Now the week has arrived that Lou and Karen Tepper and Jim and Janet Root—plus dozens of their mutual friends—have dreaded since that move. William and Mary plays

Virginia Tech in Blacksburg on Saturday and if you don't think there'll be some hugs exchanged and some tears shed among that group then you don't know a thing about the Roots, the Teppers and their friends.

"No matter where we'd be, coaching against Jim and one of his William and Mary teams would cause these same difficult emotions within us," Tepper says of himself and his wife. "The fact that I'm at Tech and Jim's still in Williamsburg makes it even tougher because of the rivalry we always felt for Tech.

"If Jim and Janet were somewhere else it wouldn't be so bad. But when I look at William and Mary game film I don't see numbers and bodies—I see kids I recruited, kids I love, kids I worked with for as many as three years.

"I don't see X's and O's on the chalkboard. I see kids like Dudley Johnson and Tommy Rozantz and Jim Ryan and Melvin Martin and Joey Manderfield, seniors who've gone through so much over there. For six years I helped make that school a winner. This week I'm trying to make it a loser."

To say Tepper's life has changed at Virginia Tech is a lot like saying there're some small differences between a quarter and a $20 bill. Presumably you don't have to be told which is the quarter program and which has all the $20 bills.

Consider that Tech films almost every practice session, films that are processed and delivered to the coaches' offices while they're at chow. The training table is open to coaches year-round for every meal, quite a change from W&M where Tepper and his associates felt they were stealing from a cookie jar each time they ate with their players.

Want a free new Thunderbird every six months? Grab a job on the VPI football staff. If you make head coach you get a new Lincoln Continental every six months on top of your annual $70,000-plus salary. There are free passes for Blacksburg theatres, substantial discounts at clothing stores, complimentary country club membership, big-buck travel allowances and unlimited office resources in addition to the basic great salary.

"Somebody mentioned one afternoon that the projectors were old," Tepper says. "Coach Dooley simply went out and ordered nine new ones at $900 each. He didn't like our office set-up so he asked for a new football wing on the coliseum. No questions asked—we're getting it.

"Up here, money is never mentioned. It's like it doesn't exist, like everything is available without having to consider costs. At William and Mary I worried about pens and tablets and things like that. I'm not saying it's better or worse up here. . . it's just different, unlike anything I've ever seen before."

Don't get the idea Tepper isn't happy at Tech. Although he longs for a head coaching job at a school like (no need to hide it, folks) William and Mary, he feels the VPI experience will prove invaluable.

"I hadn't been in a genuine big-time program for 10 years, since I was at Pitt," he says. "This is a good thing for me because in terms of personal and professional goals, I now know what type situation I'd like for the rest of my life."

As Tepper watched William and Mary beat VMI, Connecticut and Villanova on film Monday he found himself cheering unashamedly for the Green and Gold. "For as long as the projector ran," he says, "I was back with Jim and the kids and I loved it. My heart was with them as I watched the film. But as soon as they were done—well, it was back to reality. It's tough, believe me, it's tough to do that."

Tepper, obviously, will be used all week to give the VPI staff and players the run-down on W&M. He's worked with Tech's offense and defense, pointing out weaknesses the Hokies will try to exploit. He's also given the Tech players a stern lecture on how much quality is on the W&M roster.

"I'm giving Jim and his assistants enough credit to change some things," Tepper says. "They know what I know and they're not going to stay with exactly the same things I worked with for so long. It'll be a chess game."

And who will win? "The teams are three to six points apart," Tepper says, "and there's no way I'll pick one or the other. It won't be a great upset either way."

But win or lose, Saturday won't be the end of the world. "If we lose by 40 or win by seven (he didn't say which team he meant as 'we'), the William and Mary friendships will mean a lot more than one game," he said. "In 10 years I'll still have those dear, dear friends. In 10 years this game won't matter.

"I guess I'll get a little misty-eyed when I see everybody again because they're so special to us. I really wish we didn't have to play 'em."

Comedians Par Excellence

No One Escapes the Comic Barbs of Horovitz and Griffin

Jon Horovitz and Peter Griffin are mainstays of the defensive line on William and Mary's unbeaten (through the first three games) football team. Rob Muscalus, whose punishing blocks have cleared the way for many a Tribe runner, anchors the offensive line at tight end.

But these 220-pound plus behemoths of the football wars, who are all business on the field, have another side of them. They are comedians par excellence with a delivery that would put Saturday Night Live performers to shame.

And perform they do. At a break in practice, when they do their 30-second "spots" at a water break; at a civic club meeting; on a flight back to Williamsburg from a tough game, or at halftime of junior varsity games. No one associated with the team escapes their barbs. Especially the coaching staff.

Coach Jim Root is a favorite target. Mimicking a BBC correspondent in his best English accent, Griffin asks Horovitz, who imitates Coach Root -- or "Rut" as Griffin puts it -- about the coaching changes. Roughly paraphrased, Horovitz-Rut admits to the changes, including the departure of former offensive coach Dave Zimmerman last season, and then adds: "That gave me control of my offense again." Root, who brought the players to the Kiwanis meeting, breaks up with laughter.

Muscalus, an economics major with an excellent radio voice, teams up with Horovitz on road trips to entertain the passengers. While Muscalus does the voice for the stewardess' instructions, Horovitz performs the visual antics -- fumbling frantically with his seat belt as Muscalus tells how easy it is to attach, suffocating from the oxygen mask as Muscalus explains, in monotone, how it should be applied if cabin pressure drops.

Muscalus and Griffin are the straight men of the act, Horovitz is an inveterate clown. Muscalus' repertoire includes a bevy of radio announcer routines and an hilarious delivery of CB talk, highlighted by his performance of the song "Convoy." Griffin's forte is the foreign accent, which he says he has been practicing since childhood. Horovitz has a string of spontaneous one-liners that make an interview nearly impossible.

"Did you do any acting in grade school or high school?"

"I was the star of our first grade play; the teacher let me play the farmer and hold the pitchfork because I was the biggest kid in class."

"What are you taking up in college?"

"Space." Of course.

"What do you think of the Louisville game?"

"They'll probably be waiting for us at the airport."

The three have refined their act in four years at William and Mary, but they still prefer to perform spontaneously. When they write before performance, it comes off ponderously; when they perform at a moment's notice, it has the freshness of a nightclub act.

Peter Griffin (left) and Jon Horovitz with one of the favorite targets of their comedy -- head coach Jim Root. The pair, along with tight end Rob Muscalus, keep the Tribe loose with their incessant antics.

Horovitz and Griffin have been roommates and friends since their freshman year. In their first and only serious discussion, Horovitz accused Griffin of stealing his soap dish; after they settled that dispute, they became fast friends.

In a way, says Horovitz, their comedic beginnings date from their first year at the College. Root threw a bunch of freshmen into the grid wars, and they suffered through eight straight losses.

"We had to do something to retain our sanity," says Horovitz.

None of the three have any professional aspirations. "We simply like to make people laugh," says Griffin.

All are deadly serious in the football games. "We like to have fun," says Horovitz, "and fun to us means winning." But at times, even during a tense moment in a big game, they can't contain themselves. Teaming together on a crushing tackle of a VMI runner, Griffin, in his best British accent, looked up at Horovitz and said: "Good-looking hit, Boonie." Replied Horovitz: "Thank you, Peter."

The kind of applause the three like best, however, has nothing to do with their comedy act. Although igh they have played only one home game this year, the team received a sustained, standing ovation from the student section at Cary Field, a rare sight in the past four years.

"We've been put down here for three years," says Horovitz. "Now we have a winning team and we receive standing ovations. That gives me a lot of satisfaction."

Tribe Win Streak One of Longest

Uninterrupted Winning String Stands at Six Games

With their three opening season victories over VMI, Connecticut and Villanova, the Indians had won six in a row, a feat last accomplished during the 1970-71 and the 1947-48 seasons with seven in a row.

However, both streaks were sandwiched around losses in post-season Bowl games. The '47 team won six in a row but then lost to Arkansas in the Dixie Bowl 21-19 followed by an opening season 14-6 win over Davidson in 1948.

The 1970 team won its final three, then lost to Toledo 40-12 in the Tangerine Bowl, followed by four straight wins in 1971.

So technically William and Mary has matched its best win streak since 1941 and 1929-30 when those Indian teams won seven straight with no post-season interruptions.

Alumni Notes

M. Carl Andrews
2814 Crystal Spring Avenue, SW
Roanoke, Va. 24014

27 Just a reminder, classmates, that we entered College 55 years ago last month, the grossest ducs seen until then! This is going to be a reply in part of the oft-repeated question: "Whatever happened to . . .?"

Heading the list is Dr. E. Cotton Rawls of Darien and Stamford, Conn., who, as Vice President, is now senior officer of the Class since the death of Jimmy Barnes. After much goading, I persuaded Cotton to tell us about his distinguished career in medicine. Graduating from William and Mary, Cotton attended the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond, served his internship there, then trained in surgery at Lennox Hill Hospital in New York City, followed by specialization in cancer surgery at New York Skin and Cancer Hospital, being appointed resident surgeon thereafter. Marrying lovely Jean Gledhill from Darien, Cotton decided that nearby Stamford would be a mighty nice place to practice, which he did as a GP from 1936 to 1940. As a fellow of the American College of Surgeons in 1938 and a diplomate of the American Board of Surgery in 1942, he was ready for service in the U.S. Navy Medical Corps. For two years Cotton was chief of surgery at Plymouth, England, directly across the English Channel from Cherbourg, where extensive casualties from the June 1944 Normandy Invasion were brought. For this service he emerged as full Commander.

Attending Surgeon at St. Joseph Hospital in Stamford since its founding in 1941, except for war years, Cotton was Surgeon-in-Chief at Stamford Hospital from 1950 to 1966, and is now consulting surgeon at both institutions. He is a fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine, of the Southeastern Surgical Congress and of the Pan-Pacific Surgical Society. In 1957, he was President of the Connecticut Society of American Board Surgeons and has often served as guest examiner for candidates for the American Board of Surgery at Yale University. One of his proudest achievements was the establishment at Stamford of a program for training young surgeons. Outside his chosen field, Cotton has been director of two banks, member of Darien's Board of Finance, director of a power company, President of the Stamford-Darien Division of the American Cancer Society and both trustee and elder of Noroton Presbyterian Church. Cotton and Jean have a daughter, Nancy Cotton Dauk, and a son, Cotton, Jr. Their eldest son John, a student at Hamilton College, was tragically lost in an automobile accident at age 20. Periodically, Cotton likes to take off from practice and spend time with Jean traveling in the mountains or at the seashore, golfing or just relaxing. Unfortunately, they will be in the New Hampshire Mountains during Homecoming. He asks to be remembered to all classmates.

Another nice response came from William H. (Bill) Morrow, who has been connected with Northfield Mount Hermon School in Massachusetts since 1931 as English teacher, director of social activities, director of libraries and associate director of alumni affairs. Recently, Bill was named Chairman of Mount Hermon's Centennial Celebration in the academic year 1979-80. The Centennial Commission, made up of trustees, faculty, alumni and students, hopes to have President Carter as principal speaker at the opening convocation. It will feature Founder's Day on February 3 - just five days before William and Mary's 286th. In April there will be an academic observance featuring a panel led by Everett Mendelsohn of Harvard; also a "town and gown" day in May with a picnic for townspeople, open house and a symphony concert. Lord Butler, Chancellor of Cambridge University, will be Commencement speaker. Says Bill, "In June there will be a huge alumni reunion with an historical play -- then I retire!" He plans to spend January at Naples, Fla., getting rested up for all that. He hopes to make the W&M alumni gathering in Boston on October 24.

