THE COLLEGE OF WILLIAM AND MARY

President Graves (right) and Dr. Miles L. Chappell '60, chairman of the Department of Fine Arts, study the model of the proposed arts museum with benefactors Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Muscarelle '27, Hackensack, N.J., who gave $600,000 toward the project. Construction will begin this summer, with an expected completion date of the Summer of 1982. President Graves announced construction of the museum at Charter Day weekend.

A New Art Museum

Initial Alumni Gifts Total $950,000; Construction To Begin This Summer

Two major gifts to the College have set the stage for construction of the College's first art museum, "turning a long-time dream into reality."

When completed, the museum will serve educational and teaching purposes, and house the College's collection of art representing a variety of periods and media, according to President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., who made the surprise announcement at a banquet honoring the President's Council, William and Mary's major private donors, the Friday evening before Charter Day.

Joseph L. Muscarelle '27 and his wife Margaret have pledged $600,000 toward the project. Muscarelle is a Hackensack, N.J., contractor and real estate developer.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Kinnamon of Williamsburg have pledged another $300,000 for the project in memory of her father and mother, Ralph M. Sheridan and Edythe C. Sheridan. Mr. Kinnamon is a 1934 graduate, and Mrs. Kinnamon is a member of the Class of 1939.

the current session of the Virginia General Assembly and by the appropriate offices of the Governor.

The 6,000 square foot museum will be located on the "new" campus of the College, adjacent to Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall and Richard Lee Morton Hall, with access to Jamestown Road. Last December, the College's Board of Visitors approved the plan to construct the museum, provided private gifts were available to fund it. To construct and partly endow museum operations, the College will require about $1.2 million. In addition to the two major gifts totaling $900,000 announced at the President's Council meeting, another $50,000 has been contributed by Mr. and Mrs. J. Bruce Bredin of Wilmington, Delaware, a member of the Board of Visitors, is a member of the Class of 1936.

Carlton Abbott, an award-winning Williamsburg architect, is preparing designs for construction of the museum. The single-story building will be of contemporary style, with an exterior constructed primarily of brick.

William and Mary Honors Two of Its Own

Charter Day Recalls Yorktown Anniversary of Two Centuries

William and Mary honored two of its own alumni, Lewis A. McMurren, Jr., '36 and W. Samuel Sadler '64, at Charter Day on Feb. 7 during a festive weekend that acknowledged the climactic battle of the Revolutionary War in 1781 at Yorktown.

Senator John Warner, the Charter Day speaker, noted that the College, the Commonwealth, and America "all have come a long way since Charter Day, 1781. It has been a great two centuries."

As if to reinforce that statement, President Graves recalled that the College closed its doors in both 1781 and again in 1881. But, said Graves, "in both centuries, the faith of a few prevailed."

Noting that President James Madison and President Benjamin S. Ewell kept the College alive during both of those crises, Graves added that "I am proud to marvel at the faith of the thousands who, since 1888 and now in 1981, have given this ancient College its strength and hope for the future."

Warner said that William and Mary "rightly proclaims herself to be the alma mater of a nation." And, he added, he was about to enter the best of all academic worlds -- "with a bachelor's degree from Washington and Lee, law degree from the University of Virginia and... an honorary doctorate of laws from Virginia's and the nation's oldest university."

Warner received his honorary doctorate in recognition of his leadership as chairman of commission on the Bicentennial of the American Revolution and as "an outstanding member of the United States Senate."

Warner was honored along with McMurren, Newport News, and the Marquis Jean Pierre de Chambrun, a direct descendant of Lafayette, the general who commanded the French troops at Yorktown.

McMurren's honorary doctor of laws citation acknowledged his "contributions to the citizens of this Commonwealth, and... the recognition for Virginia achieved by your creativity and vision... McMurren served in the General Assembly for 30 years and is chairman of the Virginia Independence Bicentennial Commission. He also serves as a legislative advisor to Governor John N. Dalton '53.

The Marquis Jean Pierre de Chambrun was also a guest of honor at Charter Day and received an honorary degree of doctor of humane letters "in recognition of your heritage and of your own pursuit for greater cooperation between this nation and France, both of which are so meaningful to this college on this bicentennial occasion."

The College conferred the 1981 Thomas Jefferson Award on Sadler, dean of students at the College who joined the administration in 1967.

Sadler was chosen for the award because, in the words of the citation, he has demonstrated "concern for your fellow human beings" and because of his conviction that "no problem is too large or too small for you to take the time to solve."

The citation continued: "You have served this college tirelessly and with enthusiasm shown by few others." After serving as assistant dean of admissions from 1967 to 1971, Sadler was named Dean of Men. He was appointed to his present position in 1973.

The Thomas Jefferson Teaching Award went to Craig N. Canning, associate professor of history and a specialist in East Asian civilization. A faculty member at William and Mary since 1973, Canning was cited for his "attention to detail, your honesty and your humaneness..." Canning organized William and Mary's first Chinese language program, which he administers and in which he teaches.

Other events which took place on Charter Day weekend were the annual President's Council meeting and the announcement of private gifts of $950,000 for the construction of a new art museum.

W. Samuel Sadler '64, dean of students at William and Mary, received the Thomas Jefferson Award from Edward E. Brickell '50, '70 ACEA, '73 E.Ed., rector of the College, and from President Graves.

FACULTY NOTES:

Livingston's Book Wins $20,000 Prize

James C. Livingston, professor and chairman of the Department of Religion at William and Mary, has won the $20,000 Bross Foundation Decennial Prize for an unpublished book manuscript on the subject of Christian Thought.

Livingston's book, tentatively entitled "Beyond the Plain: Matthew Arnold's Religious Criticism and Belief," was completed while he was on leave from the College in Oxford, England, during 1979-80 on a fellowship from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The prize, which Livingston accepted in December at a convocation at Lake Forest College, Lake Forest, Ill., where the Foundation is located, is one of several academic honors he has received since he came to William and Mary in 1968 from Southern Methodist University.

Livingston was a Visiting Fellow, Cambridge University in 1967-68 and again in 1972-73 when he received an American Council of Learned Societies Senior Fellowship. He was awarded a National Endowment Fellowship for Independent Research in 1979-80 for work at Oxford University. He was named a Busch Fellow at William and Mary the same year.

Livingston has published widely on religion and the humanities, including his book "Modern Christian Thought: From the Enlightenment to Vatican II," which is in its sixth printing and is used in many college classrooms.

He served as Dean of the Undergraduate Program at William and Mary from 1973 to 1978 when he returned to full-time teaching.

FACULTY MEMBERS RECEIVE NEH AWARDS

Two faculty members, one in religion and the other in theatre and speech, have been awarded the Fellowship for College Teachers by the National Endowment for the Humanities for a year of independent research. Hans O. Tiefel, associate professor of religion, will use his award to work on a book about the roles and obligations of German Protestants in the 1930s toward the Nazi state and the Jews. Bruce A. McConachie, assistant professor of theatre and speech, plans to explore various types of melodrama in the mid-nineteenth century in America. He is also working on a book.

YANKOVICH NAMED ADVISOR TO STATE

James M. Yankovich, dean of the School of Education, has been appointed by the state Board of Education as a member of the State Advisory Committee on Teacher Education for a two year term. The committee advises on matters regarding procedures and standards for teacher preparation programs and certification regulations and reviews, evaluates and make recommendations to the Department as to whether a teacher preparation program of a college or university meets the standards for approved programs adopted by the Board of Education.

RELIGION PROFESSOR IS EMINENT SCHOLAR

Thomas M. Finn, associate professor of religion, has been named an eminent scholar at Mary Washington College. Finn, who received a National Endowment for the Humanities grant earlier this year, is teaching courses in the New Testament and the world of early Christianity during the second semester at Mary Washington.

CANNING APPOINTED TO U.S.-CHINA GROUP

Craig N. Canning, associate professor of history, has been named to the National Committee on United States-China Relations, an organization of some 500 business, professional, civic and academic leaders.

The National Committee has played an important role in promoting exchanges between the two countries since it was founded in 1966. The visit of the Chinese ping-pong team to the United States, prior to President Nixon's visit to China in 1972, was promoted by the committee. The team played an exhibition match in William and Mary Hall during its U.S. visit. The recent visits to the campus by groups of Chinese scholars have also been arranged by the Committee.

Inside Admissions

Mailbag Brings Questions

by G. Gary Ripple
Dean of Undergraduate Admissions

My mailbag has produced several interesting questions from alumni readers. I will answer two of them in this column and save a few others for future issues of The Alumni Gazette.

What are the major criteria employed in the selection process, and what are the relative weights attached to each? Without question, the most important criterion used by our staff in evaluating an application is the secondary school transcript. Although grades and rank in class are important indicators of performance, the first factor we consider on the transcript is course selection. Students who attempt the most demanding academic courses their high school offers are the most attractive candidates for admission to William and Mary. Students who elect less difficult courses in an effort to achieve a very high grade point average are placing themselves at a disadvantage in our selection process. It is far better for a student to have less than a perfect average in five academic subjects each year than straight "A's" in a curriculum which is significantly less than a full load of challenging courses.

The Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) provides a means of comparison across a variety of school systems and states. It is the most objective means of comparing the intuitive reasoning abilities of all applicants, regardless of their academic performances on a daily basis. We realize there is no significantly high correlation between test scores and college grades; nevertheless, testing results can enhance our ability to predict performance at William and Mary when added to class rank and other predictors.

On a more personal basis, the record of the student's extracurricular involvement gives us a measure of his/her level of social development and willingness to make contributions to the life of a residential college environment. Teacher recommendations are another indication of a student's ability to thrive in an academic milieu and give us the chance to know the student from a personal perspective. Other factors considered by our staff include William and Mary relations and geographic consideration, which leads us to question number two:

Does William and Mary employ geographic quotas in its selection process? Beyond our 70/30 Virginia/out-of-state guidelines, we have not established quotas for students from any particular geographic area. Naturally, our attempts to achieve real diversity in each freshman class sometimes numerically rule against students from densely populated areas. An example of this might be the many students who apply each year from Northern Virginia. In the final accounting, our highest goal is to admit the strongest students regardless of their geographic location. However, all things being equal, students from less populated areas of Virginia and out-of-staters from states beyond our normal drawing area do have a very slight edge in our final decision making. We need to be as broadly represented by students from as many differing demographic and geographic characteristics as possible.

Many thanks to all of you who have expressed positive reactions to my first column and I do look forward to hearing from others who have special concerns about the admissions process.

A Man Ahead of His Time

Donald W. Davis Combined Teaching With a Concern for the Environment

He came from the North, and staged a one-man campaign to protect and to cultivate wisely the productive waters off the Virginia coast.

Yet he was equally as comfortable with dirt beneath his fingernails after working hours in a huge garden devoted to research.

He was the kind of forward-thinking, warm-hearted "caretaker" who would gather on hands-and-knees the last acorns from an historic oak tree.

Donald Walton Davis, during 34 eventful years as a professor of biology at the College, never seemed to stop working--there was a great deal to be done. Although it was not "fashionable" during the Davis era to conduct intensive, original research on most college campuses, this self-driven scholar refused to separate his teaching from hands-on experimentation. He took students who were tired of sitting in the classroom, and pushed them with vigor into the "lab," which was usually his personal garden at his home on the corner of Henry and Scotland Streets, or the waters of the York River.

A plaque honoring Dr. Davis hangs in the foyer of Millington Hall.

Dr. Sewell H. Hopkins '27, who retired in 1972 after a long, illustrious teaching career at Texas A&M, remembers well working side-by-side with Davis in a garden blooming with a variety of balsams. "To me, he was just like a father, always so friendly, and his wife was very much the same wonderful kind of person."

Dr. R. Winston Menzel '40 (MA '43), who is currently a professor of oceanography at Florida State University, could not agree more. "He was a very wise man, a person who was tolerant of everyone's views, but who in a very quiet way always seemed to lead you around to the right view."

Hopkins recalls that Davis was not known for exciting classroom lectures. "He was best when people came to talk after class, and he was outstanding when it came to one-on-one situations."

Dr. A.F. Chestnut '41, professor of zoology and marine science at the University of North Carolina, remembers well "the short man with a little mustache" who "took me in and made me feel more like a part of the staff than just another student."

"He was really a very kind and considerate man, but those who were outside the department and never got to know him were often afraid of him," recalls Chestnut, a former President of the Society of the Alumni and recipient of the coveted Alumni Medallion.

One of Davis' fellow faculty members, math professor Emily Calkins '27, says that Davis was "a very firm taskmaster, who demanded the best, and fortunately, he usually got it."

Davis was a true scholar, and he never failed to live up to the exceptional credentials he brought to a small, somewhat isolated college in 1916. Davis had received both his A.B. and Ph.D. from Harvard, where he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, and had studied at the Marine Biological Association of San Diego, the famous Woods Hole Laboratory, and Columbia University.

When the Pennsylvanian arrived in Williamsburg, he was shocked to see that Virginia's extensive fishing industry was constantly picking the fruits of the sea without much consideration of what steps should be taken to protect the sea from an ultimate wipe-out. Davis was a conservationist who was decades ahead of his time, and he quickly set out to do something to study and to preserve the bounty of the sea.

After building the biology department into one of the largest and most respected on campus, Davis established, in cooperation with Virginia Commission of Fisheries, the Marine Biological Research Laboratory at Yorktown. Today, the Virginia Institute of Marine Science, an outgrowth of Davis' laboratory on the Yorktown shores, is one of the world's most renowned centers for estuarine research.

He did not create a center for marine studies in Virginia overnight, or without opposition. But even those who disagreed with the head of the biology department seemed to admire him. So says Davis' obituary in the October 1950 Alumni Gazette:

"From those who served on the faculty came a great tribute. To them he represented the epitome of courage. These people knew him best in a role that is so important in the life of any college--the force for ever-improving standards. . . Donald Davis was looked upon as one of the most forthright, honest and courageous members of the faculty in the modern era. . . He was stubborn in his convictions and fought for them vigorously."

Dozens of the students who studied under Davis have expressed similar views, particularly those who attended medical school and became successful physicians. To them he was the inspiration which every student values and which every professor desires to be.

Davis was a professor who left his mark on countless students, Virginia's important fishing industry, and an academic community that began to appreciate what conservation means for future generations.

He was a research biologist dedicated to scientific progress, yet no matter how hard or how often he fought against the system, he maintained a quiet, unshakeable dedication to the College.

His daughter Virginia Davis Faulconer '45 remembers what pride and joy her father felt when he sprouted oak trees from the last acorns dropped by the famous corner oak in the Wren Yard. Today, the offspring of the corner oak remain as appropriate memorials to a teacher who fought so brilliantly, and inspired so many, to conserve and to protect the gifts of nature.

Garrett Reelected

West, Wilde, Parker, Roberts in Leadership Roles

The re-election as president of John H. Garrett, Jr. '40, Irvington, Va., to a second term highlighted the semi-annual meeting of the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni at William and Mary in February.

Other officers elected during the meeting were Dr. Marvin West '52, Williamsburg, as vice president replacing Dr. Henry Wilde '53 of Houston; Andrew D. Parker '69 J.D., Chapel Hill, N.C., as secretary replacing Marilyn Entwisle '44 of Meadowbrook, Pa.; and Austin Roberts '69, Newport News, as treasurer replacing Denys Grant '58, Richmond.

Mrs. Entwisle will continue as chairman of the Alumni Services Committee and Roberts will continue as chairman of the College Relations Committee.

The major portion of the two-day meeting was devoted to the initial phases of a long-range study of the mission and purpose of the Society and the Board and the structure and projects to accomplish those ends. Wilde is chairman of the study, with James W. Brinkley '59, Towson, Md., and West serving as members of the study group.

The Board heard presentations from several members of the College community, including President Graves, Duane A. Dittman, vice president for university advancement; and Ken Smith '69, associate dean of students, who gave a special report on the state of fraternities and sororities at the College.

The Board also reviewed the chapter program and the need for an experienced professional person in the role of Director of Chapter Programs. The Board is conducting feasibility and use studies for the expansion of the Alumni House facilities under the chairmanship of West, with the assistance of John F. Morton, Jr., '58, architect from New Orleans and former board member and the architect for the renovation of the current Alumni House.

The Board voted a gift to the Choir to be used towards expenses for the summer trip to Europe, and approved and strongly endorsed the establishment of an Olde Guard Committee, to be chaired by Art Winder '25 of Norfolk.

Retiring board member Pat King Sell '58 of San Diego, Calif., was presented with a certificate of service and a gift from the Board, while new member William A. Armbruster '57 of Severna Park, Md., took her place on the board and was assigned to the Alumni Services Committee.

A review of the progress of the "Life After DOG Street" programs was held with student members of that committee, headed by Missy Wright, vice president of the Class of 1981. The programs will bring alumni from alumni chapters in Norfolk, Richmond, Lower Peninsula and Northern Neck, as well as alumni from the Williamsburg area, to the Alumni House to meet with members of the senior class to aid in the transition from the Duke of Gloucester Street to Main Street upon graduation.

Stanley E. Brown and Robert P. Hunt from the Office of Placement reviewed the Career Exploration Day which will be sponsored by the Society on March 28 on campus. Selected alumni will meet with all interested students to review career options, as well as characteristics and opportunities of their particular careers. Nearly 100 alumni will be involved.

An Alumni Leadership Conference will be held on March 28 for upcoming reunion class officers, reunion chairman, and class reporters, with an emphasis on class organization and identification. In 1982 there will be another chapter leadership conference to continue the development of interest and information among alumni volunteer leaders from across the country.

The Board reviewed the pilot programs being developed for a network of alumni admissions interviewers and recruiters. Selection of alumni to participate is underway in five pilot areas, with training scheduled for the fall to prepare the volunteers for the 1982 admissions season.

Life After DOG Street?

Program To Help Graduates Adjust

There is indeed life after DOG (Duke of Gloucester) Street.

A number of alumni from neighboring alumni chapters, as well as the Williamsburg area, are setting out to aid graduating seniors in their transition from DOG street to Main Street.

The pilot program, sponsored by the Society of the Alumni in cooperation with the Senior Class, seeks to familiarize interested seniors in getting-started problems and solutions, in such areas as how to establish credit, lease an apartment, buy a car, buy insurance, seek professional help, enter the social scene, and approach finances and investments in general.

The program was developed as a result of members of the Board of Directors meeting with senior class officers and members over the past several years.

The format will include short presentations by members of the alumni panel, followed by questions and discussion. A typical panel might include a banker, doctor, insurance agent, lawyer, car dealer or real estate broker.

Two sessions will be held at the Alumni House on each of four different dates, February 19, March 17, March 18, and March 25.

A committee of seniors under the leadership of Missy Wright, vice president of the Class of '81, has been working with Bob Land '34 and Austin Roberts '69 of the Alumni Board. Participating alumni chapters are Richmond, Norfolk, Lower Peninsula, Northern Neck, and Williamsburg.

President John H. Garrett, Jr., '40, presented retiring board member Patricia King Sell '58 of San Diego with a gift and certificate of service. She was replaced on the board by William A. Armbruster '57 of Severna Park, Md., who began a three-year term.

Editor's Notebook

As historical coincidences go, 1981 is an especially significant year in the history of the College.

It is 288 years old, only 12 years away from its tricentennial.

When the College reached the age of 88, its doors were closed. Few had confidence they would ever reopen.

Upon reaching the age of 188, the College again closed its doors. There was, once again, little hope that William and Mary would reopen.

The first of these closings, in 1781, came when all of the students had left campus to fight in the closing days of the American Revolution. The campus itself became first a British stronghold, and then a hospital for the wounded at Yorktown.

President James Madison was ousted by Britain's Lord Cornwallis from the President's House, took brief refuge in the main College building (now known as the Wren Building), and finally left the community altogether.

Without students to lecture, most of the faculty also left in 1781. Professor George Wythe remained, apparently, in Williamsburg. But Professor Carlos Bellini stayed in his apartment in the main College building and--because of his fluency in European languages--became a good friend of the French officers and enlisted men who used the campus as quarters and as a hospital.

A year after Madison left, he returned to find the President's House near destruction from fire. Once the campus was available and no longer used for military purposes, he convened the faculty and resumed the academic calendar. But it was several months before students began enrolling, so lectures were postponed.

