Computer Pioneer Lauds the Liberal Arts

Grace Murray Hopper Tells Seniors Their Education Was Worthwhile

Graduating seniors at Commencement in William and Mary Hall on May 12 heard one of the nation's best-known computer scientists give testimony to the value of their liberal arts and sciences education.

Commodore Grace Murray Hopper, a Navy pioneer in the field of computer technology, told the 1,600 graduates that they were going to have to learn to analyze and use the information generated in the computer revolution.

"Some information is good overnight, some lasts a thousand years," the 78-year-old Navy veteran said. "Yet we have failed to look at the value of this information when we're talking about the information revolution. And one of the biggest jobs you will have in the future is to establish those comparative values of information."

Commodore Hopper, who has been in the Navy 42 years, said that a great deal of time has been spent training people for the technical aspects of computer operation. But she added that "technical is not enough."

"They must know history; they must know economics; they must know philosophy if they are going to make proper use of that information as we move into the future. It's a revolution we're facing."

Commodore Hopper received an honorary degree along with three other distinguished individuals, including two alumni of the College. She received an honorary doctor of laws degree; the Rt. Rev. John Boyd Bentley '19 of Hampton, former Bishop of Alaska and vice president of the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church, received an honorary doctor of divinity degree; Walter E. Hoffman '29 of Norfolk, senior United States District Judge, Eastern District of Virginia, received an honorary doctor of laws, and Pulitzer prize-winning author Eudora Welty, a celebrated southern writer, received an honorary doctor of literature degree.

In addition to the honorary degrees, William and Mary presented honors to several students and to two members of the faculty.

The Lord Botetourt Medal to the member of the graduating class who attains the highest academic standing went to Lisa Ellen Porter, a Phi Beta Kappa graduate with high honors in biology.

The James Frederick Carr Memorial Cup, awarded to the student who best combines the qualities of character, scholarship and leadership, was presented to Sheila Marie Cunneen, an English major, All-American athlete, and member of Phi Beta Kappa.

The Algernon Sydney Sullivan Awards, recognizing those persons who possess characteristics of "heart, mind and conduct as evince a spirit of love for and helpfulness to other men and women," were presented to Carol Ann Epling of Salem, Va., also a member of Phi Beta Kappa, and to Samuel Kirk Payne of Danville, Va.

A new award this year went to two members of the arts and sciences faculty. Carol W. Sherman and Shirley Roby, both professors of dance received the first Thomas Ashley Graves, Jr., Award for sustained excellence in teaching. The award was funded by alumni and friends of the former president of William and Mary who left the College earlier this year to become director of the Winterthur Museum. Dr. and Mrs. Graves returned to attend Commencement.

Valedictory remarks were made by Lisa Lind Willis, a government major who had won the right to address the graduates in competition with other class members. The senior class chose as its honorary marshals Dr. Melvyn D. Schiavelli, dean of the faculty of arts and sciences; Susan C. Ripple, assistant director of financial aid and Marilyn Cloutier, a member of the modern languages faculty.

Walter W. Stout III '64, judge for the Richmond General District Court, was inducted into the Roster of Distinguished Military Graduates at the ROTC Commissioning Ceremonies at which Major General Colin R. Powell, senior adviser to Secretary of Defense Casper W. Weinberger, gave the principal address. General Powell's son Mike, who was the first black commander of the ROTC cadets at William and Mary, was commissioned by his father at the ceremonies.

Former President Dr. Davis Y. Paschall '32, who inducted Judge Stout into the Roster of Distinguished Military Graduates, described him as "the William and Mary graduate who recognizes that the hallmark of his degree is the Holy Grail quest of service to mankind, his country, and his Alma Mater."

Acting President Dr. George R. Healy, who presided at Commencement, recognized the endowment that the senior class has established as a memorial to Joseph Gerard Pastore, a member of the class of 1985 who died earlier this year. More than $30,000 has been raised, the largest senior class gift in William and Mary's history.

The Class of 1935, which returned to campus during Commencement weekend to celebrate its 50th reunion, also presented the College with cash, pledges and bequests totaling about $215,000 to endow a chair in the government department. It is the largest "Olde Guard" class gift in William and Mary's history.

Some 13,000 people, including 1600 graduates, crowded William and Mary Hall for Commencement on May 12.

The Associate Dean reports to the Dean of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law and works in close cooperation with the Office of Development of The College of William and Mary.

Letter of application, resume, and names of three references must be received by July 8, 1985. Address to Timothy J. Sullivan, Dean, Marshall-Wythe School of Law, The College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

The College of William and Mary is an Affirmative Action, Equal Opportunity Employer. Women and minorities are encouraged to apply.

