THE COLLEGE OF WILLIAM AND MARY

Faculty Research

It's at the Heart of the College's Liveliness and Excellence

"Our best faculty tend to be our best scholars," says Dr. David E. Kranbuehl, associate dean of the faculty of arts and sciences and director of grants and research administration at the College. "Faculty research is at the heart of the university's liveliness and level of excellence."

Kranbuehl, who helps faculty attract funding from public and private agencies for research projects and articulates the importance of research within the university, has mixed feelings about the status of research support at the College.

On the one hand, he is pleased by the rapid increase in grant money, which has approximately tripled since 1973-74, from $600,000 to over $1.5 million in 1978-79. He describes the growth as a "reflection of the increasing strength and quality of the faculty and of the liveliness of the academic atmosphere at William and Mary."

On the other hand, he is disquieted by the fact that several of William and Mary's finest professors have left the College in the past few years--lured away not only by better salaries but also by a more attractive research environment in industry, the federal government, and other universities. They include the past two chairpersons of the mathematics and computer science department, the university's foremost historian, and three outstanding physicists.

An associate professor of chemistry, Kranbuehl is acutely aware of faculty research needs. "It is especially difficult for the College to attract and retain outstanding faculty," he says, "particularly as the gap in compensation and the level of research support between the private sector and the university continues to widen."

Kranbuehl believes that to counter the trend the university needs to be more assertive in encouraging and supporting faculty research and compensation. A promising start toward achieving these needs, says Kranbuehl, was the successful $20 million Campaign for the College which raised approximately $3 million for faculty compensation. Building on that momentum, the College has now embarked on an impressive fund-raising program that can mean $2 million in new support for the humanities as a result of a successful NEH proposal which was prepared in conjunction with a group of faculty members under the direction of Kranbuehl and his assistant Kay Champion in the Office of Grants and Research.

"The vast majority of basic research in this country is done within the universities," he says,

"and the general well being of the economy, our national defense, and our quality of life depends upon it."

At William and Mary, Kranbuehl wants continued progress in at least four areas: Expansion of the semester faculty research program which enables faculty members to devote a semester pursuing independent research at full pay; expansion of resources, such as the library, which are needed to support student and faculty research at the College; expansion of the summer faculty research program, supported in part by private funds; and an increase in the number of faculty members who receive grants from public agencies, private businesses and corporations, and foundations for their research projects.

That is a big order, but to Kranbuehl there is no higher priority at the College over the next several years.

Research, such as that conducted in the laboratory of Dr. C. Richard Terman, professor of biology, plays a vital role in the teaching mission of faculty at William and Mary.

"It goes to the very heart of the academic program," he says. "It affects retention of outstanding faculty; it affects research opportunities for our students and their interrelationship with the faculty; it enhances the quality of the teaching; and it strengthens the reputation of the university."

Garrett to Lead Alumni Board

Wilde, Grant, Entwisle Assume Positions as Officers

John H. (Jack) Garrett, Jr. '40, Irvington, Va., was elected president of the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni at the semi-annual meeting in February at which the Board pledged $7,500 to Swem Library for the purchase of books and periodicals in the humanities.

The Board contribution will count toward the National Endowment for the Humanities Challenge Grant which will enable the College to receive $1 from NEH for every $3 it raises from other sources. The College has a goal of $1.5 million over the next three years. The society gift will result in a total of $10,000 for the library.

Garrett, who is beginning his second three-year term on the Board of Directors, succeeds Denys Grant '58, Richmond, who was elected treasurer. Dr. Henry D. Wilde, Jr. '53, Houston, Texas, was elected vice president, and Mrs. Marilyn Miller Entwisle '44, Meadowbrook, Pa., was elected secretary. Grant replaced Patricia King Sell '58, La Jolla, Calif., as treasurer, and Dr. Wilde succeeded Garrett as vice president. Mrs. Entwisle replaced Elaine Elias Kappel '55 as secretary. Mrs. Kappel retired from the Board after completing her second term.

The Board welcomed its lone new member, Stewart Gamage '72, Alexandria, who is associate deputy for government affairs in the office of Presidential inflation adviser Dr. Alfred E. Kahn.

In addition to the $7,500 to Swem Library, the Board contributed $1,000 to the Alumni Scholarship Endowment Fund for undergraduates and $750 to the Washington Program which takes a group of undergraduates to the nation's capital each year to visit with media and government representatives. All of the appropriated funds came from the Merchandising Program of the Society. The gift to the Washington Program is dependent upon a matching gift from the College. In addition, the Board approved financial support of up to $1,000 to the Senior Class for a graduation dance in the Sunken Garden, if the class is able to finance the rest of the project.

Grant said of the $7,500 gift to the Library that it was the board's intent that "the gift will help the Library, which is the heart of the College, during a difficult period of financial austerity."

"The gift will serve both students and faculty," he said, "and will extend to generations of future students."

Garrett added that "not only will the gift provide immediate aid to the library, but it will provide an additional $2,500 in the future to support the humanities in the undergraduate program as a result of the NEH challenge." He said bookplates on the new books purchased through the grant will reflect the gift of the Society in support of the undergraduate program.

In other business, the board recognized outgoing president Grant, as well as Mrs. Sell and Mrs.

Kappel, for their service as officers of the Society. It also ratified a pension plan for the professional staff of the Society and approved the development of a group health plan for the staff.

The various committees of the board met with several members of the College administration and faculty, including Dr. Jack D. Edwards, dean of the faculty of arts and sciences; Stanley E. Brown, acting vice president for development; Linda Reilly, dean of the undergraduate program; President Graves; Millie West, director of women's athletics; and Ben L. Carnevale, director of men's athletics.

Editor's Notebook

Though the 1980 General Assembly is not yet concluded, it has been marked by continuing support for what the College of William and Mary hopes to do.

The major capital outlay project for the College which seems on its way to funding is the major renovation of "Old" Rogers Hall as the first School of Business Administration building. Now known as Chancellors Hall, the structure was built in the early 1920s and has been modernized only slightly since. Governor Dalton recommended a $2 million appropriation, and the House of Delegates approved the project.

The School of Business Administration, formed only a dozen years ago, is the increasing choice of upperclass students as they declare their concentrations. It offers the Bachelor of Business Administration degree and the Master of Business Administration, but it is best known perhaps for its programs in accounting, directed by Professor John Quinn. Quinn's record in training qualified accountants is among the best in the nation.

The House of Delegates also allocated additional funds for faculty salaries, bringing the College appropriation to almost 100% of the new and higher salary level authorized last fall by Governor Dalton. The increased funding toward the authorization, coupled with the use of income from private endowments created through the Campaign for the College, means that William and Mary faculty will suffer less than in prior years against continuing inflation. Yet inflation rates remain so high that the salary gains may still be less than catch-up. It is unclear, until the annual surveys are done more than a year from now, whether progress is being made in comparison with salaries throughout the nation.

The lower House also approved, but not without a fight by some opponents, the first phase of Cary Field Stadium's expansion. The phase, now estimated to cost $2.3 million, would bring permanent seating in the stadium to about 20,300. Currently, the stadium has just under 9,000 permanent seats but serves about 15,000 by the use of wooden end zone bleachers. The Board of Visitors had approved the stadium expansion in late 1978, on the condition that it be funded with major private gifts made specifically for the project.

The Board's 1978 Cary Field decision drew vocal protests from many townspeople, and votes taken among students and faculty indicated wide opposition to the plan. It remains unclear whether the opposition was based on a longer-range plan to enlarge to 30,600 without also creating new facilities for handling the increased traffic and parking. Some opposition was the result of a fear that the expansion funds--and maintenance funds far into the future--would be in the place of gifts and allocations that could enrich the College's academic programs. Some opposition was based on architectural plans for a 78-foot-tall pressbox which could be built as a second phase with gifts.

Although the Board and the College administration repeatedly reassured faculty and students that dollars for stadium expansion would come only from donors not interested in support for academic programs, the spectre of a 30,600-seat stadium grew so large in some circles that it was being labeled a "superdome," and the outcry continued.

Studies which led to the expansion plan showed that the only way William and Mary could continue to play its existing type of competition was to create more good sideline seats. Ever since 1975, the demand for seats has exceeded the number available on the sidelines--despite the fact that such teams as the University of Virginia, Virginia Tech and Navy (among other traditional rivals) were no longer on Cary Field's schedule. With only limited sideline seats to sell, the College is unable to provide these teams with a large enough financial guarantee to make Williamsburg games pay for themselves.

To date, although the expansion seems on its way to legislative approval and one lawsuit against it has been dropped, no gifts have been made toward its construction and completion is, therefore, at least a couple of seasons away.

A Trip to Remember

Egyptian Jaunt Includes Belly Dancers, Camel Ride, Pyramids and Desert Feasts

For the 62 participants, it was a trip to remember. Sponsored by the Society of the Alumni Educational Travel Tours, it took them on a whirlwind tour to six Egyptian locations after a Jan. 29 departure from New York on Royal Air Maroc.

Alice Jordan Viessmann '56, Norfolk, organized the tour in cooperation with General Hussein Hossny Ali of the Egyptian government. The official tie enabled the "Mary" group, as it became known, to visit a number of clubs and join in several special activities that would have been unavailable otherwise.

The 15-day trip included everything from exotic oriental belly dancers to camel rides in the shadow of the great pyramids. The tourists saw the fallen Colossus of Ramses II, the Step Pyramid of King Djoser, King Tut's Tomb, the Alabaster Sphinx, the Great Pyramid of Chefred, the Aswan Dam, and an ancient granite quarry. They lunched at a private club near the Suez Canal and dined in a desert tent once owned by King Farouk in the shadow of the Giza pyramids.

At the Desert Feast, perhaps the highlight of the trip, the alumni brought a touch of William and Mary to the festivities. According to John B. Gravatt '49, Norfolk, the alumni "congregated in the center of the tent, where, 7000 miles from Williamsburg, their voices raised the familiar notes of the William and Mary Alma Mater and the Indian Fight Song."

One of the more memorable events of the trip was a desert feast in King Farouk's private tent in the desert near the Giza pyramids. The guests ate curried rice flavored with meat juices, orientally-seasoned mixed vegetables, boiled mutton and veal, and beef chunks, while a tympanic orchestra beat out African rhythms. After dinner, they were entertained by a two-part floor show consisting of a Whirling Dervish dressed in red, blue, yellow and green, and a trio of Nubian dancers.

John Phillips '78, director of Alumni Services, garbed in Arab head dress, climbed aboard a camel at the Great Pyramid of Giza. The camel's name: California Camel.

CHARTER DAY 1980

Hesburgh Address Keynotes Two-Day Investigation of Liberal Education

William B. Spong, Jr., dean of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, and Terry L. Meyers, associate professor of English, received the Thomas Jefferson awards Feb. 9 during a Charter Day weekend devoted to a discussion of the future of liberal education.

In a weekend marked by a seminar on liberal education and an address titled "The Future of Liberal Education" by Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C., president of the University of Notre Dame, William and Mary celebrated the 287th anniversary of its founding and the 200th anniversary of the reorganization of the College into America's first true university.

Dean Spong, a former United States senator whose leadership has marked the revitalization of the law school, was honored as "a leader without pretension; an idealist without illusion." The Jefferson citation noted that Spong's "greatest contribution has been perhaps to teach us that conscience and reason need not be unknown in the public life of our own time."

Meyers won the Thomas Jefferson Teaching Award as a younger member of the teaching faculty who "brings an extraordinary fund of energy and enthusiasm to his chosen career as a teacher and scholar." The citation noted that Meyers "takes his work seriously and enjoys doing it."

Father Hesburgh and Dr. Daniel Bell, professor of sociology at Harvard who participated in a Friday seminar on liberal education, received honorary doctorate degrees at the Charter Day convocation. Father Hesburgh, the president of Notre Dame for the past 28 years, was honored for his "manifold contributions to your country throughout an exceptional career and your leadership of a sister institution dedicated to the liberal arts and education of the whole man and woman."

Dr. Bell's citation cited the "distinguished leadership you have provided in your chosen discipline of Sociology and the broad contribution you have made to the understanding of ourselves and our society."

In his address, Father Hesburgh raised the spectre in the world of "a technological wasteland, not because science and technology or the scientific method are bad, but because they can tell us nothing about values, or the meaning of life, or what it really is to be human."

Hesburgh called humanistic studies "central to all education." He said the nation needs to "reassess our total concept of higher education, adrift today, to re-establish the centrality of such subjects as philosophy and theology, literature and history, art and music, and the inevitable value content of political science, economics, anthropology and sociology."

Hesburgh said all of America must be grateful to Thomas Jefferson and to the Board of Visitors of William and Mary "who two hundred years ago formed (the College) into a university."

"It is particularly significant," he said, "that at this present historic moment in the evolving life of William and Mary the College is looking ahead in hope rather than exclusively backward in pride, and is particularly addressing the central reality that we have long called liberal education."

Other panelists who joined Dr. Bell in the Friday discussion of liberal education were Leon Botstein, president of Bard College in Massachusetts; Adrian Tinsley, dean at William James College in Allendale, Mich.; Thomas K. Hearn, Jr., former professor of philosophy at the College and currently vice president for the University College at the University of Alabama in Birmingham; and Thaddeus W. Tate, director of the Institute of Early American History, who served as moderator.

Lights Go Out, BOSS Takes Over

To Save Energy Dollars, the College Has Cut Classroom Lighting and Used State-of-the-Art Conservation

When Physics Professor Robert Welsh returned recently from a visit to Brookhaven Institute in New York, he called Jim Connolly in the Plant Department and asked for some data on energy costs for the William Small Physics building. Welsh, who with other scientists in the physics department is interested in alternate sources of energy, suggested to Connolly that the Small Building, which has a southern exposure, might be considered as a possibility for solar heating. While the initial cost would be high, it could be recovered in future savings as conventional heating methods continue to skyrocket.

Connolly, who is the director of planning and capital outlay programs for the College, welcomed the call from Welsh. He has just come through a winter, mild by most standards, in which the price of William and Mary's 2.2 million gallons of No. 6 heating oil used annually has nearly doubled -- from 31 cents to 53 cents per gallon, and any recommendations on fuel conservation are given serious study.

Fortunately, the College has had in place since 1976 a program to conserve energy -- a program that has resulted in annual savings of $141,000. In its latest move, William and Mary began a program to cut classroom lighting by 25 per cent across campus.

The program, which was tested with no adverse effects in Morton Hall last fall, involves the gradual elimination of some 1500 fluorescent light tubes in classrooms, at the rate of one of every four tubes in each room. Only classrooms, not other academic space, will be affected by the new plan, for the immediate future.

Though the plan will reduce lighting expenditures by about $10,000 per year from their present level, a more important purpose will be to dramatize to students the necessity of reducing the use of energy.

In a second move, Connolly said, the College will begin converting several of the residence halls to metered electrical service so that consumption in each of the affected buildings can be monitored. Later, he said, once "base year" electrical consumption rates are established for the residence halls, the College can provide incentives to the students in each building to cut back on their usage. Currently, only a few of the College's buildings are independently metered.

One of the measures taken the last three winters has been to shut down all but essential heating services during the Christmas holiday period, when the College is closed for about 14 days, a $40,000 savings this most recent season.

Also, the College has contracted to have the heating, ventilating and air conditioning of 12 of its major buildings controlled by a computer operation in Richmond. The program, known as the Building Operating Service System (BOSS), saved an estimated net of $80,000 in energy consumption during 1979.

Connolly said he has now arranged for additional refinements to the BOSS program that will lead to an additional $20,000 annual energy savings.

Other measures in recent years have included installation of shower flow restrictors in the residence halls, a change in street lighting from incandescent to mercury vapor lamps, weatherstripping of doors and recaulking of windows.

Connolly explained that the William and Mary energy conservation program is three-pronged, involving individual awareness, preventive maintenance and using current techniques to modify energy-consuming facilities.

To promote individual awareness, Connolly has publicized energy conservation concepts through displays, decals near each light switch, and the use of College media. In addition, light intensity in hallways and other locations has been reduced to the level mandated by safety codes, a step which led to study of classroom lighting levels.

Preventive maintenance steps have included reduction in hot water temperatures, additional insulation of exposed heat distribution lines, and replacement of antiquated steam heat lines.

State-of-the-art techniques have included the move to the BOSS system, and as funds for the work become available through legislative appropriation, other improvements can be made leading to more efficient energy utilization, Connolly said.

Despite two near record snowfalls and a month of cold weather, this has been a mild winter for Williamsburg. Nevertheless, College officials intensified their efforts to cut skyrocketing utility bills.

College Plans Elderhostel

Alumni Given Special Invitation to Join Seniors During Summer Program

William and Mary is joining the highly successful national Elderhostel program, an adventure for older citizens which reflects the free-spirited enthusiasm of the youth hostels in Europe.

In partnership with the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, the College will offer a week of education and hosteling for 30 to 40 citizens 60 years of age and older, from May 18 - 24. A limited number of spaces in the program are being reserved for senior alumni of the College.

Participants will be housed in the Project Plus Residence Hall on the William and Mary campus.

R. Wayne Kernodle, a professor of sociology who has been researching the phenomenon of aging for more than a decade, is heading the planning for Elderhostel here and is coordinator for the program on campus. He is being assisted by David P. Aday, assistant professor of sociology.

The Foundation's contributions to the program are being coordinated by George Collins, director of training and the pre-retirement program; Mary Ann O'Connor of the educational staff; and Dennis O'Toole, deputy director of museum operations.

Three courses will be offered to Elderhostelers who may take any or all of them. Courses to be offered are "The Intellectual Science in 18th Century Williamsburg," "Learning and Teaching in Today's Museum," and "Natural Sciences in the 18th Century."

Instructors from the College will be Frank MacDonald, professor of philosophy emeritus; and Hans vonBaeyer, professor of physics.

Elderhostelers will be given passes to exhibition buildings by the Foundation so they may visit these buildings at their leisure during their stay in Williamsburg.

The Colonial Williamsburg segment of the program will include lectures, on-site informational sessions covering many aspects of life in colonial times as well as a unique view of how the rich historical heritage of Williamsburg in the 18th century is interpreted in the 20th century.

To make Elderhosteling available to as many people as possible, costs are kept low. For this reason, off-campus activities, tours and other attractions are suggested at the discretion of the individual, but not included in the basic package. Kernodle explains, "We are also stressing the education and hostelry aspects of the program and have no wish to promote any tourist-type vacation."

Programs begin Sunday evening and end Saturday. Participants can make their hosteling experience last as long as they wish, moving from campus to campus, taking courses that appeal to them and exploring cultural and environmental attractions in each area.

A wine and cheese party scheduled Monday night at the Alumni House and sponsored by the Society of the Alumni will serve as an informal vehicle for hostelers to get to know one another. They will hear greetings from both William and Mary and Colonial Williamsburg Foundation representatives.

Further information concerning the Elderhostel program at the College of William and Mary may be obtained by contacting R. Wayne Kernodle, coordinator, William and Mary Elderhostel 1980, Sociology Department, College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, VA 23185, or by calling (804)-253-4332.

State coordinator for the Elderhostel program is Dr. William Egelhoff, Virginia Center on Aging, 1617 Monument Avenue, Richmond, VA 23220.

