THE COLLEGE OF WILLIAM AND MARY

School of Business Administration Comes of Age

Dramatic 14-year Growth Culminates in Dedication of Chancellors Hall

To walk through Chancellors Hall today is to see how well the College of William and Mary can blend the old with the new. Old Rogers Hall, as it was formerly known, was built in 1927 with private funds that in part were raised by Dr. W.A.R. Goodwin, the visionary rector of Bruton Parish Church who persuaded John D. Rockefeller to undertake the restoration of Williamsburg. It was the home of the College's chemistry department for nearly six decades before that department moved to its current facilities, located in Rogers Hall on the new campus.

The classic Georgian architecture of Old Rogers Hall and its traditions were not lost on administrators at the College, who opted to renovate rather than abandon it. Like Cinderella, it has been transformed: from an outdated building with outdated plumbing and steam heat into a sleek and shining new facility for the School of Business Administration. Its impressive marble foyer and cherry panelling gleam once more, but now there are also computer terminals and digital clocks in the lecturers' podiums.

In dedicating its new home on Presidents Day, Feb. 5, the School of Business Administration celebrated the culmination of 16 months of renovation, at a total cost of $2.1 million. But the dedication of Chancellors Hall also symbolized the coming of age of the School of Business Administration after more than 60 years of evolution from a modest program in business into a first-rate school with more than 800 full-time equivalent students and a full and part-time faculty of 60.

Although 1968 is the year officially given for the school's founding, its true origins go all the way back to 1919, when Dr. J.A.C. Chandler '98 introduced the teaching of modern business administration into the William and Mary curriculum. As the newly-appointed president of the College, Chandler went to work expanding it in size and quality.

From the start, Chandler sensed that new demands would be placed on higher education by the business sector and returning war veterans. As a result, William and Mary was one of the earliest institutions of higher learning to offer innovative courses in modern business administration.

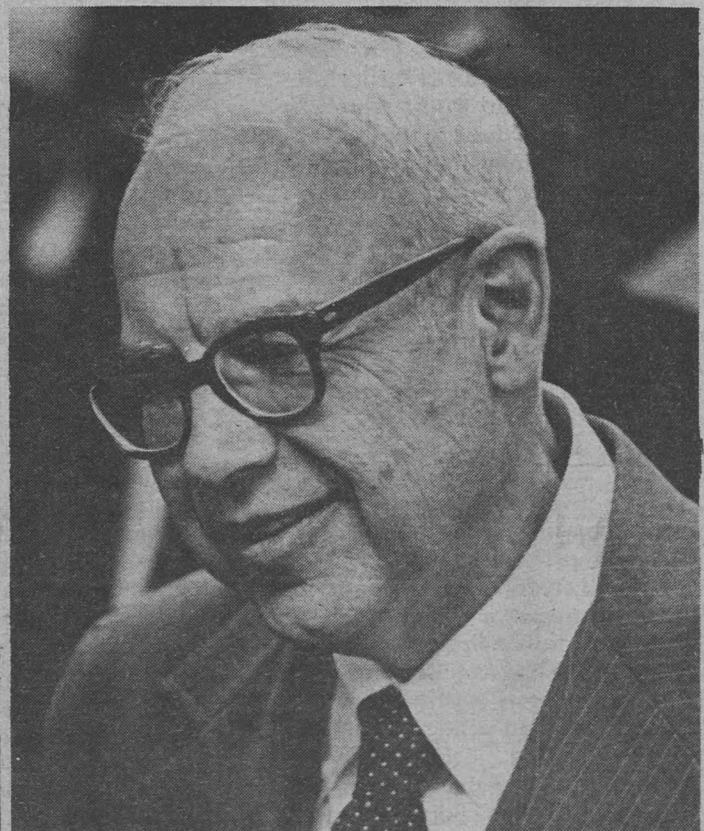

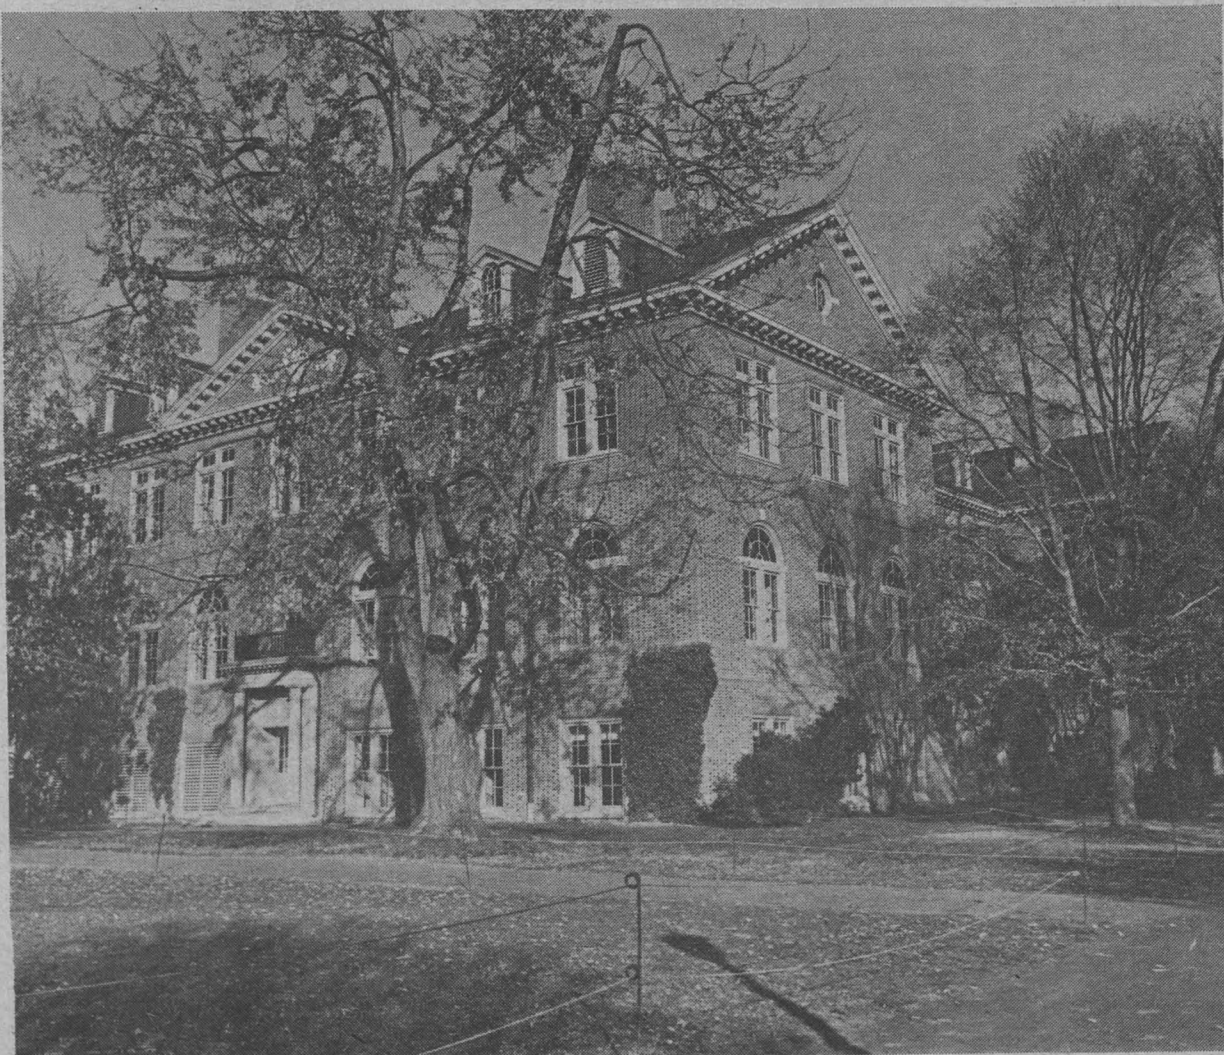

One person who remembers that dynamic period is Dr. Albion Guilford Taylor, Chancellor Professor of political economy, emeritus. When Taylor came to William and Mary to teach in 1927, he headed the combined department of economics and business administration. "I have very fond memories of those early years," says Taylor, who now resides in Colorado Springs, Colorado. "I was there from 1927 through 1958, except for four years during the war."

He remembers, too, early courses in marketing and advertising which were taught along with the beginning and advanced economics courses the College offered. "In 1940 the department was split, and Charles Marsh (Charles F. Marsh, lecturer of business administration, emeritus) took over business and I took over economics," Taylor recalls.

Dr. Marsh joined the William and Mary faculty in 1930 and taught for 28 years before becoming president of Wofford College in Spartanburg, S.C. It was one of his students at Dean Charles L. Quittmeyer '40 has guided the School of Business Administration through its period of most dramatic growth which was highlighted at the dedication Feb. 5 of Chancellors Hall, formerly the home of the Chemistry Department, now the new home of the School of Business Administration after a $2.1 million renovation.

Dr. Edward E. Brickell '50, rector of the College, presented the Thomas Jefferson awards to Jean C. Wyer, associate professor of business administration who received the Thomas Jefferson Teaching Award, given to an outstanding young faculty member, and to Frank T. Lendrim, professor of music and director of the William and Mary Choir, who is flanked by the happy members of the Choir which sang at Charter Day. Both Lendrim and Wyer have received previously Alumni Fellowships from the Society of the Alumni for their outstanding academic accomplishments.

Charter Day Stresses Business Theme

College Honors Three Chief Executives With Honorary Degrees

Three top chief executives received honorary degrees at Charter Day, complementing a weekend that had a heavy stress on the theme of business at William and Mary on Feb. 5-6.

The College conferred honorary degrees on Hays T. Watkins, president of CSX Corporation; Edwin D. Dodd, chief executive officer of Owens-Illinois, Inc., and D. Hillsdon Ryan '50, chief executive officer and co-founder of Minit International.

Ryan, who had come to the Charter Day ceremonies from Geneva, Switzerland, where his company is based, had given the dedicatory address on Friday, Feb. 5, for the newly-renovated Chancellors Hall, the new home of the School of Business Administration.

At Charter Day, President Graves announced that Charles L. Quittmeyer '40 had been named the Floyd D. Gottwald Professor of Business Administration and would retire after 15 years as dean of the School of Business Administration on July 1, 1983. Quittmeyer, who received the Alumni Medallion in 1976, will remain with the school after he steps down as dean to teach and do research. The professorship is endowed by a $100,000 gift from the Ethyl Corporation.

The College also honored two popular faculty members with Thomas Jefferson awards. Frank T. Lendrim, director of the William and Mary Choir and a member of the music department faculty since 1974, received the Thomas Jefferson Award, given annually to a professor or administrator for demonstrating leadership and inspiring students in a way that "Thomas Jefferson would have conceived as essential to intellectual, social and political advancement of mankind." Lendrim is a former recipient of the Alumni Fellowship from the Society of the Alumni for excellence in teaching and research.

Jean C. Wyer '80 E.Ed., associate professor of business administration who is also a previous Alumni Fellow, received the Thomas Jefferson Teaching Award, given annually to an outstanding young faculty member. Her citation noted that

"students clamor to be admitted to your courses although your rigorous standards are well-known."

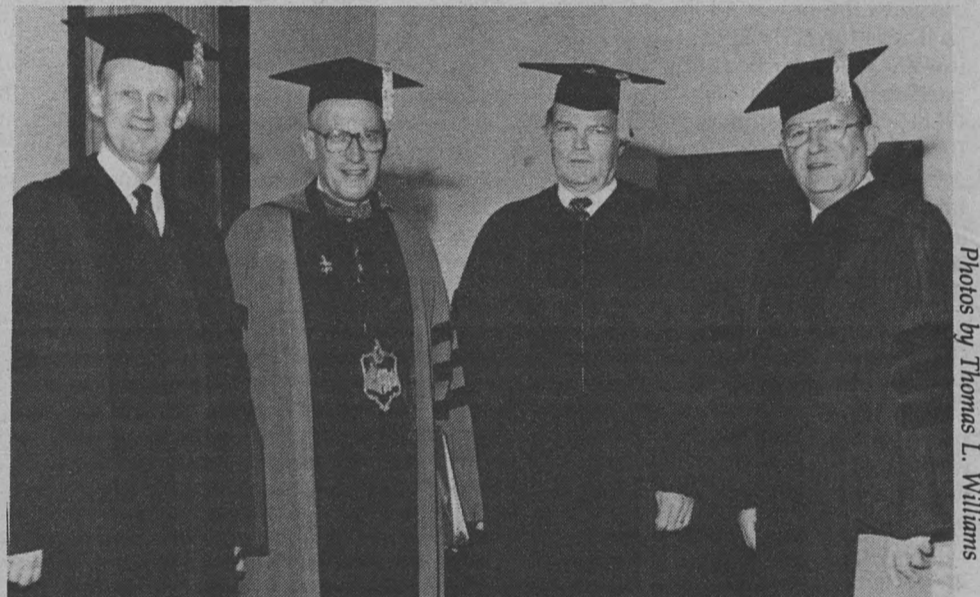

In another announcement at Charter Day, Edward E. Brickell '50, rector of the College, said that the Board of Visitors had conferred President Emeritus status on Alvin Duke Chandler '22, president of William and Mary from 1951 to 1960. A former chancellor of the College, Chandler was lauded for "his contributions to this institution," and his "concern and vision." The Board of Visitors resolution noted that although Admiral Chandler has been retired for several years, "the quality of his leadership continues to be evident in every aspect of this College's life."

Watkins, Dodd, and Ryan all participated in Presidents Day, held this year in conjunction with Charter Day. Sponsored by the School of Business Administration each year, Presidents Day brings to William and Mary top business executives from around the country. Watkins and Ryan, who studied under Dr. Quittmeyer when Ryan was a student at William and Mary, have both endowed professorships in the School of Business Administration.

Watkins, whose son H. Thomas Watkins is a 1974 graduate of William and Mary, gave the Charter Day address and noted that America is embarking on "a great national dialogue regarding the nation's economic problems and the appropriate role of government in our national economic life."

"By reducing the role of government and giving greater scope to private initiative and competitive market forces, President Reagan has offered important new directions for national economic policy," Watkins said.

"The administration's program has forced us as a nation to re-examine the course we have been following, and the fundamental ideas which guide our national destiny," Watkins added. "It also poses the question whether we as a nation have the will and capacity to confront our difficulties openly and take needed corrective action even though it may be painful."

William and Mary Alumnus Named Scientist Of The Year

Stanford University Professor William E. Spicer '49
Honored For Work In Pure
And Applied Science

"We must get rid of the prevalent belief that there are two worlds of science—pure and applied. There is a complete continuum between the two which is mutually beneficial."

So says engineer-physicist William E. Spicer '49 who has been honored for his work in both facets of science.

Spicer is best known for his discovery of how photo emission can be used as a fundamental tool in solid state physics, for his investigation of the electronic structure of solids, and for his major role in the use of Stanford University's Synchrotron Radiation Research Laboratory.

He is this year's Industrial Research & Development Scientist of the Year.

"When I look back on my career I realize that if I had been allowed to be only a pure scientist, which is what I intended to be when I left graduate school, I would have had a very limited career," Spicer told IR&D.

After getting his doctorate, Spicer held out for a job in basic research. He was hired by RCA Labs, his task being to research the basic physics of the practical photo-cathode. In doing so he developed his important theory of photo emission.

In essence his theory tells us that when light strikes a material it interacts with the solid and electrons emerge. By using data on the energy of the emerging electrons, and combining it with knowledge of how the light excited the electrons, tremendous insight is obtained into the electronic structure of the solid. This can be used in many ways, including the creation of a TV picture.

Spicer presently is using photo-emission spectroscopy and synchrotron radiation to study, on an atomic basis, the top layer or so of a solid. He and his team are also studying the processes and reactions in the materials that are crucial to the working of a computer.

Spicer's discoveries have proved to be a tool for understanding many aspects of solids. Among the results have been leaps in knowledge that can be applied to TV and "electric eyes."

He was a co-recipient of the Buckley prize of the American Physical Society for the development of photo-electron spectroscopy. It is little known, however, that in his role as a consultant to Varian, Spicer was also the inventor of an improved x-ray image intensifier which now is in use in medicine all over the world. It increases the brightness of the image by a factor of 10,000, and allows objects such as kidney stones to be clearly seen for the first time.

He also is deeply involved, with Professor Michel Boudart of Stanford, in the crucial work of catalysis. In the development of new catalytic materials lies America's main hope for ending its dependence on the U.S.S.R. and South Africa for key strategic metals such as platinum.

"One of the real problems we face today is the schism between pure science and applied science," says Spicer. "The end result is that there is one group of people who think of themselves as pure scientists, with little contact with the applied world.

"On the applied side I can give you many examples of hundreds of millions of dollars which are lost by groups taking empirical approaches—Edisonian approaches—rather than trying to understand scientifically what is going on, and building from there.

"In order to do what I call scientific engineering, you have to have a big backlog of basic knowledge that you can draw on to guide you. You can't do it without that knowledge being available. It wasn't available in Edison's time.

"There are lots of areas in which it is not available today. It is disturbing that very little premium is placed on gathering basic knowledge in areas of critical basic need, as opposed to areas where it is not clear whether there will ever be a practical need," Spicer declares.

"This is an area in which one has to tread very lightly, because you don't want to destroy the ability of science to find new, unexpected things.

"On the other hand, our scientific establishment is getting rather large to justify, and is in financial difficulties because of this," he adds.

It was Spicer who suggested that previously unused synchrotron radiation from Stanford's Linear Accelerator facility should be taken out and used for experiments in non-high-energy physics. This was the first continuum of radiation achieved which went all the way from the infrared to the hard x-ray region.

"Our group's most recent work" says Spicer, "is to use the synchrotron radiation to develop a unified model of what goes on at the surface of certain classes of semi-conductors, called the 3-5 compounds (e.g., gallium arsenide), which bracket, for example, silicon and germanium chemically.

"By using the synchrotron radiation we have been able to understand critical surface phenomena and to make predictions which we hope will lead the way to new developments in semi-conductor technology."

Spicer's boyhood in Baton Rouge, LA, was, in his words "a very strange one" in terms of schooling. He attended a poor school system, with some classes having as many as 60 students. "The teacher's salary level was so low that a single person could not survive on it, so we were taught by bored housewives who did it for pin money," he said.

As a result, Spicer did not learn to read until he was 10, and did so by teaching himself. In spite of that fact, once he got to William and Mary, he forged ahead rapidly. By the time he was 19 he had been elected to Phi Beta Kappa and received a B.S. degree.

Spicer's seven years' work in the RCA research laboratories led to two achievement awards for scientific contributions. He joined Stanford in 1962, and three years later, after continuing his work on photo-emission, he was made a full professor. His work on synchrotron radiation led to senior appointments at the Stanford Linear Accelerator. He presently is consulting director of the Stanford Synchrotron Radiation Laboratory. In 1978 he was appointed Stanford W. Ascherman professor of engineering.

In addition, Spicer is a Fellow of the American Physical Society and a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He is a member of the Advisory Group on Electron Devices for the U.S. Government. In 1972 he spent five weeks in Japan as a Fellow of the Japanese Society for the Promotion of Science. In 1975 he received an honorary doctorate from the University of Linköping in Sweden. Three years later he received a Guggenheim Fellowship and became an Overseas Fellow of Churchill College, Cambridge University. His publications include more than 300 technical papers and contributions to some 20 books.

In his teaching at Stanford, Spicer carries on his unorthodox views on science. He has unusual ideas about how to teach those who are working on their dissertations for a PhD. "I think the first thing a teacher must think of at this stage is the development of the person before the research," he says. "I find that it may take a little longer, but if you do it this way, the research usually comes out a lot better. A lot of it has to do with development of the graduate as a human being.

"It is important that confidence in oneself as a human being should be instilled. When that is achieved, the technical competence comes much more easily. Instead of a professor and student relationship, it becomes two colleagues working together.

"This is very different from classroom teaching, where the student is more or less passive. He knows that there is an answer, and his mission is to find it." Spicer's courses are electives, and many undergraduates take them as honors courses.

"I think it is absolutely essential that young scientists should learn how to think outside of mathematics, to think—instead—of concepts. I'm not saying that math is not vital, but if you are tied to mathematical terms, there are many things that will elude you.

"To get on the right track," says Spicer, "the young researchers who are coming along must get used to the idea that we are all one team, each making optimum use of his or her individual talents."—Donald Stokes, IR&D magazine, a publication of Dan & Bradstreet. Reprinted with permission.

(Dr. Spicer has continued to be a close friend of William and Mary. When he won the Oliver Buckley Prize for Solid State Physics, he gave part of his prize money to the Department of Physics which was given as an award to an undergraduate in physics. He has visited William and Mary on several occasions, including May 1980 when his good friend, Sir Nevill Mott, received an honorary degree from the College.)

West Elected Society President

Howard, Smith, Roberts To Fill Alumni Society Offices

Dr. Marvin F. West '52 has been elected President of the Society of the Alumni.

A practicing dentist in Williamsburg, West has been a member of the Board of Directors for four years, and served last year as Vice President of the Society. He replaces Captain John H. Garrett, Jr., '40 of Irvington who is retiring from the presidency after two years as is required by the bylaws of the Society. Garrett will remain on the Board of Directors for another year.

West, in recognizing the two years of Garrett's presidency, and the new programs initiated during that time, thanked the former Navy Captain for charting a straight course through sometimes stormy seas to smooth waters and as a sailing enthusiast himself promised to exercise similar good seamanship with a good crew.