Thus, in August, 1782, the College advertised that "the University of William and Mary is now open for the reception of students: the Commencement of Public Lectures is suspended until the first Monday in October, in order to afford time for those to assemble who wish to profit by them. . . many respectable families in town will Board students upon reasonable terms. The inconveniences which have been formerly felt make it necessary also to inform the Public that the usual fee will be expected upon entrance. . ."

There were students in 1881, as Williamsburg and Virginia slowly attempted to recover from the damages inflicted by Civil War.

But President Benjamin S. Ewell had been unable to locate enough money to pay the faculty. The endowment was so small that not even the buildings could be maintained adequately. Despite pleas through friends and public figures in New England for gifts to the South's oldest college, Ewell reluctantly concluded that William and Mary must be closed.

For seven years, Ewell saw to it that the College bell was rung at the start of the normal academic session. It was his way of signifying that the Royal Charter of 1693 was still alive, that the College did indeed exist, and that it might in due time reopen.

In 1888, it did reopen--with a $10,000 grant from the General Assembly of Virginia to fund the training of male teachers for the public schools. Ewell retired, turning the Presidency over to Lyon G. Tyler and the faculty of "Seven Wise Men" the rebuilding of the curriculum.

On the College's 288th anniversary, nothing but optimism prevails as William and Mary moves to its 300th year.

College Votes Against NCAA Takeover

At the annual convention of the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) in January, the delegates voted to begin women's championships in all divisions of competition and include women in the organizations governing structure.

The move by the NCAA, which previously sponsored only men's championships, was against the wishes of the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) and some member institutions of both the AIAW and NCAA such as William and Mary.

John Lavach, professor of education, Millie West, women's athletic director and Ben Carnevale, men's athletic director, attended the NCAA convention as representatives of William and Mary. The College sponsored two resolutions against the initiation of women's championships and voted against the NCAA proposals.

West said that the College has long been a staunch advocate of the AIAW.

"William and Mary supports the AIAW because its overall philosophy is similar to ours, with the student being the reason for the program," she said. The AIAW guarantees the rights of both student-athletes and institutions with students holding voting positions on committees and the powerful Executive Board. But more importantly, the AIAW is committed to financially prudent and educationally sound programs.

Currently the women's program is able to place each sport in a different competitive division while the men's program must place all its sports in one division (with one sport exception). Because of the regional strength of certain sports, and the type of athlete attracted to William and Mary, women's field hockey and lacrosse are in Division I while the rest of the women's sports compete in Division II. With nine teams and or individuals participating in national championships last year, the selection of divisions by sports work well for the College.

"Being able to choose sports by division is good for us because of the high academic standards at William and Mary," said West. "Going with the NCAA would mean that the women's program would have to go Division I since the men's program is currently in Division I."

A Division I program in the NCAA would escalate costs in both athletic scholarships and recruiting. "Since we are small, if we went Division I the number of scholarships we would be allowed to give would double and we'd be competing against people that would be awarding almost the full amount of aid," said West.

In recruiting, West said the women spend less than a total of $500 a year in all sports. The women's program depends on letters of inquiry and on-campus auditions which students attend at their own expense to recruit prospective students.

Under the NCAA, however, schools are allowed to pay a prospective athlete transportation to campus and housing while visiting. In addition, while the AIAW maintains a no off-campus contact policy, the NCAA allows recruiters to visit students homes.

For the future at William and Mary, West is taking a "wait and see" attitude. (Schools will declare for either the NCAA or AIAW membership in May).

"We would like to see what other institutions (our competition) are going to do," said West. "As in the past, the main determining factor of our decision must be for what is best in the long-term interests of the women's athletic program at William and Mary."

Of going with the NCAA, West added that, "If we go with the NCAA we won't know what type of regulations we would be under in the future. The NCAA is not an organization that I would tend to have blind faith in due to their past record."

works of art on a continuing basis, to participate in the preparation of exhibits of important stature, and to learn more of the techniques of art maintenance and upkeep. It will also finally bring to light, in one location, the many important works of art we own," President Graves said.

The College's art collections are currently valued at more than $3,000,000.

"We will also be able to integrate our art collection into our already outstanding academic courses in the fine arts. To say that our fine arts professors are excited about the new doors which this museum will open would be an understatement," he said.

In making the unexpected announcement to about 200 members of the President's Council at their annual black tie dinner, Graves praised "the vision, extraordinary generosity and leadership of Joe and Margaret Muscarelle, who together first encouraged me to turn a dream into reality."

He noted that the Kinnamons "stepped forward almost immediately" to pledge the second large gift to the museum, and that he expects "the outpouring of generosity will continue into Spring" as the groundbreaking approaches. The President will continue to "spread the work" about the exciting opportunities offered by the new museum, but said the project will not interfere with any priority fundraising efforts already established at the College.

Muscarelle is chairman of the board of the Joseph L. Muscarelle, Inc., a construction and real estate development firm. He and his wife are long-time supporters of both higher education and cultural arts. He has served as a trustee of the Bergen Community College in Paramus, on the board of governors for the Hackensack Hospital Association, and on the board of the New York Cultural Center in New York City.

The Kinnamons are developing condominiums on North Boundary Street in downtown Williamsburg and earlier operated a tourist home on the location. He is a retired buyer for Casey's Department Store in Williamsburg. Mrs. Kinnamon is a native of Scranton, Pa., and he is a native of Williamsburg. Both have made earlier gifts to various projects and programs at William and Mary, including the School of Business Administration and Alumni House renovation.

Alumni are encouraged to make gifts of objet d'art, art books, as well as financial contributions to the College.

The building advisory committee for the new museum consists of Miles L. Chappell, Jr. '60, chairman of the Department of Fine Arts; Linda Collins Reilly, dean of the undergraduate program; Ervin D. Farmer, director of buildings and grounds; Gordon C. Vliet '54, executive vice president of the Society of the Alumni; Louise Kale, registrar of the College Art Collection; Henry E. Coleman, associate professor of fine arts; James J. Connolly, director of facilities planning and construction; James C. Kornwolf, professor of fine arts, and Clifford W. College to Host Gymnastics Championships

Nationals to Be Held in William and Mary Hall in April

The College of William and Mary will host the 1981 Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) Division II Gymnastics National Championship on Friday and Saturday, April 3 and 4, 1981 in William and Mary Hall.

Twelve teams and 40 individual gymnasts from across the country will compete for the team and all-around titles.

William and Mary is the defending state and regional gymnastics championship team and the Tribe placed ninth at last year's national championship. The Indians are guaranteed a berth as the tournament hosts.

The tournament schedule is as follows:

Friday April 3:

TEAM COMPETITION

12-noon - 5 p.m. Round 1,2,3 of TEAM and ALL-AROUND COMPETITION

7:30 p.m. - 10 p.m. TEAM FINALS and presentation of team and ALL-AROUND trophies

Saturday April 4:

INDIVIDUAL FINALS

2 p.m.-4:30 p.m. Individual finals and presentation of awards.

W&M Sophomore Lynn Rosenberry performing in floor exercise at the State Championship last year where she placed first with an 8.35.

President's House Book in Preparation

The President's House will be the subject of a new book by well-known Virginia author Parke Rouse.

Do you have any interesting anecdotes about the President's House at William and Mary - or about any of the 23 presidents who've lived there?

If you do, the College welcomes you to send them along for a forthcoming book about life in the historic old mansion on Williamsburg's Richmond Road.

The book is being researched by author Parke Rouse Jr., who has been commissioned by the College to uncover the history of the house and its many unusual occupants. Built beginning in 1732, it has housed all of the college's 24 presidents and their families except Robert Saunders, who preferred to use his own residence, the Carter-Saunders house, on Williamsburg's Palace Green. The search is funded from gifts made for the project.

"This is going to be a very human book," says Rouse, "and I'm anxious to know anecdotes, personality traits, and family connections of the presidents which will tell you just what sort of people the presidents, their families, and their professors were. I'm also interested in unusual guests, in the social life of Williamsburg and the college, and in descendants of the presidents living today."

It will be a panorama of the important and colorful events which William and Mary has witnessed from primitive Indian days, when it began, till the present.

Rouse is the author of more than a dozen books of history and geography including James Blair of Virginia, the story of the college's founder and first president (University of North Carolina Press) and Cows on the Campus, (Dietz Press), an informal history of Williamsburg's "lean years," from the removal of the Virginia seat of government to Richmond in 1780 until the restoration of the town, begun by John D. Rockefeller, Jr. in 1926.

The author is also seeking old photographs and drawings of the house, likenesses of the presidents and their families, and photographs of historic visits to the campus or the house.

Any member of the college family who has anything to suggest or contribute is invited to send it to Parke Rouse, Jr., 14 Bayberry Lane, Williamsburg, Va. 23185.

HOUSE NOTES

Three books of historical interest have been given to the Paschall Library by R.E.B. Stewart '27. They are: THE MAJORS AND THEIR MARRIAGES, by James Branch Cabell '98, autographed by the author; THE GENERAL HISTORIE OF VIRGINIA, NEW-ENGLAND, AND THE SUMMER ILES, by Captaine John Smith, republished in 1819; and M. T. CICERONIS ORATIONES, published in 1820.

Dr. Joseph W. Baker, of Louisa, Virginia, proudly presented a photograph of the 1914 Academy football team, of which he was a member. Dr. Baker attended William and Mary Academy in 1914-15.

A sixteen-year collection of ALUMNI GAZETTES has been received from Robert R. Anderson '52.

Vernon '25 and Elizabeth Nunn gave the College a marble bust which has been placed on top of the secretary in the Chandler Room of the Alumni House.

The Society appreciates gifts to the Alumni House and donations of books written by or about alumni. Memorial gifts to the Paschall Library are also invited. Contact the Alumni Office at Post Office Box GO, Williamsburg, Virginia 23185.

Medallion Nominations Open

Society to Honor Loyal, Dedicated Alumni

The Alumni Medallion Committee is accepting nominations from alumni chapters and from individual alumni for candidates for the Alumni Medallion, the highest honor conferred by the Society of the Alumni.

The medallion is awarded for service and loyalty, recognizing extraordinary achievement in the vocational and avocational life of the alumnus. Consideration is given to distinguished service and exceptional loyalty to the Society and to the College; outstanding character, notable success in business or profession and contribution in worthy endeavors of such nature as to bring credit and honor to the College. The graduating class of the nominee must have been at least ten years prior to the awarding.

The nominations must be supported by a short written statement outlining service to William and Mary and an assessment of that service; service to community, state, and/or nation; vocational achievements and recognitions.

The deadline will be May 1, 1981.

Send all nominations to: ALUMNI MEDALLION COMMITTEE, BOX GO, WILLIAMSBURG, VA. 23185

McCully Gift Helps Library

Professor Emeritus of History Establishes Endowment

Dr. Bruce T. McCully, Professor of History, Emeritus, has created an endowment to help reach a goal for Swem Library which was set almost 40 years ago by President John E. Pomfret.

Professor McCully's gift of $6,000 to establish the special endowment will, he hopes, stimulate gifts from alumni who are interested in encouraging students to read worthwhile contemporary books.

"As matters now stand," Professor McCully says, "the college community, particularly the student body, lacks any provision in the Swem Library for satisfying their interest in contemporary publications except for reference works in the various learned disciplines.

"To fill this vacuum is the primary object of the Memorial Bookshelf Endowment Fund. If it is presented in these terms to the alumni, in my view they are certain to respond by giving of their own to the institution they all cherish."

Clifford Currie, College Librarian, called the gift a "most generous and inspiring gesture. The aim is to insure an annual income which will provide an active, continuing and lively commemoration of the labor and achievement of earlier generations of professors and students. That income will enable the Library, after lean years in which its buying has been limited to bare necessities, gradually and discriminatingly to collect books of outstanding contemporary interest and worth."

In the spring of 1943, President Pomfret proposed that a bookshelf of 40 or more volumes per year be established in the Library. The book collection he suggested would be designed to attract the interest of everyone in the College community: students, faculty, townspeople and scholars, recalled Professor McCully.

"It would not consist of rare books, per se, but would rather encompass the entire spectrum of worthwhile contemporary publications: art, history, biography, travel works, popular science, novels, poetry, the stage (i.e., books about Gilbert and Sullivan), politics, detective stories, etc. etc.

In short, he added, the books would include "any subject that a literate person could read and enjoy," he added. President Pomfret noted that a similar venture had met with almost instant success at Princeton.

The books would be split evenly between fiction and non-fiction, Professor McCully said, and "he, Pomfret, would in his words 'pass the tin hat' to solicit contributions. In this way, a bookshelf dedicated to the memory of all William and Mary students who died in World War II (then reaching its climax) was launched, to Jack Pomfret's everlasting credit."

"Those of who who served the College then and thereafter have never forgotten the enjoyment and enlightenment we shared, thanks to President Pomfret's bold, imaginative initiative."

With changes in the College after Dr. Pomfret left in 1951, the development of the memorial bookshelf was not continued, and the idea was gradually forgotten except by those who were part of the College community in the latter 1940s. Now, it has been revived by the gift of one who remembered.

Chief Justice I'Anson '28 Retires After Forty Year Judicial Career

Friends Praise Jurist for Contributions to Legal Profession During Four Decades

Lawrence W. I'Anson '28 ended a 40-year judicial career in Virginia on Jan. 31 when he retired as chief justice of Virginia after 22 years on the state's highest court including six as chief justice.

Another alumnus, Governor John N. Dalton '53, paid tribute to I'Anson in a letter in which he said the Chief Justice had "contributed significantly to the highest court in Virginia. Your guidance and devotion to our entire judicial system has set a standard of which we can all be proud."

I'Anson has been honored many times by his alma mater and the Society of the Alumni. In 1964, he received an honorary degree from the College and in 1961 he received the Alumni Medallion for service to society and the College. In 1978, the Chief Justice served as the Homecoming Parade honorary marshal.

I'Anson received tributes from throughout Virginia upon the announcement of his retirement. The Norfolk Ledger-Star said the Chief Justice had brought the assets of "character, demeanor, intellect, and knowledge" to the Supreme Court.

"He was widely respected as a Supreme Court Justice, was acknowledged as an authority on state court systems and served both as president of the National Center for State Courts and chairman of the Conference of Chief Justices," said the paper in an editorial.

The Norfolk Virginian-Pilot said that "When you think of Lawrence I'Anson, think of simple justice." The paper added that I'Anson had helped to "bring order to a court system that had become a hodge-podge," adding that for most of his career, "he remained a steady and able judge, laboring quietly in behalf of justice in the Old Dominion."

A one-time law clerk of Justice I'Anson's said his former boss "never lost sight of the realities of the criminal justice system. . . Common sense and his vast experience as a practitioner made him sensitive to the needs of law enforcement officials, police and prosecutors, and trial judges who have to grapple daily with crime and punishment."

A soft-spoken native of Tidewater Virginia known to his many friends as "Red," I'Anson received his law degree from the University of Virginia in 1931. He became Commonwealth's Attorney for Portsmouth in 1938 and was appointed to the bench in 1941. He was appointed to the Supreme Court in 1958 and in 1974 he became Chief Justice upon the resignation of Harold F. Snead.

I'Anson was elected president of the Board of Directors of the National Center for State Courts in March 1979 and in that same year became chairman of the Conference of Chief Justices. He has received the Virginia Trial Lawyers Association Distinguished Service Award and the American Judicature Society Herbert Lincoln Hardy Award.

I'Anson also helped found the charitable Beazely Foundation in which he intends to remain active.

Governor Dalton, in his letter to the Chief Justice, said that I'Anson "totally understood the power that a government of laws gives to those who preside over its courts."

He continued: "Along with these qualities, you have brought to Virginia's highest court a personal stature and a sense of decorum that have enhanced the respect in which that body is held by the legal profession, by our people, and certainly by the executive branch of government, including the Governor.

"While I accept your intentions in good grace, I cannot escape the feeling that all Virginians will sorely miss your judgeship."

Tech Sweep, Six Straight Wins Highlight Season

The William and Mary basketball team was expected to break even this year according to most observers.

In pre-season, the schedule was considered one of the toughest in the nation. It has grown even more in stature as the season has progressed.

Who would have thought the Tribe could sweep Virginia Tech, becoming the first team in the state to beat the Hokies in Blacksburg in 23 years (first loss ever to a state team in Cassell Coliseum).

How about putting together a six game win streak, including three of those on the road?

Or a very convincing win over a previously NIT bound South Carolina?

It really has been quite a year.

Head Coach Bruce Parkhill has molded a poised, rugged squad which features a blend of experience and youth which goes all out at both ends of the court.

The emergence of sophomore Mike Strayhorn on offense (averaging over 16 points during second half of the season), the consistency of junior Billy Barnes and the overall play of senior Scott Whitley have been major contributions to the 1980-81 success story.

But the cost is total.

"It has truly been a team effort. Everyone has had a turn in this year's positive results," said Parkhill.

"The three freshmen (Gary Bland, Tony Traver, Herb Harris) have contributed a great deal in the games and practices. They have really been doing the job," stated Parkhill who added, "you're never sure how a first year player is going to respond. That unknown quantity has become a very positive factor.

"The upperclassmen have all shared in the leadership. Our five wins on the road is a reflection on the experienced players keeping their poise."

"One of the key ingredients has been the players acceptance and execution of our team concept. I don't say enough about what that means and no one is more representative than senior Tim Wagner," pointed out Parkhill.

"He has been back, forth, up, down but never out."

The program is enjoying winning basketball, increased attendance and not just competing with the "biggs" but beating a fair share of them.

The ECAC playoffs begin the first week of March and the winner gets an automatic bid to the NCAA's.

William and Mary has never been to the NCAA's in basketball.

"We have had a lot of firsts this year. I sure would like to see one more," concluded Parkhill.

--Bob Sheeran '67

Tribe center Kenny Bowen scrambles for a rebound with Virginia's Ralph Sampson in a game at William and Mary Hall that the Tribe lost to the Nation's No. 1 team. But the Indians defeated Virginia Tech twice and South Carolina enroute to a 13-8 record as the season entered its last phase.

Sherlock Holmes In A Time Machine

"Sherlock Holmes in Modern Times," an anthology of short stories by Ira Bernard Dworkin '43, J.D. of Flemington, N.J., is written by a Sherlock Holmes aficionado for fellow aficionados and anyone who enjoys a good detective yarn.

Dworkin has put the mythical detective and his assistant, Dr. Watson, in H.G. Wells' "Time Machine," to bring them into the 20th century so they can battle crime on an international scale. But, says Dworkin, "it should be apparent that this anthology is not merely a 'Sherlockian pastiche.' On the contrary, I have tried to make it an intellectual exercise, combining entertainment with thought-provoking themes."

The style and "modus operandi" of his book, he explains, is based on John Dos Passos' narrative style in his famous trilogy, "USA." The thread of each story is carried along in newsreel format by date and place with the central characters, Holmes and Watson, working into the pattern of each story either at the outset or at a later stage of the narrative, interacting with the feature characters of each story.

"I have also attempted," said Dworkin, "to interlace with the main thread of the story some local color and either historical or legal background, seeking to emulate the wizardry of Holmes' creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle."

Dworkin draws from his work as a jurist, his experiences in World War II, his travels and his memories of Williamsburg and the College, in compiling his book. At least one story has a cast of characters with familiar Virginia names.

In "The Writ of Coram Noblis Nobis," Lord Botetourt tries to free his son Richard Berkeley who is serving a 25-year sentence for atomic espionage. Any similarity to persons living or dead is purely coincidental, Dworkin states in his disclaimer, but adds quickly that alumni will recognize the name of a distinguished Law School dean in the character of the Attorney General of England, Lord Dudley Woodbridge.

A Sherlock Holmes aficionado for many years, Dworkin is a charter member of the Red Headed League of New Jersey, an off-shoot of "The Baker Street Irregulars." He received a volume of Sherlock Holmes as a Bar Mitzvah present 44 years ago and admits he has been hooked ever since.

In "The Case of the Beleaguered Barrister," Dworkin says he was inspired by Doyle's real-life efforts to vindicate a Scottish solicitor, George Edalji, who was wrongfully convicted in 1903 of mutilating cattle, sentenced to seven years in prison and disbarred. Dworkin has his hero lose this case although Edalji was finally absolved of wrongdoing.