Four To Receive Honorary Degrees

Buchwald, Cooke, Mott and Torrens to Pick Up Diplomas at May Commencement Exercises

Four individuals whose fields of achievement range from humor to politics will receive honorary degrees at the College Commencement Exercises, Sunday, May 11.

The four recipients of honorary degrees are Art Buchwald, successful humorist and this year's commencement speaker; John Warren Cooke, long-time member and recently retired Speaker of the Virginia House of Delegates; Sir Nevill Mott, Nobel prize winning physicist from the University of Cambridge; and Rafael Torrens, physician, author and leader in the government of Puerto Rico.

Buchwald's journalism career began in the Marines during World War II and developed when he was a student at the University of Southern California and in Paris. While in Paris, he began writing a column called "Europe's Lighter Side," which was syndicated in the American press.

After leaving Europe, Buchwald settled in Washington, where he now lives. His syndicated column appears in over 500 newspapers throughout the U.S. and the world, and he is heard as a performer on records, on television and before audiences across the nation.

John Warren Cooke was a member of the Virginia House of Delegates from 1942 until his retirement this year, and he served as Speaker of the House from 1968 until his retirement.

A member of the Democratic Party, Cooke was born in Mathews, Virginia, where he now lives. He is the director of the United Virginia Bank of Gloucester and is also the president of Tidewater Newspapers, Inc.

Sir Nevill Mott, a native of England, is a recognized leader in the field of physics. He was awarded the Nobel prize for physics in 1977 and is a pioneer in the energy-related field of amorphous semiconductors.

In addition to the Nobel prize, Mott has received numerous other awards and honors for his lifelong work as researcher, educator and author. He taught physics and mathematics in England at the University of Bristol and at Cambridge University, where he was the head of the Cavendish Laboratory for 20 years. He is currently a professor at the Cavendish Laboratory.

Rafael Torrens is a former Speaker of the House of Representatives in Puerto Rico, and he is presently an advisor to the Governor of Puerto Rico, particularly in the movement toward statehood for the Island.

Following his 1932 graduation from the College of William and Mary, Torrens studied art and law before he received his medical degree from Yale University. He has written a number of books, papers and articles on philosophy and art. Torrens is a member of the Puerto Rico Council of Higher Education, which governs all institutions of higher learning in Puerto Rico, and he recently retired as a Professor of Medicine at the University of Puerto Rico.

The Commencement Exercises will take place at 2:00 p.m. in William and Mary Hall. Approximately 1600 graduate and undergraduate students will receive diplomas at the ceremony.

Board Re-elects Brickell Rector

Dr. Edward E. Brickell '50, Virginia Beach, was elected to his second term as rector of the Board of Visitors at a meeting held at William and Mary in February.

Brickell, superintendent of the Virginia Beach Public Schools, received both his undergraduate and doctorate degrees from William and Mary.

At the same meeting, former Governor A. Linwood Holton joined the Board for the first time since he was appointed to fill the unexpired term of William R. (Buster) O'Brien '74 JD, who resigned after he was elected to the House of Delegates from Virginia Beach. Holton is a Washington based attorney.

The Board re-elected T. C. Clarke '22, Norfolk, as vice rector and Mrs. Carter C. Chinnis '46, Alexandria, secretary.

Chapters Set Meetings

Graves Joins Alumni at Dinner-Dance

CHARLOTTESVILLE/HIGHLAND CHAPTER

Wednesday, February 20

Indian fans will gather at 7:00 p.m. at Betty '51 Scott's house, 1875 Wayside Place in Charlottesville, to hear the play-by-play broadcast of the William and Mary - University of Virginia basketball game. Beer, soft drinks, and chips will be provided - otherwise BYO. Call Betty Scott at (804) 293-5969 if you plan to attend.

NORTHERN VIRGINIA CHAPTER

Saturday, March 1

Members of the Northern Virginia Chapter are holding their second installation dinner dance at the Ramada Inn at Tysons Corner. President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., is special guest speaker. Cocktails will be served by the pool at 7:00 p.m., followed by a buffet dinner at 8:00 p.m. and dancing at 9:00 p.m. The charge of $27.00 per couple should be remitted with the reservations to: The Society of the Alumni, Northern Virginia Chapter, P.O. Box 7275, Alexandria, VA 22307, by February 23.

Alumni of the northern Virginia area will also have the opportunity to attend the College Choir's performance at St. Stephen's United Methodist Church in Burke - 8:30 p.m. on Thursday, March 20.

GEORGIA CHAPTER

Sunday, March 9

The afternoon meeting of the Georgia alumni and guests will feature Dr. Craig Canning of the history department and his slide/lecture presentation on "China Today." Cocktails 12:30 and luncheon 1 p.m. at the Cherokee Country Club. Send reservations to Mrs. Jeanne English Bedell '65, 839 Penn Ave. NE, Atlanta, GA 30308.

HOUSTON CHAPTER

March (date not yet available)

Houston area alumni, together with alumni from other Virginia schools, are coordinating efforts for another Old Dominion Day dinner party.

SAN DIEGO CHAPTER

Studious habits, though often talked down by certain campus philosophers, are of vital importance to a liberal education. These students in the old William and Mary library in Sir Christopher Wren Building are surrounded by portraits of William and Mary greats. The photograph is part of the College archives and is dated around 1900. Photograph by Fred Miller, Jr. (This photo is reprinted from the Jan. - Feb. magazine edition of the Alumni Gazette, sent to all contributors to the College. If you know who the lady in the photo is, please contact the Alumni Gazette, Box 60, College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va. 23185. See letter below.)

Dear Editor:

All of the Gazette has been interesting and enjoyable but the Jan/February 1980 excels them all. The old photographs are fantastic and particularly clear for old photos. The Library photo on page 4 brought fond recollections of the library we used during 1922-1926. The negro in the photo is Henry Billups who rang the bell in the Wren Building for many years. I wonder if anyone knows who the female is at the end of the table? The school was not co-ed and probably no women were on the faculty. Perhaps town women were permitted as did many non-co-ed colleges.

Thanks for bringing us alumni such good articles and nostalgic photographs. Keep up the good work.

Sincerely,

W. Sterling King '26

A Center for Distaff Sports

College Hosts a Variety of Women's Championships During an Exciting Year

Over 500 women athletes representing 46 teams will compete at William and Mary in championship events before the year is out. In the fall William and Mary hosted the regional field hockey and state volleyball tournaments, and by May will add the state basketball, gymnastics and lacrosse championships to the list.

One reason William and Mary is the site for so many events is the leadership coaches have shown in the Virginia Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (VAIAW) organization. The VAIAW sponsors state tournaments which serve as qualifying events for the AIAW Regional and National meets.

Joy Archer, the women's physical education chairperson, is currently the head of the National Field Hockey and Lacrosse Sport Committees. Barbara Wetters is chairperson of both the state and regional basketball sport committees while Sylvia Shirley is in her fourth year as chairperson of the state gymnastics group. Athletic Director Millie West is chairperson of tennis and other department members have served as heads of the golf, volleyball, track and field and swimming committees.

However, not only are the Indians hosting events, they are in the running to win them all as well. The women's field hockey team won the Region 2 Championship, and went on to finish fifth at the AIAW Division I Nationals.

While the women's volleyball team placed second in a hard fought championship match at the state meet, senior Debbie Reed and juniors Julie Jenkins and Driana Davies were named to the All-Tournament team.

William and Mary's women's gymnastics squad is ranked 10th nationally and has qualified for regional and national competition.

In cross country three runners qualified for the AIAW Division II Nationals, while golf placed second in the state and tennis finished with a 7-1 fall record.

The success of the women's program is due to the increase in skill level of all the women athletes on campus, according to West. "Every year the teams' performances improve. All of our sports are competing successfully in a compatible framework and it's been an exciting year," she said.

This winter, the women's fencing team is favored to defend its state title and the swimming team is gearing up for the Division II nationals where it placed sixth last season.

The women's gymnastics team has qualified for regional and national competition in Division II and is ranked tenth nationally. This spring the women's lacrosse team will be attempting to improve on last year's fifth place Division I national finish.

Two state meets were scheduled for William and Mary Hall in February. On Sunday, the 24th, the men's and women's State Gymnastics Championship was scheduled while the 28th through March 1, the women's Division II Basketball Championship took place.

This is the first year that the women's basketball squad has practiced and played in the Hall and leading scorer Lynn Norenberg says she "loves it." Norenberg added emphasis to her statement by scoring a record 39 points in the facility against Virginia Wesleyan.

A junior, Norenberg has averaged 20.1 points-per-game before twisting her knee this season and is ranked ninth in her class with a 3.95 G.P.A. She says that the women's team has become much more competitive since her freshman year.

"We still have some of the same talent but we have been able to utilize our skills more," she said. "One of our strengths is team unity. Everyone on the team is so close that it makes it fun to work hard."

Coach Wetters, in her second year, says there is a growing campus interest in the women's basketball team. "An important factor has been added support from the administration, our department and the college as a whole in women's basketball," she said.

Alumnus Praises Good Communication

Editor:

Just a short note to congratulate you on the fine work that you and your staff are doing on behalf of the College. This December issue, as is true with all of the past editions, is informative, well written, and a real joy to read. It brings the beauty and tradition of the College and Williamsburg into our home and I am thankful and grateful for the high level it maintains throughout the months.

I recently wrote the chairman of the Men's Physical Education Department regarding three "hot" prospects for the wrestling team.

One, too, is a very fine football prospect. While I have degrees from three Colleges, I think it was the Alumni Gazette that prompted me to write the College about these boys - and only the College. You see, you folks that are responsible for keeping the alums informed really do have an impact.

Again, many thanks for the fine work that you and the staff are doing. It does have an impact and it is appreciated.

Faithfully yours,

He's Looking for A Few Good Men

New Coach Jimmye Laycock Looks for Players with Brains and Brawn

We're looking for a few good men. If this macho slogan had not been cornered already by the United States Marines Corps, it would make an appropriate rallying cry for Jimmye Laycock '70, the new head football coach at the College.

Laycock, who at 31 is the youngest head coach at the Division One level of college football, knows that the star quarterback he's looking for not only needs to pass like a young Unitas and scramble like Tarkenton in his prime. He's also got to have grades that rate at the top of the class and College Board scores in the range of a thousand.

But it's not because Laycock's wide-open offense is so complex that it requires more brains than brawn. It's because Laycock knows that to get in and to stay in William and Mary, an athlete needs to perform as well in the classroom as he does on the gridiron.

The pool of high school athletes who fit this description might well be described as a small puddle—but Laycock insists that it's plenty big to satisfy the needs of the Ivy League schools, William and Mary and a handful of other universities known primarily for academic quality.

Laycock officially reported to work at William and Mary Jan. 2, but he started recruiting more than a week earlier—the day he was named coach at the nation's second oldest university. By this summer, Laycock will log hundreds of miles as he visits high schools across Virginia and the eastern seaboard. He'll talk about William and Mary in very personal terms—he played three years of varsity football himself at the College before graduating in 1970. His wife Ginny (Demkowski '71) was a Phi Beta Kappa graduate who now has a Ph.D. and teaches special education at Clemson.

"Before I ask a high school player to look at our football program," says Laycock, "I tell him to look at the whole situation. It's much more important that the student like the academic and social life than any certain type of offense or defense."

"I'm very honest with the players," he continues. "William and Mary is not a big football power. If you want to play on television, go to bowl games, eat at a super training table or live in a special dormitory, you'll have to go somewhere else."

"But if you want to receive a quality education at a school that year in and year out demands a lot of respect around the country, and be part of a good football program at the same time, William and Mary might be the place for you," says Laycock.

It may be hard to believe that high school standouts would say goodbye to stardom on televised bowl games and hello to every night study halls. But Laycock says the attitudes of many high school athletes are changing. "A larger number of kids are becoming more interested in getting a good education than in playing before thousands of people in a huge facility. They want more after four years than a handful of newspaper clippings and a pair of sore legs."

Laycock guarantees that William and Mary will play an exciting brand of football—he says he plans to open up the offense, fill the air with footballs, emphasize aggression on defense and provide "good entertainment" for budget-minded families who want a lot of excitement for the dollar.

Laycock began his coaching career

Jimmye Laycock '70 and his wife Ginny '71 received a warm welcome in Williamsburg -- he hopes the area's football fans will be equally as receptive to the team he fields next September.

at Newport News High soon after graduation. He joined the College ranks in 1971 as a graduate assistant at Clemson, where he received his master's degree in education in 1972.

In 1973-74 Laycock served as assistant coach at The Citadel, then moved to Memphis State for a two-year stint. He rejoined Clemson in 1977 to join the staff of Charley Pell, who's credited with the turnabout rejuvenation of Tiger football. Clemson went to the Gator Bowl two consecutive years, and just last month Laycock said goodbye to his players after their televised appearance in the Peach Bowl. He was selected from a group of five finalists to succeed Jim Root. They included alumni, Dennis Haglan '66, an assistant coach at Wake Forest, Bob Hardage '58, Annandale Va., high school coach, as well as former William and Mary assistant coach Bobby Ross, now with the Kansas City Chiefs.

His reception in Williamsburg has been a warm one, and even those who supported former Coach Jim Root have been impressed with the enthusiasm and candor of Laycock. A local reporter recently described the new coach as "honest, idealistic, anxious to get started, hard-working, and clearly in love with his school."

He'll have to be come September, when the Indians start a grueling 1980 schedule with a game against ACC powerhouse N.C. State.

Laycock Assembles Young, Aggressive Staff

Janaro, Smith, Friedgen, Rizzo, Mahoney, Rogers Sign as Coaches

William and Mary's head football coach Jimmye Laycock moved quickly to assemble his staff by retaining one assistant coach from Jim Root's coaching staff and hiring five new assistants.

Phil Janaro, who has been at William and Mary for one year, will continue to handle the receivers and head up the academic counseling for the team. The 37 year old New Jersey native had come to William and Mary after four years at Davidson. He will play a key role in recruiting.

The new coaches are: Dan Smith, who comes to William and Mary from Clemson, where he served as an assistant secondary coach for one year. He will coach the Tribe secondary.

Ralph Friedgen, a product of Harrison, N.Y., who is a 1970 graduate of Maryland, where he played football and received both his B.S. and M.A. degrees in physical education. He comes to William and Mary from the Citadel, where he was offensive coordinator. He will be the offensive coordinator.

Charlie Rizzo, 34, who was defensive coordinator at the Citadel. He will be responsible for the line-backers and defensive ends in addition to heading up the strength program.

Mike Mahoney, 28, who comes to William and Mary from Murray State University in Kentucky, where he had been defensive line coach for one year. Mahoney will handle the defensive line for the Tribe.

Kevin Rogers, a 1974 graduate of William and Mary, who returns to his alma mater from Mainland High School in Daytona Beach, Fla., where he was head coach. He will handle the William and Mary offensive backs.

Gymnasts Sweep State Titles

Tribe's John Jiganti is State Best

The men's and women's gymnast teams at the College both retained their State Intercollegiate titles in the state gymnastic meet held at William and Mary in February.

The men won their sixth straight title by scoring a meet record 202.90 points. The women defeated Longwood College 129.35-126 in defending their VAAIAW title. They will compete in the AIAW Region 2 championship in March at Radford.

The top men's collegian was William and Mary's John Jiganti who scored 44.05 points. The defending all-around women's titlist, William and Mary's Jan Roltsch, was able to compete only in the vault, bars, and floor because of a back injury. She still won two second places and one third.

Olympic Hopefuls Keep on Paddling

Havens Brothers, Swim Team Alumni, Struggle to Make America's Canoeing Team

In the quiet darkness of Lake Matoaka a lone man paddles a canoe through the calm waters. He shifts positions slightly, hoping to discover some new technique that will help him paddle stronger and faster than anyone else at the 1980 Summer Olympics.

"I paddle four to five miles every day on Matoaka, which means I do a lot of turning around," says Keith Havens '76, a former swim team captain at the College who now serves as the squad's assistant coach. Keith and his brother Dodge '75, also a former swim team captain, have switched from swimming to flatwater canoeing in hopes of qualifying for the 1980 summer games in Moscow.

Flatwater canoeing, a relatively obscure sport, is different from the more widely-publicized white water canoeing Olympic event. "Flatwater canoeing is done on an enclosed body of water such as a lake, where there are no moving currents," Keith explains. Downwater or white water canoeing is done on streams and rivers where conditions range from gentle downstream currents to furious white rapids. Far from being a tame sport, however, flatwater canoeing involves the greatest of paddling speed and endurance over a slick aquatic surface.

"I guess you could say we're continuing a family tradition," Keith says of his goal. His grandfather, great-uncle, father and uncle have all competed in the Olympic flatwater canoeing events, his uncle winning the 1952 gold medal in Helsinki, Finland. Although the whole family has always been enthusiastic about canoeing, Keith says he and his brother did not consider competing seriously until after they had graduated from the College.

"I was paddling when I was really young," Keith says of his growing-up days in Vienna, Va. The whole family went canoeing often and followed Uncle Frank's Olympic career closely.

Meanwhile, young Keith was becoming a proficient swimmer, diver and cross-country runner in high school. He then decided to attend William and Mary, where his brother Dodge was already "making waves" on the swim team as a freshman. "I was impressed with the campus, and I knew William and Mary would give me a chance to swim," Keith says. Coach Dudley Jensen decided to use him as a free-style sprinter, a position in which Keith excelled during his years on the team.

Soon after they graduated, Keith and Dodge Havens began training in a two-man racing canoe, a long, thin vessel that Keith calls "extremely unstable. It took me a couple of years before I could paddle it without tipping it over." Despite the difficulty of maneuvering the racing canoe, the brothers placed third in the first major paddling event they entered, the 1977 Virginia Downwater Championships on the Shenandoah River near Front Royal, Va. In 1979, they came in second.

The two have competed in a variety of downwater and flatwater races since then, often placing or winning in one-man or two-man events. At the National Flatwater Championships in Crestbury Commons, Vermont, the Havens brothers came in second in the two-man 500 meter intermediate race and seventh in the 10,000 meter senior two-man race. Keith also came in seventh in the one-man senior 1,000 meter competition.

In his most recent race, Keith competed in the Southeastern Intercollegiate Championships in Morgantown, N.C., where he won the mixed doubles category with Kathy Kelly, who works with the women's canoe team at the College. The two won by using the "high-kneel" style, a paddling position in which the competitor kneels on one knee to paddle the unstable canoe, a technique that is too risky to use in rough or low water.

Entering races up and down the East Coast is probably the best training any paddler can receive for the Olympics, says Keith. Added to those experiences is the expert advice of his father and uncle. "Uncle Frank trains us as much as anyone," he says. "We have an Olympic coach, but because paddling is less well-known and one of the most poorly funded of the sports, the coach mails our workouts and information."

Keith and Dodge are training on their own now, running five miles a day and paddling four to five miles to practice techniques. "Paddling is mostly technique," explains Keith. "Yet there's no one technique that's considered the best because knowledge of canoe design and the physics of paddling is so new."

Often, he says, the paddlers themselves design the boats in which they compete. "It can be a problem because the national champion designed the fastest boat on the circuit today, and he'll probably sell the design to someone other than his competitors," Keith explains. "You can't be the best unless you have the best equipment."