James E. Howard '43 of Richmond was elected Vice President, Mrs. Jane Spencer Smith '48, Grosse Point, Mich., replaces Andrew D. Parker, Jr., JD '69, Chapel Hill, N.C., as secretary; and Austin L. Roberts, III, '69 of Newport News continues as Treasurer.

House Notes

The Society of the Alumni is endeavoring to have as many alumni authors as possible represented in the Paschall Library. If you have written a book, please advise Frankie Martens at the Alumni Office. Regrettably, the Library does not have space or facilities to accommodate dissertations or technical papers, but welcomes bound volumes of books written by alumni. Contributions are appreciated.

Mark R. Tezak '77 has given to the Paschall Library a copy of his new book ORDER UNDER LAW, READINGS IN CRIMINAL JUSTICE. AMERICAN STABLES, AN ARCHITECTURAL TOUR was a gift from the authors Julius Trousdale Sadler, Jr. '44 and his wife Jacquelin.

AFTER THE REVOLUTION: PROFILES OF EARLY AMERICAN CULTURE, by Joseph J. Ellis '65, has been added to the library in memory of the late John Edwin Pomfret, President of the College of William and Mary 1942-51, through the Alumni Society Memorial Purchase Fund.

N. Christian Vinyard '70 donated RESTORATION COMEDY, by Robert Manson Myers. Dr. Myers was an assistant professor of English at William and Mary in 1947-48.

A handsome Seth Thomas Mantel Clock with Westminster Chimes has been placed in the Chandler Room, a gift of H. Clyde Smith '28.

Through the years the Society of the Alumni has acquired a number of COLONIAL ECHOES. Alumni wishing to obtain out of print year-books may write to the Paschall Library, Society of the Alumni, Post Office Box GO, Williamsburg, Virginia 23187. Surplus copies are in limited numbers and while the supply lasts the cost is $6.00 per copy, which includes postage. All proceeds will go to the Paschall Library fund to purchase books by alumni authors. Checks should be made payable to the Society of the Alumni.

During the two and one-half day meeting the Board voted to establish a group insurance plan for alumni and selected the Meyer and Associates company of Chatham, N.J., as the sponsoring firm. An extensive review was made of the Homecoming Parade and ways in which to insure a good parade were proposed, as well as a system to prevent the rowdy and disruptive behavior of several of the fraternity organizations participating in the parade. The Board approved plans to revise the reading of the roster at the Sunset Ceremony to include only Reunion Classes, but to list all deceased classmates since the last reunion.

The Board lauded the services of retiring member Robert H. Land '34 of Alexandria for his service to the Society and to the College while on the Board. He is being replaced by Mrs. Audrey Murray Harris '60 of Richmond, who will join the College Relations Committee.

The Board adopted a more extensive statement of purpose of the Society and moved to have that statement added to the charter of the Society registered with the State Corporation Commission. It reads as follows:

"The purpose of the corporation is to promote the interest and welfare of the College of William and Mary in Virginia and its alumni by developing, conducting, or sponsoring programs to aid, inspire and stimulate the alumni; and through the Society's Board of Directors to maintain a keen awareness of the aims, goals, aspirations, and problems of the total university, (encompassing the Board of Visitors, Administration, Faculty, Students and Alumni), in order that:

"Interest in the Society and its goals among its members is maintained at a high level,

"Bonds among the Alumni and between Alumni (collectively and individually) and the College are continually refreshed and strengthened.

"Ongoing functions and programs of the Society are responsive to the needs and interest of the College and its Alumni.

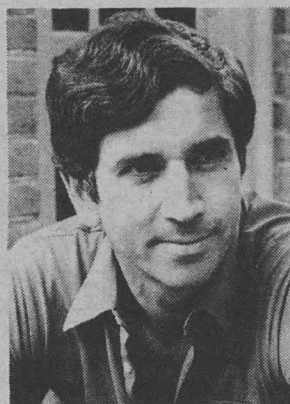

"The continuing obligation of the Alumni to support their Alma Mater by advise, service, counsel and material resources is strengthened.

"The full development efforts of the College are actively and enthusiastically supported by the Society and its individual members."

The statement was part of the recommendation of an extensive self-study prepared over a two-year period by a Board committee chaired by Dr. Henry D. Wilde, Jr., '53 of Houston. The other members of the committee were James W. Brinkley '59, Towson, Md., and Dr. West. All of the members of the Board of the Society were assigned specific areas of Society activity and submitted reports at the September meeting of the Board. Those reports were used as the basis of the final report, which will serve as a general operating guide for the Society for the immediate future.

The report noted that a significant improvement in the relationship between the Society and the College,

INSIDE ADMISSIONS

College To Hold Counseling Seminar For Rising Seniors

by G. Gary Ripple
Dean of Undergraduate Admissions

I am pleased to announce an opportunity for rising high school seniors to receive a full week of college counseling on the William and Mary campus this summer. The program is called The College Counseling Seminar and it will attempt to incorporate all of the elements essential to a proper search for the right location after high school.

In order to provide the advantages of personal counseling, the Seminar will be limited to the first 30 participants who respond to my official announcement in early April. Our week's program will include lectures on making important decisions, searching for the right college, having a good interview and a successful college visitation, and an introduction to many facets of the college experience: living in a dormitory, having a roommate, eating three meals each day in the college dining hall, and the chance to attend a class or two in William and Mary's Summer Session.

We will also spend some time talking about standardized tests and students will have an opportunity to take a practice run through the SATS with the advantage of correcting their own exams and determining their standardized score. The importance of testing and ways of maximizing one's test results will be an important element of our schedule.

I will be joined by a competent staff of high school and college admissions counselors who will provide small group and individual counseling for each student throughout the week. Selected faculty and staff will present brief lectures on topics of academic and extracurricular relevance.

Among our many goals, we hope to achieve a genuine enthusiasm on the part of our young people for the enormous task of selecting from a list of colleges which will most accurately reflect the student's needs for a successful and rewarding undergraduate college experience.

I strongly urge interested parties to contact me in the Admissions Office as soon as possible. Our program will begin on Sunday afternoon, June 27, 1982 and close on Friday, July 2, 1982 at noon. The all inclusive cost will be $175.

especially with students, has been made in the past several years and commended the College Relations Committee for its consistent and innovative work. Specific programs noted were the Career Exploration Day and general career programs; Life After Dog Street, Alumni-Student Liaison Committee, and the Alumni Admissions Network. The Alumni Service Committee was noted for its work in developing a strong Alumni Gazette and Alumni Gazette magazine, an expanding merchandising program, the development of the Olde Guard Council and a strong development of class identity programs. The Leadership Conferences established by the Society were strongly supported.

The study committee strongly felt that it is the duty and privilege of alumni to make financial contributions to the College. Because of the Society's unique way of communicating with alumni through the Gazette and chapter programs, it has a responsibility and opportunity to encourage alumni to make such financial contributions and will continue to work closely with the development office to extend alumni support for common goals.

The Study also recommended that efforts be made to enhance recruiting of well-rounded and superior students. Such activity should be conducted by individual alumni as well as a more organized approach through the Alumni Admissions Network. Alumni advisory groups may be helpful in assisting in the recruitment of minorities and students with special talents. The study also noted the need to upgrade the Admissions Office facilities and support services.

Implementation of the proposed Alumni House expansion was given encouragement, along with the need to include broad participation in the expansion planning. The Self-Study recommended the Society move to develop and maintain a strong, independent financial operation.

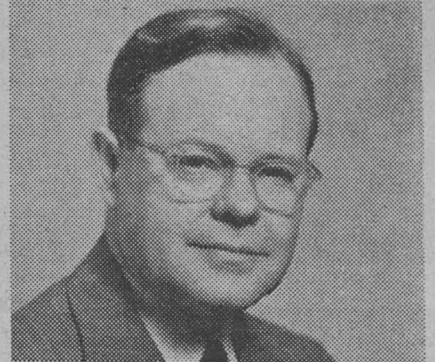

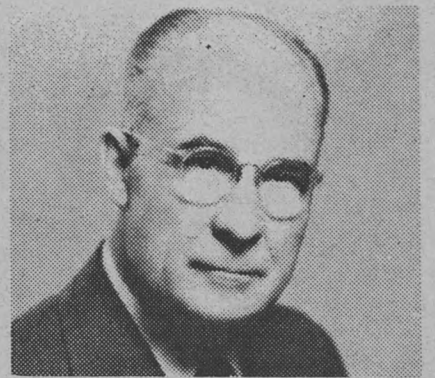

An extensive review of the professional operating staff brought some suggestions for realignment of some responsibilities, staff position additions, and the need to maintain appropriate staffing for the many new activities of the Society. Upgrading of equipment for records keeping on alumni was given top priority by the survey.

Other Board deliberations include approval of the concept of a second volume on the History of the College; establishment of an appropriate planning committee for the Tricentennial of the College in 1993, and acceptance of the gift of vacation time at a Nag's Head cottage for members of the faculty and the officers of the Senior class. The gift of cottage time was made by an alumnus in support of the outstanding professional activity by faculty, and to provide a retreat for senior class officers for planning their final year.

On Thursday evening the Board entertained the members of the Faculty-Board Liaison Committee and the Faculty Compensation Committee for dinner and informal discussions. Following dinner, the Society sponsored a wine and cheese reception for the Carl Roseberg retrospective exhibit in Andrews Hall.

At the Feb. 5 dedication of Chancellors Hall, President Graves addressed a group consisting of prominent chief executives, faculty, students, and Board of Visitors members in the gleaming, newly renovated first floor lecture room of Chancellors Hall.

William and Mary who eventually became Dean of its School of Business Administration -- Charles L. Quittmeyer '40. Dr. Quittmeyer, who was inspired in his study of economics and business by Marsh, returned to his alma mater twice during his academic year to join the business administration faculty, both times at Dr. Marsh's invitation.

"When the time came that we needed additional people, we reached out and grabbed him," says Marsh. In turn, Marsh was invited to become a part-time lecturer in business administration by Dean Quittmeyer in 1968, following Marsh's retirement as president of Wofford College. "Charles Quittmeyer and I have kept in very close touch," Marsh notes, adding, "I have known some of his students, and it's nice to have that continuing relationship."

Of his many students through the years, Dr. Marsh says simply, "I think the young people who came to us got along very well." The Marshes' oldest son, John Charles Marsh '55, is a professor of medicine at Yale University and a leading authority on cancer.

In the 1950's, President Alvin Duke Chandler '22 envisioned something more than just business courses at the College: he wanted to see a separate school, with its own dean.

That dream started to become reality in the mid-1960's, during the visionary administration of Dr. Davis Y. Paschall '32. The approval of the master of business administration degree, the enrollment of the first students in that program in 1966, and the establishment of the School of Business Administration in 1968 are highlights of that era. They are also just a part of the many achievements in facilities and programs which led to William and Mary obtaining university status in 1968.

Dr. Paschall remembers that he used all the persuasion he could bring to establishing the school: first, because he felt that the current faculty and program were commensurate in size with a school of business, and second, because it would launch and establish the school's program and graduate program in the future.

"I had the support of the Board of Visitors and particularly Walter G. Mason and W. Brooks George," comments Paschall. "Those two helped me tremendously, from the Board of Visitors standpoint, in bringing about the School of Business." Of the alumnus chosen to head that school, he says, "Dr. Quittmeyer worked unbelievably hard toward the accomplishment of all in the School of Business -- he had a lot of help, but his single-minded drive accomplished the most."

Paschall also speaks highly of the school's physical expansion. "I think it's just marvelous that it has achieved the renovation of Old Rogers Hall, now Chancellors Hall, in so many respects.

"Not only has it provided a facility so long needed for the full fruition of the School of Business Administration. There's something about the classic architecture of that building with its cherry panelling and marble entrance -- it goes back to the Old Campus in its aspirations and hopes."

Those aspirations and hopes have been shared for years by Dean Charles L. Quittmeyer, who has been described as the driving force behind the school's growth. He has seen it develop as a department and a school, moving from old Marshall-

One of the many innovative programs in the School of Business Administration sends students into the community to work with local businesses to deal with their marketing-advertising problems. The four students above, Debbie Haynes of Roanoke, Earl Straight of Virginia Beach, George Boatright of Lynchburg, and Keith Ferrone of Merrick, N.Y., developed a marketing program, complete with a slide show, commercials, brochures, and an insignia, for the Williamsburg Community Hospital.

Three presidents of the College of William and Mary have supported the growth of the School of Business Administration. Under the administration of Dr. Alvin Duke Chandler '22, a separate school was envisioned. Under Dr. Davis Y. Paschall '32, the MBA degree was approved in 1966 and the School of Business Administration was established in 1968. Under President Graves, the School achieved the BBA degree and was accredited by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business.

"The School of Business Administration has benefited from the support of businessmen both in-state and out-of-state. Through hosting luncheons for business leaders in various parts of Virginia, personal contacts have been made along with good impressions of the school. 'I get our deans to go with me to talk about the students and our program, and I get students to go too, because seeing is believing,' Quittmeyer says."

Wythe (now James Blair Hall) to the basement of Bryan Hall in 1967, to the top floor of Hugh Jones Hall in 1969, and now to Chancellors Hall.

He has also been instrumental in making major changes in the total scope of business education at William and Mary. "When the Bachelor of Business Administration degree program was accredited in 1972, it was a big breakthrough for us," he comments. "We came of age in 1974 when the School of Business Administration had both of its degrees, BBA and MBA, accredited."

A group that has been essential to the growth of the School of Business Administration is the Business Sponsors, established in 1970, which has raised more than $400,000 in support for the School.

George M. Walters, an emeritus member of the Board and former Secretary of Transportation for the State of Virginia, describes the common bond of this uncommon group of volunteers. "I think the one thing is that first of all, they're all successful businessmen and all recognize he vital need for training for the future, to get highly qualified individuals into business." He adds, "While they've followed various careers in various industries, they all have that general interest in education and business."

Today, William and Mary is one of fewer than 200 business schools -- out of over 700 nationwide -- that are accredited at both the undergraduate and graduate levels by the prestigious American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business.

The school enrolls some 800 full-time equivalent students in the graduate and undergraduate programs, and the full-time faculty totals 39, with 21 part-time faculty members. When Quittmeyer became chairman of the department, he says, "There were only four of us full-time, with one part-time faculty member -- that was it, with one secretary, one helper and the Bureau of Business Research."

Dean Quittmeyer attributes the impressive growth of the school to help from many people and to more than a little luck. "We've had more anti-Murphy's Laws than Murphy's Laws to strike us," he jokes. In a more serious vein, Quittmeyer singles out four men for special praise, his "mentors" over the years: W. Brooks George '32, Dr. Davis Y. Paschall, Thomas Roy Jones and L.C. Ackerman.

"Everyone has a teacher, or mentor, to help him along," Quittmeyer explains. "Brooks George has been a mentor to me -- from him, I've learned how to get things done." Another mentor is Davis Y. Paschall. Of him, Quittmeyer says, "Pat Paschall certainly helped us along -- if we hadn't had his support and that of the Board of Visitors, we wouldn't have what we have today."

The third mentor has been Thomas Roy Jones. "He was my coach, too," the dean says. "He lives in Carmel, California, and I call him about once a month to bring him up to date on what we're doing." Last, but not least, was L.C. Ackerman. "Bud Ackerman was one of the first ones to come on the advisory council of the business school," says Quittmeyer. "We wanted to get him on because he was president of the biggest corporation in the state -- he very nicely came on, and worked like the dickens."

The School of Business Administration has also benefited from the support of businessmen both in-state and out-of-state, Quittmeyer adds, saying, "We've found the reception excellent." Through hosting luncheons for business leaders in various parts of Virginia, personal contacts have been made along with good impressions of the school.

"I get our deans to go with me to talk about the students and our program, and I get students to go too, because seeing is believing," Dean Quittmeyer notes. "These business leaders like William and Mary, too -- not just the business school but the name of William and Mary that goes with us."

If you have guessed by now that this dean is well satisfied with his school's progress, you're right. "People think that now that we're in this building, we're headed for the stars," he says of Chancellors Hall. "I think we're already one of the best business schools in the country."

Dean Quittmeyer will retire from his post in June 1983, but he will become the first faculty member to hold the Floyd D. Gottwald professorship in Business Administration, which will enable him to continue teaching and conducting research for the business school after his retirement. The professorship has been endowed by a $100,000 grant from the Ethyl Corporation of Richmond, Virginia.

The Gottwald professorship is the latest addition to the list of six within the school which have been endowed by corporations or individuals associated with the Sponsors Board. Another special professorship, the Chancellor professorship, is held by Dr. Leland E. Traywick. As Director of the Bureau of Business Research and Chancellor professor of business administration, he is one of only two such distinguished faculty members at William and Mary. The other Chancellor professorship is held by Dr. J. Ward Jones, Jr. of the classical studies department.

Under Traywick's direction, the Bureau of Business Research publishes the much-respected Virginia Business Report and the Williamsburg Business Index. Both are widely read throughout the state and quoted by the media.

Of the Virginia Business Report, Dr. Traywick says, "The major contribution is that it tends to put the College of William and Mary on the map in economic analysis and business conditions in Virginia."

The good publicity generated by the bureau and its research is "part of what we're doing," says Traywick. "It's also to be as informative and straightforward as we can."

Presidents Day, a major annual event of the business school, also has made the headlines by being reported in the Wall Street Journal, Business Week, Nation's Business and a number of other newspapers, trade journals and periodicals. It began very simply -- with a phone call.

In 1973, as part of his undergraduate business policy class, Ryan Professor William H. Warren arranged telephone calls between his class and a number of top executives. The experience was so successful that Warren repeated it the following year, inviting the executives that were interviewed to Williamsburg to meet his students and discuss specific case solutions.

At the dedication of Chancellors Hall on Feb. 5, President Graves presented Dean Quittmeyer, the first and only dean of the School of Business Administration, with a symbolic gold key to the building. Dr. Quittmeyer will step down as dean in July, 1983, but will remain with the School as the Floyd D. Gottwald Professor of Business Administration.

Two chief executives who are typical of the business leaders who have supported the School of Business Administration in its rapid growth attended the dedication of Chancellors Hall on Feb. 5. At left is D. Hillsdon Ryan '50 whose company, Minit International, endowed the D. Hillsdon Ryan Professorship in the School of Business Administration. Ryan, who is a member of the Sponsors, Inc., gave the main address at the dedication. At right is W. Brooks George '32, chairman of the board of Larus and Brothers Corp., who is one of the founders and current chairman of the Board of the School of Business Administration Sponsors, Inc.

Presidents Day soon became a school-wide event hosted by the MBA Association that draws students and noted business and government leaders together to discuss the latest issues. "The real clue to its success is having people here who are in the top policy-making level," Warren says. "That you get those people who have made it to the top here in person, and that they think enough of us to come here -- it makes a big impression on the students."

Warren also predicts that graduates of William and Mary's business school will be among the chief executives at Presidents Day in the 1990's. "I was a charter member of the School of Business at the University of Richmond when it separated from the college, just as we evolved here," he explains. "Of the group I was with and the class that followed, I could tell you 15 chief executives, and they are instrumental in raising money for the school."

He adds, "It's taken 30 years, and it will take us the same amount of time -- this is a long-term investment."

Just as Presidents Day exposes business students to movers and shakers in the business world, the faculty of the school have often been cited for their skill in bringing the practical aspects of business into the classroom. In Dr. William E. Rice's classes in marketing and advertising, students experience the real-life stresses of creating new products and meeting deadlines. As a result, some students have gotten patents from the U.S. Patent Office, some have made money from their inventions, and others have put themselves through school with their own businesses.

"I try to get them to become explorative, to launch out in new directions and see their own inadequacies and faults," says Rice. "If they just learn theories, they never test their own mettle."

Our special team of students has recently illustrated how well the concept can work. George Boatwright of Lynchburg, Keith Ferrone of Merrick, N.Y., Debbie Haynes of Roanoke and Earl Straight of Virginia Beach are seniors majoring in business administration who developed a complete marketing/advertising plan for Williamsburg Community Hospital. The team undertook the hospital project as an independent study course under Professor Rice's supervision, earning three credit hours apiece toward their bachelor's degrees.

"The most important factor in creating a marketing plan and advertising campaign is to come up with a continual image so that everything is related to everything else," says George Boatwright '82. He and his teammates met that challenge with such professionalism and innovation that they earned the praise of the hospital's community relations committee, which plans to incorporate several of their ideas into its program.

The team also came up with the catchy phrase "Williamsburg Community Hospitality" to describe the hospital's warm, caring atmosphere, creating a logo that was just what the hospital was looking for for its internal hospital relations. "The experience has prepared me for jobs in the real world," comments Earl Straight '82 -- and the School of Business Administration can have no better tribute.

"Debits and Credits"

Firms Flock To College To Recruit Accounting Majors

Last fall, 20 accounting firms and 27 major corporations made a point of coming to William and Mary with one goal in common. They all sought to recruit students from a pool of roughly 45 accounting majors going through the placement process.

That kind of batting average would "knock the socks off" of anyone familiar with recruiting efforts, says Dr. William T. Geary, associate professor of business administration. "A small campus such as William and Mary's typically has just a few firms recruiting," he says.

What is it about these students that draws so many major firms each year? In a word, leadership. "They're coming here for people who can assume leadership roles, are comfortable with leadership roles, and can handle stresses and pressure," says Geary. "Our students always advance very quickly."

The stature of William and Mary's accounting program has also been enhanced by its students' impressive CPA Exam success rates. Statistics maintained since 1973 by the Virginia Board of Accountancy show that William and Mary students are consistently ranked in the top two slots when compared to the other Virginia schools.