By the way, Mount Hermon Girls' Division was founded in 1879 by Dwight L. Moody, world famed evangelist, the Boys' Division in 1881. There are two campuses on the Connecticut River just three miles from New Hampshire and Vermont. College preparatory, Mount Hermon draws top students from 45 states and 24 foreign countries. It has a substantial student aid financial program. There are approximately 1,000 students.

Undoubtedly, the newsiest contribution comes from Fairfax Berkley, who writes that a group was so inspired by our 50th Reunion that they have been getting together frequently for lunch.

"Bruce Stewart and his wife Martha started the get-togethers," he says, "by having Fairfax Griffith Bahr, Julia Howard Day (both now live in Williamsburg), Mildred Meyer Lindsay, Eugenia Portlock Joyce, Herbert Ganter and me to their home in Portsmouth last December. Since then we have met twice at the Inn in Williamsburg and once at my garage apartment at Virginia Beach. Max Brockenbrough Houghland joined us at the Inn luncheons.

"My years in College were such happy ones that I found it fun to be reminded again of those days and I hope the others enjoyed these mini-reunions as much as I." Continuing Fairfax's letter, "I carried Mary Bullock to her class reunion in May and enjoyed seeing Raymond Driscoll, an old Toano boy who lives in Kensington, Md., and is retired from the U.S. Bureau of Standards. It was a pleasure, too, to have RKT (Kit) Larson ride home with us.

"One of my College roommates, Bill Sturgis, recently retired physician of Nassawadox on the Eastern Shore, had me as guest in March at the American premiere of the opera Mary, Queen of Scots. In June, Bill and his wife, Sarah Anne, and Herbert Ganter had lunch with Mary Bullock and me at Virginia Beach."

More from Fairfax, "About two years ago I ran into Walter Chinn while on a tour of old homes in Louisa County and he recently presented me with a copy of his Autobiography, published in 1976 by the Fredericksburg Press. I have found it most interesting and prize it highly. Another of our classmates, Bill Hogan, recently had his book, Huntington Silversmiths 1763-1835, published by the Sir Walter Press in Durham, N.C., and I value my copy. Bill and I have kept in touch over the years. In 1930 we were both in Rome, he a student at the American Academy. The tour he gave me of the Roman Forum was a highlight of my stay. Bill goes to England every summer and 'digs' in Roman Britain or guides at the Roman Palace near Chichester. I stopped to see him in 1975 at his home in Keysville."

Fairfax is serving his third term as President of the Norfolk Historical Society. In May, the Society sponsored a walking tour of historic Freemason Street, one of Virginia's oldest. He is on the Board of Governors of the Princess Anne County Historical Society and represents it on the Arts and Humanities Commission of Virginia, of which he is an executive board member. As an historian, Fairfax is in great demand as a speaker. Just recently he spoke before the Norfolk Chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution and has scheduled a talk on Norfolk History to the DAR.

Hilda Sterling Nolen of New Canton is another classmate recently heard from. "Homecoming in 1977 was very touching," she writes. "I consider it one of the most memorable events of my years even though I was unable to stay the entire weekend. I'm planning to return in October and look forward to seeing more of our classmates. A fond remembrance to each of you." Native of Naxera and Gloucester, Hilda grew up on a farm next to the Severn River and went to school there and at Achilles before entering William and Mary. Because of a visual condition, she was unable to complete degree requirements but obtained a special teacher's certificate. Teaching at Harris Mountain Mission, she met and wed Noah J. Nolen. Dedicating much of their lives to young people, they operated a guest home away from home for girls. The home in Richmond was available especially to foreign exchange students at the Medical College and other institutions. Now retired in Cumberland County near the Blue Ridge, Hilda and Noah keep busy, he raising a herd of Black Angus cattle and she enjoying writing, especially poetry. They are active in the Center Presbyterian Church in Cumberland, on the Farm Bureau and the Southern States Cooperative. She has published in both Virginia Wildlife and The New Voices in American Poetry for 1976, 1977 and 1978, the latter volume due next month. She has received personal letters from Presidents Johnson, Nixon and Carter, thanking her for poems. "A Prayer at Christmas" sent to Johnson was used for Christmas dinner in Vietnam. Another poem, dedicated to American astronauts landing on the moon, brought personal thanks. I regret that space does not permit printing some of the lovely verse.

Bruce (Buzzy) Stewart tells me that he and wife Martha attended the Virginia Sports Hall of Fame banquet in April where John Todd was inducted posthumously. There they saw numerous other alumni, including Chief Justice Lawrence (Red) I'Anson. Buzzy played a solid part in encouraging members of the 1928 class to make a big thing of their 50th in May. He's always at Homecoming and looks forward to October 12.

Nina T. Miles writes from Bloxom. "Thank you so much for the interesting letters in The Alumni Gazette. I'm sure there are scores of others like me who contribute nothing to the column but who avidly read of the activities of our classmates. P.S. I visited with Red Wessell's wife, Martha Curtis Wessells, in the grocery store yesterday, June 22." So, the rest of you, like Nina with nothing to write, drop a note anyhow. It all helps.

Among our world travelers: Joe Muscarelle and wife Margaret just got back to New Jersey from emulating Ferdinand Magellan or Jules Verne and cannot wait to get to Williamsburg on October 12, says a card via Rome. Sewell Hopkins accompanied his older sister and one of her women friends on his first tour of Europe in May. As a biologist, he puts that continent behind Africa, Asia, Australia and the Americas in interest and regards Alaska as his greatest geographic thrill, or so says brother Frank.

Well, that's about it for this time, classmates. If you good people want more of this, sit down and write about yourselves. See you October 12, as they say in the hills behind Roanoke, "The good Lord willin' and effen the crick don't rize."

29 We received a most interesting letter from Oscar E. Wilkinson, 31176 Flying Cloud Drive, Laguna Niguel, Calif. 92677, back in May and because we feel the letter from Oscar, better known as "Wilk" to so many of his friends, would be interesting to his many classmates and others of that period, we decided to pass it on to you.

"It was the summer of 1926 when the W&M Orchestra went to Europe. It was great fun, and so far as I know, no other W&M Orchestra has ever enjoyed that pleasure before or since. Here is how it came about. We had been playing for the school dances, the Dining Hall, the Tea Room, some outside engagements and some radio programs at WRVA-Richmond. In the process we received some favorable press notices which we used to good advantage. I recall that it was this year that the Charleston was so popular, but one viewing by Bessie Taylor at the dance in the Girls' Gym and it was banned at W&M forevermore. The musicians were: Cotton Rawls, Bob Wescott, Towneley Gamble, Harry Blair, Bob Pully, Butler Daughtry and myself.

"Several college orchestras were going to Europe about that time, so we saw no reason why W&M should not be represented along with Harvard, Princeton, etc. We discussed the idea with Dr. Fitchner, the head of our Foreign Language Department and Director of the W&M Summer School in France. He liked the idea and gave his classes assignments of writing letters in foreign languages to various cafes and resorts in Europe, requesting summer employment for our orchestra. In the meantime we had arranged an audition with the Cunard Line and were accepted as 'ship's orchestra' for our passage to and from Europe. Dr. Fitchner's effort brought us an engagement for several weeks at the Esplanade Cafe in Zurich, so we proceeded to get passports and do a little rehearsing. I cannot describe the thrill and excitement when we found we had put it all together.

"Early in June, we sailed on H.M.S. Tuscania. At the last minute Harry Blair was unable to go and it was necessary to find another drummer quick -- Bob Skinner from VPI substituted. We were considered part of the ship's crew which permitted us entrance to the Ship's Bridge, but entry to the Galley was more popular. We landed in Le Havre after ten days at sea and a quick stop at Plymouth. Paris was our first destination, then on to Zurich and some experiences we would remember for the rest of our lives. Everything for our ease and comfort had been pre-arranged by the proprietor of the Esplanade: beautiful rooms, delicious meals and drinks at a fine pension, plus a cash income of $3 each per day, and weekend tours to various parts of Switzerland. A grand man! A highlight was being invited to play (along with the U. of Virginia band) for the American Consul's Ball on the Fourth of July at the Dolder Grand Hotel.

"The triumphant return of the Indian Serenaders brought forth a complimentary article on the front page of The Flat Hat that just about insured our position with the College for '26-'27. We had a ball and were proud to represent W&M."

"Wilk" hopes very much to be back at Homecoming, and we hope he will make it.

Charlotte Sanford Koontz says she would like to be at our 50th Reunion but doubts very much that she can make it due to her health at this time. She has asked to be remembered to all her classmates.

I was in Dallas in late June and talked with Harry Blair, but was not able to see him while there as he was having surgery done at the time. He said he very much wanted to get back for Homecoming and for our 50th Reunion.

I also saw Bob Corstaphney '28, and his wife and was their guest for dinner one night. Bob hopes he will be back for Homecoming.

We hope the Class of '29 will contribute as much as possible this fall to The William and Mary Fund, the William and Mary Athletic Educational Foundation and, finally, to The Campaign for the College, which hopes to raise a total of $19 million for the College.

It is not too early to make your plans now to come back for Homecoming and make every effort to be with us for our 50th Class Reunion in May '79. It has been my great privilege to be present for both the '27 Class Reunion and '28 Reunion and I had a wonderful time on both occasions.

We want every classmate back for the 50th Reunion. You will have the "time of your life."

Nancy Ward was honored by members of the Xi Chapter of Delta Gamma Society, an international organization of outstanding women educators, for her work as an educator, church and community leader in Tazewell. Her teaching experiences began in Russell County and continued in Tazewell County as a teacher of English and Latin before she became librarian at Tazewell High School, where she remained until retirement in 1972. She travels extensively and her travelogues have been of interest to the entire community.

I had a wonderful trip during July and August with a 21-day Caravan tour by coach of Scotland, England and Wales with a five-day return to the USA by sea on the beautiful Cunard ship, Queen 2.

31 Since my original message last December, I have been very disappointed in the response received from members of our Class of 1931.

Let's get with it and show up at Homecoming this year, October 13 and 14. I'll be there to greet you. Look me up at the Hospitality House or Alumni Dinner on Friday night, or Alumni Luncheon on Saturday. I have word that the Conklings (Liz Griffin), the Smiths (Dottie Reese), and the Mayhews (Kathleen Hazeltine) and, of course, the Butlers (Louise and Ev) are planning to attend. So come along and join us.

David C. Nightengale of Fredericksburg, Va., retired in 1974 after 42 years with VEPCO.

Herbert G. Stewart directed the premier performance of his third cantata, "The First Christmas," at West End United Methodist Church, Portsmouth, Va., in December of 1977. Stewart is minister of music of the church.

Kathrine Kahle Adelman of Hoboken, N.J., has been retired since 1968.

Forty-Fifth Reunion October 14-15, 1978

33 Hi, Classmates of 1933! Where were you forty-five years ago? Were you starting your first job after college? Were you reminiscing about the previous four years when you were an undergraduate? Did it ever occur to you to think about 1978, where you might be then, and your forty-fifth class reunion?

I'm sure none of us could imagine what it would be like in 1978 - so far away. But, HERE IT IS, and on the weekend of October 12, 13 and 14 we will celebrate our forty-fifth class reunion at Homecoming. If you have not sent in your reservations, look up your last issue of The Alumni Gazette, where you will find the information and reservation blanks. Let's have a good showing. Come on, show your Class spirit. (Who would have dreamed in 1933 that the opponents for the annual Homecoming football game would be Madison, then an all-girls' school?)

The summer's long hot spell has now gone, so activities begin again for us all. For Mamie Gilliam Turner of Carrolton, Va., last November in Jacksonville, Fla., her first great-granddaughter, Catherine Elizabeth Turner, made her appearance. Best wishes, Catherine Elizabeth! Maybe one day you, too, will be enrolled at the College. Aren't you proud, Mamie?