You also cannot be the best unless you have time enough to train, which is another problem, he says. Such training takes time away from job, family and friends. "I didn't know my job was going to be so time-consuming," admits Keith, who is a permanent substitute teacher for the York County School system and coaches the Bruton High School swim team. "Sometimes the day is so busy I have to run during my lunch period at school." Keith is also serving his third year as assistant coach of the swim team at the College, where he has just completed work on a master's degree in education.

Dodge, who works for a computer firm in Northern Virginia, has similar time constraints. The brothers can only practice together on weekends and holidays.

The Havens brothers are not the only William and Mary graduates who are downwater canoeing enthusiasts in Northern Virginia. "Our war canoe team at the Washington Canoe Club consists of five former William and Mary swim team captains as well as other College alumni who've become canoeing fans," says Keith. Kerry Dearfield '74, Bruce Hartzler '77, and Glenn Anderson '79 have competed in 18-mile war canoe races down the Potomac River in the fall and spring, usually placing near the top.

The Havens brothers hope to refine their techniques enough this winter to qualify in the Olympic regional trials and go on to the national Olympic trials this coming June in Vermont.

What are their chances of making the American team? "Anything can happen," says Keith. "Dodge and I were in a five-mile race down the Potomac last fall using regular canoes. We came in second to the national flatwater Champions, which is good—even though they wiped us out."

"We'll get our act together though," he says with assurance, "just in time for the trials this spring."

Medallion Nominations Open

Society Looks for Loyal, Dedicated, Successful Alumni

The Alumni Medallion Committee is receiving nominations from alumni chapters and from individual alumni for candidates for the Alumni Medallion, the highest honor conferred by the Society of the Alumni.

The medallion is awarded for service and loyalty, recognizing extraordinary achievement in the vocational and avocational life of the alumnus. Consideration is given to distinguished service and exceptional loyalty to the Society and to the College; outstanding character; notable success in business or profession and contribution in worthy endeavors of such nature as to bring credit and honor to the College. The graduating class of the nominee must have been at least ten years prior to the awarding.

The nominations must be supported by a short written statement outlining service to William and Mary and an assessment of that service; service to community, state, and/or nation; vocational achievements and recognitions.

The deadline will be May 1, 1980.

Send all nominations to: ALUMNI MEDALLION COMMITTEE, BOX 60, WILLIAMSBURG, VA. 23185.

Getting Laughs on T.V.

Karen Lynne Hall Puts Funny Words into the Mouths of Television Superstars

It sounds unbelievable. A young William and Mary graduate goes to Hollywood to become a television writer and six months later, she's moving into a luxurious apartment near Sunset Boulevard, complete with pool and Jacuzzi. With actor Alan Alda and writer Earl ("The Waltons") Hamner cheering her on, this twenty-six-year-old alumna is already writing for some of the hottest shows on TV, including "Taxi" and "Benson."

If Karen Lynne Hall '78 was writing a success story for a TV show, her own saga would qualify. "This has been my week," Hall said recently. "I was commissioned to do a script for Benson, people at Columbia Pictures are reading a screenplay I wrote called 'Sunday Father,' and a couple of my 'Taxi' scripts will be on next season."

While her Southern accent and lack of pretense don't fit the stereotype of a successful TV writer, Hall's quick wit and sharp perceptions make her a natural for the top comedy shows. Her sense of humor is just as apparent when she refers to her hometown, Chatham, Virginia. "It's a little town on the border between Virginia and North Carolina, with a population of 2,000 and one stoplight," Hall says. "I owe some of my development to Chatham because I was bored all of my life there -- I had to write."

For Hall, writing was a goal she set for herself long before she came to William and Mary. "I always wanted to write for TV," Hall says, "and if a genie came down and granted me three wishes, I'd want to do playwriting." An English major, Hall's interest in playwriting blossomed when she wrote a play as required coursework for an introductory theatre course. One playwriting course led to another -- and another. "We wrote three one-act plays each semester and three rewrites," she recalls. "I know for a fact that I wouldn't be where I am if it wasn't for the discipline I learned at William and Mary." Being able to write fast and well is an asset in television writing, according to Hall. "With 24 episodes each season, when a show is in production you have to be able to crank out material like crazy."

Her six months in Hollywood have given Hall a clearer understanding of what it takes to get to the top. "If something clicks, it goes right away," she says. "But right now, it's hard getting through to producers because they're on vacation -- and if they don't need a script immediately, producers go off to play tennis and say 'We'll get back to you later.'"

That feeling of being in limbo while producers decide the fate of a script or story idea is what Hall hates most about her profession. "I go crazy, because I want to know," she says emphatically. "So many people are involved in making the decision, and the higher up it gets, the longer it takes." The plus side, she adds, is that when a lucky break comes, it really happens fast.

Hall's string of lucky breaks began the summer before her senior year, when she went across country to attend a seminar on television production which had Alan Alda and Earl Hamner as participants.

Impressed by Hall and the talent she demonstrated for playwriting, the two professionals have kept in contact with her, and continue to give her advice and support.

After graduation, Hall "bided her time" in graduate study at the University of Virginia, trying her hand at several "Taxi" scripts. When Hall moved to California, even that was out of the ordinary -- she had an accident on the Los Angeles Freeway fifteen minutes after she arrived.

The overnight speed of success, most often the result of months and years of hard work, is only one of the special qualities of Hollywood that Hall has become familiar with. Trying to describe her new way of life to an outsider, Hall was uncharacteristically at a loss for words. "The lifestyle is very strange, but I like it," she began. "When you work, you work very hard, and when you unwind, you really do, because the pressures are so great -- there's just no way to know what it's like unless you're in the business."

When asked if she has "gone Hollywood," Hall replied, "Not in ways I feel bad about." She underlines that while both newcomers and veterans have to fall into patterns to make it in Hollywood, that doesn't include the old casting couch routine. "Here they don't hire you unless you're successful, because of the idea that bad luck's contagious."

Looking back at the College and its Premiere Theatre for student playwrights, Hall says, "William and Mary is one of the few places where a student can write a play and see it produced, and that helped me more than anything." One of her best-remembered plays was "Prisoner of Zion," a stunning, serious look at Mormonism. Today, Premiere Theatre continues to be a forum for William and Mary's brightest young playwrights: this April, four one-act plays and a three-act comedy will be produced. According to Sheryl Anderson '80, author of "For Want of a Shoe," the full-length play that will have its premiere, Karen Hall has given dedicated student playwrights a new incentive to continue with the craft they love.

Hall still keeps in touch with playwriting professor Louis E. Catron, who was pretty tough on her, she recalls. "With my first Premiere Theatre play, I thought he'd tell me I was William and Mary's answer to Tennessee Williams, but all he said was, 'It's a --- talky thing,'" Hall says. "He would never admit that anything I wrote was good."

If Catron wouldn't pat his former student on the back then, he does now. "She's moving very quickly, and there's a lot more to come," Catron comments. "When I ask myself, 'Does playwriting do any good around here?', I think of Karen."

THE PUSH IS ON!

William and Mary Fund Pushes Toward $400,000

"The big push is on," says Bill Smith '44, "and there's no stopping now until we break that $400,000 mark."

Smith, who serves as co-chairman of the 1979-80 William and Mary Fund with his wife, Jane Spencer Smith '48, reports that the final four months of the campaign will have to be exceptionally productive ones if this year's drive is going to surpass $400,000.

"So far, more alumni have contributed more money than we've ever received at this point in our annual fund drive," says Smith. "But we've still got a long way to go to reach our goal."

The William and Mary Fund got off to a creative start last September when the Smiths' first appeal to some 30,000 alumni included magnolia leaves from trees on the William and Mary campus. Since then, reunion class letters, a series of phonathons, and several special appeals to a variety of groups, have produced cash commitments of more than $260,000.

This semester, with the help of Society of the Alumni President Denys Grant '58, the College has asked alumni chapters across the country to create their own fundraising programs to support the William and Mary Fund. In addition, J. Wilfred Lambert '27, has personally written several thousand members of the Olde Guard to ask for their support, while Laurie Smith '74, Bill and Jane's oldest daughter, has appealed to young graduates of the College.

Later this spring, President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., plans to make his own appeal to alumni to support the William and Mary Fund. Meanwhile, Bill and Jane continue to contact top prospects to solicit larger gifts they hope will put them over the top.

"Our primary focus this year has been on the personal approach," reports Jane, who also serves as a member of the Society's Board of Directors. "Our volunteers have been just great, and the attitudes we see among our alumni reflect a confidence and enthusiasm that we can all be proud of."

The Smiths have added their own personal touch to a drive characterized by an upbeat creativity that has attracted attention since the Fund's kickoff. The slogan they created, "Making the Eighties Our Best Years Yet," has been emblazoned on t-shirts, banners, key-rings, special stationery, ballpoint pens and balloons.

"Our alumni are beginning to realize that this is the Fund created by alumni, and it's the one Fund which, from one year to the next, safeguards our academic programs," says Smith. "When it's all over and we see how far $400,000 can go, I think all alumni who contribute will feel they have really accomplished something important."

Jane '48 and Bill Smith '44, co-chairmen of the 1979-80 William and Mary Fund, show off two new trophies that will reward two classes which demonstrate the best all-around performance and increased participation in the annual fund drive. The silver-plated pitcher was contributed by the Class of 1954 and the bowl was contributed by the Board of Directors of the Society. Both will be awarded for the first time at next fall's Homecoming Banquet.

Alumni Notes

12 William H. Deierhoi of Richmond, Va., writes that he will be 90 on his next birthday. He attended Homecoming 1979, but did not see any of his classmates there. He would like to hear from any of his classmates. His address is 1605 West Laburnum Avenue, Richmond, Va. 23227.

20 Virginius J. Love of Portsmouth, Va., who is 81, writes that in addition to the activities listed he played second base for four years on the baseball team of which he was captain for two years, and president of the Junior Class. He received a BA degree from the College and an MA degree from the University of Virginia; was in public school work for 44 years in Virginia as coach, teacher and principal. He volunteered for military service and entered officers' training school at Fort Monroe. While attending UVa he received bid to membership in Phi Beta Kappa. He retired in 1964.

24 "The best laid plans of mice--" etc., describes our plans for attending Homecoming 1979. Last August, Carolyn Kelly and her husband Morris Brewster of Wilmington, Del., Hawk and Ettabelle Northington of Alexandria, and Mildred and I decided Homecoming was just the time for a final reunion and a chance to see some of the other Olde Guard who were on campus with us. Fate, however, seemed to have other plans. By the time October came around a variety of reasons kept the Northingtons and Phillipses at home. But "Cado" and "Morrie" carried through and the following are gleanings from Cado's delightful letter. Since this was her first visit to Williamsburg since graduation, everything was new to her. She was impressed by the attractive Alumni House and the efficient arrangements for registration and campus sight-seeing. A short ride in the bus showed her that the old campus we knew had disappeared in the mist of memory, replaced by something bigger and grander than we could have dreamed of.

Elizabeth Palmer Thompson came from Waco, Tex., to join the Brewsters. You may recognize her and Cado as the two younger-looking ones to the left of the group picture of the Olde Guard in the Gazette. Of that group they recognized Swanson Smith and Rolfe Kennard right away but had the uneasy feeling of being among old friends with the others, but not recognizing them. (I'm sure few of them would recognize me.)

On the first day the Olde Guard Luncheon at PBK Hall was marked by a fine speaker and excellent food. Friday afternoon Bill West, '28, took the Brewsters and Elizabeth to the home of Fairfax Griffith Bahr, '27, for tea - delightful. They passed up the Alumni Banquet for dinner at Christiana Campbell's Tavern, a happy choice. Another unexpected pleasure was seeing Betty Woodward James at the football game. Afterwards, she and her daughter, son-in-law and grandchildren joined the Brewsters at the Inn for a short visit. That night they joined a lively, bubbly crowd for the Alumni Dance.

The weather was perfect the entire weekend and, in Cado's words, "we had a most enjoyable few days."

The globetrotting Carter Harrisons are still at it, so much so their house in Norge is hardly more than a mailing address. The world is their beat.

Elizabeth DeShazo Whitlock of Richmond is busier than ever as a professional parliamentarian with the many meetings this election year.

Last fall Maude Purdy Lynch of Lawrenceville enjoyed a pleasant visit with Lovie and Dennis Forrest at their home in Mathews.

A few months ago Billy Person spent a short stay in the hospital but now, thankfully, is as good as new.

For "Red" Hancock and Ed Johnson and other dedicated golfers, may 1980 bring you a better putting stroke. (Dear Lord, I need much more than that.) To all other members of '24, may it bring in abundance whatever makes you happy.

26 As expected, we found in the 1979 Homecoming a delightful "sentimental journey." The Alumni Society staff is to be complimented on an excellent job organizing and directing the weekend activities. These ranged from the Olde Guard Luncheon Friday noon, the Alumni Dinner Friday night, the Homecoming parade Saturday morning, Luncheon on the Lawn and the game Saturday afternoon. After-game parties cropped up and, for those with any steam left, there was a dinner dance at the Lodge Saturday night. I heard it was a good affair. A word of caution: undergrads served the cash bar for the alumni dinner. Had I downed the one the young man "fixed" for me, I would have qualified for a "Medallion." The fruit cups at my table received compliments as a result.

It was a pleasure to see so many friends of other days. I remained in Williamsburg over Sunday to absorb the atmosphere of the place and rambled about the campus early that morning with the girl I dated in our college days. Even sat in the pew in Bruton holding hands. Did I say "sentimental journey"!

Reminiscences fly at a Homecoming. One had to do with the football coaching school conducted on our campus by the great Knute Rockne of Notre Dame fame. This was done during pre-season training in September, using our squad for demonstration purposes. I recalled very clearly how we were gathered around the great man one day hanging in awe on his every word. "I like big men," he pontificated, "big men with big hands." I thought he looked directly at me when he made this brilliant pronouncement since I did not qualify in any respect. Resentfully, the thought flashed through my mind, you big, square head, what football coach wouldn't want big men with big hands and who couldn't win with enough of such. I have not cheered for a Notre Dame team since that day which probably means excommunication when this is published.

Big men were always a problem with our football teams since they generally played for opponents. We only had two men on the squad who approached 200 pounds, "Ducky" Weber at tackle and Lee Todd at end. "Chesty" Cane the heaviest man in the backfield, only tilted 175.

On one occasion, I was in the game on Saturday, a rarity since my usual work days were Monday through Friday, and even rarer running the first team. I sent "Dickey" Charles through the line on a fake play designed to pull the linebacker out of position. Unfortunately, that boy was too dumb to be faked and he nearly broke Dickey in two. I looked apprehensively at Dickey as he poutingly dragged himself back into position. I was expecting some recrimination about the play I had called (the quarter did his own thinking in those days), but Dickey was only muttering the big, dumb b----d. Dickey had his own inimitable pronunciation of the term with a long a.

There were figures and forces in the J.A.C. Chandler era that made the College of William and Mary and Colonial Williamsburg what they are today.

It makes a great story and I want to assemble all the material that I can, and I have considerable. Facts, anecdotes, personal recollections about Dr. Chandler, Dr. Goodwin, Dr. Swem and others involved will be much appreciated.

Some good friends already have added to the lore and any and all contributions will be appreciated. Send them to my above address.

28 All of us, through the years, have appreciated the work of Class Reporter William B. Bolton. Now, with those duties staring me in the face, I appreciate him all the more. He politely but firmly declined to continue. In a letter to me this very wise classmate of ours gave his explanations. I may wish to use it as a model soon.

It is up to all of us to keep the class well represented in The Alumni Gazette. Send in notes, vital statistics--and anecdotes about our days at the College of William and Mary.

The editors, we hope, will allow us to indulge in reminiscences as long as they pertain to Alma Mater. Anecdotes are the spice of any history and part of the substance. For instance:

Dammit. This four-legged campus character elected himself the William and Mary mascot of our days there. Dammit belonged to no specific class, in either school or dogdom. His area of concentration was the humanities, or the study of the human race and how to influence it.

Botany was his sub-major. In Yard or on campus utterly neglected was the tree trunk he had not studied and pointed out, as best he could.

The next anecdote I "borrow" from another class, but since the professor involved was ours, too, I feel no compunction to withhold it.

Gordon Campbell, '29, now a very successful attorney and alumni supporter, reminds us that when Dr. John Garland Pollard, once voted the most popular professor, would walk into the assembled class, his students would sing out, "Oh, Dr. Pollard, you are not old." His white-crowned face would beam.

Well, Campbell graduated and in one of his first cases he lost the verdict. His client was given the death sentence. Sometime later, Campbell went to Richmond. He asked to see the Governor and was ushered in. There sat the Governor, and Gordon sang out, "Oh, Dr. Pollard, you are not old."

And a life was spared. So, send in the anecdotes and recollections.

J. M. (Suey) Eason was the subject of a "Whatever Happened?" installation of Virginian-Pilot Abe Goldblatt's Sunday series recently. The veteran sports writer leads in:

"You read about college football coaches fighting for three-year contracts. Well, J.M. (Suey) Eason signed an unprecedented 10-year contract to coach at William and Mary, held spring practice and then said he didn't want the job."

"A highly successful coach at Hampton High School, Eason was offered the William and Mary job in 1952, after Marvin Bass (another William and Mary luminary) has stepped down."

"I was called for an interview by Admiral Alvin Chandler (then president). I was thinking in terms of the athletic director's position. I didn't know that Bass had quit... they wanted me both as athletic director and football coach."

"I remembered reading where Herman Hickman had signed a 10-year contract to coach Yale."

Really not expecting to get it, Eason still asked for a 10-year contract. The Board of Visitors offered a five-year one, but Suey held out and got it. Spring practices was right on him, in a matter of days. It was successful, what with the likes of Jerry Sazio, Ed Mioduszewski and Bill Bowman. Still, the pull and thrills of high school football bugged him, and the headaches of college coaching loomed. He resigned and had extremely successful records at Crewe and later at Hampton, where he still lives. He was to see his son Jimmy an authentic

ANNOUNCING HOMECOMING 1980

Oct. 3-4

Reunion Classes: '35, '40, '45, '50, '55, '60, '65, '70, '75.

COLLEGE BEGINS PLANT COMPLEX

The old war surplus quonset huts, which have been an eyesore since they were brought to William and Mary from Solomon Island, Md., in 1946 to be used by the plant department, are in the process of being demolished this winter to make way for a new $1 million plant complex and parking lot scheduled for completion in Jan. 1981. The complex will include craft shops and the campus police office and a 145-car parking lot.

football hero under his dad and highest honor student (not under his dad). Jimmy went to North Carolina to star. Both of them and their families live in Hampton.

E. Carlton Macon, fullback and teammate of Eason, chuckles after being somewhat momentarily startled by new coming from the class, the sad news that he must have passed on. Thus it was that Carlton lost his lifetime job, having long ago been elected permanent secretary-treasurer of the Class of '28. (Pst--To the rest of the class, I nominate him for Class Reporter.)

