THE COLLEGE OF WILLIAM AND MARY

The Alumni Gazette Marks A Milestone!

Newspaper Celebrates 50 Years Of Publishing With September Issue

THE ALUMNI GAZETTE OF THE COLLEGE OF WILLIAM AND MARY IN VIRGINIA

That's the complete, original and official name.

For checking out a typewriter, it's almost as effective a line as "the quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog." As the title for a publication, it's a disaster.

For most of its life our alumni publication has been known and titled more simply as the Alumni Gazette or Gazette. But not always. Twice in its history its editors chose to play up the William and Mary portion of its official name. They were John Crane and Ross Weeks, Jr., who were the only two editors who were not William and Mary alumni.

By whatever name, however, our alumni publication will be 50 years old in September.

Before beating drums and blowing horns in celebration, we should note that the Gazette's golden anniversary — plus 79 cents — will buy a cup of coffee at the Lodge Coffee Shop. This not only shows what inflation and tourism have done to Williamsburg prices, it puts our milestone into perspective.

Age itself, even a nice round number like 50, is not necessarily a resounding achievement. A 50-year life span is no big deal. William and Mary, for instance, is just 10 years shy of its 300th birthday.

It is not the number or years that matter; it is the kind of years. We can bang drums and toot horns only in proportion to how well the Gazette has served William and Mary and its alumni.

For 37 years the Gazette did not print its purpose and/or goals. Then the March, 1971, issue carried this quotation from the articles of incorporation of its publisher, the Society of the Alumni:

On the 50th anniversary of its founding, the Alumni Gazette asked Fred Frechette '46, whose association with the Gazette covers 36 of its 50 years, to offer his insights into the history of the alumni publication. Frechette's by-line first appeared in the Gazette in the issue of March, 1947 and he has been contributing to the Gazette ever since. He was managing editor 1950-52, editor 1963-65 and a member of the Publications Committee during his term on the Society's Board of Directors 1973-76. The opinions in the article are the author's.

Four former editors of the Alumni Gazette look over some of their old issues with current editor H. Westcott Cunningham '43 (seated, right). Standing, left to right, are James S. Kelly '51, Gordon C. Vliet '54, and Ross Weeks Jr. Next to Cunningham is Fred L. Frechette '46, author of the accompanying article. Below is the first issue of the Gazette, published in September 1933.

...to better keep alive the memories of College years and, by uniting the efforts of alumni and former students, to more efficiently promote the welfare of the College."

Disregarding the split infinitive, that is a statement of purpose with which William and Mary's 54,000 alumni could probably all agree — while holding 54,000 different perceptions of its meaning. There is absolutely no unanimity as to what might best promote the welfare of the College. As a measure of performance, it is like a piece of well-cooked spaghetti.

So there is no absolute standard of measurement for how well — or poorly — the Gazette performs. Which makes editing it anything but an exact issue. Each Gazette editor created a publication different from that of any other and often changed it significantly during his tenure. The product varied widely according to an editor's ability, taste, interests, interpretation of his mission and, to be blunt, diligence.

There have been 11 editors of the Alumni Gazette, plus, briefly, two acting editors. Three of them, however, covered 41 of the Gazette's 50 years: Charles P. McCurdy, Jr., '33, 14½ years; Ross Weeks, Jr., 14½ years, and James S. Kelly, '51, on and off for 12 years.

Almost exactly 300 issues of the Gazette have been published. One cannot leaf through them without reaching an inescapable conclusion: When the Gazette was good, it was very good indeed. But when it was bad, it was downright awful!

By any standard, the latter was true during its first years. The Gazette began life as a newspaper distributed free to all 6,000 alumni. The first issue appeared in September, 1933. That was a Depression year. The Gazette was appropriately depressing.

At that time annual memberships were the Society's source of revenue. It is safe to assume the Gazette was launched for the purpose of stimulating increased membership. If so, it failed — and by its own admission. A 1937 issue screamed "SHAME!" in a large headline over an article which 1) reported that only 4.9% of all alumni (which works out to less than 350) had joined up and 2) pleaded for memberships, also in large type, with this line: "THIS IS AN APPEAL TO THE LOYALTY OF YOUR IMMORTAL ALUMNI SOULS."

Bill Of Rights Institute Opens At Law School

Marshall-Wythe Receives Second Installment Of $1.75 Million Gift

The second installment of a seven-year, $1.75 million bequest from the Alfred Wilson Lee and Mary I. W. Lee Memorial Trust Fund, has been made to the Marshall-Wythe School of Law at William and Mary for the Institute of Bill of Rights which will open this fall.

Arthur B. Hanson '39, BCL '40, Washington, D. C., attorney and a trustee of the Lee Trust, presented a $250,000 check to Duane A. Dittman, vice president for university advancement, in Washington this summer.

In addition, William B. Spong Jr., dean of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, announced that three professors have been appointed to serve at the Institute which will be housed in a suite of offices on the second floor of the Law School. They are James W. Zirkle, associate professor of law, who will serve as deputy director of the Institute; Robert C. Palmer, assistant professor of law and Adler Fellow; and David A. Anderson, Visiting Lee Professor of Law.

Anderson is currently professor of law at the University of Texas. He is a former chairperson of the Mass Communications section of the Association of American Law Schools and has been active in numerous other organizations and legal activities regarding the mass media. He has written extensively in the area of mass communications. Anderson, a Harvard graduate, was a reporter and bureau chief for United Press International in Austin, Texas, before attending law school at the University of Texas where he was elected to the Texas Law Review and the Order of the Coif.

Palmer comes to The Marshall-Wythe faculty from the University of Michigan where he taught courses in English legal history and the historical origins of the Bill of Rights. Palmer received his Ph.D. in history from the University of Iowa in 1977. He has been a teaching fellow at the University of Iowa, an American Bar Foundation Fellow in London, an Andrew W. Mellon Fellow in the Humanities at the City University of New York, an I. W. Killam Postdoctoral Fellow at the University of Alberta, and a member of the Michigan Society of Fellows. He is the author of two books in the field of legal history. "The County Courts of Medieval England," and "The Whilton Dispute 1264-1380: A Socio-Legal Study of Dispute Settlement in Medieval England," as well as articles in the Michigan Law Review.

Professor Palmer, said Dean Spong, "is among the nation's outstanding legal historians."

"Professor Zirkle and I hope to organize the Institute's activities to develop a national center for Bill of Rights Law," added Spong. The Institute is envisioned as an important resource for the study of constitutional problems related to the First Amendment and media law.

Zirkle has been Associate Dean and Lecturer at the Yale Law School since 1977. He received a J. D. degree in 1972 from the University of Tennessee and an LL. M. in 1973 from Yale. He was a Research Associate with the environmental program of Oak Ridge National Laboratory, Editor-in-Chief of the Tennessee Law Review and Associate Professor and Director of the Legal Research Institute at the University of Mississippi from 1973-1977.

Under the terms of the Lee Fund gift to the Law School, the trustees of the fund may allocate an additional $3,000,000 to the Law School in the final distribution of the trust monies, after evaluations during the sixth year of the Institute's operations.

The recommendation of the trustees at the time the gift was announced noted particularly the substantial progress made both in the physical plant and in the faculty development at the Law School "as well as the intellectual achievement of the School's graduates in recent years."

In summing up the trustee's decision, Hanson said, "We believe that in placing this special trust and confidence in the ancient College of William and Mary and its Marshall-Wythe School of Law we may rekindle in the bosom of the people of our Country an understanding of our Constitutional heritage. As many scholars have noted, our Bill of Rights and particularly the First Amendment make our Country unique in the world in which more than 85 percent of the people are governed by totally different concepts of law or no law at all."

Arthur B. Hanson '39 (left) and James Leberz (right), vice president for investments at Riggs National Bank in Washington, D.C., present a check for $250,000 to Duane A. Dittman, vice president for university advancement at William and Mary. The check, presented this summer in Mr. Hanson's law offices in Washington, is the second installment of a $1.75 million gift from the Lee Trust for the Bill of Rights Institute at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

INSIDE ADMISSIONS

College Increases Minority Student Recruitment Effort

By Gary Ripple
Dean of Admissions

William and Mary is striving to increase the number of its minority students. For whatever the reasons, the College has not been successful in attracting students of other races whose academic and personal credentials compare favorably with those we enroll. Recently, a series of meetings was held by College administrators most directly involved in meeting William and Mary affirmative action responsibilities and a number of important initiatives have resulted. Expanded summer programs and a new transition program to enhance academic skills, a new Study Skills Director, and a new Assistant to the Dean of Admissions for Minority Recruiting are manifestations of our renewed determination to build and maintain a well-qualified and intellectually curious community of minority students.

Diversity is the core of a liberal arts education, and having students of other races at William and Mary helps to fulfill that goal. We have begun to train the leaders of tomorrow who will join in partnership with our other alumni in finding effective solutions to the problems of racism which prevent our society from achieving its full potential, but over the past few years our number of minority students has remained relatively low.

The Admissions Office is engaged in the highly competitive activity of recruiting minority students from throughout Virginia and across the nation. No other group is more aggressively pursued by all of America's top colleges and universities than these talented young people. Their numbers are relatively small and the pressures to recruit them are unbelievably great. To succeed in our goal of enrolling the most talented minority students possible, we need the aid of our alumni who can identify in their local communities outstanding young men and women of other races who have the talent and desire to succeed at William and Mary. Please notify us of any candidates who you believe would be interested in direct contact with me or a member of our staff. We will be happy to investigate their academic credentials and to keep you informed of our efforts to make a William and Mary education available to those persons you have recommended. We will no longer be content to watch other prestigious colleges enroll more diversified student populations. William and Mary can and must extend its outreach to include all outstanding young people regardless of race or ethnic origin.

Choir Honors Pappy Fehr At Alumni Reunion

Former Choir Director Proves He Still Has That Old Magic

More than 130 former choir members gathered at William and Mary in early June to make music together, renew old friendships, and to honor a man who had directed the Choir for nearly 30 years — Dr. Carl A. "Pappy" Fehr.

Every class from Dr. Fehr's tenure — from 1945 to 1974 — was represented at the reunion, including seven former choir members from his first choir. Alumni from 1975 through the present, who sang in the Choir under Dr. Frank Lendrim, the current director, also attended the reunion. Some alumni had traveled from as far as Hawaii, Bermuda, Canada, Washington State and California.

The highlight of the three-day weekend, June 10-12, came on Saturday night when the former choir members, under Dr. Fehr's direction, gave a concert to a nearly full house in Phi Beta Kappa Hall.

"A former choir member once said, 'Pappy makes magic of music,'" said Lavina Pretz Phillips '57, reunion coordinator of the Alumni Choir. "Indeed, he did. In just two days, the former choir members of all past years since 1945 were a cohesive ensemble making magic of favorite choral works, garnered from well-balanced selections which have always been a trademark of William and Mary choirs. Hearty applause followed every selection, and the same standing ovation that had greeted the group accompanied the individual choir members until each one had left the stage following the William and Mary Hymn and Alma Mater."

The weekend began with registration on Friday morning followed by luncheon in the Andrews Gallery Foyer at which H. Westcott Cunningham '43, Executive Vice President of the Society of the Alumni, welcomed the group. During rehearsal later in the day President Graves dropped by to welcome the returning alumni.

On Friday evening, the alumni gathered for dinner in Andrews Gallery Foyer at which alumni who organized the reunion were recognized: Bill Neal '55, chairman of the reunion committee; Lavina Phillips '57, reunion coordinator from the Alumni Society; Helen Taylor Riley '76 and Joyce Nunn McKnight '58, membership recorders; Jean Harrup Cogle '49 and Dennis Cogle '49, treasurer and registration co-chairmen; Joyce McKnight, refreshment committee chairman, and her committee, Helen Strickler McConnell '46, Dennis Cogle, Jackie Crebbs '64, Marsha Krotseng '77, Helen Riley, and Marjorie Bowman Allen '47.

Tom Terry '74 was recognized as music coordinator and distributor. Charles R. Varner, director of the William and Mary band, was also acknowledged for his contributions to the reunion. Also recognized were Joe Phillips '61, motel reservations; Ben Kellam '78, stage manager, Aggie Vasso '57, publicity; and Merritt Ierley '58 and Gene Galusha '63 who made presentations at a banquet on Saturday night.

At the Saturday night banquet, Dr. and Mrs. Fehr were honored on their 50th wedding anniversary with background music from 1933 which was provided by Gene Galusha who also read a message from former President

Davis Y. Paschall '32. James S. Kelly '51, assistant to the President, and Austin L. Roberts III '69, president of the Society of the Alumni, also spoke. Merritt Ierley presented a garden bench on behalf of the choir to the Fehrs after one of his original wedding hymns ("O God of Love") was sung to them. Tracy Russell '60, who accompanied the choir members at their Saturday night concert, performed Wagner's "Liebestod" in honor of the Fehr's 50th wedding anniversary. After a few remarks Dr. Fehr closed the evening by leading his former students in "The Lord Bless You and Keep You."

QUESTIONS OF PAST AND PRESENT

Most of us measure change based upon memories, a flexible form of reality. We wander on campus and seek to place a shadow of our past selves among the students we see around us, estimating how we would fit in. We create an image of life at school from the clues picked up on our wanderings and try to compare it to our years there. But these are imperfect attempts at measuring change, based upon an imperfect picture of the past which we have adjusted to suit our needs.

True images of past and present, viewed side by side, afford a different evaluation. Compressing the years, they reveal the sharp contrast between the end points of a decade's change and prompt other musings.

Do the bare rooms of the past indicate students dedicated only to learning, for whom comfortable surroundings were superfluous? Or are they evidence of a lifestyle when most social activity took place outside of the dorm room? Or are these pictures of students enjoying delayed adolescence and the Bohemian lifestyle of the early 70's? Are today's students more concerned with the television, refrigerators, stereos, rugs and other comforts which surround them? Or does the attention to these bachelor apartments simply show their eagerness to enter adulthood? Or are the residents of these bachelor apartments simply showing their eagerness to enter adulthood? What changes have taken place in the attitude of the college administration? Are they simply more permissive now or more concerned with the whole student? A number of questions spin from the clues in these pictures. It is less a fanciful wandering than a Homecoming stroll around campus but just as rewarding. And perhaps this reveals more about ourselves as we discover the differences between the real image and our memories.

The Gazette was probably reduced to that kind of turgid begging because it failed to offer very much which might attract readers or stimulate their interest in William and Mary. It had the eye appeal of a Victorian casket, presenting endless grey columns filled with such stimulating stuff as the alumni oration of 1872 and excerpts from faculty minute books of the 1770's.

Although it appeared 10 times annually for five years, the early Gazette succeeded in concealing almost all traces of what the College and its students, faculty and alumni were like in the mid-1930's. It did not even recognize the fact that women had been students since 1919, for it gives the distinct impression that William and Mary was an all-male institution.

A few glimpses of the College slipped through the cracks. It did cover, after a fashion, the athletic teams. Thus one learns the teams and their athletes were not the Tribe and Indians. They were the Tri-Color and Fighting Virginians. The Society's total annual budget for 1933 was $3,537. That would operate today's Society for perhaps four days. And a 1935 issue reported alumni vocations: 609 businessmen, 507 teachers, 214 physicians, 195 lawyers, 166 farmers, 109 high school principals and 75 ministers. That came to 1,875 which left more than 4,000 alumni unclassified. There was no explanation.