"We view this as obvious," Geary comments. "Like a good law school or medical school, you figure naturally your students will do well." He'd rather emphasize the educational innovations in the accounting program, and the difference in how William and Mary's accounting students are educated.

The broad-based liberal arts education that all William and Mary students receive in their first two years is recognized as extremely valuable by the accounting faculty and by the firms that recruit on campus. Faculty members teaching in the accounting area put a strong emphasis on spoken and written communication, and on the cultivation of analytical ability and deductive thinking. The use of qualitative methods like computer science and statistics is also stressed.

The prospering Senior Internship Program has given students the opportunity to put their classroom training to good use between the two semesters of senior years. Interns have been placed from New Orleans to Houston and along the East Coast, experiencing first hand what it's like to be a contributing member of a team of professionals. Their success has added to the accounting program's reputation, and there is stiff competition among firms for interns from William and Mary.

The accounting program's achievements are part of a tradition of accomplishments at the College. In 1919, the Virginia Society of CPAs requested that the College establish a program of study in accounting and business, a request that helped to bring the modern School of Business Administration into existence.

In 1926, President J.A.C. Chandler hired Professor Wayne F. Gibbs, Sr. as the first full-time faculty member to be given the responsibility to develop the accounting and business program. His contributions to the development of the accounting program have been recognized through the naming of the Wayne F. Gibbs Sr. Accounting Society.

Another faculty member who has played a critical role in shaping the accounting program is Professor John S. Quinn, hired in 1949 as a young WW II veteran and graduate of the Harvard Business School. Today he is the senior faculty member in a group of nine full-time faculty teaching primarily in the accounting area. The diversity of the backgrounds and research interests of the faculty have been an important factor in building the accounting program, which has now been part of the College curriculum for over half a century.

Swimming Performances Highlight Winter Sports

Women Swimmers Break Records, Qualify For AIAW Nationals

The women's winter sports scene has been highlighted by outstanding performances from freshmen this year, and no sport shows it more dramatically than swimming. Before the season began, Coach Chris Jackson predicted that the oldest record on the books - the 100 butterfly last set by Peggy Lawlor in 1973 - would be the first to go. What she didn't know, was how many times it would be reset by her freshman class.

Heather Sell broke the mark in the second meet of the season, but teammate Anne Sorenson rebroke her record several meets later with a 1:01.51 clocking to Sell's 1:02.226. Not to be denied, Sell set new marks in two consecutive meets at 1:01.17 and finally 1:00.882, the current W&M school record, just sixth hundredths of a second off the national qualifying standard.

Sorenson had already broken the 50 butterfly school record in the opening meet of the season, but recently bettered her hold on the record with a 27.974 time, two tenths of a second off the national qualifying time. Meanwhile, Ann Searle had broken the 200 butterfly school mark with a 2:23.6 time, only to have Sell capture that record as well in the most recent meet with a 2:16.806 time.

The three swimmers have combined for 24 individual first places in nine meets to date, with Sell capturing 12 firsts in the butterfly, freestyle and individual medley events; Sorenson garnering eight firsts in the butterfly and freestyle and Searle gaining four firsts in the backstroke and butterfly. In addition, all three have swum on relay teams that have reached national AIAW Division II Qualifying standards.

The other new face is diver Lynda Harnish, who has won eleven first place required and optional one-meter diving events to date, with her highest point totals of 169.10 against Appalachian and 195.2 in the North-eastern meet. With a 7-4 dual meet record, Jackson will be looking for these freshmen to qualify in individual events for the nationals in Moscow, Idaho March 11-13.

Freshman Carla Tademy burst on to the women's track scene in the opening W&M Hall All-Comers meet setting a new school record in the 50 yd. dash with a 6.4 time. Since then, she has also tied the 60-yd. hurdles record with a 9.1 race, and is strengthening the team in relays. Val Roeder is a member of the two mile relay team which set a new school record and qualified for nationals at the Virginia Tech Invitational with a 9:23 time.

Sharon Connolly and Margie Johnson are two newcomers who helped set a new school record in the mile relay with a 4:16 time, and Johnson also runs in the distance medley. With the bulk of the track season still ahead, Coach Jenny Utz expects more records to fall.

Fencer Gretchen Schmidt leads the 7-1 women's team in overall bout wins with a 32-12 record and will be competing individually in the Junior Olympics in Los Angeles February 12-14. Of her losses, nine came in individual competition during the Temple Open which features the top national teams, and only three have been in dual meets.

The women's basketball team has only one freshman, Bridget Kealey, but three sophomore newcomers in transfer Sue Wise, and first year members Karen Thorne and Chris Turner. Thorne, an All-American and second leading scorer in field hockey, has earned a starting position mid-season and is second in scoring averaging 7.4 points per game, while leading the team with a 48.9 field goal percentage and 87.1 free throw percentage. She has led the team in scoring four games and reached a career high of 16 points.

Two all-around gymnasts have made their presence known in the gym room and W&M record book so far this season. Sharon Winn moved into third place in all-time all-around scores with a 33.45 score, while teammate Mary Ellen Williford took ninth place with a 32.65 point total. Williford has won the all-around in two meets and captured first places in the vault, uneven bars and balance beam. Winn has placed second in the all-around, and turned in top performances in the balance beam and vault. Both will be big factors in the Tribe qualifying for nationals again this year.

Fencing With Arthritic Pain

Senior Fencer Linda Neil's Greatest Foe Is Rheumatoid Arthritis

Lurking quietly within each joint, rheumatoid arthritis is an enemy with which most athletes would rather not compete. It attacks without warning, and almost always wins. For senior fencer and co-captain Linda Neil there is no choice. But unlike an insurmountable enemy, she sees it rather as a gadfly, to be flicked away when it becomes particularly bothersome.

A fencer for four years at Ramapo Regional High School, in Wyckoff, N.J., Neil was about to embark on her college career when the disease was diagnosed. A non-congenital type of arthritis whose causes are unknown, rheumatoid arthritis affects all or any joints in the body, but can usually be kept under control. However, extreme stiffness and limited movements are inevitable.

The arthritis cooperated with Neil for her first three years at William and Mary, allowing her to work up to her most successful season last year. As the first fencer to enter the College with high school experience, Neil was welcomed on to the varsity team as a freshman and finished the season with a 43-12 bout record.

It was in her junior year that the arthritis began to surface. Neil brushed it aside, placing sixth at the Regional competition with a 22-7 bout record and was the only William and Mary fencer to qualify for Nationals where she placed thirty-first.

Neil could easily have been called the best fencer on the William and Mary team, but the gods of fate are fickle, and this season even simple stretching exercises have become difficult. "Often when Linda gets down on the floor to do the pre-practice stretches, we have to help her get up," says coach Shirley Robinson. "The arthritis certainly gives her a lot of problems, and I've already had to withdraw Linda from a couple of matches because the pain was too great."

However, Neil is confident that she can get through one more season. "You just have to forget that it bothers you," she asserts. Gold shots every two weeks ease some of the discomfort, but still, each morning it's an effort for Neil to get down her apartment stairs. "I have to take them one at a time and very slowly," she says. "But then I come to practice and I'll run the stairs with the team for conditioning. . . I say to myself, 'Linda, why are you doing this?' but I tell myself that it's more important to win than to remember it hurts."

Robinson thinks that perhaps if it were Neil's freshman or sophomore season, she might not be so willing to endure all the pain, but as a senior, Linda sees the end coming. "I began to realize it's my last season, and it's important for me to finish," echoes Neil. "I even think that maybe someday I can lend my experience as coach."

This is only the second season that the women's fencing team has had their own coach, and with the addition of high school experienced fencers like Neil, the team has made great strides in the past few years. They won the Virginia State Tournament, placed second at Regionals and qualified for Nationals last season and are confident they can do at least as well this year. So far this season they have won 10 matches and lost only one. Neil has won 24 of her 36 bouts this year.

In addition, sophomore Melissa Moore and freshman Gretchen Schmidt have qualified to compete at the Junior Olympics. Schmidt, a left-hander with instinctive fencing style, graduated from Concord-Carlisle High School in Massachusetts last year, a virtual hot bed of fine fencers. At the Temple Open a few weeks ago, she placed in the top twenty in a field of over 170 fencers, for the best William and Mary showing. However, with sophomore Diane McGimpsey, junior Stacy Bice and senior co-captain Amy Schoner anyone can beat anyone else, comprising what Robinson calls the "ideal" varsity team.

Only The Label Has Changed

Copeland Anticipates Little Impact On Football Program From Move To Division IAA

In December William and Mary and 44 other schools had their football programs moved from Division IA to Division IAA by the NCAA. William and Mary and five other universities appealed the action, but the NCAA turned down all of the appeals at its annual convention in Houston in January.

How will the change in status affect William and Mary football program? It will reduce the number of grants-in-aid from 89 to 75 within two years, but other than that change, there will apparently be little difference, according to Jim Copeland, director of men's athletics, and others closely associated with the Tribe program.

"The label has changed but the package remains basically the same," says Copeland who stresses that the new status will not noticeably alter future Tribe schedules.

"We plan to continue to play our traditional rivals," says Copeland, "and these include IA teams such as the University of Virginia, Virginia Tech, and Navy."

Of other teams scheduled for future years, as many as seven were either already IAA teams or were moved into IAA by the NCAA action. These include two long-standing state rivals, Virginia Military Institute and the University of Richmond, and schools in the Ivy League with whom William and Mary has begun establishing a relationship in recent years.

While the number of grants-in-aid will have to be reduced, neither Copeland nor football coach Jimmy Laycock '70 sees this as a big problem.

"We can still recruit the kind of athlete who is academically oriented, yet who wants to play in a highly competitive league," says Copeland.

Copeland, in fact, sees several benefits resulting from the change in status.

"We will be aligned with people who are like us in terms of competitiveness on the football field, budget, and in some cases academic approach," he says.

"From a revenue standpoint, we will have a better chance of appearing on television than we had before because we will not be competing against the big-time programs.

"And we have a legitimate chance of winning a national championship because of the playoff system in IAA and the teams we will be competing against."

In order to reduce its number of grants-in-aid to 85, Coach Laycock will sign only 15 or 16 players for this fall. He says the change to Division IAA has hurt recruiting "with certain kids" because when it came down to William and Mary and a IA team "many of our prospects chose the IA team."

Laycock says it will take a while to sort out the implications of the change in status on William and Mary, but he notes that other Division IAA teams "face the same problems."

"I think over a period of time this will work its way out," says Laycock, who adds that he is pleased "to have something tangible to shoot for" in the way of a national championship.

Laycock says the IAA change does not bother him from a personal standpoint. "I look at my situation at William and Mary and I like being here," says Laycock, who coached the Indians to a 5-6 record last year, including two offensively-spectacular victories over East Carolina and Richmond in the final two games. "I'm not caught up with the fact that we are not IA, and I don't feel I have been pushed back in my career."

Men's Athletic Director Jim Copeland sees some benefits coming from the change from Division IA to IAA for the Tribe football program.

Contributions to the Athletic Educational Foundation were at $478,000 in late January, compared with $244,368 at the same time last year. The AEF has a goal of $580,000 for 1981-82, and Barry Fratkin '64, executive director of the AEF, does not believe the IAA change will have a negative impact on fund-raising.

"It will be negative only if our supporters perceive it as negative,"

"The change to Division IAA will apparently have very little effect on the Tribe football program. We plan to continue to play our traditional rivals, and these include the University of Virginia, Virginia Tech, and Navy," says Athletic Director Jim Copeland.

says Fratkin. "The overriding concern has been whether this will mean any change in our schedule. I think our people care about who we play and not what name they call our division.

"Being in a division in which we can compete for a national championship should, in fact, help our fundraising."

Copeland agrees with this assessment.

"There is no question that this newly formed division will be highly competitive and exciting," he says.

"William and Mary will compare very favorably with our peers academically and athletically, and the championship playoff system in IAA affords the Tribe a legitimate opportunity to be national champions. A national football championship has become an attainable goal rather than just a dream.

"This goal can be achieved although it is by no means assured. It is imperative that we continue to receive the support of all our alumni and friends."

College Disciplines Three Fraternities

Homecoming Parade Misconduct, Property Damage Lead To Expulsion

Three fraternities at William and Mary have been disciplined for infractions of College rules including property damage and misconduct during the 1981 Homecoming Parade.

Phi Kappa Tau and Sigma Pi fraternities have both been eliminated from campus and have had their charters revoked, and Sigma Phi Epsilon has had its charter removed and its lease with the College terminated. But Sigma Phi Epsilon's penalty was suspended until May 1984 after national headquarters stepped in, expelled 11 members of the fraternity, and placed the chapter in the receivership of a local alumni council headed by Williamsburg attorney Paul Wilson '76 JD.

Following disciplinary hearings before the Christmas break, the College suspended immediately all undergraduate operations of Phi Kappa Tau until Spring 1985 and revoked the Chapter's lease. The College terminated Sigma Pi's lease and its National subsequently revoked its undergraduate charter for a period of three years.

The stern action by the College's disciplinary committee resulted from a series of incidents involving the fraternities throughout the fall, including misconduct during the Homecoming Parade. Sigma Phi Epsilon was charged with "harrasing, intimidating behavior" and with violation of the College's alcoholic beverage regulation during the Parade. Sigma Pi was charged with property damage to its fraternity house, violation of local, state, and federal law, and violation of the College's alcoholic beverage regulation during the Homecoming Parade.

Sigma Phi Epsilon and Phi Kappa Tau were already on probation for previous violations of college regulations. Phi Kappa Tau was charged in late November with damage to its fraternity house and billed for more than $1300. Before the fraternity was removed at the end of the semester, an additional $1500 damage occurred in the house.

W. Samuel Sadler '64 said Phi Tau's national headquarters "has been superb."

"They came in before the disciplinary hearing and paid the College $1500." He said the College will recover costs of the remaining damage from the students' room deposits.

Since students returned to campus in January, College officials have had "frank discussions" with the fraternities and have told them that infractions to College policies "will not be tolerated." The College has increased the number of graduate students living in the fraternity complex, and staff members are making routine inspections of parties "to make sure they are in compliance with ABC laws," Sadler said.

"We are also working on some things that will hopefully strengthen the entire system," Sadler added.

Despite the incidents in the three fraternities, Sadler said he did not think it "was fair to assume that all fraternities are violating College regulations or damaging their houses, or a group that we don't want on campus." He said the average bill per house for damages during the entire fall has been less than $150.

The College made substantial improvements in the fraternity houses last summer and then began a program of weekly inspections each Monday to maintain the condition of the houses. Only when there is obvious vandalism does the College bill the fraternities.

Sadler, who had been Dean of Students since 1973, has seen two other fraternities removed from campus in that time. He said he sees a pattern in the activities of the strong fraternities on campus.

"Those houses that have consistently maintained strong programs have been those houses involved in a broad range of activities. Many are involved in community service and have strong alumni support and good leadership development programs," he says. Sadler noted, as one example, that Phi Kappa Alpha has raised nearly $100,000 for Muscular Dystrophy in the past nine years through its PIKE BIKE Marathon. In addition, Lambda Chi and Sigma Chi have been cited as the top chapters in the nation by their national headquarters within the past five years.

"There are strong houses at William and Mary that we can be very proud of," Sadler said, noting that the recent incidents "are not symptomatic of the fraternity program."

The College's Disciplinary Committee, which hears most serious misconduct cases, held 11 trials last fall. Eight involved charges against individual students, while the remaining three were against the fraternities. Of the eight cases against individuals, five resulted in dismissal from College.

The increased number of misconduct cases led the College in January to announce changes in its approach to discipline. Instead of waiting for courts to dispense with the cases when they involve infractions of law, the College will now initiate its own disciplinary action and no longer await court action.

In a message to students in a campus newspaper, Sadler warned that William and Mary "will not tolerate violations of the standards of conduct this community has set for its members" and will "take strong and immediate action when infractions occur." He said student affairs staff members would step up their surveillance of student conduct and, "where self-determination does not appear to be working, it will be re-considered."

"William and Mary is determined to provide an environment where every individual has the freedom to live and work in a civil and orderly community that will enhance learning and personal development," Sadler wrote. "There is no place here for harassment, threat, assault, vandalism, stealing, dishonesty or boorish behavior."

Alumni Medallion Nominations

Society Accepts Nominations For Highest Honor

The Alumni Medallion Committee is receiving nominations from alumni chapters and from individual alumni for candidates for the Alumni Medallion, the highest honor conferred by the Society of the Alumni.

The medallion is awarded for service and loyalty, recognizing extraordinary achievement in the vocational and avocational life of the alumnus. Consideration is given to distinguished service and exceptional loyalty to the Society and to the College; outstanding character; notable success in business or profession and contribution in worthy endeavors of such nature as to bring credit and honor to the College. The graduating class of the nominee must have been at least ten years prior to the awarding.

The nominations must be supported by a short written statement outlining service to William and Mary and an assessment of that service; service to community, state, and/or nation; vocational achievements and recognitions.

The deadline will be May 3, 1982.

Send all nominations to: ALUMNI MEDALLION COMMITTEE, BOX GO, WILLIAMSBURG, VA. 23187.

OLD GUARDE DAY SET FOR APRIL 15

The first Olde Guarde Day is scheduled to be held on April 15, 1982. All Olde Guarde members are invited back to the campus as guests of the College. Hosting the event will be the Alumni-Student Liaison Committee and officers of the Senior Class. Reservation forms for this event, highlighted by a luncheon and a performance by the William and Mary Choir, will be mailed to all members of the Olde Guarde in the coming weeks. Members are asked to please mark their calendars for April 15th and plan to be in Williamsburg for OLDE GUARDE DAY '82.

Homecoming, Saturday, November 7, was a great success. Well attended, weather delightful, and even losing the football game to Harvard was a minor disappointment.

The first meeting of an organized Olde Guarde was held the previous day, Friday, November 6, presided by Art Winder, a moving spirit in its creation. The Class of '24 was seated at one table and included Carlton and Walter Holladay, Ted Dalton, Carter Harrison, and myself. While there were several individuals from prior classes, whom I did not know, ours was the oldest group. I was surprised by the large overall attendance until I realized we were the last class

Letters

Editor:

In The Alumni Gazette for December, 1981, on page 6, Mr. Vernon L. Nunn is pictured riding "top down" in a vintage Mustang Ford. The caption for the photograph indicates that Mr. Nunn is serving as the Honorary Grand Marshall of the Homecoming Parade for 1981.

May I say that a "more grand" Honorary Grand Marshall than Mr. Nunn could not have been selected.

I am convinced that I would have never completed my studies at William and Mary had it not been for Mr. Nunn. The courtesy and consideration and kindness extended to this writer by this gentleman made the difference in whether I stayed or didn't stay - not once, but several times.

I have often speculated on just how many students owe their college degrees to the consideration and understanding that was given to them by Mr. Nunn in his capacity as auditor.

This letter and thanks is about forty years late, but, as the old saying goes "Better late than."

Thank you very much, Mr. Nunn.

that barely reached one hundred and prior classes were even smaller. Since later classes were four or five times larger, I guess our five percent turnout was all that could be expected. An Olde Guarde organization, however, has much to recommend it, both for the members and the College. I'm sure it will eventually become an active and important group. Although I recognized six or eight from other classes, in such a large crowd there was little chance to renew acquaintances.

I have just learned that W. H. "Bill" Hoskins '22, retired some months ago after fifty years practice of medicine. We will always remember him as a friendly, personable, popular upperclassman and wish him many happy years of retirement.

As usual I have nothing to report about other members of the class. It is clear the remaining few of us will continue to remain incommunicado which makes the office of class reporter clearly expendable. To those few who contributed an item from time to time, thanks for helping to keep the class from early extinction. It was always a pleasure to hear from you. So with a bit of sadness and regret I bid a friendly adieu. May a kind Fate hold for each of you many more years of good health and contentment.

Members of the Class of '24 and other members of the Olde Guarde who do not have specific class reporters are encouraged to send their news to Frankie Martens at the Alumni Office to be published in the Olde Guarde section of the Class Notes.

I should report to you at this time news that I picked up at the Homecoming related to our class. However, only four of our class registered: Blanton Bruner, "Lap" Ferratt, Jackson Davis, and Stanley King. Regrettably, I cannot assume a virtuous stance and lecture you for not showing since neither Wilhemina nor I was present. What was your excuse, inertia, change of dates, or the cost of the Alumni dinner?

In my own case, I was on a presumed educational jaunt. It had been decreed that my lack of firsthand knowledge of the great West was ridiculous and that 1981 was the year of change. Actually, I had already made two brief sorties across the Mississippi. Each ended in matrimony. Therefore, with some understandable concern on my part, we left Kennett Square September 15 and, after 5200 miles via Yellowstone, the Tetons, and the Grand Canyon, arrived at our winter quarters, Denton, Texas, October 9. After that jaunt, nothing, not even the Homecoming, could get me back into that automobile!

Yes, I do feel more knowledgeable regarding the West. Not educated, but knowledgeable. I felt quite stupid on learning in Salt Lake that Denver was to the east of me. I also would like to know more about the origin of the coal in those long trains moving out of the area. There was a time when I thought coal was carried only by the C & O and the N & W. Remember the eerie sound on cold winter nights when the coal trains enroute to Newport News would whistle for the Toano crossing.

It is a magnificent country, awesome, with impressive scenic views. Being somewhat obtuse, I was fascinated more by the miles and miles of range and agricultural land thinking of the people who had lived in those isolated homes before modern conveniences were available. What a rugged lot they must have been.