Here are some new items Bill Bolton collected: Julia Zisgen Heavey of Oakland, N.J., is the mother of our children: John, an attorney; Gerald, a financial officer of a New York corporation; Thomas has his own business managing bicycle travel tours for teenagers in New Hampshire, and he has just published a book, Twenty Bicycle Tours in New Hampshire. Her only daughter, July, is at Ramapo College. Julia also has 10 grandchildren. Julia began her real estate business in 1952, and continues active in that business. She was the recent subject of a newspaper article in the Paramus, N.J. Post.

Dorothy Broughton Brennan enjoyed reading news about the Class of 1929 reunion since so many of the names among those attending were familiar to her. It reminded her again of the pleasure of attending the Class of '28 reunion.

Mary Craig Wornom of New York City took great interest in reports from friends who attended our 50th reunion in 1978, and wishes she would have been there. She is well pleased with the directory.

Iola Johnson Maloney of Richmond, Va., and her husband, a VMI graduate, have been quite active in attending the football games and reunions of VMI and William and Mary. They have made two trips to Europe. They enjoyed travelling on the EuRail. They have one son and three grandchildren. The son, a graduate of Woodberry Forest, Yale University and the University of Virginia, is a Richmond lawyer.

So delighted to receive a letter from Eliza Hunter Trainham of Newport News. Eliza made a 13-day tour of Canada. On her way home she spent the night with Marian Silberger Goodman. Eliza made my day by writing that she thoroughly enjoyed the news of our class in the Gazette.

A beautiful picture postcard from George R. Whitley of Falls Church, Va., postmarked Vail, Colo., arrived while George was on a tour of Colorado. The picture was of the marker showing the Continental Divide which was fascinating. Another card from him was from Bethlehem, showing the Church of Nativity. George and his wife must not have stayed at home very long because a short time later another card arrived from Sydney, Cape Breton Island, Nova Scotia, Canada. Bill sends many thanks to George for remembering him.

The September issue of the Virginia Bar News had a picture on the front page of Governor John N. Dalton, Lewis F. Powell, III, Mrs. Lewis F. Powell, III and our classmate, Virginia Chief Justice Lawrence W. I'Anson. We were all pleased to read in the Gazette that Lawrence W. I'Anson, Chief Justice of Virginia and president of the National Center for State Courts, was elected chairman of the Conference of Chief Justice at the organization's annual meeting in Flagstaff, Ariz.

Malvern H. Omohundro, Jr., of Richmond wrote to Bill Bolton in October telling him about Homecoming. Malvern said that he and his wife were at a table with George and Edna Whitley, Virginia Vaiden Bowen, Harry Light, Eulah Massey and Bill and Hilda West. Malvern said he saw many other members of our class including Whitfield Roberts.

Hayden Gwaltney of Petersburg recommends a trip to Alaska, having taken one via the inland route from Seattle to Skagway, then by bus to Fairbanks, visiting the University of Alaska and a wonderful museum. (Your new Class Reporter some years ago was introduced to a William and Mary couple, the Eugene Guesses, by the then governor, in the Matanuska Valley. The Guesses have made names for themselves in our 49th state.)

Frances Hunt Cole of Scituate, Mass., urges that life must go on, she having lost her husband, Herbert E. Cole, and doubling her work in transcribing Braille and her church activities. She winters in Tucson and notes she is blessed with a daughter, son-in-law and grandson.

Marjorie Lacy Burns, Roxboro, N.C., has been enjoying visits with her family, her son, Paul L. Burns, Wake Forest, '57, and wife, Barbara Frye of Concord, N.C., and her two grandsons, in St. Louis, Mo.

In the back of one of our era annuals there appears a "Joke."

"What did Sir Walter Raleigh say to Queen Elizabeth when he spread his cloak over the mud puddle?"

"Answer: 'Step on it, gal. Step on it'."
So to all you gals and lads out there, STEP ON IT. SEND NEWS AND ANECDOTES.

30 Dr. Simon M. Shubitz was honored by the University of Chicago when he was awarded a Cancer Prize and a Lectureship was established at the University. The prize honors and rewards excellence in cancer research and is given to internationally respected scientists who have made significant contributions to the solutions of the cancer problem. How proud we are that a member of our class has not only brought such an honor to our Alma Mater, but has done so much towards stamping out this dread disease. Congratulations!

Elizabeth Lanier (Betty) continues her 51st year of interest and activity in Kappa Delta. She attended her 15th convention in Coronado, Ca., in June. In October she spent ten days enjoying the fall foliage in New England.

Thomas A. Hart evaluates the countries they visited in Europe in April, May and June as follows: Switzerland-the most expensive; Italy-the most artistic; Spain-the most fatalistic; Portugal-the most welcoming and the least expensive; and England - nostalgic, like a visit to grandmother's. He'll be back for our 50th reunion--another nostalgic trip!

Lucy Mae Boswell Crymble lives with her husband among many other retirees of Tennessee Eastman Corp. in Kingsport, Tenn. Lucy Mae taught school in Windsor and later in Petersburg until she married and moved to Tennessee. This was her retirement 44 years ago. Since then she has done and is still doing much volunteer work. From this she says she'll expire, not retire. She is on one of the standing committees of the First Presbyterian Church, an active sustainer of the Junior League of America, has served as president, treasurer and now is on the steering committee of the board of the Netherland Inn Assoc., Inc. During her 15 years with this organization she has assisted in the restoration of the Old Stage Coach Inn and credits the years at William and Mary with sharpening her interest in this project and the wonderful display, "A Century of Clothing," which was exhibited in October. They have two children, Lucy Morse, who has three children and lives in Winter Park, Fl., and A.C. Crymble, Jr., a systems engineer with IBM in Kingsport who has three boys.

Elsie Beebe Swezey was active in initiating a chapter of Mortar Board at the University of Delaware. A group of members from various chapters acted as a steering committee in the organization and now have a well-established chapter. She and her husband plan to come to our 50th class reunion if it does not conflict with the similar reunion at the U. of Del. Her husband is serving on the committee for that reunion. We hope it works out that they can attend both.

Billey Baylis Kenny is now a great-grandmother for the 6th time. She'll be attending a grandson's wedding in Chicago in May. Again, we hope the dates will not conflict.

Ed Trice has the right attitude about our reunion. He says he and Bernice will be there and he'll do anything he can to help. A great offer and I pass it along to the Alumni Office.

Joe and I are in Melbourne until April when we'll return to Millwood and we'll be in Williamsburg in May. '30-----'80, a long time, but we're all much the same. Come back and see!

Enjoyed hearing both directly and through the Alumni Office from some of you. Helene Donnelly was sorry to miss the 45th because of a trip to the South Pacific, but she enjoyed looking over the class reunion picture. Lillian Carmine Sterling (one of the old faithfuls at reunions), accompanied by her husband and oldest daughter, visited their grandson and wife--both in the Air Force at Homestead AFB near Miami, Fla., then went on down to the Keys for a pleasant trip. Lillian still lives in historic Gloucester, Va.

Elizabeth Young Clark of Bluefield, W.Va., had a lovely Mother's Day gift - her first grandson! Kitty (Catherine) Blanton Seay (whom I had the pleasure of sitting near at the Alumni Banquet, renewing old memories) is also proud of a new grandson, and her daughter Ann Seay Duncan is an alumna of the Class of 1961. Sounds like we are raising lots of future frosh for W&M.

Ruth Proudman Biermann and her husband are ardent sailors, wintering in places like St. Croix, then on to more sailing at Punta Gorda, Fla., and continuing the sport on Indian Lake at home in Ohio. Lucille Ozlin Mays from Orlando, Fla., said that she and her husband regretted missing the reunion, though there in spirit, because

TENNIS TEAM IN CLASSIC

While some people were suffering cold weather the women's tennis team competed in the Marriott National Collegiate Tennis Classic in Rancho Mirage, Calif., January 4, 5, & 6. Lisa Milligan, Carolyn Saylor, Chris Mast and Sue Howard played singles and doubles in the event which included women players ranked in the USTA along with Martina Narativola and Chris Evert.

of taking a long-planned trip to California. I was delighted to receive some personal letters as a result of the last newsletter. One from Ann Pharr Goodykoontz, Louisville, Ky., said that the sad illness and death of her brother kept her and her husband from the 45th, but they are enthusiastic about the 50th! Winnie Cory Jobbins (I have always claimed Jimmy as a classmate, but it seems now he is a Lehigh graduate) wrote that after 28 years with Binny & Smith they have moved from Pennsylvania to Hovey-in-the-Hills, Fla., where they are starting a new career - the citrus business (we'll keep our fingers crossed for a mild winter down that way!). They are hoping to include Williamsburg in their trip north in the late summer, and Fred and I would certainly welcome a visit. I do find it difficult to remember who was in which class; after all, we started in '30, and thus had friends and acquaintances from '30 to '37. (I have always felt we'd see a lot more people we know at the big reunions if it could be for adjacent classes instead of classes 5 years apart). Carleen Loeffler Sims keeps in touch from Washington, D.C., where she stays busy with community activities; her husband "Admiral" (Air Force retired) has been recovering from a broken hip for some time and we were delighted a few months ago to even see him dancing a bit up in D.C. Faith Bugbee Vogel (circumstances took her to California and she was graduated from Stanford) lives in San Rafael and is still a devotee of the College. We enjoyed seeing Faith and Fred in San Francisco last year. They did get back for a reunion a couple of years ago. We hope they can make the 50th. Always look forward to their Christmas cards with pictures taken of them from some exotic place. They do travel! Ruth Sharrett Glen is enjoying life in West Palm Beach, Fla. She keeps interested in politics, music, the arts, etc. We had a lovely visit with her a couple of years ago and hope to repeat. I never think of the Yorktown Sesquicentennial without thinking of Ruth. We were partners in a dance in gym class; and, if you remember, we all had to perform at Yorktown! 1981 will be the big celebration there. (Except for no ferry, it hasn't changed that much!)

Of course, Alice Cohill Marquez and I have kept in close touch through the years. She and Greg live in her lovely old family home in Clear Spring, Md. We always love visiting there and hope to go soon. Alice retired from teaching, still keeps busy with various literary organizations, the theatre, and helping Greg show his beautiful roses. There are quite a few of us in Williamsburg and vicinity -- Frances Spindle Harris, who shares my enthusiasm for hearing from all of you and working now for a good class fund and a great 50th reunion; so glad she moved here from Richmond. Edna Bland Hall MacGillivray (we finally met again recently after all these years); Dot Littlepage Allen who, with husband Gib, does a lot of travelling, and enjoys her new grandson. I was distressed to see their names omitted from the 45th -- they sat at the same table with us at the Alumni Banquet. Emil Johnson and wife Ted leave their lovely home near Irvington, Va., to visit once in a while. Emil remains an ardent worker for our Alma Mater and is another enthusiast about a great 1984. Anne Spratley Dice moved back to Hampton this past year -- good to have her near. Howard Scammon is supposed to be "retired," but he is one of the busiest people I know. If you haven't purchased a copy of The William and Mary Theatre - 50 Years, it is well worth the price for the beautiful pictures and wonderful memories. A real labor of love and devotion, it never would have been captured on paper if Howard hadn't done it -- those wonderful years with Althea Hunt. and then for future

HALL OF FAME

JEFFREY MILHAM '68
HEADS DESIGNERS

Jeffrey A. Milham '68 has been elected president of the International Association of Lighting Designers, an organization comprised of professional lighting design consultants for architecture. Milham is president of Design Decisions, Inc., a division of Syska and Hennessy, Inc. As such, he is responsible for all lighting and design and application of their offices in New York, Washington, D.C., Los Angeles, and San Francisco. He also teaches an advanced course in lighting design at Parsons School of Design in New York.

classes with Howard. Now Howard directs the "Covenant Players" (students in the Catholic Student Association and the Canterbury Association [Episcopal]). There were two fine productions this past year -- "Godspell" and "St. Joan." At present he is working on a new musical, "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dream Coat." In December he played four parts in the world premier of Thea Musgrave's "A Christmas Carol," performed by the Virginia Opera Company in Norfolk, Va. The most exciting role was Jacob Marley's Ghost. Howard said it was a terrific experience "creating" such a part for the first time. Before schools closed for Christmas holidays he spent a couple of weeks, appropriately dressed in a "bundly red costume" with knit cap, scarf, etc., reading Christmas stories to kindergarteners through second grade youngsters in the Great Hall. The fireplace mantel was decorated in holiday fashion, and each kiddie received a gingerbread man. This is a sample - did I say "retired"?

Haven't heard from Bob Land and Cecil Harper since the reunion, but they are two more who really want the 50th to be a great success. Anyway, Frances and I hope you are inspired to let us know what you are doing and enjoying. I don't think we've ever had a Class Fund??? So we'll try to get the ball rolling soon. Keep in touch. I hope 1980 is a healthy and happy year for you, and no more snow for us. We had 14 inches on January 5th!

36 Eleanor Hooker Boisseau wrote, "We all love the College of William and Mary as my whole family went there. We go to Williamsburg every chance we get. My father, who is 94 years old, is still active in William and Mary affairs. My son, a William and Mary graduate, was married in November. We have a good alumni club here (Richmond) which we all enjoy." She is a member of the council of the Virginia Museum. She gives two days a month helping there. She is also a member of the Sunshine Circle of the Crippled Childrens Hospital. They work all year making items to sell at the Holiday Mart. This past year they cleared over $13,000.

Eugene Barclay and Bea Torrence Barclay wrote that their news is all travelling news. They have been travelling both in the United States and in Europe. In June they visited Bea's sister Claudia, '39, in California. They also visited their daughter Claudia and their grandchildren in Colorado. Both Claudia and her husband attended William and Mary. In September, Gene and Bea toured Scotland and England. This January they plan to visit Florida and expect to see Red Kranke while there.

Helen Conner Young is now living in Fort Worth, Tex., with her husband who is an engineer. They are retired and celebrated their 40th anniversary in July, 1979. They have two daughters and four grandchildren. They enjoy Texas. "Connie" said she received a Christmas card from Dorothy Prince Oldfield and husband Barney Oldfield. Dot and Barney live in Westfield, N.J., and have one daughter and two sons.

Mabel Turner Powell was a widow with two children for 26 years when she married Harold Powell, a widower, just five years ago. Mabel's first husband, Graves Smith, died of Bulbar Polio leaving her with a son Dick, age six, and a daughter Nancy, age three. Mabel taught school in Norfolk, Va. Her son Dick has two boys. Her daughter Nancy is still waiting for the perfect man to come along. She is a Deputy Clerk in Juvenile Court. Mabel and her husband have a Terry Travel Camper. In Florida they visited Louise Merkle Fritsch and her husband Bill. While camping on Skyline Drive in September, 1979, they visited Marianne Keller Nixon and her husband Ed. Mabel wrote that renewing friendships with old William and Mary friends was a wonderful experience.

Louise Merkle Fritsch is alive and well and living in Fort Myers, Fla. She and her husband Bill keep busy with their eight grandchildren. They also keep busy with guests, including old WAVES, dropping in on them. Several years ago they had a reunion of William and Mary friends, including Eleanor Gill, Billie Newberry Mac Farlane and husband, Peggy Rocap Schaldel and sister Ruth. Peggy Rocap Schaldel lives in Clearwater, Fla.

Herbert K. Salter wrote that he is moving permanently to Florida. His new address is Stone Hill, 441 E. N.E. 195th St. #302, North Miami Beach, Fla. 33179.

Corajane Quarrier Parker writes that her sister Emily, '37, took a trip with her to Mexico City and Yucatan in April. They also had a delightful trip to Cornwall, Wales and Scotland in June. In November they went to Ecuador and Macchu Pichu in Peru.

Jasper L. Kranke, better known as "Red," writes, "I am Vice President of Alfer Associates, Inc., a building construction co., plus I assist in the VITA Program to help senior citizens. I also assist some small businesses. I am busy, really."

Classmates, please write. We care.

38 It's good to be able to report more activities of energetic '38 classmates. Martha Moreland Thomas (I'll never be able to think of her as anything but "Pete") writes from Hampton that she has retired after 30 years as librarian for the United States Army at Fort Monroe. She's enjoying retirement and time for duplicate bridge, tennis and a few organizations. She adds, "We have season tickets for William and Mary football games--always enjoyable. Williamsburg is a lovely place." Amen to that, Pete.

Remember Dottie Kincaid Portz's fascinating letter in The Alumni Gazette several years ago? She is still a practicing attorney and active in politics in Solon, Ohio. She and husband Woody plan to come East for son David's graduation from law school at Georgetown University. I'm hoping to see them when they visit friends in Wilmington.

Elizabeth Rumsey Weber reports that she has two married daughters: Mary Weber Williams, a graduate of Virginia Commonwealth University, is active in arthritis research in Hartford, Conn.; and Elizabeth Weber Hoskins, mother of two, graduated, cum laude, from University of Maryland in 1978.

Frances Jenkins Taylor writes from Richmond: "After our three boys finished college, married and now have homes of their own, I went back to Virginia Commonwealth University and got a certificate in library science. After working a few years as part-time librarian in schools, I have now retired and am librarian for my church."

Another retiree is Harold Kyle. He will no longer be a senior vice president of The Chesapeake Corporation of Virginia, but will continue to serve as a director of the company. Congratulations, Harold!

Virginia Betts Chapman writes from Smithfield that she and her husband visit Williamsburg and the College often, especially during the basketball season.

We'll hope to hear more from Margaret Heatwole Lockwood come fall, for her brief note is most enthusiastic. "In the summer of 1980, I shall be working as instructor of water sports at Mic Mac Cove Campgrounds, Union, Me. You know it will be more pleasure than work!"

A clipping about Carol McCoy Auer is very impressive. For many years she has, as a volunteer, taught painting at East Harlem Protestant Parish. Last fall a selection of her paintings was shown in Upper School Gallery of Greenwich, Conn., Academy, and her works are in numerous private collections.

Mildred Albee Babb has lots of hobbies and I enjoyed catching up with them and her through her newsy letter. In addition to keeping up with married children and four grandchildren, Mildred is extremely involved with a community theatre group. She has been property mistress or costumer for several of their plays recently, working with several other William and Mary people as actors and directors. She is also active in her church in Hampton, which dates back to 1610. She is an officer in Women's Guild, Chairman of Guild of the Christ Child, teaches in Sunday School (even to designing much of the curriculum) and is a member of Hunger Task Force and Heritage Committee. I recall mentioning something about having a "cause" in one of last year's letters. Carol and Mildred certainly do their share in this regard, and we're delighted to hear about it.

I wasn't able to go to Homecoming last fall and my only contact with the College was not a happy one. Husband Nick and I went to the William and Mary-University of Delaware football game near here with another William and Mary couple and watched Delaware batter our Indians. The after-game party was on a happier note, but there were no other '38 classmates there.

Keep those letters coming!

40 I am grateful for Christmas cards which I look forward to receiving each year. David and Bobbie Milligan Molyneux have sold their home in Charlotte, N.C., and have an apartment in a new complex to see if they like this type of dwelling for when David retires. They spent this past Christmas in Florida for a change from the "snow route." Their new address in Charlotte is Essex 4942 A, 4900 Sardis Road.

Charlotte Bagot White's youngest, Lisa, was married in April and is living in Wichita. She and her Peter were expected home for Christmas, along with her older sister Lynne and brother Frank from California. Carl's younger son Gary is working and living with her in Overland Park, Kan., for a while.