Somehow the Gazette survived its first five years. Then, in 1938, it changed shape. From a 10-time-a-year newspaper, it became a four-times-a-year magazine.

Architect of the transformation was Charles P. McCurdy, Jr., '33. He took on editorship with no previous journalism experience or training. His early issues were undistinguished, but he began to beef up the Gazette's coverage of College and alumni affairs. One 1938 innovation was the class letter. The Gazette still runs them and they probably rank first in overall readership.

McCurdy generated income for the magazine by selling advertising space. In the late 30's and early 40's, Chesterfield Cigarettes were a back cover fixture. On the inside, Williamsburg Battery, College Pharmacy and Williamsburg Laundry were among regular advertisers. Their phone numbers were, respectively, 6, 11 and 34.

McCurdy and his wartime substitutes (he was on two-year leave of absence for Navy service) made a tremendous effort to keep track of William and Mary alumni who wore uniforms in World War II. By the end of 1945, the Gazette had listed the names of 2,091. The cover of the March, 1946, issue displayed the names of 81 who died in service. (The total eventually reached 92.)

With experience, McCurdy

improved the Gazette dramatically. In 1949, it won its first national recognition in the form of an Award of Merit from the American Alumni Council. Although not a top-ranking award, it was an impressive achievement. For many editors, it might have been a culmination; for McCurdy, it was just a beginning.

Charles P. McCurdy, Jr. '33

In 1949 he redesigned the Gazette as a clone of Time Magazine. Although not a particularly original approach — Ohio State's alumni publication was similarly styled — McCurdy's version was inspired. It featured sprightly writing, coverage of every aspect of the College, imaginative use of illustrations and lively, tongue-in-cheek headlines and photo cutlines. The result was a major triumph for William and Mary.

In both 1950 and 1951 the American Alumni Council cited the Gazette for "Outstanding Editorial Achievement" and honored it as one of the "Top Ten" alumni publications in the nation.

In selecting magazines for its "Top Ten" ranking, the American Alumni Council considered all publications equally, regardless of size of institution or budget. In spite of this, the Gazette won a place among publications from Chicago, Columbia, Dartmouth, Harvard, Illinois, Johns Hopkins, Michigan and Ohio State!

While William and Mary was achieving a pinnacle in the field of alumni publications, the College was rocked by an athletic scandal in the spring of 1951. McCurdy planned a series of articles for the Gazette designed to explain what went wrong and why. The first such article appeared in the October, 1951, issue. It was also the last. Because of a disagreement with the Society's Board of Directors concerning the advisability of continuing the series, McCurdy resigned.

There is sequel. In the summer of 1952 the American Alumni Council gave its highest publication awards to McCurdy and his managing editor. It is the only time in the history of the Council and its successor organization, CASE, that publication awards were ever given to individuals rather than their institutions. Within months of his resignation at William and Mary he was appointed executive director of the State Universities Association (later expanded to become the Association of American Universities), a position he held until retirement.

A significant and lasting change McCurdy made was abolishment of annual memberships as a means of financing the Society and establishment, in 1950, of the William and Mary Fund. His ultimate aim was to distribute the Gazette free to all alumni, but budget constraints limited circulation to those who contributed to the Fund. Today, of course, the Gazette does go to all alumni, or at least to those with valid addresses — about 46,000 of them.

The Gazette remained a four-times-a-year magazine for 20 years after McCurdy resigned, a time span covering the presidencies of Alvin D. Chandler '23 and Davis Y. Paschall '32. Although never dropping to the level of the 1930's, the Gazette's quality had more ups and downs than a zipper. Nonetheless, it kept reasonably abreast of events in that era of great expansion and much building.

James S. Kelly, '51, was alumni secretary most of those years. Kelly made innumerable contributions to the growth of the Society and won countless friends. He wanted a topnotch publication and had an excellent perception of its potential role in achieving his purposes.

Kelly spent a great deal of effort in seeking qualified people who might return the Gazette to the glories of its McCurdy years. He sought people with the necessary talent who would work more for love than money, for he had very little with which to pay for outside help. His editors and editorial helpers had to moonlight. This was not conducive to long tenures. That is why Kelly served as editor three different times. Nevertheless, Gazettes during Kelly's tenure as executive secretary of the Society of the Alumni won national awards in both 1955 and 1957.

In 1966, Ross Weeks, Jr., a Colgate graduate and former Richmond News Leader reporter, came to William and Mary as Director of Public Relations and accepted the additional role as editor of the Gazette.

Weeks fit the role as editor the way a hand fits into a glove. The magazines he produced — particularly those from 1968 to 1972 — were superb. Their design and overall quality exceeded that of the award-winning McCurdy years. Unfortunately for William and Mary, there were no more American Alumni Council awards. (The organization had ceased to exist, supplanted by CASE — Council for the Advancement and Support of Education — and a radically different approach to evaluating alumni publications.)

Week's magazines not only could grace anyone's coffee table, they were eminently readable, with wide-ranging coverage of the College and its alumni. But Weeks recognized that the era of the alumni magazine had ended.

"The College was emerging as a modern university," Weeks explained. "The expansion of bricks and mortar was, by and large, completed and the emphasis shifted to qualitative improvements.

"Half the alumni left the College in 1950 or later, and they were getting a periodical from William and Mary that was designed for an older audience." He said that with the support of the Society's Board of Directors, the Gazette — for the same annual budget — was changed from magazine to a tabloid newspaper published 10 times annually. Called a "magpaper" in alumni publishing vernacular, it became possible because a Williamsburg firm installed printing equipment which could handle it.

"The magpaper format allowed a great increase in news and feature content, offered more photo coverage of events and people, and made it possible for us to broaden the audience to include parents and friends of the College without undue extra expense," Weeks noted. "And where alumni had only been receiving four magazines a year — two months out of date by the time they were mailed — they began receiving 10 tabloid newspapers with news fresh on the day they were printed."

The Gazette has been a magpaper for 11 years. During those 11 years every facet of alumni support and participation has skyrocketed, from annual giving to Homecoming attendance. Although there is a chicken and egg aspect to evaluating the Gazette's contribution to this great surge, Week's publication has to be given a great deal of credit. It was and remains a class act, so attractive, newsy, lively and readable that it attracts readers and stimulates their interest.

Interestingly, several years after adopting the magpaper format, with the support of Gordon Vliet '54, Executive Vice President of the Society of the Alumni, Weeks re-established a magazine version of the Gazette. Published twice a year and distributed only to those who contribute to the College, it is a prestige publication with top quality content and writing. After Weeks left the college to become Executive Director of the Jamestown-Yorktown Foundation, Vliet took over the editorship of the Gazette for a year and kept the momentum and quality intact.

Looking through 300 Gazettes from 50 years of publication generates in this writer's mind a great many observations and comments which do not really fit into a concise review. Nevertheless, we pass four of them along:

ARE YOU RECEIVING THE WILLIAM AND MARY MAGAZINE?

If not, we would like to send it to you.

The William and Mary Magazine is published twice a year — in January and July — and mailed to all donors to the College of William and Mary. Created four years ago, The William and Mary Magazine is our way of saying thanks to the 13,000 alumni and friends who support the College financially.

The William and Mary Magazine serves as a showcase for the writing and intellectual talents of our alumni and faculty.

Here is a sampling of some recent articles:

LIFE IN LOS ANGELES by noted author John D. Weaver '32 . . .
DOWN AMONG THE GROUNDINGS, an article about the television show Hill Street Blues, by Emmy nominee Karen Hall '78 . . .
DETROIT: MYTHS AND MADNESSES by Pulitzer Prize-winning columnist Ed Roberts '56 . . . and F. SCOTT FITZGERALD: THE REMAKING OF A REPUTATION by Scott Donaldson.

If you aren't receiving The William and Mary Magazine, we would like to send it to you. Simply send a gift, of whatever size, to The College of William and Mary, Box 1693, Williamsburg, Virginia 23187, and we will add you to the mailing list for the next issue. If you would like to receive the Summer 1983 issue, let us know and we will put it in the mail to you.

Thanks for helping William and Mary provide for its young people.

H. Westcott Cunningham '43
 Editor, The Alumni Gazette
 Executive Vice President,
 Society of the Alumni

1) The Gazette has reported 50 Homecomings. Each was the 'best ever', apparently.

2) Until recent years, faculty members were fairly frequent contributors of articles. Generally speaking, as writers they are good teachers.

3) The Gazette presents a William and Mary without warts. After reading all the good news, one cannot help but look for a few clouds in the sky. . . and wonder what the Gazette might be like if, in addition to alumni births, marriages and deaths, we also read about divorces, bankruptcies and jail sentences.

4) For more than half its life, the Gazette was in the hands of its two best editors, McCurdy and Weeks. At the risk of oversimplification, we might summarize their major contributions to the College like this: McCurdy won for the Gazette national recognition where Weeks won alumni attention.

H. Westcott Cunningham '43, the Society's new Executive Vice President, is the latest in the line of Gazette editors. He will be assisted by S. Dean Olson, a former Weeks associate who is an unsung hero in the Gazette success story. But former English instructor, prep school headmaster and college president Cunningham will undoubtedly stamp his own personality upon our alumni publication. Editors usually do.

"I like what the Gazette has been doing in recent years," said Cunningham. "It's on a roll. I'm going to do my best to keep it there."

A roll, indeed. Alumni are reading today's Gazette. It seems to be uniting them and more efficiently promoting the welfare of the College. And that, after all, is its purpose.

So let's hear it for the Gazette's Fiftieth! A few beats on the drum and toots of the horn, please.

Tribe Offense Plans To Treat Opponents Rudely

Quarterback Stan Yagiello Leads Experienced Offensive Unit

William and Mary's 1983 football team has a very "offensive" nature about it.

No, that doesn't mean the Indians are an exceptionally rude, rowdy bunch, although they do hope to treat 11 opponents rather unkindly.

Instead, the Tribe's "offensive" tag is derived from its considerable experience on its offensive unit, a group that is expected to be able to light up the scoreboard this Fall.

With 10 of 11 starters returning, headed by quarterback Stan Yagiello, the young Tribe offense of a year ago assumes a veteran look. Although the Indians moved the ball well last season, averaging 345 yards per game, turnovers and other breakdowns due to inexperience cost them dearly, especially when they neared the opponent's goal.

"Our emphasis will be on not turning the ball over and not forcing throws," says Jimmy Laycock '70 who is entering his fourth season as head coach. "When you throw as much as we do, you have to realize (an open man) isn't always going to be there."

The Indians put the ball in the air over 55 per cent of the time last year, averaging 250 yards per contest compared to only 90 on the ground. Yagiello set the tone for the season when he connected for a school record 414 yards in a 35-17 season-opening loss to Miami (Ohio).

The junior from Livingston, N. J., finished his first season by completing 57.6 percent of his passes for 1841 yards and seven touchdowns.

"Stan is as good as there is talent-wise," says Laycock. "Experience will enable him to get better and better."

There is good depth at quarterback with senior Dave Murphy, who himself hit on 61 percent of his tosses for 908 yards and four TD's. Sophomore Rod Lawrence also has a strong arm.

How well the passing game fares is literally in the hands of the receivers. In that sense, the one loss from the offensive unit was a big one — record-setting wide receiver Kurt Wrigley, who is now with the New York Giants.

Still, the Indians do have last year's leading receiver back at split end, junior Jeff Sanders who had 57 catches for 751 yards. After Spring practice, Wrigley's spot at wide receiver seemed to be a toss-up between senior Mike Sutton, who missed last season, and junior Dave McDowell.

"We're going to need more consistency from our receivers," notes Laycock.

The Indians passing game could end up centering around the tight end this Fall rather than the wide receivers. At that spot is junior Glenn Bodnar, a 6-foot-5, 200-pounder who is a sure-handed receiver (31 catches, 303 yards).

"Glenn has always been a good receiver and he has improved his blocking," says Laycock. "He gives us more flexibility. We could gear our passing game around him."

Don't count on the Indians being just an aerial show. Laycock hopes to vary the offense a little more and says, "The potential is there for a better running game."

The ground attack is bolstered by the return of tailback Bernie Marrazzo and fullback Bobby Wright, both of whom missed several games a year ago with injuries.

Jeff Powell (288 yards), Dave Scanlon (287) and Marrazzo (286) were 1982's top ground gainers. Marrazzo, who got his yardage in just seven games, is an exciting runner. He averaged 4.3 yards per carry. Scanlon will be his No. 1 backup while Powell, a junior, is not in school this year.

Wright, a junior who missed five games last year, is a strong, talented fullback. Depth could be a problem at this position since Jim McHeffey, who averaged four yards per carry in playing all 11 games, was moved to linebacker in the Spring.

Marrazzo and Wright give the Indians an added dimension in that both are excellent pass receivers.

Some excellent freshmen prospects should play a prominent role in supplying depth in the backfield as well as at wide receiver.

With the entire offensive line returning, the Indians should be well equipped to win the war in the trenches. Laycock labels it his most experienced line ever.

Senior guard Mario Shaffer, a strong candidate for post-season honors, heads the group. He will team with fellow guard Lee Glenn, tackles Ray Bisczat and Chris Huge, and center Bob Solderitch. Jeff Bishop, Graeme Miller and Milt Johnson all started at times last year, too.

While the offense is expected to put its share of points on the board, the question is whether the defense can keep the opponents from scoring more. Last Fall the Indians yielded an average of 414 yards and 30 points per outing.

Laycock hopes to remedy that situation with a couple of major adjustments.

First, he is emphasizing ball control on offense to help the defense, particularly early in the season. "We want to try to limit the defense's time on the field and not put them in bad field position when we do give up the ball," explains Laycock.

Secondly, the Indians will switch to a 4-3 alignment after three years in a wide-tackle-six scheme.

"We have the personnel to move into the 4-3 and I think it will be to our advantage once they learn their new assignments and feel comfortable with the change," notes Laycock.

The biggest difference in the new alignment will be a four-deep secondary which should provide more flexibility and help prevent the "big play" which killed the Indians a number of times last season.

Laycock readily admits that in changing defenses "we're really trying to change attitudes on defense. We don't want one mistake to get them down."

"We're also emphasizing more aggressiveness on defense. We may stunt a little more this year."

Although there are 22 lettermen on the defensive unit, only six were starters. Veterans Mike Murphy and Steve Zeuli will anchor the front four while free safety Mark Kelso "can play with anybody" in the secondary.

Linebacker has the most experience with veterans Ed Robinson, Brian Black, Karl Wernecke, Guy Crittenden and Drew Sharp.

"I think we have some solid people on defense and I think we'll be okay if we let them get their feet wet right," adds Laycock.

The Tribe's kicking game is some-

TICKET INFORMATION

Tickets for William and Mary football games may be ordered by contacting The Ticket Office, P.O. Box 399, Williamsburg, Va. 23187, or by telephoning (804) 253-4705. Home games are $10.00 each while season home game tickets are $36.00 for sideline and $18.00 for endzone.

Football Coach Jimmy Laycock '70 plans to unleash the considerable talents of quarterback Stan Yagiello and nine other returning starters against 11 opponents, including the University of North Carolina. Free safety Mark Kelso (right) will anchor the defense which hopes to hold the opposition to less than the 414 yards and 30 points per game the Tribe gave up last year.

what unsettled. Brian Morris returns to kick extra points and field goals. Although he was 20 of 22 on PAT's and eight of 12 on field goals, his longest three-pointer was just 35 yards. "We would like him to improve his range," states Laycock.