Margaret Thompson Wyatt of Highland, Calif., has added a son-in-law, a step-granddaughter and a grandson to her family in 1977. Margaret expects to be at Homecoming. We will look forward to seeing you and hearing more about these family additions.

Samuel S. Vacchiano of La Plata, Md., has been busy helping to take care of his brother and his brother's wife, who have both been very ill. By this time, I hope that both are better and that you will be able to make Homecoming, Sam.

Mildred Wallace Drummond of Norfolk, Va., says that she retired from the Naval Supply Center (Civil Service) and that her husband is also retired. Their many combined hobbies include gardening, sewing (Mildred makes all of her clothes), cooking, music (opera), travel, and handicrafts. Though they have no children, they have several nieces and nephews whom they enjoy. I hope, Mildred, that you will take time out to come to Homecoming.

Macon Floumoy Fears of Drakes Branch, Va., is now serving as State Director of the National Retired Teachers' Association, and during the past four years has been serving on the Governor's Advisory Commission for the Aged. He is also chairman of several committees for the Virginia Retired Teachers' Association. I hope you won't have a conflict with the Homecoming date, Macon.

As many of you probably know, Howard Scammon '34, since his retirement, has been working on compiling material from the William and Mary Theatre into book form. If you were associated with the theatre as an undergraduate and wish to send a contribution toward having the book published, I know it would be welcome. Just send it to the Alumni Office in his name. He will get it.

Aren't you glad you aren't going as an undergraduate now? The students today seem to be smarter than we were. And the courses of study are many and complicated. There are compensations for "growing old" as Robert Browning said. Let's be "young again" on the weekend of October 12th! See you then, I hope.

35 Curtis Ramsey has received the Ferrum College Distinguished Alumni Award for his service to education. He serves as Regional Director for the University of Virginia School of Continuing Education.

Virginia Mister Walker who has retired to the Eastern Shore of Virginia continues to be active in her community. She is a member of Woman's Club, Historical Society, and Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiques.

Ann Northington Westlow writes that she was unable to attend the Alumni Dinner, but came for Saturday during Homecoming. She is looking forward to coming for the entire weekend next year. William and Mary continues to be one of her pet projects. Since Ed, her husband, is retired, she is planning a trip to the West Coast this year.

Charles S. Frost of Ashville, N.C., who was Vice President of our freshman class, is still interested in reading the Gazette through each issue and enjoys it immensely. After 1931-32, he entered Carnegie Tech, now Carnegie-Mellon University. From 1939 he entered engineering and pursued that career until his retirement. Charles will be remembered as appearing in many dramatic productions during his attendance at William and Mary.

William Schmiedel of Pine Orchard, Conn., retired June 30, 1977 after over forty years as an officer and director of M. Schiasone & Sons and spends most of the cold winter in his villa at Palm Beach, Fla., with his wife Mildred and on the golf course. Their daughter, Mary Ross Schmiedel Hutton, Class of '74, Marshall-Wythe School of Law, who later received her Master's in both business and tax from New York University, is now connected with Whitman and Ransom, specializing in International Tax. She has also passed C.P.A. for the State of New York.

In the November issue of Homesewing Trade News there appeared an interesting profile article about Alfred Caring, Director of Merchandising for Belding Lily Company. He started with Dritz-Traum Company in 1935 and was later a junior salesman concentrating on Talon zippers. Two years later he became assistant to the general manager. After the war he started to devise ways to make home sewing more professional-looking and easier. Among some of the awards he has received are three Gold Packaging ones from Chain Store Age and Variety Store Merchandiser, and two silver ones from Chain Store Age. He is the innovator of blister pack for notion merchandise. He serves as an adviser to Inventor League of Philadelphia and has been a judge and keynote speaker at the Inventors' Contest in Philadelphia. His wife has a doctorate in psychology, one daughter is working on her PhD and the other is a former college instructor and presently Media Director, Payne Whitney Psychiatric Clinic of New York.

39 Greetings! Although the news over the summer months has been sparse, it's top quality.

First of all, the good news that Ned Ferguson has been elected President of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce. He succeeds Milt Drewer, former coach of the Indians and now a member of the Board of Visitors of the College.

Then, there is the always welcome report from your Fun-Time Committee. "Already yet," they are making plans for our 40th and have a big surprise in store for us. In Bert Slaughter's words, "As of now we plan to keep the special arrangements secret."

One arrangement which is no secret and which adds a special panache to our 40th Reunion is the 1939 Commemorative Gates Gift. We need $40 from each classmate to insure our goal. That is $1 per year for those 40 years which will have elapsed since we departed in June 1939 to seek our way in the world. Here's our opportunity to have a permanent stake in our College and to make our 40th very special.

But back to our upcoming annual reunion, the 10th! Hope you can make it. I can't, but I'll not miss our 40th.

Bert Slaughter and June will be living at Mountainview Drive, Bedford, Va. 24523, by the time the 39'ers gather together for the usual quiet, peaceful weekend. He writes that their home is located three miles north of Bedford and commands a gorgeous view of the mountains. Now, hear this - they will be only 200 yards from the golf course. Keep the news coming!

41 An article in the June 9th Virginian-Pilot tells us the Norfolk Circuit Court judges elected John P. Harper (Pat Harper to us) chief judge for a two-year term to begin July 1. Congratulations, Pat.

In attendance at the spring meeting of the Cincinnati Alumni Chapter on April 23 were Mike Stousland with his wife, the former Betty Craighead '42, and Maggie Mitchell Mollenkopf with her husband Bill. Maggie writes that they spent two very wet weeks in England in May and two delightful months this summer at their cottage in Maine. She stays busy during the year with hospital volunteer work.

Gifford Beal writes that he and his wife Betty spent most of April in London visiting a married daughter and a married son who live there. Their son and his wife have two children, a three-year-old son and three-month-old daughter.

Bob Kern and Gene can still be found in Hasbrouck Heights, N.J. Bob is on early retirement. We hope this means that we'll see them both at Homecoming.

Be sure to keep the weekend of October 13-14 free so we can all meet at Homecoming. Bring along (or write) news of you and yours for our next newsletter in December.

Thirty-Fifth Reunion October 14-15, 1978

43 Greetings from the Gentle City. Here at home Royce Cunningham has been named Manager of Hotel Services for the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, moving up from

Director of Mechanical Operations and Maintenance.

A nostalgic note from Carolyn Harley Gough telling how lucky she feels to be an alumna of William and Mary. She is having an exciting time at Cabrini College, doing everything from directing the library, teaching, master planning and theatre development. Her duties also consist of cooperation with neighboring colleges and universities.

Mary Cramer Oliver has remarried and acquired a young stepson. Her three sons are through college and two are married, presenting her with two lovely granddaughters. Mary's daughter entered college this fall. For the past ten years Mary has been the office manager of a Washington law firm.

Jane Williams Mahoney traveled through Canada and Alaska and then went to England aboard the QE2. While in England, she spent much of her time at Stonehenge and various planetariums.

Helen Marshall Fedziuk's daughter Elizabeth graduated from the College in June.

A nice letter from Phyllis Hantz Wolf told of a planned Tri Delt reunion at Homecoming in October. Those planning to attend are Kitty Brown Harris, Liz Costenbader Bellis, Patty Hulbert Bauer, Skippy Myers Sturgeon, Gloria Hanners Murphy, Phyllis Reid Knopf and Mary Lou Taylor McGoodwin. A good chance to catch up on all the news and meet the husbands.

Take a walk through your past. Come to Homecoming.

45 Recent travels were a favorite subject and picturesque post cards told of interesting places visited by classmates during the past few months. Jeanna Carol Anderson Cavileer, who lives at Ocean View, N.J., wrote about her wonderful trip to England and Scotland.

Jean Taffy Taylor Delahanty of Trenton, N.J., reported on a delightful William and Mary get-together at the home of Alice White Tomlinson '46, at Upper Saddle River, Va. Lucille McCormick Endler was present and also there from the Class of '46 were Ellen Irvin Newberry, Thelma Scotty Murray Smith, Marge Williams Walters and Ginny Radcliffe.

Ben and Jean Boyd Lacy '44, and daughters Betsy '74, and Debbie '78, enjoyed a fantastic trip during June to England, Scotland, and Paris. In May they attended Debbie's graduation from William and Mary. She is living in Richmond and teaching at Collegiate.

Wayne and Marge Retzke Gibbs '44, vacationed on the Outer Banks (Salvo) during July. Son Dave is still in San Diego and Wayne III is at UNC, Chapel Hill. Before entering graduate school for an MBA, Wayne enjoyed a four-month trip around the U.S. via VW camper.

Rudy Morris and Marcy live at King George, Va., and enjoy frequent trips to the College to visit son Tip who is a third-year law student. They are proud grandparents and enjoy their daughter Ellen's two little girls.

Volina Robertson Turner lives in Newark, Del., and wrote that she recently visited Elizabeth Pickhardt in Richmond and Rhoda Buckley in Ashland. A retired school teacher and principal, Volina enjoys visits to the Eastern Shore where she taught school for 35 years. Her son Burleigh is a high school principal in Newark.

Charlotte Webb '47, attended a nephew's graduation in S.C. and on her return trip to D.C. we were pleased to have her visit us. She had recently seen Mary Sue Ebeling '46, who is a retired LCDR living in D.C., except for summer months spent at her condominium in Florida.

Also visiting in Emporia during the summer were Jeanne Schoenewolf Preston, Sunny Trumbo Williams '44, and Rolf, and Jean Parker Land '43, and T. I. The Lands were en route to Blacksburg to visit their son Tommy, a Virginia Tech sophomore.

We enjoyed visits with the Page Prestons at Virginia Beach and the Rolf Williams at Sandbridge. Those present for a William and Mary get-together at the Williams' beautiful new beach house were the Williams, Prestons, Tillars, Jean McPherrin Morris and Hal, and Fran Loesch Brunner and Bob. Pictures and articles entitled "Sandbridge, Where Fairy Tales Come True" and "New Beach House one of 6 Open for Garden Week" appeared in the Virginia Beach Beacon, April 23, 1978, which described adequately their dream house. Inclement weather canceled the tour for this year, but the weather was perfect for the Tri Delt "Sun Fest," which was a beautiful benefit luncheon and fashion show. Sunny's spacious and attractively-decorated living room and porches all facing the ocean were a perfect setting for this event enjoyed by about eighty guests. William and Mary was well represented among those present for a memorable afternoon at Sandbridge.

Jean and Hal Morris' daughter Nancy's marriage to Joe Whitehead took place in the Wren Chapel in May and a beautiful reception followed at the Alumni House. Nancy's sisters, Kay and Susan, were her attendants. Among the guests present were Rolf and Sunny Williams and daughter Lesney '72.

The highlight of our summer was attending the Virginia Tech Commencement in June when our son Tom was awarded the Doctor of Education degree. In June he assumed duties as Assistant Director of Development for Virginia Tech. His wife Darrel is a first-year law student at UVa. In August they attended the Pi Kappa Alpha Convention in San Francisco. Tom was recently appointed a regional president for the fraternity.

Nancy Barker Squire '52, and Pete, of Emporia, also enjoyed the Virginia Tech graduation and related festivities including a concert by the New Virginians. Their son Bill is a '78 graduate and is an Assistant County Agent for the VPI Extension Service. Hall is a sophomore and a member of the New Virginians. Following in Dr. Peter Squire's footsteps are sons Harry and Weaver. Harry graduated from Hampden-Sydney in '76 and entered William and Mary this fall for his MBA. Weaver is a senior at Hampden-Sydney this year.

Irene Wenz Patton wrote from Webster Grove, Mo., that she is President of the Alpha Chi Omega Alumnae Chapter. Their daughter Nancy is a '78 graduate of Lawrence U. and a music major.