Jean Clarahan Bratton moved into her new home in Emory, Va., in May and is happily settled. She had a lovely introduction to the Southwest this fall when she visited a Wilmette friend now living in Arizona. She took her on a mini-tour which included a swim in Green Valley, south of Tucson, and snow on the way to the Grand Canyon. She says these short trips make her look forward to retiring in a few years and being able to stay a little longer in the fascinating places she sees so briefly now. Jean plans to try to go to Homecoming in October for our 40th. Ditto for Rosa Ellis Long, "Cookie" and Caldwell Cason, and Margaret and Al Alley.

From Alfred Alley in Fair Oaks, Calif., we learn that son Bill remains in the Los Angeles area -- working and singing and studying for an operatic career. Al and Margaret went in June to her class reunion at Vassar and, after visiting in Virginia, flew on to Texas. Margaret resigns her job on March 1st and Al retires on June 1st. He is working on a cook book which he hopes to have in manuscript form to submit to a publisher by June.

"Cookie" (Elizabeth Jane) and Caldwell ("Casey" now) Cason have moved to Bradenton, Fla., after "Casey's" second retirement (first was from the Navy) October 12th. We saw them at Homecoming champing at the bit to get going and now they're all settled and supremely happy.

Scrib and Ginny Clauden Allen moved into their condominium in Burlington, Vt., in January during sub-freezing and frozen pipe weather, and Scrib has found a "happy niche as Executive Director of the Target Area Development Corporation." Daughter Pam's Master & National Honor Society Award for Educational Psychology helped her get the job she wanted, running a pilot program in St. Paul which detects children's learning problems and, with training, sends normal, happier children off to start their education. Son Jeff is doing graduate work, is in "the very popular post and beam construction world," as well as the Olympic speed skating committee, Audubon, and representing the Vermont Institute of Natural Science.

Frances Wagener Read is on the Board of Historical Alexandria Docents and Secretary of Waynewood Citizen's Association and is active in Fairfax County (Virginia) Republican Party.

Elizabeth Craig Kirkwood of Menlo Park, Calif., was in Williamsburg between the end of the school year and the beginning of summer session so didn't see anyone. She enjoyed walking over the campus and playing golf at the Golden Horseshoe Course.

Ned and Helen Gudebrod LeGrande have sold their farm and have moved to Naples, Fla. Their new address is Holiday Manor, Box 778, Rt. 4, 33942.

We are indeed saddened to learn that Seymour Shwiler's wife passed away in April. Our belated sympathy to you, Sy.

Our congratulations to Jack Garrett who has been named to the Search Committee for the new Vice President for Development at the College.

And, speaking of Jack, it is none too soon to be making your plans for our big 40th reunion at Homecoming, October 3-4. We hope to have a great turnout and it promises to be a very special occasion. Do keep me posted of your plans.

42 Roy B. Merritt retired in June after 34 years of teaching, coaching and educational administration. He is now free-lance writing fiction and poetry, and hopes to start work on a novel soon. Still married to Mary Henderson after 37 years, they share golf and tennis, and I'm sure a very happy retirement in Chestnut Hill, Mass.

Mary Ruth Black Dowling's two daughters, Lynne (W&M '74) and Dana, were married last year. She finished her term as president of Girl Scouts of Central Maryland and is now on the Board of Directors of the United Way of Central Maryland. The Community Chest and Maryland Association of Parliamentarians also fill her time.

GRIFFIN DUO SUPPORTS TRIBE

Robert Lee Griffin Jr., '40 attended the William and Mary-Georgia Tech football game this fall with his grandson Robert Lee Griffin IV, who, like his grandfather, dressed in green and gold that day and had a homemade baby-sized pennant to wave. Mr. Griffin journeyed to Atlanta from Norfolk to see the game. The Gazette is indebted to his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Robert L. Griffin III of Decatur, Ga., for the photograph.

biology in Whittier, Calif., high school. She is now an accomplished weaver, a hobby she plans to turn into a full-time business in a couple of years when she retires from teaching. We manage to get together occasionally.

Louise Julius Greene is living in Sacramento. Her husband is a retired Air Force officer. We shared Christmas of 1978 in Escondido.

Jeanne Jefferson, '41, Brown of Denver spent several days after Christmas in the San Diego area and came to dinner with her new husband, Allan Brown. She is about to be a grandmother for the third time.

Good news from Frances Pendleton, '44, Elliott of two weddings in her family, too. Son Bill is now living in Toronto, Canada, and daughter Dorothy will be living in Grenoble, France, for a year.

My summer was really exciting as I spent three weeks in Kenya, Africa, visiting friends. They took me on three safaris, and the beauty of that vast country and the excitement of being in the midst of thousands of wild animals defies description. The city of Nairobi is as cosmopolitan as Paris or London. However, in August my husband underwent surgery for a malignant brain tumor. Recovery is slow, but having two of our daughters here for Christmas helped a lot.

Now that the Class of '42 column is back in business, please send me your news. I keep in touch with my various roommates, but local alumni meetings cater to a much younger crowd, so my resources are limited if you don't write. I would love to see any Southern California visitors.

44 Our 35th Reunion at Homecoming '79 was a great success and everyone should be making plans for the 40th in 1984. The weather during the four days was the best I've seen in the last twenty years for Homecoming. In fact, the Saturday night class cocktail party hosted by the Entwises and Vermilyes was held in the garden rather than indoors. There was also the Donald-Foster-Williams Bloody Mary party at the Brickhouse to watch the Homecoming parade.

Many people who returned for the first time since graduation admitted they had been missing a great time and promised to return soon.

The Kappas returned in mass, with many seeing each other for the first time in years. There were Billy Davison Cantlay and her newly retired General husband, George, who are going to live in Hawaii, Marion Ross Karrick and Sam, Katie Rutherford Watson and Jack, Jean Lockridge Quinn and Langdon, Ann Washington and her husband, Bebe Nelson Judge and Ed, Dorothy Lee Nelson, Prickett Carter Saunders and Hallie Rennie Martin.

There was also Ralph and Gloria Lipfert, Jean Boyd Lacy and Ben, Anne Dobie Peebles, Bill Ditto and Anne, Dot Agurk Edmonds and Dave, Dixon and Nancy Norris Foster, Jane Rohn Tobish and Joe, Wayne and Marge Retzke Gibbs who were all excited about their retirement to North Carolina, Jane and Bill Smith who also again ran another successful Alumni Tennis Tournament, Lois Spratley Donald and Doug, John and Marilyn Miller Entwisle, Sarah Jane Snyder Vermilye and Dyck, Bill Bauman, Walt Weaver and Mary, Artie Reisfeld and Adelaide, Gloria Morgan Abbotts and Bill, Sunshine Trumbo

Williams and Rolf, Anna Edwards Harnsberger and James, George Rafey, and Don Ream. My apologies to any one who has not been mentioned since my memory is limited.

There were many notes of regret from those who wished to be at Homecoming but who could not attend. Mary Carven Sale wrote from Pittsburgh that she would be unable to attend since her husband had been in the hospital. Pat Howard Parry and Bill are now planning a trip through the Panama Canal, live in California. C. J. Claudon's reunion plans were cancelled because of his father's illness. Marge Talle Merryman wrote from Baltimore that she would be in Iowa in October for a month--rented a red school house and would paint, draw and sketch. Billie Snead wrote from Baltimore that she had pressing legal work and could not come. Louise Spalding Hollis and John were going to be at a judicial meeting. Gladys Wallace Goldsmith and Larry's daughter was to be married Homecoming weekend. Winnie Gill Gessey and Don sent regrets from Santa Cruz but noted a successful cruise through the Panama Canal to various South American and Caribbean ports. Likewise, Jean Bulette Boggs and Larry were going to be traveling in India, Kashmir and Nepal for a month. Julius T. Sadler sent from Litchfield, Conn., that the manuscript for The Stable Tour by J. T. Sadler & Jacqueline Sadler is off to the publisher for sale in fall of 1980.

Robert Weinberg of Pikesville, Md., wrote that he missed Homecoming because of travel in Spain. He also reported the death of one of our classmates, Florencio Coll, '44, in Barcelona, Spain, in June 1979.

This news is a combination of inputs from Sunny Trumbo Williams and Don Ream. Sunny had a busy time after Homecoming since her daughter Lesney was married at Sandbridge the first weekend after Homecoming and the next weekend, Jean Boyd Lacy's daughter was married at Front Royal, Va. At the Williams' wedding house party were Fran Loesch Bruner and Bob, Ruth and Cato Tillar, Jean and Page Preston, Jane and Pete Whittemore, Lois Spratley Donald and Doug, Jean McPherson Morris and Hal, and Connie Curtis Law. At Front Royal, in addition to the Williams, Dot Agurk Edmonds and Dave (with Florida shrimp they had flown in for the reception), the Whittemores, and Prestons.

Thanks to all of you who participated in some manner - wrote letters, sent money, or who attended Homecoming - to make our 35th a GREAT REUNION. Don't forget to continue to support the Class of '44's 35th Reunion Gift-the new patio for Alumni House. We need your help.

Please write with your news and doings. Start planning for the 40th.

46 Our new class reporter is Barbara Nycum Moore, Rt. 2, Box 93, Waverly, Va., 28890. Since Nickie lives close to Williamsburg, she will be expected not only to write this column, but to keep an eye on the College for us, and not let anything happen to it! Write her your news. In the meantime, here's a little bit of what's been going on with some of us!

Frances Wills Lee Young of Norfolk has been employed since last May as Personnel Administrator for the Va. Beach Branch of VSE Corporation. It is an engineering company, she says, with corporate headquarters in Alexandria, Va.

Henrietta Kapler Margraf of Tuckerton, N.J., now has a total of 3 grandchildren--2 boys and a girl! Henzie was looking forward to spending the holidays in Iowa with her daughter Nancy.

Robert Volkert Harrison of Ft. Worth went to Homecoming with her sister Ruth, '49, whose class was having a reunion. Bobbie is working hard these days at the Ft. Worth Symphony.

Peggy Burdick Purcell of Glen Burnie, Md., has a daughter at the College! Karen Burdick Purcell is a sophomore.

Betty Marie Ellet Lile of Little Rock enjoyed visits from three classmates last year. In the spring, Jene Carr Dent was there and later in the summer Olive Ann Hasty Shelor and husband Roy stopped by.

I've had a wonderful time being Class Reporter. Send Nickie your news--and let's always stay in touch!

48 It is hard to realize that three months have passed since that very special event - Homecoming 1979! There were too few there from our class, but those of us who were there had a great time. The cocktail party in the wide-open spaces of the Student Activities Center was most enjoyable, and I personally felt that it was most appropriate for us to be there on the campus. Since it was reunion for the class of '49, that class was well represented, and we especially enjoyed mixing with so many that we had not seen in many a year!

Some of those whom we saw were Tina and Dabney Carr, Warren and Pat Snyder Smith, Harvey and Ann Pope, Walt Weaver, Dixie and Nancy McFadden Walker, Dennis and Jean Ann Harrup Cogle, to name a few. Because we were uncertain of our time of arrival, we did not plan to attend the class dinner. When this began, Henry and Phyllis Struse Shook, the Cogles and we found dinner at the Lafayette as delicious as always.

On Saturday morning we made our way through the mist and fog to the President's House for coffee and to cheer the joggers on. We thought Don Ream in his 1944 sweatshirt the star! President and Mrs. Graves, gracious as always, had open house for the occasion and showed everyone around the house, which had been renovated and had a new archway joining the two "parlors," one of which has a lovely new chandelier.

At the dinner-dance, we enjoyed being with Warren Rockwitt and his wife Mimi, who had driven from Syracuse, N.Y., to Williamsburg - twelve hours. It was a pleasure to see Shirley Major Wartel and husband Bill, who somehow finds time in his very busy life to teach a class at The Wharton School. He has his Ph.D. from there; and, as some of you will remember, he was Phi Beta Kappa in our class.

One incident that somewhat dashed our good spirits was Charlie Bryan's rather rude treatment at the hands of a waiter at the Lodge, who actually dealt him a blow on the head with a plate! Somehow this seems to be poor treatment for our patronage.

All things considered, being back in Williamsburg was great! Even though Rutgers won the game, the weather turned out to be fine, and Chi O was second in the floats! (Alpha Chi won again!)

There are many news items this time. One of the most interesting and different was a note from Sylvia Lagerholm Vaughn. Sylvia, who lives in San Mateo, Calif., was traveling in Portillo, Chile, when she saw an extraordinary sight - a South American boy, typical of the Andes, wearing - what else? - a William and Mary shirt!

Ann Brower Turner, retiring chairman of the North Carolina Art Society's Tour Committee, and 50 other members of the Society visited China in the fall for nearly three weeks.

Virginia Jewell Pollock writes that she and her husband Dr. Nicholas Pollock are living in Frederick, Md. They have three children: Brian, who is 22 and in the doctoral program at the University of Alabama; Susan, 17, a senior in high school and looking forward to college in the fall; and Lynne, 15, a sophomore in high school.

Lorabeth Moore Fitzgerald lives in Grandhedge, Mich. Her son Frank was graduated from the College in 1979 and is now attending law school in Michigan.

Jane Eastham Rottier lives in Annandale, Va., with her husband, a retired photographer with National Capital Parks, and two of their six children. Richard (21) work in their Genius Construction Company and Robin (19) attends Northern Virginia Community College in Annandale. Oldest of the six, Jane (26) is studying art in New York and attends Hunter College; Ross (25) was graduated Phi Beta Kappa from V.P.I. and works in Palisade, N.Y., and attends Columbia University. Kathy (24) and Julie (23) are both graduates of James Madison University.

Susanne Earls Carr lives in New York and has been asked to join the interior design firm of Parish, Hunley, Inc.

Howard Hopkins Hyle and his wife Mary live in Atlanta, Ga. They have four children: Julie, who spent one year at William and Mary, is now a research nutritionist at Emory Hospital in Atlanta, after receiving her M.S. from Cornell; Meg, who teaches, received her M.A. from Georgia State; their son Howard is with the Bay County, Fla., Chamber of Commerce; and Chip, their youngest, is a senior at Westminster School in Atlanta.

Our Christmas notes held great interest for Bill and me as I am sure they will for you. Elaine Campton Baker and husband Jim are now in Tunis, Tunisia. It is hard to tell where on the globe they will turn up next. I hope Elaine is progressing on that book she must write. Few people have such lives of adventure as Jim and Elaine!

Ann Potterfield Gregory and her husband Brodie live in Leesburg, Va. They now have three grandchildren: two girls and a boy.

Janet Pierce Waller lives in Leesburg, too, with her husband John and their two children, Jonny and Ellen. Her "terse" Christmas note stated that they had seen Elaine and Jim on their way to Tunisia.

As usual, I enjoyed hearing from old friend Sally Phillips Mileur of Silver Spring, who assured me that they would not be moving to Okla. until '81 at least; and Edie Horn, who lives in Takoma Park, Md., thinks we should have a reunion of William and Mary folks from this area at Tysons' Corner Mall. I agree!

Recently, I chatted on the telephone with Nancy Hynson Tallant, who lives in Wilmington, Del., where our daughter Lou is. Her son - a law student - is to be married in the spring and her daughter is at Westhampton. Nancy's cousins, some of whom are Hynsons, live here in Manassas and two of them are our neighbors. Small world?

Did I write that I had a long and interesting letter from Nancy Noyes Saffko? She and her husband Bill, who has recently received his master's degree from western Kentucky University, have moved to San Diego. Their lives sound full - busy, interesting, and fun.

You write too, hear?

BROKERAGE FIRM PROMOTES ALUMNA

Kathryn W. Wommack '72 has been named Assistant Vice President by Wheat, First Securities, Inc., a financial services and brokerage firm in Richmond. Miss Wommack came to Wheat, First Securities, Inc., from the Hartford National Bank of Hartford, Conn. She has been a Product Leader within the Fixed Income Department with several different types of securities.

The photo at left was taken at the 25th reunion of a group of outstanding Virginians who organized the conversion of the city garage in Richmond to the Arena-Parker Field, the city's first important sports facility. The organizers, who included W. Brooks George '32 (second from left, seated) and H. I. Willett '25, '55 LLD (third from right) gathered to celebrate the event at which Clyde Ratcliffe, Jr., president of the Arena-Parker Field from 1954-79, presided. Mr. Ratcliffe, who recently supplied the Gazette with the photo, is married to the former Lelia Chewning '32. William and Mary teams played many times in the Arena.

50 Thanks for all the cards and notes. Considering our age, I think it is a pretty good turnout. I had a long note from Tommy Banks. Tommy and wife Lorraine visited Ava Gardner in London. Later in the summer the Banks were hosts at the Ava Gardner Collection in Smithfield, N.C. They plan this as an annual exhibit. Tommy has really done quite a bit with this exhibit and I am sure if any Phi Kappa Taus have any souvenir pictures, etc., he would be delighted to add them to the collection. You can contact Tommy at The Aristocrat, 1608, 1200 Hibiscus Ave., Pompano Beach, Fl. 33062.

Had a note from Jim Brothwell, regional vice president of United Bank of Arizona, chairman of 1980 United Way. Jim is a verbal chamber of commerce for Mesa, and if the newspaper articles of the campaign put on by The All American City are true, he will be hailed for many more. Incidentally, Mesa must be a great place to live.

Nancy Kurtz Falck and George will be grandparents in the spring to daughter Susan's first. Daughter Gigi and husband will be moving to Richmond and son Andrew is a thriving 8th grader. Daughter Laurie is loving law school. Nancy was elected to the Fairfax County board of Supervisors. Pat Jones Warner and Bill spent some time with Shirley Lyons Hardwick in London. Pat's son Bill is in the seminary in Denver. Daughter Sally and husband have a new home in Carrollton, Tex.

Short note from Skippy Beecher Scrymgeour. She and Bruce have been busy.

Nicky Dillard Dewing and Jay still sail and Nicky has her flower business. Her brother Jim Dillard, '59, was reelected to the Virginia House of Delegates.

Woodland Wayland and Yvonne made it to Homecoming this year. Daughter Kathy is an outstanding student at Queens College. Sons are 17, 15, 13. Hope to see Woody and Yvonne. My brother and I bought a condo in Annapolis so maybe it will be an excuse to get to Maryland.

OB and Mim Root plan to go to 30th reunion in the fall.

Blair and Gloria Mackenzie are still in Virginia Beach. They have been busy in the Tidewater Sports Car Club.

Sue and Randy Davis have joined the ranks of no children at home. Son Randolph is coaching and teaching. Beth and husband are in Virginia Beach, Mallory and new husband are in Norfolk. Sue had a visit with Jean Murphy Meile and Bill. Jean and Jack Bruce have a granddaughter. Jack Cloud is on the mend after a terrible accident playing soft ball. Joe Mark and Faith are in Charlottesville. Veto and Betty at Shippensburg (Veto's coaching). Shirley Green May and Billy visit Sue and Randy often. Their youngest is in pilot school in Florida. Sue and Dick Duncan are regulars at William and Mary games. Thanks so much, Sue, for the news.