Three years in Europe with the U.S. Army during World War II and several decades as a member of the bar have served to give Dworkin story lines for his detective stories. Since 1966 he has served on the New Jersey Worker's Compensation Bench as a referee. He holds the only non-appointive judgeship in New Jersey, based on Civil Service examination. Married in 1951, Dworkin and his wife Shirley, have two children, Jonathan and Barbara.

Walt Zable '37 Honored by National Football Foundation

Walter J. Zable '37 (left) chairman of the Cubic Corporation of San Diego, received the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame Gold Medal Award at the Foundation's annual banquet in New York. Zable was the 24th recipient of the award which has gone previously to five former presidents of the United States, President Ronald Reagan, General Douglas MacArthur, John Wayne, Supreme Court Justice Byran "Whizzer" White, and Amos Alonzo Stagg. Vincent DePaul Draddy, chairman of the Board of the David Crystal Co., made the presentation. Zable also received the Alumni Medallion and an honorary degree from William and Mary and is in the William and Mary Athletic Hall of Fame.

Law School Alumnus Delights in Return to Williamsburg, Finds School Spirit Still Prevails

(Editor's Note: Peter Broccoletti '67 JD revisited the campus last fall and was prompted by the experience to write this account of his visit. A 1964 Notre Dame alumnus, he was third in his class at Marshall-Wythe. After working with the Tidewater Legal Services program, and then as an attorney with the Nixon administration in Washington, he returned to Notre Dame in 1976. There he worked in the legal defender program and developed his hobby as strength coach for the Notre Dame athletic teams. Last year, his first book on strength training was published.)

I set out for Williamsburg with the main purpose of exploring the new law school, having graduated from Marshall-Wythe in 1967. Little did I realize how much more the trip would turn out to be.

The fresh and penetrating smells of loblolly pines which were nestled deep along the flat highway told me I was entering Tidewater even without the sight of the majestic James or York rivers. Upon turning off into Route 60 I was surrounded by signs pleading for my business all somehow with colonial names. How could a little town, even with hordes of tourists, contain probably every franchise in America let alone the local businesses that line the road to Williamsburg almost without stop for ten miles? The Williamsburg Pottery Factory looks like a little town, with its own traffic light now. It has more parking facilities than some towns. Do they really make pottery there? Is this the equivalent of a late 20th Century working plantation?

I have just passed a little shopping center and St. Bede's Church. Memories of hundreds of Masses, fervent prayers and candles pleading with God to help me get good grades and pass the bar exam, passed through my head. I knew I was home now. I would find respite from the troubled world.

I viewed the stadium with mixed feelings. I love football and William and Mary but it's been going through difficult times. It is tough for a college with a stadium smaller than some high schools have. Jimmye Laycock has his work cut out for him. A great school with a proud past, an ideal location, but still not achieving the football success it had many years ago or should have now.

I stopped in front of Bryan Hall and thought back to the old days. Is it possible that the Law School I attended was located in the basement of a residence hall? I remember how I felt like I was in a dungeon after coming from Notre Dame. How was it that a school with such poor facilities could attract one of the greatest law professors of all times, Dudley Woodbridge, who even made Life magazine's best professor list? One great prof could be an exception, but we were also blessed with James P. Whyte, a nationally known labor mediator and a very tough teacher. Professor Swindler who was always smiling and effervescent, an internationally known legal historian who graced our school. Emeric Fischer could do just about everything and almost did for the law school and the students. We might have been small but we had a number of very fine students with a bright future. One of the best things about attending the law school in those days was the camaraderie of the students. Almost everyone participated in our intramural sports program and in some other student activity. The Toano Women's Club was filled many a night with our parties.

I parked and walked along the old campus. Nothing had changed. The Sunken Garden was the same, as were the trees and buildings. I looked closely at the students. You didn't see the rebellion of the turbulent late sixties in their eyes or in their dress. They were clean and bright eyed boys and girls filled with college life and charged with hope. Sure there may have been more mustaches and a few beards, but I haven't been clean shaven in eight years. There's something about college life that permeates your whole being. You may grow old, grey and walk without a bounce but you will never lose that college experience.

The old law school still looked good to me. But in reality it was too small, especially the library. It's shocking to think that we almost lost accreditation due to the inadequate facilities. Before it was the law school it was a library and now it's returned to the college for the undergrads.

I proceeded on my original mission to find and explore the "new" law school. Near the Post Office I became lost and asked an obvious coed, very pretty with books in her hands and an alluring smile on her face, for directions. As I approached what was stated to be the law school I stopped in the middle of the street. The sign said MARSHALL-WYTHE SCHOOL OF LAW, America's oldest law school. I couldn't help but think of the incongruity of it all, America's oldest law school having the newest facility in the country.

I have been in law buildings all over the country, there are a number that are larger but surely there is no one more beautiful or decorated with such fine taste. Every last detail seems to have been taken care of. After looking over many happy faces in hallways, (they were beginning fall break), I asked one student where the administrative offices were. I then glided in (too charged up to be able to walk) and blurted out a half dozen requests. The receptionists suggested I might like to talk to Associate Dean Mike Schoenenberger. I found his office and was pleasantly greeted by a rather young but professional looking gentleman.

I told Mike of my requests and dutifully he took notes and showed great concern. He took three hours to show me around the new building, hunted up some old books I had donated and then going beyond the call of duty, accompanied me to the Swem library. He then made plans to introduce me to the athletic department, since I was also a coach.

After meeting some of the staff, Jimmye Laycock and Charlie Rizzo, I knew the football program was on the road to greater success. They went out of their way to be considerate and showed in my talks with them not only a burning desire to be winners but a realistic approach. The College family should be proud of the football staff. Patience is needed, but William and Mary will be winners again.

My visit was coming to an end and my mission was more than accomplished. Mike was a fine example of the law school. Even though there was a magnificent new building he represented the cherished qualities of the old school, sincerity, kindness and dedication. I can rest peacefully knowing that Marshall-Wythe and the College of William and Mary are marching into the 21st century well equipped to handle their challenges.

Frank Borman (left), president of Eastern Airlines, received the School of Business Administration Medallion for a distinguished career in the field of Management from Dean Charles L. Quittmeyer '40 in February. Borman described deregulation of the airlines as opening the way for a whole new approach to business. With more competition and "the refreshing feeling of relying and more on the free market."

Career Exploration Day

Sixty Career Professional Alumni To Advise William and Mary Students on Career Options

Nearly 60 alumni will return to campus March 28 to offer expert guidance to hundreds of students as they examine various career options.

With assistance from the Society of the Alumni, the College's Offices of Career Counseling and Placement have organized William and Mary's first "Career Exploration Day" to match qualified alumni with interested students.

The all-day program was developed by a committee chaired by Stewart Gamage '72 of Alexandria, a member of the Society's Board of Directors. The committee included other representatives of the Society, students, and administrative staff from the College.

Alumni who agreed to serve as panelists will be visiting the College at their own expense. The Society's Board has allocated funds to assist in providing a luncheon for student-alumni participants.

Panels will take place in nearly 20 different career fields. The fields were selected after a questionnaire survey among interested students last fall.

Interestingly, journalism and media communications--subjects not taught at William and Mary--had the highest response rate among students replying to the questionnaire. Business administration and advertising-public relations nearly tied for second place.

Also ranking high in the survey were government/public administration, environment, energy and publishing.

Thomas A. Graves, Jr., president of the College and John H. Garrett, Jr. '40, President of the Society's Board, extended the invitations to participating alumni. Members of the Board followed up the invitations with telephone calls to invitees early in February.

The day-long program will include three panels in the morning for each career field, during which the alumni will tell how they arrived at their current career stages, and how their education helped them; and one in each field in the afternoon to discuss current issues in the respective professions.

The first Career Exploration Day is being coordinated by Stanley E. Brown, Director of Placement; Robert P. Hunt, Associate Director; and Harriet Reid, Director of Career Counseling.

College Selects New Athletic Director

UVA Alumnus Jim Copeland Named Men's Athletic Director;
36-year-old Former Football Pro To Succeed Ben Carnevale

Jim Copeland, William and Mary's new men's intercollegiate athletic director-designate, has all the earmarks of a man with a well-mapped-out life.

An ex-high school and college athlete, professional football player for eight years, innovative mover in collegiate athletic administration, and successor to a walking institution as the men's intercollegiate athletic director of one of the nation's most prestigious universities, it seems that Copeland is ahead of schedule at the age of 36.

But according to the man who will succeed Ben Carnevale as William and Mary's athletic director in July, the route to Williamsburg wasn't as smoothly planned as it might appear. In fact, Copeland's life has been steered by the unexpected.

Born and raised in Charlottesville, Copeland breathed the heady air of Thomas Jefferson's university from an early age. His father drove a bus in Charlottesville, often driving the University of Virginia teams to games, and Copeland remembers riding along.

Neither of Copeland's parents had a college education, but they were determined that their son would. But if athletics were to be his route to college, things looked pretty grim for the young football lineman at Charlottesville's Lane High School.

"I was a late bloomer," Copeland says with a half-smile. "I was short and fat when I started high school. Then I became tall and fat. I had a little success in my junior year, but my senior year was the first season I had any real success."

After losing their first game that year, the Lane team won their next nine and started a string of 56 games without a loss. Copeland was a hub of that team's line play, but there were no college scouts beating down his family's door at season's end.

"Virginia finally decided to offer me a scholarship right near the deadline date," he says. "I signed the papers, walked them up the road to Memorial Gym, and nobody was there, so I left them on a desk. I was really a hot item."

Virginia football was not exactly sizzling when Copeland arrived in the fall of 1962. And by the time he graduated, in 1966, the best record the Cavaliers could muster was a break-even 5-5. Again, Copeland had no reason to expect a call from the pros. He received several routine form letters, but when he was drafted by Cleveland in the 10th round, he was surprised. Cleveland had not been one of the teams to send him a letter.

Copeland tried out for the Browns in 1966, the first year of the AFL-NFL merger, and he made the team as a backup guard. By his fifth year, he was a starter at center. His sixth year he dislocated a hip, and his last two years were spent in another backup role, before a knee injury closed the book on his football career.

Jim Copeland, an alumnus of the University of Virginia with administrative experience both at UVA and the University of Missouri, has been chosen to succeed Ben Carnevale as William and Mary's men's athletic director. Copeland will assume the position in July. (Photo by Carolyn Click)

So in 1974, Copeland returned to Charlottesville, which had remained his home. "I'd done a lot of different things in the off-season," he says. "I had gotten an M.Ed. at U.Va. and I had worked in management training at a local bank.

"Charlottesville was a home base for me," he continues. "I never lacked in self-confidence, and I knew I was versatile. I felt like something was going to work out."

When a position opened up in U.Va.'s Virginia Student Aid Foundation, the Charlottesville equivalent of William and Mary's Athletic Educational Foundation, Copeland took the first step in a new career.

"I fell into the position by luck, by chance, and I happened to like it," says Copeland.

The position was Field Secretary for the VSAF. The job involved extensive travel and the creation of mailing, filing, and district-allocation systems for the school's athletic fund-raising programs.

"I've never been a dollar-oriented person," says Copeland, "but once I got into this work, I liked the responsibility and the opportunity to meet people and see some things I'd never seen before."

After four years with the VSAF, Copeland was hungry for a change. The University of Missouri had hired a new athletic director in 1978, and Dick Bestwick, the head football coach at U.Va., wrote a letter to Missouri recommending Copeland for the post of assistant athletic director. Within six months, Copeland was on his way to the show-me state as the man primarily responsible for Missouri's athletic fund-raising.

"Right off the bat I had to pay for a $1.2 million athletic building," says Copeland, shrugging his shoulders. "I didn't know anybody in Columbia. I didn't even know Joplin from St. Louis."

There was also the sticky matter of a controversy over Missouri's ticket policies that threatened to split the state at its seams. But by the end of Copeland's first year there, Missouri's building was paid for and the ticket wrinkles were ironed out.

Copeland's forte is fund-raising, and when William and Mary began searching for a new athletic director, they were looking for a man who could help the AEF in its efforts to pay for the College's sports programs. But what sounds like a match made in heaven started out as a blind date, and a reluctant one at that.

"I didn't initially want to come to William and Mary, because I had heard of the Cary Field thing," says Copeland. "I came down and visited with people in the Peninsula, people who could give me a good idea about the situation here. Things were a lot more positive and upbeat than I had seen from a distance and from the outside."

Copeland's intent is to work closely with Jim Ukrop '60, the president of the AEF, and Barry Fratkin '64, the organization's executive director, to develop programs of support among alumni and friends of the College. Copeland also plans to work in tandem with Bob Sheeran '67, the College's sports information director, and Sam Baker, the director of promotions. Copeland's recent visit to the Williamsburg area was geared, among other things, to meeting the area news media.

Copeland insists on the importance of recognizing William and Mary's unique position as an academic institution.

"You can't get into a position where athletic philosophy and policies aren't in line with what the school can do," he says. "I don't think William and Mary wants to go to a bowl every year, as a school like Missouri does."

"Anybody who knows athletics and athletic administration knows we're operating at a disadvantage here at William and Mary," says Copeland. "We're limited financially, and that's something we can improve on."

HOMECOMING

★ 1981 ★
NOVEMBER 6-8

DATE CHANGE

Homecoming for 1981 has been changed to the weekend of November 6-8.

The football game opponent will be Harvard University, and it will be a reunion year for the following classes: 1936, 1941, 1946, 1951, 1956, 1961, 1966, 1971, 1976.

The change has been made because of the major national event, the final celebration of the Victory at Yorktown, which will be held on the previously scheduled weekend, October 15-18. It was felt there would be too much pressure on local tourist facilities, highways, and a confusion over events taking place for each celebration.

Again, Homecoming 1981 will be the weekend of November 6-8.

24 It is with a deep sense of personal loss that I report the death of Billy Person on November 21, 1980. Every member of the Class of '24 and thousands of students who came after knew him as a warm hearted, delightful friend. A lifelong resident of Williamsburg, he gave unstintingly of his time, talent and substance to church and community affairs, while for over fifty years engaging in many successful business projects including the family automotive business. All of us will remember him for his friendly greeting whenever we returned to Williamsburg. But above all, his dedication to the College made him one of its outstanding alumni. We are proud that his long service in many capacities was recognized by the awarding of the Alumni Medallion. The College, the community, his classmates and friends will sorely miss Billy Person. His family has established a memorial fund at Alumni House. Contributions should be made to The Billy Person Memorial Fund, Box GO, Williamsburg, Va. 23185.

A most welcome Christmas note from Etta Belle and Hawk Northington. Moving into a new condo in Alexandria about a year ago seems to have been a happy change from running a house, and both are making the most of it. With entertainment at nearby Kennedy Center, bus trips to the races at Bowie and to historic sites in Maryland and Virginia, in-house lectures on politics, art, etc., together with the usual socializing, our friend Etta Belle is having a ball. Hawk enjoys the socializing but much of the rest is not his cup of tea. Both are well.

W&M Sports ancient history note. Ed Johnson recalls that the tennis team in the early twenties had to sweep and patch the court and provide all their own supplies. When they played away from Williamsburg their coach, Professor Hodges, would pay their expenses only one way. Do you think he was trying to tell them something?

Last October Carolyn "Cado" Kelley was in Williamsburg three or four days while her husband, Morris D. Brewster, attended meetings of the board of the Mayflower Society. She enjoyed bus trips to Carter's Grove, Jamestown and Yorktown, but was delighted that Betty Woodward James came over from Saluda for an afternoon. A great yakking session ensued.

Mildred and I had a wonderful weekend in Williamsburg in October for the Dartmouth-W&M football game. My nephew's son, a Dartmouth grad, and his wife came down from Baltimore which added a bit of family rivalry. The astounding fact that W&M won made it a memorable occasion indeed.

Maude Purdy Lynch's house in Lawrenceville has become hardly more than a mailing address and a stopover to repack. Between Christmas shopping trips to Richmond and other places in December, she and sister Julia managed to visit with sister Elizabeth in Pinehurst, N.C., besides several days with their niece, Judy, in Henrico County, Va. A real go-go gal. May she never run out of steam.

Congratulations to everyone who did a good deed by contributing to The William and Mary Fund for 1980-81. An additional gift will be twice as good for the amount of increase over last year's gift will be matched by NEH funds. If you did not contribute last year, whatever you give before June 30th, will be doubled. Knowing the high purpose your gift will serve is a matter of great personal satisfaction. And a gift to the College by your will or through insurance will bring even greater satisfaction the rest of your life. I heartily recommend it.

I know writing is a chore easily put aside, but I hope some of you silent friends will break the habit and drop me a card or note in 1981. It won't kill either of us, but will definitely prove that some members of the Class of '24 are still alive and alert. May the new year bring you the blessings of good health and contentment for the days ahead.

26 The Christmas Season encourages us to do things of a positive nature and your reporter was the beneficiary of some kind thoughts from former classmates and, not to be outdone, the Alumni Staff. We thank you all.

In our Christmas correspondence, to our great delight, was a note from Ray Edwards whom we have not seen to these many years. Ray has been living, of all places, in my hometown of Norfolk. It is no wonder I have failed to see him as I get lost whenever I am there. All the old landmarks have disappeared; Nunnaly's, Martha Washington, the Monticello Hotel, the Confederate Monument on Commercial Place, etc. Ray has been in Norfolk for some years now and is a director of Heritage Bank and Trust Co. On my next visit to Norfolk, I anticipate a long chat with him bringing each other up to date on happenings over the years.

A note from Merrill Evans, '25, was another pleasure of the holiday season. His eldest son is Commonwealth Attorney for Virginia Beach, and carries my name, Andre. There can be no more sincere gesture of friendship. Merrill has resided for some years in Ahoskie, N.C.

The postman also brought us a card from Pat Murphy. Pat, you may recall, was able to supplement his college spending money with a pool cue. We roomed together in New York City in our less palmy days. Come to think of it, I do not recall any other kind. On several occasions, I urged Pat to take on some of the local gentry with the expectation of broadening our diet. He wisely recognized class, however, and admitted that the local cue artists played in a different league.

Elizabeth Palmer Thompson extended an invitation to visit her in Waco when she learned we were spending the winter months in Denton, Tex. We plan to do this early in the year. Waco is about 125 miles southwest of Denton which in this part of the country is like being next door neighbors. Elizabeth was in Las Vegas this fall and stayed at the MGM Grand Hotel shortly before the tragic fire. She must have been lucky in other ways too while at Las Vegas as she is planning a March cruise through the Panama Canal to South American ports.

A letter from Hilda Stephenson Woodall was complimentary to my perseverance of fifty-four years aimed at getting the girl. Hilda lives in Columbia, Md., between Washington and Baltimore. She is quite a gardener and culinary expert. Descriptions of cauliflower and cantaloupes grown in her garden last summer were mouth-watering and indicate a visit to Columbia as being best scheduled toward the end of summer.

Hilda was rightly proud that General Foods Corporation had selected one of her recipes to be included in its cookbook, "Secret Family Recipes." Of the thousands, submitted, only one hundred recipes were incorporated in the book. Hilda's was for a pineapple carrot cake. Start drooling, all of you! So often we tend to measure individual accomplishment only in terms of degrees, titles, etc. Hilda has attained recognition as a homemaker. Her recipes also have been published in other cookbooks. She enjoys creating new ones.

28 Money grows. So they told us. And it's true. It already has multiplied ten-fold. Remember that 1928 copper penny that our Bill Bolton, Class Reporter Emeritus and numismatologist, that is, collector of American post-Continental metallic wampum of issue prior to our coins being "short-changed" of silver and copper and nickel content, which he gave to the class? His gift of the one-cent piece inspired the thought of our Class contributing other 1928 pieces.

First to respond is Lucile Eastham Michie, also a numismatic authority as well as being a collector of dolls and blue opalescent glass. Lucile has sent us a 1928 dime. Now, from whom may we expect a 1928 quarter, then a four-bit piece and a 1928 cartwheel. Don't forget the nickel and there must be some 1928 gold pieces out there, or as Rudy Tucker, '40, suggested, before the later "gold rush," the donation of class rings. Lucile is distinguished in the field of psychology, in August having been elected chairman of the Virginia Board of Psychology, succeeding Dr. Rae Harcum, chairman of the psychology department at the College. A widow since 1977, she has kept busy in her profession and with her hobbies, not to mention the devotion of a son and daughter and four grandchildren, and keeping up with the rapidly advancing field of behavioral sciences, her Fluvanna County school children benefitting. In a recent letter she expressed appreciation for the class letter and for the contributions, to class and fellow folks, made by William B. Bolton. Those interested in psychology may have read some of Lucile's considerable published writings on the subject. Look for her at the next Class reunion. For her new honor I'll express congratulations representing those classmates who may delay too long in expressing their's. Her address is Box 3445, Charlottesville, Va. 23903.