The punting was handled by Rod Lawrence a year ago but he lacked consistency. Freshmen may help in this area.

The Indians face a realistic schedule with only North Carolina and Virginia Tech really considered out of their class.

Hopefully, opponents will find the Indians "very offensive" as the Tribe tries to improve on last season's 3-8 ledger.

The Good Ship William and Mary

Women's Program Steers Steady Course In First NCAA Year

A year ago, there was some speculation at William and Mary as to whether the "good ship," the women's athletic program, would sink or swim in the "treacherous" waters of Division I.

Despite such musings, the 1982-83 Tribe teams set sail with customary preseason optimism. They navigated through the gales of upgraded schedules, around the reefs of recruiting and across the shoals of scholarship funding to an overall 54.5 winning percentage. Their success, consistent with that of the three previous years, is buoying a seaworthy optimism for 1983-84.

"I am encouraged by the attitude of our coaches and athletes," said Millie West, Women's Athletic Director, "As always, they have risen to the challenge. And, I foresee that we will continue to improve."

A few shifts in the "rigging" will help to smooth this year's sailing. At the national level, the program will again be a member of the NCAA; but, on September 1, it will switch from following AIAW regulations to NCAA guidelines. With respect to regional affiliation, the recent merger of the EIAIW with the ECAC will concurrently reduce the glut of athletic acronyms and heighten recognition.

Looking to the first leg of the '83-84 course, the fall sports are all in ship-shape, particularly in terms of returning talent. Not one roster is missing more than two or three names from the previous year.

The cross country (5th), field hockey (2nd), soccer (3rd) and volleyball (3rd) teams hope to better their respective state championship finishes. The golf and tennis teams will defend their respective state titles in the spring.

Heading the list of returning harriers are senior Alison Hawley and junior Valerie Roeder. Roeder helped the team to a fifth place regional finish in '82 with an individual eighth place.

Highlighting the field hockey seasons will be the second annual Virginia Intercollegiate League Championship, which the Tribe will host, November 3-4. Co-captains Karen Thorne and Chris Paradis top a list of ten veterans, seven of whom have three or more years of starting experience.

Of special note is the Alumnae Game, scheduled for 10:00 a.m. Saturday, October 22, during Homecoming weekend. All former players are welcome and urged to contact coach Jean Stettler.

A few years away from holding an alumnae game is the soccer team, which enters its third varsity season. Captain Mary Danz is expected to be back in goal with vice-captain Erin Sheehey directing the field defense.

Senior Elaine Carlson and sophomore Jane Fanestil are back on the volleyball roster. Also returning is coach Debra Hill, who spent last year as a graduate assistant volleyball coach at nationally-rated Louisiana State.

Looking to the last leg of '82-83, the lacrosse team completed the composite picture in fair winds. Winning state and regional titles, it earned one of 12 national bids in its first NCAA season. Though losing to eventual winner Delaware in the first round, a number of Indians received significant postseason recognition.

First, five players were selected to the Brine/WILCA All-Regional Team.

They were Dana Hooper, Whitney Taylor, Basia Deren, Lisa Fuccella and Chris Paradis. Hooper, the 1983 AEF Outstanding Senior Athlete Award winner, went on to gain WILCA All-American honors and to make the United States Squad.

"Dana's biggest asset is her ability to control the ball," said lacrosse coach Feffie Barnhill of her '83 co-captain. "She quarterbacked our attack and distributed the ball to those who were in the best position to score. She also had the best shooting percentage on the team (52.8%)."

Thayer and Deren were selected to the USWLA All-American Team, and Deren made the U. S. Reserve Team. First year player Mary Pat Kurtz joined Hooper on the U.S. Squad roster.

Finally, following a shaky start, Julie Duff put it all together during postseason play. The talented scorer was selected to the U. S. (First) Team.

"Making the U. S. Team is the highest honor that an individual can achieve in lacrosse," Barnhill said, likewise praising the former junior's peak performance.

A House For A President

Parke Rouse Jr. Writes Engaging History Of Nation's Oldest Presidential Home

For several years now there has been a movement on the William and Mary campus to restore and refurbish the fine old Georgian home which has housed the College's presidents since 1733. The restoration and modernization work — making all four floors usable — has been suitable 18th century furnishings continues.

One of the leaders in this project — a project inspired largely by Zoe Graves, wife of President Thomas A. Graves Jr. — is Parke Rouse Jr., the prolific Williamsburg historian, columnist and collector of anecdotes. He heads a donors group acknowledged as The President's House Friends.

And now, to mark the 250th anniversary of the house, he has written a pleasing book about it — about the men who lived there, about their moments of success and tribulation, about the controversies and wars which raged about the house that stands at College Corner.

It is the oldest house for a college president in the United States and it has sheltered scholars and scoundrels, notable visitors and vandals. It has been damaged by fire and abuse. Additions once altered its original symmetry. And cows, as everyone knows, once grazed in its yard.

But now the house stands as it was intended to be: a fine residence for the college president and a showpiece for William and Mary.

Now it is easy to imagine as Rouse describes the Rev. James Blair, the College's founder, conversing in the drawing room with plantation owners, or Bishop James Madison dining with Episcopal clerics, or Thomas Roderick Dew meeting with faculty and students.

Around its fireplaces affairs political and ecclesiastical were discussed and debated, Latin verses recited and the classics read. Along its hallways children romped and in its bedchambers sick men died.

Author Parke Rouse's new book "A House for A President" includes vignettes on all 24 presidents who lived in the President's House including the last three residents (left to right) Alvin D. Chandler '22, President Graves, and Davis Y. Paschall '32 who posed for this rare photo in 1971 shortly after President Graves' inauguration.

Any account of the President's House must also be a history of the College itself, of its times of academic brilliance and royal patronage, and of squabbling between faculty and governing visitors, and of student unrest, and of financial woes.

Many ancient records have been lost in fire and war, but Rouse has managed to piece together scattered facts and recollections for a highly readable story about a residence and an institution.

His latest contribution to William and Mary — this new book of spritely scholarship — is as valued as any gift and it is one that can be shared and enjoyed by all who are fond of this ancient and noble college.

Career Planning Programs Involve Alumni Support

Career Speaker Series, Alumni Career Advisory Service Attract Alumni Expertise

William and Mary alumni have a long tradition of becoming involved in the activities of their alma mater, and the programs offered by the Office of Career Planning are no exception. Two such programs, the Career Speaker Series and the Alumni Career Advisory Service (ACAS), could not function without the enthusiastic support offered from alumni of all ages.

The Career Speakers Series, now in its third year, is designed to provide students the opportunity to gain first-hand knowledge of particular career fields. Alumni are invited to campus to present a seminar on the various aspects of their jobs, including daily responsibilities, possible career paths and the job outlook in their field. In addition, speakers relate their personal experiences, offer advice, and allow students an opportunity to ask individual questions. Seventeen of the twenty-four speakers who visited the campus during the 1982-83 academic year were alumni, and they spoke on topics ranging from careers in the foreign service, medical ethics, geology, investment banking, TV broadcasting, sales and marketing, hospital administration, and publishing. The speakers included: Dennis Dix, '57; Laura L. Townsend, '77; Edward D. Fales, '30; Laurie A. Johnston, '76; David L. Bernd, '71; Gail Porter Long, '72; Judith Plavnick, '81; Daniel H. Giffen, '60; Beth Fischer, '78; H. Thomas Legg, '60; Wayne C. Berry, M. B. A. '71; Stephanie Buchanan, '81; Rev. Nancy R. McCann, '73; John L. Deusebio, '78; Robert Gill, '49; Stacy K. Puls, '81; and Geoffrey S. Beitner, '70.

Many of those who participated in the Career Speaker Series are also involved in the Alumni Career Advisory Service along with over 250 other alumni. The ACAS program provides students with the opportunity to thoroughly investigate career possibilities through contacts and informational interviews with people currently working in the field. Participating alumni have completed a sponsor questionnaire which briefly describes their career field indicates whether they are willing to speak with students about their careers over the phone, correspond with students by letter, or offer students an opportunity to visit their place of work. These sheets are kept on file as long as the alumnus agrees to participate. The supervised file is open to all students, who are responsible for contacting alumni sponsors in whom they are interested. Though all three methods of interviewing alumni for information are valuable, a visit to the actual work place is usually most helpful. Students have often commented that an hour's visit to the work setting in which they are interested provided them with more insight into the career than anything they could have read in a book.

Regardless of the type or extent of involvement, the first-hand experiences of these William and Mary alumni are an invaluable resource for students. Students are eager to hear what the alumni like about their jobs as well as what they wish they could change. Students need tips on landing their first job and what to expect from entry-level positions. Some students have definite ideas about entering a particular field, while others are still trying to decide, but all benefit from the help of these alumni.

Both the Career Speaker Series and the Alumni Career Advisory Service are excellent opportunities for alumni to become directly involved in helping the College meet the current needs of the student community. For more information about the programs or how to become involved please write or call the Office of Career Planning, Morton 140, (804) 253-4427.

Joe Muscarelle '27: The Man Behind The Museum

Education Is Heartfelt Interest For New Jersey Building Contractor

"Oh no," says Joseph L. Muscarelle, Sr., he isn't another Horatio Alger. Not for him any glowing accounts of rags-to-riches success. In fact, he slices through such hyperbole like a warm knife through butter.

"God's been very good to me," he says. Case closed.

But the facts of Muscarelle's life tell a different story.

Joseph L. Muscarelle was born on New York's Lower East Side, the oldest of four brothers and three sisters. Their father was a mill hand struggling to make ends meet, and the family moved to Garfield, N.J., when Muscarelle was two years old.

Young Joe attended New York Preparatory School and set his sights on college. He worked after classes at the New York Public Library, as a freight car checker for the Erie Railroad, and on construction jobs during vacations.

Graduating near the top of his class, Muscarelle came to William and Mary in 1923. There he continued the pattern established in high school, working in between classes as a waiter and doing odd jobs. Still he cut the academic mustard, completing pre-med studies in three years. Nowadays, Muscarelle brushes that aside with, "The requirements weren't as stringent then."

The future looked bright for this William and Mary student in 1926, when he was accepted by the University of Buffalo Medical School. But it wasn't to be.

Looking back, Muscarelle says it all in one statement: "On the way over to Buffalo, my brother Samuel was killed in a car he was driving me in."

Samuel had been the family breadwinner, a job which his brother Joe now took over. That meant literally picking up Samuel's toolbox and going to work using carpentry tools he'd never used before. "It was a struggle," Muscarelle admits, "but I was ambitious."

His first job was completing some alterations work and a small house that Samuel Muscarelle and his partner had begun before the accident. Methodically, Joe Muscarelle supplemented his work experience with evening classes in blueprint reading and estimating at Columbia University.

In the years to follow, Joe Muscarelle guided his one-man firm — founded the day after his brother's funeral — into what is currently one of the top 400 construction companies in the nation. It employs over 1,000 people at peak work periods and has put in place more than $40,000,000 worth of construction annually.

The Hackensack, N.J., contractor and real estate developer carries the title of Chairman of the Board instead of "Dr." Joseph Muscarelle, with no regrets. "Except," he says quietly, "that I lost my brother in the process."

Family ties seem important to Muscarelle, who talks of how he and his wife met as if it were yesterday instead of 1928. They married in 1930, and have three children: Carole, Marlene and Joseph L. Jr. Mentioning children launches the grandfather of 15 into a description of his wife's philanthropic work with youngsters. Margaret Muscarelle has received both a national award, the Jefferson Award, for outstanding community service; and an honorary degree, Doctor of Humane Letters, from the John Dewey International University Consortium this year for her humanitarianism and outstanding community service. Other 1983 recipients of the Jefferson Award were Kirk Douglas and Helen Hayes.

Her husband is especially proud of her involvement with the Margaret P. Muscarelle Child Development Center in Garfield, New Jersey. "It takes care of handicapped children and the children of working mothers," says Muscarelle, "She's quite active with it, as well as being involved in many charitable causes."

For Joe Muscarelle, education is a heartfelt interest. It led him to establish the Joseph L. Muscarelle Foundation, Inc. in 1953, which has, among other charitable contributions, awarded over 250 partial scholarships to college students who otherwise could not afford an education.

He's also the sole donor and builder of the Joseph L. Muscarelle Center for Building Construction Studies at Fairleigh Dickinson University in Teaneck, N.J., and was the recipient of an Honorary Doctor of Laws from that institution.

Director, trustee and officer of numerous organizations in his home state, Joe Muscarelle has also received a slew of awards for achievement in his profession and for his humanitarianism, including the Pope John Paul II Humanitarian Award from Seton Hall University in 1981, and is a member of the Knights of Malta.

One might think that answering a call for help from his alma mater might be just one more item on a very lengthy list to a busy man. Muscarelle, who received the Alumni Medallion in 1981 from the Society of the Alumni, doesn't see it that way.

"First of all, I love the College of William and Mary. Second, it helped me to find myself among my peers. It also helped me to realize and appreciate the importance of education, and I've been involved in the educational process ever since."

There's one more reason why Muscarelle has strongly supported the establishment of William and Mary's first museum of art, and is enthusiastic about seeing the second phase of construction — which will add five exhibition galleries, office facilities and increased storage areas — begun.

It has a lot to do with Italy's place in civilization and world history, her contributions to art, science and statesmanship. Muscarelle quotes a former Columbia University president, Nicholas Murray Butler, who said, "The place of Italy in civilization is best shown by trying to subtract that place from world history — take away her scientific accomplishments, her statesmanship, her leadership in the world for many years and what have you left? The world is badly decapitated. You can subtract Italian culture from civilization only by destroying that civilization." He is clearly proud of that legacy, and of his heritage.

So, says Joseph L. Muscarelle, Sr., of his gift and pledge of $1,000,000 to William and Mary, "I'm making this contribution as a symbol of my Italian heritage and also to help in a small way my contribution to the American way of life."

Not in a small way, and by no means a small man.

College To Open Its New Art Museum

Muscarelle Museum Of Art To Be Dedicated At Homecoming

It's official now. William and Mary has its own art museum, an elegant one which does justice to an impressive collection of art begun in 1732: three million dollars worth of paintings, drawings, engravings and Colonial silver of great historic and artistic value.

Designed by noted Williamsburg architect Carlton Abbott, the Joseph and Margaret Muscarelle Museum of Art stands adjacent to Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall and Andrews Fine Arts

Hall on the new campus. Inside the single-story, contemporary brick building is a spacious foyer which leads to a large triangular gallery — primarily for paintings and sculpture — and a smaller room for graphic works of art. On the other side of the foyer are offices and storage areas.

A solar wall has been incorporated into the museum's design to make it energy efficient: tall tubes of water, resembling a colonnade, transfer the sun's heat and supply 25 to 30% of the building's heating needs.

Blending art, architecture and state-of-the-art technology, this solar wall has been turned into an artwork itself, thanks to the talents of artist Gene Davis of Washington, D.C. and a grant from the Virginia Commission for the Arts. Recognized as one of the most important painters in America today, Davis has dyed the water in each tube to create a colorful facade.

Along the sidewalk near the museum entrance, a seat-wall awaits sightseers and students. As a special gift to the museum, the Olde Guard classes of 1927, 1928, 1929, and 1931 have donated funds for landscaping.