Our daughter Elizabeth is a student at the U. of New Mexico and we are looking forward to a trip to Albuquerque soon. Next on our agenda is Williamsburg and Homecoming weekend!

47 High school classes have been doing the reunion bit all summer. Locally we had 80% after 35 years. What is with you '47 people, have you no sense of nostalgia? Since we last got together via the Gazette, I have had 3 literary gems, thanks to the Alumni Office, and 1 regular type correspondent from Newport News.

Allen Sullivan says, forget that retirement jazz; he believes coaching and teaching keeps him young; he is planning to attend W&M-U. Conn. football game with his game plan being catching old friends. Richard Margolis writes that he has just completed a 2-year term as Chief of Dept. of Pediatrics at Christian Hospital NE-NW in St. Louis, Mo., and shared with Bill Murden the pleasure of seeing their sons awarded the rank of Eagle Scout.

Ginna Lewis Glass sends word from Switzerland the W&M choir sang in Geneva on May 21 at the American Church—they were only "sensational and received rave notices and total enthusiasm from the community and from me. What a wonderful, talented group of young people. They are a fabulous collective ambassador and individually delightful." She put it so forcefully, I felt the need to quote!

The College has recently announced the establishment of the Edwin R. Druker Award to the outstanding tennis player on the men's varsity tennis squad at the College. Ed has established this award of a quartz Seiko watch, suitably engraved, to be given on an annual basis. The first recipient is Marc Abrams '78, of Miami, Fla., who has been the number one player for all four years. The award will do much to keep up the momentum of the Tribe program since its recent turnaround, sparked by the appearance of Abrams on the campus. Well done, Ed!

You say you were overlooked at that promised victory party bash in May? Sorry it fizzled, but at least we got some good media coverage; I'm told it made Goodmorning America via UPI. Editor's note: An article in the Richmond Times-Dispatch stated that Jean was the first woman to run for a council seat in Stony Creek, a town of about 400 residents. She lost the seat to her opponent, a veteran member of the 6-member council, by a draw. Each received 59 votes. The tie, the first in Sussex County in memory, was broken by lot under Virginia Election Law. Jean says, "I'll be back. I'm not through." Good luck, Jean, for the next election.

Just because it's reunion time for the good '48 people, let's hear it from you '47 birds and clear all the way to Box 42 in Stony Creek.

51 Thank you all for the number of news items which arrived in the summer's mail. Bolling Conner Carter writes that she is still a counselor at Appomattox Middle School and that her son is a sophomore at William and Mary (R. B. Carter, Jr.) Bernie Nolan and his wife Pat hosted the spring meeting of the Cincinnati Alumni Chapter at their home on April 23rd. Bernie is currently serving as president of the chapter. Also attending the meeting were Bruce and Madge Noffsinger Lester. One of Mark H. McCormack's new clients is former heavy weight champion Muhammad Ali. It was interesting to hear that Vito Ragazzo is back with fellow co-captain of the '50 Indian gridiron team, Joe Mark. Joe is head coach at Shippensburg State College in Pennsylvania and Vito has been named defensive coordinator. Congratulations to Hilly Wilson who has been elected to the Board of Directors of the Baltimore Life Insurance Company. He is Executive Vice President of McCormick and Company and director of a number of other corporations and organizations. Harold Price is President of H. L. Price, Inc., a security consulting firm in the Atlanta area. He was a special agent in the FBI until 1960 and for the past eighteen years has been a management consultant specializing in asset protection. John McKean writes that as of July 1, 1977, he became Dean of Arts and Sciences at SUNY at Canton, N.Y.

And Ann Lewis Burrows writes enthusiastically that she is an executive director for a positively thriving museum and library called The Mary Ball Washington Museum and Library in Lancaster, Va. She reports that it is an area abounding in William and Mary alumni.

Reporting on reunions was Chuck Redding who stated that he enjoyed being back for Bobbe's 25th reunion in October. It was a great weekend in spite of the parade and tennis tournament being rained out! He is now looking forward to next year's reunions. And we are looking forward to your next trip to Copenhagen, Chuck. We so enjoyed our week with you and Bobbe in May. We still have that bicycle trip to do!

A grand letter came from Miss Wynne-Roberts in late May from the Washington area where she is convalescing from a broken hip. She expressed "surprise" at the number of William and Mary people living nearby who have been so kind, telephoning and/or visiting. If any of you would like to write, her address is: "The Westwood," 5101 Ridgefield Road, Bethesda, Md. 20016. Telephone: 301-657-3241.

A good fall to all!

Twenty-Fifth Reunion October 14-15, 1978

53 Betty Kustrup Sheahan's new address is Charlottesville, Va. The Sheahans' four children attend the University of Virginia, three enrolled in the Engineering School and one working toward a Master's degree in Architecture. Also from the University of Virginia, Annie Rector Antrobus has been named Assistant Registrar. Previously she had been a secondary school teacher and a social worker in Richmond and has served as Student Information Coordinator since 1975 at the University. She also has time to attend graduate school.

Jim Shatynski's note from California states that three of the five children now attend college. Son Steve was a National Merit Scholarship finalist and has accepted an NCAA football scholarship to attend Oregon State; Mike attends the Naval Academy. Another child is at the University of California.

Bill Harris has a daughter attending the University of North Carolina and a son entering Hampden-Sydney this fall.

Jack Martin is serving as Manassas City Councilman and is President of the Virginia

Automobile Dealers Association for 1978. The Martins have six children and four grandchildren!

"Maggie" Hult Johnson plans to attend our class reunion in October.

"Buddy" Barker and John Munger both ran in the Daley Chicago Marathon, writes Lee Granger Munger.

Jay and I are adjusting to our second oldest daughter's preparations for her final year at Loch Haven. Our oldest is happily settled with husband Rick in Buffalo, N.Y. I am enjoying working for a gift shop in West Chester and Jay is kept busy with Philadelphia Electric. We hope to see you all for a great 25th Reunion in October.

55 I hope you all had an enjoyable summer. Fortunately, there is a little more news this time than there was for our last class letter.

Mary North Bogue writes that her son Tim spent the first semester of his junior year at DePauw University in Athens, Greece, last fall. He ran in a race over the original marathon course from Marathon to Athens, Greece. Her daughter Heidi attends Olivet Nazarene College and is majoring in Christian Education. Her son Jon was a high school drum major and was an all-state band member during his last two high school years. Mary lives in Crete, Ill.

Steve Hamilton writes from Trumbull, Conn., that he is Manager of Engineering for General Electric Wire and Cable Department. His daughter Beth is a sophomore at William and Mary.

David Gardiner Tyler III is owner and operator of Tyler Marine Railway and Service in Wachapreague, Va.

Scott Stone writes that he is Vice President of Pasadena, Texas National Bank, is on the Board of Directors of the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce, and is a member of the Pasadena Rotary Club and Y.M.C.A. He has a daughter who attends the University of Texas in Austin.

Jim and Marilyn Zaiser Ott were present at the spring meeting of the Cincinnati Alumni Chapter on April 23.

October brings thoughts of Homecoming and the beauty of Williamsburg in the fall. If you do attend, please stop at the Alumni House and give your news to Trudi.

57 Note to the gentleman who writes for the Class of '59 . . . please stop referring to yourself as a member of the Geritol set.

How do you think that makes the Class of '57 feel? We're certainly not ready to admit to that membership for ourselves!

Fall is in the air in Virginia, and the Indians have conquered VMI at Cary Field; although I must admit fall was not in the air that day. It was a scorcher in the stands and must have been worse for the boys on the playing field. We are looking forward to a cooler trip to Blacksburg in a couple of weeks to see what Virginia Tech has in store for us.

One of our class members who remained in Williamsburg is Ed Jones, or Eddie as he was in '57. Ed had just resigned as Baseball Coach of the College, having been given additional teaching responsibilities in the Physical Education Department. He was head coach for three years and will continue to manage the extensive intramural program at the College.

Ed Schefer, Class Vice President, has been elected Vice President of General Foods Corporation. He joined them in May, 1978, as Director of Information Services. Ed has previously been with Arthur Andersen and Company where he was a partner in that firm's administrative services division and in charge of its consulting activities to consumer goods and industrial products industries.

Robert J. Anchell writes that he had the good fortune to see Pete Neufield '58 at the opening of his show in Miami, "Annie." He reports the show was splendid and that Pete looks great.

On January 5, 1978, Sue Fryer Ward became a candidate for Congress for Maryland's Fourth Congressional District. (I hope she won -- or wins!) Her husband, Archibald, is the first non-physician to be President of the Medical Society of Saint Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington, D.C. They sound like very busy people.

Charley Morrow is a self-employed manufacturer's representative living in the Philadelphia area. Charley visits Williamsburg several times a year and is quite active in tennis and platform tennis.

While attending a seafood festival on the Eastern Shore, we enjoyed a chat with Anne Hannegan Prince and husband Bill, Law School '56. Anne has been busy rearing a family and pursuing many and varied interests of her own as well as traveling with Bill who is recognized as an outstanding attorney in Norfolk.

Just ran across some belated news from Sally Quarton Newton who wrote to wish me good luck with the column. Sally wrote the class notes for several years and was "delighted" to pass it on to me. She says her Illinois-graduate husband leads an exciting life through his job as a patent attorney with Chrysler. At the time she wrote he was in Paris, and she wished she were, too!

Please let me hear from all of you so the class notes don't consist of what the Fitzgerald family is doing!

Fifteenth Reunion October 14-15, 1978

63 Don and I plan to attend Homecoming this year - can you believe it is our 15th Reunion year!!! Hope many of you will be there and we can catch up with one another.

Robert L. Butler has been named Senior Vice President in the investment office of Wheat, First Securities of Richmond. He joined the company in 1969 and was named Vice President/Investment Officer in 1973.

Hugh Taylor, an associate professor holding the Edith M. Kelso Chair of Art History at Washington and Jefferson College, is one of 40 art scholars from the U.S. and Canada chosen to attend the Attingham Summer School in England this year. This is a highly concentrated survey of the English country house and its contents, dealing with its architectural and social history and its fine and decorative arts. Hugh joined W&J in 1965.

James McGlothlin has been elected to the Advisory Board of the Virginia National Bank's Bristol office. He is President and chief operating officer of the United Coal Companies which he founded in 1970.

David Greenfield has been named a senior drug coordinator by the regulatory affairs department of ICI Americas, Inc. He joined the company in 1973 as a senior information scientist with corporate research. In 1974 he was transferred to the regulatory affairs division as a drug coordinator.

Katherine McGinnis Block received her MA in Dance at UCLA in June of 1977. She has been teaching at Scripps College in Claremont and at U.C. Riverside. She would like to transfer to a small, smog-free town with her nine-year-old son, Eric. Kathy visited Maureen Looney Mather last summer on her island in Canada where Maureen lives with assorted animals, three children and husband who built their home. She also sends news that Rona Sande is heading a marvelous program at U.C. Santa Barbara and that she has also started her own dance company.

Lee Williams McBride and her family are completing their fourth year in Paris and plan to be there until the summer of 1979.

Carol Boardman Artigues is working on her Master's in elementary education at Russell Sage College. Carol is employed as branch manager of Artcraft Concepts. She has two sons, Paul and Alex, and they live in Ballston Spa, N.Y.

Kitty Canady Owen and her family will be in Hawaii for another four years at least. Bob has been made commander in the USN and is going as the commanding officer of a polaris submarine. He had three months of school in Arlington, so daughter Alyssa and Kitty came east also. He had more schooling after Christmas in San Diego. They have been back in Hawaii since last January.