Ladies first in this letter. (I always let the coeds, I being very shy, walk up the steps of the Wren Building in front of me -- bashful and polite.)

Elizabeth Glenn Hartman writes that she was in Muncie, Ind., with her husband, when we had Homecoming. And who can blame them because they had the thrill of watching a grandson play on a state-ranked high school football team. "We are trying to interest him in William and Mary upon his being graduated in 1982." (Attention Coach Laycock!) The Hartmans also enjoyed the mid-summer snow in Western Colorado's high Rockies. "I wish I had some exciting news to contribute to the Gazette column," she writes. The Class Reporter commends you for setting an example for others.

The College had some distinguished alumni in the judiciary early on, among them John Marshall, 1780, and Bushrod Washington, 1778. But that wasn't the end of a great line. Among our fellow students several were to preside from the bench, earning highest respect. Were our own classmate, Lawrence W. I'Anson, to wear at one time all the honors bestowed on him, he would need the bench to lean on.

Now the native Portsmouth citizen has announced his retirement as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Virginia, to which post he was named in 1976, having served on it since 1958. In 1941, he had been appointed judge of the now Circuit Court of Portsmouth. Fellow William and Mary alumnus, Governor John N. Dalton, '53, (who was brought up under the eye of another of our collegemates, distinguished reader of the law, Federal Judge Theodore "Ted" Dalton '24), was high in his praise of the man I'Anson and his service to Virginia and the nation. In our September '28 letter were listed some of the many honors bestowed on Chief Justice I'Anson, among them the Honorary Doctorate of Laws from the Dickinson School of Law (1824) at Carlisle, oldest and only independent law school in Pennsylvania. It is gratifying, but hardly a surprise, that an institution so far away has so recognized merit for services that extend beyond the borders of the Old Dominion, into every state of the Union. We of the College should applaud our own decision-makers for, a score of years ago, deciding to honor its own, conferring an honorary degree upon this distinguished alumnus. Nor has the Society of the Alumni been unaware, for Chief Justice I'Anson also is a holder of the Alumni Medallion, a most honorable award.

Laudatory editorials have appeared in the Norfolk newspapers and on the editorial pages across Virginia. The jurist's many accomplishments have been cited as have been his pioneering leadership in restoring organization to state court systems here and elsewhere. He recently completed his presidency of the National Center for State Courts, its home in Williamsburg, and more lately the chairmanship of the Conference of Chief Justices, a dual distinction.

That Williamsburg and the College of William and Mary have become such a collegium (in its wider sense) for judicial minds may be traced to a number of links in the chain, starting with William and Mary's priority in the study of law, formally, in America, to the reestablishment of this study under the foresighted efforts of Dr. J.A.C. Chandler, '91, to the assignment of the lands of the Eastern State Hospital to the College, and the retention thereof, under high pressures from other interests to obtain the property, in which latter case much credit is due to former William and Mary Chancellor Colgate Whitehead Darden. This tract now is home of the Center and Law School.

How many of us were "plank owners" in Monroe Dormitory? I remember Dr. J. A. C. Chandler '19, telling me to make my choice of rooms and I picked the second floor next to the southeast corner room, sharing bath with the corner. 203, I think it was.

George Robert Whitley first had 309, he remembers. When I met George at last Homecoming Olde Guard bar I asked him about Ming Pan '25. He writes that Ming (See COLONIAL ECHO for '25, Page 44) was perhaps in 304 Monroe. He (Ming) "was easy to know. He was the first Chinese person I had ever seen. Over in Isle of Wight County where I was raised there were only people who had lived there all their lives. Going to William and Mary was my first trip away from home."

"I have more feeling for the College now than when I was so busy." George and his wife, Edna, are making all the Homecomings, he accompanying her to Catholic and Maryland universities. The Whitley Christmas card revealed that he is a locomotive buff, steam locomotive, please, over which he calls himself a "nut." Ah, remember those Chesapeake & Ohio whistles, the station, the comings and goings and the tootings that could be heard across the campus, if and when we were quiet enough? Allllll aboardddd!

E. Carlton Macon, as he did when he was the William and Mary fullback, still loves challenges. The past autumn he was one of a foursome, for the seventh such voyage, sailing the 42-foot ketch, "Intrigue," along the South Atlantic shores, putting in at Oregon Inlet for a bit of calmer sailing past Cape Hatteras.

Our Class President, William G. Thompson, Jr., is excited about the merging of the classes of the Olde Guard into one unit. It has been my own observation that the loneliest alumnus is the neophyte returnee, before getting acquainted with others who attend Homecomings, class reunions and other functions. The entire William and Mary enrollment during the 1920's and before, too, hardly was larger than a graduating class of the present day, and freshmen and seniors were to get to know each other then; indeed probably know at least by name every member of the student body.

Bill Thompson, who has been planning another retreat to the lodge on the oceanside of the Eastern Shore, has mastered at least some of the vernacular, to wit: "Yellow-skins" for Hayman sweet potatoes, and "salts" for seaside oysters. There are some things we don't learn in college.

50TH REUNION COMMITTEE MEETS

Classnotes and news will be gratefully received as will be facts and anecdotes about chinquapins, past and present; mistletoe and Dr. J.A.C. Chandler, '91, Dr. W. A. R. Goodwin and Dr. E. G. Swem, and others, the latter topic relating to the rebirth of the College and resultant restoration of Williamsburg.

30 Congratulations to LeRoy Ober and his wife, Kathleen, who write that they missed our May reunion because they were in Hawaii celebrating their fiftieth anniversary. LeRoy is still active in his insurance company. He plays tennis at every opportunity, and last year he played in the Nationals in classification over seventy, ranking #51 in the United States.

A letter from Frances Henry Crouch indicates that she hasn't lost her ready wit. She still sparkles. Frances has been a widow for two years now. She has two children and three grandchildren. She does volunteer work in Roanoke hospitals and public library. She spends some time writing her memoirs, and travels whenever the urge overtakes her.

Recently I ran into Roslyn Webb Jenkins, who told me that her granddaughter, Mary Anne Goodrich, is a freshman at William and Mary, the fourth generation of her family to attend the College. Mary Anne's mother, Laura Anne Jenkins Goodrich, '60, and her great-grandfather, Dr. William Chappell Webb '96 - '98 were also graduates of William and Mary. This is certainly an enviable tradition for any family.

Sue Cornick Barlow, who has been living in Florida since her husband's retirement from the service, is moving to California after the first of the year.

In a note from Dot Langford Bradford, comes the good news that Ned has just had a successful cataract operation.

Bill Savage and Sarah Anne Everett Woolford, our class representatives on the Olde Guard Council, have been elected treasurer and secretary, respectively.

Ed Toone spent Christmas with his children in Chesapeake and Wilmington, N.C.

Susan Carpenter Carter, always interested in things historical, is very active in the Association for Preservation of Virginia Antiquities having at one time been a member of the board of directors. Susan recently displayed her collection of antique and foreign dolls at Prestwold when it became a National Historical Landmark.

Susan also writes a weekly column called "Treasures of Gold" in her local newspaper. A copy of Susan's latest literary effort called "My Memories" has been filed in the Alumni Archives.

I had Christmas messages from Lucy Boswell Crymble and Louise White Johnson still glowing from the spring reunion. Louise plans to spend the spring months with her daughter and family in England. Sallie Byrd Farmer Lawrence from Nashville, Tenn., also sends her classmates greetings.

I had quite a surprise this summer when I was in Europe on a William and Mary trip to find two other classmates on the same trip, Margaret Adelia Johnson and Gordon Campbell and his wife, Virginia. It was like old home week when Irma Adams Gillespie, '31, and Bob joined the group.

A nostalgic note from Anna Lovelace Bissette reminded me that we were not only William and Mary classmates but that we had been in grammar school together many years before. Anna spent the holidays with her brother in Indiana. She would like to be remembered to her classmates.

Am about to leave for Africa with Mary Land Gill, '28, on another William and Mary safari. Please have some news waiting for me when I return.

A letter from John and Marilyn Entwisle, '44, reminds us to contribute to The William and Mary Fund. It is especially important this year because of the matching grants of the National Endowment for the Humanities.

This is my first letter since the November issue came out. I hope all of you read it. The paper featured a number of our distinguished members of the Class of '32.

In the article about Dr. Glenwood Clark, Caskie Stinnett, John Weaver and his brother, Henry Weaver, were mentioned.

I had a card from Caskie - We knew him as Harry. He now lives in Boston where he continues his writings. Harry was a fraternity brother of my brother, Dr. James M. Habel, '31, of Suffolk, Va.

Willoughby Patton writes in regard to Dr. Clark and what a great help he was to her in her writing career.

The Alumni Office sent a note about John Weaver in regard to the dedication of his latest book, LOS ANGELES: THE ENORMOUS VILLAGE, to his wife, Harriett. John and Harriett were guests of honor at the annual meeting of the Los Angeles Library Association in December. They have combined on writing ten books and hundreds of books and short stories as well as many magazine articles. They made the Los Angeles entry in THE ENCYCLOPEDIA BRITANNICA.

There was a great picture of Russell "Rip" Collins and his wife on the cover of the Gazette. "Rip" has attended every Homecoming game since graduation except the six years and some months he was on active duty in the Navy. He and his wife, Kathryn, live in Newport News, Va. They have a daughter, Neeta Mae, who lives in Richmond, and a son, Rip, Jr., in Marietta, Ga. He keeps in contact with Mac Britton in Orlando, Fla., by mail and ham operator messages.

Also in the November issue was a group picture of the recipients of the Alumni Medallion. One was an old friend, Duncan Cocke.

A Christmas card from Mac Britton, Orlando, says he is in the hospital for the third major operation on his hip. We wish him well, and a better year in 1981.

A letter from Dr. John Conwell Stolz of Old Oley Road, Rt. 3, Fleetwood, Pa., says he continues to be interested in our College and the many changes that take place there.

A card from Agnes and Pat Paschall brought back many happy memories.

Elizabeth Urbano sent us her new address, 445 Front Street #111, Portsmouth, Ohio 45662. She has moved to her father's old hometown.

It is always good to hear from classmates.

34 As you know, I have been away a good part of the year having lost my sweet husband, Fred, in May and my dear father in October. Of course, I missed Homecoming and have heard no news about it. That isn't exactly true. Bob Land (who as you probably know ably represents us on the Alumni Board) and Emil Johnson and some others have been working diligently on our Fund-raising project for the Class of 1934 Class gift at our 50th reunion. It will be here before we know it. Let's make this a memorable gift - Start contributing now!

1981 October will commemorate the 200th anniversary of the Battle of Yorktown. In rummaging through old papers recently I was interested in finding a 1931 Yorktown Sesquicentennial program. My father, then a Captain at Fort Eustis, had the role of Lord Cornwallis in the Pageant. I don't know how many of you remember, but under the able direction of Miss Roberts, our Women's Frosh Gym classes learned dances which we dutifully performed on "Surrender Field" or somewhere on those dusty Yorktown fields! My able partner was Ruth Sharrett (friends these many years) -- "Sherrri" as she is better known today was married (having been widowed some time ago) in West Palm Beach in September to Fred Yount. She sent me a picture from a newspaper clipping and looked young and as beautiful as a movie star! Some other happy residents of Florida (Hovey-in-the-Hills) from whom I heard Christmas are Winnie Cory and Jimmy Jobbins. They are having a wonderful time there. I am going to take up some of these nice invitations and head south one of these days. My faithful co-writer, Frances Spindle Harris, has reluctantly resigned because of her own health problems. She was so faithful about keeping in touch with you all when I was not able to contribute. I miss you, Frances! I will carry on as best as I can, but we need some news from new people. Love the old faithfuls, but where are the rest of you? We had a great class! We'd like to hear! I have been remiss in answering a lovely note from Ann Pharr Goodykoontz -- happily married in the midwest to an Episcopalian minister. She hopes to attend the 50th. So does Faith Bugbee Vogel from San Rafael, Calif. Faith and I have been faithful correspondents these many years. Faith and Fred in February are taking a lovely air-cruise combination from California through the Panama Canal and Caribbean.

I see Dot Littlepage Allen (as pretty as ever) frequently when she and Gib aren't on a trip somewhere. Had a sweet Christmas note from Lillian Carmine Sterling -- I am truly going to get to Gloucester for a visit soon! Of course, Alice Cohill Marquez and I keep in close touch. Had a lovely visit with her and Greg and the family at Stafford Hall in Maryland at Thanksgiving time. Reminded me of old times.

I see busy, busy Howard Scammon around now and then -- enthusiastic as ever! Sit down and drop me a line telling me about yourself. In the meantime a happy, healthy 1981 to you all.

38 Greetings, classmates! This time I have two good letters to share with you. From Gretchen Kimmel Price: "After being a family doctor in Spartanburg, S.C., for 30 years, my husband, George, retired and we moved to Hendersonville, N.C. We bought a condo and love this area and retirement. We keep very busy; George plays tennis every day and I go to the Y, play bridge and knit. We have a busy social life, as there are so many retired people here. We have one son and two grands in Spartanburg and our other son and family live in Alexandria, Va., so we keep the road warm visiting them. Five grandchildren keep us young and active. We travel some, but we enjoy our freedom and leisure life so much that we don't travel as much as we had thought we would. I'm sorry to say I haven't been back to William and Mary for any reunions. I do keep in touch with several of the girls."

And from Bill Reynolds: "We are enjoying our second retirement. The first from business in New York and, most recently, from fifteen years of teaching economics at Windham College in Putney, Vt., an interesting and rewarding experience. At the moment we're adjusting to our new home in East Rupert, near Dorset in southwestern Vermont. Reading and wood splitting keep us busy until our late winter trip to Florida with the usual Williamsburg stopover. Hope to make a reunion (45?!) soon."

Some Christmas card gleanings:

From Dorothy Kincaid Portz: "Son Dave graduated from Georgetown Law School in May and then went on to Houston. After the Texas Bar, he managed a leave of absence to study at the University of Paris, where he is at the moment. He expects to return to Texas and his firm there sometime in 1981." That young man assuredly has a very bright future! We send congratulations to Dottie and Woodrow and add that we're not surprised. After all, he has two very smart lawyers for parents.

From Mollie Waters Christie: "Guess what! I'm un-retired! Agreed to teach at a local college to fill a vacancy that arose in September. Am teaching only first semester, despite almost incredible pressure to continue. But this job does cut one's freedom and I think I'll stick to my NO."

Between Christmas and the early January wedding of our youngest son, Nick and I squeezed in a visit to Williamsburg. We met friends from Ohio and did some tourist-type sight-seeing. I couldn't stay completely away from the College, though, and a walk around old campus stirred feelings of fondness and nostalgia--as always. We also thoroughly enjoyed touring Bassett Hall and were surprised to learn that Mr. and Mrs. Rockefeller had owned it even when we were in college.

I called Bert Capps Sheeran just before we left Williamsburg and she mentioned that Jerry Murphy (her married name and class have slipped my mind) contacted Bert as a result of reading about her in the November Gazette. See what good things happen when you respond to your Class Reporter's appeals?

Don't forget The William and Mary Fund and our own class fund. Monies for The William and Mary Fund should be sent directly to the College and for the '38 fund to Annabel Hopkins Mitchell. Until mid-April, Annabel's address is: 743 Harrison Street, Hollywood, Fl. 33020.

40 I was delighted that my plea for news in the last issue and also at Homecoming has borne fruit. Some letters have been waiting for this issue since shortly after the last deadline. I'm glad to know that most of you didn't think I'd been goofing off every other issue!

Jack Purtil wrote right after Homecoming. Seems that Fran Wagener Read has been going to visit her daughter in West Hartford for 11 years not realizing that Jack and Harriet were ten miles away. Very ironic since Jack lived at the Wagensers' home for a bit more than a semester during college. Fran's daughter is a "positive younger twin and a most talented artist," Jack says. He noted that in the Re-Echo Charley Beale is listed without a known address. Jack checked with his client in Blackstone, Va., and "Shorty" is still living there. Next time Frank and I go to see our daughter in Blackstone, we'll track him down. On another track, Jack suggests that some effort ought to be made to "preserve the togetherness" of the Classes of '39, '40, and '41, as there seems to be so much intermingling and intermarriage between them. Great idea!

Had a nice note from Hope Hunt White (Nov. 2) saying that she and her sister, Harriet-Louise, and her two daughters went to Europe in May and saw The Passion Play. She and her sister had originally seen it together in 1934, and thought this might be

WIFE OF REAGAN PRESS AIDE WILLIAM AND MARY ALUMNA

Sarah Jane Kemp Brady '64 is the wife of President Reagan's new press secretary, James S. Brady. Mrs. Brady graduated from William and Mary with a B.A. degree in education. After teaching in public schools in Virginia, she became director of administration for the Republican National Committee in Washington, where she met her husband. The Bradys have a two year old son and live in Arlington, Va. Brady will speak at the Northern Virginia Chapter dinner March 26.

ALUMNUS WINS BUCKLEY AWARD

Dr. William Spicer '49, Stanford Ascherman professor of electrical engineering at Stanford University, has been awarded the Oliver Buckley Solid State Physics prize for his contribution to the advancement of knowledge in solid state physics. Endowed by Bell Telephone Laboratory, the prize carries a $500 stipend which Dr. Spicer has contributed to the Physics Department at William and Mary.

HARVARD DEAN HELPS TRIBE

A William and Mary alumnus has come to the rescue of the Tribe football team whose members had many of their personal belongings stolen from their dressing room when the Indians played Harvard on Nov. 8. In a letter to President Graves, Dr. Henry Rosovsky '49, '75 LLD, dean of the faculty of arts and sciences, wrote that Harvard would "assume financial responsibility for the losses" the team incurred while at Harvard. The team's dressing room was burglarized at halftime of the 24-13 defeat in Cambridge.

the last chance they'd have to do it again. They met Hope's son, Johnny, in Munich for three days and it all proved a great trip.

Sad news comes along with the good. I'm sure the Class joins me in extending sympathy to Frances Duryea Day and to Jane Groggins Beard in the death of their husbands.

Had my first letter from Carlton Laing and so happy to hear all his news. In 1976 he married the former Michiyo Yamaguchi who has her Bachelor's from Japan Women's University in Tokyo and a Master's in Sociology from California State University, San Francisco. She is a Budget Analyst with the California Department of Social Services. He says that that bit of delayed intelligence was not his reason for writing. What he wants me to do is to insure that his friends and former associates learn about the joy of his life. Michiyo has presented him with a brand new son, Brian Yoshio Laing, born November 13, 1980, and they couldn't be more proud and happy. He says that it's probably not too early to register him for the Class of 1998! Brian has an older half-sister, Nancy, a member of the Class of '70, and two half-brothers, Douglas and Bruce, who chose other schools. Our congratulations, Carl, you do the Class PROUD. Most of us are announcing new grandchildren and how wonderful it is to have a new son to announce!

It was very heartwarming to receive Christmas cards from Anne Seward Allen and Shirley Griffen Allen. I do appreciate your and Len Owen's kind expressions for my newsletters over the years. Anne said that they were disappointed not to make Homecoming, but two weeks in Europe highlighted by The Passion Play at Oberammergau and the arrival of two grandchildren kept them busy. They now have five grandchildren who are the joy of their lives.

Shirley says that her husband, Guy, is retired and spends more time with his old hobby of ham radio. His call is W3RLA, and he would enjoy hearing from any William and Mary hams. During the summer they spend a lot of time at the Driftwood Campground on Route 9, at the Jersey shore where their trailer is parked in the pine holly woods. When they're on the beach at Avalon they have fun with a metal detector and manage to find a few coins among the bottle tops.

Bobbie Milligan Molyneux writes that David retired in May and they are in a condo at Ft. Pierce, Fla. (1208 South Lakes End Drive, #D). If they don't like it, they'll come back to the Carolinas.

Jean Clarahan Bratton spent a few days at Thanksgiving with her daughter, Chris, and her husband in New York and enjoyed time shopping and in museums. Her older daughter, Anne, and family have moved to Hastings, Neb., where her husband is undertaking an independent business venture. Jean went out there to be with them for Christmas and to help with the unpacking.