Except for the generosity of alumni and friends of the College, the Muscarelle Museum of Art would have remained a cherished dream instead of William and Mary's first privately-funded building. Joseph L. Muscarelle Sr. '27 and his wife Margaret, Jeanne '39 and Gilbert '34 Kinnamon and the family of Bernard B. and Erin W. Spiegel led the way, along with over a dozen other donors who have contributed their time and energy. They will be honored by the museum's first exhibit.

Called "William and Mary Collects," and containing 19th and 20th century works of art from the alumni and friends of the College, the exhibit will open to the public on Oct. 22 during Homecoming weekend. The display will consist of works by some of the most significant artists of the last 200 years: 65 prints, watercolors, paintings and sculptures by 54 artists, including Picasso, Moore and Toulouse-Lautrec.

"William and Mary Collects" is just the beginning. Over the next year, a series of exhibits will showcase the museum and no doubt demonstrate its cultural impact on campus and in the community. Problems of security and climate control have prohibited the College, until now, from displaying impressive, invaluable artworks to the public.

The Muscarelle Museum will afford the College a delightful and safe atmosphere in which to show its collection. From Oct. 22 to Dec. 16, old master and contemporary drawings from the collection of alumni Frederick '48 and Lucy '47 Herman of Norfolk, Va., will be displayed. Beginning Jan. 6 (through Jan. 27), masterpieces from the President's House at William and Mary will be exhibited, including furniture and decorative arts which highlight the house's 250th anniversary.

From Feb. 4 to April 4, late 20th-century art from the Sydney and Frances Lewis Foundation will be featured, and from May 10 to July 30, ancient Chinese bronzes from the Morse collection will be on view. The 23 bronzes were displayed at the Metropolitan Museum of Art this past summer, and come from one of the most important private collections of Chinese art in the United States.

To say that the new museum has generated excitement on campus is an understatement. A permanent home will, at last, be a reality for the College Art Collection. In recent years, Louise Lambert Kale, registrar of the collection, and Dr. Miles L. Chapell '60, former chairman of the Department of Fine Arts, have catalogued and supervised the protection of the William and Mary art treasures.

"They did a fantastic job," comments Glenn D. Lowry, Director of the Muscarelle Museum of Art. "Works of art can't defend themselves. It takes a large commitment from a number of people. In a large part, that commitment came from President and Mrs. Graves — a commitment to the success of the museum and the strength of the arts at William and Mary. It also takes an articulate and developed department of fine arts," he says, "now under the chairmanship of professor James D. Kornwolf."

Those factors laid the groundwork for the museum, and plans were finalized in 1981 by alumni gifts totalling $950,000 from the Muscarelles, from Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Kinnamon, the estate of the Spiegel family and from Mr. and Mrs. J. Bruce Bredin. Bredin, a former member of the Board of Visitors, is a member of the class of 1936.

Announced on Charter Day, 1981, construction on the 7,800 sq. ft. museum began last October and has taken less than a year to reach completion. Phase two of construction will add a new wing containing additional storage areas and offices. This addition is now in the planning stage. The College recently received a $200,000 challenge grant from the Kresge Foundation for Phase two.

Of everyone involved, the one person most anxious to get moved into the museum facilities is probably Lowry, its new director. Not only did he oversee its planning, but also Lowry has and is guiding something far more intangible, its teaching and educational goals.

"You have to develop a very friendly atmosphere," he emphasizes, "to be open and friendly to all the people who are interested in you, and make them part of you." Lowry looks forward to involving the college community and the surrounding area in museum activities, and adds, "We're in a wonderful situation — we're in the middle of a major tourist center where millions of people come through, essentially on a cultural odyssey."

But although it will add greatly to Williamsburg and Tidewater's cultural environment, the Muscarelle Museum is first and foremost for William and Mary's students. Perhaps that's why it meant so much to Lowry (who is also on the fine arts faculty) when a group of students created their own "first" in connection with the new museum.

"This year," he says, "the Fine Arts Society made money to buy the first work of art purchased for the museum — a French drawing by Gustav Dore." With a grin, Lowry adds, "It's splendid."

A note from John B. Baker informed us that he had retired from the hospital practice of Pediatrics at the end of 1982 and closed his office in Milford, Delaware, May 30. John devoted his entire medical career to practice in the Milford area. John was probably the last of the gainfully employed of the 1926 Class. Those of us who laid down "picks and shovels" earlier will, I am sure, wish him the enjoyment of retirement. He has plans of course: music, photography, and travelling around a bit.

We had the pleasure of a recent afternoon visit with Hilda Stephenson (Woodall). She was visiting a niece in Wilmington, Del. Hilda had lost her husband early in the year and this was her first opportunity to see family and friends. On this trip, she also had been to South Norfolk, VA, where she taught for fifteen years following graduation from William and Mary. Word spread that Hilda was in town; consequently, she was overwhelmed by the many ex-students who came to see her at the church service on Sunday morning. She was still on "Cloud Nine" when I called and found it hard to believe that so many had remembered her so fondly. It was quite a tribute.

As you read these notes, you should be reading things for the 1983 Homecoming, October 21 and 22! Bring money! We note that virtually all alumni activities this year will be off campus. The Alumni Dance last year in Blow Gym brought back fond memories. This year we shall endeavor to conjure that spirit at the Holiday Inn 1776. I am afraid that it will not work and a reliance on other spirits will be necessary.

You members of OWJ had better get those jackets laundered pronto as you will do your thing, Thursday, October 20. We again extend our congratulations to you all with fond recollection of the meticulous personal service you rendered in the Penniman Dining Hall.

Remember Professor Havilah Babcock? Teacher of English and journalism, he was, and later to become dean of English at the University of South Carolina, near where the fishing and hunting was better than around Williamsburg. He taught writing by means other than dry lecturing. He practiced writing, too. That is, if his bank account were low, otherwise it was out to field and stream.

His books about outdoor sports now are collectors' quarry, hard to find; books with such titles as I Don't Want to Shoot an Elephant and My Health is Better in November. His good spouse understood him which was a good thing. He dedicated one of the books to her thusly: "Dedicated to my dear wife without whose many suggestions I could have written the book in half the time."

Well, I could write this column much better if I'd get more notes, and even better, "papers" from classmates.

John Logan Hudson writes and indicates he still is looking up, which practice indeed was his career. . . as an aerospace scientist at NASA. He has joined us who have entered the era of great grandparenthood, we having a great granddaughter, plus ten grandchildren. His pastimes are golf, fishing, and travel, "especially to see my classmates on every possible occasion at William and Mary."

Helen Lucile Eastham Michie, whom we remember as Lucile, continues to share her rare knowledge and wisdom for the benefit of fellow Virginians. She is serving her second term on the Virginia Board of Psychology and was re-elected chairman for this year. She practices several days a week as a licensed school psychologist. She enjoys her four grandchildren and they, in return, must enjoy her. She also adds to the doings of the William and Mary alumni in the Charlottesville area.

HOMECOMING
YOU'RE INVITED!

Which reminds me that our son, Chiles T. A. Larson '59, and his wife, Suzie Bowden Larson, have purchased, and continue restoration work on, the old Spring Hill plantation, declared a Virginia Historic Landmark. His daughter, Page Larson, now is a William and Mary student.

That past master of organizing, R. E. Bruce "Buzzy" Stewart '27, and his ever thoughtful wife, Martha Maupin Stewart, were thanked and commended for making Olde Guard Day one of extra proportions in that we traveled to and from Williamsburg in a chartered bus, returning safely to Norfolk and Portsmouth. The bus was filled, not only with alumni, but chatter, and in many cases getting reacquainted. Other alumni groups, take note.

Before I can write that George and Edna Whitney have been in Greece, we might well hear from them from Equador or Lapland. How delightful a retirement to tour the world and come back so loyally to our class reunions and Olde Guard doings. "I wish I had taken Greek when I was at William and Mary, or at least to have studied Greek history," George reflects. When he wrote they were on a cruise on the Aegean Sea.

I have just rediscovered the April 1st postcard from George and Edna Whitley. It is datelined "Baku, Azerbaidzhan." It is a city of a million on the shores of the Caspian Sea, they noted. George, this time, didn't say whether he should have studied Azerbaidzhanian at William and Mary, but George and Edna have yet to be stumped by any lack of language.

Now I must get busy and write a review of an exciting book and something about the author. A first novel, historical and genealogical, by Caroline Baytop Sinclair '24, The Kidnapped Child, merits the reading.

From Dauba: "I heard from a very old friend in Florida who began her letter: 'Dear John Branch Green--of the Greens of Surry County, suh.' An alumni couple living in the same retirement complex had run to her with a copy of the Alumni Gazette. Your craft and my fame are spreading throughout the nation," writes Dauba, whose address is 802

UVB ESTABLISHES SCHOLARSHIP FUNDS

William and Mary has received a commitment of $100,000 from United Virginia Bankshares, Inc., to establish and permanently endow the UVB Scholarship Fund, the income from which will provide, in perpetuity, scholarship assistance to deserving Virginia students enrolled at the College. United Virginia Bankshares, Inc., is a one-bank holding company and is recognized as one of the leading banking institutions in the Southeast. The corporation's largest subsidiary, United Virginia Bank, is Virginia's largest bank.

BREDIN FELLOWS

Dr. John B. Delos, professor of physics, and Dr. James C. Livingston, professor of religion, have been named Bredin Fellows at William and Mary. Endowed by J. Bruce Bredin '36 of Wilmington, Del., a former member of the Board of Visitors, the Bredin Fellowship provides a semester research grant to the recipients to study a particular area of their academic expertise.

St. Christopher Road, Richmond, 23226, with his William and Mary sweetheart, Betsy.

Dauba and his elder brother, the legendary Larry Green '25, were each in turn editor-in-chief of the Colonial Echo, and Larry may have been the only student to have also been at the same time editor of The Flat Hat. Dauba recalls that his brother and another literary distinction at William and Mary in that he was an editor of an underground paper, probably without a "cause" in those days. Mischief, perhaps. Let Dauba tell the story: "The year I edited the Colonial Echo (succeeding our Bill Linn, who was called home at Christmastime), my roommate and fraternity brother edited The Flat Hat. My freshman year, Larry and four other 'outstanding' seniors surreptitiously published a 'yellow journal' called The Scalper. Dr. J. A. C. Chandler ferreted out the guilty editors and but for their prominence on campus they might have booted out. Later that year some underclassmen put out another sheet called The Arrow, which was a little bit more personal and I think their punishment was a bit harsher.

"I have copies of both publications among my souvenirs.

"The staffs of publications got no monetary rewards then, so 'Van' Van Wermer, editor of The Literary Magazine, decided to spend the profits on a staff party at the home of the Morecock sisters. (They were understanding adults who let favored coeds entertain boy friends there.) Flat Hat editor Willard James and I were there. The program were replicas of the Magazine, drawn pictures throughout and individual copies with pictures on the front, an elaborate affair, it was. We all belonged to a national literary fraternity, Sigma Upsilon, which I think has disappeared. I was initiated in Bassett Hall, where Thomas Moore supposedly wrote the poem, 'Maid of the Dismal Swamp.'

"Your activities in preserving the history of our era are certainly to be commended. Keep up the good work."

Dauba, thanks, and continuance depends on the likes of you, and you, too, dear reader.

In passing, Dauba noted that he had thoroughly enjoyed Olde Guard Day, but suggests we have a longer "get acquainted cocktail hour," even at the expense of formal entertainment. He was fortunate enough to have a luncheon seat with the director of the choir, whom he "mistook" for a coed "which seemed to please her and give rise to pleasant banter."

While Dauba apologizes for errors in his typing, it is no worse than mine in these dawning days of the computerage word processors. There is nothing wrong with his memory, as witness:

"I would like to have a long time roaming in Williamsburg. Betsy's aunt owned the Saunders Dinwiddie House on the Palace Green and during several summer sessions she (Betsy Price Green '29) stayed with her aunt. So much of our courting was done on the terrace behind the house. Dr. Price sold the house to the Restoration with a life right, but later traded it for the Marshall Lodge on Francis Street where we did more courting. We have a warm spot for these 'spots' and for the old college.

"Want to feel old? Recollect that when the Class of '28 entered William and Mary, Blow Gymnasium and Barrett Hall were the farthest buildings from Old Wren.

"You told of writing about Dr. Chandler (and asking all for recollections and anecdotes) — I have for some time been trying to capture the color, the excitement, and the heartbreak of the old Final Balls on paper. Remember that we danced all night and I contend that when in the gray dawns a boy walked down the steps of Blow with his sweetheart's hand and his, he was taking that gigantic step from youth to manhood.

My middle brother and I went back to Finals for some years, but I think I stopped when the coeds I rushed began to answer: 'Yes sir' and 'no, sir!' ("Surry, suh" is O. K., but not too much "Sirry," eh Dauba? (Sorry about the pun!)

Now for the 55th Reunion at Homecoming. Let's have a show of hands and faces. Let's hide wrinkles, if any, with smiles, and enjoy.

Notes from Betty:

Since 1963 Lucy May Boswell Crymble has had a most interesting and rewarding experience working for the restoration of the old Netherland Inn Association, Inc., which was granted a charter in 1965. She is a current member of the board of directors, having worked on this restoration project for twenty years. The Association for the Preservation of Tennessee Antiquities and the Daughters of the American Revolution were interested in acquiring and preserving the old inn, which was developed in 1818 by Richard Netherland as a popular stage coach inn. It has been restored as an historic shrine and is a focal point of the historical landmarks of the area. The success of the project is due largely to the interest and hard work of Lucy May. Lucy May and Carter Crymble spent some time this winter with their daughter, her husband, and three of Lucy's six grandchildren in Winter Park, Florida.

We had a welcome letter from Sallie Byrd Farmer Lawrence from Nashville, Tennessee. She reports that she and Steward are well, but they have slowed up on traveling now. They are satisfied to let the world come to them. Much of their time is spent with the younger generation of great nieces and nephews.

Dot Langford Bradford and Ned had a good trip this winter to Tucson, Arizona, and San Diego, California. They had a wonderful time in the sunshine while the east coast was snowed under. They missed the Olde Guard Day but hope to return to the campus again soon.

Sara Ann and Sam Woolford are fine, whiling away the summer by gardening, golfing, playing bridge, and trying to keep up with the members of their family. They expect to be at Homecoming.

By the way of the Alumni Office, we had a line from Betsy Nicholson Marshall, who reported that she had a wonderful time at the Olde Guard luncheon.

By all standards, the Olde Guard Day in April was a success. Members of the Class of 1932 listed as present were Elsie Beebe Swezey, Lucille Burke Smith, Sally Copenhaver Southworth, Sarah Everett Woolford, Mary L. Fleet, Frances Griffin Waters, Elinor Hall Haynie, Howard W. Hayman, Helen Hurst Kesby, Elizabeth Lanier, Fay P. LeCompte, Betsy Nicholson Marshall, LeRoy M. Ober, Mary Owens, Mary M. Parry, Mary Rigby Tinkham, Geraldine Rowe Fedors, William R. Savage, Jr., Edwin L. Toone, Jr., W. Harvey Trevilian, Edward Trice, and C. Ambrose Turner, Jr.

I wish to suggest that in the future that members of a class be grouped together when seated for the luncheon so that it will be easier to get to see each other. For instance this time I only had the opportunity to talk with slightly over half of those present.

It was with deep sorrow that we learned of the death of Peggy Nininger Bailey who always lent a spark of enthusiasm with her presence. She and Floyd, her husband, were at the Olde Guard Luncheon last November and she was as always her vivacious self.