However, not all was lost by my failure to attend the Homecoming as letters were received from our stalwart correspondents Hilda Stephenson Woodall, Tom Lawford, M.D., and J.D. (Pat) Murphy. Pat was tripped by a health problem, but apparently is doing well now as he challenged me to bring my clubs to Cincinnati next spring. Hilda and Tom remain the avid gardeners. Hilda goes one step further than Tom and devises new recipes utilizing her garden produce. She is an authority on uses of zucchini.

There was a noticeable thawing in the writing attitudes of the Class of '26 during the past year. Please encourage that in 1982. Reach for a pen now as you read this and "let me have it."

Was there a little extra moisture in your eyes, too, at Christmas time, on hearing the telecast of the William and Mary -- the College of -- choir and chorus? And especially with their rendition of the William and Mary hymn?

It was that he-man, Teddy Roosevelt, who said that a man was not a man could he not produce a sentimental tear on occasion, or something to that effect.

To add to their repertoire, beautiful as it is, is there not among us, an adapter (adaptor), who could arrange, as did Musician Scott a few years ago, a segment from Mozart which Scott titled "An 18th Century Drawing Room"? A few simple words, the fewer the better, including "William and Mary-ee, we sing our love for thee," or something more appropriate, would be effective. Some months ago I sent to the College a record and perhaps the sheet of the Scott music. Arranged, copyright permit, if needed, it could be a '28 class contribution to enliven the ballrooms and other places and occasions to add to the spirit of William and Mary, and appropriate to its origins.

Thanks to E. Carlton Macon, we have a good report on classmates attending the Homecoming, he and "Suey" Eason and "Meb" Davis remembering, watching the Harvard football game, other days and other close scores.

What a joy for all of us to hear from Laura S. Whitehead Young! We had heard that she was an international authority in the field of hand binding and conservation of books and now the well known house of R. R. Bowker announces her book of expertise to share with others. How welcome her contribution and her book, BOOKBINDING AND CONSERVATION, A WORKING GUIDE, will be in every rare and valuable library. Say the publishers; "Clear illustrations and step-by-step instructions by a widely recognized authority makes this the most comprehensive book on the subject in print--and the first English language treatment of the excellent bookbinding principles of the German school. Recommended for librarians, book collectors and craftspersons."

(237 pp. $35.00. Can be ordered from Talas, 130 Fifth Avenue, New York 10011.)

So much for now re Laura's book. I hope to develop a fuller story about this charmer who came to us from Chatham and do a review or two for the news media.

ALUMNUS ELECTED LT. GOVERNOR

Richard J. Davis '42 (right), former mayor of Portsmouth and a former trustee of the Endowment Association of the College of William and Mary, Inc., was sworn in as the new lieutenant governor of Virginia in January by the Honorable Albert S. Harrison, former governor and a justice of the Supreme Court of the Commonwealth of Virginia.

with 15 members each. In all, there were 72 Olde Guarde members recorded. Frankie Martens thoughtfully sent the list.

Did you scan (a word that has double and contrary meanings) the picture of the assembled Olde Guarde? Where were the coeds of yesteryear?

George Robert Whitley and Mrs. Whitley were faithfully there, having returned from "Down Under" this time. Just a few months ago they were up near the North Pole. The Whitleys may have reservations of the space shuttle. Bob says there is nothing he enjoys more, however, than Homecoming and the events at Alma Mater.

Class President William G. Thompson and Mary (adding further charm) were the usual fine hosts at the Lodge at the cocktail gathering.

Up for the occasion, in person and in health, registering were also Logan Hudson of Hampton; Miriam Silberger Goodman of Washington; Mary Land Gill of Petersburg; Eliza Hunter Trainham of Newport News; Virginia Vaiden Bowen of Williamsburg; Edwin L. Lamberth of Norfolk; M. H. Omohundro of Richmond; H. Clyde Smith of Hampton; Chrystal A. Phillips of Gloucester; Thomas "Tommy" C. Burke all the way from Cleveland; and the aforementioned M.C. "Meb" Davis of Richmond; the Thompsons of Virginia Beach, Macon of Norfolk, the Whitleys of Falls Church; and J. M. Eason of Hampton, or at least Carlton reported "Suey," but maybe he didn't register, or Carlton mistook his legendary baseball shirt in the Alumni House as having the old game winner still in it.

Certainly he is there in spirit, as are all of us, and let's count him, for that makes 16, the record Olde Guarde class. And didn't I spot Bill Bolton in the picture?

"Suey" comes across with news and lore of the Indians just as he came across the home plate and goal line and there will be more interesting reading, if I can do it justice.

The Class, once at the top of the list of fund contributors, nowadays has to compete with larger and later classes but still does well. Dorothy Broughton Brennan of Portsmouth sets an example. Dot retired from the post of Deputy Commissioner of the Revenue in Portsmouth in 1975 before which she taught school. Popular for her personality and proficiency, she is in much demand for leadership in civic and cultural activities.

We have a watercolorist among us: Warren H. Russell, now living in Arlington. He also enjoys reading as well as some travel, but perhaps not as much as his classmate and neighbor, "Buck" Whitley, but he keeps in touch even if he doesn't "keep up" with our world girdler. Several months ago I had a postcard from the Whitleys and it bears a stamp from Ulan Bator, Mongolia, where they helped the country celebrate its 60th anniversary. The mail service, via the Trans-Siberia, was excellent, giving some hope for postal efficiency in this country, in time to come.

And here's another interesting contribution from Arlington, from Elizabeth A. Glenn Hartman, who, with her husband, had a legitimate excuse for not attending Homecoming. Who wouldn't choose to visit family and see a grandson play high school football? "His team (in Muncie, Indiana) was better than last year. They were in the playoffs but lost the semi-final. We attended every game, occasionally driving more than 100 miles each way, but it was rewarding . . . I tried talking him into coming to William and Mary but it is a bit far from home."

Who among us never have had that feeling?

After which new and to-be lifelong friends, . . . and another kind of Homecoming, at one's Alma Mater.

The Homecoming weekend in November was cool and crisp, beautiful autumn weather. The following members of the Class of '30 were present at the Olde Guarde luncheon: Ed Toone, Norris Halpern and Fay, Milton White, Ambrose Turner and Mary, Harvey Trevilian, Fay LeCompte, Sam Hurley, Mary Fleet, Eleanor Williamson James and Joe, Lucille Burke Smith and Armstrong, Frances Griffin Water, and Betty Lanier and Ed Trice and Bernice. We enjoyed the fine fellowship and the good food. We managed to have a word with most of our classmates, and, when asked for a comment, Lucille Burke Smith stated succinctly that she was not only glad to be there, but also she was "just glad 'to be'."

We were especially happy to see Milt White who unavoidably could not attend our 50th reunion. He has been very faithful in attendance during years past. "T" Dalton was there for the Homecoming festivities on Saturday. He has been a familiar figure at Homecoming for many years. Ed Toone had just returned from a visit to one of his children in Chesapeake, VA.

After retiring from E.A.C. Corporation in New Jersey, Harvey Trevilian came to Williamsburg to live in 1974 where he has been a financial consultant since then.

You will be delighted to learn that Ambrose Turner is doing fine after a heart attack last summer.

Milton White of Salisbury, MD recently retired from Commercial Design Co. He spends his winters in Hawaii and his summers in Ocean City, MD. Milton's daughter was a 1968 graduate of the College.

Norris Halpern is still actively engaged in law practice at Virginia Beach.

Eleanor Williamson James reported that Joe is recovering from a successful cataract operation in the late summer.

Sam Hurley is still active in real estate in Richmond, VA.

A Christmas card from Fay LeCompte and Cynthia announced that he was leaving December 28 for a tour of Egypt with the hope that he would not incur "the ancient Pharaoh's curse." Same old Pete -- who is also a great grandfather for the first time.

Rosalyn Webb Jenkins has been in the news this fall as an active member of the Wakefield, VA, Woman's Club. As a past president she was one of those instrumental in getting a highway marker erected near Wakefield in memory of Colonel Michael Blow, a Sussex County patriot during the American Revolution. Colonel Blow represented Sussex County in the House of Burgesses in 1775-76. He was also a delegate to the first Revolutionary Convention held in Williamsburg in 1774 after Governor Dunmore dissolved the House of Burgesses.

We welcomed a communication from Lois Lacy McGee. Lois reports that she has three children, ten grandchildren, and three great-grandsons. After forty years of volunteer work, Lois is now in real estate in Palm Beach, FL. She says, "In spite of the years and the gray hair, I feel like 40 -- a great life."

We learned via a Christmas card from Alice Proudman Cochran that she spent the holidays in California with her brother. She also had had a visit to her former home in Hampton, where she saw Bishop John Bentley, an alumnus and a former assistant to Dr. Goodwin at Bruton Parish during our student days. We recall that Bishop Bentley and his wife were very hospitable to the students of the College. We enjoyed many Sunday night suppers before an open fire in their home when we were freshmen.

We had an interesting note from Thomas A. Hart. Tom had a Fulbright Grant to teach educational administration and supervision at Rafael Landivar University in Guatemala City last year, which proved to be a challenging and interesting experience for him. After spending thirty years in government with U.S. Foreign Aid in Latin America, he is now volunteering to teach Spanish to elders who plan to travel in Latin America and Spain. Tom reports that retirement is good and that Seattle is a wonderful place to live.

A recent letter from Richard J. "Dick" Jones told about the celebration of his and Ruth's 45th wedding anniversary in October at the home of their older son in Summit, N.J. Their daughter who resides in Greensboro arranged for this and the members of the immediate family and the four grandchildren were present. Dick and Ruth also visited in New York City where they went to the World Trade Tower and a Broadway show. Dick reported that they had such an enjoyable experience at the 50th reunion that they are planning to be with us at the next Olde Guarde get-together in April.

We missed all of you who couldn't make our last Homecoming. We hope to see all of you next fall at the Olde Guarde annual meeting and luncheon on November 5, 1982 during Homecoming Weekend. In the meantime send some news about yourselves for the next issue. Best wishes for everything good in the year ahead.

Happy New Year to all of you. This is the year we have thought we wouldn't be here to enjoy. Please help us to make it the greatest of all. Don't forget to make plans to join us in Williamsburg on the weekend of May 15th and 16th.

Many plans are being made to make your visit as happy as possible -- you will receive a newsletter in February telling all of the plans for a great reunion. If you should miss the newsletter, please call the Alumni Office or one of our Reunion Committee members: Brooks George 804-355-2746; Lelia Ratcliff 804-282-4193; Russell Collins 804-596-4077; Janie Gilliam 804-542-5516; Mildred Layne 804-229-2555; Davis Y. Paschall 804-829-2672; Carlton Sundin 804-723-6464; Josephine Bradshaw 804-292-3265; or call our director, John W. Phillips 804-229-1693.

We will meet on January 30th. Please let us know if we can help in any way to make this a great event.

We have news of our classmate Caskie Stinnett, a prominent travel writer and editor. Caskie was installed as President of the Society of American Travel Writers in Bangkok on November 12, 1981. Caskie has authored four travel books and is a contributor to several national magazines. During his career he has been editor in chief of Holiday Magazine, Travel and Leisure, and executive director of Ladies Home Journal. He now resides in Boston, MA, and Brunswick, ME. We are looking forward to having Caskie with us in May.

A card from Mac Britton in Florida says he has not heard from me. I apologize for not making the "deadline" for the last Gazette. The excuse is the usual one -- busy. We have been away on several trips this fall. To Wisconsin, then to Kansas City in November to see our son James Leroy Bradshaw '66, inducted into the International College of Dentists. The first of December we were in New York for another dental meeting. With the office work, the Christmas rush, I failed to get the letter in. I promise to do better in '82. Please join me in making the 50th the best year ever!

We again have the privilege of starting a brand new year. I hope it will be a healthy, happy one for us all.

Some of you are finally starting to communicate--let's hear from more of you; your classmates are truly interested.

Joe Turner of Scottsville, Virginia wrote a newsy letter. He is a member of the very active Highland Alumni Chapter. They help in the annual Christmas tree-cutting at Ashlawn (home of James Monroe, donated to our alma mater a few years ago); at this time people are permitted to cut cedar trees, and in return they make a donation. His Chapter divides the proceeds with the Ashlawn Foundation and a local "Santa Fund." Sounds like a most worthy and rewarding enterprise. Recently Joe and wife, Dagmar, introduced two grandsons (10 and 12) to the colonial history of Williamsburg and Jamestown (future grads?). Joe heard from his former roommate of '34, Winfield S. Hammond. "Windy" wrote that he was retired from a Dupont subsidiary, and now follows migratory birds from Pearl River, N.J. to Naples, Fla., and back in summer.

Cecil Harper sends greetings and reports some sad news of classmates--Dr. Robert Vaughan Terrill of Richmond died in 1981; also he read in the Richmond newspaper 10 or so years ago of the death of Leighton Huske, Jr. (carried as "unlocated").

Clara Thompson Knight writes that they are in good health, travel some, do church and community volunteer work, and enjoy their families, who live nearby.

Had news that Margaret Brown Webber has been appointed by the Governor of Oregon to a 4-year term on the state Judicial Fitness Commission as one of 3 citizens representatives on the 9-member commission appointed by the governor. (The other members are 3 judges named by the Oregon Supreme Court, and 3 lawyers appointed by the Oregon State bar.) Margaret currently serves as a YMCA board member, and United Way conference panel member. She has worked with the Portland Junior Symphony Association, and is involved with her husband, William Webber, in Partners of America, a person-to-person program between Oregon and Costa Rica.

DR. KAROW HEADS HEALTH STAFF

Dr. Juliette S. Karow has been named permanent director of the Student Health Services at William and Mary. A member of the Student Health staff since 1974, Dr. Karow had been the acting director since May, 1981, when she succeeded Dr. Richard Cilley. She heads a staff of three full-time doctors, a pharmacist, a laboratory technician and eight registered nurses.

GAMAGE '72, SULLIVAN '66 JOIN ROBB STAFF

Two individuals closely associated with William and Mary have joined the staff of new Virginia Governor Charles S. Robb as special assistants to the Governor. Stewart H. Gamage '72, a member of the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni, has been named to head the Virginia liaison office in Washington and Timothy Sullivan '66, associate dean of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, will serve as Robb's executive assistant for policy and planning. A native of Norfolk, Ms. Gamage served as one of Robb's assistants while he was lieutenant governor and was the executive director of the National Alliance for Hydroelectric Energy in Washington. Sullivan served as a volunteer issues advisor during Robb's campaign for governor. He has been on the faculty of the law school since 1972.

Seventeen classmates attended the November Homecoming, many of whom came to the class business meeting. They were enthusiastic and supportive of the reunion plans in 1984. Our big job now is to try to contact everyone to encourage them to come, and to keep the donations coming in. To date 60 members have given $9,959! If we can keep this up, our class can truly make a worthwhile contribution to the college. There are 258 "unlocated" classmates. I'll list a few each time—perhaps someone will have some information: Frances Adams, Madeline Adams Jones, Mary Albertis Fancher, Luther Alderman, James Maurice Ammons, Bernice Anderson, Grace Armstrong, Myron Milton Aronovitz, Robert Gordon Ash, Spottswood Baptist, Reginald Barnes, Ragland Bruce Barrow, Jr., Morton H. Bauman, Rufus Bauman, Louis Chester Bekel, Francis Godwin Bell, Judith Birge, Harold V. Bishop, Richard Lee Blackwell, Edith Blom, Lucille Bosshardt, Joseph Nelson Boswell, Mary Crockett Bowen.

Did you know that upon request the Society of the Alumni will send postal cards explaining the proper use of our college's name — it is so often misused by the media. The College of William and Mary in Virginia was so designated by Royall Charter in 1693. The College of William and Mary is acceptable, but William and Mary College is totally incorrect. Let's help get it straight. . . and so long till next time.

Alec Dempster says he is just playing golf and travelling. He put 9000 miles on his old Chrysler, driving all the way to Banff and Pebble Beach. They drove home via New Orleans and the gulf coast. He thinks we have a great little country. He also made the Yugoslavia trip last year, but thought there were very few William and Mary alumni on it.

Esther Beebe Spengeman writes that after 38 years of employment at Montclair, N.J., State Teachers College, she retired in 1975. They are still living in their home town. She and her husband are life members of the Montclair Operetta Club and the Montclair Dramatic Club.

Florence Baker Silberstein says they are still enjoying their retirement home in Boulder, Colorado, at the foot of the Rockies. This fall they had a cruise on the Mediterranean, making stops at Greece, Italy, Turkey, Yugoslavia and Israel.

The following alumni of the class of '36 attended the 1981 Homecoming at the College of William and Mary. Those who signed in at homecoming are:

- Olivia Albertson Lyon — Colts Neck, N.J.
- John W. Bunting — Virginia Beach, Va.
- J.L. "Red" Kranke — Ocala, Fl.
- Mary Liz Allison Johnson — Syracuse, NY
- Dick & Fontaine Velz — Richmond, VA
- K. C. "Preacher" Franklin — Greensboro, NC
- Helen C. Rose — Williamsburg, VA
- Frances W. Kersey — Richmond, VA
- William J. Rhodes, Jr. — Richmond, VA
- Eleanor Hooker Boisseau — Richmond, Va

Dear Classmates,

Great news! Annabel Mitchell reports receiving a letter from Rodney Jones announcing his pledge of $500 to our Fiftieth Reunion Fund. Rod wrote that he makes the pledge "whether I am here in fact or surveying the situation from a greater vantage point. I'm thinking in terms of $10 a year, which fits my circumstances and I hope those of many others." We hope so, too, Rod, and our thanks. Annabel's address for you "many others" is: Mrs. Lee Mitchell, 2110 Foley Road, Havre de Grace, MD 21078.

From Herb Cobb in Franklin, Virginia: "I have nothing earth-shaking to report nor any great revelations. I have been in the general real estate business for nigh onto 30 years and have started to confine my activities a great deal, as I do just appraisal work now. I do concentrate on getting to the Outer Banks of North Carolina (Kill Devil Hills) every time I can and do a lot of saltwater fishing. One of my joys is fishing with Jo and Lou Plummer (who live close to me down there) and we talk William and Mary on many occasions. Every year or so Bud Methany is with them, too."

I've had no feedback from Homecoming, but a brief note in the early fall from Harvey Shuler mentioned that he was planning to be there. The Shulers sold their home in Birmingham, Michigan in one day! They now divide their time between Upper Peninsula of Michigan in the summer and Hilton Head, South Carolina, come winter. Sounds delightful!

Tom Cooke wrote requesting the whereabouts of George Anner. They both graduated from Matthew Whaley High School in Williamsburg and Tom is organizing a fiftieth reunion of the class of '34. I have a file of our class members and was happy to inform him that George now lives in Urbana, Illinois. Tom mentioned that he had attended William and Mary for only three semesters and "left to go to the Naval Academy--it cost much less!"

Jack Lemanski took time to catch us up with his recent activities: "This is the first time I have written in over three years. I did attend Homecoming in 1978 (my first and 40th!), met a few friends of our class and many from the class of '40. I knew more in the class of '40, as I was a transfer from California and, being a male, was more attracted to the younger girls. . . I took early retirement from McDonnell Douglas in Long Beach, California in 1977 and have lived in a mobile home park since then in Yucca Valley, which is about 30 miles N.E. of Palm Springs in what is known as the High Desert. Our altitude is a 3,500 feet. . . My wife died in October of 1979 and later I took a 14-day cruise through the Caribbean, including the Panama Canal, with a group of ten from our mobile home park. Very enjoyable. In October of 1980 I went to Guadalajara, Mexico, for an indefinite stay. I lasted only two weeks. It is just another big and noisy city. I did enjoy a weekend at Lake Chapala, the largest natural lake in Mexico. . . I have just returned from a week in Titusville, Florida, where my sister now lives. I saw most of the tourist attractions within 100 miles. Her husband is an engineer with Boeing, which made the trip to the Space Center most interesting, as he knew things about the space programs that the guides did not."

Several of you jotted notes about yourselves in the space provided on envelopes from the College and the notes were forwarded to me. Wonderful! Here they are: Leslie Potter says: "I recently retired as a sales executive after 40 years in the steamship field in New York. My wife, Helen, is an executive secretary on Wall Street. We have spent our vacations traveling in the British Isles, Europe and Egypt. My son, Leslie III, ex-basketball coach at St. Mary's College, and his wife both have double masters and are working on their doctorates. Both are principals in the Jacksonville, Florida, school system. We visited William and Mary last September and plan to go down again in the spring."

From Smithfield, Virginia Virginia Betts Chapman sent this message; "Since Joel's retirement we travel quite a bit. Florida and Pennsylvania are two of our favorite vacation sites. We enjoy our three grandchildren, two boys and a girl, who live close enough for us to see often. We are looking forward to the basketball season, as we attend most of the home games."

Gill Piquette retired from the Foreign Agricultural Service, USDA, as their Director of Equal Employment Opportunity in December, after 40 years. Congratulations and best wishes, Gill.

And, finally, Jane McEnally Randle wrote: "My husband Jay and I are enjoying our eighth year of retirement from public school education, living in Deltona, Florida. Our only son, Jay W. Randle, is an associate professor in the School of Architecture in American University of Beirut, Lebanon. His wife and infant son William are living in Beirut on campus with him. They just purchased and are renovating an old Greek building on Cyprus where they enjoy vacations. We may join them there this summer for a visit."

Keep those notes coming!