Janet Pierce Waller and John had a great trip to Florida in the fall and drove up the coast.

Ruth Barnes Chalmers was spending Christmas in Florida. She has been to Europe a couple of times this year and visited with Shirley Lyons Hardwick. Ruthie sees Bill Low and Jean quite often in Houston.

Liz and Bob Shuman plan to enjoy Christmas with their sons who are both living nearby now.

Walter E. Pcheny is still in the Boston area and looking forward to having some William and Mary athletic events scheduled there. Walter lives in Salem, Mass.

Marvin Atkins is living in Barrington, Ill. His daughter Debbie is going to graduate school at Stanford as a business major. Congratulations, Marvin, Stanford has an excellent reputation. I am kind of an adopted alumna as I have so many Stanford "Indian" friends. Tommy Palmer is living in Charleston, S.C. He retired from the Marine Corps in 1968 and has been elected Speaker of Faculty at the College of Charleston for the second year. He and Marge restored an antebellum home in Charleston. Sounds great. They have three grown sons.

Edward Brickell has been named one of North America's top 100 school administrators by the Executive Educator, published by the National School Boards Association. The top 100 were drawn from every level of school administration and were chosen from among hundreds of names submitted by the American School Board Association's Journal. Congratulations, Dr. Brickell.

We had both girls and both of our mothers for Christmas. Our weather held out and all enjoyed the visits. Bob and I made a dash to Virginia in November on our way to a Morrison reunion in Louisiana. Many thanks to all of you who took time to make this column so long. How about more of you doing the same? Remember, we are all 50, and it isn't that bad, really.

52 The idea of a mini-reunion for the Class of '52 in the Arlington, Va., vicinity occurred to me prior to Jerry's and my heading for Homecoming. In short notice, the response resulted in an evening of pleasant visiting with former classmates. Joan Burgess and husband George brought a visiting relative with them. They have recently moved from Vienna to historic Falls Church, Va. where they are located midway between their respective teaching jobs. Joan teaches third grade in Vienna and George teaches engineering at Northern Virginia University. Among the small but interesting groups were Betsy Graves and Bob Smith from Fairfax, Va. She is working in a media-resource center this year, but she is eager to return to classroom math teaching next year. She and Bob were to have spent Christmas in San Antonio with their daughter. Dick Lewis and his wife attended the gathering as it was his first time since graduation that he was unable to be at Homecoming weekend. We were interested to learn that Dick flies to Detroit frequently to confer with one of his clients, Ford Motor Co., in Dearborn. Claudia Richmond Harman came also and shared highlights with us of her Greek Isles Cruise last September. Thanks to those of you who phoned or wrote regrets. We'll see you another time.

Venturing on to Williamsburg the next morning we first touched ground with our son Bruce, who was busy setting up a pre-game party in Brian Court, a lovely dorm-courtyard complex new to campus since "our" days. When we arrived at Jockey Corner to view the parade we immediately found Darrell High and Bernie Wittkamp and their family. They attend nearly all home games and visit their son, a junior at the College. Jer and I had an extended visit with Betsy Skinkler, '54, and Ron Barnes from parade time through lunch and learned much about their active lives. Ron's Transitions consulting business is doing well. He is also traveling around the country extensively, conducting management seminars. Recently he organized Contact, Inc., a firm that provides employee counseling for Arizona businesses. Betsy continues her involvement with League of Women Voters and Toastmasters. She has just completed a term as chairman of the statewide League committee on tax reform and school finance. The Barnes' Christmas letter, with photos, mentioned their celebration of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary, a trip to Maui, Hawaii, and a visit with Betsy's family in New Jersey. Upon learning that Ann Buckles was in town, I tried and tried to locate her. Marge Huff had better success as I discovered when we dined at the same place that evening. (See her '54 column, please.)

Christmas brought cards and letters from nearly all of the above-mentioned people and June Compton Merkle and Jim, who have two teenagers still at home; Carolyn (Andy Anderson) and Don Beimdick, who, along with many of us, are finding themselves faced with three college tuitions simultaneously (forewarning of such predicaments would have been appreciated in Kemodle's marriage class). Beimdicks visited recently in St. Louis with Jim Stoner, the organizational leader of our Religious Emphases Week on the Campus in '52, thanks to Dr. Marsh; and from Alice Williams and John Phillips, who toured France and visited the little town in which they resided 15 years ago when John was stationed there. Nostalgia! Alice continues her work as a social worker in Richmond, Va., and John is retired from the service, but keeps busy with business ventures. We enjoyed reunion with them and Wittkamps a year ago—"tailgate picnic a la Wittkamp" and dinner. Alice's note solved the mystery as to why I am writing this for you. My friend!; Katie Beyers and Bob Hoffman, '51, wrote at Christmas also. She collects antique dolls, has taught adult education for two years, and is keeping her teaching certificate updated in social studies and English by being a perpetual part-time student. Bless you, Katie, for also visiting nursing homes.

Old Dominion Day in Detroit in November provided us with a double-featured surprise. Jerry found a former medical school (U. of Mich.) classmate attending the dinner with his wife, Virginia Hungerford '55. Ginny and her husband, Dr. Allen Moore, live in Bay City where he has a medical practice and she is his receptionist. They and another William and Mary couple used the occasion as an excuse to spend the night at Plaza Hotel, part of the unique and eye-boggling Detroit Renaissance Center. Ginny pursues her interest and talent with drama by participating in community theatre. I spoke with her by telephone recently and she has just completed directing "Sleuth" and will be acting in "California Suite" the end of March. "Break a Leg, Ginny!"

Marvin West has been elected to the Board of Directors of the United Virginia Bank of Williamsburg. Marvin is a dentist and serves on the Alumni Board at the College.

Keep the letters coming. Oh, yes, Rusty l-o-v-e-d- Japan, as testified by a postcard from there and a Christmas note. Thanks, everyone!

54 The Homecoming-25th Reunion weekend was super, just not long enough! We had a good turnout. Those who gathered together for the class picture numbered around fifty. The weather was cooperative, except we were several degrees warmer than we might have liked to be in the sun at the football game. Even the loss to Rutgers failed to dampen spirits of those who returned to see friends not seen in many years.

For those of you who could not be there, you were missed. Some who came were Barb and Bill Brink, all the way from Connecticut. I'm sure there was extra incentive to come because daughter Julie is a sophomore at the College.

Betsy Skinker Barnes and Ron '53 came from Arizona. Bety was planning, after the weekend, to go for a visit with her daughter, who lives and works on the east coast; also she planned to see her brother Hap and Judy, his wife, who was Judy Bell '56.

There were a few non-William and Mary loyal, nonetheless, husbands who came along.

One, Phil Meyers, was brought by Joanne Eversole Meyers, and another, Jay Brown, was brought by your reporter. Joanne and Phil live in Rochester, N.Y. Joanne's business is manager of marketing services for Information Associates. The firm specializes in administrative data processing systems for colleges and universities. The job gets her into travel, training and convention planning.

Harriett and Carol Baskett were one of the couples who were both class members and were in attendance. Pete and Sandy Crenier were there, and I was able to meet their son Ted. The Creniers are also from Connecticut, I should say, for the present, since they have lived in many different places over the past 25 years. Pete is with the Staley Manufacturing Company. Sandy is a medical secretary.

Nate Carb was there, though I missed a chance to chat with him. He is a professor of English at Glassboro State College in New Jersey.

Joe Kinder from Rhode Island came with his wife, neither of whom we had seen since a reunion some ten years ago.

Mickey MacCoy, who didn't have far to come, living in Williamsburg, extended us some warm Williamsburg hospitality at half-time at a small tail-gate gathering, where we met his wife.

Ever-loyal in attendance and support of the College was Rene Henry, coming from Los Angeles, where he is in an international public relations firm. He has since sent to the College films on gymnastics to be used for instruction.

Back in the United States after living in Tehran for some years is John Westberg. He is practicing law in Washington, D.C.

I must not fail to mention others we saw: Quinby Hines, Bob Lawrence, Ann Angle Smith and Tanky Fichtenger Stephenson. Ann Smith is a student again, this time at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville.

It was good to see Gerry Harris and Ann '53, also John Laughlin and his wife Rosalie, from Richmond.

From Lock Haven, Penn., Pete Griffin came. He is the town's Public Defender.

Richmond is now the home of Mary Knabb Blake, who has a good visit with her "old roomie," Bette Bodley Dunker, from Greensboro.

When we gathered for our picture, we found Russ Gills and Page '53, Al Gross, who lives in Williamsburg, Terry Hamilton Carter, Nancy Dixon, Anne LeHew Legge, Shirley Geddes Swickley, and Gordon Vliet.

I was surprised to see Annie Lee Lewis Waltrip, and to find she resides in Williamsburg. Jim Grant and Bonnie '56, and Luther Kiger and his wife were other welcome faces. And there were still more, but memory fails.

Some who didn't make it, but wrote us, were Gil Parmele, who had another very important event conflicting, and Carole Raymond DeSamper. Carole was in Hawaii, but thinking about us.

Nancy Williams Stearns is still pursuing her interest in the theatre, no longer a free-lance director, but doing full-time work with Madison's Dane County Arts Council, and serving as legislative liaison with Wisconsin Theatre Association. She was president of Zeta Phi Eta, a theatre and speech professional fraternity.

A note from Nannell Bartenstein Grube, now widowed, tells of her two sons - Michael, who graduated from Duke in 1976, who now a lieutenant in the U.S. Navy, and another, John, in graduate school, having attended Johns Hopkins University and George Washington University. Another communication was from Margaret Braddock Bowman, who lives in Los Alamos, N.M. Her husband Al '51 is a physical chemist with Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory. They have four children, two sons still at home (Murray, in sixth grade, and Ken in ninth). Cathy is at the University of New Mexico, but was out and working last semester. Brenda graduated from University of California at Santa Barbara in environmental sciences and is living there, working. Margaret teaches sign language to the deaf at Northern New Mexico

JUDGE COOK WINS ALUMNI AWARD

The Honorable Robert E. Cook BCL '50, Ravenna, Ohio, has been named the winner of the Kent State University Alumni Association's 1979 Distinguished Alumnus Award. The award, the highest honor a Kent State graduate can receive from the Alumni Association, is presented annually to a graduate who has made an outstanding contribution in his field and who has performed extraordinary service to the university or to the community, state, or nation. Judge Cook is a member of the 11th District Court of Appeals in Ohio.

TIME MAGAZINE HONORS MANASSAS AUTO DEALER

Jack Martin '53, president of Dudley Martin Chevrolet, Inc., Manassas, Virginia, was named a TIME Magazine Quality Dealer Award (TMQDA) winner for 1980 at the National Automobile Dealers Association (NADA) convention in New Orleans, February 9. Martin is one of only 70 dealers in the entire nation selected for the TIME honor.

TRAVELERS INSURANCE NAMES BJORHUS '49 V-P

Robert E. Biorhus '49 has been appointed executive vice president of the group department at The Travelers Insurance Companies. He had been senior vice president in charge of sales and underwriting, and takes on additional responsibility for claim services for life, accident and health products. He is also president of The Travelers Corporation of Bermuda Ltd, and a director of The Plaza Corporation and The Travelers Life Insurance Company of Canada.

Community College and is lay reader at Trinity-on-the-Hill Episcopal Church.

An interesting write-up appeared in The Lexington Leader, Lexington, Ky., on Martha Bennett Stiles, or Peggy Wells '54. It dealt with her latest book, and she has written several. Star in the Forest, which I just read, has been nominated for the American Library Association's Notable Books of 1979 list. It has been selected as required reading at the University of Kentucky in one of the courses in library science, dealing with critical analysis of children's literature.

56 I hope you all survived the holidays more or less intact. Now, if we can get through the flu season, we can do anything.

I've progressed up the road to the Windmill Point Marine Resort, where the Rappahannock River joins the Chesapeake Bay. It's a small bit of heaven on earth, about an hour by car from Richmond. We're open year-around, so come on down.

The first person I met on return to home territory was Dwight Ozment. His place in posterity is assured with a nearly-two-year-old son, and two grandchildren. Lucky man.

Got a Christmas card from roomie Ginny von Breitenfeld Ferre. She, Dave and youngest stopped by for a visit in the spring. Anyway, son Paul loves Virginia Tech and her other cherub may land at W&M The Colonial Echo staff would be delighted to have you on board, Pete.

Chris and Bob Schlatter are perking right along. Bob stopped by last summer. Their son Kurt got married this fall. Kids grow up too fast.

Anne Pope Kitchen writes that the Ferris stopped by their place following their visit with me.

Little Sis Janet Shaw Finn and her handsome boy Mick fell in the door one day this summer. Her oldest, Carl, is at Notre Dame. Carl worked out at Yorktown for awhile, but I never did catch up with him.

Joy Schlaprizzi Thunstrom and Len visited somewhere along the line, but my mental calendar is out of whack so I can't remember just when it was. I do remember that we ate well. Her life seems to be very full of family and menagerie. Holly is getting married in March (that little tyke married?!). Karin is running in circles and will wind up a paramedic this summer.

Bobby Jo Peters Zahn and Bob sent word that the natives are friendly the other side of the Appalachians. Maybe so, but there can never be too much Virginia.

Milton and Alice Glover Glasser sent greetings from themselves, Laurie and Miltie, and from pets Mac Tavish and Fitzpatrick to my animal, a dachshund named Peter. They also enclosed a picture of young Miltie, a good-looking fellow.

Used to see Dottie Guthrie Wilson fairly often. She just gets prettier every year.

Donald Moore has been named the State Director of Purchasing for the Commonwealth of Virginia by Governor John Dalton, '53. Don previously had been Corporate Director of Services and Purchasing for Sandoz Pharmaceuticals.

Jane Dougherty Marfizo of Harrisburg, Pa., has been elected Vice Chairman of the Lower Paxton Township Board of Supervisors. She was appointed to the Board in June and later elected without opposition. She will also serve as the township representative to the Tri-County Regional Planning Commission.

That's all for now. Dear Bob Gibbons, where are you? Come on down to Windmill and we'll commiserate about things in general, deadlines in particular.

58 Happy New Year! 1980 promises to be a good year for '58ers. Christmas cards and notes to the Alumni Office indicate we are out there, and we are ready to be heard!

A Christmas note from Jean Zwicker Durant says that Jean and husband John are in the Washington area (Annandale, Va.) and have been since their return from India five years ago. Their daughter, Ann, is a freshman at the College, and Theresa is a freshman in high school. It was good to hear from you, Jean.

Deny Grant has been appointed to the Henrico County School Board in Richmond. If that wasn't enough, he was appointed to the Search Committee for the new football coach at the college! (Our classmates do, indeed, stay right in the middle of things in Williamsburg.)

John Lundelius is with Air Jamaica as a DC8 captain. John resides in Homestead, Fla.

"A History of Powhatan County" has been researched and written by Richard Couture. This two-year project has been published by the Powhatan Historical Society. The publication includes information on the founding fathers of the country, beginning with the Monocan Indians and the first English settlers. Persons interested may order a copy by contacting Mrs. E.C. Bolte, Box 293, Powhatan, Va. 23139.

Sid Mook writes that he hopes to finish his PhD in Urban Planning at Michigan State University by the end of the year.

Susie Moore was remarried in May, 1979, to Mr. Jack McCarter. Susie is living in Dallas, Tex.

Thank you for your notes. We are off to a good start. I would love to hear even two sentences from some of you we haven't seen since June of '58. Make it your new resolution for the 80's to bring us up to date on your lives. It is really great to catch up with each other after 22 years.

60 Happy New Year to you all! I received some cards and notes from our classmates during the holidays. Charlie Nahill and wife Nancy Branham, '61, are living in and restoring an old house in Glenside, Penn. Charlie is enjoying his first session in the Pennsylvania Legislature. When not in session, he sells title insurance.

Gloria Marr Gassman and husband Dean are still living in Carmel, Ind. Gloria has been active for the past few years in "Birthright." She is also busy with the activities of her four children. Her oldest daughter, Terri, is a freshman at DePauw University.

Paula Wolpov Hoffman, '61, sent news of her family and activities. She, husband Buddy and their two daughters live in Newport News, Va. They are in the process of planning and building a new house.

Dick Coyle, '61, and wife Sue Meara, '63, now live in Pittsburgh, PA., with their son and daughter. Dick is with American Telephone and Telegraph. Sue has been teaching fifth and sixth grade math and science.

Jim Ukrop was on the search committee for the new football coach at the College.

Dan Newland has expanded his law practice, working with CPAs, accountants and trust officers, in Hawaii.

Lee Hay Ellison is a cardiovascular surgeon in Hartford, Conn. He and his wife Ruth have a son and a daughter.

Deborah McMahon O'Hara is the mother of six children. She enjoys playing tennis, working for the Baltimore Symphony and the Parish Education Committee. She plans to come to Homecoming.

Nick St. George and wife Lorna Bowman,

'61, live in Greensboro, N.C. Nick is the Chief Executive Officer of Oakwood Homes Corp. He has also been elected as director of the Manufactured Housing Institute in Washington, D.C.

62 A Happy New Year to all of you and please make a resolution to drop me a line this year so you will be included in our class news.

I received the following news by way of Christmas cards. From the state of Washington, Linda Lester Hagen wrote that their children age 13, 11, 9, and 4 now. With a teenager in the family, she said she feels antiquity approaching. They hope to stay in Washington now. She is active in AAUW and Juvenile Court volunteer work.

Jane Noble Lundy and family are still in California. Jane is teaching four French classes. She is also an advisor to the new AFS Club and is the Dept. Chairman. She, Rich, Mark (10), Adam (9), and Jane (6) had a summer of camping and backpacking in the Sierra. She had a 36-hour visit with Nancy Young and Bill Young just before Thanksgiving. Bill is on sabbatical from Lynchburg College.

Mary Alice Adams Betts, Lee and family are in Winter Park, Fla. Mary Alice keeps busy being one of Gamma Phi Beta Sorority's Province Directors.

Gayle Crabill Kerns sent a nice note and two lovely pictures of her three children. The children are in the 11th grade, 6th grade and 3rd grade. Her husband Waldon travels a lot for his job in Blacksburg, Va. Gayle said her pace slowed down considerably when they discovered she had diabetes this fall. She said that she is so thin but can't gain weight with her restricted diet.

News came by way of a UPI story that Charlie Woollum, who is Bucknell's basketball coach, was named as a top candidate for the head coaching job at LaSalle College. However, Charlie withdrew his name from consideration. His reasons for withdrawing were personal. Charlie began his coaching career at Newport News High School. He went on to Ferguson High and then was an assistant coach at Old Dominion University.

Gil Bartlett has been elected to the County Board of Supervisors in James City County.

Percy Hicks Severn, husband Cliff and children Catherine (10) and Cliff (8) spent 2 months in Africa and England this past summer. They visited Bronze Age Zulus at home. When they aren't traveling, they live in Newbury Park, Calif.

Joan Buhlmann spent the summer in Paris, France, researching the critical edition of Louis LeCaron's Dialogues. She is co-editing this edition. In July she attended the Medieval Sermon Symposium at Oxford. In September she participated in the Patristic, Medieval and Renaissance Conference at Villanova and in October the Committee for the Advancement of Early Studies. Joan is still at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln.