Wilbur Johnson, Jr., is head of the machinery division of J.H. Wilkinson Co. in Glassboro, N.C. He remarried in February 1977 to Mary Frye Johnson of Glassboro.

Donald Gould was recently promoted to Regional Director of Sales and Operations of the Mid-Atlantic region of Batesville Casket Co., a division of Hillenbrand Inds., Inc. He is President of the local Kiwanis Club and is married to the former Betsy Johnson. They have three children, two sons and a foster son.

Margaret Johns Nijuis is busy as President of Poughkeepsie American Association of the University Women. Her daughter Michelle is in nursery school and her husband Rolf is Advisory Engineer at IBM.

Pat Ferrell Franklin has three children: Devin, 2; Dennis, 13; and Kim, 10. All five Franklins enjoyed skiing for the first time this year.

Kathy Dudley Okada is moving back to California again as Dave will be starting a new Kenner West facility in the Los Angeles area. It would be interesting to know which of the Kenner toys Dave designed.

Don '61, will be teaching in the MBA program at Widener College again this fall. He joined many William and Mary alumni at the meeting when Dean Lambert was in Philadelphia. Owen Knopping, also '61, is gathering area alumni after the William and Mary - Villanova football game for cocktails

CHAPTER EVENTS

Saturday, September 30

The Big Green vs Virginia Tech

The Roanoke Chapter of the Society of the Alumni is hosting a pre-game picnic at the Rendezvous Pizza Inn, located at 2720 Roanoke Road in Christiansburg. The cost of the lunch will be $3.00 and will begin at 11:30 a.m. The Chapter will also have a bus to take fans to the stadium for the game and return them to the picnic site for a post-game party. The cost of the bus is also $3.00. Advance reservations for both the picnic and the bus are required.

Wednesday, October 18

Atlanta, Georgia

The Georgia Chapter, under the leadership of Ruth Eye Sours, '67, has planned an evening at the High Museum of Art in Atlanta. Penny Sander, '76, will be the guide for the evening. Penny is the Assistant Curator of Decorative Arts at the Museum. The program, "Changing Tastes in American Design: 1700 - 1900," will include selections from a collection of American furniture, silver, glass and costumes, as well as a group of American paintings. There will be a cash bar reception with hors d'oeuvres. The program will be from 7:30 - 9:30 p.m., and reservation forms will be sent to Atlanta area alumni.

Friday, October 20

Northern Virginia

The Army-Navy Country Club is the location for the Northern Virginia Chapter Fall Meeting. The program will begin at 7:30 and special guest for the evening will be Mr. Ben Carnevale, W&M Athletic Director. The cost will be $1.50 per person and advanced reservations are required. Reservation forms will be sent to Northern Virginia alumni.

Saturday, October 21

W&M vs Navy

There will be an alumni reception after the game at the Annapolis Hilton, located on the harbour front at Compromise and St. Mary's Streets. There will be a cash bar and light hors d'oeuvres; the cover charge will be $1.00 per person.

Saturday, October 28

The W&M alumni group in Louisville will host an open house for all alumni and friends immediately after the game (4:00 - 6:00 p.m.) in the Dover Room at the Executive Inn. The Inn is located across from the entrance to the stadium, on the Fairgrounds at Watterson Expressway. There will be a cash bar and hors d'oeuvres; the cost will be $1.50 per person.

Saturday, November 18

The Indians vs the Spiders

The Richmond Chapter of the Society of the Alumni is hosting a post-game reception and cash bar cocktail party immediately following the game at the John Marshall Hotel, located at 5th and Franklin Streets. Admission will be $1.00 per person, and reservations are not needed.

Friday, December 15

Atlanta, Georgia

John and Ruth Sours will host a Christmas Party for the Georgia Chapter at their home. More details will be mailed to Atlanta area alumni.

and dinner at a local restaurant in September. Owen was recently elected President of St. Mary Hospital's Board of Trustees in Philadelphia.

My days of parent involvement in elementary school are taking a break as Pam and Sharon will both be in the middle school this year. Jimmy, at 1½, will join me in a Parents' and Preschool Children weekly program for twelve weeks in the fall. I also will be embarking in a new field for me, working part-time in the library at the senior high school in an experimental program to help alleviate the overcrowding at the township library.

65 Please note my new address; we are finally settled in our new home and do not expect further moves.

Clark Owen is the president and chief executive of the Salem Bank and Trust, an independent bank that has just opened in Salem, Va. He has been in banking in the Roanoke valley for the past ten years and has been active in the local alumni chapter.

Diane Rassiga Herrmann has been named Director of the Federal Women's Program for the Civil Service Commission. She had been acting director since August of 1977. She will head the Government-wide program designed to broaden employment and advancement opportunities for women in all aspects of federal employment. She has had much experience with the IRS. The Department of Treasury awarded her a Certificate of Appreciation in 1974, and the IRS awarded her a Special Act Award in 1975. In 1977 she was named to the Outstanding Young Women of America.

Darryl Muir is a territory manager for the Shell Oil Company, administering the sales and service of petroleum products in the Phoenix area for the past five years.

Last year, Paul Lipani moved with his wife and three daughters to a new home in High Bridge, N.J. Tom Ewig and wife Ann and their son and two daughters are enjoying life in N.J. as well. Tom occupies his time with his shipping and import/export interests, while Ann has been elected to the Board of Kent Place School.

Barbara McDermott Owens is teaching chemistry at North Clayton Senior High School in College Park, Ga.

Mary Ann Dalton Repass is involved with volunteer work sponsored by the Parent Advisory Board of her daughters' school and works as a part-time health aide at a junior high school. Her husband is employed with NASA in Greenbelt, Md.

Janet Thurman Murphy lives in West Hartford, Ct., where she is vice president of the Parent-Teacher Organization and president of the Pi Beta Phi Alumnae Club. Her husband Bob is a manager at Arthur Andersen and Co.

69 Bob Day is continuing a career in two-year college administration. He is currently Acting Associate Dean of Instruction at Midlands Technical College, Belton Campus, a community college in Columbia, S.C. Bob is also compiling an extensive genealogy in hopes of publishing his family's history.

Dr. Richard O'Neil has published articles on ethical issues in medicine and biology and attended an eight-week NEH seminar at Indiana University focusing on bioethics. Rick is an assistant professor of philosophy at Emory and Henry University.

The charter meeting of the Northern Virginia Alumni Association was conducted in May in Alexandria and proved to be a huge success with approximately 500 in attendance. It was great to see many classmates and it was a good opportunity for me to pick up the following information: Bob Howell is an attorney in Fairfax and, in fact, displayed his excellent legal capabilities by explaining the by-laws of the Alumni Association to the membership present. Bob Kelly is the Southeast District Manager of Intel Corporation in Falls Church. Bob and his wife Barbara live in Springfield and enjoy a great deal of sailing in Annapolis on their 33-foot Irwin. Denis Lane is with the Corporation Counsel's Office in Washington and lives in Alexandria. Bruce and Nancy Hulse Oliver are both teachers in Fairfax County and their son Matthew will celebrate his first birthday this fall. Dick Knight is an attorney in Arlington. Bob Brown is the editor of a legislative publication. Living in Fairfax are Tim and Karen Arnold McPherson and their son and daughter. Tim is a lawyer and Karen has just completed her Ph.D. Also present at the Chapter meeting were Steve Cochran, who has his own law firm, and his wife Irene.

Sarajane Auman Wagner writes that her husband Dick was transferred in June by IBM to France for two or three years and that they are enjoying life on the Riviera. The Wagners' daughters are one and four and the older is attending a French school and will soon be fluent in French. Sarajane commented that she's glad that her six years of French are not going to be wasted!

Starring in numerous network commercials is Stan Wojno. I had the exciting pleasure of seeing him on T.V. in a Tuborg commercial in April. Stan is also performing in several television series.

Michael and Marty McGuire Keating vacationed for the month of July in South Dartmouth, Mass. Little Michael celebrated his first birthday last summer and Marty is planning on starting a part-time job in the fall.

David and Lynn Andrew Ellenson have moved from New York City to Boston, where Lynn began graduate school at Simmons College in September. David and Lynn have two children, Ruth and Mikah.

Nancy Crowther Price writes that she married James Price, Utah State '69, in February 1975. At that time, she was working for Computer Sciences Corporation at a Navy base in Norfolk and Jim was a computer analyst with the City of Portsmouth. After taking advantage of Nancy's business trips to Germany, Hawaii and Florida, the Prices moved to Washington, D.C. Jim joined Computer Sciences Corporation and they both worked at the Navy Yard. Since city life didn't agree with the Prices, they bought an old farm house and some land near Camp David, where they escaped to become weekend farmers. Not satisfied with just weekends, in Oct. '77 Nancy and Jim bought a house near Harpers Ferry and commuted to work on the train. In Jan '78, Jim accepted a position with the Department of Navy in Arlington and, in May, Nancy took a leave of absence and, a week later, had a baby boy, James Bradford!

Present at the spring meeting of the Cincinnati Alumni Chapter in April were Bob Works and his wife Ann.

David Kinsfather completed his Ph.D. at Ole Miss in August '77, and was appointed Chairman of the Department of Journalism and Broadcasting at Mississippi University for Women, Columbus, Miss. David's wife, Nancy Scrogam '71, works in the business office of the Golden Triangle Regional Medical Center.

After three years in Germany, Richard Sills returned to the States to attend five weeks at Fort Rucker, Alabama, and then on to Fort Hood, Tex., where he was assigned to the 6th Air Cavalry Brigade.

Peter Schleif returned in Jan '78 from a two-year assignment in London and is back with Chase Manhattan's International Planning Department Planning Staff in New York City.

Deborah Thompson Bucknard writes that she has just completed two hectic years at Vermont Law School - commuting 70 miles daily plus taking care of two daughters, with a lot of help from her terrific husband, she adds. In the spring, she was selected to represent Vermont on their National Moot Court Team and will compete against other Northeast law schools in November in Boston.

Carolyn Koehler Offutt writes that she married Bill Offutt in 1970 and, after a year of Army life in Killeen, Tex., they returned to Williamsburg. Bill completed law school at William and Mary and Carolyn worked at the Virginia Institute for Marine Science in Gloucester Point and then later worked in the William and Mary Development Office. Since 1973, when the Offutts moved to Arlington, Va. (hometown for Carolyn and Bill), Carolyn has worked as a chemist for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in ocean pollution control and is now in the Office of Pesticide Programs. In 1977, Carolyn received a M.S.C.E. in Urban Environmental Engineering from George Washington University. Bill has been a tax accountant with Price Waterhouse in Washington since 1973. The Offutts mentioned that they have kept in touch with Herb and Sharry Yager Hibshmann and their sons, Guy and Carl, in Myerstown, Pa., and Franklin and Pat Verhine Belote in Newport News, Va.

Wynne Whitehurst has kindly forwarded the Chi O newsletter -- half of which I will share with you now, and the remainder I will save for the next issue. As for Wynne, she's as busy as ever at Xerox. Wynne reports that it's interesting, but super time-consuming. She planned to begin her MBA at George Washington in the fall. Wynne and her mother took the William and Mary Alumni trip to Bermuda last March.

Congratulations to Eddie and Mary Ruth Price Oates on the birth of Mark Edward on May 26th. Little Mark could not wait to get to the hospital, so proud Dad delivered him in the car on the top of Massanutten Mountain! All went perfectly and Eddie is back teaching while Mary Ruth is home with Cori and Mark.

Bill and Judy Gordon Mentlik's first child was born in March 1977. The Mentliks are in New Jersey where Bill is a patent attorney and Judy is in the stained glass business.

Serving as Director of Employment Development and Training at AT&T is Toni Biordi. She is responsible for the training programs for approximately 5,000 non-management employees. Toni is planning to return to grad school on a part-time basis to complete her EdD in counseling adults, specifically in pre-retirement counseling.