Believe it or not I'm writing this letter while in Key West on a short holiday/family visit with Frank. I'd hoped to have time before departing home January 5 to get this off but I was dreaming - so I brought along my trusty typewriter, letters, Christmas cards, etc. so here goes bringing you up to date. Incidentally, it was only 51° this morning, but I guess Irvington was considerably colder!

I received from the Alumni Office a list of all of us who returned for Homecoming in November. Considering this was not a special reunion year I think our members are significant: From California, Betty Carter Zable, "Pinky" Newton, and Elmo Legg. From Connecticut, Jack Purtil, "Jimmie" Elliott St. John, Mac Trotter from Texas, Charlie Roberts and Otto Boysen from New Jersey. Frank Yeager and Jane Brandt Wild from North Carolina, Shirley Griffin Allen and Louise Eppinger Nuernberger from Pennsylvania, and Dinny Forwood Wetter from Maryland. The rest of us hale from Virginia: Jack and Ann Garrett, Clarence Grogan, Anne Cross Pearce, Carolyn and Vince Lusardi, Virginia Garrett, Frances Wagener Read, and Frank and yours truly. Let me add that a fine time was had by all!

Ruth Doerschuk Dicker, residing in Santa Rosa, California (2969 Bennett Ridge Rd.) is one of whom we should be proud. After receiving her degree in Painting and History of Fine Arts from The College, she attended Art Students League in New York for two years and New York School of Fine and Applied Arts for one year. She has had One Woman Shows of her paintings in New York City and throughout California besides participating in Group Shows. She has many impressive Commissions to her credit, at home and abroad. Among numerous reviews of her paintings The New York Times describes her work: "Paintings that reveal a sound artist. . ."

Anne Munce Rome writes that both she and her husband are retired now and enjoying it more and more. They hope to get to Williamsburg before too many more years have gone by.

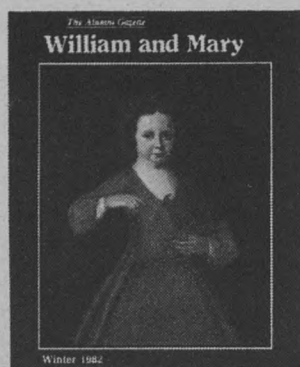

In October two members of our class were among the 20 alumni who went on the William and Mary English Countryside tour - Fran Read and Tommy Cartwright. Fran reported that it was a well planned tour and a great group, led by Dorothy Hammer '46. They dined at elegant country manor houses and enjoyed the beautiful Cotswold countryside in general. Tommy said he had a totally delightful time and it was one of the best trips he's ever taken. The end of January '82 he's going to take early retirement from Getty Oil Company so he'll be ready for more of those trips.

Received such a nice letter from Al Alley in late October after our last issue and I did so appreciate your thoughtfulness, Al. In May, Al had extensive surgery on his right hand to correct an arthritic condition - reconstructive surgery - and it was so successful he's going to have the left one done next year. Think it's wonderful you were back playing golf so soon.

"Casey's Chronicle," written by "Cookie" Cason, is a real delight and I, for one of your "public," was relieved that the new swimming pool of 1980 did in fact get filled! I'll bet you're not using it much this week tho (Jan. 12 today)! Cookie and Casey went to the Masters in April and on a ten-day boat trip with friends to the Keys. In September Casey took her to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands to celebrate their anniversary - all these activities squeezed in between visits from their many collective children!

Jean Clarahan Bratton wrote that gardening was interrupted in July by a wonderful trip to Italy and Switzerland - her first to those countries - and she thoroughly enjoyed them, especially the outdoor opera in Rome and a marvelous ballet performance in the courtyard of the Pitti Palace in Florence. "Something fun to remember back in quiet Emory."

Ginny Claudon Allen sent a delightful rhyme entitled, "The Parental Adventure or The Allen-Reynolds Wedding Saga" about their daughter, Pam, and all the activities surrounding the big event which took place in Minneapolis. The announcement we received was indeed addressed by a mighty skilled calligrapher - Frank thought we should frame it.

WINTER ISSUE PUBLISHED

The Winter Issue of the Alumni Gazette William and Mary Magazine has been published recently with articles by four College faculty members and two alumni. The lead story on "Saving America's Face," an article on historic preservation, is written by Fletcher L. Cox '48, Arlington, Va. Other articles are on ESP, law of the sea, the remaking of the Wren Building, the poet Swinburne and the decline of science. The magazine is sent to all alumni who make gifts to the College. If you would like to receive a copy, contact the Alumni House, Box GO, Williamsburg, Va. 23185.

I've discovered that the card from Rosa Ellis Long is missing from my things so shall report her bit of news in the next letter. My apologies, Rosa.

We'll be heading for home the first of the week and do hope we don't get a real cold welcome. Please keep me posted on your activities. If I can get this letter off on my holiday, so can you get something off to me!! How 'bout that?

Roy Merritt has to be my most faithful news sender, and will pass it along verbatim. "Retired after 35 years of teaching. In 1982 Mary and I will celebrate our 40th wedding anniversary. We met when she and Hatchie McCarthy sat at my table in the main dining room; I was a waiter for 4 years, and I chased her until she caught me. I play golf all summer, tennis all winter -- do freelance writing all year. Write poetry for 'special occasions,' occasionally for a small business. Am working on an historical novel for adolescents now. Mary and 4 kids are all well. Mary is a volunteer at N.E. Deaconess Hospital and is on the Board. Why don't some other class members write? Love to hear about them." Amen to that, Roy.

Doris Berg-Johnsen Kuhl writes that she and Carl had a wonderful get-together last summer with Jane Alden Malinasky, her husband Malo, Doris Smith, Mae Ervin Rossini and her husband Marty. How amazing that no one seems to age. She looks forward to meeting other W&M Episcopals at General Convention in New Orleans next September. Or was that last September?

Eleanor N. Dudley writes that they had a fantastic trip to Colorado last fall visiting their son and his family. Her daughter just received her Master's degree, and the other son is halfway around the world in Korea.

Registering at the 1981 Homecoming were Margaret Kelly Dunham, Gerald Rose, Tom Crane, Bill West, Bob Taylor, Dot Hagshire Harper, Regina Williams, Terry Teal Crutchfield, Charlotte Mooers Stevens, Dorothy Land, Clara and Joe Brichter, Foster Jennings, Bill Goodlow, and Marion Macon. Margaret Dunham reports that Regina Williams and Don Griffin agreed to help with our 40th Reunion plans. She also reported seeing friends from the class of '41: Peg Averill Sterregaard and husband Paul, Dottie Whitfield, Mary Darragh Allerton and husband Dick, and Irma Luxton Nelson and daughter. Margaret's daughter Amy was with her for Saturday's activities. She is willing to help with our 40th but will not be in Williamsburg during the summer months. She goes to Cape Cod from June to September. Let's hope for a bigger and better reunion for our 40th.

Christmas was more meaningful to us this year with the arrival of our first grandchild Leslie. Two of our daughters made it home for the holidays. Irv has had to give up his teaching, as two trips to the hospital this fall and failing health won't permit his carrying that load any longer.

Now that our class must be reaching retirement age, and possibly traveling more, we would love to welcome any of you to Southern California. It's a beautiful area.

After living in Chatham and Madison, N.J., for twenty-five years, a corporation move out of New York City brought us to the mid-west last year. My husband doesn't miss the crush of being a metropolitan commuter and I do miss metropolitan art world! Before becoming too involved with local activities, I look forward to working with the Alumni office and the Newsletter. Though I graduated with a later class (I could SOUND younger than you!) I left my affiliation with the stunning class of '44.

In the fall, the following classmates and their spouses registered at Homecoming: Dorothy Agurk Edmunds, Jean Boyd Lacy, Don Ream, Bill and Gloria Morgan Abbotts, Bill and Jane Spencer Smith, Ann Read Jones, John and Marilyn Miller Entwistle, Rolf and Sunny Trumbo Williams, Wayne and Marge Retzke Gibbs, Harvey and Ann Pope and Winfred E. Jester. Those of us who couldn't attend wish that we could have, particularly to extend to Marilyn and John our appreciation for the absolutely superb effort they made to the William and Mary Fund last year. Certainly they must have been put at the front of the parade.

Prickett Carter Saunders wrote at Christmas that she and her husband, Jim, made the westward move also and were transferred from Pensacola to St. Louis in May. In addition to being avid antique collectors, they have raised four sons, one of whom is a lawyer. Their youngest will graduate from Vanderbilt in the spring and is contemplating law school. This has a familiar ring. Our son is an attorney and our daughter is in law school. A litigious group.

Jean Bulette Boggs and her husband, Larry, are traveling this month to the Republic of South Africa, Zimbabwe, Kenya, the Seychelle Islands, Tanzania and Egypt. They will stop in Geneva on their return to visit one of their sons who works with the World Council of Churches.

Jean Lockridge Quin writes that at Christmas their home in Atlanta was filled with family and friends. Lockie's oldest son, Langdon, III, received a Fulbright scholarship and studied in Florence. He is married and teaching at Yale. Last year an announcement arrived describing a one-man show of his paintings at a Manhattan So-Ho gallery. Joining our growing legion of grandparents, Lockie and Langdon will celebrate Lethea Whitney Quin's first birthday in February.

Samuel Laibstain joined the Rider College faculty this year as a professor of accounting after serving in a similar position in the Temple University accounting department for nine years. Sam is a specialist in financial reporting. He earned his M.B.A. in accounting from the University of Pennsylvania in 1947 and his Ph.D. in accounting and finances from New York University in 1966.

Bea Nelson Judge and Ed, '45, were our next door neighbors in Madison for years. They are landscape gardeners par excellence. Bea has been active in early childhood education and community and church work. Ed is a stalwart member of the Maplewood Men's Glee Club and collects marvelous decoys made by woodcarvers from the Eastern Shore. Ted, their son, graduated from Stanford and their daughters, Meg and Muf, have finished their degrees and now live and work near Ted in California.

During a visit to the Homestead in the fall, we had a delightful visit and lunch with James and Ann Edwards Harnsberger. Jim is Medical Director there and we enjoyed reports of their recent journey to Brazil, their nearby farm in those beautiful rolling hills and their summer property in and near Kilmarnock, Va. They have a penchant for rehabilitating and restoring old houses. To attend this, Jim has had to surrender time from his sailboat and Ann frequently commutes from Warm Springs to the shore inspecting the progress of their latest project.

Elizabeth Johnson Winters '45 has been active as a board member of California's much heralded Bach Festival and president of Stanford University's Monterey Peninsula Alumni Chapter. She returned to Williamsburg several years ago and attended our Alumni College. Betty was my hostess last summer at her home on the ninth hole of Carmel's beautiful golf course. Call ahead, golfers!

Barbara Gray Macondrey has such business and fashion expertise. She wrote from Sausalito about having another shop and this one she named after its owner!

It is a snowy mid-January day as I sit before the wood fireplace insert going full blast. Memories of Homecoming '81, our big 35th - a spectacular event - are very much on my mind. Over fifty class members signed the register at the Alumni House, a really excellent group, not to mention the numerous spouses and other family members enhancing our number. For those of you unable to join us - we missed you! From Hawaii, Arizona, Minnesota, Georgia and Florida, we gathered, as well as many from closer points. The itinerary was full with many options, each one enjoyed. Our entry in the parade was a first for a reunion class, and to win a prize was the crowning point. To you readers who caught the error in the December Alumni Gazette - you were right - it was a '52 Chevrolet not a '46! It was truly a "Sentimental Journey."

Nancy Grube Williams heartily endorsed this float endeavor and we appreciate her efforts. In addition to Grubie's antics, Daphne Andrews Crum was seated on a bale of straw, evening dress and a bouquet of nandina branches in evidence, under a sign reading "I Waited 35 years to be Homecoming Queen." Pam Pauly Chinnis was dressed in raincoat, boots and babushka - proper attire for the rainy Williamsburg weather we remember. Tommy Smith occupied a spot of distinction, representing our small male contingent and wearing a vintage freshman beanie. I rocked in a borrowed antique rocker with a sign "Don't Get Around Much Anymore," - not true!

Pam stated in our Colonial Re-Echo that her current occupation is professional volunteer. In her work with the Episcopal Church, she has travelled to Japan, India, England

TATE, FRASER WIN NEH AWARDS

Two William and Mary professors have been awarded National Endowment for the Humanities Fellowships for the 1982-83 academic year. Thad Tate, director of the Institute of Early American History and Culture and professor of history, has won a Fellowship for Independent Study and Research, and Howard Fraser, associate professor of modern languages and literatures, has been awarded a Fellowship for College Teachers. They were among 126 recipients from nearly 1100 scholars who applied for the awards.

and Canada. Pam was responsible for our Hospitality room at the Brickhouse Tavern and she fulfilled this obligation most ably.

The tables at our Saturday dinner dance were adorned with orchids brought from Hawaii. Our thanks go to Ann Davison, an executive and corporate secretary for the Trade Wind Tours, Inc. Ann also serves as a volunteer telephone specialist with the Suicide Crisis Center hotline in Honolulu.

Allison and I had the good fortune to have Doris Brandt Bauer, husband George and Virginia Ratcliffe spend the week-end with us at our cottage on the James. Doris is still teaching, but looking forward to future full time personal art involvement in Baltimore and Rehoboth Beach, Del.

Lucille Burbank Carlton retired in August 1980 as a high school librarian in Burke, Va. She was also an associate professor of Library Science and children's literature in Northern Virginia area and universities. Since her retirement, she has travelled extensively.

Frances Buttler Parsons is a docent at St. Petersburg, Fl. Museum of Fine Arts. Fran finds time for golf and some travelling.

Jan Freer Scantlebury operates an herb shop in the Carriage House at Belle Meade Mansion in Nashville, Tn. She also lectures, wholesales her products to other shops and is in the mail-order business.

News from Thomas and Keith Anne Gamble Duncan in Coraopolis, Pa. saying their son, class of '74, had married another William and Mary alumna in August - "just to keep the family consistent." They would have joined us had Tom not taken ill in August. Trust you are on the mend now.

Susan Claypool Vukich had travel plans to the east coast from Washington, but unfortunately they did not coincide with Homecoming dates. Already, she is counting on the 40th and exposing her husband to our part of the country. Others who sent their regrets were Ellen Irvin Newberry, Henrietta Kapler Margraf, Sally Reik Despard, and Catherine Mitchell Holladay. Tas continues to write and had just had something accepted by a men's magazine (the italics was her idea).

Beverly W. Lewis is in his 24th year at NASA, Langley Research Center and is currently doing research in the chemistry of clouds. He has two daughters at the college now, a junior and a freshman.

An active participant in many of the activities at the college is Allen Tanner, a CPA and attorney in Newport News.

Many past acquaintances drop by the Port Haywood Market, in Port Haywood, Va., giving Gene Carr Dent a chance to renew friendships. Gene said that people are her hobby.

Enough ramblings - as you can gather, the event was most successful. It was wonderful having such a good crowd and a chance to learn some news. Please keep me in mind in the future with an occasional line on your activities. I'm still at the same address and always eager to hear from each of you.

EWELL PUBLISHES BOOK

Judith Ewell, associate professor of history at William and Mary, is the author of a new book on the extradition and trial of dictator Marcos Peres Jimenez of Venezuela. Entitled "The Indictment of a Dictator," the book is based on research in the U.S. Court records and the archives of the Venezuelan Supreme court as well as on other sources associated with Venezuela, where Ewell taught as a Fulbright scholar in 1979-80.

HUGH SEIDMAN NAMED WRITER-IN-RESIDENCE

Hugh Seidman, a lyric poet whose writings are included in twenty anthologies, is the Writer-In-Residence at William and Mary for the spring semester. Seidman has had over 75 poems published in magazines and periodicals. His latest book, published this year by Random House, is entitled "Thorne/Falcon/ Eye."

"enjoyed a few good times with Herb Chandler, Jim Sutherland, Bob Adams, Ben Hamel, Jim Vicars, Bob Chandler, Ray O'Connor, Doc Spears, Tully Wright, Bill Lucas, Emmett Reagan, Eddie King, Harrison Tyler, and -of course- 'the king of the bass voice' - Dennis Cogle and his accompanist Dr. Harry Cox." The spouses of the above, no doubt, will be homecoming great for all of the above, which Corky forgets to mention!

Bill and I shared a suite with Henry '47 Shook and Phyllis Struse ("Shu") Shook at the Lodge. We had a wonderful time on this mini-vacation . . . and nostalgically wishes for all of you out there that didn't come.

For example, Jim Bray should have gone - and his twin brother Ben. Jim continues as a national authority on gifted education. Jim, a Professor of Education at Salem College, Winston-Salem, North Carolina, is Director of the North Carolina Governor's School. He has acted as consultant with the states of North Carolina, Kentucky, Louisiana, Illinois, Michigan, and others.

Bill and I and Henry and Shu enjoyed sharing a hospitality room at the Lodge with the Bill Thompsons, Gordon Campbell and a large contingent of "Old Grads" from the Norfolk area. Among these from Irvington, Virginia were Ted and Emil Johnson accompanied by all their children and grandchildren from Dallas - a real family reunion, William and Mary style!

We are already planning our 35th reunion. All of you '48ers should plan the really big one in 1983.

which she uses to help Bill '51 who is in real estate.

After ten years as president of the Va. Independent Telephone Association, Ed Fitzgerald is now president and general manager of People's Mutual Telephone Company of Gretna and chairman of the Pittsylvania County School Board. Formerly Ed served on the Gretna Town Council for almost twenty years as well as serving on the Danville Community College Board for ten years. Ed and his wife Emily have two children, Edmond and Ann '79.

Having studied at George Washington University and the Cleveland Institute of Music Joanne Jonscher Scofield teaches piano to forty students in her home. Outside of teaching, her major interest is the Lake Erie Nature Center where injured animals are rehabilitated for return to the wild. Her husband Charles is publisher of the magazine Forging Topics. He is also a member of the Cleveland Yachting Club and of the American Society of Association Executives. The Scofields were recently in London where Charles was a delegate to the International Drop Forging Conference. Joanne and Charles are the parents of Charles and Sharon.

George Conwell writes that he is the father of Kathy, Bonnie, and Linda, and the grandfather of Christopher Nelson Harris, son of Linda '79.

Also in the proud grandparent department is Pat Jones Warner whose granddaughter Emily arrived in July.

also co-owner of the Wooden Indian, a coffee house and craft shoppe at Rehoboth Beach. By the time we finished a lengthy, newsy, and animated conversation of reminiscences Roy's skepticism changed to enthusiasm about the 30th reunion. Following our committee's meeting everyone made a beeline to Duke of Gloucester Street where the Homecoming Parade was due to begin. Among parade watchers I easily spotted Bob and Camie Spotts Gilbert, who live in New England. He is the business manager of a private school where Camie teaches. Donnie '53, Camie's sister, teaches in the Lakewood, Ohio school system. She has a daughter at Juilliard School of Music and two daughters at home. The Gilberts also told me that Hilda Beck Sherman and Ray '51 have moved recently to a new subdivision, Kingsmill, in Williamsburg. Other parade watchers were Charlotte Walker Hill and Burt '51, and Vi Marsland Raymond and Walt, '51 with their attractive daughter, a freshman at The College. At lunch on the lawn I visited with Phil Denman and wife, Jane, whom he met at the Norfolk campus of The College in '58. They live in Virginia Beach where Phil is a lawyer. Phil graduated from Marshall Wythe Law School. Denmans have three children: a daughter at Randolph Macon Womens College, a son in a community college, and a senior in high school at home. According to the Alumni Office records other classmates attending Homecoming were: Bernie and Darrell High, '53, Wittkamp Joe and Eloise, '53, Agee, Bobbe Lamont Redding and Chuck, '51, Bob Landon from Farragut, TN and Jim Duff. Sorry to have missed you.

Responding to the news forms in the Alumni Gazette and on the contribution envelope were Marcia McClellan Eliff and Ann Beattie Recknor. Marcia, John and family have moved from their twenty-one year residence in Annandale, Va. to a new home in Marshall, Va. John and his two sons built the home. What a feat! Daughter Karen attends V.P.I. Congratulations to Ann Beattie Recknor, who trained for and ran in the Baltimore, Md. marathon. The Recknors live in Baltimore and have two daughters attending Johns Hopkins University. One daughter graduated summa cum laude from Notre Dame of Maryland in June. Congratulations also are due to William D. Beard of Portsmouth, Va. He has been promoted to manager of an expanded Eastern division of Virginia Federal Savings and Loan Association, the state's largest thrift institution. William continues as executive vice president of the division which has added the Williamsburg office.