Lynn Marie Crisman Wieland lives in Ridgefield, Conn. She loves being a mother and took 3½-year old Jamie camping across country this summer. She and Walt took Jamie to Seattle and then down to San Francisco.

Thanks to Ann Smith Hughes and the Theta Newsletter the following news arrived in time for this issue. Ann Smith Hughes and family spend their free weekends and vacations traveling in their motor home. Jim, her husband, turned out eight paintings of the Myrtle Beach, S.C. area. He will soon be a published artist. He has done a mountain snow scene of a fox for the cover of Virginia Country Magazine and a painting to accompany a civil war article and is also illustrating a cookbook. Ann has discovered quite a market for her handicrafts and filled many orders before the holiday season. Their children are Jimmy (11) and Scott (8).

Cynthia Isemann Buxton and Don have an active 2-year-old, Gary, and a 6-year-old, Deanna. Don is retiring March 1st from the Navy after 22 years and will be looking for a job in the Washington, D.C. area. They are living in Herndon, Va., at the present time.

Dorcas Brown Bankes and Paul Bankes live in Wynnwood, Penn., with their two daughters. Dorcas has learned that her first novel is still making the rounds of the New York publishing houses. A half dozen publishing houses have indicated interest in her second book. Dorcas has dabbled some in Little Theater and currently is fascinated with C.G. Jung's philosophy. Paul is still hard at work on his court case for the United Methodist Church.

Peggy Hargroves Bartlett wrote from Portsmouth, Va., to Ann Smith Hughes last Christmas that she and her husband had been separated for over a year. She was working on her degree in administration. She is an assistant principal and teaches remedial reading. Her children are 15 and 9.

Sue Oakley Nelson is in Durham, N.C. Her son Chip is in kindergarten and daughter Kara is in 5th grade. She volunteers one afternoon a week at school and teaches at the Learning Development Center working with LD children. She says the Junior League, Girl Scouts, Sunday School teaching, Citizens Advisory Council for Women's Prescription Drug Abuse, tennis, decorating, religious class, entertaining and, most of all, family fill her other hours.

Martha Walton High and Jack recently had a wine and cheese party and Pat Graves Ballard and Linnea Barnes Sandstrom were there. Jack has been named Director of Government Affairs at Univac. Martha is the Register and has been elected to the Vestry at St. John's Episcopal Church in McLean, Va. Martha was recently visited by Donna Floyd Fales and children Emerson (12), Floyd (10), and Cooley (7). Donna was in the area for a meeting of the Board of the Junior Tennis League. Donna is the assistant tennis coach at the University of Miami. Gordon, her husband, is Vice President of Florida Air. Donna's father has given tennis lessons to Hamilton Jordan and, on an arranged White House tour, Donna and family were lucky enough to visit the Oval Office while President Carter was there.

Linnea Barnes Sandstrom and family have bought a new house out in the country with 7 acres, a horse, pony, and lots of cats and dogs. Linnea is busy with her real estate business in Virginia.

Pril Nash Brown and family live in Sarasota, Fla. She and Seab have two children, a first grader and one just out of diapers. Seab has had a bad bout with pneumonia so Pril has had to work extra hard in their Hickory Farms business. Pril also wrote that Susan Griggs Braman and E.J. were with them for a visit this past year.

Bunny Becker Harrington is still teaching at the graduate business school at the University of Virginia. Bunny is traveling 4-5 days a month presenting papers and consulting. Will, her husband, is set up in the best studio facility he has had so far for his sculpturing. He is in a converted barn in Charlottesville.

COLLEGE NAMES BREDIN FELLOWS

A biologist and a linguist at the College share the designation this semester of Bredin Fellows, on leave to do research.

Joseph L. Scott, associate professor of biology, and Gary A. Smith, associate professor of modern languages and literatures, have been designated as Bredin Fellows, funded by grants from the Bredin Foundation, headed by J. Bruce Bredin, '36. Bredin is president of the Bredin Realty Company of Newark, Del., and serves on the Board of Visitors of the College and the College's National Development Council.

Lynn Eads Black writes that she is alive and well in South Texas. She and John Black were divorced last year. Lynn spent the last school year as registrar and French teacher at Villa Maria High School; then began a new career this summer as Personnel Director at Brownsville Medical Center. Sara is in the 7th grade and Kiley is in the 4th grade. Lynn is on the Episcopal Day School Board and serves on the Vestry of her church.

Dorcas Miller Lounsbury writes that she has gone back to work as the departmental lab technician at the local Palomar College. Ken continues happily as City Manager of Escondido, Calif. Their daughter Anne (16) is planning to study abroad her senior year and will apply at The College of William and Mary. Dan, their son, is in the 8th grade. Dorcas reports that Marcia Ballard Scott will soon be moving to San Diego and that she also saw Carol Kirkup Bloomstrom at a William and Mary party attended by Linda Lavin, '59, "Alice" on TV.

I really appreciated all the cards and letters that arrived with all this enjoyable news of our class. Continue to let me know of your accomplishments.

My husband Jim was featured in a half-page article in the Washington Post on January 18, 1980. It was in connection with his work as the Alexandria Police Chaplain. He does this work as a volunteer. He is the assistant at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Alexandria, Va. I visited with Beth Poole Radford in November. She and her family live near Columbia, Md.

64 Homecoming 1979 -- our fifteenth reunion -- a glorious Indian summer weekend -- temperatures in the 80's -- scarlet, gold, bronze and orange foilage framing the old brick buildings where we lived and studied and partied in the early sixties -- Williamsburg, never lovelier.

Vignettes: Standing on the corner where "Greeks" used to be, chatting after the parade were Dick and Dave Kern and wives Sharon Cosminsky '66, and Sandy McNeil '68, Beth Chiles Svee and Dick, Al and Pam Derrickson Etheridge, Marynell Roberts and Steph Gordon, Janet Fohs and Wally Lynn, '63.

Dick Kern and Sharon and their two boys, 10 and 6, now live in Greensboro, N.C., where Dick is with Central Carolina Warehouses.

Dave Kern and Sandy and their three children live in Bethlehem, Pa., where Dave is with Container Corporation of America.

Beth Chiles Svee and Dick had come across country from their home in Pacifica, Calif. Beth is the librarian for the city of San Bruno, having earned her Master of Library Science degree from the University of North Carolina. Beth and Dick bought an old hunting lodge which they are renovating and they also are enjoying all the pleasures of the San Francisco area.

Al Etheridge and Pam and their two boys live in Virginia Beach, Va., where Al is an attorney in private practice, having earned his law degree from the University of Virginia. Pam is a student in law school and is President of the Virginia Beach chapter of the American Association of University Women.

Marynell Roberts Gordon and Steph also live in Virginia Beach, Va., and have two sons. They are both on the Board of Directors of a new professional regional theater. They have been working to launch the theater for five years and were excited about its first season.

Janet Fohs Lynn and Wally live in Roanoke, Va., with their two children. Wally is a marketing representative for Honeywell Corporation and Janet is a Learning Disabilities teacher.

At the game, the familiar pageantry of Queens Guards, Homecoming Court, Alumni Band and, sadly, a losing effort by the football team. The Homecoming Queen and Court are now escorted by their fathers. In the row ahead are Bob Joynst and Ann and Billy Jones '65. Bob and Ann have two children and live at Virginia Beach. Bob is a vice president and commercial loan officer with Virginia National Bank. Billy is with Blue Cross-Blue Shield in Richmond, Va.

Remember gathering at the Colonial across from the stadium... the old Colonial crowd gathered at the new Colonial Restaurant just outside of the restored area... lots of Pikas, twelve in fact, were back from the sixties graduating classes, and they partied until the wee hours.

At the Colonial, Greg and Pat Evans, Ray Jones, Tish and Bill Mirguet, Dick Weber and Wade Cheatham and their wives and many others were recapturing old times in a new setting.

Tish Paschall Mirguet and I shared our disappointment that so few Tri-Delts and Thetas from our class were back. Tish teaches English at the Hampton Roads Academy in Newport News, Va. Bill is a senior vice president at First and Merchants National Bank in Newport News. Bill and Tish have a son and a daughter.

Ray Jones is an associate professor at the University of Maryland School of Medicine in Baltimore. A pathologist, Ray received his master's in marine biology from the University of Delaware and his Ph.D. in pathology from the University of Maryland. Ray and his wife Joyce live in Westminster, Md.

A huge crush of people at the cocktail party after the game: in the corner by the bar and by the band, the SAEs, Dick Carling, Pete Stout, Clyde Culp, Tommy Meadows, et al.

Dick Carling and Kitty Anderson '65 live in Richmond, Va., where Dick is with the Dominion National Bank.

Pete Stout and Micki Leef, '65, also live in Richmond. Pete is in general law practice with the firm of Shaia, Stout and MacKow. The Stouts have two daughters. Micki is active in the Junior League and manages a gift shop in Maymont Park.

Clyde Culp, '65, and Mary Ellen Coleman '65, live in Annapolis and Clyde is President of DavCo Food, Inc., in Crofton, Md.

Tommy Meadows and Leigh live in Roanoke, Va., where Tommy is in private law practice. They have a daughter, Devon, 7, and a son, Gardner, 3.

Pete Latkin and Bunny Popkin, '66, live in Falls Church, Va., and have two children, Danny, 8, and Shannon, 7. Pete is a pediatric allergist in private practice. He also coaches Little League basketball and soccer. Bunny is a social worker and Pete's "right arm," he noted.

Janet Willer DeRubbo was married in August of '79 and now lives with her husband on three acres in Madison, Va. Her husband L.J. works with the Rochester Corporation in Culpeper, Va.

Robin Reighley, '63, was back escorting his two daughters, Stephanie, 14, and Jennifer, 12. Robin, Suzanne and their daughters live in the D.C. area as Robin, a Commander, U.S. Navy, is attached to the Naval Material Command in Washington. Robin spoke of setting up the William and Mary alumni group when he was stationed in San Diego. The group is now thriving.

Helen Mageras Elks was up from Virginia Beach where her husband's business is the Denco Tire Company in Chesapeake, Va.

Helen has twin daughters, 5½.

Cam Walker answered lots of questions about the students and college today, from her perspective as an associate professor at the College.

Bill Pippin is on sabbatical at the University of North Carolina to complete his M.A. requirements in Educational Media. Bill has been the Director of Television at Plaza Junior High School in the Virginia Beach City Public School System. He is single.

On to dinner, I was delighted to discover on Friday evening that Christiana Campbells had not changed one iota, same wonderful menu, same atmosphere, same chef. Saturday evening, back to the Colonial where hordes of alumni ate and greeted each other. It was a special pleasure for me to see Cam Buchanan Spirm '65 who is now a full fledged obstetrician-gynecologist and will hang out her shingle this summer in Williamsburg, where husband Stuart has a private law practice. Cam, Clyde Culp and I caught up on each others' lives with Pris Brown Holman and Charlie, who were back visiting the Spirms from Atlanta. Pris and Charlie have a daughter and Pris is expecting. Pris and Charlie see my old friend Dick Thomasson, who is also in Atlanta with his wife and child.

And what would a Homecoming weekend be without the Saturday night after-after hours parties. The one I attended was enlivened by a visit from some Rutgers alumni. It was fun to see Bart and Emily Vawtor Barbee, who still operate their Black Angus cattle farm in Purcellville, Va. They have each taken on additional roles, however; Bart is vice president of Victory Van Corporation, international moving specialists, and is vice-president and treasurer of the Cardinal Forwarding Company which is based in Alexandria, Va. He and Emily are opening an antique shop in Hillsboro, Va., to be called "The Ordinary." They have two children, Randy, 7, and Britton, 2.

Ann Tomlinson Barton and Tom recently moved to Virginia Beach where Tom has a Ford dealership called Beach Ford. She and Tom have four children: Tom, 12, Kristin, 10, and twin boys, Dan and Bob, 5.

Susan Roache and Ray Warner were back, Ray works on the Hill in Washington and they live in Oakton, Va.

Homecoming Sunday was even more beautiful weather-wise than Saturday. We ran into Sharon and Dick Kern again who said that they had known Jim Bjorkholm and his wife Gay when they lived in Tennessee. Jim and Gay have two children, Ellen, 8, and Eric 5, and live in Hendersonville, Tenn., where Jim has his own finance and credit company.

Philip Tutschek, who lives in Hackensack, N.J., and has his own electronic component rep business, P. T. Associates, was back for his first Homecoming since graduation, and perhaps summed up many classmates' feelings about Homecoming '79 when he said that he intended to return to Homecoming 1980.

Susan Johns Murphy has remarried and moved to Stow, Ohio. She is now working in the Health, Safety and Environmental Section of Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company.

Jimmye Lubin Angell is now single, living in Walla Walla, Washington, and is in private practice in psychotherapy.

deSaussure McFadden McCutchen, who lives in NcAllen, Tex., has changed jobs, and is now Consultant for Gifted and Talented Children for Region I Education Service Center of Texas.

Jane Pierpoint Lynch is still living in Phoenix, Ariz., where she is actively involved with the Republican State Committee, the Phoenix Art Museum, Goodwill Auxiliary, and her seven year-old's school and Brownie troop.

THORP '60 LEAVES COLONIAL WILLIAMSBURG

Philip A. Thorp '55, M.Ed. '56, has resigned as the Master Silversmith at Colonial Williamsburg to go into private business in Northern Virginia. Thorp, who had worked for Colonial Williamsburg for more than 20 years, succeeded his mentor, William L. deMatteo, as Master Silversmith in August of 1979. In 1960, he was the first of more than two dozen subsequent apprentice silversmiths to receive journeyman status through an authentic 18th-century apprentice training program.

Karen Rackley Credeur is working in Washington, D.C., for one year so she and her husband Leonard are doing a lot of weekend commuting between D.C. and their home in Poquoson, Va.

Dr. William Black has been named Teacher of the Year for Appoquinimink School District in Delaware. He is an English teacher at Middletown High School. He was cited as representing the best traits of teachers and for his superior ability to inspire students with a love of learning.

Edward Horton, a pilot with American Airlines, is moving to Dallas, Tex.

Lewis Wehner, who lives in Honolulu, Hawaii, was back to William and Mary for a visit with his wife Jane and wrote that the old campus brought back many warm memories.

Margaret Tomlin Glenn changed jobs. She now works as a computer programmer for Virginia National Bank in the headquarters building in downtown Norfolk.

Sarah Kemp Brady recently gave up her position as Director of Administration for the Republican National Committee to stay home and care for son Scott and daughter Melissa. Her husband John is press secretary to Governor John B. Connally, who is a Presidential candidate. The Bradys live in Arlington.

Currell Pattie finished his academic work with a Ph.D. in Industrial Psychology from Purdue University in '73. He lives in Utica, Mich., with his wife, Mary Copenhaver Pattie Longwood, '66, and their two children, Jennifer, 7 and David, 5. Currell is Manager of the Human Factors Engineering Safety Department of Chrysler Defense in the Detroit area, and is a part of the XMI Main Battle Tank design team. Currell restores old cars and is a runner, recently completing his first marathon of 26.2 miles. He hopes to qualify for the Boston Marathon in the future.

I enjoyed playing "Brenda Starr, Girl Reporter" at Homecoming, trying to jot down a few notes on the classmates I saw for this column. It was impossible to see everyone, so I hope that those of you who attended and caught up on people I missed will drop me a note and share your news. I am now in charge of New Business Development for Municipal Finance at Merrill Lynch White Weld, One Liberty Plaza, New York City. I spoke to another classmate recently, Joe Gatti, who is in law practice in mid-town Manhattan, a partner in the firm of Reilly, Fleming and Reilly, and vice president of the New York Chapter of the Society of the Alumni. Joe spoke of the highly successful chapter event held at the studios of Perry Ellis, '61, now a designer of international acclaim. Attending from our class were Anne O'Hare Phillipone, who lives in New Jersey, Phil Van Kirk, who is Director of Information Systems for Schering-Plough Corp. in Chatham, N.J., and Gene Galusha, who has a successful New York acting career, having done newscasts for Channel 13, NOVA shows and commercial work. Joe commented, as did Gene, that Perry's hospitality and spring fashions were sensational, and everyone enjoyed hearing Dr. Graves and Gordon Vliet.

72 I hope 1980 has been a good year for everyone so far. I've heard from several classmates and hope more of you will take a minute to let us know what you're doing.

Joanne Madden Deaton is teaching third grade in Chesterfield County and has enrolled in an MBA program at Virginia Commonwealth University. Her husband John is now a branch manager with Southern Bank. Ginny Miller writes that she began law school in August 1979, at William Mitchell College of Law in St. Paul, MN. The year before she moved from California to Minneapolis on a transfer with her job.

After finishing work on the Einstein centenary exhibit at the National Museum of History and Technology, Frank Roche became the collections manager of the museum's exhibit, "1876: A Centennial Exhibition," in the Arts and Industries Building of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C. Harvey Credle has been named artistic director of theatrical history programs for Colonial Williamsburg. He will oversee the design, coordination and administration of theatrical history programs, including street acting, theatre living history presentations, and other interpretive programs. Trudy Horton has had one book of poems published, There's a New Song In My Heart, and will soon see a second book of prose in print, which she co-authored. The book of poems was published by Broadman Press and the first printing has been sold out, with a second planned. Trudy has also been designing greeting cards and posters inspired by her spiritual thoughts and feelings about what the Bible says and how it has been relevant in her life.

I received a nice letter from John Turner who has been pretty busy with fiddling, school and work. Since 1976 he has successfully defended the title of U.S. National Scottish Fiddling Champion which is awarded at competition in Alexandria, VA, each year at the annual Scottish games. He holds several other awards and has recorded three albums, "Montgomery Blue - The Scottish Fiddling of John Turner," "John Turner - Third Generation Fiddler," and "John Turner's Scottish Musical Menagerie." He plans to do a fourth album next spring, and he has published a book of fiddle music called The Fiddletree Manuscript. The albums and book are available at Scottish specialty stores. John and his wife Chris, '74, have managed to spend several weeks in Scotland each year for the past several years. In addition to fiddling, John taught science in the Henrico County Schools for two years and then went to Union Theological Seminary in Virginia to earn a Doctor of Ministry degree in 1979. Since June of 1978, he has served as the Associate Minister at Centenary United Methodist Church in Portsmouth. He and his wife had a daughter in July.

John related that Floyd Griffith graduated from optometry school in Philadelphia last spring and is now an officer in the Navy, stationed at the Naval hospital in Portsmouth. TOP EDUCATOR

Virginia Beach Public School Superintendent Dr. E. E. Brickell '50, rector of the Board of Visitors, has been named one of North America's top 100 school administrators by the Executive Educator, published by the National School Boards Association. Several weeks were spent by a panel composed of editors and educators sifting through the nominations and making the final selections. According to Executive Educator, the final 100 represent "the pinnacle of school management in the U.S. and Canada." The top 100 are drawn from every level of school administration, bearing eloquent testimony, the magazine says, to the abundance of leadership serving contemporary education.

social work. She then took a position as a marriage and family counselor with the Family Guidance Center in Hickory, N.C. She also taught Applied Psychology and Marriage and the Family at Catawba Valley Technical College. Bonnie and her husband Fred both missed the Virginia area and relocated to Lynchburg this past November where she is a family counselor with Family Service of Central Virginia. They have one daughter.