A note from Dick James informed me that he and his wife, Ruth, visited their son, Putney, in Richmond and then attended a meeting of the Society of the Lees of Virginia in Baltimore. While there they toured the recently developed fascinating attraction at Baltimore's Inner Harbor.

Fay LeCompte suffered a heart attack in April and is now recuperating nicely, though his activities are restricted.

Plan to be present at the Olde Guard Luncheon at 12 noon, Friday, October 21, 1983. In the meantime send the news about yourself.

Fay sent in the following poem for our enjoyment:

DAUNTLESS DOGGEREL

Class reunion --
A time to compare
Thickening of waists
And thinning of hair
--A time to ignore
Any defects of aging
And keep looking affluent
Bright and engaging
--A time to allow
The old ego trip
Recalling achievements
At a remarkable clip
--A time to appease
Curiosity, and hunger
For old friends, and note
How you've stayed so much younger
--A time to say farewell
With pangs of sweet sorrow and dream loving memories
Until it be 'morrow.

Most of you must be on vacation, no news from you since June. Frankie Martens, our News Editor, has been kind enough to send on some notes from our class members.

Olive Elliotte Bagby, who did part of her undergraduate work in summer school, says she is glad to be included in the class of '32. She is now living at Lakewood Manor, a Baptist Retirement home, and in good health.

Eleanor Field Martin lives at Holly Farm (Box 598 in Gloucester, Va.) and is enjoying the luxuries of retirement. Her daughter, Samantha Leary, and her twelve year old granddaughter, Averelle, help to keep life interesting.

Sylvia Margolis was a member of the Mission of Appreciation to Costa Rica in January. The mission was initiated by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. Sylvia writes that Costa Rica is a peaceful democracy in the midst of turmoil.

Jane Jolliffe Palmer is serving as president of Loudoun County American Association of Retired Persons. She is vice president and program chairman of Virginia Retired Teachers Association, and serves on a committee of the American Heart Association. She has been elected as delegate to the Virginia Silver Haired Legislature.

Those of us in Blackstone have been saddened by the death on July 1st of William Weatherford, husband of Anna K. Dunlop Weatherford. William had a long illness with cancer, but had put up a brave fight to conquer the disease. He will be greatly missed.

I will be leaving with my husband on August 9th for a months vacation in Australia and New Zealand. Please send in your news early for the next class news.

Will be looking forward to the fall and homecoming.

Best wishes to you all!

Have received a thoroughly delightful letter from Temp Licklider (Northport, Michigan). He writes that most of his working life has been spent schoolmastering... two years at Williston Academy in Easthampton, Massachusetts, and forty-one at Cranbrook School, Bloomfield Hills, Michigan. He not only taught English but, at various times, also supervised dormitories, directed plays and Glee Club and even coached soccer, gymnastics, and track. His outside activities included church choir and little theatre. In the summers of '47-'51, he took groups to Scandinavia with the Experiment in International Living. Later, summers were spent acquiring, enlarging and winterizing a beach cottage near Northport to serve as a retirement home. One of his chief pleasures was sailing. He has owned two micro-cruising boats on which he has toured Lake Michigan and nearby waterways. Winter hobbies have included up-state, down-state, and cross country skiing; game hunting, reading, good music of all sorts... but above all else, enjoying his good wife's gourmet cooking. (Sounds like heaven on earth!) Temp received a fellowship to Yale Graduate School in '40-'41 and says, "I was petrified at competing with graduates of St. Grottlesex and Harvard, but I needn't have been." This speaks well for the College of William and Mary. He retired in '77. In addition to skiing and sailing he has been busy with house maintenance and managing a chain saw and snow thrower (196 inches a year or so ago), and this for a boy who grew up in Norfolk! We hope to see Temp and Heidi at our 50th. Tell Heidi, Temp, she won't be disappointed in Williamsburg!

Another interesting letter came from Ruth Proudman Biermann (Piqua, Ohio). Ruth writes that "fifty years in '84 brings most of us short." The Biermanns have lived in Ohio for 38 years. She says that with two daughters and one son graduating from Ohio State University, they are confirmed Buckeyes, although the youngest daughter graduated from Stetson University in Florida. Husband Dave's company manufactured the Hartzell Propeller for light aircraft. Ruth has had a fair share of volunteer services. She was awarded the "Thanks" badge for Girl Scout participation and was active in church work, including taking part in choir music. She directed a junior high school choir for 12 years. In addition to winter travels to the Caribbean and Florida, they enjoy their summer home at Indian Lake entertaining grandchildren, sailing, and racing on Sundays. We're looking forward to seeing them at our reunion in May.

It was lovely to have such a nice letter from Carleen Loeffler Sims (Bethesda, MD). Carleen writes that although she was widowed in 1956, she was blessed by being married again and is now celebrating her 25th wedding anniversary with retired Air Force General Turner A. Sims. He is a former West Pointer who has had a second career as an aircraft executive. Carleen has been active in the alumni of both Mortar Board and of Kappa Kappa Gamma. Her most involving volunteer job was president of the Metropolitan Washington, D.C. chapter of ARCS (Achievement Rewards for College Scientists) Foundation, Inc. The foundation has 13 chapters in the U.S., including Hawaii. She has served in many positions on their board and attended the general meeting in Honolulu in 1978. Carleen has been a Red Cross Gray Lady and has participated in the Ladies Guild of St. Mary's Episcopal Church. With Turner, she enjoys golfing, swimming and dancing at the Army-Navy and Congressional Clubs. They have both loved their roles as grandparents. We are looking forward to seeing them in Williamsburg in May '84.

Ralph Levine (Chestnut Hill, MA), writes that he is in the process of moving to Walpole, MA. He is planning a three weeks' trip to the Orient in September. Happily, he, too, is looking forward to joining the Olde Guard in May '84.

I have received a fascinating review of the book by Harriet Council Mead '35, *The Irrepressible Saint, which appeared in the Central Florida Diocese. Copies of the book may be obtained by sending $5 plus 25 cents postage, to B. M. Mead, Jr., 500 East Marks Street, Orlando, Florida 32803.

Harriet, Annie (Goodykoontz), and I were something of a triumvirate at the College, so I guess you'll just have to hear about our activities nearly each time.

Annie and Jack planned an exciting trip out West during June and early July which included a Snake River Float trip, three nights at Yellowstone, and visits to Glacier National Park, Banff, and Lake Louise.

Our family trip in mid-July was to cover some of the same area — Glacier National Park, Banff, and Lake Louise. It will be fun to compare notes. We're particularly looking forward to hearing about that raft ride down Snake River.

Larry and I have had the pleasure of serving as civilian sponsors for some of the international officers from the Armed Forces Staff College. We were happy to welcome WG.CDR. and Mrs. John Watts from Painswick, Gloucester, England, for a short visit when they were on a trip to the States during the summer. It had been fun stopping to see them when we were on a trip to Ireland, Scotland, Wales, and England in '78.

Joseph S. Rowe, a native of Newport News and graduate of William and Mary, attended the Medical College of Virginia, School of Pharmacy, where he received a Ph.D. degree. He also attended the executive development program at Cornell University. He began a distinguished career in 1938 in North Chicago, Illinois, as a sales representative with Abbott Laboratories. He was promoted to positions of increasing importance and in 1969 became director of trade relations of the pharmaceutical products division, a position he held until retirement in 1975. At that time, he was honored by having a resolution passed unanimously by the House of Representatives of the State of Illinois commending him for his services, through the many pharmaceutical associations to which he belonged, and for his community and civic activities. The latter included serving as director of the Lake County Easter Seal Society and chairman of the Waukegan-North Chicago Chamber of Commerce Community Betterment Committee. He and his wife, Carolyn, are now living in Clearwater, Florida, where he is a past president and chairman of the men's golf association of the Bellevue Baltimore Country Club. Continued good health and happiness, Joe!

From the Alumni Office came a beautiful article from the Newport News Daily Press on our classmate Howard Scammon's show, "Scammon Does Shakespeare," in which he played up to four Shakespearean characters, in a variety of scenes from different plays, each performance. The shows benefited the award given for a number of years, by the Society of the Alumni in his honor, the Howard Scammon Drama Prize for Playwriting.

A communication from J. Wilson Ruff (Canton, Ohio), in July read much like a Horatio Alger success story! A native of Roanoke, he was raised in Bedford County. After high school graduation in 1929, one of 52 graduates, he got a job as a soda jerk and made the grand salary of $48 a month, working 7:30 a.m. to 11 p.m. every other day, except Sunday. Due to contacts made at the drug store, Wilson became interested in going to Medical School. He started at William and Mary in 1930, thanks to a scholarship to wait on tables, which at 75 cents per day, as he recalls, paid up to $200 a year. Because of the "Big Depression" he was forced to drop out in 1934, but later did complete his degree at another school. William and Mary was his first love and he still considers it "his school." He watched the restoration of Williamsburg from '30-'34. Among his college highlights were the visit of Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt — "a plain woman, but such a wonderful character," he writes, and the 150th year celebration at Yorktown, where he waited on tables for a group of French Naval Commanders at the State banquet. He was rewarded by being invited to visit one of the French ships tied up in the York River. After college graduation (University of Alabama), he was fortunate in finding a job right away as a coal chemist in a power plant in West Virginia. He felt fortunate to be one of the very few employed in those days. He never did become a doctor, but did spend 42 years as a successful chemist in the coal fields of West Virginia and Ohio. When he retired in 1977, he had spent the last five years as director of environmental affairs for the Ohio Power Company. He still lives in Canton, where he is concerned with acid rain problems between Canada and the United States. He would like to return to the Blue Ridge mountains of Virginia. We hope to see you in Williamsburg for our 50th, Wilson!

From the Alumni Office came a number of other notes. From Emily Dunleavy King (Newton Highlands, MA), came a note to say that she is planning to attend the 50th anniversary celebration. From Mildred (Bunnie) Refo Carr (Greensboro, NC), a note that she is also looking forward to the reunion.

Elizabeth Young Clark wrote that, since retiring, she has been busy traveling in Alaska, Hawaii, and Mainland, U. S. A.

Helyn Elizabeth Lewis Janson (Orlando, FL), wrote how impressed she was with the progress shown at the College since her school days. Her nephew gave her a surprise visit to William and Mary in June '82.

My friend, neighbor, and fellow mah jongg player, Kitty Blanton Seay, is a member of our 50th reunion committee. She said that the committee met in Williamsburg, June 29. So by now, we would all have heard about the exciting plans for May 11-13, 1984!

Please keep your letters and notes coming. We all enjoy hearing from you!

Mildred Agnes Daly Milton says she had a delightful tour of the Orient recently. She flew to Tokyo where she visited many temples and shrines. She also visited Osaka and Kyoto. Then she flew to Hong Kong where the shopping was super. From Hong Kong she went to Bangkok, Thailand, and then on to Singapore and Bali. She says she even ran into a William and Mary girl, class of '46, who was from Powhatan, Va. She had a great trip.

How about a note from the rest of you beautiful people? Your classmates would like to hear from you. So please sit down now and write me a note.

Mrs. Erling B. Hauge
(Jane Speakman)

Wilmington, DE 19803

Greetings, '38-ers! Wasn't it exciting to have Williamsburg and William and Mary so prominent in world news this spring?

Let's start our news with the quickie and goodie flashes which reach me by way of the Alumni Office. Edith Dank Lever reports: "Shelby and I had a wonderful trip to Australia and New Zealand. It was a month of interesting scenes and sights, and the people down under are warm and friendly and just great to be with. From Ellen Letane Gouldman: "Had a great time at Homecoming, Fall of '82 and had a European tour in May of this year." And from Tom Crowson: "The South Carolina and Southeastern Region Societies of SAR in general conference at Florence, SC, awarded me the National Sons of the American Revolution-MacArthur Patriot Medal for my writing and work in the period of independence and in the early Republic. I am state historian of the South Carolina Society. Dr. Morton was responsible for my great interest in state and local history." Congratulations, Tom!

Mollie Waters Christie had a traumatic winter and spring. In May she wrote: "I'm impatiently recovering from the extensive spinal surgery that took place during my Christmas 'vacation' (?) in Arizona — 18 days in hospital. Learning to live with limitations is NOT my dish!" We're truly sorry to learn of your problem, Mollie, and trust that you're now completely recovered.

OCTOBER 21-23
HOME COMING
YOU'RE INVITED!

I believe I mentioned in the last letter my practice of sending postcards to classmates asking for news. When I chose Charles Troxell's name from the card file in preparation for this letter, I didn't remember him at all and so was surprised and delighted to get this reply: "Thank you for your invitation to write something for the ALUMNI GAZETTE. My wife, Emily died on April 9 from a heart attack. We had been married for 73 years, so I don't have much zest. Five years ago I wrote my autobiography, not because of pride or egotism, but at the request of a valued friend. The title is The Life of an Oratorio Tenor, based on my concert years. I am having it published and will mail copies to members of family and friends. I am probably one of the oldest alumni, 94 this summer. I was in my forties when I went to William and Mary. They gave me a job teaching in the music department, which was a great help in getting my two degrees. We loved Williamsburg and William and Mary and Dr. Fehr is a good friend. About 1920 I sang Messiah solo in Wilmington and received good press notices." How wonderful to learn part of your story, Charles; we're proud to have you as a member of our class. I'm sure the Alumni House would like to add a copy of your book to its Paschal library.

Our reunion committee met in July to lay final plans for Homecoming on October 21 and 22 and start planning for our 50th. The full committee includes: Mildred Albee Babb, Virginia Betts Chapman, Bob Dew, Harry Dickerson, Dorothy Herron, Carney Pearce, Ruth Perrine Partrea, and Bert Capps Sheeran as chairman. Let's have a big group there in October to support the committee and celebrate our 45th!

On July Fourth Annabel Hopkins Mitchell called to say that she and Lee were sending in their reservations for Homecoming that day. That nudged Nick and me into action, and we are planning to arrive on Friday, October 21. I'm sorry to report that Annabel suffered a broken hip in May while doing volunteer work at the hospital and in July was just becoming mobile again.

Doug Hoyt plans to be at our reunion. He is an orthodontist in Fair Haven, NJ, and limits his practice now so that he is "semi-busy." I recently learned that he graduated from high school at the age of 16 and joined the Merchant Marine. Before coming to William and Mary he sailed around the world and spent his 17th birthday in Shanghai. After his years at the College he graduated from University of Pennsylvania Dental School and has served in numerous civilian professional capacities, including lecturing on Orthodontics at the University of Moscow in 1965. He had two tours of sea duty before, during and after World War II, and experienced another trip around the world on the battleship California after the Okinawan campaign and a visit to Tokyo after the surrender. He volunteered and returned to active duty during the Korean conflict. After 33 years of service, he retired in 1973 as Senior Reserve Dental Captain in the United States Naval Dental Corps Reserve.

See you at Homecoming!

The Alumni Office had lots to pass along for my letter this time.

Louise Eppinger Nuernberger received a M.S. in Human Relations from Shipensburg State College in May, 1983. She earned an A.M. from the University of Nebraska in 1941. Our congratulations, Louise!

Ruth Kent Harvey returned in 1973 as Director of Red Cross Units for Pasadena Chapter, ARC. She lived in Puerto Rico the next three years and traveled about American and English Virgin Islands via sailboat, returning to Pasadena to become a Vista Volunteer and meet and marry Charles Harvey. They moved to the San Bernardino Mountains and built a house, taking time out for a tour of Europe and sailing trip in the Caribbean. In June she went to Australia and New Zealand to visit her daughter whose husband is stationed for three years in Australia with IBM.