Congratulations to Bob and Linda Freeman Holmes on the birth of their first child, Wesley, in December '76.

Anne Nelms Mills' husband, Robert, recently completed his degree in Cinema Arts. Robert is working in the Hollywood area and Anne is doing quite well with IBM.

Kathy Friedman Bright is working part-time while her husband Tom is working for Congressman Cohen, who will be running for the Senate this year.

Glenn and Jan Ernstmeyer Brodie have moved again in California: Glenn is at sea and Jan is hoping to do her internship in counseling while Glenn is away.

Living in Evanston, Ind., are Eddy and Sharon Reeder Derringer. Eddy owns a Mayflower moving van franchise. Sharon is serving as Chairwoman of the 1978 Indiana Junior Executive Conference for Savings and Loans.

Johnny and Janet Tabor Ellis have bought a house in Virginia Beach.

Living in Chicago are Peter and Stacy Shearer Frantz. They are travelling quite a bit, between Stacy's job with Delta and Pete's job as a government bond trader with the First Bank of Chicago. They have been to the Orient and to England within the last year.

Gayle Harper is happily pursuing her creative endeavors in writing and acting.

Sal and Lydia Bulynko Jeseule have purchased an old home and have been spending lots of time working on it. Sal is an attorney and Lydia is with the Juvenile Division of Probation.

Living in California are Bob and Judy Chase Kahn. Bob has opened his own civil practice in Hayward and Judy is teaching in Alameda County.

Randy and Ellen Cooper Mathena and their two children, Mark and Amy, are residing in Blacksburg. Ellen is active in church work and is working part-time at VPI.

Living in Columbia, Md., are Larry and Gale Dehn Paisley and their children, Lisa and Jonathan. Larry is with the Marriott Corporation.

Carolyn Parker completed a para-legal course in Atlanta and was planning to begin looking for a position in that field last spring.

Edwin and Anne Brisebois Elliott have returned to Virginia, where Edwin will be working at the Manassas Presbyterian Church and will be responsible for establishing a communications center. Anne will be awaiting baby number two. Edwin and Anne report that daughter Laura is looking forward to getting to know all of her Elliott and Brisebois relatives.

From Atlanta, Mary Chris Schmitz Williams has passed on the yearly KD newsletter. Space does not permit including all the news, so I'll save some for the next issue. Mary Chris is in her third year as Standards and Education Coordinator with Coca-Cola USA and is balancing her time now between writing standards, running the data processing training programs, and managing a word processing group. Hal is with Hewlett-Packard. Hal and Mary Chris are expecting their first child in early January.

Sally Barner reports she had a fantastic year while being on sabbatical from Indian River Community College. She spent the year in Amherst, Mass., at the University of Mass. studying for her MS in sports management. After an internship in July and August, where Sally assisted in the management of a tennis resort in St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, she returned this fall to the collegiate scene in Florida.

Still in Dallas and working as a reference librarian at SMU, Nancy Beachley Newins has primary responsibility for developing a library instruction program for undergraduate and graduate students. Nancy and her husband Bob have enjoyed recent vacations to Acapulco, Virginia, Connecticut, Bermuda, and Seattle, Wash.

De Garber Stevenson has retired from teaching in preparation for assuming the role of a full-time wife and mother. De and Neil are expecting their first child in early October.

Congratulations to Jerry and Kathy Jordan Jebo on the birth of their second daughter, Emily, on December 13th. Jerry's law partner, John Dalton, was elected governor in November, which meant the Jebos enjoyed being included in all the inaugural activities in Richmond.

Doug, Peter and I are still in Old Town Alexandria. I am busily selling real estate with Manarin Olde and Rector Realtors and Doug is President of Performance Systems, Incorporated. Peter is three and is in nursery school. We enjoyed two weeks in England and Scotland in June.

Thanks for all the good news this time. Please let me hear from more of you!

71 "Had a great summer touring Canada," writes Brian Festa. One problem: Brian had a bit of difficulty communicating and it wasn't because of his rusty French. He was hit in the mouth by a softball earlier in the summer and his jaw was wired shut through Labor Day. Festa recently stopped in Washington long enough to listen to his favorite Froggy shows from the WCWM Archives. And Froggy himself, Mike Campana, and wife Trish '70, also spent a week in the Washington area this summer on a trip east from their home in Reno.

The "where are they now dept." is beginning to pay off. Jamie Cowles writes: "In 1974 I started following a spiritual leader in New Mexico--meditation, yoga, mind control, etc.--and cut off all contact with my past. Having spent a couple of years with this group, I finally left after going through the est experience." Jamie is now living in Madison, Wis., and working in the field of solar energy. He wants to hear from old friends at P.O. Box 1391, Madison, Wis. 53701.

Suzanne Streagle Haase is now living in New Haven, Conn., where husband Steve is employed at Yale. Reg Bedell is a realtor at Incline Village on Lake Tahoe and an active marathoner. Gail Price is now in Africa as head of the Department of Psychology and Infant Education at the Ahfad University College for Women in Omdurman, Sudan. She is a volunteer for International Voluntary Services, a private, non-profit Washington agency. Gail received her doctorate from South Carolina and spent last year as an intern at the VA Hospital in Palo Alto, Calif. Down in Secretariat country, Donna Gilman is a manager and trainer at the famous Eagle Point Farm in Hanover County, Va. She left William and Mary in 1969 to manage the family farm when her father had a stroke. Eagle Point currently has 40 horses.

Larry Durett is in his second year as associate pastor at Haygood United Methodist Church in Virginia Beach, where he specializes in hymn sings. Larry says he is keeping up with his guitar, tennis and canoeing. At Syracuse University, Cynthia Cave has received an $8,000 fellowship to support her research into the "impact of public personnel policies on local government budgets." Cynthia is working toward her PhD while serving as Vice President of the Central New York Chapter of the American Society of Public Administration.

Margaret Martin O'Bryant is finishing up her first year as Interlibrary Loan Librarian at the University of Virginia.

Bob Nay has been climbing the ladder of success at the Virginian Pilot-Ledger Star newspapers. He's currently advertising manager of the Portsmouth, Chesapeake and Suffolk offices. This summer, he started work on an MBA from William and Mary. Bob writes that Ed Tomeck is a banker in Scotia, N.Y., married, with a young daughter ("Personally, I never trusted him with women or money"). In Franklin, Va., Les Powell has set up a general practice and Steve Demchyk is married with one son and another child on the way next month.

Nancy Sievert Lawless has moved from Maryland to Glen Rock, N.J., and retired from teaching. ("Husband Co-pilot for Braniff out of Big Apple airports.") Another teaching retiree (are we getting that old?) is Marcella Morgan after 5½ years of Spanish and French in Palatka, Fla. After several globetrotting summers, including three trips to Europe, she has settled into her second marriage, has one daughter with another child expected this fall. Marcella says she enjoys being "a mother, doing church work, playing bridge, and helping the Democratic Women's Club." She even dabbled in dance classes for a while but quit because "pregnant women don't look too hot in leotards."

"We are police from downtown!" With that cryptic remark your intrepid reporter was surrounded by plainclothesmen at Santo Domingo "International" Airport this summer. They were dressed like Steve Martin's "wild and cr-a-a-zy guy" and obviously felt that they had ferreted out a major drug dealer. I was led to a dingy search room. "We are looking for this," one said as he motioned to a wall chart with pictures of everything from hypodermic needles to what looked like Ex Lax. After I was judged harmless, they released me to endure two days of siege by money-changers, urchins, beggars and "guides" in the Dominican Republic capital. But this was the only low point on an Eastern Airlines unlimited mileage junket I took this summer. I hope your last few months have been equally adventurous. Write and let us hear about it.

Fifth Reunion
October 14-15, 1978

73 I've got quite an assortment of news that's come in since my last column in May. I'm sure some of it probably isn't current, but I'm going to include it all with apologies for anything that's a little stale.

From Fairbanks, Alaska, Elaine Wack Becker wrote to say that she doubts if she and John '72, will make it to Homecoming, but that they'd like to let their friends know where they are and what they're up to. They are currently stationed in the 49th state where John serves as a physician with the Alaska native health service. Elaine is exploring research possibilities in the field of various ethnic populations in a variety of educational and clinical settings. Currently in pre-med studies at the University of Alaska, she is also collaborating with a former colleague from Portsmouth Psychiatric Center for a publication based on their casework and lectures.

I'm trying to get an up-to-date name and address listing of '73'ers for answering any of the inquiries I receive. In the meantime, John Pagan, please write to Dave Johnson '74, at 5 Cheney Dr., Storrs, Ct. 06268, and let him know where you are.

A nice news letter from Kathleen Price McCarthy arrived just after I'd sent in my last column. Living in Sebastian, Fla., Kathleen and her husband Will are the parents of a 2½-year-old son, Daniel Patrick, who is the high point of their lives. Kathleen and Will have both left teaching. She is an administrative assistant to the head officer in the trust department of Florida First National Bank, while Will works for the city of Vero Beach as a recreation supervisor in the Recreation Department. They've both become avid Floridians, addicted to the wonderful weather and active in many sports including Will's new love, Jai-Alai. Kathleen and Will extend an invitation to any friends to stop by during their Florida travels. They're planning to make it to Homecoming, so you can catch them then and make arrangements for stopping by.

In other news, Kathleen writes that Bruce and Joan Spiegel Wachter are also in Vero Beach where both are teaching in a local private school. Their little girl, Carrie Ashford, was born August 24, 1978.

Mary Virginia Daniel has finished her Master's degree in Hospital Administration at MCV and was job hunting at last report.

I received the sad news that Susan Vanderlindé's husband, Gary Bove, died of cancer in July. Susan is currently in her third year of law school at Buffalo and spent the summer working for a large corporate law firm in Pittsburgh.

Adrienne Weinberger Schuette is living in Billerica, Ma., where she is Assistant Director of Annual Giving at Boston University. Her husband Herb is an assistant professor in the school of management.

Polly Jones is a foreign service officer with the U.S. State Department and has been assigned to an economic post in Lima, Peru, where she will be for two years.

Jeanne Dunman Koehler was married last November and is now teaching and working toward a Ph.D. at the University of Louisville, where her husband Steve is a computer applications specialist.

Working as a manufacturer's representative in Birmingham, Mich., Sue Mincks was

"We want William and Mary to be better tomorrow than it is today. But this won't happen without your help."

"The day is long past when a few individuals, no matter how dedicated they are, can provide the support and the direction that a university needs," says Thomas A. Graves, Jr., William and Mary's president. "The future of today's university rests not only in the hands of the President, the faculty, or the Board of Visitors, but in the hands of many more. If William and Mary is one of the fortunate universities which is destined to remain first-rate, in all respects, it will be because we have thousands of friends, near and far, who care about what our future will be."

This fall, President Graves is attending special alumni meetings across the country, not just to talk, but to listen. He'll listen to what alumni think and feel about William and Mary. It's important to know.

"We feel that as each day passes, William and Mary becomes a little more in a class by itself," says President Graves, "not because we do everything better than anyone else, but because our whole approach to learning is becoming more and more rare in today's turbulent world of education. How many other state institutions have been able to stay relatively small, with an eye toward quality and a personal approach to learning?"

Quality is indeed the focus of almost every conversation the president has with alumni across the nation. "We don't try to follow trends," he says. "Our job at William and Mary is to set standards, not trends. We encourage our faculty and students to create new ideas, to test old theories, to be willing to make mistakes. It sounds like a grandiose scheme, but I honestly believe that many students leave the College thinking they can change the world, not just be successful in it."