Christmas mail started arriving in October! The early greeters were Dottie Urban Wright and Bill, '50, who were leaving the states to work at the Albert Schweitzer Hospital in Haiti again for the entire month of November. Son Stephen is studying for a Masters degree in Counseling, David is attending the University of Arizona in a Ph.D. program. Julie is modeling in Paris and continuing ballet study, and Susan is a freshman at Princeton. Ron and Betsy Skinker, '53, Barnes' travels were highlighted this year by a trip to Maui and South Island, New Zealand. They are homeland hunting in Prescott, Arizona where they plan to retire eventually. Son Tim attends Arizona State University and plays tournament tennis. Ron gets a lot of practice of the Alumni Tennis Tournament playing tennis with his son. Ron played in the Tournament in 1980, and I'm sure he will this year. Joan Burgess Burgess and George sent a clever, photo letter via "myrt," their dog. Joan and George attended President Reagan's inauguration and a daughter's wedding in California last year. Their son will soon be teaching at the Air Force Academy. Ella Jean Shore surprised me with a phone call last spring, and followed up our visit with a Christmas card telling of her Canadian vacation last summer. She plays a lot of golf when not on business with the Nursing School at Duke University. Bring your golf clubs to Williamsburg next fall, Ella Jean, and all of you golfers. Bobbe Lamont Redding and Chuck, '51, attended the Yorktown Bicentennial and described it as "living history at its best." Carolyn (Andy) Anderson Beimdick amazes me with her annual, original, block printed Christmas cards. I tried that once and it is a tedious task. I hope she has kept a collection of her artistic, inspiring and personal Christmas cards. Carolyn has joined the ranks of the part time employed. She works as a psychiatric occupational therapist at the Missouri Baptist Hospital in St. Louis. Offspring Bev is a junior at Vanderbilt, Lynn is a sophomore at DePauw, Karen is a high school cheerleader, and Steve graduated from Tulane in June and is gainfully employed. Doug and Jill Bento Ryder showed off their combined family of ten offspring posed beside a luxurious 40 foot sloop in a California marina (Is the boat yours, Doug?) with a sign, "Better to be Rich and Healthy than Poor and Sick." Doug's humor has not changed. He has offered his talent for Homecoming. Dare we accept? The family news for "those with insatiable curiosities" is interesting and entertaining, the offsprings' ages being 11-25. Shirley (Rusty) Davis Schumacher and Hazen sent greetings printed on the attractive background of a lovely, original, Japanese, brush painting of Shirley's. Maybe we should have an art show displaying the many artistic talents of our classmates.

Jerry Bruce, '80, and I had the pleasure of visiting June Compton Merkle and Jim in their lovely Roswell (suburb of Atlanta), Ga. home last fall. We met their two lively teenagers, Robert, and Emily, an award winning cheerleader in Ga. Their two older sons work in Florida. June and Jim should be good competition in the Alumni Tennis Tournament, as they play tennis regularly. They also enjoy many weekends and a month in the summer at their North Carolina mountain home. While we were at Merkle's, Jerry called Bob Sessions, who lives in nearby Marietta, Ga. Unfortunately our visit to our son in Atlanta was too brief to include a personal visit with Bob and his family. Bob is still very involved with the Rolls Royce Club of America and is a thoracic surgeon.

Thanks for all of the news. We need more. Please volunteer to be a contact person for one of the college groups to which you belonged. This will be just for Homecoming '82. Also send names to me of classmates who are "lost" or "missing" and we will send out an S.O.S. for them. Mark your calendar now for your special weekend, Nov. 6-8, 1982!

"It's like looking through a 30 year fog!" exclaimed Jackie Jones Myers as she scrutinized the faces of Lin and Gwen '51 Perkins, Fred Allen, Claudia Richmond Harman, Mary K. Langan Flegler, Alice Williams Phillips and me as we sat at our reunion planning breakfast at the Williamsburg Lodge. We laughed, briefly, and proceeded to have a difficult time getting down to business. Jackie's and Mary K.'s husbands were being good natured and patient as we reminisced good ole memories. We DID get serious long enough to start excellent plans for your 30th Reunion, Nov. 6-8, 1982. Details will be forthcoming in a separate letter to you, but, meanwhile we urge you to start making your own reservation for lodging at the Hospitality House on Richmond Road. Alice, Lin and Fred have arranged a suite of rooms there to be open throughout the weekend as a class headquarters.

As I headed to 1981 Homecoming I stopped in Arlington and started my personal sleuthing for class news. Imagine the bewilderment on Roy Anderson's face as he walked out of his classroom at Washington-Lee High School (my alma mater) smack into a stranger claiming to have known him 29 years ago. I have changed in looks considerably more than he has, remember the 30 year fog; but, then I learned that he is two years my junior. Roy, the chairman of the Art Department, has taught art at Washington-Lee H.S. for 25 years following a four year stint in the Army after graduation. He is

SANDY KELLY SCHOLARSHIP WINNERS NAMED

Three sophomores, who hold down top spots on the William and Mary tennis team, have been named recipients of the James S. Kelly Jr. '77, Tennis Scholarship for 1982. Head tennis coach Steve Haynie announced that George Foreman of Richmond, H. Gordon Diamond of Manlius, N.Y., and Bruce Phillips of Cranston, R.I., have been awarded the scholarship which is named for the late Sandy Kelly, a former William and Mary varsity player who died in 1977. Kelly's father is James S. Kelly '51, former executive secretary of the Society of the Alumni and currently assistant to the President at the College. The Scholarship has been awarded annually since 1979.

though it's not our reunion year. Several classes are working on just such a plan. The ones who have done it have a great time. Why don't we?

Bob Tyson is Judge of the Circuit Court in Fort Lauderdale, Florida. He has been in this position for fourteen years, serving in all the divisions of the bench -- criminal, civil, general and probate. He and his wife have three children. The eldest, Chris, is at Western Carolina University. They have two daughters also, Tracy and Robin.

Every summer the Tyson family vacations in North Carolina, and two years ago Bob got as far north as Williamsburg and stopped at the Alumni Office.

Bob says he sees Al Fitzgerald '51, occasionally; he too, lives in the Fort Lauderdale area.

What's funny is we've heard from another Floridian recently. Chick Cornell has been living in the very same area for the last nine years. Both Bob and Chick say they see William and Mary folks from up north fairly often as they head south to escape the cold.

Chick and his wife, Judy, have four children, two daughters and two sons. The boys are both big surfers; Daryl is a freshman at Florida Institute of Technology. David's a junior in high school. The girls are younger, and one hopes to come to the College someday.

Chick had a nice experience representing the College at University of Miami's inauguration of its fourth president.

Jack Timmis '53, and Chic McNally '53, both come down for winter visits.

Carol Myers (Mifflin) is a grandmother by now. Oldest son, Ken, is the father; he finished an M.B.A. at University of Chicago, and is now living in Cincinnati, working with Proctor and Gamble. Another son is working toward a doctorate at Princeton. The two younger children are in high school. One of them, Laura, spent ten weeks in Johannesburg, South Africa last summer.

Rene Henry has hit the beach. He is semi-retired from ICPR in Los Angeles, consulting for ICPR and some of his old clients, working on a couple of TV series, authoring several books on real estate and marketing. In between he sails, works on his Southern California tan, and claims he's in good health.

An editorial comment: The Class of '56 has matured very gracefully. That observation was repeatedly confirmed as one class member after the other circulated through Homecoming activities. Congratulations, everyone.

The Alumni office forwarded the announcement from Henry P. Kaplan, M.D., about the opening of his new office for the practice of Health Law.

There was no time during Homecoming to rejoice with Bud Leeds over his appointment as Director of Development for Middleburg College (Vermont). It sounds like quite a challenge.

It was fun to see Aubrey and Sally ('57) Fitzgerald again. Aubrey listed his interests as skiing and politics. He's completing 10 years on the Newport News City Council, which included two years as Vice Mayor. As if all that weren't enough, he has recently been appointed to the Christopher Newport College Board of Visitors.

VAUGHAN HONORED AS SPORTSMAN OF YEAR

R. Beverly Vaughan '61, athletic director and former head basketball coach at Christopher Newport College in Newport News, has been named the Man of the Year in Sports by the Peninsula Sports Club of Virginia. A second-team all-Southern Conference forward at William and Mary, Vaughan had a 12-year coaching record at CNC of 204 wins and 127 losses before he retired from coaching to become CNC's first full-time athletic director. Vaughan was honored for his contributions to the community and to athletics.

Although listed as one of the missing, Victoria Stone Velsey was very much among those present for the reunion. She has two sons: Jonathan, 15, and Peter, 12, both of whom accompanied Vickie and her architect husband, Don. Thank you for your lovely letter,

Also listed as missing was Joyce Ann Corbett Koch. Courtesy of Alice Glover Glasser, we now know that Joyce Anne is living in Springfield, Va., after 21 years in New Jersey. Her two older children are in college and the youngest son is almost through high school.

Paulette Vates Grove looked marvelous. She reports that son, Stephen, is a freshman at Cornell University Law School. Her other two, David and Kathryn, are at the Binghamton School of Management as a junior and freshman, respectively.

Anne Pope Kitchen had planned to be with us for at least part of the weekend, but she and Roger got tangled in a mixed up ferry schedule. All they got was half of the ballgame and thoroughly chilled. We'll have to try again when it gets warmer. Maybe Virginia "Ginny" von Breitenfeld and Dave Ferre will join us, along with Barbara Lynn Wheeler.

Joy Schlaprizzi Thunstrom didn't make it down, as she and Len were probably still recovering from daughter Karen's wedding.

Also absent, Diana "Dee" Beeton. However, a nice note arrived shortly thereafter. Busy Dee has just started a new job with a film production company as Assistant to the Executive Producer. Great to hear from you.

Rinda Grubbs and Bob Rogers were a joy to behold over the weekend. They're a handsome couple. Rin asked the blessing at the class dinner Saturday evening, which moved several of us close to tears, as the message came from her heart to ours.

Dr. Louis "Bud" Fisher forwarded a scholarly review of his latest book, The Politics of Shared Power: Congress and the Executive (Congressional Quarterly, 231 p.). The review opens by saying the book "shows Fisher at his best: clear, orderly, commonsensical, drawing on extensive resources in constitutional law, political history, administrative behavior. Congressional practice and procedure and political reality to produce a book that is convincing and valuable."

There were so many friendly faces. Lance and Jan Mason Trusty were there. Said howdy to Anne Monroe and Roy Long, as well as John and Nancy Harshbarger Hummel. Carolyn "Subie" Guess got there all the way from Alaska. Also junketing from the far west, Dr. Stewart and Pat Sell, La Jolla, California. Rob Swearingen came in from San Clemente, CA. Mario Pena circulated among the group.

Had dinner Friday evening with Andy Thuander Miles and her pretty daughter. Eloise "Skooky" Gideon Collins, Jean Wycoff Gwaltney, Champe Summerson Hyatt and Sally Ives Gore were all there, each looked like a million dollars. It was especially good to see Ed and Pat Hill, Bob and Norma Gibbons.

There were a great many more chums to greet. We'll mention them in a later column. To wrap this up, a tip of the beanie to Alice Jordan Viessmann, for her organization of our hospitality suite throughout the weekend.

New Year's greetings from the Class of '58.

Melissa Smith Fitzgerald wrote before leaving for Embassy duty in Papua, New Guinea. Pat is assigned there for one or two years. Melissa saw Peter Neufeld at a black tie opening of EVITA in Washington, D.C. where Peter was the Associate Producer. Melissa said it was a great evening and a wonderful success for him. Melissa also met Carol Nordstrom Wray at a lunch with State Department women -- a nice surprise.

Beth Fox wrote from Charlotte, NC. She and Ned were in England last summer during THE wedding. Ned was sent by Charlotte Country Day School where he is headmaster to study for two weeks at the University of Reading "with many side trips." The Foxes' older son is at the University of the South and their younger son will graduate from high school this year.

Alan Miller has established two endowed scholarships in perpetuity for students at William and Mary. They are the Manuel Miller Scholarship and the Mary Miller Scholarship, honoring his parents.

Dr. Andrew F. Powell, associate professor of marketing, received an Alumni Teaching Award at the 1981 Academic Convocation at Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo. Five faculty members were honored with this award. Andy was appointed by the United States Secretary of Commerce to the Michigan District Export Council, and he was vice president of the World Trade Club in 1978-79. Congratulations, Andy.

Your 25th reunion committee met at the College just before Christmas to begin the exciting plans for 1983. Raring to go with enthusiasm were Walt Leyland, Polly Johnson Rowlett, Carolyn Scheele Fakadej, Bobbie Ramsey Brooks, Jim Rosenbaum, and I. There is no doubt in our minds that this is going to be a great event and one we will never forget! If the College thought we were "lively" in 1958, wait until they see us in action in 1983!

We want you to come up with an idea for a logo and/or a slogan for this important reunion. Please think about this and submit your entry to me by midnight August 31, 1982. (Families in New Guinea are eligible, Melissa and Peter, you may get help from your New York P.R. people. Anything is fair and legal.) I will have someone here at all times collecting the entries! Please let us hear from you, and if you have any suggestions for this big event, let one of us know your ideas!

Happy 1982 to everyone! BOBBY ROSS NAMED MARYLAND COACH

Bobby Ross, who is well-known to William and Mary football fans as an assistant coach during the Marv Levy era, has been named the new head football coach at the University of Maryland. Ross, who was a finalist in the search for a new William and Mary coach in 1979, was head coach at the Citadel before he rejoined Levy when Levy joined the Kansas City Chiefs as head coach. Ross left the Chiefs to head the Maryland program.

past sixteen years and works for a division of the 3M company. He's become a western at heart but did return to Williamsburg last spring. He was amazed at the growth and many changes after twenty years.

Charlie Nahill and Nancy Braham Nahill ('61) sent Christmas greetings from Philadelphia. Nancy is busy with their three children and is still renovating their home. Charlie is still busy in the Pennsylvania State Legislature. They did attend homecoming this year and enjoyed seeing so many classmates.

Paula Wolpow Hoffman ('61) who lives in Newport News, Va. with husband, Buddy and their two daughters, wrote of attending homecoming and seeing some classmates for the first time in twenty years.

Dick Coyle ('61) and wife Sue Meara ('63) sent greetings from McMurray, Pa. They also attended homecoming with some old friends. I'm envious of all you folks who got to go back to Williamsburg this year.

Nancy Lee Hanson Ziese lives in Sioux City, Iowa. She is a member of the Sioux City school board and has recently completed her masters in Social Work concentrating in the field of Administration. She is employed at Briar Cliff college.

Bob and I had a busy fall. Bob is still an avid N.Y. Yankee fan. He and our teenage son went to New York for the World Series--what a disappointment! I had a nice trip out to Indianapolis, Indiana to visit my sister and neice.

I have been writing this column for the past eight years. It has been great fun but now I want to be fair and give someone else an opportunity to do it. FORMER FOOTBALL COACH, CARL M. VOYLES, DIES

Carl M. Voyles, whose football teams won 29 games and lost only seven during his four years at William and Mary from 1939-43, died recently at his home in Fort Myers, Fla., at the age of 82. Voyles, who served as athletic director as well, left William and Mary to become head football coach at Auburn. He was elected to football halls of fame in both the United States and Canada where he coached the professional Hamilton Tiger Cats. His son, Dr. Carl M. Voyles, Jr., is a 1943 graduate of the College. Jack Freeman '44, is establishing a scholarship fund to honor Coach Voyles. Those interested in contributing may contact him at, John J. colonial Virginia. He received an American Bar Foundation History Fellowship to link legal developments, which were influenced by economic, political, and social imperatives, to the larger history of Virginia in the 150 years after 1607. The research will be published in book form when the manuscript is finished.

Christmas cards brought the following news from our classmates. Jackie Fleming writes from Denver that she just made a major career change in September and is now an agent with Prudential Insurance. Her manager is from Virginia and graduated from The College in 1975 and the only person she has met in Denver from The College. She was coming home in September to Virginia to visit her mother when the flight attendant on her plane just happened to be Lou Martin Doyle. Lou and her husband live in Raphine, Wisconsin.

Jane Noble Lundy writes that she and her family led two Family Sierra Club trips and thoroughly enjoyed themselves. They plan on leading another trip this summer after a quick trip back to New Hampshire and old stomping grounds.

Mary Alice Adams Betts and family are in Winter Park, Florida. She hopes to get to Williamsburg in the spring. Kathy is a high school sophomore and Keith is in the eighth grade. The National Gamma Phi Beta position keeps Mary Alice busy. She just returned from installing chapter 115 at Colgate University in New York. She was able to visit the Alpha Chapter at Syracuse University and found it fascinating.

Linda Lester Hagen and family are still in the state of Washington. She has children ages 15, 13, 11, and 6. Last summer they were able to come for a visit to Florida while Jim, Linda's husband, was working at the Cape. She is definitely planning to come to the 25th Reunion. Why not come five years earlier?

Gayle Crabill Kerns and family are still in Blacksburg, Virginia. Her oldest, Laurie, is a freshman at The College. They are building a new house in Blacksburg and plan on staying in Blacksburg for awhile. Waldon was promoted to full professor and is president of the Lions Club. Gayle is President-Elect of the Va. Tech Faculty Women's Club. She is also working about thirty hours per week in the office of a dress shop.

David and Sandra Martin are still in New Jersey. Their sons are 14 and 12. Sandra went to Middlebury College's Language School last August and now is planning a trip to Spain for twenty-eight of her students for Spring Vacation. David spends his spare time as a Scout Leader and takes his troop camping once a month.

Dorcas Miller Lounsbury and Ken '61 have their daughter, Anne, as a freshman at The College this year.

As you well know this is our year for a big reunion. Homecoming this year is November 5, 6, and 7. The football game is with Brown University. Plans are being made for a Great Weekend in Williamsburg! November seems a long time away at the present time but time seems to have a way of moving faster than we plan for it to move. Please put the dates on your new 1982 calendar and start getting together with old classmates to make arrangements to come to our 20th Reunion. When you know what your plans are about coming, please let me know and I'll put it in the next column so others will know you are coming!

Judith Hall Anderson is enjoying her career as Head of the English Department at a suburban high school near Hartford, Conn. Homecoming 1981 was as always very enjoyable. Dick Kern and Sharon (Cosminsky) were up from North Carolina with their sons, Scott and Michael. Pete Stout and Micki (Leef) were in from Richmond. Pete told me that Dick Carling had moved to Roanoke, Va. Don Beck and Susie had travelled from Chatham, Mass. and were looking at southern prep schools for their oldest son. Steve Merrill and Kay were down from northern Virginia as were Kenny Roberts '62 and Sandy. We were discussing the happy news of the impending marriage of Calvin Whealton '62.

Polly Mayhew Owens is having a very busy year as President of the Junior League of Norfolk. She sees Bobbie Berkeley Ukrop '61 at area meetings as Bobbie is president of the Junior League of Richmond.

I saw Claudy Tucker Barnes with her husband and two youngest children at the game. Claudy had seen Karen Patrick Martin at Virginia Beach. Karen and Ralph were visiting from Tennessee with their three daughters. I enjoyed seeing Mary Anne Venner Schmidt and Herm. Mary Anne noted that Pud Quaintance Maeyer, her husband Ulrich, and their three children are returning from Germany to live in Sperryville, Va. in '82. Mary Anne and I discussed that our class should make a real effort to stage a very special 20th (can you stand it!) reunion in 1984. I volunteered Mary Anne as a chairman!

Also at Homecoming were Emily Vawter Barbee from Hillsboro, Va., Lynn Todd Paolillo from Nokomis, Fl., Ed Holton from Dallas, Tx., Beverly Williams from Atlanta, Ga., Dan Armour from Virginia Beach and Tish Paschall Mirguet from Newport News, Va.

Another fall event which proved very enjoyable was the New York Alumni chapter gala held at the showrooms of Perry Ellis. In addition to seeing Perry's award winning fashions, it was fun to see Joe Gatti, who has done so much for the New York chapter, and his wife Andrea, Blake Newton and his wife, Belle, Bill Morley and Anne O'Hare Filippone. Anne was transferring from New Jersey to Washington, D.C. with General Electric. She was looking forward to seeing many '64 classmates who are in that area. Also present from near classes were Marshall Acuff, Leslie Ward Bottoms, '63, Bob Andrialis, '65, Gene Galusha '63, and many others. It was a highly successful and enjoyable event and earned $1000 for the Alumni Society.

Harriet Nachman Storm received the unit volunteer award for the American Cancer Society's division in Virginia. Harriet has been president and crusade chairman of the Peninsula chapter.

Philip had a much welcome note from Tom Vice '63. Tom is in Atlanta, Ga. with Chubb & Son, but travels to Canada, the upper midwest and throughout the southeast in national activities. Tom is divorced and has two sons, 9 and 11, who live in Atlanta.

Ann Lyons Ackiss and Tom were busy at Christmas with daughters, Emily, 4, and Amanda, 2. Ann saw Ann Tomlinson Barton in '81 and they plan to get together in '82.

A much appreciated letter arrived from Carol Evans Tetu. Carol related much news:

CARTER RESIGNS AS V-P

William J. Carter, vice president for business affairs at William and Mary for the past 10 years, has resigned, effective August 31. Carter came to William and Mary from Hollins College in 1972, and in the past decade has overseen the construction and renovation of more than $35 million in projects, including the $5.6 million law school.

Maynard Williams Randolph and John are in Gainesville, Florida. In '81 John headed Olympic Development for men's track and took the U.S. team to Russia. John's team at Florida went from sixth place to second and he was named coach of the year for the South Eastern Conference. He has also been selected as head coach for the Pan Am games in 1983.

Carol is officiating at Army track meets and is continuing her marathon running, an avocation since 1978. This year will be her third appearance in the Boston Marathon. Carol, who received her MBA two years ago, and has taught in a local college, is now seeking a career in the business sector. Carol's husband Bob heads the Army Newburgh District recruiting command (from Middletown, N.Y. down to and including Manhattan and the Bronx). She notes that with many of our classmates' children approaching college age that the military has several options available for helping to finance college.

Carol also noted that Fran Edward Manuel and Bob are in Maitland, Florida. Fran enjoys her second grade teaching job.

She saw Melissa Hall Griffin in San Diego, Ca. last summer. Melissa is very active in her community, heading the Community Development Commission. The Griffins plan a European vacation in '82.

Babs Dunaway Bowers ('65) is in Dallas, Texas where her husband Mike has recently formed a company.