Alfred Alley retired as Vicar of St. Clement's Church after nine years of service to the congregation. They took a six-weeks trip which included Homecoming and decided it is a long way across these United States. Al's cookbook is still in the works, adding more and more each day.

"Cookie" Elizabeth Jane and "Casey" Caldwell Cason said they agonized for six months and they added a swimming pool and jacuzzi to their deck - and it's "gorgeous"! But #1 big news is that she has another granddaughter (See, Carl!). Her son, Dave, and Doris adopted a two-month-old baby girl last March and of course she's a "living doll." She and Casey are enjoying Casey's retirement but ashamed to admit that their wallpapering and painting skills have improved more than their golf scores!

Ginny Clauden Allen had her back fused in March and says that they'll come next year to Homecoming when she can dance all night for by then her back should be healed. She and Scrib have moved from #5 to #18

Redrock, Burlington, Vt., and now have a winter lake view, lots of woods and birds and much more company space. They hope to get to their Palm Beach house in the spring and to Illinois in the summer.

Dinny Forwood Wetter writes that she and Ed were spending the holidays at West Point, N.Y. Her daughter, Barbara, is expecting her third child, so she'll stay on several weeks to help out. She couldn't think of a happier Christmas gift than a new baby.

And speaking of babies, Frank and I have had our youngest grandchild, Stephen (2 on January 25), for ten days, while Ann has been nursing her mother-in-law. We did enjoy his stay and now the house is very quiet. The end of January Frank and I take off for three weeks in Florida, so I have a lot of catching up to do and for once my letter is early. Great hearing from all of you. Do hope there won't be a lull now.

42 Thanks to Eleanor Ely Mackey Ferguson, I finally have some class news. She is now living in the East, and does volunteer work at the library, prison visiting, and for exercise, aerobic dancing. She makes four trips a year back to Kansas to visit relatives, and her two-year-old grandson.

Ginny Doepke Myers is busy with many grandchildren and travel. Her husband's new job is Vice President of the Fulton Bank in Harrisburg, Pa.

Patty Nichols Curcuro's husband is retired, but active in consulting in the business management area.

Theo Kelcey Dean and her sister made a trip to Paris, Geneva, and Cannes last spring.

Ginny Sims Wilkinson's husband is also retired, and they spend the winters in Huntington, W. Va., and enjoy a condominium in Tequesta, Fla.

Betsy Wakeman Serbell is still teaching biology in Whittier, Calif., but looking forward to retirement and weaving full-time. She does fabulous work. One of her daughters was married last spring.

Louise Julius Greene is still enjoying retirement in Sacramento, Calif.

Our Class does seem to be well into grandparenting. Our daughter, Joan, had a baby in May, but unfortunately, it was too premature to survive more than a few hours, so that pleasure still eludes me. Ruth is now living in Escondido, and Ann in Eugene, Ore., so we had two out of three home for Christmas. My husband, Irv, is back teaching part-time, mostly in the graduate business school MBA programs.

The San Diego area has a lively alumni group, but I don't see anyone from our Class, mostly a much younger group. Next week we will meet at the home of Ken and Dorcus Lounsberry in Escondido.

Without your help, I can't write a column, so please let me hear from more of you. And bless you, Eleanor Ely.

Alumna Signs on With New York Philharmonic

"I just wandered into it," says Susan M. Anderson '80 with non-chalance. The position of this William and Mary alumna accepted last November is one that many young music and theatre professionals would gladly die for: assistant to the associate director of "Live From Lincoln Center," a PBS series featuring the New York Philharmonic, the New York City Opera and American Ballet Theatre. Susan won the job over more than 50 applicants when she ran into the associate producer by chance on her way back to N.Y.C. from visiting Williamsburg last fall.

"He decided that I was just what he needed," says Susan, who has handled budgets, payrolls and some technical aspects of television producing in her job at Lincoln Center. But as Paul Harvey would say, "That's not the end of the story." This February, Susan moved to a new job 40 feet away in Avery Fisher Hall at Lincoln Center, the home of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra. With the move, she became assistant to Orchestra Manager Henry Fogle, at the ripe old age of 22. Susan's dream for years has been to someday be the orchestra manager of the Philharmonic herself, and despite the attractiveness of television producing, she couldn't turn down Fogle's invitation.

Her new job sounds challenging. Among other responsibilities, she arranges the Philharmonic's tour schedule, which involves one national and one international tour of three weeks each for the 110-member orchestra, administrative staff, physician and family members. The job has its moments, too.

"One cello player doesn't like to take his cello in the plane flying over the Alps, for example," says Susan. Since there isn't room to put it on the seat next to him, the alternative is the unpressurized storage compartment, which might possibly harm the instrument. Add to that the passport and housing requirements of an entire orchestra, currencies and different languages. Susan's solution?

"Lists," she says, "Lots of lists."

While Susan seems to wander into demanding jobs calling for administrative and artistic skills, the truth is that she's racked up training and experience in the arts that older professionals respect.

Since her graduation last June, Susan has held a variety of interesting positions: production assistant with the Metropolitan Opera and New York Philharmonic's Parks Concerts; a stint as stage manager for "All My Children," the popular ABC soap opera, and media coordinator for Fiorentino Associates, the theatrical lighting company hired by Ronald Reagan's national campaign staff. Susan revealed that each Presidential candidate was required to provide the necessary lighting for every television appearance, whether it was a commercial or the debates that were held between Reagan and John Anderson and later Reagan and Jimmy Carter. Susan met both Ronald Reagan and George Bush, and said that coordinating light and sound for their TV appearances was certainly fun.

"I'm not involved politically," she says, "and in November I became totally involved." Susan turned down an opportunity to stay on with the lighting company, which includes Frank Sinatra and Muhammad Ali among its clientele as well as the two national political parties. She also turned down an offer to be the assistant manager of the American Symphony Orchestra, which plays at Carnegie Hall.

Susan doesn't find her luck exceptional, and takes it in stride. "What's unusual is that I have the experience and am able to make decisions -- I've been doing it for years, even though I'm only 22." Susan was immersed in music at William and Mary as a clarinetist, conductor and orchestra manager for four years.

She credits that involvement for her level-headed outlook on orchestra management especially. "If you can't cope with crises you won't make it," Susan underlines. "For instance, when the piano soloist suddenly can't come at the last minute, you have to do a clarinet concerto real fast."

"The big thing I got out of William and Mary is broad experience," Susan adds in looking back. "I was exposed to every kind of thing that comes up in pit orchestras, band, orchestra and chamber ensembles -- at Juilliard Conservatory, I'd be lucky to do one." As a "big fish in a little pond," Susan combined her musical interests with a business major, and says that courses she took in accounting and business management, which is one reason why Philharmonic manager Henry Fogle is happy to groom her to take his position someday.

LAW SCHOOL RECEIVES $100,000 GRANT

The Marshall-Wythe School of Law has received a $100,000 research grant from the Continental Financial Services Company to conduct a comprehensive research project on the legal status of title to underwater properties. President Graves and Dean William B. Spong Jr. (left) accepted the grant in the form of a check from James F. Betts, President of CFSC. At Betts' right is Robert C. Dawson, president and chief executive officer of Lawyers Title Insurance Corp.

TRIBE ALUMNI JOIN REDSKINS

Two William and Mary alumni have joined the new coaching staff of the Washington Redskins. Dan Henning '64, a former William and Mary quarterback, left the Miami Dolphins to become new head coach Joe Gibbs' chief assistant and Larry Peccatiello '58, '59 M.Ed., left the staff of the Seattle Seahawks to join the Redskins.

Heard from Dr. John M. Bellis, who is a psychiatrist in Hamden, Conn., in which he said that Lukas, his youngest son, has received an early acceptance at William and Mary for next fall. Katie Rutherford Watson writes that she has been quite busy lately between the wedding of her youngest daughter, Liz, in August and a month in Europe in October. However, she relays the following news: She saw Ann Washington Beard and Jim in San Francisco on their way to New Zealand where Jim will start up a plant for Mobil. She also saw Marion Ross Karrick and Sam while attending a convention in San Francisco. Billie Davison Cantlay and Godron are living in Hawaii (Gordon retired as Deputy Comdr. of NATO under Gen Haig). Billie has a real estate license and is looking for any potential business. Gwen Kehl Parker and Bob went fossil hunting at Calvert Cliffs, Md., last summer. Gwen is a semi-retired secretary, who has been most helpful in trying to generate some news from the Class. She relays the following news from other classes: She saw Jane Thomas Folk '45 at the wedding of their #2 son, Rob at Terrace in the Park, Flushing, N.Y. She occasionally sees Mary Ellen Lokey Geddes '43 and John '41. They live in Darian, Conn., and John is an exec. at Radio WQXR, NYC. She also heard from her suite-mate Class of '43- Betty Jane Meister Walters who lives in Spring Valley, Calif., and still teaches grade school there. I have retired from working for the Navy both as an Officer and a civilian after 33 years and intend to consult for the next year.

As I was getting ready to mail the news I received the following from Edith Burkard Thompson as a result of my plea for news. She had talked to Jeanne Mencke McAfee, Hope Valley, N.C., who expects to become a grandparent for the third time soon. Martha Eddy Hassell and John are living in Bourne, Mass., where Martha works for the Sandwich Glass Museum in Cape Cod and they live in a town house on the Cape Cod Canal. Edith has one son in California working at Lawrence Livermore Laboratory and one daughter in high school.

I had a note from Julius T. Sadler, Jr., which had a copy of the cover of a book that he and his wife Jacqueline are publishing this summer. The title is: American Stables-An Architectural Tour, published by New York Graphics Society.

46 The Alumni Office hoped I would receive much news via the Christmas card route. I was not disappointed, although it could have been better. However, one note of prime importance takes precedence - an appeal from John and Marilyn Entwisle '44, National Chairpersons for The William and Mary Fund '80-'81, which I received too late for the last report. They have asked each of us to contribute generously to the Fund, especially considering the National Endowment for the Humanities matching grant to which the College is entitled. A special thanks for keeping this in mind.

Henzie Kapler Margraf reports from Tuckerton, N.J., that she is still teaching and has her younger son, Tom, living at home. Elder son, Joe, and family are in Columbus, Ohio, where he is a Sr. Research Scientist for U.S. Fish and Wildlife and has a seat on the graduate faculty at Ohio State. Daughter Nancy and family live in Iowa. Henzie hopes to include our 35th reunion in her fall plans.

A brief, but welcome, note from Sally Reik Despard stating she is still a career gal in Birmingham, Mich.

News in abundance from Ellen Irvin Newberry about her family's varied activities. Son Jim is working with the solar collector workshops in Tempe, Ariz., and finishing Master's credits at the University. Younger son, Jeff, is a student at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University in Daytona Beach and Sue has done some interesting projects on Art and Production for Progressive Architecture Magazine. All of them have enjoyed many nice side trips.

An October wedding in Baltimore at the household of Doris Brandt Bauer and George when Holly was married. Andy, a civil engineer, returned from a year's stay in England in time to be photographer for the event. Jonathan, also a civil engineer, graduated last spring from the University of Delaware. And about the same time, David joined the 82nd Airborne, now stationed at Fort Bragg. Doris had learned from Deeks Phipps Shryock that her husband had died during last year's Christmas holidays. Our belated sympathy to you, Deeks.

Daphne Andrews Crum and John, both happy with their jobs, are the proud grandparents of four grandchildren: two on the Strawberry Farm in Connecticut and two in Phoenix, Ariz. Janet, an histologist, is in Virginia, and Abby, still at home, is on Diversified Occupation, working most of the day and going to school three hours.

Tas Mitchell Holladay and George's daughter, Holly, composed a beautiful "Christmas Flight" message on their greeting card. Like her daughter, Tas has been enjoying writing also - recently sold two articles to an antiques magazine. And likewise, Cary is getting her M.A. in English at Penn State.

A few lines from Priscilla Norris Moore, in Wayne, Pa., noting the addition of three grandchildren this year.

I have been invited to an Alumni Leadership Conference in March. I quote: "to discuss and develop ways to extend class image, to promote class identity and to encourage greater participation in all class functions." It seems our class needs a boost along these lines and I look forward to participating. With this letter, I have fulfilled my promise to be Class Reporter for a year. The line forms on the right for my successor! However, I shall continue until someone steps forward to volunteer, but please remember to send me any and all news.

48 Robert Sherry has been elected Senior Vice President, Human Resource Development, of The James River Corporation. He was formerly Vice President, Administration, for the Brown Company, which is being acquired by James River Corporation. He will head the newly created department to be located in Richmond, and will administer and coordinate Corporate Industrial Relations and Personnel Benefits. Before joining Brown in 1968 as Corporate Vice President for Industrial Relations he held a similar post with DeHaviland Aircraft in Toronto, Canada.

Christmas brought a number of interesting communications from many of the Class. Ed Griffin writes from Richmond that both his daughters are in College. Nineteen-year-old Jan is a sophomore at the University of Richmond, and Amy, who is eighteen, is a freshman at William and Mary. Ed is copy Editor for the Times-Dispatch. Although he lives in Richmond, he (like most of us of '48 vintage) enjoys travel and "takes off," literally and figuratively, whenever possible.

You will be surprised to learn that the Shooks, Henry and Shu Struse, are having a thirty-day sojourn in Richmond while the Legislature is in session. Their daughter, Amy, is serving as a page in the House of Delegates, and they have taken a house in

The Fan for the duration of Amy's stay at the Capitol.

Another classmate, Ed Belvin, writes that he is living in Williamsburg and writing a book titled, tentatively, GROWING UP IN WILLIAMSBURG - FROM THE DEPRESSION TO PEARL HARBOR. I am sure many of us will be interested in having a copy, especially since there is a chapter on the College. . .duly autographed, of course.

Jean Myers Boudreau writes from Monument, Calif., that she and Buddy come to Virginia every other summer, but the fall Homecoming is closed to them; however, skiing at Vail sounds like fun, and I should think might compensate. Jean works three days a week with an interior decorator, and Buddy is with Martin Marietta on the M X.

Ann Potterfield Gregory, with whom I keep in touch by mail, lives just thirty or so miles away in Leesburg with husband, Brodie. We do hope that next year, for sure, they'll make Homecoming, and I believe they will! Their daughter, Cathy, and her husband, Ken, will be living in Williamsburg after July. Ken will be practicing medicine there after getting his medical training in Charleston, S.C. Ann and Brodie have three grandchildren and expected two more after Christmas.

Jane Spencer and Bill Smith, '46 sent us a Merry Christmas from Grosse Pointe Shores, and their condolences that Bill Murphy would be unable to act as Co-Chairman for the Class gift. Virginia keeps her judges in an ivory tower.

It was exciting to talk with and hear from other "old grads" from neighboring classes, too: Christmas lunch at Crystal City with Edie Horn, '47, and Sally Phillips Mileur, '47; a letter from Tunis, Tunisia, from Elaine Campton Baker, '49, and her husband, Jim, relating further adventures from the other side of the globe; a note from Janet Pierce Waller, '49 and husband, John, reassuring us that they are still there, like Ann and Brodie in Leesburg. Why is it so hard to get from Manassas to Leesburg and vice versa?

50 Dr. Jackson Payne was featured in Research Reporter published by the University of Georgia in an article about his cooperative research with other scientists into the environmental degrading of detergents. This project began when Jack was head of Microbiology at Georgia and contacted a friend in Wales who was studying the problem from a different perspective. This has now developed into a full scale exchange of information, students, and graduate students. Jack and his Welsh associate are adjunct professors at each other's universities. As Jack says, this is "an exemplary practice of science as we have come to know it, university life at its best."

Harriet Smith Funkhouser has taught for thirty years. She has spent twenty-nine of these in Fairfax Co., Va., teaching high school sociology and government courses. After many years of living in London, W. Allen (Bud) Bridges has come home and is living with wife Jessica, three daughters and three sons in Bethesda, Md. Allen is president of The Sulphur Institute with headquarters in Washington, D.C.

G. Glenn Garrison is thriving in Mastic, N.Y., with wife Peggy, son Peter, and daughter Virginia. Glenn is with the Social Services Dept. of Suffolk Co., Long Island.

Now that her husband is retiring from the CIA, Nicky Dillard Dewing and Jay are planning to return to Williamsburg. Nicky has a dried flower arrangement business which she plans to continue. The handsome arrangements in Alumni House were contributed by Nicky.

Henry Blanc, his wife, and four children are living in Jefferson City, Tenn. Henry is in the building and supply business.

Joe Giordano and Lawton '52 live in Ohio where Joe has a moving and storage business in Dayton.

Edward Brickell has been named one of North America's top 100 school administrators by the Executive Educator. He has also been reappointed to the Board of Visitors of the College and re-elected to a second term as rector. He served as Parade Marshal at the 1980 Homecoming. He and Nancy live in Virginia Beach, Va., where Ed is Superintendent of Va. Beach Public Schools.

Jeanne Payne Lewis came to Homecoming with daughter Cynthia '75. Jeanne lives in college town Columbia, Mo., with lawyer husband Ray and children Rebecca and John.

After thirty years with the U.S. Foreign Service Dept. John Dayton has retired to Williamsburg where he has formed the Williamsburg Energy Research Corp. He is also building an underground solar efficient house.

Dick Withington is engaged in the general practice of law and lives with wife Lucy in Point Pleasant, N.Y. He has become an avid tennis player and travels to England, France, and Spain frequently.

Don Beckett, retired from the CIA, lives in Potomac, Md., with wife Pete '48. Don is intensely interested in home computers.

Pat Jones Warner writes from Ft. Worth, Tex., that she is happily awaiting her first grandchild. She hopes to visit the east coast this year.

Clint Koufman is a surgeon at Beth Israel in Boston, Mass., as well as an instructor in surgery at Harvard Medical School. He and wife Laurel live in Brookline with their three children, Ann, Victor, and Stephanie.

Al Ayers came to our thirtieth reunion. He and Katherine live in Charlotte, N.C., where Al is District Manager of the Parts and Service Division for the Ford Motor Company which he has been with for 25 years.

Fred Flanary has been named Clerk of the Williamsburg-James City County Circuit Court to fill the unexpired term of Juliette Clothier, '35, who retired. Fred has been in the accounting field in Williamsburg for more than 25 years, and will continue his association with his firm, as a consultant. He had served as clerk of the lower court now known as the General District Court, and since 1955 has been the accountant for the Circuit Court Clerk.

52 An empty column and Christmas did it. We have class news again! Thanks! Travel and family pictures were predominant in the letters I received from our classmates. Alice Williams Phillips has made the decision to give up her social work job in Richmond, Va. She will be working part-time for the Episcopal Diocese of Virginia as the Staff Coordinator for the administration of grants for the ACT (Alternatives for Children in Trouble) program. Thus, she will remain in her professional field and also have time to travel with husband John.

Katie Byers Hoffman and Bob, '51, sent a color photo of their family at their daughter's Deb party. Planning for that event took time and care for Katie, who volunteers a lot of time in nursing homes, and for Bob, a radiologist. The Hoffmans live in St. Petersburg, Fla. Another photo came from Shirley Davis Schumacher of her family

LOUIS CREEKMUR '49 RECEIVES MIAMI AWARD

Louis Creekmur '49, '52 M.A. is one of five recipients of the 1980 Volunteer Activists Award of Greater Miami, given to selected citizens of the Miami area for outstanding volunteer work. Selected by a non-partisan committee from nominees submitted by various action centers and organizations in the Greater Miami area, Creekmur is director of community and customer relations for Ryder Truck Rental Inc. After an outstanding career at William and Mary, Creekmur played tackle and guard for the Detroit Lions in the 1950s.

DR. DEVITA '57 HONORED FOR CANCER RESEARCH

Dr. Vincent T. DeVita, Jr. '57, director of the National Cancer Institute of the National Institutes of Health, has won the 1980 Griffuel Prize for cancer research. Presented to Dr. DeVita in Paris in December, the prize carries an award of $41,000. It is given annually by the Association for the Development of Research on Cancer, a French voluntary cancer research organization. A special committee composed of ten world famous oncologists selected Dr. DeVita for his "important contribution to the considerable progress recently achieved in the field of cancer chemotherapy." He holds the Alumni Medallion for service and loyalty to the College.

robed in the Japanese kimonos next to appropriate flowering fruit trees in Ann Arbor - fine mementos of her trip to Japan. Joan Burgess Burgess and husband, George, sent a newsletter of photographs including one of their trips to Portugal and Spain. A December wedding of son, Louis, was a highlight of their holiday. Doug Ryder and his large family posed next to the family limousine and large home, appeared not destitute in spite of, or maybe because of, his yearly request for "Donations Accepted." I did miss receiving the snappy newsletter which usually accompanies the photo, Doug.