Leaders of tomorrow are difficult to spot. They're not always the straight-A students who are preparing for law school, or the pre-med students who spend hours in the biology lab. "I look for a young man or woman who is sensitive to the needs of others, someone who can work hard for what he or she believes in without losing sight of the opinions of his or her peers. If we're not educating individuals who possess this sensitivity, this special ability to survive and to prosper in almost any environment, then we're just not doing our job," says Graves.

"In the future, I believe our special niche in education will become even more important, more vital to the welfare of the state and the nation," says Graves. "I can look at our alumni in important and meaningful positions in almost every field and tell we've been doing something right.

"We're asking our alumni now to evaluate the job we've been doing, to tell us they believe in what William and Mary stands for. And we're not too proud to ask for help, to ask for stronger support in the years to come."

Because more than ever, we need it.

The Year of the Alumni recently a guest speaker for "Women's Forum" at the ISSA National Convention.

Carol Richardson Link is working at a residential treatment center for adolescents after finishing her Master's in social work. She and her husband Al have been in Auburn, Ala., for 2½ years, where he is teaching in the economics department at Auburn University.

I came across a letter I received some time ago from John Wiltbank, who's teaching at Naples Christian Academy in Naples, Fla. My apologies for not including his news sooner. John stays quite busy teaching English full time, leading a small Drama Club, and also trying to learn to produce educational audio-visuals, but he's still willing to host old friends for Florida vacations. Jeff Shonert, please contact John at 200 Cajeput Dr., Naples, Florida 33940.

Matt Asai wrote while he was attending the quartermaster officer advanced course at Ft. Lee. He was anticipating being assigned to Rock Island Army Depot in Illinois after completing several courses at Ft. Lee.

After receiving an M.B.A. from Emory University in June, Richard Hartje began working with Westvaco in Wickliffe, Ky.

Hazel Jeannette Heddings completed med school at UVA after leaving William and Mary and is now in her first year of residency in family medicine in Rochester, N.Y.

Buzz Ashmore and wife Molly were among those at last spring's meeting of the Cincinnati Alumni Chapter.

I've been working for Sperry Univac since last May as a systems analyst in their Business Systems Marketing Division, and really enjoy the work. We've bought a house in Columbia, Md., and we are currently in the process of moving. I'd forgotten what a job that can be.

75 When this copy of The Alumni Gazette reaches you, Homecoming will be near, so I'll begin with an invitation from Barb Ramsey, who has planned her "Second Annual Homecoming Party" for October 13 (Friday) at 9:00 p.m. Barb asks only that you "BYOB" -- she'll provide the snacks. All members of the Class of 1975 are invited and, from all reports, there was a large turnout last year. Her address is 408 Griffin Street and, hopefully, many of you will be able to attend.

Barb also sent news -- she's spent a great deal of time this summer working on her house and garden. Her job as a sales representative requires extensive travel, which Barb enjoys very much.

From north of Williamsburg comes new of David Hill, who has worked since graduation for Janney, Montgomery, Scott, a brokerage firm. David is now in his last year of the Wharton Graduate Division's MBA program, where he is concentrating in finance. According to David, he'll be at Homecoming this year.

In New York, Michael Lidwin is working for Pan Am, a company whose travel benefits have enabled him to visit Florida, Texas, and Rio de Janeiro this summer. Michael also travelled to Richmond, where he visited classmate Chris Kolbe, who was home for the summer. Chris is working on a graduate degree in applied history at the University of South Carolina.

Linn Donat Glisson and her husband Andrew moved from Norfolk to Manassas during the summer. Andrew graduated from ODU in December and is now with IBM in Manassas. Linn was a computer programmer for the Atlantic Fleet Data Processing Service Center in Norfolk and is now job-hunting near her new home. She and Happy Gretsck Copley were bridesmaids for Terri Bartlett this summer. Terri and Mark Osborne were married August 12 in Newport News.

Derek Swope graduated from Washington and Lee University's Law School in May and is now working in West Virginia.

Michelle Whitehurst Cook sent news of Judith Collins, who was graduated from the Bowman Gray School of Business - Babcock in 1977. Judith received an MBA.

Kathleen Moriarity is a para-legal in real estate for a law firm in Fairfax, Va.

Keith Johnston graduated in May from Dickinson School of Law in Pennsylvania.

For history buffs, Dickinson is the oldest law school in Pennsylvania and the only one that is neither state-related nor college- or university-affiliated.

Gary Torrence joined the staff of the Boars Head Inn in Charlottesville in 1977 as the dining room supervisor, but has recently been promoted to assistant food and beverage director, and director of service.

Peggy Lawlor has begun her duties as Assistant Commonwealth Attorney for the City of Virginia Beach. She is a graduate of T.C. Williams School of Law.

Mary Lou Giermak is also a graduate of T.C. Williams and she is now an Assistant City Attorney for the City of Norfolk.

David Lesser was another spring graduate -- he received his MEd from Rutgers University.

Brian Yanofchick has been ordained to the diaconate of the Catholic Diocese of Richmond. He has completed work for a Master's in Theology at Catholic University, Washington, D.C.

Steve Hancock has returned from a six-month deployment to the North Atlantic as part of a multinational NATO squadron. He was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant (jg) and has assumed the duties of navigator aboard a small combatant homeported in Norfolk.

"Three years after graduation finds me still in my hometown," writes Bonnie Schultz from Harrisonburg. She reports that she is "constantly on the lookout for opportunities to move to bigger and wider horizons." For the past year, Bonnie has been a secretary for an air-conditioning manufacturing company in Harrisonburg, and she recently moved from a rented basement to her first apartment of "any decent size and comfort." Her William and Mary friends are invited to contact Bonnie at 242 Paul St., Apt. 1, Harrisonburg, Va. 22801. She would especially like to hear from Al Horton '74, Gail Sealey, Susan Anderson '76, and the trio of Linda, Shirley, and Marilyn.

Out in Boulder, Colo., Richard Stimpfle is working on his PhD in physical chemistry.

Members of the Class of 1975 attending the spring meeting of the Cincinnati Chapter of the Society of the Alumni included Tom Waechter and his wife Nancy, Mark Miars, and Steve Charbot and his wife Nancy.

Rick Pawlewicz received a Master's degree from Hofstra and also coached a club football team there. He is now with Manufacturers Hanover in New York City.

Since Barbara McCulloh received her MA in Theatre from the University of Maryland a year ago, she has been directing, choreographing, and performing in a long-running Washington musical revue called "Cabaret Tonight." She invites anyone visiting in the D.C. area to stop by to see her, any Tuesday through Saturday, at the International Inn, 10 Thomas Circle, N.W.

Charles Gill writes that since graduation he has married Della Akers Gill and moved to the Boston-Cambridge area. He is now completing a Master's degree at the Episcopal Divinity School in Cambridge and looks forward to ordination into the ministry in the near future. According to Charles, though he and his wife like New England--especially the coast of Maine--they hope to settle back in Virginia.

Teresa Leigh Gilbert and Peter Turner were married in November, 1977, and are now stationed at Rheinmain Air Base, Germany. Peter is a sergeant in the Air Force and Teresa is an Airman First Class, serving as a telecommunications systems control specialist.

Craig Penner writes that Louanne Cole and Dan Ozer are also still enjoying life in the San Francisco Bay area. After two and one-half years of "playing and working at a variety of jobs," Craig is attending graduate school at the University of California at Santa Barbara, where he is working on a Master's in Counseling Psychology. Craig would welcome visitors -- his address is 4687 Atasco Drive, Santa Barbara, Calif. 93110.

Nat Hamner and his wife Nancy '74, moved to Manhattan in May. Both work for American Express--Nancy as a pricing analyst for the traveller's check division and Nat in marketing/advertising/sales for American Express coast-to-coast. Nat began his career with the firm in Richmond, where he and Nancy spent the winter restoring an old townhouse in Richmond's Fan district, only to be transferred to New York! They were assisted in their restoration work by Jim and Mary Theobald, both members of the Class of 1974.

I'm sorry that this column is a bit short, but that's all the news I received this summer. There should be another questionnaire in the mail to you soon, but in the meantime, please write with any available news. This year, I definitely plan to be at Homecoming. Hope many class members will be there, too!

Mrs. David L. Satterwhite
(Cindy Bennett)

77 Note the new name and address. On May 27, 1978, I married David Satterwhite '75. We are settled into our townhouse in Richmond and looking forward to your letters chasing away the cobwebs in our mail box.

It is hard to believe we will be celebrating our second Homecoming this month as alumni. Everyone has spread out so since we graduated. I hope as many of you as possible will make it to the 'Burg. I can't wait to see everybody.

Noli Mowry writes from Germany that she is still over there on a Fulbright Scholarship. She adds that the fall will probably find her back in the States working on an M.A. in German. Has anyone heard whether she is back?

Talent in our class is finally showing up. Elizabeth Forrest spent the summer with the professional summer acting company of The Mule Barn Theatre of Tarkio College in Tarkio, Mo. She had parts in all four of the production's musicals, including "Annie Get Your Gun," "The Sound of Music," "Can, Can," and "Camelot."

Missouri is also benefiting from the skill of Susi Acha. She says "Howdy!" from Columbia, where she is working on her Master's degree in veterinary microbiology and doing research on rabies. She writes that W&M's Cows on the Campus can't compare with the runaway bulls on the University of Missouri campus. Susi adds that while she's getting to see a different part of the country, she wishes someone would "carry her back to old Virginny!"

Paul Simonpietri has enrolled in the American Graduate School of International Management in Glendale, Ariz. Sounds like a super place to study. Further west, Bruce Schardt is presently a graduate student in chemistry at the University of California, Berkeley.

How many of you are attending the alumni meetings in your area? You might be surprised when a fellow classmate turns up living in your area. Write me and I'll let you know who to contact in your area concerning the alumni get-togethers. Kathy Brown attended the spring meeting of the Cincinnati Alumni Chapter on April 23, 1978.

The Sunshine State is now home for some of our classmates. Andrew Herzog has graduated from the Navy's Aviation In-doctrination Course in Pensacola, Fla. He is a Second Lieutenant in the Marine Corps. Bruce Akey lives near Orlando and is doing pesticide research at the University of Florida.

In Durham, N.C., Malcolm Coate has completed his Master's degree in economics at Duke University. He began work on his doctorate at Duke this fall. Susan Anthony successfully completed the Lawyer's Assistant Program of The National Center for Paralegal Training in Atlanta, Ga. She is now employed by Moore & Van Allen in Charlotte, N.C.

Eileen Walling, a Second Lieutenant in the U.S. Air Force, has graduated from the Communications Systems Officer course at Keesler AFB in Mississippi. She is now qualified to supervise the maintenance of teletype and cryptographic communications operations and is being assigned to Watertown Air Force State in New York for duty with the Aerospace Defense Command.

Elliott Landers writes from Pittsburgh, Pa., where he is attending Carnegie-Mellon University. He is a candidate for an M.S. in Chemical Engineering. Kay Wellener spent the summer as an intern with the Citibank of New York. She returned to U.Va. in the fall, where she is working on her M.B.A. Also in New York City are Jessica Kersey and Darien Shirley. Jessica is employed by Simon & Schuster.

The world of politics has attracted two more of our classmates. Janet Moscicki has been employed by the Democratic National Committee in Washington, D.C. While she started with the Field Operations Division, Janet is now working for Chairman John White.

Last fall, Chip Mann joined then-candidate John Dalton's campaign staff as an aide. After the election he worked for his inaugural committee. He then joined the staff of former Governor Linwood Holton serving as an aide and advance man.

Chip adds that he is truly excited about his appointment to the Board of Visitors. He wrote that while the responsibilities are many, all of his fellow Board members have expressed the feeling that it is extremely gratifying service. "I feel though," states Chip, "that we can't do it alone--and that input from fellow alumni on policies of the College would be very helpful (especially from my friends in the Class of '77)." He requests that everyone write him in care of the President's Office to let him and the Board know how they feel.