Mike Scarce has been an Air Force aviator for six years. He served as a radar navigator/bombardier for three years and was then selected for undergraduate pilot training outside the Phoenix area. He was a class leader, SRO, and graduated with top honors in flying and academics. From Phoenix, Mike and his wife moved to California where he was a student pilot and then to North Carolina where he is currently a pilot. They had their first child, Marissa, this past August and look forward to a Pacific tour and possibly a European tour in the future. Mike has almost completed work on his MBA, and he has his private and instructor's flying licenses. Their address is 204 Rose Drive in Goldsboro, NC 27530 for those of you having trouble keeping in touch with them.

I heard from Debbie Forster Thomas over the Christmas holidays. She and her husband Dale had been living in Montana but recently moved back to the Plainfield, NJ area. She is keeping busy with their daughter, Aryn. She also said that Linda Stone is living in Washington State, working in the city planning area.

I also heard from Martin and Gayle Vester Pera who now hail from Great Britain. Martin received his Ph.D. in pharmacology and has a two-year fellowship to do research in London. Gayle keeps busy with her young daughter, Ginnie.

Calvin Remsburg, on the faculty of the Madeira School in Greenway, Va., will perform at the College on Sunday afternoon, March 17, at the Campus Center Ballroom, as part of the Williamsburg Sunday Concert Series.

74 I appreciate all the letters and notes that came over the past couple months -- especially the beautiful postcard of the Isle of Capri from Bill Clark. It made me wish I could pick up and take an exotic vacation to sunny skies and blue water this winter... alas! Bill has been cruising the Mediterranean on board the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Independence, visiting Athens, Tel Aviv, and other ports. He was sorry to have missed Homecoming but consoled himself by vacationing at the resort Palma de Mallorca instead.

Several classmates are moving up in the world of college administration: Sally Gordon Stocker is an Admissions Counselor at Mary Baldwin College. Sally loves her work -- particularly the travel involved. She was recently in South Carolina and Florida on business. Robert Massa is the assistant to the dean of admissions at Colgate University. He and Anne Cary Glass were married Nov. 24 in the Wren Chapel. She has just completed an M.A.T. degree at Colgate and is now teaching science and chemistry at Norwich High School in Norwich, N.Y.

Kathy Hobbs Araudin is also teaching. This is her sixth year of teaching, and her third year of working with gifted students in the New Orleans public school system.

Shelton L. Smith and his wife Cheryl

Barnett, '76, are living on the west side of Richmond. Shelton has been working at Blue Cross/Blue Shield since he received his MBA at W&M a couple of years ago. He was recently promoted to supervisor in cost accounting. Another classmate at Blue Cross/Blue Shield is Charles Wilson. Charles is the manager of the benefit control division and has been with the company since 1975.

Dr. Thomas Cheezum has received his Doctor of Optometry from the Pennsylvania College of Optometry and is now practicing in Suffolk. "Almost-Dr." Susan Early is in her fourth year of med school at George Washington and plans to go into surgery.

Carol Honebrink Lavoritano writes that she is still working for the transportation authority and has moved to a new house last year in Bala Cynwyd, Penn.

1979 was the year for Sarah Beeler Hudson to change occupations. After five years of teaching biology in Charlottesville area high schools, she is now doing research for U.Va.'s med school, and loves her new job. Kaethe Post Ferguson is also doing research at the new med school in Johnson City, Tenn. In addition to her research responsibilities, Kaethe has written several papers for publication and assisted in teaching a microbiology course at the med school. Kaethe and her husband Don are avid gardeners and Kaethe was busy this past fall freezing their home-grown vegetables and fruits. But she is looking forward to winter months when they can tackle the indoor projects. Though Kaethe loves her new house, she is less than enthusiastic about the former owners' decorating tastes, and is anxious to paint over the glitter on the ceiling!

I got a long letter from Leslie Slemmer Clark. She and her husband Rick, '73 moved to New Castle, Del., last July where Leslie is vice president of a company which designs and produces displays for museums and businesses. She wrote that Kim Lewis Green and some friends have opened their own business in Chicago. It's called "A Dash of Class" and sells redwood and burlwood furniture. Kim is president of the company and it seems that they have been so successful that they are opening -- or already have opened -- a second store.

Okay, folks, keep those cards and letters coming. Only one more '74 Class News until this fall!

76 It was good to hear from a lot of you all since the last newsletter, so I'll relay the news that has been sent in. It seems like a new star is emerging in the personage of John Weiner, and remember, folks, you heard it first in this column. John writes that he is living in a New York City apartment and has made six commercials--Close-Up Toothpaste, Patio Mexican Dinners, Arrid Extra Dry, and three with Mellow Roast Coffee. Besides TV ads, he has been on "As the World Turns" twice. He has also been working in a restaurant in Greenwich village, the "Horn of Plenty," where Hope Mauzerall, '74, also works. John says he'll see everyone at the fifth year reunion in '81.

Jon Hauser graduated from U.Va. Law School in May and has become associated with another attorney, Henry Schwan, in Norfolk. Jon says it's quite a challenge trying to build his own clientele from the beginning. Bob Ott is another newly graduated attorney, from Catholic University. He writes that he and Wally Stanton shared an apartment their first year and both of them made Law Review. Following Bob's summer marriage after his first year to Paula Stassi '77, he was chosen associate editor of the Law Review in the second year. Currently, Bob is associated with Arnold and Porter in D.C., the second largest firm in the area. He says the work borders on thrilling, and he practices in the area of corporate litigation, tax, and banking law. Paula is teaching the fourth grade at a private school in Vienna with plans to return to school to work on a master's degree in education or psychology. They say they would like to hear from other alumni.

Meanwhile, Wally is an attorney for Esmark Corporation, which owns, among other things, the STP Motor Product Division. He also enjoys his work and has just moved into a new apartment in Upper N.W., D.C. A classmate of Bob's and Wally's, Brian Seeber, works for another downtown D.C. law firm and resides in Silver Spring, Md. Nancy Hadlock also works in the area, for the American Chemical Society. Her work involves planning conventions and other events for the ACS, and she resides in historical Old Towne Alexandria.

Tom Driscoll and his wife, Linda Singleton Driscoll, have returned to Richmond after spending some time in Ann Arbor, Mich., where Tom received his master's degree in biology. Tom is the Naturalist for the Chesterfield County Parks and Recreation Department and was featured in an October article in the Richmond News Leader about the family-oriented nature hikes at Rockwood Park. Linda is an executive secretary with Central Fidelity Bankshares, and they both plan to begin taking courses at VCU in the near future. Tom had news about Danny Garland and his wife Anne. He is in Eastern Virginia Medical School and she is working for the Va. Archeological Center at W&M. Tom wants to know about Dave Alexander and Dave and Darr Barshis. Can anyone help him out!

Michael Gilleran worked for two years after graduation on an assembly line for Chrysler in Detroit. During a vacation break, he and Dabney Eastham travelled to Europe and, among other events, climbed the highest mountain in Europe, Mount Blanc. In September 1978, he entered the N.Y.U. School of Law where he is now in his second year. This summer he'll be working for the Boston law firm of Gaston Snow & Ely Bartlett. Another international traveller is Susan Parsons. Following graduation from W&M with an M.A. in Plant Ecology, she volunteered for a two-year teaching assignment with Wycliffe Bible Translators in Porto Velha, Brazil.

Steve Fisher has finished his residency in Wilmington, N.C., and has graduated with a master's in health administration. Following graduation he and his wife Patty travelled for two months around the country before going to Twin Falls, Id., where Steve began work with a local hospital. Patty had been teaching 7th grade life science and math in Wilmington. While travelling through the U.S., they ran into Pam Kuchenbuch in Carlsbad, N.M. She was travelling with her company, Duval Corp., and working in the area of borate exploration. Pam actually lives in Tucson, Ariz., and has travelled all over the Southwest, including the Mojave Desert.

Steve and Patty were hiking on a trail in Yosemite National Park and came upon fellow hikers -- Ken and Kathy Andaas Braaten from Chicago! What are the odds? They also visited Jeff and Lynn Marble Sconyers in New Haven, Conn. Jeff is in his first year of Yale Law School and Lynn utilizes her master's in social work in a local pursuit. Tom and Lisa McCauley, '77, Seelinger were also visited and word has it

IBM SUPPORTS WOMEN'S PROGRAM

The International Paper Company Foundation of New York has given the School of Business Administration an additional $10,000 grant to support the School's Women in Business program.

The grant is the second of a two-part, $25,000 commitment by the foundation to the Campaign for the College to promote development and expansion of workshops, seminars and conferences for women in business throughout the South.

A portion of the grant will support graduate fellowships to women in William and Mary's Master of Business Administration degree program.

that Tom has plans to take courses in computer programming as an addition to his seminary training.

John and Anne McFadden Metz are in Washington, D. C. where John is in his last year at Catholic University Law School and Anne is working as a radiation technologist. John was also working as a law clerk in the Bureau of Mining Health and Safety and Anne has begun applying for med school.

Gary and Jennell Piplico Charles are in Richmond, where Gary is in his final year at Union Theological Seminary and Jennell is working in the Pediatric Unit at Richmond Memorial Hospital. Finally, in St. Louis they saw Mark and Dana Lewis '77, Brown, where Mark is a salesman for Milliken Carpet.

We also have these bits of news from the Alumni Office. Rolf Williams is a sales representative with Barber Steamship Lines in New York City. Roberta Storch Lawrence teaches Spanish and French at a high school in Montvale, N.J. Raymond Bleday is in his senior year at the Illinois College of Pediatric Medicine in Chicago. Henry Crider is in his final year at the T. C. Williams School of Law in Richmond. Finally, Kathryn Auerbach is director of historic programs for the Bucks County Conservancy and participated this summer in a study program sponsored by the Royal Oak Foundation.

78 Happy 1980! I hope this new year is good to all of us. I'm pleased to have news from several of our classmates for the first time.

Debbi Cook married David Felts last August. They are living in Franklin, Va., where Debbi is working as a sales correspondent for Union Camp Corporation. Also in Franklin, Lou Anne Bryant is employed by Southampton Memorial Hospital as a respiratory therapy technician.

In Fredericksburg, Betty Wells has been selected by Child Evangelism Fellowship as fellowship director; CEF is an international organization that teaches children about Christ through neighborhood clubs called Good News Clubs which meet weekly.

Others in our class who have found careers of interest include Ellett Snead and Chip Perkins. Ellett has been confined to a wheelchair and has launched his own business taking advantage of his talents and interests by making custom fishing rods. He prefers graphite and develops the rod according to the type of fishing the customer prefers. Chip is working as a management trainee with Colonial American National Bank in Roanoke. He is in the credit department studying the analysis of financial statements and commercial lending. With the present economy and high interest rates, Chip feels that commercial lending is the most active area in banking.

Robert Reeves is combining work and school in N.Y. He has been working for IBM since July 1978, and last September began evening classes at Fordham University in the MBA program. Paul Palmer and Ashley Easterling write from New Orleans where they are pursuing graduate studies at Tulane University. Both will receive their degrees in May; Paul will receive an MA in history and Ashley an MBA.

Barbara Bruno is a second-year graduate student in theatre at Penn State. She recently served as director for the Penn State Thespians' production of "Company" and appeared in one production and worked as a choreographer in another.

Ed Bright is in his second year of law school at U.Va. Chris Kelley is clerking for the firm of Fillen and Caliendo while

DONALD SWEIG '73
WINS HISTORY PRIZE

Donald M. Sweig '73, who is completing his doctoral studies in history at William and Mary, has won the fourth annual Charles Thomson prize by the National Archives and the Organization of American Historians.

The prize, which carries an honorarium of $250, is awarded annually for an essay based on archival research. It is named in honor of the first secretary of the Continental Congress.

Sweig, who is on academic leave from the Fairfax County (Va.) Office of Comprehensive Planning, wrote an essay entitled "The Human Dimension of Interstate Slave Trade: A Reassessment Based on Shipments from Alexandria, Virginia, to New Orleans." It analyzes 28 shipments encompassing more than 3,500 slaves shipped from the port of Alexandria to New Orleans and Natchez. Most were shipped by the firm of Franklin and Armfield, which was located in a building which still stands at 1315 Duke Street in Alexandria.

ROZANTZ SIGNS WITH CANADA

William and Mary's record-setting quarterback Tom Rozantz '79 has signed a one year contract with Saskatchewan of the Canadian Football League. The Fairview, Pa., native was a free agent with New Orleans in the NFL but failed to make the squad last year. Rozantz's agent is Joe Montgomery '74, a former All American center at William and Mary and now an investment broker in Williamsburg. He said the Canadian team feels "certain Tommy can make the grade." The 22-year-old Rozantz set career records at William and Mary for total offense (5,385 yds.) and yards passing (4,019). He was a two time AP honorable mention All American.

completing his second year at New York Law School. David Cartwright is on the law review in his second year at the University of Illinois law school. He writes that he has accepted a position with the Chicago firm of Katten, Muchin, Gittles, Zavis, Pearl and Galler.

John Lawless is working toward a Ph.D. in classics at the University of Texas at Austin.

Many of you will remember Kerry Kasten from our first years at William and Mary. She is now a chemist and an expert witness for the state of Florida in chemical analysis. She sends greetings to all of us and, even though she is not able to visit often, she keeps track of most all our events.

During recent holidays I was able to visit Robin Markwith Sleeth and Margie Weber in N.J. It was a wonderful vacation for me and I'm happy to say they are both doing quite well. May Graves visited me in Richmond recently. She is in her last semester of the MBA program at William and Mary. Susie Forbes completed this program in December and is living in Williamsburg for the next few months while job-hunting.

Mike and Debbie Potter were visiting William and Mary for the recent basketball game against University of Richmond (super job, Indians!!). Their son John is adorable! I understand several of our classmates will have families to write about by the spring-time. Best wishes to all of you!

Bob Rigrish visited Peter Garland, '77, in Richmond recently during our big snow storm. He is enjoying his second year of law school at UNC.

We have one more column this spring. The response is really great, let's keep it up. There are many classmates from whom we still have not yet heard. Happy New Year to all of you.

President's Council Enjoys Nostalgic Evening

It was a night for nostalgia—a brief look at the past in the midst of a weekend focusing on the future of liberal education.

The annual President's Council black-tie dinner, held Friday, February 8, the night before Charter Day, was attended by about 150 of the College's most loyal and dedicated supporters. It was not only a night to see old friends as they are now, but a night to see how a great many of the Council members looked when they attended the College. A special slide presentation brought to life old yearbook pictures, and as the William and Mary Choir hummed "The Way We Were," the audience chuckled over pictures showing Gordon Vliet '54, with a crew cut, a skinny young T. C. Clarke '22 in his baseball uniform, and dozens of other popular alumni during their College years.

President Graves joined W. Brooks George '32, Secretary of the Council, in saluting the outstanding generosity of Council members. He pointed to a significant increase in membership, from 185 members in 1979 to 244 members for 1980.

All alumni and friends who make annual personal gifts of $1,000 or more to one or several College funds are members of the Council. Members for 1980 are listed below:

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Ackerman, Mr. and Mrs. A. Marshall Acuff, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Adlis, Mr. and Mrs. Alan F. Albert, Mr. and Mrs. Saunders Mann Almond, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Parents Contribute Almost $50,000 to College

Parents of William and Mary students came through again in 1979, setting a record for the largest number of gifts made to the Parents Fund during a single year. The total raised during 1979 was $48,973.99.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Velde, co-chairmen of the Association of Parents, were the moving force behind the 1979 drive, which included personal and printed letters, brochures, and several student phonathons. The Veldes' will again spearhead the drive in 1980, and expect to enlist a great deal of help and advice from other members of the Steering Committee for the Association of Parents.

The names of contributors to the 1979 Parents Fund are listed below:

Dr. & Mrs. P. N. Acha, Mr. & Mrs. C. S. Adlis, Mr. Charles E. Ailsworth, Mr. Douglas A. Allen, Mr. Roy R. Allen, Dr. Earl A. Alluisi, Mr. & Mrs. Edward P. Almy, Mr. Allen K. Law Dinners Across State Kick-Off 1980 Fund

With its new building on the verge of completion, the Marshall-Wythe School of Law has continued to receive a great deal of attention from students, faculty, administrators--and, of course--alumni.

At four annual Law School alumni dinners held in Richmond, Northern Virginia, Norfolk and Williamsburg, alumni have turned out in record numbers to listen to Dean William B. Spong Jr. describe the new Marshall-Wythe. The move has been dubbed "a new beginning" for the nation's oldest law school, and Spong has encouraged alumni to remain active in the future of Marshall-Wythe.

Timothy Coyle '74, the 1980 chairman of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law Fund, has written alumni asking for their increased financial support during 1980. So far, he says, the response has been encouraging.

Coyle steps into the shoes of Michael E. Kris '71, chairman of the 1979 Campaign, which closed December 31. Kris reports that the 1979 drive was "the most successful ever," both in terms of money and alumni participation. The 1979 drive collected a total of $59,751, an increase of $5,608 over the $54,143 raised in 1978.

The following list includes the names of alumni and friends who contributed to the Marshall-Wythe School of Law Fund during calendar 1979. Names marked with an asterisk gave especially valuable gifts to the Law School because their donations were matched by their firms.

Enthusiastic Group Revives New Education Fund Drive

Under the direction of Dean James Yankovich, the Graduate School of Education revived its annual fund campaign during 1979, and found that a small but enthusiastic group of alumni were prepared to form a new foundation for a continuous fund drive.

Dormant during 1978, the Graduate School of Education Fund was revitalized in an effort to increase feelings of unity and commitment among those who have worked in one or several of the top-notch graduate programs offered by the School of Education. Two appeal letters gathered $1,089.00 from School of Education alumni. Those who contributed are listed below:

Sandra L. Akers, Anne S. Allen, Claire Elizabeth Bom, Douglas E. Braun, Edward Ernest Brickell, Barrett H. Carson, J. Reginald Carter, Gladys Roberts Caywood, Earl Birges Chappell, III, Yvonne Marie Costello, Jean G. Cusack, Mary Oliver Darling, Ann Nix Desaulniers, John A. Fahey, John C. MBA Fund Doubles During Record Campaign

It was one of the most dramatic increases in fund-raising history at the College—a jump of almost 100 percent in a single year. During its third complete annual fund campaign, the 1979 MBA Fund collected $12,047, a tremendous increase over the $6,064 raised during 1978.

Dick Cooper '74, who served as chairman of the 1979 drive, credits hard work by the members of the MBA Alumni Association Board, a new alumni newsletter, and a sense of identity and enthusiasm developing among MBA alumni. Cooper, who has retained the Fund chairmanship for 1980, admits that the 1979 drive will be a tough act to follow. "That's why we'll have to put forth an even greater effort in the months ahead if we want to match or top the success of last year's program," says Cooper.

With the General Assembly about to put its stamp of approval on the renovation of Chancellors Hall for the new Business School building, Cooper expects alumni enthusiasm to remain high during 1980. "I think our alumni are beginning to realize that this Business School is going places—and so is the MBA Fund," notes Cooper.