Ron and Betsy Skinker, '53, Barnes continue to traverse the country on business-pleasure trips. A family photo of the four Barnes looking very happy accompanied a lengthy letter telling of interesting ventures from Hawaii to Philadelphia, including a vacation with Ruth and Wayne Kernodle in the Massanutten Mountains and in Williamsburg. Ron was pleased with the start of his corporation last year that provides employment counseling services.

Carolyn Anderson Beimdick spent a major portion of her time last year in a volunteer job for the Presbytery of St. Louis Presbyterian Churches. She was the coordinator for the Vietnamese boat people who were brought to that city by the churches. It was "challenging, time consuming, sometimes frustrating but also very gratifying," wrote Carolyn. Sounds like a major undertaking to me!

Dorothy Urban Wright, '51, and Bill, '50 (she graduated a year earlier than the rest of us) and daughter, Julie, 17, had the most adventurous travel story. Dorothy and Bill, physicians, worked in the Albert Schweitzer Hospital in Deschappelles, Haiti, 90 miles NE of Port-au-Prince for the month of August 1980. Julie helped to register hundreds of patients, who often lined up long before dawn for help in the clinic. Typical clinic days were 12-14 hours of diagnosing and treating patients. Dottie worked with two pediatricians and Bill, a neurologist, worked as an internist with an occasional neurological problem to consult. The poverty the Wrights were unprepared to witness was that of the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere. We are proud of your sharing and caring, Dottie, Bill and Julie.

Before I sign off for this issue two important events are worthy of your attention. The William and Mary Fund Drive, of which the Entwistles are chairpersons this year, needs your contribution regardless of the amount. The quality of education at the College of William and Mary is topnotch, and as the article in the Gazette noted last issue, the College is ranked among the top seven colleges in the country for the best education for the money. Let's keep it that way, AND improve it.

Last but not least, it is not too soon to start thinking about our do you believe? 30th Class Reunion in 1982! Leadership plans for it are in the making and your ideas and suggestions are wanted for YOUR special weekend in 1982. Let's hear from you regarding these events and your own special happenings. We're interested in you!

54 1981 has begun with most of us running to keep up. A letter from Betsy and Ron Barnes, out in Arizona, sums up their activities for the year, 1980, and it's a wonder there are enough days to get it all in! Two trips brought them back east, the one in July to Roanoke for a class reunion for Betsy, and a visit with the Kernodles in Williamsburg. Before that, Betsy came to Washington D.C. for a League of Women Voters convention and a visit to Philadelphia, where daughter Lisa is employed at Friends Hospital. Ron's business flourishes but requires much travel (132 days during the year). There must have been some time for fun because Betsy and Ron got in a trip to Honolulu as well. Betsy has actively opposed Proposition 106 in her state, and has been working on Tempe's long range Parks and Recreation Planning Committee.

Bette Dunker and I never got together in D.C. for the visit we'd hoped for in 1980, but I did get a note from her recently. Her youngest, now 16, is driving a school bus, while being active on the swim team and keeping up with a tough academic schedule. Eldest daughter, Jan, is settled in Aspen, Colo. Nice place if you ski!

Are you ready for this? Not only has Peggy Wells, known to her readers as Martha Bennett Stiles, made her place in the literary world, but now she and her husband are the owners of a prize racehorse! This is their third stakes winner, but this one broke a track record at Epsom Downs winning the Diomed Stakes on Derby Day. They were thrilled.

I want to hear from every one of you who has been silent for the past few months, or the past few years.

56 Hi everybody. Happy thoughts for a good new year. It's off to a fine start with a letter from Ginny Breitenfeld Ferre with the news that son Peter has been accepted at William and Mary. The Ferrer went up to Brunswick, Canada, for a month last summer.

Canada must be the place to go. Anne Pope Kitchen and Roger were in Calgary where they rode horseback, walked on a glacier, and attended a stampede. It sounds pretty exciting.

Jo Napolino Bickel is an assistant vice president and guidelines coordinator at Union Trust Company of New Haven. She has a private financial counseling service in the Greater New Haven area.

Got a Christmas card from my favorite citizens of Chagrin Falls, Bob and Chris Schlatter.

Alice Glover Glasser had to skip Milton's homecoming reunion last year due to her Mom's illness, but they both hope to get to our 25th shindig this fall. I hope so.

Joy Schlaprizzi Thunstrom's Christmas card included a couple of really lovely pictures of her daughter Holly as a bride. Next down the aisle is sister Karen, next October.

Got a delightful note from Ginger Portney Klapp. She had a fairly lengthy career as a systems analyst for IBM until she "retired" for a busy community life. She and her family live in an 1850 house on the Eastern Shore. Herb, '54, commutes to Columbia, Md., where he's president of an x-ray company. He's also involved in farming, hunting and golf. Their oldest offspring is 22 year old Mike, a high school teacher. Next there's Karen, 18, a freshman at Randolph Macon. David is 15, a high school sophomore.

Bill Person has been elected President of the Virginia Association of Commonwealth Attorneys. Bill has been doing outstanding work in Williamsburg-James City County. This honor is more than well deserved.

Ginny Naab Loughlin and her husband have a 1755 house in Scotch Plains, N.J.

Their kids are in college or graduated, except for the last on the line who's going through the flurry of filling out applications.

I found a note in the bottom of my files that said H. James "Hike" Abdella of Jamestown, N.Y., is involved in politics. Good heavens, Hike, you've got my vote for just about anything.

Dottie Guthrie Wilson sent word that Pat Ewell Johnson is still in Hackentstown, N.J., working as a copy editor for Prentice Hall. She's also directing for the local little theater. Both Pat and Dottie are managing, just barely, to survive their kids' adolescence.

Paul Furlong has joined the Stevens Institute of Technology where he continues with his basketball coaching. He also teaches at Kearny High School, and coaches, too. Busy man! During the '60s, he guided Mackin High School, in the D.C. area, to a 265-55 record over an 11 year period. In 1967, he was chosen by the Washington Daily News as the Coach of the Year in the Washington area.

Bob Swearingen asked how come yours truly wasn't listed in the college directory. Huh. Neither was Governor Dalton. He reminded me of the Electrocrat campaign when George Seiler was elected class president. I, too, have a campaign blotter in my scrapbook. Bob is working for the Census Bureau in one of its three national offices. His home address is San Clemente, Calif. He mentioned seeing Stu and Pat King, '58, Sell at the San Diego Alumni meetings.

I've happily settled in a small cottage built on the family property in White Stone. Peter, the dog, and I are entertained daily by the many birds who visit our feeders. The squirrels are so brazen, they actually tap on the living room windows to demand more food.

Please, there is one New Year's Resolution we've got to keep. Contribute to The William and Mary Fund. It's especially important this year because of the National Endowment for the Humanities matching grant to which the College is entitled. Any new money contributed this year will be matched. In other words, any increase over last year will be matched as will any first-time contribution. This last word comes from John and Marilyn Entwistle, '44, National Chairpersons of The William and Mary Fund for 1980-81.

See you at Homecoming!

60 As I promised in my last column, I would like to mention the names and news of more classmates that I saw at Homecoming.

Joe Alexander and wife Diana Titolo, '61, were there with their young son. Joe is employed at NASA Goddard Space Flight Center as head of the Planetary Magnetospheres Branch. He, his wife and their three children live in Laurel, Md.

Kay and Ken Rice from Richmond, Va., are both busy with their jobs and their favorite past time, golf. Kay (Elmore) teaches nursery school and music. Ken is President of the First Virginia Chapter of the Bank Administration Institute.

Tom and Jackie (Good) Legg, who live in Newport News, are active in alumni and athletic activities at the College. Tom is Associate Vice President of Legg, Mason Co.

Ron Masci and wife Patricia Piper, '62, drove down from Vienna, Va. They are the parents of two daughters. Ron is Resident Manager and Vice President of Dean, Witter, Reynolds, a member of the New York Stock Exchange. Ron is an avid tennis player.

Carolyn Dewey Simmons and husband, Frank, from Newport News are the parents of two children. Carolyn, a teacher, is a member of A.A.U.W. She enjoys traveling and arts and crafts.

Jogina Diamanti Picariello lives in Bristol, Pa. She has been active in alumni activities in the Philadelphia area.

Trudi Havola Arnold is currently art teacher and art program coordinator for Fairfax County Adult Education. Trudi has had recent exhibits of paintings at Tyson's Corner, McLean Green Spring Gallery and is represented by Schertle Galleries.

Jim Osbon is married to Bea McKay, '62. They have two sons. Jim is Vice President of Operations with Blue Cross of Virginia. He has a deep interest in rare coins.

Marga Larson Bales, husband Bill and their three children live in Roanoke, Va. Marga is presently designing and making clothes for a company called "Painted Threads of Virginia."

Miles Chappell presented a paper entitled "The Legacy of Mannerism in Florentine Baroque Paintings" at the annual meeting of the American Association of University Professors of Italian at the University of Illinois in December.

Carol Ridgeway Hall, husband Art and their three children have moved to Raleigh, N.C., after being in upstate New York for twelve years. Carol teaches biology and physical science at a private school in Raleigh.

Don't forget to contribute to The William and Mary Fund. It is especially important to contribute this year, because of the National Endowment for the Humanities matching grant to which the college is entitled. Any increase over last year will be matched as will any first-time contribution.

62 Holiday cards brought the following news about our classmates. Mary Alice Adams Betts writes that her National Office in the Gamma Phi Beta Sorority has her hopping. She also has a Cadette Girl Scout troop plus all those things one does when one has two children. She said that the Gamma Phi House is being rebuilt inside during second semester and should be nice when it is finished. Mary Alice, Lee Keith and Kathy live in Winter Park, Fla.

Linda Lester Hagen writes from the state of Washington that her family is great. She and Jim have four children, John, Charles, Chris and Katie. Katie is in Kindergarten and the rest of the children are older. The boys all play basketball and amid the chauffeuring she does some volunteer work with Juvenile Court and is active in AAUW. They are planning a trip East this summer and are planning to go the Williamsburg, Washington and Maryland route.

Gayle Grabill Kerns and family are still in Blacksburg, Va. Gayle writes that her oldest daughter will be going to the College in the fall of '81 which she says ages her so. Her middle child, Kelly, is in middle school and on the gymnastics team. Her son, David, had surgery twice in the fall. He had a hole

ALUMNUS NAMED ASSISTANT V-P

Dennis K. Cogle '49, '70 M.B.A., has been named Assistant Vice President for Business Affairs at William and Mary. Cogle, who joined the College staff in 1959 as an agency personnel supervisor, has also held the posts of accountant, business manager, budget director, and assistant to the vice president for business affairs. His appointment became effective Feb. 1.

NATIONAL PRIZE WON BY SCJ

The College's chapter of the Society for Collegiate Journalists has been named the outstanding chapter in the nation and winner of the Edward E. McDonald Chapter Achievement Award. The William and Mary chapter was ranked first in the nation by four of the five judges in the competition. The Journalists in Residence program, a strong recruitment effort to form new chapters at other colleges and revitalization of the Raft Debate were instrumental in earning the chapter its award. Wilford Kale '64, Williamsburg bureau chief for the Richmond Times-Dispatch, is advisor to the chapter.

in his good eardrum and when in surgery his heart gave out but with expert care he pulled through fine. Gayle is still the Tri Delta advisor at Blacksburg. Her husband, Waldon, is with VPI and travels too much for her.

Jane Noble Lundy sent greetings from California. She and her family are as busy as all families are who have three active children. Jane, Rich, Mark, Adam, and Janie joined a Sierra Club trip again last summer and enjoyed it. Next summer they look forward to leading a similar trip. Jane is the advisor to her school AFS group as well as Foreign Language Dept. Chairman.

Sandra Hancock Martin and David Martin are in New Jersey. They have two sons, Todd, who is 13, and Drew, who is 11. Sandra is still teaching Spanish at Ramsey High School. Last year she took 14 of her students to Mexico during spring vacation. They spent the first half of the trip in the Yucatan exploring the Mayan ruins of Uxmal. The second half of the trip was spent in and around Mexico City. Sandra is already making plans to make the next Homecoming. She says that she hasn't been to one yet. How about making our twentieth reunion which isn't too far off! Really hard to believe, isn't it?

Beth Poole Radford, Wade and son, Dick, were over to visit us and we had a wonderful time. They had just come back from Williamsburg where they had played tourist and loved every minute. Dick is twelve years old and has joined a Columbia, Md., basketball team where he is looking forward to that whole new experience. He is an avid Bullets fan and envisions himself as the next Elvin Hayes.

Marcus Higginbotham has been appointed general manager of the Duluth, Winnipeg and Pacific Railway, a subsidiary of Grand Trunk Corporation. He had formerly been assistant superintendent of transportation for Grand Trunk Western Railroad, which he joined in 1978 as manager of operations planning. He started his railroad career as a transportation apprentice with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in 1965 and eventually became assistant superintendent of transportation for Penn Central.

The following was in The Alexandria Gazette: "Eric W. Erdosy has been named one of the executive vice presidents of First American Bank of Virginia. Erdosy was named executive vice president and chief administrative officer. The promotion was unanimously approved by the bank board of directors. Erdosy began his career with the bank in 1965 as administrative assistant to the president. In 1967, he was named vice president and marketing officer. Prior to this appointment, he was named senior vice president and marketing officer."

John and Mary Entwisle '44, the National Chairpersons, The William and Mary Fund '80 - '81, wrote me a note asking that I put in a good word for The William and Mary Fund, urging all of my classmates to contribute. It is more important this year than ever before because of the National Endowment for the Humanities matching grant to which the College is entitled. Any new money given this year will be matched. Any first time contribution and any increase over last year will be matched. When writing out those checks at the beginning of the month, how about making one of these checks to the College!

I hope everyone is over all the flu bugs and ready for spring. We are still in Alexandria. I am still teaching Kindergarten and now I tutor twice a week at St. Mary's Catholic School. I have also been involved in the genealogy field and hope to become a professional in this area. It started out as a lark and I have become so excited by the challenge this field presents that I spend all my extra time involved with microfilms, court house records, libraries, archives, cemeteries and anywhere I can dig up any information.

Please write me and let me know what is going on in your life.

64 In November I attended the William and Mary-Harvard game at Harvard where a huge turnout of alumni gathered. It was great fun to see Don Beck and Susie and Steve Merrill and Kay after so many years. Don, Vice President of the Chatham Bars Inn in Chatham, Mass., had organized a sightseeing tour of the area for several days prior to the game for the group of KA's who came up. They reported that Provincetown had been a real highlight.

The group included Calvin Whealton, '60, up from Florida where he is based as a senior airline pilot; Bobby Simpson, '63, and Ann Meade (Baskerville, '63) from Virginia Beach, Va.; Kenny Roberts, '62, and Sandy (Morrissey, '63) from Northern Virginia; Wayne Woolwine, '61, and his wife; and Jim Ukrop, '60, and Bobbie (Berkeley, '61). Following the alumni cocktail party Philip Tutschek and I joined the group for dinner at Jimmy's Harborside.

Also at the alumni party after the game were Blake Newton from New York City; Bob Soleau and Laurie (Yingling, '65) from Connecticut; Dave Kern, '66, and Sandy from Allentown, Pa.; Pete Nance, '66, and his wife; and Barry Fratkin, Executive Director of the Athletic Educational Foundation, who reported that the fund was nearing its goal of $400,000 for 1980.

An amazing coincidence occurred when I ran into Lesley Ward, '62, who had married

Dave Bottoms, '61, in August, 1980; and discovered that they live in Bronxville, the small village where my son and I have lived for ten years. Dave is a lawyer in New York City and Lesley is working on her doctorate.

Another November happening was a College phonathon held in mid-town Manhattan at the offices of Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. arranged by Marshall Acuff, '62. The group raised nearly $5,000 and included Jackie Crebbs, Philip Tutschek, Joe Gatti and Bob Andrialis of our Class; as well as Nate Howard, '61, who is a First Vice President at Bache Halsey; Stuart Shields; and Duane Dittman, Vice President for University Advancement. Phil reported talking to Tom Dellaero, '61 and Janice (Royson, '63), who live on Long Island and have two daughters, one a freshman in college this year.

66 I didn't have a lot of news for this article, so I contacted a few local classmates. With the Christmas season just past, they all had some news off their Christmas cards.

Betty Moyer Boggs said she had heard from several friends. Karen Williams Hopper is now living in Durango, Colo., with her husband Dan and children Laurel (6 yr.) and Daniel (7 yr.). They have moved into their new solar home and are enjoying snow, peace, solitude and mountains. Karen enjoys skiing, jogging, Bible study and church activities. Susan Embrey Coleman and Clarence moved last June to Chatham, N.J., after living in Longwood, Fla. Clarence works in the financial services division for A.D.P. Jeannie Swink Connors is still a high school counselor in a school outside of Dallas. Her husband Michael has left the education field and is in sales with Henco, Inc., in their screen print division. Their children are Mandy (5 yr.) and Sean (3 yr.). Sanny Sanders Wood has started a typing service out of her home in Fairfax. By working at home, she can be available for her children Roger (8 yr.) and Krissy (6 yr.). Sandy's husband Allen works for the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company in Washington, D.C.

I recently saw Judy Keith Frantz at my son's school Christmas program. I had not seen Judy since our sophomore year at school. Judy was in our class for two years, married and got her degree in elementary education at Old Dominion University. She taught school for three years and then retired to care for her children Stacy (11 yr.) and Jamie (8 yr.). Judy's husband Jim is the project manager of the new Virginia Beach Pavillion. The two of them enjoy entering craft shows, where Judy displays her Christmas knit stockings and cross stitch pocketbooks and Jim sells his decoys. Judy has not recently heard from Rhea Redd Brown, but, the last she knew, Rhea was living in New York City. She worked in a medical library and her husband was with a stock brokerage firm. Judy's cousin Keith Walters is a lawyer with the United States Customs Service and lives in the Washington, D.C., area with his wife and two children.

Bill "Tree" Rountree heard from Jeff Arnold and Dave Kern over the holidays. Jeff, his wife Cheryl and their children Kirk, Jon, and Aimee are in Orlando, Fla. They are presently designing and building their own home. Dave and Sandy McNeill Kern '68 moved the first of January from Bethlehem, Pa., to Fort Worth, Tex. Dave was transferred by his company, Container Corporation of America. (I sure hope their Homecoming trips won't be stopped!)

Dorothy Hutton Tudor writes that her latest news is her working for the University of South Carolina in computer programming. After ten years of being home, this job is quite a change—but she likes it. John has finished two more courses toward his doctorate and has only three more to go, plus his dissertation. Their daughter Emily is in the first grade and Beth is in the fourth. Dorothy says they plan to come for our big 15th Homecoming next Fall.

Karen Cottrell Schoenenberger is now working with the Admissions Office at the College and will be working closely with the Alumni Office on new admissions programs.

Robert Weeks has been named national sales manager of Incentive Marketing magazine. He will continue to act as northeastern regional account executive, adding overall management of the sales force to his activities. He joined the magazine in 1978. Previously, he had been with American Map Co. for five years, leaving as vice president of sales and marketing.

Congratulations to Gail Morgan Bryant on her December wedding. Gail and her husband, Ray, are presently living in Virginia Beach, where Ray is a corporate pilot.

Please don't forget The William and Mary Fund. It is especially important to contribute this year, because of the National Endowment for the Humanities matching grant to which the College is entitled. Any new money contributed this year will be matched. In other words, any increase over last year will be matched as will any first time contribution.

One other important reminder, our 15th Homecoming will be next Fall. Start planning now to attend.

68 Marsha King Carter sold The One to One School in Bon Air to pursue a career in teaching high-risk learning disabled pre-schoolers. Marsha will receive an M.A. in special education-learning disabilities in May.