Marie Collins Hoffman writes that they have had quite a time with storms this spring in Santa Barbara. They've lost their beach where they so loved to walk for miles. Marie is still selling real estate and Bob is keeping busy with cinematography.

Mac Trotter sends regards to all! He doesn't know if he can break loose for the Fall '83 but is already planning for '85. Great, Mac!

Frances Jane Wolf McCabe has three daughters, married, independent and delightful, also three grandchildren. Frances wishes she were 18 again in this world as she's a "woman's libber" and feels she missed some opportunities.

Noel Lambert returned in May from a two-week train-hopping tour of France. The only sunshine was four days in Nice. Noel

ALUMNA ELECTED TO COLLEGE OFFICE

Susan Blount Bowman '69 has been elected the first woman president of the student body of the School of Theology, University of the South, in Seawanee, Tenn. Bowman, who is a postulant from St. Michael's Episcopal Church of Colonial Heights, Va., worked in the city administration of Petersburg before entering the seminary. She majored in philosophy at William and Mary.

says that next time he'll choose the fall instead of spring. He was quite proud of himself after climbing those steps to Mont St. Michel, however a 76 year-old woman did as well.

We were indeed sorry to learn that Louise Mallory Becker lost her husband last spring to lung cancer. When Louise heard the news of the fire at Jefferson Hall she said, "I felt a real loss, because a room on the first floor there was the day-students' room for studying, visiting and lunch. We, some as far away as Newport News, called ourselves the Burgers's." Since then she's taught, been a long distance operator, dairy manager's assistant, married and has three RN daughters and six grandchildren. She's lived in Remilk, Virginia for nearly 27 years.

Lucille Harder Langbauer and Eldon ('39) have been vacationing on Siesta Key, Florida for the past five years. This year as last year Herb Krueger and his wife, Margaret, came by and they had a wonderful visit. Lucille and Eldon now have seven grandchildren — five boys and two girls. Two of their sons live on the west coast so they don't get to see them or their families more than once a year. Hopefully they will get to Homecoming this year. Thanks for the greeting, Lucille!

Willette Chambers Rogers mentioned that her husband, Howard, has retired from law. They spend winters in La Jolla, Ca. to be close to children and grandchildren and summers in Ludington, Michigan. Home is in Evanston between times.

James S. Gray, who is a member of the OWJ, spends half a year in Saluda, Virginia and the other half on the May River in S. C.

Frances Wagener Read had a great trip to Ireland in March and was in Dublin for St. Patrick's Day, quite an event. She is going back to college for a week in July when she will attend the Elderhostel program at Williams College. She plans to travel to Northern Italy in October. Frances' daughter, Francie Read Bengquist '68, did the art work for a prize-winning cookbook, "Connecticut A la Carte," a beautiful book and naturally she's mighty proud of her!

Ann Garrett shared a letter with me that she received from Berdine Swisher Hudson. After leaving William and Mary, "Swish" graduated from Earlham College in Indiana, and married. She has three children from that marriage and two more at 41 from her second. All five will have graduated from college when her youngest finishes next year from Washington and Lee. Gary, her oldest son, is with National Wildlife Service on Pinckney Island, S. C.; Sally is vice-president at Ranier Bank-Corporation, head of Corporate Communications; Bill is a professional free lance photographer; Holly is a sail maker on Lake Michigan while waiting to find her niche. "Swish" would love to hear any news of Chi O's of "our era."

Recently, Frank and I spent a delightful evening at Jack and Ann Garrett's with Margaret and Al Alley and the Bloxoms (Margie Hoskins and "Red") when the Alleys were east visiting nearby relatives in Deltaville. All three couples of us now are the proud owners of Al's cookbook, "The Vicar's Victuals" which contains neat recipes garnered over the years. (Proceeds go to St. Clement's where Al is a "sometime" vicar.) It was a fun and leisurely visit that we had together, catching up.

Our home is back to normal now. After a five-month search Daniel has accepted a position with a Dutch Insurance company, Nationale Nederlanden, which is based in Washington. He and Ann will soon be in Keene, N.H. and then Atlanta before a stint at the headquarters in The Hague. Blake Newton and Tim Hanson, among others, were of great assistance in furthering his career.

Do hope all of you have a grand summer. We look forward to seeing many of you at

JOHN SHEARIN '70 STARS IN "LOVING"

John Shearin '70 is one of the stars of the new ABC daytime drama "Loving." In the soap opera, he portrays Roger Forbes, a dynamic former congressman and ambassador who is serving as a university president. Since graduating from William and Mary where he majored in theatre, Shearin has appeared on Broadway and off-Broadway and has made numerous appearances in films and feature films and television. The show airs on weekdays from 11:30 a.m. to noon.

Homecoming which will take place before our next issue. Would love to hear from lots of you good people!

Roy Merritt has found a unique and fulfilling retirement. In his own words, "Since my retirement from teaching after 35 years in the profession, I have become involved in free lance writing, with most of the emphasis on poetry, for which I have always had 'a thing'. I have written hundreds of verses for children, and am now using them while seeking publication. I am a volunteer 'poet-in-residence' in the Brookline Public Schools, as well as in several local private schools. This involves visiting all the elementary schools, discussing the background and creation of poetry, and reading and showing my own original poems which are largely about wild life, nature, amazing facts of science, and common problems of kids in grades 2 thru 7. The program is going well. The kids enjoy it and so do I."

Jane Perkins is still thinking about the wonderful time she had at our 40th reunion. She has recently attended the graduation of her youngest as a Geological Engineer, from New Mexico Tech.

Our deepest sympathy to Annette Carter Laird who lost her husband last year to cancer. She is now exploring "this strange, exposed, challenging state of being a widow. I value my friends more than ever. If you didn't get Christmas cards these past several years, I hope we may make contacts again. Life — isn't it daily surprising and stretching." Thanks, Annette, I think you said it all. Her address is 386 Meetinghouse Lane, Media, Pa. 19063.

Virginia Ruth Gould Schwenke is settled in Valparaiso, Florida, and travels as much as they can afford. Having 5 children scattered worldwide in Iceland, Africa, Seattle, D. C. and Tampa, gives them an incentive to keep moving. She also does some substitute teaching.

Frances Virginia Sterne Herndon and husband Dick had a splendid trip to Russia, sponsored by several Virginia schools. New Year's Eve at the Bolshoi Ballet followed by an all night party at the Kosmos Hotel in Moscow sounds to me like an all time high. They also toured Toilisi, Tashkent, Samarkand, Bukhara and Leningrad. A steady procession of houseguests now keep them occupied.

Bette Smith Elliott lives in Raleigh, N.C. and judging from her stationary is the President of Bill Kiser News Service. How about a letter, Bette.

A very interesting clipping from the Episcopalian newspaper of the Diocese of Newark, N.J., tells of awarding Doris Berg-Johnsen Kuhl the Bishop's Outstanding Service Award. She has held every office other than rector of St. David's in Kinnelon. She now represents this diocese as trustee of the New Jersey Council of Churches. By chance, she ran into Patty Nichols Cucuru and her husband, Ed, in a restaurant in Sarasota, Fla.

Betsy Wakeman Serbell has one more year to go before retirement from teaching in Whittier High School, to weaving full time as a second profession.

Now, if I can keep my tongue in my cheek, I will say touche to Chronicer, John Prince (he says they have no class secretary). I will promise to stay out of his column if he promises to keep on being so funny. But John, I had lots of friends in the class of 1941! How come I don't remember you?

For those who haven't heard, Virginia's Governor Robb reappointed two Class of '44 members to the Board of Visitors of the College. Robert Fauconer and Anne Dobie Peebles will each serve another four year term. In addition to their membership on the Board of Visitors, each has a long list of distinguished achievements and contributions. Bob, a physician, is chairman of the Eastern Virginia Medical Authority's pathology department and Anne is a former president of the Virginia State Board of Education.

It is good to have an up-dating note for you from Paul Berlin. He lives in Bethesda, Md., and has lived since World War II in the Washington, D.C., area. Paul and his wife have two children and three grandchildren. He is a senior partner of Berlin, Segun, Karam and Ramos, certified public accountants, located in Silver Spring, Md. Paul is also immediate past president of the Hebrew Home of Greater Washington.

Ann Washington Beard wrote in April from New Zealand that the New Zealand synthetic fuels plant, of which her husband is general manager, is into its second year of construction. Ann says that "the plant is receiving a great deal of world-wide interest since it is the first commercial-sized application of this natural gas to gasoline process." Their son, Richard, '72, is the airport manager at Andersen Air Force Base, Guam. Ann and her husband planned on visiting him in June on their way to London to attend the wedding of their daughter, Becky.

Best wishes to Freda Nevias Anderson. She remarried in February and she and her husband, Harry, live in Grafton, Va.

Gold star department: A note was sent to the alumni office by Alice Stirwalt Davis on the flap of the William and Mary Fund envelope. She wrote that she is a certified Vocational Evaluator (one of the first in the country) and at the time of her note she was president-elect of the Vocational Evaluators and Work Adjustment Association. A month later, guess who wrote me a note "on the sly?" Her husband! He wrote how proud he is of Alice who after twenty-two years of being a mother and homemaker went to graduate school and earned a Masters at the University of Wisconsin. He also mentioned an article by Alice published in the spring quarterly Phi Mu magazine regarding career women. Thank you, Bill — you win a gold star and we'll give more to those who fill us in when classmates are too modest!

Patricia Howard Parry wrote from California that their Comarosa Drive home of 35 years has been sold. Pat continues: "I have purchased a mobile home in the Palisades, overlooking the ocean and Temescal Canyon and am slowly adjusting. (It is hard!) There are now five Parry grandchildren."

Dudley Woods, Jr., and his wife, Katharine, took a cruise to Nassau, San Juan and St. Thomas to celebrate his retirement. Dudley wrote that his activities center on the Lions Club, golf and traveling. In June, they traveled to California to visit their son, his wife and their grandson.

Speaking of grandsons. . . Ah, yes! Our first, Lee Whitworth Martin, arrived in Virginia last fall.

An article about Jean Boyd Lacy in the Front Royal-Warren Sentinel arrived. Jean continues to be very active in gardening and was elected president for 1983-84 of the Garden Club of Warren County in Virginia. A nice picture of Jean accompanied the article and its caption mentions that she won all sorts of awards at the club's annual flower show.

It is mid July as I write these few words, and we are experiencing a welcome change in the weather — it is actually cool. However, the weatherman is promising more seasonal weather for this coming weekend when our little county sponsors the annual Pork, Peanut and Pine Festival. My church has a food booth for the event, so we are deeply involved in that — making pies and preparing peanuts in any form to serve the thousands who attend.

News from Elizabeth Adina Allen who is still at California State University, Sacramento, as Professor of Clinical Social Work. She is active at Fremont Presbyterian Church and into a variety of community projects in the development of mental health services.

As reported in the June, 1983 issue of the Alumni Gazette, Pam Pauly Chinnis received the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters at the commencement of the Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary in May. Nancy Grube Williams wrote that she was present for the occasion, as were Pam's mother, two children and aunt, Ann Vineyard Roach's mother. Your '46 classmates are most proud of your accomplishments, Pam. Currently she is Director of Fund Raising for the Alban Institute which is located on the grounds of the Washington Cathedral.

Mary Phipps Shryock was recently appointed to the Executive Board of the National Fine Arts Association. Deeks has recently returned from a two week architectural tour in England.

Grubie also told me of a small dinner party she gave for Cecy Waddell Cunningham and Scotty last fall. It must have been a rousing alumni gathering and included several from our class: Marnie Bevans Kent, Pam Chinnis, Deeks Shryock and Jinx Stephens Daniel, as well as many other William and Mary graduates.

Allison and I found our way to Williamsburg one day during the Summit activities in May. I had never seen the town more deserted with a wide choice of parking spaces. We watched the live coverage of the ABC news in front of the Wren Building and listened to comments from Peter Jennings, who was anchoring the news, during the times when our segments of the news were being broadcast. It was a most interesting experience.

My plea for news remains the same — please do let me hear from you so I can share it through this column. I shall anticipate seeing many of you at Homecoming this fall.

The following items of interest about members of our class have come in from many parts of the U. S. A. :

Franklin A. Bon writes that after 30 years in teaching and counseling in the Long Beach-Los Angeles area he is retiring. Already an official U.S. Naval Reserve retiree, Don and his wife of 31 years plan to keep busy with volunteer work and to enjoy their leisure time together. Frank, who celebrated his 60th birthday on May 13, sounds as if he deserves it! He enjoyed the 30th reunion of the class of '48, his last visit to Williamsburg.

ALUMNA NAMED DEAN

As dean, she has responsibility for the general administration of the campus including fiscal, program and developmental activities. Lucy Buran Cornett writes from Danville, Virginia, about their three sons. Bill was graduated from V. M. I. with a degree in Civil Engineering in May; Joe a senior at William and Mary, will receive his degree in biology; and John, who is still in high school, hopes to attend William and Mary. It looks as if Lucy will be around the campus for a number of years to come.

Eddie Dunbar, according to a Roanoke newspaper, has been promoted to senior vice president-finance with the Roanoke Gas Company where he has been employed since 1956. Congratulations, Eddie!

The Newport News, Virginia, Daily Press reports that James B. Freeman, class of '48, and a resident of Williamsburg, has been chosen as the republican candidate for the House of Delegates from the 96th district. Chairman of the Williamsburg Republican Committee, he was unopposed and received unanimous votes. He is expected to compete with democratic incumbent Shirley Cooper for the seat that includes Williamsburg, Poquoson, and York County.

Lou Hoitsma '48 and his wife Audrey Allein Hoitsma '49 will enjoy a sabbatical leave for the year 1983-84 starting with homecoming this fall. Lou and Audrey will leave academia for traveling and living in the south, southwest, and west coast areas. See y'all at homecoming!

Ralph Sazio, who was, like Lou, a star athlete of our class, continues his outstanding career in football as president of the argonaut football club in Toronto. Ralph has been with the Hamilton Tiger Cats of the Canadian football league for 30 years. It does seem like yesterday that he was standing in the middle of that gridiron at Carey Field, helmet under arm, for the toss as co-captain.

Henry and Phyllis Struse (Shu) Shook at this writing are enjoying the sights in sunny Italy with their daughter Amy. They are in Rome at present and will visit Firenze and Venezia before returning to Virginia Beach.

Aren't you all glad that I am writing this at the end of June instead of July? Otherwise you'd have to hear all about Bill's and my trip to Ireland and Germany coming up soon now. (Better skip the next issue's class notes!)

See you at homecoming, our big 35 coming up!

In April Ed Brickell, superintendent of that city's public schools received the First Citizen of Virginia Beach Award for 1982. Brickell, who has been superintendent since 1968, was cited "not only for excelling in the field of education, but also for devoting much of his time to civic affairs." Before coming to Virginia Beach, he was administrative assistant to the president of the College of William and Mary. He serves on the Board of Visitors and formerly was rector. In 1980 Brickell was named one of the top 100 school administrators in North America by Executive Educator Magazine.

In addition to volunteer work and her own art work, Winston Jones Lata keeps busy watching over her 17-year old twin daughters and their birthday puppies. Her husband teaches chemistry at the University of Kansas.

Walter Poheny writes that he really enjoyed Homecoming '82. He also reports that Boston alumni would like to see more of our athletic events return to that area.