Joe Gatti notes that the next event on the New York Alumni Chapter's social calendar is a review by the West End Players, a New York City theater club which features 14 William and Mary graduates as actors. One member, Lawrence Raiken, '71, is an associate producer of Woman of the Year.

Homecoming seems so long ago, but this is the first issue of the Alumni Gazette in which I could tell you about it. The January issue had an October deadline, thus my Homecoming news has had to wait until now.

Friday, Nov. 6, was a beautiful, warm day. Arthur and I played in the alumni tennis tournament and it actually felt hot outside. Our class had an hospitality hour that evening and about 70 people stopped by. It really was wonderful seeing and talking to classmates after 15 years. Everyone looked great!

Saturday, Nov. 7, the weather turned around and it was very windy and cool. The morning was filled with the parade, lunch at the Alumni House and our class picture. There were approximately 90 members of our class back for this reunion. Our football game with Harvard was disappointing. A win always makes the day a little nicer!

The real highlight of the weekend, I thought, was the large number of classmates and friends who came to our second hospitality session of the weekend. I would guess 150-200 people attended, and we had plenty of food, drink and great reminiscing. This was the first time on one of our reunion years our class has had a hospitality hour, and it was such a success. We even made money on the two parties, and that has been put into an account waiting for our next big time together in 1986!

I was able to jot down a few notes on classmates at the Friday party, before it got too crowded. Ted Fansher received his Ph.D. from the University of South Carolina and teaches sociology at Spartanburg Methodist College; Cathy Quirk Hitchcock works part time in the admissions office of Fork Union Military Academy. She has two children, Jennifer (7 years) and Sharon (4 years), and enjoys horseback riding; Pat Patterson Riley enjoys being home with her three children, Smith (12 years), Paige (10 years), and Beth (5 years), and helping her husband Tom with the books at his dental practice in Summerville, S.C.; Wilford Kale stopped by the class party Friday evening only for a second, since there were many last minute details to be handled as grand marshal of the Homecoming parade; Erwin Alexander works for the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company and is Chairman of the Newport News School Board; Dana Gaebe and his wife Beth Distler '68 live in Seekonk, Mass., with their children Glen (8 years) and John Todd (6 years), while Dana practices law in Providence, R.I.; Dan Nase is quite busy doing the Lord's work by putting together a children's Christian summer camp. He works for a Christian television organization and lives in Brooksville, Fla. with his wife and three daughters, Stephanie (16 years), Tiffany (10 years) and Melanie (8 years); Linda Helfrich Keown and Bill ('66 Marshall Wythe School of Law) are in Richmond with their three children, Jonathan (8 years), Amy (7 years) and Megan (4 years). Bill practices law at Chesterfield Courthouse, and Linda is active being a housewife, doing volunteer work and holding a part time job; John Sours and three other lawyers left their former law firm and started their own practice two years ago in Atlanta. John's wife Ruth Eye '67 teaches at a local business college; Pat and Margaret Conn Walsh recently moved with their four children to Dayton, Ohio, where Pat is a manager with Merrill Lynch; Joel Fontaine is vice president and general manager of Fisher Scientific Company in Raleigh, N.C. He and his wife Mary Ann have two children, Todd (7 years) and Courtney (5 years), and Joel enjoys tennis and snow skiing.

Several classmates have written in recently.

Bill Carroll left William and Mary after his sophomore year, was drafted, spent a year in Vietnam in the Army, and then worked in the retail flower business for the next 13 years. In 1977, he enrolled at George Washington University and got a B.A. degree in psychology. Presently Bill is living in New York City and working on his Ph.D. in clinical psychology at Fordham University.

Thanks to Sally Mac Smith Brown's mother, I have some news of Sally Mac and Arthur. Mrs. Smith wrote they are living in Sandy, Utah with their three children, Joshua (7 years), Desper (4 years) and Sarah (2 years). Sally Mac received her doctorate from the University of Utah and is a clinical psychologist, working with substance abuse. Arthur has his doctorate from Brigham Young University and is a marriage and family counselor.

Also in Utah is Susan 'Shef' Sheffield, living in Park City, a famous (?) ski resort. Shef has been there the last five years and stays active skiing, hiking, backpacking, and sailing. For gainful employment, she is a bookkeeper and takes on restaurant jobs as the need arises.

Dee Chapman Bailey is currently living in Bamberg, Germany, where her husband Dick is commanding a field artillery battalion. They stay quite busy with unit functions, community activities and German-American activities. Their children Reb (8 years) and Scott (4 years) are enrolled in German schools. Since neither of the children spoke any German at the start of the school year, Dee implies that has been a real struggle, but worth it! She feels they will be in Bamberg two or three years.

WILLIAM AND MARY AND PERRY ELLIS '61 ARE "IN"

What do fashion designer Perry Ellis '61, Warren Beatty, David Rockefeller, garden parties, chivalry, tweed, light suntans, white or brown bucks, La Cote Basque (a New York Restaurant), base stealing, asparagus, Virginia country homes, the Ritz in Paris, Sicily, Yale and William and Mary all have in common? They are all included in the "in" things for 1982 as listed in "W," a publication of Fairchild Publications (Women's Wear Daily). Among the "Outs" for the year are football, pecking on the cheek, Meryl Streep, Jane Byrne, Cornell, Harvard, and big Midwestern universities.

Bud Thorne's food consultant business has been growing steadily and now requires national travel. Bud, his wife Tris Anne, son Charles (14 years) and daughter Katie Brooks (7 years) live in Sewickley, Penn. He occasionally sees Don and Joan Driscoll.

Kathleen Carr Lang is a consular officer at the U.S. Embassy in Prague, Czechoslovakia. Her husband Nick also works at the Embassy, and their children, Amos (6 years) and Jess (9 years), attend the international school there. Their apartment is in the Embassy building, built in the 17th century as a palace, and their commuting time is about 60 seconds.

Spencer Timm has been appointed vice president of the Putnam Advisory Company and Putnam International Advisors. He is responsible for marketing Putnam's international equity investment management services and Putnam Advisory International Trust. Spencer was formerly vice president and director of institutional marketing at State Street Bank and Trust Co., Boston, and was a vice president of the Boston Stock Exchange. He holds a Licenciado from the University of Madrid, Spain. Spencer, his wife and two sons live in Sherborn, Mass., where he is president of the Sherborn Firefighters Association, member of the Leonard Mc Se Hospital Trustee Council, and coach of Sherborn Youth Soccer.

Tim Sullivan has been named Governor Robb's executive assistant for planning and policy. He worked as a "volunteer issues adviser" to Robb for nearly two years, as Robb was preparing and running his campaign for governor. Tim was the coordinator for an economic development plan that became a cornerstone of the Robb campaign. He has been granted a leave from his teaching and administrative duties at the Marshall Wythe School of Law. Tim is married to the former Anne Klare, who is a psychologist for Point Option, an alternative high school for the Newport News Public School System.

Will Dibling was elected president of the Roanoke Chapter of the Society of the Alumni. He is the City Attorney for Roanoke.

My next article will be in the May issue with an early April deadline. I would really enjoy hearing from more of you. The Alumni Gazette has eight issues with class news in them. Of those eight issues, four are for the even graduating years and four are for the odd graduating years. Please don't think I didn't send in an article when you see 1966 with nothing beside it. That is an issue when the odd years only are reporting.

Major Herminio Cuervo - Delgado was in charge of the medical care the hostages returning from Iran received when they were in Wiesbaden, West Germany. Herminio is a doctor stationed at the U.S. Air Force Hospital in Wiesbaden.

Fred Baker Smallwood is a sales representative for Burroughs Welcome Co., a pharmaceutical company. Fred will be working out of Albany, Georgia.

Robert A. Johnson has been appointed Vice President of Society and Association Services Corporation. S.A.S.C. provides management services to the American Society for Photobiology, the Environmental Mutagen Society, the Health Physics Society and the Society for Risk Analysis.

Warren D. Knowlton received a juris doctor (law) degree cum laude from The University of Toledo in December 1981. Chip received a Master of Business Administration degree from the University of Utah in 1974. He is manager of financial projects at Owens-Corning Fiberglass Corp. in Toledo. Chip and his wife, Judy, have two children, Chris and Beth.

Kenneth E. Smith, Jr. has been appointed to a four year term as the Berkeley District representative on the Williamsburg-James City County school board. He is an associate dean of students at The College of William and Mary and is responsible for student organizations and most out-of-class student activities. Previous positions include associate director of the campus center and director for student activities at the College. He is married to Martha Cook, '70, and they have two children, Allison and Kevin.

Kerry Sawick Hager and her husband moved to California in September when Kerry became a region manager of Systems Support for National Advanced Systems. Kerry has offices in Los Angeles and San Francisco. The Hagers are living in Belmont about twenty-five miles south of San Francisco. Kerry says the commute gets hectic.

Janise Hardy Hawkins has spent her last hurricane season in Key West, Florida. She, her husband Kevin, and their sons, Stefan (6) and Kristian (2), will soon be moving. Janise is chairman of the Navy Relief Thrift shop and is on the Navy Nursery Board. She also works part time in the circulation department of the Key West Citizen.

Dianne Doyle Caldwell is living in Williamsburg with her two children, Mary Blair and John. Dianne is a Title I reading teacher and team leader at Berkeley Elementary School. She is vice chairman of the board for Child Development Resources, an agency serving handicapped infants. Dianne is also a professional calligrapher. For fun she plays volleyball and lots of bridge.

Diane Letchworth Burgess, her husband Dick, and their two sons, Reid and Brice, live in Hartford, Conn. Diane is very busy being mother to her two large and active boys who are 1 1/4 and 2 1/2 years of age. She participates in the Junior League and in arts related organizations. To benefit the five major arts organizations in the Hartford area, Diane and Francie Reid Bergquist are working on a cookbook, Connecticut a la Carte. Diane is chairing the nutrition section and Francie is doing the art work. The book will be published in June.

Members of our class attending the 1981 Homecoming include:

Beth Distler Gaebe, Robert Blair, Cindy Simpson, Jo Lynne and Tony DeMary, Cathy Rinalds Wittan, and Richard Donald Buckingham.

The Simmermons are moving to Norfolk for two years. Please note the change in address: 1112 Bedford Ave., Norfolk, Va. 23508.

HOLLOWAY NAMED TO HEAD COMMUNICATIONS OFFICE

After a seven month search, William and Mary has named Charles M. Holloway, director of corporate communications for the College Board in New York City, as the new director of university communications. Holloway, who has been associated with the College Board since 1959, will succeed Ross Weeks, Jr., when he joins the College on March 1. Weeks left in May to become executive director of the Jamestown-Yorktown Foundation. A graduate of the University of California, Berkeley, Holloway has served with two Commissioners of Education and on the staff of the Chronicle for Higher Education. The College Board is a nonprofit membership association of more than 2500 schools best known for sponsoring a series of guidance and college admissions tests including the Scholastic Aptitude Tests (SAT).

A belated Happy New Year to all! Be advised for all of you anxious to update our class on your whereabouts. . . my next deadline is April 5 for the May issue of the Alumni Gazette.

Geoff and Nancy ReMine Trego were married last September 26. Geoff, a 1971 graduate of Princeton, is a legislative representative for the National Association of Counties, where Nancy also works. Their wedding was a mini-reunion--Kevin and Paula Howland Brosh from Washington, Lee Hamilton from Ann Arbor, Mich., and Doug Franks from New York City. Nancy and Geoff live in Arlington, Va.

Formerly Director of Planning at Dart Industries in Los Angeles Calif., Stan Bryde is presently Director of Financial Planning and Analysis at Mattel.

Still teaching math at Thomas Nelson Community College in Hampton, Va., Sandy Stemple Campbell enjoyed returning to The College of William and Mary for the fall semester teaching multivariable calculus.

Mary Shorter, research associate at NASA/Langley in Hampton, Va., is with a NASA group responsible for the MAPS instrument which is part of the scientific payload for the second space shuttle flight.

"He has the Corner on Local Lobster" was the title of an October 28th Virginia Gazette article about Dave Watson's company, Passa, Inc. Having gone into business for himself in 1980, Dave's company quickly became exclusive lobster supplier of Lafayette Restaurant, the Whaling Company, Lobster House, The Canterbury, the overall Williamsburg food service, and Kingsmill Restaurant during golf tournaments.

According to the article, "... Watson's virtual monopoly in this area can be attributed to his ownership of the only lobster holding system on the Peninsula between Norfolk and Washington, D.C." Prior to his present business venture, Dave coached the William and Mary Track Team for four years.

Lynn Hecht Bradley wrote news from Fairburn, Ga. Lynn was librarian at the Lovett School until the birth of their son, John Carter, March 29, 1981. Husband, Murray, is with Merrill Lynch and the three of them enjoyed a business trip to San Francisco last September.

Michael Gibson is earning an M.S. degree in geology at Auburn University. Last summer, he worked on the fossil animal communities found in association with the sandstone rocks above the coals north of Rosa, Alabama. Mike was attempting to identify and analyze the animal assemblages in order to provide data concerning the salinity of the water in which the animals lived and then the spatial relationship of this rock unit to other coal horizons in north-eastern Alabama.

Thanks to another Chi Omega newsletter from Barbara Pate Glacel there is the following news. . .

Having completed the H&R Block income tax preparation course, Mary Ellen Allen Turville is working parttime, January through April this year. Bill ('69) is Operational Test director for the Navy's new anti-submarine helicopter and is based at the Naval Air Station, Patuxent River, Md.

Bob ('68) and Linda Britt Blair took a year off 1979-'80 to travel extensively around the world. When they returned, Bob and three law partners began their own firm, Anderson, Hibe, Nauheim, & Blair in Washington, D.C. Linda is in law school. Last summer she worked for a large D.C. law firm. Last semester she was busy with National Moot Court Competition and Law Review. This semester Linda is in court two days a week through the "Law Students in Court Program," and will be working for credit in the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Columbia. Linda expects to graduate December this year.

Lin Stocker is an avid member of the Ski Touring Section of the Potomac Appalachian Trail Club, crosscountry skiing every weekend during the winters and planning work trips to the New Germany State Park in western Maryland to build and maintain trails there. She and Rhonda Curry enjoyed a two week trip to Ireland last September. They drove a thousand miles around the Republic and fell in love with the country and its people.

Now half way through their three year tour of duty in Panama, Kathie Asplund Munson writes that her family is enjoying the tropical life. Kathie finds teaching English as a second language quite a challenge. Mike is with the post engineers on the Atlantic side of Panama. They expect to travel through South and Central America this February.

In Charleston, W.Va., Perry Harschutz Field will have a break from the throes of motherhood a few hours a day as she began teaching nutrition in the elementary school in January.

Skip and Kit Smith Fry are co-general managers for West Indies Yacht Charters in the British Virgin Islands. From Aspen, Colo., Carolyn Lawhorne Parker ('69) will be joining them in May for some sailing.

Major Bob and Barbara Pate Glacel moved to Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas last summer. They expect to head back to Germany for another tour there next summer. Dr. Barbara Pate Glacel, management-human relations consultant, affiliated with Personal Dynamics Institute of Minneapolis last fall. The institute offers quality programs with the possibility of individuals building their own businesses through affiliation with it. Barbara is also involved in a business venture with Don Pratt, Anne Moore Pratt's husband. Their company, "Pracell Prints," commissioned the print of The College given to special donors to the William and Mary Fund this year.

Tom and I and Martha (2) had a delightful visit with Dave and Jane Neff Thompson and their children, Jenny (11) and Ben (2 1/2), in January. It will probably be recorded as the coldest weekend of the year on Grace Creek Farm where they live overlooking the Chesapeake Bay in Bozman, Md., but Tom and Dave braved that cold to hunt geese. When Dave's not hunting, he's an attorney with Goldsborough, Franche, and Collette in Easton, Md. Jane teaches elementary school at Tilghman Elementary on Tilghman Island.

I'm happy to say I have news to report. It was looking kind of sparse for a while, but things took a turn for the better. Joanne Dukeshire Pulliam, after being a full-time tennis pro at an indoor tennis club in Houston, Texas, is living in East Windsor, New Jersey (just outside of Princeton). She and her husband, Don, have been there for two years and became the proud parents of a son, Michael James, this past June. Naturally, this cuts into Joanne's tennis time, but she is teaching part-time and will become more involved as time permits.

CHARLES NAMED TOP NORFOLK CITIZEN

Roy R. Charles '32 has been honored by the Cosmopolitan Club of Norfolk, Va., for distinguished service as Norfolk's First Citizen in Civic Affairs for 1981. A Norfolk businessman and philanthropist, Charles was honored for his contribution to "crucial causes" in the city. "There is no one in Norfolk who has not benefited from his good works," said Circuit Judge Joseph E. Baker '50, who headed the committee that selected Charles, who received the Alumni Medallion, the Society of the Alumni's highest honor. A member of the Board of Visitors from 1952-60, Charles received an honorary degree from the College in 1975. He served as National Chairman of the Campaign for the College and served as the first chairman of the Athletic Educational Foundation.

THOMPSON LEAVES SHAKESPEARE STAFF

Kent Thompson '76 has resigned as artistic director for the Virginia Shakespeare Festival to resume his theatrical career in New York City. Thompson, who had been with the Festival since its inception in 1978 and artistic director for the past three seasons, was largely credited for turning the summer program into an artistic and financial success. Income tripled and attendance increased by over 70 per cent during his years with the Festival. Thompson hopes to continue his career in television and theater in New York.

I got a nice note and letter from Eddy and Laurie Aston Mogan. They live in Mountain View, California where one thing that keeps them busy is their 14 month old daughter, Ashley. Laurie spends 15 hours a week on a freelance graphics business she started and she serves as Childcare Liaison between the National Organization for Women and the Northern California Coalition for Employer-Supported Childcare. Her current project is preparing a resource packet for childcare centers. Somehow she also finds time to play racketball, sew, play the piano and recorder, and do some photography. Eddy recently left his job as manager of a software group to join a new company called SynMos. They are involved in the new field of brokering design and manufacturing services for companies that want special integrated circuits. For those of you who understand these things, they deal with the tiny silicon devices that control everything from cars to toys to microwave ovens. I hope the company is a big success. Laurie and Eddy have had visits from a lot of classmates—Judy Martin, Liz Baltes, Lee and Mary Alice Haynes Eiden, John and Cheryl Clark Pagan, and Char Sandquist.

You will probably be reading more about Stewart Gamage in the Virginia papers since she has been named Director of the Virginia Liaison Office in Washington for Governor Chuck Robb's administration. After leaving William and Mary, Stewart received another degree from the University of Southern California. She served as an executive assistant to Robb in 1978-79 and has been on the staffs of several Congressional committees in Washington. She was most recently executive director of the National Alliance for Hydroelectric Energy. Congratulations Stewart!

Ann Miles Dwyer has returned to work after the birth of her second daughter in May of last year. She is a Social Insurance Specialist for the Social Security Administration in Baltimore while her husband, Bruce, is a sales engineer for the Buss Fuse division of McGraw Edison.

Ann also writes that Fran Nettles Boyd is teaching in Paw Paw, West Virginia and that Charlotte Hummel Watkins was to enter Harvard Law School this past fall.

Doug Markham is involved in cancer research. He has moved to Haverford, Pennsylvania where he joined the Fox Chase Cancer Center in Philadelphia as an associate member of the scientific staff. Doug earned his Ph.D. in biochemistry from the University of Pennsylvania in 1977. During his study at Penn, he held a predoctoral traineeship from the U.S. Public Health Service and a research fellowship from the Johnson Research Foundation. He then served as a postdoctoral fellow in Penn's department of biochemistry and biophysics until he joined NIH in 1978. At NIH he was a staff fellow in the laboratory of biochemical pharmacology at the National Institute of Arthritis, Metabolism and Digestive Diseases. At Fox Chase, Doug will be applying the techniques of magnetic resonance to the study of biochemical problems as they relate to cancer.

Members of our class who signed in at Homecoming in November are: Jack and Kim Anderson, Glen Burnie, MD; Kevin Hennessey, Pottstown, PA; John Wallmark, Hightstown, NJ; Michael Rodriguez, Fairfax, VA; Jerry Belew, Philadelphia; Fred and Mary Obregon Woodlief, Richmond, VA; Randy and Sharon Yates Gillett, Richmond, VA; Bill and Delores Gooch Sirbaugh, Winchester, VA; Sandra Anderson Hartley, Richmond, VA; Larry Gilbert, Williamsburg; Betty Ann Carty Pagels, Hampton, VA; Debbie Salter, Virginia Beach, VA; Debbie Dalton, Alexandria, VA; Cindy Viau, Washington, DC.

As I'm putting this news together, it's snowing (and snowing and snowing) outside. By the time you all read this, I hope we've enjoyed the winter enough and are ready to go on to other things - like spring. Keep writing and don't forget about the Ten Year Reunion (or . . . just remember the reunion part) this fall.

As we are currently in the throes of a record cold winter, I only hope that everyone is managing to survive the freezing temperatures, snow, ice, and utility bills. Spring is just around the bend!

Bonnie Tabacco Hendricks sent Christmas greetings. I haven't seen Bonnie since 1978 when we were both teaching at a boy's boarding school in Richmond. Since then, she and John got married (1979) and they moved to northern Virginia where Bonnie taught high school biology and chemistry. Now that John has finished his degree work at Catholic University, they have returned to Richmond where Bonnie found another teaching job. Their daughter Christine, born in December of 1980, will soon be joined by a new brother or sister, due in May.