Keith W. Maurer, his wife, Karen, and two-year-old son, Geoffrey, live in Coatesville, Penn. Keith teaches health and physical education and coaches girls' track and field.

Margie Kuhn Williams has a new full-time teaching position; she is at home with her new daughter. The Williams live in Savannah, Ga.

Bob Drake is beginning a civilian career with the Department of Defense. He resigned from active duty in the Army although he is still in the reserves. Bob is also a teacher of accounting at the community college in Columbia. Yet Bob finds time to be a student at the University of Maryland's evening division law school in Baltimore.

Jane Marsella Drake is in her second year of labor and delivery nursing at the University of Maryland hospital. The Drakes live in Columbia with their daughter, Christy, who is in the third grade.

David Rutlege has been named an assistant professor of religion at Furman University. Prior to his appointment he was a visiting professor at the University of Houston. He earned his M.Div. from Duke Divinity School and an MA and Ph.D. from Rice University.

Jo Carol Nessel-Sale is a criminal defense attorney with the Salt Lake Legal Defender Association. Previously she worked for the Utah Attorney General's Office.

When you're in Atlanta please call Bill and Lorraine Benson '67 Hancock who live in Lilburn, Ga. with their three daughters. Bill finished his MBA at the University of Tennessee last spring. He is the Southeastern Marketing Manager for C. Itoh.

Bob Patterson is working towards a Master's degree in philosophy at the University of Cincinnati and is enjoying school as much as is possible. Bob has been kept busy also with the post of secretary for his fraternity's alumni association. Carol Ann Hilton attended an eight-week program this summer which was sponsored by the Linguistic Society of America at the University of New Mexico. Carol Ann took three courses and had the chance to attend the annual meetings of several linguistics societies; on the weekends she travelled around the Southwest and had a fantastic time. She's now back in Virginia and has decided to go into college development; her interest in this field was first sparked by her involvement in William and Mary's Development Office. Heidi Kunz is pursuing graduate studies in English at Vanderbilt University in Tennessee. Susan Gholston is working on a Master's degree in criminology at Florida State University and is enjoying the school and the weather.

ALUMNI ASSUME DEVELOPMENT POSTS

Two alumni of the College have been appointed to new positions in the development office at William and Mary. James C. Rees IV '74 has been appointed Director for Capital Support by Vice President Duane A. Dittman. Succeeding Rees as Director for Annual Support is Jacquelin W. Crebbs '64, who has been the assistant director. Rees will be responsible for the coordination of a wide variety of activities to attract major gifts for capital support, while Crebbs will be in charge of several annual funds, including the William and Mary Fund.

Ann Dalton is working for Riggs National Bank in Washington as a management trainee. In the fall, Ann, Suzanne Doggett and Sue O'Laughlin moved into an apartment in Alexandria and they're all having a great time. Conny Johann writes from Michigan where she is working in the financial department of the Chevrolet Motor Division. In June, Conny married John Mincks, '78. John is in his third year of medical school at Wayne State in Detroit.

Laurie Peery Jackson and her husband, Charles, are living in Charlottesville while Charles finishes his engineering degree at UVA. At the time I received her letter, Laurie was teaching kindergarten but was planning on "retiring" in November to prepare for the birth of their first child! I'd like to extend my congratulations to Laurie and Charles on their new arrival.

Paul Hershey is working for the BDM Corporation in McLean and is living in Fredericksburg with his wife, Cheryl Poole. Dave Johnson is an economist for the Department of Commerce, specifically in the Private Wage Income Branch of the Regional Economic Measurements Division of the Bureau of Economic Analysis -- quite a responsibility but it's interesting work! Stephanie Catoe is teaching first grade in Virginia Beach; before school started she was working at the Navy base as an accountant with various other duties, but is much happier teaching and really loves her job.

Kent Wiggins is working for Readak Educational Services as a developmental reading specialist. Kent travels between Virginia and New England teaching the Readak program to kids at private and parochial schools in grades five through twelve. Last I heard, Kent was on his way to an assignment in Springfield, Mass.

Ed Moreland was married to Carla Shaffer, '81, in December and they are now living in Williamsburg. Ed is an administrative extern at Hampton General Hospital and will begin his Master's degree at MCV in August, while Carla will be starting her first year of law school.

Kevin Means was married to Betty Wells '78, in May and is now attending Fuller Theological Seminary in Pasadena, Calif., where he is studying for a Master's of Divinity; Betty is working at the seminary.

Myde Boles was working for the Secretary of the Commonwealth's Office before she started her current job as Budget Analyst for VEPCO in Richmond. Gerald Kowalski has found an interesting job just down the road from William and Mary -- he has a five-year apprenticeship with the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation in the musical instrument maker's shop. Gerald explains the procedures to the tourists and answers their questions as well as learning how to build the instruments; his present position is as a skilled interpreter.

Jeff Komitor took a well-deserved vacation after graduation and before starting work. He and Greg Ingram '78 took a train to Quebec, stopping at several cities and towns on the way. Once in Montreal, they visited the Olympic stadium, several cathedrals, underground shopping centers and the St. Lawrence Seaway; Jeff and Greg also took a tour of the city for those sights they may have missed. Jeff enjoyed learning about the French-Canadian culture and our neighbor to the north.

That's about all the news for now, but I'll have more for the next issue. Please write if you have anything to be included in the May issue or at any time in the future--several letters I've received have included inquiries about classmates and others have indicated how much they enjoy reading about their friends and classmates. I look forward to hearing from you.

70 The stork made the rounds just after Santa Claus this year. . . Tim and Linda Beerbower Burke had their second child, Hannah Elizabeth, on December 27. Major Robert and Barbara Pate Glacel's newest arrival, Ashley Virginia, arrived December 29. It seems to me that both little girls pulled a fast one on the IRS!!

Living in Lititz, Pa., Ken Birkett is a tennis teaching professional at an indoor club in Lancaster, Pa. He is currently ranked in men's doubles in central Pennsylvania and is a member of the U.S. Professional Tennis Association. He and Judy Newcomer, '71, have a three-year-old daughter, Courtney.

Wayne (University of Richmond, '68 & '70) and Joyce Stroop Moran are living in Richmond with two-year-old daughter Kristopher. Joyce earned a B.S. in Medical Technology from MCV, where she then worked as bacteriologist in their Clinical Pathology Department. Joyce was Director of the Hospital Committee at Richmond's Crippled Children's Hospital. She hopes to return to the same work when Kristopher is older.

Mary Stites has changed her first name to Cynara. Having received her M.S.W. at University of Wisconsin, Madison, Cynara is employed at University of Connecticut's Student Mental Health Center. Her position is psychiatric social worker specializing in sex education, sex therapy, and women's issues.

In San Francisco, Dave Sottilli is senior operations officer for the Western Zone of the Chubb Group Insurance Companies. Dave earned an MBA at William and Mary in 1971. He and wife, Mariann, and daughter, Laura Beth, live in Concord and welcome calls from any alumni visiting the area.

Debbie Ostergard Gilette earned an MS in geology from University of Colorado, Boulder. Her thesis was printed in a publication of the Oklahoma City Geological Society. Debbie is active in the Rocky Mountain Association of Geologists and Paleontologists. Husband, Peter, a graduate of the Rhode Island School of Design, is a landscape designer. The Gilettes live in Denver.

At the University of North Carolina, Greensboro, Gail Whittaker recently earned a Ph.D. in physical education.

After graduation from William and Mary, Bill Powers spent two years in Israel where he met his wife, Jenny (Westhampton College). Bill then received his J.D. from T. C. Williams School of Law. He clerked for the Chief Justice of the Virginia Supreme Court, after which he was associated with Moody, McMurrin and Millwer for three years. Now, however, he is in his own partnership, Smith & Powers, with Danny Smith, '73, in Portsmouth, Va.

Commuting to San Francisco from Redwood City, Calif., Martha Hollis joined the University of San Francisco faculty by accepting a promotion to Associate Professor in the McLaren College of Business. Martha is working on a multi-year National Science Foundation sponsored study of fiscal impact models on local governments.

Christmas was a joyous three-ring circus at our household this year. . . new yellow Lab puppy and new calico kitten and Martha opening birthday and Christmas presents from morning to night! New Year's was especially happy as Tom (Marshall-Wythe '73) was made partner in the law firm,

HAMPTON INSTITUTE HONORS HERB KELLY '40

Herbert V. Kelly '40, '43 JD, at right, was named recipient of the 1981 Presidential Citizenship Award at Hampton Institute. Dr. William R. Harvey, the Institute's president, announced the award at Hampton's 113th Founders' Day in January. Kelly, a member of the College's Board of Visitors, was one of five who received this year's awards including Mrs. Rosa Parks, the Montgomery, Ala. woman who sparked the civil rights crusade of the 1950s and 1960s by refusing to give up her seat on a bus to a white man.

TRIBE SOCCER TEAM FINISHES 8TH IN NATION

William and Mary finished its best soccer season in history when the Tribe lost to Alabama A&M in the quarterfinals of the NCAA tournament at Cary Field on Dec. 14. The 1-0 defeat, which came on a goal in the last minute of play, left the Indians with an eighth place national finish. Two Tribe players, John McManus and Steve Gallop, were drafted by professional teams and a number of individual honors were accorded the Indians.

Winne, Banta, & Rizzi, with whom he has been associated in Hackensack, N.J.

Hope the new year finds you all happy and well. . . And just because I have the Class of 1970 ReEcho to paraphrase, don't think I wouldn't appreciate an update from all of you once in a while!

72 I received some interesting letters during the last several months. Fran Nettles Boyd writes that she has been living in Paw Paw, W. Va., for the last three years, teaching social studies and French at the local high school, which is the second smallest high school in West Virginia with an enrollment of 128 for grades 4 through 12. She is looking into an administrative job with CSX Corporation and hopes to start a new career if things work out. In 1980 she married Thomas V. Boyd and they bought a house and now live in Cumberland, Md. After leaving college, Fran developed an interest in art and some of her work was displayed during December at the Cultural Center in Charleston, W.Va. She writes that several classmates came to her wedding--Sally Sims, who is now teaching at Clarion State College in Clarion, Penn.; Kathy Pryor; Ann Miles Dwyer; and Ken Keppel and Gayle Hobson, '71. She invites any who may be passing through western Maryland to stop for a visit.

Peter Evenson has been elected vice president and director of corporate development at Paul N. Howard Company, an international engineering and contracting company which is a wholly-owned subsidiary of IT&T. It specializes in heavy civil works projects and is ranked 22nd largest worldwide among contractors working abroad. Peter's new position will include responsibility for joint ventures, acquisitions and other special projects promoting corporate expansion. He joined Howard in 1978 from Arthur Andersen & Co. where he specialized in foreign taxation. He earned his law degree from Wake Forest University in 1977. Rick Kerns and his wife, Pat, live in Newport News where he became an Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney on January 1, 1981.

Diane Drummond Doolittle had a lot of news. She married Paul Doolittle, '71, in 1978; he graduated from the Medical College of Virginia Pharmacy School in 1979 and has been working as a pharmacist for Rite-Aid Pharmacies in Fredericksburg since then. Diane worked for the Newport News Department of Social Services for four years after graduation. In 1977 she started working for the State Health Department Medicaid Program as a Hearing Officer and was promoted to Appeals Supervisor in 1978, the position she holds now. She admits she's a bureaucrat and says she enjoys the job. Last summer she visited Steve and Lauren Dabel Thompson. They live in Wauwatosa, Wisc., and have a son, Seth. Steve works for Reynolds Metals. Diane also writes that Kathy Furgurson teaches at Highland Springs High School in Highland Springs, Va., and recently completed her Master's in education administration. She also visited Michelle Korczowski Peters and her husband, Jim, who now live in Charlottesville where Jim is in a Master's program at the University of Virginia while Michelle has her hands full with a son, Matthew, and a new baby, Katherine Anne. Diane received an invitation but was unable to go to Paula Domino's wedding in August. Paula and her husband, who is in law school at the University of New Mexico, live in Albuquerque. As of September, Paula was still job-hunting.

I heard from Sandy Puckett who has been doing some interesting things. After graduation he entered the Peace Corps and was sent to Africa where he worked for several years before deciding he wanted to enter the field of teaching. He went back to school and earned a Master's degree in that field and is now teaching specially talented and gifted children in western North Carolina. Several Indian tribes live in the area and Indian children make up about half of the school's enrollment.

I also heard from Dave Miller who earned his Master's degree from Duke University and is now the Dean of Admissions for the Graduate School of Business there. He and his wife visited Jack Hurley and his wife. Dave writes that Jack is an upstanding citizen who has become a businessman. He is the owner of a restaurant and a bar so he has plenty to keep himself busy.

As the new year is starting out, I'd like to urge all of you to contribute to The William and Mary Fund. It's a very worthwhile effort and this year the College will receive funds from the National Endowment for the Humanities to match new contributions.

74 Lots of news came in for this issue, but first let me pass along a request from John and Marilyn Entwisle, '44, National Chairpersons for The William and Mary Fund. This year is an especially important year for the Fund because of the National Endowment for the Humanities matching grant. This matching grant will double the value of any new donations or any increase in your last year's gift. So please contribute whatever you can this year. Now for the news!

Dr. Laurie Baxter wrote shortly after her wedding last November. Laurie was a general surgery resident at the Univ. of Virginia hospital until December 1980 when she and her husband, Dr. Louis Pobereskin, moved to Cambridge, England. There, he joined the neurosurgery staff at Addenbrooke's Hospital while Laurie continues her residency training. They can be reached simply by writing to the hospital's department of neurosurgery in Cambridge.

Another physician, Dr. Douglas Snyder, is an internal medicine resident at Bowman Gray School of Medicine at Wake Forest University. Doug received an MS degree in biology from East Carolina Univ., then his MD from Eastern Virginia Medical School.

Recent weddings: Bonnie Thacher married Michael Guari last August in Bon Air, Va. Linda Wallinger, Patsy Simmons, Lynn Bradford-Elliott, and Cathy Garcia attended the wedding. Bonnie and Michael live in Edina, Minn., in their new house with their new elkhound puppy. She works for the Pillsbury Company as the Product Manager for Pillsbury Plus Cake Mixes. Bonnie complained that few Kappa Delta's or Gamma Phi's have been writing to the Gazette lately -- let's hear from some of you for the next issue.

Sarah Beeler Hudson wrote that she and her husband Mike attended Bert Wilson's wedding last December. Tom Eppes was there, and so were Phil Mott, Paul Harvey, Linda Ross, Denise Love, Susan King, Lynn Butler, Nancy Stone, John and Sara Strom and Ray Farrar . . . just like Homecoming.

Sue Stephens Greenplate remembered the name of the infamous French 205 instructor. Her name was Mademoiselle Moreland, and Sue recalls she often admonished the girls in the class to "prenez la pillule!" Sue and John are working at a Massachusetts boarding school. Their daughter, Ginny, two years old, will soon have a new brother or sister. Obviously Sue has not paid attention to Mademoiselle's advice . . .

Sue asked that I put out an APB for Ray Dombroski -- says she hasn't heard of him in years. Can anyone help?

Another request for news came from Heler Smythers, '77, who would like to know where Jay Orr is and what he is doing. I don't have a current address for Jay and am hoping he, or a friend of his, will see this and drop a note to Helen at 1410 Grady Ave., Apt. L-9 in Charlottesville, VA 22903.

John and Lynn Adams Hostetler have a new baby sister for their son Brian. Katie Marie was born in November. The Hostetlers live in Hanover, a Pennsylvania town just inches from the Maryland line.

Jenny Miller Owens, her husband Lee, and their two sons are going back to Kodiak Island, Alaska, in March. Lee, a pilot for the Coast Guard, was given a second two-year assignment guarding our coasts in Alaska.

My job with Colonial Williamsburg brings me into contact with several classmates who also work for the Foundation. David Ballard has the most unusual career around. He is a puppeteer! Dave is currently under contract with CW to build, write, and direct a marionette show based on the Dick Whittington story. This past summer he and his hand puppets, which he makes himself, were performing Punch and Judy shows throughout the historic area.

Another classmate at CW is Dan Stebbins. Dan is a journeyman wheelwright and supervises the wheelwright shop. He was married in October 1979 to Mary Ellen Wyant, '75, also with CW.

Kathy Todd Wilke left teaching at Walsingham in January to begin a new job with CW. She has joined the Development Office where she will do research and proposal writing for the Foundation.

We spent New Year's Eve with Kaethe Post Ferguson and her husband Don. They were visiting Williamsburg for the first time in three years. Kaethe and Don live in Johnson City, Tenn., where both are employed at East Tennessee State's medical school. Kaethe is the assistant to one of the med school's department heads and is in charge of the lab. In addition to her regular lab work, she has had the opportunity to teach a few classes, publish several articles, and present papers at various conferences. Her current project requires long hours at a nearby VA hospital where Kaethe is testing a new antibiotic prior to its distribution for use by the public.

After spending three years at Lawyers Title Insurance Co. as a senior title attorney, my husband Jim has joined the Richmond law firm of Hirschler, Fleicher, Weinberg, Cox, and Allen. His specialty is commercial real estate law. The hours are long but he thoroughly enjoys the work. Since we don't see as much of each other in the evenings, I keep busy after work by giving piano lessons to several neighborhood urchins. This has been going on for a year and a half now and I still find it a delightful experience.

For the next issue, I am actively soliciting news from and about Kappa Delta's and Gamma Phi's -- and of course, from anyone else who feels the urge to take pen in hand.

76 I hope everyone has had a good holiday season and is starting off the new year on the right foot. Hardly anyone has written any news, but I will relay the few messages I have received. Debbie Monfort Firebaugh and her husband are both teachers in Richmond - Debbie in history and government at Highland Springs High School and Jim at the Mathematics and Science Center. She says she keeps busy and in touch with many W&M alumni through the Kappa Kappa Gamma and Panhellenic associations of Richmond.

David Syrett has been named an Associate of the Society of Actuaries after having completed the fifty part of the ten-part actuarial exam. David is an actuarial assistant with Liberty Life Insurance Company in Greenville, S.C. Barry Wilhelm has reentered the glamorous world of public accounting as he has moved from Richmond to Roanoke to work with the firm of Ernst & Whinney. His transitory hiatus out of the profession was spent in the financial reporting area of United Virginia Bank in Richmond.

Bill Smyth, '75, is teaching social studies and history at a school in Charleston, S.C. Bill has recently moved into a house and says he does have the curtains up and some bushes planted. He also indicated he had plans to visit Colorado and the sweet Rocky Mountain paradise sometime this winter. At the wedding of Mark Grumbles, '75, in mid-January, we ran into Don Harvey and Mark Bradshaw, both from the Class of '75. Mark Grumbles and his wife are both students in North Carolina at a theological seminary, the same school from which Don has recently graduated. Don and his wife are living in Emporia where he serves as a minister. Mark Bradshaw and his wife are in Franklin, Va., where he works for Union Carbide.

Frank Hankey ad the meaty role of Gaylord Ravenal in the Brandeis University presentation of SHOWBOAT in December, and was "the hit of the show" according to Danella Hewitt Pearson, '53.

We have one other item which may be of interest to those of you who plan to contribute to The William and Mary Fund. As you may have read, the National Endowment for the Humanities is matching all new money contributed to the College in the current year. Any increase over last year will be matched as will any first-time contribution. Further, if your company matches your gifts, a contribution of new money will generate a gift to the College which is three times your actual contribution. Now where else can you get that much bang for your buck?

78 Another new year! From the mail I have been receiving, most of our classmates are off to a great start. With the new year we have several weddings, births, graduate courses and many other exciting events to share with our classmates. Thank you all for taking the time to keep in touch!

Teresa Mullins Statler and her husband, Steven, moved from Phoenix to Beaverton, Ore., last year - just in time to witness the eruptions of Mt. St. Helens. Steven is an engineer for an electronics company and Teresa is the front office manager for an area hotel. She is planning to study hotel management to further her interest in the travel/tourism industry. Future plans include complementing her studies in tourism with her background in languages (French and Italian).

CARY FIELD STADIUM ATTRACTS RUNNERS

The newly-installed track in Cary Field Stadium, one of the many replacement features of the renovation of the stadium during the past year, has proven a popular attraction to joggers in Williamsburg. Among the early morning users of the track are (left to right) Williamsburg Planning Commission Chairman Barbara Murphy, Connie Hill Granger '59 and her husband Gilbert L. Granger '57, a member of the Williamsburg City Council and past president of the Athletic Educational Foundation.