Congratulations to Joan Harrison and Rolen Burnette who were married May 20, 1978, in Roanoke, Va. Rolen is now working for Allstate Insurance as an Office Operations Supervisor in Roanoke. Joan is employed by American National Bank as a Management Trainee.

Helen Price is living in Arlington and working for the U.S. Department of Justice as a paralegalist.

After spending last year doing graduate work in clinical chemistry at Old Dominion University, Lynn Sloane is currently attending Eastern Virginia Medical School in Norfolk. She writes that Michael Moore and John and Carolyn Brineman all finished their first year at the medical school. John and Carolyn were featured in a Times-Herald (Newport News) article about what it is like for a couple together in medical school.

Nearby in Hampton, Susan Mingee has found employment with the city schools. She is teaching a first-grade class at Merrimack Elementary. Robin Goodloe spent the summer working in Nags Head, but now has returned to teaching in Hampton. Kitty Dichtel is still living in Newport News. Since December she has been working at Ft. Eustis with the Supply Division.

Michael Henderson is now enrolled at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond, as is Liz York. Lisa Flexer just moved to Richmond from Philadelphia. She is starting graduate work in counseling psychology at Virginia Commonwealth University. Anne Ward is working for First & Merchants Bank in Richmond for their legal department. She is also taking classes at V.C.U. Dave Forrest is in dental school at M.C.V.

Summer brought wedding bells for several members of our class. Ellen Moore married John Walk and they are now settled in Richmond. On June 17, 1978, Shelley Rubenking was married to Stan Rockwell '76, in the Williamsburg Methodist Church. They are living in Williamsburg. In her hometown near Bowie, Md., Melita Love married Tim Melester '76, on June 24, 1978. Charlottesville, Va., is now their home, where Tim is attending medical school. Ben Smith married Nancy Singer '78, on May 18, 1978, in Bruton Parish Church. They moved to Richmond this summer from Williamsburg. More recently, Debbie McCracken married David Rebeck in Wyoming, Ohio, on September 30, 1978. Best wishes and congratulations to all of you!

1973 LAW SCHOOL CLASS MEETS FOR FIVE YEAR REUNION AT HOMECOMING, OCTOBER 14, 1978

Martin E. Walsh '73, is heading up the 5-year reunion for the law school graduates of 1973. A reception is scheduled for the Williamsburg Room at the Hospitality House on the evenings of Friday and Saturday, October 13 and 14, 1978. Mr. Walsh, who prefers "Art," is now practicing law with the firm of Herrell, Campbell & Lawson in Arlington, Va., and reports that the response to the 5-year reunion effort has been gratifying. Information obtained from the responses on our 1973 law graduates is provided for your enjoyment.

Thomas F. Maxwell, Jr., is practicing law in San Francisco with the firm of O'Gara, Friedman, Egenes & Burke. Mark W. Korotash is practicing law in Danbury, Conn., with the firm of Fulvey & Korotash. He has promised to bring the Northeast contingent of law graduates to Williamsburg for the reunion. John F. Tuozzolo also practices law in Danbury with the firm of Jaber & Tuozzolo.

Larry A. Martin has promised to attend, and well he should. He is practicing law in Williamsburg. D. Scott Curzi is practicing law in Phillipsburg, N.J., and took advantage of Art's letter of invitation to the reunion by responding that he would come and also requesting that Art assist him in obtaining service on a man in McLean, Va. Business - Business - Business!

John D. Hooker, Jr., is practicing law in Virginia Beach, Va., and Richard B. Gustafson is practicing law in Bay City, Mich., with the firm of Skinner & Gustafson. In Richmond, Va., we have Thomas H. Robins, practicing law in association with two other attorneys, as well as Thomas W. Wright, who practices law with the firm of Obenshain, Hinnant, Dolbear & Beale. Stephan J. Boardman will attend and he is practicing law in Washington, D.C., with the firm of Arent, Fox, Kintner, Plotkin & Kahn. Thomas R. Frantz is practicing law in Virginia Beach with the firm of Clark, Hofheimer & Stant and must share this territory with Michael A. Inman, who is practicing law with the firm of Holladay, Inman & Olivieri.

Edward A. Miller is working for the legislature in Montpelier, Vt., and is looking forward to the reunion to return to the Old South and hear a few drawls and drink a few mint juleps. T. Thomas Van Dam is practicing law in Hackensack, N.J., with the firm of Winne, Banta, Rizzi & Harrington. Paul W. McElhinney is practicing law in Sanford, Me., in the partnership of McElhinney & Scaccia and they also have a branch office in the town of Waterboro, Me., about 15 miles outside of Sanford. Robert R. White is also planning to attend the practices law in Lowell, Mass.

In the Norfolk area of Virginia, we have Jerry Huffman practicing law with Anderson, Hubbard and Huffman, as well as John M. Peterson JD '72, and ML&T '73, who is a partner in the law firm of Baskett & Peterson. John has been teaching the Qualified Retirement Plans course at Marshall-Wythe since 1976. Lawrence L. Bruckner will be unable to attend, but sends his regards to everyone. He is practicing law in Dixon, Ill.

John Ward Bane is practicing law with J. Robert Harris III, in Hampton, Va., and must have to deal with Sally Jane Andrews, who is the Assistant City Attorney for Hampton. David A. Smith is with the firm of Gerard, Moehle & Smith, P.C., in Oregon, Ill., and Larry E. Soloman is in Tampa, Fla., with the firm of Kaas & Solomon. Larry reports that he was in Williamsburg at the Inn recently and had the opportunity to play golf at the Horseshoe. It is alleged that he observed our former Dean Whyte kicking his ball out of the water on the 18th hole. I am sure all of us realize that this is hearsay as far as this article, and I am equally sure that no opinions will be formed until more verification is obtained.

John N. Moore is looking forward to the reunion and practices law in Mayfield Heights, Ohio. And from Stafford, Va., we have heard from Rodney G. Goggin and John R. Stevens, both of whom are in the firm of Moncure & Goggin. And David S. Favre is a professor at the Detroit College of Law in Michigan. Dave will be unable to attend because of a class he is teaching on Friday evenings this fall, but sends his regards to all.

I hope to see all of you at the reunion and I congratulate Art Walsh on what appears to be a very successful endeavor.

Remember When?

There was a time when freshmen had to tip their hats when walking by the statue of Lord Botetourt, and the first-year women had to curtsy. The "duc" caps the students are wearing appeared to be glued to their heads until the traditional William and Mary - Richmond football game at Thanksgiving. If the Indians won, the freshmen celebrated by throwing the caps away, but if the Spiders were victorious, the caps were worn throughout the first semester. This photograph, vintage 1959, is included in the sight-sound presentation used at all Campaign for the College regional meetings.

Indian Basketball 1978-79

Last year William and Mary had one of its most successful basketball campaigns in decades, finishing 16-10 and capturing two major tournament titles.

The excitement of college basketball was never more in evidence than the Indians 78-75 victory over nationally ranked North Carolina before a packed and highly partisan Hall throng of 10,000.

Fans turned out in record numbers to see the Tribe throughout the year. Capacity or near capacity crowds were in attendance for the UNC, Virginia, Old Dominion, Virginia Commonwealth, and Richmond games.

The 1978-79 season offers even more great basketball at the Hall. A total of 14 home games (seven on Saturdays) featuring South Carolina, Virginia Tech, Old Dominion, Virginia, Navy, East Carolina, and James Madison are on tap.

ROCKINGHAM
Smoked Turkeys

These smoked Rockingham turkeys come ready to carve and eat--an unsurpassed contribution to an American tradition in Thanksgiving and Christmas holiday eating. With their unique flavor and savory delicacy attained by an old process of spicing and hickory smoking, and their ready to serve convenience, these turkeys make a thoughtful and appropriate holiday gift to the most discriminating friend or food connoisseur. In addition to serving as a never forgotten main entree, every ounce may be used to bring new and different flavors to hors d'oeuvres, sandwiches, creamed dishes and soups. Weights range from 10 to 16 pounds. Weighed after smoking.

PRICE: $2.50 LB.
POSTAGE $4.50 PER TURKEY

Genuine Smithfield Hams

It is said that a cousin of Captain John Smith, along with several neighboring planters, laid the foundations of the early export business in Smithfield Hams. Since 1752, they have been on the board of the reigning English Sovereigns.

World-famous Smithfield ham is undoubtedly Virginia's supreme contribution to the art of fine eating. Carefully selected from peanutfed pedigreed porkers, these hams are meticulously cured through a treasured centuries old plantation process that takes one year or longer to complete. Slowly smoked over smoldering applewood, hickory and oak and finally baked in wine, these baked hams come gift wrapped; ready to carve and serve. These distinctive Smithfield flavored hams also may be purchased raw, with complete instructions for cooking. Either baked or raw, these hams require no refrigeration and may be shipped anywhere. Cooked hams range from 8 to 12 pounds; raw from 10 to 16 pounds.

BAKED HAMS: $4.25 LB. RAW HAMS: $3.25 LB. POSTAGE $4.50 PER HAM

For the most delectable holiday tables, depend upon "Fine Virginia Foods"

For over thirty years Mr. James Glenn Driver, '09, maintained a selective mail order business for a discriminating clientele interested in some of the fine foods for which the Old Dominion is so justly famous.

Upon his death in the fall of 1975, Mr. Driver bequeathed his business "James G. Driver, Fine Virginia Foods," to the Society of the Alumni. The Society is pleased to now be able to extend to all alumni of the College of William and Mary the opportunity to enjoy these personally selected and recommended fine Virginia foods, prepared from time-tested traditional colonial recipes.

Salt Roe Herring

A Virginia delicacy taken fresh from the Rappahannock, this roe herring is salted down and seasoned by a time-tested recipe and allowed to cure for at least six months. Selected and graded, large only with roe left in. Cooking instructions with each keg of herring.

PRICE: $8.95 PER 5LB. KEG
POSTAGE $2.50 PER KEG

Smithfield Bacon

Here is a delightfully different bacon with that smoky distinctive Smithfield flavor which gives it a unique taste. Shipped in sides to be sliced to the thickness you desire—a real breakfast treat. Cook with vegetables for a superb seasoning. Bacon slabs can be divided into one pound packages, frozen, and used as desired. Weights from 7 to 9 lbs.

PRICE: $3.00 LB.
POSTAGE $4.00 PER SLAB

Hostess Box

These beautifully packed and wrapped chests of simulated cedar in Colonial design contain two 5-oz. jars of sliced, baked Smithfield ham and three 3-oz. jars of deviled Smithfield ham. From the finest of aged hams, vacuum pack keeps them in oven-fresh condition. Perfect for an afternoon tea or cocktail party.

A gift that will please the most discriminating.

PRICE: $12.95 PER BOX
POSTAGE $2.50 PER BOX

Fine Virginia Peanuts

Ready for roasting shelled peanuts are available in 3lb and 5lb bags. Each bag is furnished with old fashioned recipes you may use in your own kitchen. These king sized peanuts prepared to your personal taste can be a trademark of your entertaining, in the best Virginia tradition.

The famous Hubs' "home cooked" salted peanuts are truly different from any others. They are crunchy and have a full rich peanut flavor brought out by a special and difficult water blanching process. They will keep in the freezer indefinitely regardless of how often the container is opened. We offer the large 46 oz. resealable can for weekend entertaining and snacks around the house.

PRICES:

5 lb bag shelled peanuts $5.00 + 1.75 postage
3 lb bag shelled peanuts $3.00 + 1.75 postage
46 oz. can of roasted peanuts $6.00 + 1.75 postage