Presently, Kenneth Gutterman is an ecologist with the Environmental Protection Agency. Last February Ken retired as a colonel in the U. S. Army Reserves after serving 33 years. In the ceremony held at Ft. Belvoir he was also awarded the Meritorious Service Medal with palm. In 1981 he received the Nathan Hale Award from the Reserve Officers Association of the United States, Dept. of Washington, D.C.

Marcia MacKenzie Kirkpatrick writes that she has had the pleasure of seeing two of her college roommates this year: Nicky Dillard Dewing in Springfield and Shirley Lyons Hardwick in New Orleans.

On November 1, 1982 Bill Appleby was appointed environmental health supervisor for the Northern Neck Health District, Warsaw, Va. He has been with the Va. State Health Dept. for 17 years. Before that Bill was in the Merchant Marine where he spent 4 years on the S. S. United States.

H. C. Boschen is serving as chaplain at the Frederick Military Academy in Portsmouth.

Emerson Russell writes that more than anything he is enjoying his three little grandsons; Tommy, John, and Raymond. Their father, his son, E. C., Jr., works with him in their construction and retail building supply businesses. He and his son also enjoy horseback riding.

In a front page story last February, the Roanoke Times announced the appointment of Walter Hunt as superintendent of schools for Salem. He formerly served as Roanoke's assistant superintendent of schools.

Would anyone in our class like to write this letter? As I announced in the last class letter, I really do need to quit. Just a note to the Alumni Office or to me indicating your willingness will be gratefully received.

Major history lessons continue to be in the making through the centuries in Williamsburg. The GAZETTE's preview of the prestigious conference, a plum for the city and our alma mater, was excellent; fun to read. One of the results of the metamorphoses that took place on campus due to the International Economic Summit's "takeover" was the earthshaking, new romantic use of Sunken Garden, a tented dance floor. Among those of the '83 graduating class, who can spice up their future children's history lessons on The Summit Conference, is Barbara, a daughter of Edie Moser Buzell and husband. The Buzell's younger son will be entering Marietta College, OH, as a freshman in the fall. Their daughter, Sue, was married in June. Expensive things happen in threes it seems. Orrie Rosado Strubinger wrote on the Fund flap that she has a son, Eric, who is a sophomore at William and Mary.

A belated congratulations is due Thomas E. Burke, Strasbourg, Va., who was elected a Fellow in the Virginia Dental Society, September 1982.

I was sorry to hear, but glad for her letter, that Sarah Hardin was unable to attend our Reunion Suite though she was in town for the day's festivities. She saw several of our officers, and took a grand walking tour of the old and new campuses and the college side of town. Earlier this year she happened on to Ronnie Blankenship '53 in downtown Richmond. He was planning to move to Williamsburg.

We were saddened to learn of the tragic death of Doyle Levy, which was reported in the May 1983 issue of the Alumni Gazette.

I continue to be surprised by all the retirees in the Class of '52. I am even more amazed when Ed Lupton and others writes that they are STILL enjoying retirement. They must have hit gold mines. Anyway, Ed and Ginny Gary '53 Lupton are enjoying, still, their retirement in Cocoa Beach, FL. Ed has been building a motor sailboat for 3½ years, in hopes of completing it before summer's end. He and Ginny have plans for a lot of cruising. Watch out, you may have a lot of company of other retirees who have dreamed of doing the same thing. FOUND: Arden Hennig Madison, and husband, Jack, who was on my LOST classmate list. Jack retired from the Army in 1977. The Madisons are living in Colorado Springs, CO. (I toured the Air Force Academy there last spring prior to skiing). They celebrated their first grandchild's birth in April. I regret that this location news did not reach me sooner, as I could have visited my college sorority roommate. Which all goes to show you that if we keep in touch we could be having reunions all over the map. I really appreciate the constant flow of information from you, but we could use more. Those of you who will be attending Homecoming this year, please take notes and mail them to me. (That reminds me, if you were not at the 30th Reunion, you can ask for a copy of the Colonial Re-Echo '52 for more extensive news of many of the classmates.)

From Walt Leyland:

Members of the Class of '58, it is my pleasure to greet each of you through this media. I am subbing for Polly who is now in Wisconsin with her seriously ill father.

It is my purpose to encourage you to join us in Williamsburg this fall. The event will be a double feature — our 25th reunion as well as homecoming. In fact for some of you it could be a triple feature — visiting your children who are attending the College. Yes, some of us are of such a vintage. But, like a good wine, the aging process only improves the quality. And so, the time has finally come. Then when? October 21, 1983 to present ourselves at this 25th reunion celebration.

Be sure and get all the necessary details elsewhere in this paper. Also you should have received a letter with additional commentary concerning this event.

My best wishes to you all.

Walt Leyland

I hope everyone's summer has been full of sun and fun. I have news from a lot of people so something must have compelled you all to write. Whatever it is, keep up the good work.

An article from the Newport News Daily Press reported that Ernie Gates is the chief of the recently established Richmond news bureau of the Daily Press and The Times-Herald. He covers the state capitol, concentrating on government and politics. He has been a staff writer since 1979 and received The Washington Monthly Journalism Award in January 1981 for an article titled "Farmer's Bill Won't Help Farmers."

Deak Childress wrote a newsy letter from Virginia Beach bringing us up to date. He joined the Navy in 1973 and became a naval aviator in 1974, earning his "Wings of Gold" in December. After completing advanced training in the F-4 Phantom, he made his first cruise to the Mediterranean aboard the USS Nimitz. He has logged over 2000 hours of flying and landed aboard aircraft carriers over 540 times. If things went as planned, he, his wife, Mary Sue and two children (7 and 4), moved to Lemoore, California in June. Maybe we'll see them at our 11th reunion.

Phil Warren, wife Kay, 1 year old John, 10 year old Jennifer, and 3½ year old Philip, still hail from Oklahoma. His job with Arthur Andersen & Co. is going well, and he urges any William and Mary people to get in touch with him in Edmond, Oklahoma. Thanks for the letter, Phil. It's always nice to hear from you.

Dave Miller and his wife, Amanda, are excited about the birth of their first son in December of last year. Dave is interested in hearing from any Kappa Sigs of the 1968-1972 vintage, for any of you who are listening out there. He is the Director of Admissions and Financial Aid for Duke University in Durham, NC. His telephone number there is (919) 684-5874.

Patricia Heitman Price and her husband of 1½ years, Paul, moved in July from Iowa to West Virginia. She was a physician completing her last year of Family Practice Residency at Iowa Lutheran Hospital when she wrote to me. Her husband is a free-lance commercial artist. In Alderson, West Virginia, Pat will work for the Public Health Service as a physician. They are looking forward to being closer to the Virginia area.

1983 must be a good year for weddings! Steve Corner, at the risk of invoking Emily Post's wrath, sent an announcement of his wedding with some news attached. He is a lieutenant in the Navy and, after getting married in April, Steve and his new wife,

Sandra, headed from Washington to Florida in June to report for duty aboard the aircraft carrier, USS SARATOGA. Also newly married is Michael Walsh who is entering his third year of solo law practice in Charlottesville. His mailing address is 514 Park Plaza in Charlottesville, VA 22901. Congratulations to the newlyweds. (Since I'm an old married person since March, I can tell them newlyweds.)

A picture in a March issue of the Williamsburg Virginia Gazette showed Cheryl Clark Pagan in a group of women working on a study of how federal budget cuts have affected children. Cheryl, let us know what you find out.

Some medical notes from the doctors of our class. . . A. Howland Hartley left private medical practice and joined the faculty at the Medical College of Virginia as an assistant professor in the Department of Pediatrics. He is also the Assistant Director of Pediatrics at St. Mary's Hospital in Richmond. Robert Brewer (and I hope the last name is spelled right) works as a family doctor with two partners in private practice at the Susquehanna Family Health Center in Marietta, PA. He and his wife, Louise, celebrated 11 years of marriage this past summer, and they have two children, Elizabeth, 6, and Paul, 3. In February 1983 Robert and his family visited Garry and Pat Kuiken ('71) in Floyd, VA. Garry and Pat showed them where their new neighbor, Dr. Shepherd Tyree, will be living.

The Biology Department has its own newsletter called the Bio Bugle to keep up with its students and faculty. About some of our classmates, it reports that Tomeka Watkinson Gipson is the Education and Quality Control Coordinator for Clinical Lab at Pitt County Memorial Hospital in Greenville, NC. Steve Keller is Director of the Pediatric ICU at Fairfax Hospital in Fairfax, VA, and Virginia Lee Koch is a Cytogenetics Technologist at the Genetics Department at Eastern Virginia Medical School. She and her husband, a Naval officer, are living in Virginia Beach.

For anyone interested in learning about the effects of a cesarean birth on future births (do I have your attention?), you should talk with Jane Robins Royall who wrote a book, "You Don't Need to Have A Repeat Cesarean." Nicki and husband, Sam, live with their two children in Williamsburg. Her book is a result of a lot of research and her personal experience. After delivering their first child cesarean, she would not believe that she couldn't have her second child by natural methods — and she was right. The book was issued in May by Frederick Fell Publisher of New York. Nicki found that information on this subject was very scattered so now there is a source that will make it easier for women to make informed choices.

Randy Walter has been busy since graduation. He received his masters in clinical chemistry at Youngstown State University and then went into business with his father at Don Walter Kitchens. They are now planning a major expansion to a new office and warehouse. Randy is a bachelor and has traveled fairly extensively and enjoys snow skiing and running.

Albert Neuner has been appointed the Assistant Principal at the Shoreham Wading River High School in Shoreham, NY. Alice Reno Malone resigned from the Smithsonian in the fall of 1982 and moved to Chicago where her husband practices law. They had a daughter in December 1982, moved to Winnetka, IL in July, and she hopes to continue museum work as a free-lance consultant. Alice was included in the 1982 edition of OUTSTANDING YOUNG WOMEN OF AMERICA. John Gleason is the Divisional Vice President of Barclays American Business Credit, managing the Intermediate Term Lending Division for the western U. S. John's second son was born in June 1982.

David Bates earned a Master of Divinity degree from The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in May 1983. David, let us know where you'll be working.

Joanne Madden Deaton and husband, John, still live in Richmond where she teaches in Chesterfield County. She plays a fair amount of tennis and has taken up golf and aerobic dancing. They love company and invite any former classmates who plan to be in their area to call them.

Linda Garfield Crosby has taught accounting at Piedmont Virginia Community College for the past six years. Husband, Bill, is a research analyst, and they have two children, Jim, 3½, and Jennifer, 15 months. As of the summer, they were building a house they designed themselves.

In July 1982 Karen Gill Deneroff became a Risk Analysis and Contingency Planning Officer for the Department of State. This means she is responsible for information systems security for data processing installations at U. S. embassies and posts overseas. After going through what must have been unbelievable security checks, she gets to do the fun part — travel to these facilities. So far, her agenda included Mexico City, Europe and the Far East.

Peyton Lewis left the Historical Society of Delaware in 1979, worked in construction for a year and is now a systems technician at Crothall-American, Inc. setting up preventive maintenance scheduling systems in hospitals, airports and other businesses. Since his job means that he travels a lot, don't be surprised if he knocks on your door when you least expect it. He is interested in hearing from classmates — 1608 N. Lincoln Street, Wilmington, DE 19806.

Herb Moss has lived in Virginia Beach for the last three years. He is the Vice President of H. W. H. Insurance Agency, Inc.

After graduation, Ann Hathaway Marrs taught school near Winchester, VA for four years and then returned to her home town of Big Stone Gap where she works for Westmoreland Coal Co. She is the captain of Westmoreland's First Aid Team No. 1 — the only all-women's first aid team in this part of the country. Ann would really like to hear from some of her Phi Mu sisters out there!

Charmie Perdue has been busy. He recently completed a Ph.D. degree in economics at the University of Virginia. He is an assistant professor of economics and business at Emory & Henry College and was one of forty people chosen nationwide to participate in a special two-week seminar at the University of Chicago this past summer. Before going into the education field, he worked as a real estate agent and an executive intern at the Pentagon.

This is it for now. Keep all the news coming. It's always exciting to get all this mail!

Big promotions in the new: Jon Elsasser is the new Manager of the Bucyrus Distribution Center at the Timken Company in Ohio. After William and Mary Jon got his MBA at Harvard in 1978, joining Timken at that time as a systems analyst. He later held the job of Senior Systems Analyst and Section Manager of the Bearing Operations Systems, the position he held just prior to his recent promotion. Congratulations, Jon.

Pauline Kamen Miller was just elected President of the Albany, NY YWCA. Pauline is the Acting Director of the Career Development Center at Russell Sage College. As the new President of the 1400 member YWCA,

GUADALCANAL REUNION

Dr. C. Douglas Hoyt '38 of Fair Haven, N.J., returned to the Solomon Islands in the South Pacific recently with 25 other men, all of whom had fought in the Guadalcanal campaign 40 years ago. Hoyt, a Fair Haven orthodontist, served in the 1st Marine Division as a casualty evacuation officer and was at Guadalcanal when the attack began on Aug. 7, 1942. He spent the first four days of the attack on the shore, helping to haul out the wounded. In the accompanying photo, Dr. Hoyt stands behind two new found friends at the 40th anniversary of the landing. He also participated in a government reception, the dropping of wreaths into the sea, and saw the unveiling of four memorial stones.

'81 ALUMNUS NAMED TO ADMISSIONS OFFICE

Alfreda S. James '81, formerly a general assignment reporter for the Journal and Guide newspaper of Norfolk, has been named coordinator of minority recruitment at William and Mary. A history major at William and Mary, Ms. James has been responsible for news and feature stories, editing, layout and typesetting for the Journal and Guide newspaper. She is a member of the National Honor Society and won the Optimist Club Award in 1976. While at William and Mary, she served as a board member for the Society of Collegiate Journalists. Ms. James began her new job at the College on July 1.

she hopes to make the organization more aware of its imperative to eliminate racism and more responsive to the special needs of women and children.

Karen Schorschinsky Donohue was admitted to the Virginia Bar in June of 1982 without ever attending law school. Instead she exercised the option available in Virginia to "read law" on her own under the supervision of a practicing attorney. She was the Assistant Commonwealth Attorney for Loudoun County in 1982, but left to go into private practice as an associate with Perkins, Price & Zimmerman in Leesburg, Va. She is married to John Donohue Jr. and they have one child, John III, born in March of 1981.

David Hess, wife Laura, and 2-year-old son Garth transferred to the U. S. Agency for International Development Office in Lima, Peru last March. Their second child was due in July — was it a boy or a girl? The Hesses hope to be back in the U. S. on vacation this fall and may make it to Homecoming.

As president of his 3-year-old photo company, Randy Mathis is planning to expand by building a studio. He and Lynn have a son Benjamin, and a second baby was due this past April — was it a boy or a girl?

Lots of first babies to report: Joan Kendrick Wignfield and husband Spot had a son, Douglas, in June; Bill and Mary Richardson had a daughter, Elizabeth, in June; Leslie Slemmer Clark and husband Rick ('73) had a son, Daniel, in May. Bob Kieth and wife Melanie had a daughter, Jacqueline, in July of 1982. Bob is now a Specialist in American Government in the Congressional research service at the Library of Congress. The Keiths live in Fairfax.