Charles L. Menges was married last October to Penelope W. Kyle. Both are attorneys: Penny is associate counsel for CSX Resources, Inc. and Charlie is an associate at the Norfolk office of McGuire, Woods, and Battle specializing in real estate law.

A letter from Stuart J. Kolner brought me up to date on his activities since graduation. Stuart married Barbara Homan ('75) in 1978 and moved to Rockford, Illinois in 1979. He is an assistant professor on the faculty at the University of Illinois College of Medicine, where he is the Director of the Library of Health Sciences. Stuart also serves on the Board of Directors of the Biomedical Communications Network and as the Chairman of the Medical School Libraries Section of the Medical Library Association. He and Barbara have a son, born in 1980.

Ginny Wagner was awarded a Master of Arts degree from the University of Delaware in June, 1981.

Captain William J. Koziar has an enviable assignment: he is stationed in Macedonia, Greece, where he has command of the 70th U.S. Army Field Artillery Detachment. Greece has a warm and sunny sound that seems especially appealing right now.

Last September, Robert Moncrief came back to W&M to perform at the Campus Center Ballroom. Bob, a tenor, is currently the organist and director of five choirs at the Presbyterian Church of Rye, N.Y. After graduating from W&M, he received a masters degree from the Yale School of Music in 1976, and has lived in the N.Y. area ever since. Bob has given many organ recitals, and has sung in a variety of roles in productions by the Manhattan Opera, the Bell-Arte Opera, the Manhattanville College Summer Opera, and the Bronx Opera Company.

Living in Glastonbury, Connecticut while he attend the University of Connecticut, George Purtill is in the first year of an unusual four-year degree program. He will finish with both a law degree and an M.B.A.,

which should go well with his C.P.A. George lives with his labrador retriever "Lochan." We have George's sister, Katy ('81), to thank for this news. Katy said that she had to write, because she knew her brother never would. For shame, George!

Actually, it is not all that unusual for me to receive class news from sisters, mothers, or spouses, and a lot of the information comes from friends. So even if you're not a member of the Class of '74, feel free to drop me a line about any of your friends or relatives who are.

A feature article in the Newport News Daily Press, Dec. 6, 1981, on Dan Jackson was forwarded to me last month. Dan has recently finished building a double-chamber wood-burning pottery kiln behind his house on the outskirts of Williamsburg. He studied for six months in 1975 under Miaki Yamaoka in Hokkaido, Japan and then travelled throughout Japan studying the Oriental approach to pottery and kilns. Dan met Yamaoka, a well-known and highly-respected potter, in 1974 when Yamaoka worked as the artist-in-residence at W&M. Dan hopes to create pottery that reflects a blend of his American and Japanese pottery experiences.

Living in San Francisco, Bob Barnett has had the opportunity to see other W&M grads in that part of the country. Bob works for NBC radio as an account executive and lives in a Victorian house at 620 Haight St. Doug Pinter lives nearby in the Haight-Ashbury area and works for Pandick Press, a legal/financial printer.

Bob saw Sue Billingsley Cunneff and her husband, Phil, in N.Y. before Christmas. Sue works for Associated Press and they live in the Village. Mary Thomasch lives in Jerome, Idaho where she runs a foster home for girls. She also manages to get in a little farming too!

Bob sent lots of news about W&M grads not in the class of 1974, so I forwarded that to the other class reporters. We're supposed to restrict our columns to people in our own class, therefore, those of you who have that sort of news will see it in print faster if you send it directly to the appropriate class reporter.

I ran into Mary Foy at a New Year's Eve party as we were on our way out and she and her husband were just arriving, so we had no time to talk. Mary and her husband live in Richmond and they are expecting their second child quite soon.

Byrd Smith Heaton has been promoted from assistant accounting officer to accounting officer at the Virginia National Bank in Norfolk. Byrd finished her M.B.A. degree work at Old Dominion University in 1979. She also serves as communications director of the National Association of Accountants. Byrd and her husband live in Virginia Beach.

Homecoming brought a lot of us back this year as around 150 from the class of '76 returned for our 5th year reunion! Since the last column we have received a good deal of information on some members so I share that with you now.

Carol Randolph Gramer has recently been named as an Associate of the Society of Actuaries following completion of five examinations administered by the Society. Carol is currently an assistant actuary with Johnson & Higgins in New York. In Yukon, Oklahoma, Buddy is working for USF&G Insurance Company. He would appreciate a line from old friends: 11113NW 113th Str., zip code 73099.

Frank Ballinger has had a rather interesting last five years. Following graduation he played the jazz trombone professionally for one year and then worked two years for the CPA firm of Haskins & Sells. He is currently an investment advisor with Paine Webber in McLean, Va. If you're in the area, he has daily radio stock market reports at 4:30 and 4:40. Rumor has it that Frank got married this past December.

There are a couple of others in the northern Virginia area too. Charlie Adlis Crawford is beginning her second year at Catholic Univ. Law School, while her husband Tim is the White House liaison to the Republican National Committee. Zahra Cox has recently bought a condominium in Annandale from where she commutes downtown to the Dept. of State. She is in full-time language training at the Foreign Service Institute learning to speak Arabic. She will be going overseas in the near future.

Leigh Williams Adams is already overseas - in Malawi, Africa. Following two years with the Peace Corps in Zaire, Leigh has taught the last year in an international school and the local American Cultural Center. This summer she moved with her husband to Malawi where her husband is the Associate Peace Corps Director. She will continue to teach in an international school in the city of Lilongwe. She said they love to get letters. The address is: c/o State Dept., Lilongwe, Malawi, Washington, D.C. 20520.

In the Tidewater area Janet Dickinson is doing well in Williamsburg where she works for Burroughs. Jon Hauser is a trial attorney for Pickett, Lyle, Siegel, Drescher & Croshaw in Virginia Beach. Jon lives in the historic Ghent section of Norfolk.

Stokes Kirkland is leaving Norfolk as he has graduated from Eastern Virginia Medical School and will be doing a residency in Family Practice at MCV. Coming to Norfolk is Charlotte Galson Wilkes where she will be starting at the same medical school.

Over in Hampton, Nancy Seawell is Gifts Record Secretary at Hampton Institute's Development Office and is a local needlecraft consultant. And finally, in Manila Martha Lane is supervisor of the Indo-chinese Refugee Program and Bob Lane is Vice Consul on the visa line at the U.S. Embassy. Bob received his M.A. in Government from W&M in May. They report seeing quite a bit of Peter Cardasis ('75) who is a manager for the mining company of Asoma Corporation.

Happy New Year! I know many of us envy those of you in warm climates. Hopefully when this column is published the weather will not be quite as harsh as it has been in January. We also had a rather cold Homecoming this year but as usual our class was well represented! I saw many people who

RAGAZZO '51 NAMED TOP COACH

Vito Ragazzo '51, coach of Shippensburg State College in Pennsylvania, has won Coach of the Year honors in Division II of the NCAA for leading his football team to a 12-1 season. A member of William and Mary's Athletic Hall of Fame and a 1949 Tribe All-American football player, Ragazzo coached at North Carolina, Wake Forest and VMI (where he was head coach from 1966-70) before he joined Shippensburg State in 1978. A star end at William and Mary, Ragazzo, who set the NCAA record for most touchdown passes caught in a single season, succeeded Joe Mark '51 as head coach at Shippensburg State, whose only defeat this season came in the NCAA Division II semifinal playoffs to North Dakota State.

DAILY PRESS, INC. ENDOWS JOURNALIST-IN-RESIDENCE

The Daily Press, Inc., of Newport News has pledged $40,000 to endow William and Mary's Journalist-In-Residence program which brings top journalists to the College each year to meet with students. William R. Van Buren Jr. '37 is president, treasurer and news editor of the Daily Press and The Times-Herald, the newspapers published by The Daily Press, Inc. Journalists who have visited the College under the Journalist-In-Residence Program, which was devised in 1976 by the William and Mary Chapter of the Society for Collegiate Journalists, have included Roger Mudd of NBC, Charles McDowell of the Richmond Times Dispatch, Robert Pierpoint of CBS News, Jack Nelson of the Los Angeles Times, and Max Robinson of ABC News. Van Buren has been an active supporter of William and Mary alumni activities for more than three decades.

promised to send me a note about what they have been doing. The holiday season must have slowed everything down because I haven't received very many letters yet!

Robert and Marie Jacobson Johnston and their son, Robbie, have moved to Fairfax, Va. where Robert has taken a new position.

John and Melissa Friedery are in Ardmore, Okla. where they have bought a new home. John is now working for himself as an independent petroleum geologist. Melissa has been working part-time for a geologist plotting wells and using maps. Their most important news is their new daughter, Lauren, born in December.

Dave Urban graduated from the Ohio State College of Dentistry in June. He is living and working in Reston, Va. as an associate with Eichler, Kirkpatrick and Richardson DDS. Any Northern Va. classmates in need of a dentist should contact Dave!

Kevin and Maria Koenig ('77) Dunn are living in Gaithersburg, Md., a northern suburb of D.C. Kevin, after spending 3½ years working in the field of education, joined the staff of Corporate Press, Inc., a large printing firm in D.C. where he is in a three year training program. Maria is now a homemaker and full-time mother of their 1 year old daughter, Katie.

Betsy Page is working on her dissertation in Political Science at UNC. She plans to finish in May and work for a survey organization. She also has plans to be married.

Mike and Debbie Potter moved from South Boston to Halifax last summer. Debbie is the State housing program developer for the Migrant and Seasonal Farm Workers Association in charge of programs throughout southern portions of the state and on the Eastern Shore. Mike is now a sportswriter for the Danville Bee. Their son, John, is now three years old and enjoys attending sports events with his Dad, especially to see the Indians play!

Bob Rigrish is now located in Southern Alabama where he is practicing law for the Army.

I saw Wanda Davis in Richmond not long ago. She still lives in Hopewell and teaches 5th grade in Prince George County.

Jody Jack Gundrun and Kevin Crop were married in Dec. of 1979. Kevin has been a naval officer for three years after graduating from the Supply Corps School in Athens, Ga. He has served as head of the Supply Department on the USS Davis. Jody completed her masters in Physical Therapy at Duke and has been working in a private hospital in Charleston as Supervisor of education and as a clinical faculty member of the Medical University of South Carolina. They expect to be located in the Boston area in '82 once Kevin finishes his sea tour.

Best wishes to Marty Smith and Scott Thornhill on their marriage, January 30.

In closing, I promised several people at Homecoming (especially Joe Agee!) that I would ask this question in my next column: Was that a UVA tie Preston Greene was wearing at William and Mary's Homecoming?

Have a super New Year and write!

Happy New Year to everyone! I hope you're all doing well and enjoyed the holidays. It's been quite a long time since we've shared some news, although it seems like just yesterday. I've heard from lots of people, and so I'll have to share some news for next time.

Nancy and Jim Carter wrote from their new home in Vienna. They bought a townhouse this summer and seem to enjoy being homeowners, even with the work involved. Nancy is working for Ernst & Whinney in Washington and has been involved with recruiting at W&M. Jim is working for Booz, Alen & Hamilton in D.C., and is going to night school for his MBA.

Karri Fritz wrote from Wisconsin where she is attending Marquette University Law School. Karri's a member of the "Marquette Law Review" staff, and recently had an article published in "The South Asian Anthropologist." She spent the past summer studying international law at Exeter University in England and had the opportunity to combine her work with some research in art history.

Susan Startt has been busy with a new job in Atlanta; she is now working for Lanier Business Products as a market information analyst, and has been involved with several major research projects. Susan ran in the Peachtree Road Race on the 4th of July and bumped into Bruce Patterson who had recently moved to Atlanta.

Dick Fronko is in his second year of the PhD program in chemistry at the University of Wisconsin. He's enjoying the program and the school. Dick wrote that Kathy Lloyd and Kerwin Dobbs transferred to the University of California at Irvine from Wisconsin — with the cold winter they've had, I can't say that I blame them! Dick is anxious to come back for a visit, if he can fit it into his schedule.

At least one of our classmates that I know of is working for the FBI. Sue Sherland is living in Alexandria and is assigned to the Organized Crime Information System which is a data base management system to collect information with regards to organized crime activities. Sue performs a programming function and has been able to develop some software for OCIS. It sounds like Sue is really having a fantastic time and enjoys her job immensely.

Veronica Terry will be finishing up her master's program this year at the University of Maryland, where she's in the horticulture program. Her research work has been involved in breeding disease resistant crops and plants. Veronica has been keeping busy with her own work and, until recently, as a graduate assistant.

Joy Dofy is in her second year teaching second graders at the Providence/New Kent Elementary School just outside of Richmond. Joy is enjoying her job and, somehow, is managing to keep pace with a group of about 30 seven year olds! She's recently taken up racquetball in her free time. Jean Bradley is also working at the same school.

Sheryl Anderson had lots of news. Sheryl's working for Tax Executives Institute in Rosslyn as an editorial and administrative assistant. She's also been pursuing her writing and is finishing her second play; Sheryl, Stephanie Hughes and Alleyne Dickens have started a writer's group for encouragement and fun. Sheryl, Stephanie, Alleyne and Craig Dykstra were in the process of buying a house when Sheryl wrote, and were hoping to move in in November. Stephanie works for Ziff-Davis Publishing in D.C.; Alleyne is working for George Washington University; and Craig works for GTE Telenet in Vienna. Sheryl was an attendant at the wedding of Denise Trogon and Fereol de Gastyne (class of 1981). Denise and Fereol are living in Billsburg and have also been busy working on a new house. Karen Tolson and Trish Knaver were also in the wedding party. Karen is working for the law firm of Patton, Boggs and Blow, and has appeared in several musical productions. Trish is working at the Alumni House and is getting her masters in psychology at W&M.

Sheryl and Stephanie visited Michael McLane in Florida. Michael is at the University of Florida working on his masters in journalism. Michael was also in a production of "South Pacific." Cindy Turner is in the same program at Florida as Michael. Pam Jenkins joined them from Georgia where she's working as a reporter. Sue Casey and Lisa Loeb (class of 1981) moved to Los Angeles recently to see the West Coast; that's the best way to see the country. Linda Riley has been in New York where she has been involved in dancing, and Mary Kate Leckey is working at one of the embassies in Washington. Kristy Everly is working in Colonial Williamsburg and Owen Mould was last heard from in Germany.

Katy Purtil (class of 1981) wrote with some news of members of our class. Katy and Pete Pfeffer were engaged this summer and will be married in June of 1982. Pete is teaching and coaching football at Fork Union Military Academy. Richard Goode is teaching and coaching at Cumberland High School in Farmville. John Ceminara and Jenny Coolbaugh were married in July. John is also coaching football and teaching at Northumberland High School in Reedville. Graham Sykes has been doing a lot of travelling in Canada.

Christine Kurtz is enrolled in the Rackham School of Graduate Studies at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. She is working towards her master's degree in anthropology. Christine wanted me to extend her invitation to get together to any W&M alumni in the Ann Arbor area.

Greg Fronczak and Dave McClure will be finishing their MBA program at W&M this spring. Both Greg and Dave have enjoyed being in the Williamsburg area for a couple of extra years, but it sounds like they're a little bit anxious to finish and move on to something new. They send their regards to all their classmates.

Carol Ann Hilton recently changed jobs and is now working for Institutional Development Counsel in New Jersey. Carol Ann's first assignment is as program manager for the phone/mail campaign at the University of Evansville in Indiana. She is very excited about her new job.

That's about all the news for now. I heard that there was a good turnout at Homecoming. I hope all who went had a great time; I'm sorry I missed it. Thanks to all who wrote, and keep the letters coming!

OBITUARIES

ELLSWORTH P. AYERS, '09, formerly of Williamsburg, Virginia, died September 30, 1980. An automobile salesman for many years, he was living in Easton, Maryland at the time of his death. Survivors include his daughter, Judith Ayers Rabbe, '49.

WILLIAM SETH SNYDER, JR., '21 A.B., of Frankfort, Kentucky, died August 20, 1978. A member of Phi Beta Kappa and Omicron Delta Kappa at William and Mary, he earned his M.D. from the Medical College of Virginia. He became board certified in Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, and he was in private practice in Frankfort, Kentucky from 1932 until his death. Survivors include his daughter, Ann Snyder Harrod, of Edina, Minnesota.

JAMES CAVE BETHUNE, '27, of Lumberton, North Carolina, died March 22, 1981. A member of Kappa Alpha at W&M, he was a graduate of the Wake Forest University School of Law. An attorney, he served in the Inheritance and Gift Tax Division of the North Carolina Department of Revenue.

MARY VIRGINIA CRAIG (WORNOM), '28, formerly of Richmond, Virginia, died on November 26, 1981 in New York City, as a result of extensive burns suffered in September. After completing her sophomore year at W&M, she married Herman E. Wornom of York County, Virginia. The Wornoms moved to New York in 1947. Active in many civic and church groups, she is survived by her husband, one son, and a sister.

MIRIAM SCHREIER SILBERGER (GOODMAN), '28 A.B., died December 28, 1981, in Washington, D.C. A member of Phi Beta Kappa at William and Mary, she was a native of Norfolk and a retired high school teacher. Survivors include her husband Jesse, and three daughters.

WILLIAM ANDREW FROST, '30, of Roanoke, Virginia, died December 27, 1981. A member of Kappa Sigma at W&M, he served in the Army Air Corps during World War II. He was a retired employee of the Veteran's Administration. Survivors include his wife Frances, a daughter, and two sisters.

NOLLIE W. SHELTON, JR., '31 B.S., of Boone, North Carolina, died December 2, 1981, while attending a Phi Delta Kappa seminar in Moscow. After earning his M.A. from the University of North Carolina in 1937, he served as a school principal and then as superintendent of schools for two counties before joining the faculty of Appalachian State University in 1959. He retired from Appalachian State in 1973, at which time he was appointed professor emeritus. Active in government and community affairs, he was a long-time member of the Order of the White Jacket. He was married to the late Gladys Eason Shelton, 29, and his survivors include one son and two daughters.

HOWARD K. URION, '32 B.S., of Woodstown, New Jersey, died September 30, 1981. An avid collector of local Indian artifacts, he was a retired employee of the E. I. Dupont de Nemours Chamber Works in Deepwater, New Jersey. Survivors include his wife Alice.

JOHN BYRNES McCAFFREY, '33, died January 9, 1982, in Riviera Beach, Florida. A native of Concord, New Hampshire, he had lived in Florida since 1966. A postal employee for 30 years, he graduated from the Randolph Macon Academy in Bedford, Virginia. He is survived by his wife, Hazel, and one sister.

ALLEN WILSON AYRES, '35, of Sturgis, Michigan, died in October, 1980. A member of Kappa Sigma at W&M, he was the owner of the A. W. Ayres Insurance Agency. He is survived by his wife Phyllis.

ROSEN COFFIN (APPLEBY), '41 B.A., of Chatham, New Jersey, died September 15, 1980. A member of Alpha Chi Omega at W&M, she was the widow of Arthur D. Appleby, Jr., '41. Survivors include her sister, Mary Louise Stainback, '43.

JEAN ESTHER OUTLAND (CHRYSLER), '42 B.S., died January 26, 1982, in Norfolk, Virginia, following a lengthy illness. A transfer from the Norfolk Division of the College, she was a member of Chi Omega at William and Mary. Prior to marrying Walter P. Chrysler, Jr., she taught for several years in both the Norfolk public schools and the Norfolk Division of W&M. It was during their 37-year marriage that her husband built the extensive art collection that became the Chrysler Museum in Provincetown, Massachusetts; and it was largely through her efforts that the museum was eventually moved to Norfolk. She catalogued their numerous art reference materials (now more than 44,000 volumes) to form the Art Reference Library which bears her name at the Chrysler Museum; it is the largest collection of its kind in the South. She also built her own collection of largely contemporary paintings, sculpture and glass, much of which she donated to William and Mary to form the Jean Outland Chrysler Collection of Art, housed in Robert Andrews Hall. She was the speaker at the Charter Day Dedication of Andrews Hall. She was active in numerous civic organizations, devoting most of her energies to the Virginia Opera Association (serving as a board member and a former secretary) and to the Chrysler Museum. She served on the Development Committee of the Campaign for the College; and also in 1976, she was the Honorary Chairman of the Virginia Lung Association Christmas Seal Campaign. Survivors include her husband; two sisters - Louise Outland Smith, '37, and Nancy Outland Chandler, '45; and a brother.

JOHN BERTRAM REED, JR., '42, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, died on August 26, 1980. He attended Virginia Polytechnic Institute as well as William and Mary, and he was a Civil Engineer. He is survived by his wife.

PHILIP MONCURE WHITEHEAD, '42 B.A., of Virginia Beach, Virginia, died August 16, 1981. A lifelong resident of the Norfolk area, he transferred to William and Mary from the Norfolk Division. He was a retired veteran of both World War II and the Korean War. Survivors include his wife, Louise; his brother, Robert, '37; and his sister, Katharine Whitehead Byars, '44.

MARY LOUISE LOWELL (WILLIAMS), '43 B.S., of Feasterville, Pennsylvania, died July 8, 1981. A mathematics teacher, she is survived by her husband Alvin.

NICHOLAS H. LAVERIS, '51 B.A., died November 18, 1981, in Stamford, Connecticut. He was a member of Kappa Alpha at W&M, and he served in the U.S. Army Artillery in both World War II and Korea. At the time of his death, he was a marketing manager for General Automation. Survivors include his wife Maria, two sons, and a daughter.

STEPHEN KENT ADAMS, '75 B.S., of Springfield, Virginia, died in an automobile accident on January 10, 1982.