Teresa also sent news of other people from our class: Chuck and Leslie Sciarra Shimer are in Boston where Leslie is attending law school. Jan Reynolds is in Northern Va., working for the Air Force in Public Relations. Phi Grove and his wife, Brenda, spent their honeymoon in Canada and are now living in Minneapolis, Minn. Kathy Schintzel and Steve Greenlaw, '77, were married in July of last year.

Gary and Hope Hickman were married last year; Mike Ware was one of their ushers. They are now living in Chesapeake where Gary is a senior accountant in the Tax department with Price Waterhouse. Hope is an accountant with A. Lee Rawlings & Co. in Norfolk. Gary is now a CPA.

Ensign Steve Cody recently returned to Norfolk on board the amphibious transport dock, USS Trenton. He is weapons officer on the ship. He was on exercises in the North Atlantic, English Channel, the North Sea and the Norwegian Sea on NATO maneuvers.

Dave Lipinski has been living in San Jose, Calif., since fall '78 training for the Olympics (which the US boycotted last year). This winter he visited his family in Michigan and headed back to Irvine, Calif., at the end of November. He is a born-again Christian and is pole vaulting for a team called "Athletes-in-Action" - a worthwhile organization which uses athletics as a platform to share Christ with others. He is looking forward to the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles.

After several months as the governor for Mrs. Robert F. Kennedy, Hickory Hill, McLean, Va. and after traveling the Caribbean and South America, John Duer is currently employed in the corporate services department of Gerald D. Hines Interests, Houston, Tex. He plans to attend graduate business school in the fall of this year.

Wayne Jones has been working in the accounting department at Maryview Hospital in Portsmouth for the past two years. In 1979, he married Frances Hoffer. Daryl Bondurant, Jim Butler and Brian Blount were ushers. They bought a house in Smithfield but may plan to move to Portsmouth. Wayne hopes to get his Master's degree in Hospital Financial Management in the near future.

John and Melissa Dozier Friedery are now living in Ardmore, Okla., where they have bought a house. John is still working for Dresser Atlas as a senior field engineer in the oil fields. They were previously in New Orleans. Melissa is teaching 7th, 8th and 9th grade sciences. They are both involved in a variety of community activities and enjoy the new friends they have made. I enjoyed seeing them at Kim DeSampers and Mike Hay's wedding in December. Sue Buzzell was one of the bridesmaids; she is living in D.C. where she works for Xerox. I also saw Joe Agee at the wedding. He is back in Hilton Head selling condominiums. (Joe - I kept my promise!)

Mike Mason is working as a "mud engineer" in the oil fields for IMCO in Elk City, Okla. He trained for 3 mos. in Houston, Tex. and moved into his present position in Okla.

Allison White married George Matsik in January. They are living in Saratoga Springs, N.Y.

Elizabeth Anne Sowder Bower is the District Sales Manager for C. S. Greene in Chicago. Her territory covers part of Ill., Ind., Mich. and Ohio. During the fall, she married Mark Bower. Mark is a Coal and Ore Traffic Representative for the Norfolk and Western Railway Company. One of the special things about their wedding in Roanoke was Elizabeth's bridal gown. She designed and made her own dress. I received a picture of the gown as well as a description of the work involved. It was simply beautiful and I'm sure it meant a great deal to Liz for her wedding.

From Nancy Read, Maryanne Smith Nelson and Jane Tylus comes this thought. Laurie Lucker Blount died last September from lupus, a systemic disease of the connective tissue that strikes mostly young women. It is a disease about which relatively little is known. To those who knew her, Laurie was one who was caring and vital, and gave much to those around her. In that same spirit of giving, those who would like to remember Laurie, and help others suffering from lupus, should send contributions to: Lupus Foundation of Delaware Valley, Box 32, Wynnewood, PA 19096.

Brian Cullen has completed officer candidate school at Newport, RI, and has been commissioned an Ensign in the Navy. He joined in June of 1980.

Best wishes to you all in this new year. I hope to see and hear from more of you this year. The column is what you make it and so many that write seem to enjoy hearing how everyone is doing. Drop me a note this week for our next issue!

80 It seems like months since I've had a chance to say hello. I hope the new year finds everyone well and enjoying work or school. Since our last issue in November, I've accumulated plenty of news to pass along. By now, my news may be old news for some, but I hope you'll enjoy reading this as much as I have enjoyed hearing from everyone!

Jay Morris is living in Alexandria and working for Garfinckel's as an assistant buyer. Jay is really enjoying her job and the DC area, and mentioned that she's run into several Indians on the Metro, so for those in Washington, keep an eye out for Jay!

Mike McLane writes from sunny Florida which, by now, sounds very enticing! Mike is at the University of Florida in Gainesville where he is in the graduate program of Journalism and Communications; he has chosen a school at the opposite extreme from William and Mary--Florida's huge school and so far, there hasn't been a trace of colonial architecture. John Underhill is completing student teaching in Tucson, Ariz., at the Kino Learning Center, an open educational school. John is also working with solar-powered ovens, radios, stills, and other devices. Last I heard, John was going to be finished in December and by now, was hoping to be teaching full-time at the Center.

Sha-Fong Wu is helping manage her family's restaurant as a break between schools; Sha-Fong plans to return to school this year for her MBA. Stuart McElhaney is at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville where he is doing graduate work in geology in addition to teaching undergraduate courses. Ken Adler is attending Ohio State University where he is pursuing a Master's in the field of college student personnel work. Ken is also the Assistant Director of Barrett Complex at OSU which, alone, can keep him busy -- this complex is three times the size of Yates! Ken says that going to a school the size of OSU has made him appreciate William and Mary a little more.

Bob Patterson is working towards a Master's degree in philosophy at the University of Cincinnati and is enjoying school as much as is possible. Bob has been kept busy also with the post of secretary for his fraternity's alumni association. Carol Ann Hilton attended an eight-week program this summer which was sponsored by the Linguistic Society of America at the University of New Mexico. Carol Ann took three courses and had the chance to attend the annual meetings of several linguistics societies; on the weekends she travelled around the Southwest and had a fantastic time. She's now back in Virginia and has decided to go into college development; her interest in this field was first sparked by her

ALUMNUS HELPS W&M RECRUITING

The Scott Paper Company is interviewing William and Mary seniors this month as a result of an initiative taken by a William and Mary alumnus. James E. Ukrop '60, president of the Athletic Educational Foundation, contacted Scott in his role as president of Ukrop's Super Markets in Richmond and recommended that the company schedule recruiting interviews at the College. Stanley E. Brown, director of placement, then followed up Ukrop's efforts with Scott and scheduled the interviews. Brown suggested that if any other alumni might be able to emulate Ukrop's efforts it would be very much appreciated.

involvement in William and Mary's Development Office. Heidi Kunz is pursuing graduate studies in English at Vanderbilt University in Tennessee. Susan Gholston is working on a Master's degree in criminology at Florida State University and is enjoying the school and the weather.

Ann Dalton is working for Riggs National Bank in Washington as a management trainee. In the fall, Ann, Suzanne Doggett and Sue O'Laughlin moved into an apartment in Alexandria and they're all having a great time. Conny Johann writes from Michigan where she is working in the financial department of the Chevrolet Motor Division. In June, Conny married John Mincks, '78. John is in his third year of medical school at Wayne State in Detroit.

Laury Peery Jackson and her husband, Charles, are living in Charlottesville while Charles finishes his engineering degree at UVA. At the time I received her letter, Laurie was teaching kindergarten but was planning on "retiring" in November to prepare for the birth of their first child! I'd like to extend my congratulations to Laurie and Charles on their new arrival.

Paul Hershey is working for the BDM Corporation in McLean and is living in Fredericksburg with his wife, Cheryl Poole. Dave Johnson is an economist for the Department of Commerce, specifically in the Private Wage Income Branch of the Regional Economic Measurements Division of the Bureau of Economic Analysis -- quite a responsibility but it's interesting work! Stephanie Catoe is teaching first grade in Virginia Beach; before school started she was working at the Navy base as an accountant with various other duties, but is much happier teaching and really loves her job.

Kent Wiggins is working for Readak Educational Services as a developmental reading specialist. Kent travels between Virginia and New England teaching the Readak program to kids at private and parochial schools in grades five through twelve. Last I heard, Kent was on his way to an assignment in Springfield, Mass.

Ed Moreland was married to Carla Shaffer, '81, in December and they are now living in Williamsburg. Ed is an administrative extern at Hampton General Hospital and will begin his Master's degree at MCV in August, while Carla will be starting her first year of law school.

Kevin Means was married to Betty Wells '78, in May and is now attending Fuller Theological Seminary in Pasadena, Calif., where he is studying for a Master's of Divinity; Betty is working at the seminary.

Myde Boles was working for the Secretary of the Commonwealth's Office before she started her current job as Budget Analyst for VEPCO in Richmond. Gerald Kowalski has found an interesting job just down the road from William and Mary -- he has a five-year apprenticeship with the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation in the musical instrument maker's shop. Gerald explains the procedures to the tourists and answers their questions as well as learning how to build the instruments; his present position is as a skilled interpreter.

Jeff Komitor took a well-deserved vacation after graduation and before starting work. He and Greg Ingram '78 took a train to Quebec, stopping at several cities and towns on the way. Once in Montreal, they visited the Olympic stadium, several cathedrals, underground shopping centers and the St. Lawrence Seaway; Jeff and Greg also took a tour of the city for those sights they may have missed. Jeff enjoyed learning about the French-Canadian culture and our neighbor to the north.

That's about all the news for now, but I'll have more for the next issue. Please write if you have anything to be included in the May issue or at any time in the future--several letters I've received have included inquiries about classmates and others have indicated how much they enjoy reading about their friends and classmates. I look forward to hearing from you.

DEATHS

Hugh Johnson Baker, '07, died March 29, 1980, in Hamilton, Ohio. He earned his M.D. from the University of Louisville in 1911 and then opened practice in Nickelsville, Virginia. The British forces, short of physicians during World War I, "borrowed" him from the United States, and after the war he went to the University of Chicago for Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat specialty training. He opened a practice in Hamilton, Ohio in 1924 and remained in that town for the rest of his life. Two of his children attended William and Mary: the late Captain Joseph H. Baker, U.S.N., '34; and Betsy Baker Detmer, '58, of Hamilton.

Rixey Smith, '15 A.B., died of cardiac arrest at his home in St. Augustine, Florida, on November 20, 1980. Born John Waller Rixey Smith, he dropped the first names as a young man. A transfer from the University of Virginia, he was a member of Kappa Sigma and Phi Beta Kappa, and editor of the Literary Magazine. He served in France with the Army Signal Corps during World War I and then worked as a Washington correspondent for the Baltimore Sun. In the early 1920's, he was secretary to Senator Carter Glass of Virginia and later served as administrative assistant until Senator Glass's death in 1946; he authored a biography of the Senator. In the late 1940's, Rixey worked for the Bureau of Internal Revenue and served as the president of the Woodlawn Foundation. His wife, the former Grace Bagge Quinten, died 25 years ago; he is survived by one sister, Genevieve Scott of Waynesboro.

James Cannon Farrar, '22, died May 19, 1980 in Newport News, Virginia. He is survived by his wife, Lillian.

Mary Elizabeth Eley (Islin), '25, died December 10, 1980, in Newport News, Virginia, after a long illness. She was active in the Patrons League in schools, the Woman's Club, the Class of '25 Reunion Committee, and her church. She is survived by her husband, Ed, '25.

Mary Gilliam (Hughes), '25 B.S., died January 5, 1981, in Richmond, Virginia. A member of the College Biology Club, she taught biology in the Henrico County public schools for 38 years. She was a member of the Virginia Academy of Science and was active in both her church and the local Woman's Club. The widow of C. Waverly Hughes of Highland Springs, she is survived by two daughters and one son.

Foster Wise Powell, '25, died December 30, 1979, in La Mesa, California. After leaving William and Mary, he attended Iowa State University and Hastings Law School of the University of California. He later graduated from Church Divinity School of the Pacific, and he spent most of his life as an Episcopal clergyman. He is survived by his widow, the former Julia Kane.

Mary Katharine Anderson, '27, of Roanoke, Virginia, died October 5, 1980. She transferred from William and Mary in 1926 and earned her B.S. from Roanoke College. Many years later, she earned her M.Ed. from the University of Virginia. She taught for 36 years in Virginia public schools and for six years in private schools in Tennessee and North Carolina. She spent many summers working for the Roanoke Department of Parks and Recreation, and she was an active member of the A.A.U.W., the Senior Citizen's Club, and Kappa Delta Pi.

Virginia Bundy (Wills), '27 B.S., died in June, 1980, in Charleston, West Virginia. After graduation, she taught for several years in both West Virginia and Virginia prior to marrying Linwood T. Wills. She was active in the Woman's Club of Charleston, the A.A.U.W., and her church. She is survived by two sons and a sister, Dorothy Bundy Turner, '28.

Julia DeLoatch Howard (Day), '27 A.B., of Williamsburg, died November 22, 1980, while visiting in San Diego, California. The widow of William Newland Day, she was a retired Civil Service employee and a real estate and insurance agent. She was a member of the A.A.U.W., the Virginia Museum Association, the U.D.C. and the D.A.R. She is survived by several cousins.

Martha Romaine Claiborne (Stephens), '28 A.B., died in December, 1980, in Richlands, Virginia. She and her husband, Wilson, died within three days of one another. She bequeathed to the College a number of antiques, and her husband, who did not attend William and Mary, left half of his estate to the College.

Boyd George Carter, '29 B.A., of Lubbock, Texas, died of a heart attack on December 18, 1980. A Phi Kappa Tau at William and Mary, he served on the staff of the Flat Hat, Literary Magazine, and Colonial Echo, and he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Kappa Phi, Omicron Delta Kappa, and Sigma Upsilon. He received a Certificat d'Etudes Francaises Superieures from the University of Toulouse, France in 1927; and both an A.M. and a Ph.D. from the University of Illinois in 1933 and 1937. He taught and lectured in the field of classical and Romance languages at a number of major universities, and since 1978 has been Scholar in Residence and Adjunct Professor at Texas Tech University. He authored, co-authored or edited nearly 25 books in his lifetime, in addition to many articles, features and poems. He was awarded Palmes Academiques in 1956, with rank of chevalier; and in 1977, he was honored for outstanding contributions to Spanish-American literature at Texas Tech's 10th Annual Comparative Literature Symposium. He was made an honorary member of the 82nd Airborne Division for his book, Those Devils in Baggy Pants. Along with Dr. David Paschall, he was responsible for establishing the Fraley Prize in History at William and Mary. He is survived by his wife, the former Mary Eileen Barry; and two nephews, James D. Carter, III, '52, and John R. Carter, '60.

Stephen Graham White, '31, of Blackstone, Virginia, died July 22, 1980.

Barbara Wyatt (Chandler), '31 A.B., died October 6, 1980, in Hampton, Virginia, after a long illness. A member of Phi Mu and a lifelong resident of Hampton, she taught for many years at Phoebus High School. She was a well-known local artist and a member of the Art Club of Hampton, the Virginia Museum, the D.A.R., the Hampton Woman's Club, and the Hampton Historical Society. A member of Hampton Baptist Church, she taught Sunday school there for many years and was a past president of the Women's Missionary Society and a member of the Olive Martin Missionary Circle. She is survived by her husband, Edwin F. "Buck" Chandler, two daughters, and a sister.

Mary Miller Solliday (Welty), '32 B.S., died October 5, 1980, in Riverside, California. She is survived by her husband, John.

John Thomas Uldrich, '33, died June 18, 1980, in Jersey City, New Jersey, after a long illness. He had been in the Veterans' Hospital for nearly one year prior to his death. He is survived by an aunt, Mrs. Anna Leonard.

Ella Ruth Wilkins (Cunningham), '33, died January 14, 1980, in Athens, West Virginia. She left William and Mary in 1932 and later graduated from West Virginia Wesleyan College. She was married to Ralph Cunningham of Athens.

James J. DiGangi, '34 B.S., died in his sleep October 12, 1980, in Swainsboro, Georgia. A member of Alpha Phi Delta, he retained his interest in history and chemistry throughout his life, and was active in Veterans Affairs, with his wife Bea. He was with the Agriculture Department after doing graduate work in Chemistry at George Washington University, and with the Stetson Hat Company in Danbury, Connecticut. A veteran of World War II, he was with the Walter Reed Hospital as Supervisor of the Out-Patient Laboratory and then with the Public Health Department as a laboratory supervisor. He also was in partnership in a fungus laboratory. He retired in 1968, after recovering from a heart attack in 1962, and had only moved south recently for his emphysema. He is survived by his widow, Bea.

Hamilton Pier Simonds, '34 A.B., died August 13, 1980, in Albuquerque, New Mexico. A member of Kappa Sigma and editor of the Flat Hat while at William and Mary, he entered the real estate business after his graduation.

John Joseph Sullivan, '34 B.S., died March 12, 1973, in Brooklyn, New York. A member of Kappa Sigma fraternity, he is survived by his widow.

She was a member of the A.A.U.W., the B.P.W. Club, the Civic League, the American Medical Record, and the National Association for Historic Preservation.

Michael J. Hook, Jr., '39 B.S., died October 30, 1980, in Erie, Pennsylvania. A member of Sigma Rho, Omicron Delta Kappa, Phi Beta Kappa, and the football team, he earned both a bachelor's and a master's degree in mechanical engineering from M.I.T. after graduating from William and Mary. He was associated with the General Electric Company as a mechanical systems engineer on diesel-electric locomotives. A member of the local planning commission for ten years, he was active in both his church and his community, and was a past president of the Lions Club. He is survived by his widow, the former Margaret Bablak; one daughter, two sons, and one sister.

William Stephen Parry, '41 B.A., died of a massive heart attack on November 26, 1980, in Pacific Palisades, California. A transfer student from UCLA, he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa. He was a CPA with Price-Waterhouse and Company, and comptroller of Paramount Pictures, until he became a partner in the accounting firm of Scholefield, Bellance and Company; he retired in 1979. He served in the late '40's as president of the Los Angeles Alumni Chapter. He is survived by his wife, the former Patricia Howard, '44; a son, and two daughters.

Eugene Philip Goldschmidt, '44 B.S., died May 8, 1980 in Amsterdam, The Netherlands. While in Europe attending an international microbiological meeting, he required emergency surgery, and he died of a heart attack during recovery. He was an Associate Professor of Biology at the University of Houston, Central Campus, where he had been a faculty member since 1966. Prior to that time, he had taught courses in microbiology and microbial genetics at the University of Texas, the University of Georgia, the Western Reserve University Medical School, and Fort Detrick, Maryland. He was well-known nationally for his work in microbial genetics. The Eugene P. Goldschmidt Memorial Fund was established at the University of Houston's Biology Department to honor his memory. He is survived by his wife, Dr. Millicent Goldschmidt; one son, and one daughter.

William Alda Lugar, '46 A.B., died December 26, 1979. At William and Mary, he was a member of Sigma Pi and the track team. He spent most of his life in the mortgage business, and at the time of his death, he was a senior executive in the Sunbank Mortgage Company. He was active in the Orlando Racquet Club and the Winter Park Rotary Club. He is survived by his wife, Ann, and six children, including William Jr., '74, and John Michael, '77.

John Marvin Rudiger, '71, died January 14, 1981, in the crash of an Air Force F4 Phantom near Zaragosa, Spain. After attending William and Mary, he graduated from Concord College in Athens, West Virginia in 1970. He starred in football and track at Concord, receiving the most valuable football player award. He taught for three years at the high school level and was football, track and basketball coach prior to joining the Air Force in 1973. He took pilot training and graduated with distinction, later serving for several years as an instructor pilot. At the time of his death, he was a Captain, stationed at Torrejon AFB in Madrid as standardization and evaluation officer for the 401st Tactical Fighter Wing attached to the 614th Tactical Fighter Squadron. He received the Air Force Commendation Medal, the National Defense Award, and the Longevity Award. He is survived by his wife, the former Mary Eskew, and two children.

Eugenia Charlotte Avery, M.Ed. '70, of Portsmouth, Virginia, died suddenly on July 10, 1979. She earned her B.S. in Education from the State Teachers College in Farmville, Virginia in 1941.