Had a nice letter from Brian Stage, formerly everyone's favorite busboy at the Kappa House and currently General Manager of the Sheraton Hotel in Billings, Montana. (Must have been that great training at the Kappa house that launched him on the road to success. . .) He was promoted from Minneapolis to Montana to take charge of Sheraton's 300-room convention/commercial facility which Brain maintains is the best hotel in the five-state region. He and his wife Debra live in the hotel in a large six-room suite. Debra is taking a break in her insurance underwriting career to stay home with their son David, now one year old. They enjoy beautiful Montana and are rapidly adjusting to life in the wild west.

Newly-wed Milt Mooney and wife Ellen are living in Poland (near Youngstown) Ohio. Milt and Ellen were married in April in Loudounville, Ohio. My husband Jim was there, along with Tom Wilke ('75) and Kim Ferguson ('75), for the festivities. The bride and groom honeymooned in San Francisco and Lake Tahoe.

Mary Lively disappeared after graduation but recent rumor has it that she is alive and well in New Hampshire. What have you been up to all these years, Mary? And what about Doug Snyder, Doug Pinter, Lewis McGee? Anyone heard? In addition to the usual news, I'll make the next issue's column the Tri Delt and Sig Ep special, and encourage anyone who has news of classmates in those organizations to send it in now.

Well, it seems like the summer has gone too fast and fall is already here. I haven't heard from a lot of people over the past 4 months, but I will pass along the news I do have. And remember Homecoming is coming up again soon!

OVERSEAS: Sue Parsons indicates that after receiving her M. A. in biology at William and Mary, she served 2 years in Brazil, with Wycliffe Bible Translators as a school teacher. After returning to the States, she did further graduate study in the field of linguistics. This past May, Sue married Randy Regnier, and they have plans to go to Mexico to serve as Bible translators. Robert Lane writes from Algeria where he is a Second Secretary of the Embassy. He and his wife, Martha, are also busy taking care of their son, Robert, who was born last November in Wiesbaden, Germany. They report seeing several William and Mary classmates in that part of the world. John Barnyak spent 2 days with them recently during a business trip from his office in Brussels. Also, Zahra Cox is working in the embassy in Tunis, Tunisia. David Taylor returned to Williamsburg to serve as a commentator for the BBC during the Economic Summit.

LAW: John and Mary Murphy Schmidtke moved to Honolulu in May where John will practice law. After 3 years as Law Librarian at the Univ. of Puget-Sound Law School, Mary is looking forward to some time "on the beach" with their son Scott. Also out west, John and Anne McFadden ('77) Metz are in San Diego where John is the Assistant Staff Judge Advocate at the Naval Air Station North Island. They say they plan to be in San Diego until Sept. '84 and there is a lot to do out there. They have plenty of room so friends should come and visit. And closer to the East Coast, Barry Plunkett is working in the Pentagon as the Assistant Counsel to the Navy Comptroller.

D. C.: Also in the northern Virginia area, John Kinzer would enjoy hearing from friends — his address is 10231 Raider Lane, Fairfax, Va. 23030. He has been involved in the political arena as in the fall of 1982 he served as campaign manager for a state delegate and then served as his administrative aide in the General Assembly in Richmond in January and February of this year. Christophe and Deborah Russell Tulou are both Congressional staffers in D. C. Christophe is on the Oceanography Subcommittee of House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee and Debi is a Legislative correspondent for a congressman. Prior to Washington, he had completed a Masters in Zoology and Masters in Marine Affairs at the University of Rhode Island, and she had worked as an animal behaviorist and trainer at the Mystic Marinelife Aquarium.

TIDEWATER: Vicki McKee is working as a territory manager for Charles of the Ritz Fragrance Division — a subsidiary of Squibb Corporation. Joe Steele, who runs Carolina Furniture in Williamsburg, was asked by the White House to furnish a sitting room for the President at the recent Economic Summit in Williamsburg. By the time of this printing it probably will have all been sold, but Joe did have about $30,000 worth of furniture used by Reagan, including 2 $3,000 sofas and a $10,000 oriental carpet. Also used were 6 Chippendale dining room chairs that had been sold to professional hockey player Joe Watson of the Philadelphia Flyers. At Jamestown, Pat Golden serves as an historical interpreter. He also served as assistant director and stage manager of the recent Williamsburg Players' production of "Deathtrap."

Julia Heitman is working as an R. N. with the Paoli Hospice Nursing Program in Pennsylvania and has recently purchased a lovely townhouse overlooking the woods for which the state is famous. She also draws wildflower sketches which she sells through several local shops. Charles and Helen Hamann ('77) Brown are at the Camp Lejeune, N. C. marine base where Charles serves in the U. S. Navy Medical Corps. Gretchen Kurpiewski writes from the Chicago area where she has been working for Abbott Laboratories for over a year. She is a microbiologist in the Infectious Disease and Immunology Department of the Diagnostics Division. Her husband, Joseph, is a social worker and is attending the University of Illinois to obtain a Master's Degree. She reports that their son P.J. is quite a character and really keeps them busy. Finally, Deborah Federhen moved to Delaware in August where she has received a fellowship at the Winterthur Museum. She has been working on two books — one on Massachusetts silversmiths and the other on American Sculpture — which should be published sometime next year.

See you at Homecoming!

Everyone must have had a busy and fun-filled summer because I have not received very much news for this column! I do hope you have made your plans to attend our fifth reunion at HOMECOMING, October 21 - 23. I will be there and will be glad to collect news for our column which will come out in March. My deadlines this year are September 20 for the November issue, January 5 for the March issue and March 20 for the May '84 issue.

The Most Unusual Letter Award for this column goes to Mark Graber. He claims to be running an elf farm in Wyoming which isn't faring well these days due to inflation and unemployment (even during the Christmas season!). Thanks for the bit of humor, Mark, but what are you really up to these days?

From Europe, Jane Tylus Klein sends greetings and news of her wedding to William Klein in September, 1982. They met in graduate school at Hopkins and have been in Europe since their wedding. Bill had a Fulbright scholarship in History at Cambridge. Jane did research on her dissertation during the spring in Italy. They plan to return to the States in September and possibly make it to homecoming.

Sherrill Jones graduated from Fairfield University in May with a masters in community counseling. She plans to work in the field of employee relations, specializing in counseling.

Fred and Anita Hoy Gampke are living in Lexington, KY, where Anita is manager of the Electronic Services Dept. of Central Bank and Trust. Fred, '77, is the marketing manager for the Wine Spectrum Division of Coca-Cola for the state of Kentucky.

Debra Jean Duncan is planning to return to school to study law this fall. She has not yet chosen the school she will attend.

William Jeff Douglas is leaving the Army to work in the Washington, D. C. area in the field of chemistry. During his last leave from current duty at Stuttgart, Germany, he toured Vienna, northern Italy, and Rome.

Margie Weber has completed her masters degree in computer science and has completed the course work for her Ph.D. She plans to work for IBM in New York. She is currently living at her home in Livingston, N. J.

Bruce Bender joined Core Laboratories, Inc., New Orleans, in '78 as an analyst of oil well rock samples. In '80, he transferred to the corporate headquarters to become a technical science administrator in charge of in-house training programs. This involved traveling around the world and gave him many opportunities to meet other alumni in the field. During this time he met Merry Cole, an SMU graduate and married her in May, '81. Bruce has since been transferred to Lafayette, La. to become the Technical Sales Representative for that area. They hope to attend our reunion at homecoming.

Shane Smith was awarded the J. D. degree from the Walter F. George School of Law, Mercer University, Macon, GA, in May '82. He received the LL.M. master of laws in taxation from Spessard H. Holland Law Center, University of Florida in May, '83. He has accepted a position with Special Trial Judge Fred S. Gilbert, United States Tax Court in Washington, D. C.

Jim McLeod was a legal intern at the Center for Law and Social Policy and in the summer '82, he monitored legislation and agency activities for a coalition of 23 environmental organizations opposed to the ocean disposal of radioactive waste. He received the degree of Juris Doctor in May, '83 from Vermont Law School. Jim was selected by his classmates to be their representative to the Student Bar Association and was Chairperson to the Academic Evaluation Committee at VLS.

Hope to see many of you at Homecoming! Our request, when you send in class news directly to the Alumni House please print your name clearly on the form. I want to be sure to include everyone's news but I have had trouble recently with some of the forms and I need your help, THANKS!

This column was to begin with an apology for past errors in the Class of '82 Notes, but my mistakes generated such a response that I'll begin instead by thanking all those who wrote to set me straight. It was good to hear from you, for whatever reason!

Tom Brooke now a staff assistant for Congressman Frank Wolf, pointed out that Bob Hallman works for Price Waterhouse, not IBM. A postcard from Bob confirmed this, although Bob is now temporarily assigned to P. W.'s office in San Juan, Puerto Rico! Besides the corrections, Tom also provided news on '82 grads of Theta Delta Chi: Roy and Rindy Lawson Dunn live in Roanoke. Steve Forthuber is engaged, Greg Gebhart is with the State Dept., Charlie Kendrick's was hired by C. W., Steve Cooley represents a pharmaceutical firm, Dave Lockwood Blows is married and living in Knoxville, Tenn., where he works for Proctor and Gamble, Mike Fontaine is a computer analyst, in N. J. Fred Schultz is a chemist with Upjohn in Kalamazoo, Mich., Glen Campbell is in a Penn. Med School, Marc Seim is at MCV Pharmaceutical School, Steve McDaniel is in banking, Rob Marchbank works for a building supply firm, John Rhein is stationed at an Army base in Colorado, and Bill Dodson is a graduate student at William and Mary.

ALUMNUS NAMED TOURISM DIRECTOR

John W. Roberts Jr. '59, former tourism director for the Charleston County Parks and Recreation Commission, has assumed the new position of executive director of the Tourism and Conference Bureau for the Williamsburg Chamber of Commerce. Roberts began his new position on July 25 after five years in Charleston. His wife Nancy is a 1964 alumna of the College.

And all that was in one letter. . . .

Europe is still a big attraction for the Class of '82. Just as Sean Gallagher returned from a 9-month stay in France, where he worked at a movie producer's home, and Christine Weiler wound up a European backpacking tour to begin work at a Manhattan bank; Laurie Karlson headed for France, Jeb Jeutter began studying law at Oxford University, and Christian and Evelyn Stanten Andree began a 2-year stay in Italy. (It seems the Andrees were living quietly in N.J. when Christian was offered a job in Italy "that was just too good to pass up." He speaks Italian according to Evelyn, but all she knows is "vino"!)

Many classmates hold jobs which allow them a little of the "summer vacation" we were accustomed to in college. Pam Brady Doering, an 8th grade science teacher in Louisiana, spent hers fixing up a new house and earning her paralegal certification. Nancy Sharp vacationed in Hawaii, while Lucy Thackera, a sales assistant for ROLM Telecommunications Corp. in White Plains, NY, played squash whenever possible. Valerie K. Fisher appeared in the Roanoke production of "Guys and Dolls" and "Anything Goes," while Kelly Shea was cast in the Williamsburg Players production of "Fallen Angels." (Valerie will be attending grad school at FSU in Fla. this Fall.) Gail and Gary Domaleski bought their first home in King George County, but are coming to Williamsburg for a visit. Gary is the founder of the now traditional William and Mary Wizards frisbee team and he wants to practice on his home course. Sue Stanger Brown's vacation from teaching Biology was a June honeymoon with her new husband, an Air Force fighter pilot.

For Dana Disque, vacation from law school meant an internship with a Birmingham, AL, law firm. Pat Vaughan finished her first year at M-W and worked for a Chesapeake bank. Barbara Heath, an American Civilizations grad at U. of Penn. was the field supervisor for William and Mary's field school in St. Eustatius. Chris Pohl attended MCV, Karen Masters worked on her Masters in Computer Science at UVA, and Frank Robert managed to take a full load of grad classes in Higher Education, and still find time to put a putting green in the family's backyard! Susan Meredith currently divides her time between bookkeeping for Historical Country Homes in Lexington, and serving as Rental Maintenance Manager for Meredith Construction Company. Martin Kloeden is preparing to attend a special communications law program at Columbia.

While golf to most of us suggests vacation recreation, Mary Wilkinson's expertise has made it her game, and possibly her career, as well. Congratulations are in order, as Mary was one of three amateur players invited to participate in the United Virginia Bank tournament, an LPGA event. A recent news article further explained that she was invited last year, but had to decline due to William and Mary's Final Exams!

Even those of us who stayed on the job through the summer had a lot more than work on our minds. Carolyn Bond will marry Will Neil on October 29th. (They are in Florida where she is banking and he is a software analyst at Cape Canaveral.) Chuck Barham admitted to being caught up in NC State's NCAA victory celebrations while working for Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. in Raleigh. Jan Howarth, a sales trainee for Apple Computers is busily planning her Oct. 1 wedding to Steve Perkins and says she loves Texas. Kristy Knight said the same thing about Salt Lake City, where she works at a Medical Center and is earning an MBA degree.

It has become a regular feature of the Class Notes letter to list the latest '82 grads who have gone to Washington, D. C. Bonnie Garrett is working there with IBM as a Financial Analyst, Jenny Fuller is earning a graduate degree at George Mason U., and works part-time at a CPA firm in Reston. Jim Southwick is also in Reston with Advanced Technologies. Jenny Roberson is with a stock brokerage firm, and Paula Fehnel is employed by the National Institute of Health. Paula rooms with Donna Streeper, a chemist in Gaithersburg, MD, and says the commute to D. C. is worth it. She also wrote of Corey Grieseche, who is employed by the Smithsonian and is engaged to Howard Wetzel. Megan Beth Scott, the organizational assistant at the National Headquarters for Teenage Republicans in D. C., wrote to say "See, Gov't. majors do get jobs!"

Classmates who have moved father away from Virginia are Lisa LaBanca (a technical writer at the US Army R & D Headquarters in Natick, Mass.), Jim Takagi (an MBA student and administrative underwriter with Travelers Insurance Co. in Connecticut), Ethel Wragg (whom I saw recently while she was on vacation from her job in New York City bank), and Robert Dell (of Conn. Bank and Trust Co.), who admits he misses the warm Virginia weather.

The best comments about life after William and Mary, however, came from class vice-president Shao-li Liu, Jeb Jeutter and Dave Kaut. Shao sent me his homework assignments for a week from Stanford U. in

BALTIMORE OFFICERS INSTALLED

California and complained that despite living on the beach he had no tan. It seems he spends all his time in three different campus libraries. . . . what dedication! Jeb, who attends law school in Mississippi, said "And I thought Virginia was the South!" Dave, a Peace Corps volunteer in Mulalillo, (it's somewhere in the hills of Ecuador), wrote and asked me to tell the class to "drop in and visit" or "at least" write, PLEASE." His address is: Cuerpo de Paz, Casilla 635-A, Quito Ecuador, USA (Allow 2 weeks for delivery.)

I am working for the State Democratic Party of Virginia this summer as a district field coordinator, and so will be spending a great deal of time traveling. The job involves coverage of several campaigns at once, but I'm enjoying it because I've had the opportunity to visit other members of the Class of '82. I hope to see even more of you at Homecoming. Plans are underway for a Class of '82 pre-game party in the Cary Field parking lot opposite the Infirmary. Check in the October Gazette for further details or at the Alumni House in November.

I end this column on a solemn note. As you may know from a past issue of the Gazette, one member of our graduating class passed away earlier this year. The loss of one of our classmates will forever change the Class of 1982. I dedicate this column to Isabel Asuncion. She will be very greatly missed, but never forgotten.