Inside Admissions

Applications Highest in 20 Years

BY G. GARY RIPPLE
DEAN OF ADMISSIONS

This office has just completed the processing of 6,152 applications for the 1,125 vacancies existing in our new freshman class. This is our highest number of applications received in twenty years and the second highest total in the history of the College. It is gratifying to know that our reputation as one of America's truly fine institutions of higher learning continues but recent magazine and newspaper articles around the country report that other selective colleges are experiencing similar record numbers of applications, some as much as 20 percent ahead of previous high water marks.

These figures are puzzling since we know the number of high school graduates has been declining steadily since the mid 1970s. What, then, is the real reason behind these record figures? One theory is that declining school populations and the aggressive recruitment activities of the colleges themselves have fostered the belief that selective colleges are not selective anymore. But, with those application numbers, the elite colleges may be more selective than ever before.

Another soundly based explanation deals with the anxieties of today's college-age generation. Simply put, our young people today are very worried about gaining admission to a reputable institution and, I am quite certain, they are increasing the applications filed in order to guard against the unlikely possibility that they will not be admitted anywhere. At $20-$50 a crack, applying to fifteen colleges can become an expensive and time-consuming proposition. I always counsel young people to spend some of that applications-writing time reading about colleges and meeting with their representatives to learn more about programs, policies and one's chances of gaining admission were an application to be filed. Ideally, students should never apply to more than five colleges with at least one "insurance policy" in the group. If more decisions were made before applying, students could cut down on the time and the unnecessary expense of filing multiple applications. This change in applicant behavior would work to the benefit of all, including those tired, bleary-eyed admissions deans who must stay up until all hours of the night digging into that pile of applications that gets higher with each passing year.

HOUSE NOTES

Mathilda Crawford Whitehouse '25 has donated a copy of THE JOURNAL OF CHARLES MASON AND JEREMIAH DIXON by A. Hughlett Mason '27, for the Paschall Library collection of books by alumni authors.

Ralph Stambaugh '35 came from Albuquerque for the 50th reunion of his class. He brought for the memorabilia collection a number of items including the official program for the 1931 Yorktown Sesquicentennial Celebration; 1935 booklets of Colonial Williamsburg buildings; an invitation to the inauguration of John Stewart Bryan and an invitation to the formal opening of the restored Duke of Gloucester Street; and a number of other mementos of the 1930s. He generously gave to the Alumni House his FHC medal, "7" Society and "13" Club pins, and his Pi Delta Epsilon pin and The Flat Hat pin.

Andre Goetz '26 visited the Alumni House recently enroute to Texas, and left yearbooks of the 1920s for the Society's archives.

Shakespeare Festival Will Open July 5

The 1985 Virginia Shakespeare Festival will stage four productions during its eighth season from July 5 through Aug. 17 in Williamsburg, among them an encore of one of its most popular past offerings, "The Taming of the Shrew," along with "Richard II," "Cymbeline" and Moliere's "The Miser."

The Moliere play marks the first non-Shakespearean production the Festival has ever presented on its main stage in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall at William and Mary. In the past, the Festival has offered non-Shakespearean or contemporary works in its smaller studio theatre. This year "Cymbeline," one of the Bard's lesser known romances, will be presented in the studio theatre's more intimate setting.

Festival artistic director G. Leslie Muchmore says he has recruited cast and crew members from all over the nation to work at this year's Festival. Earlier this year he made trips to theatre schools at several major universities and interviewed professional actors in Wisconsin, North Carolina, Florida, New York and Williamsburg.

Muchmore himself will direct the popular "Taming of the Shrew," and Jerry Bledsoe, associate professor in William and Mary's theatre department, will direct "The Miser."

Guest director for "Richard II" is David Knight, professor and head of the acting program at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. Knight spent last summer at the Utah Shakespeare Festival where he directed and starred as Prospero in "The Tempest." His Shakespearean directing credits also include "Romeo and Juliet," "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "The Comedy of Errors," and a previous production of "Richard II."

The Virginia Shakespeare Festival will present the four plays in repertory nightly except Sundays, which feature afternoon matinees, and Mondays, which are dark. Season tickets are available by writing the Virginia Shakespeare Festival, College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, VA. 23185. For information about individual tickets, group rates or special programs, either write or call the Festival at (804) 253-4377.

Faculty Spearhead Unique Fund Drive

A group of William and Mary faculty members has organized and carried out a fundraising drive that may be unique in higher education.

Working with the Office of University Advancement, the faculty members, headed by Dr. Vinson H. Sutlive, Jr., chairman of the Department of Anthropology, have raised more than $25,000 from their own colleagues to help underwrite the cost of student financial aid at the College.

Nearly 200 members of the College community contributed to the campaign this spring in amounts ranging from $2 to $2,500. The funds will be applied directly to financial aid funds available to students during the 1985-86 academic year.

The campaign grew out of a report issued last spring by the Task Force on Student Financial Aid, which said that William and Mary falls $1.5 million short of meeting the demonstrated need of undergraduate students and 80 percent short of meeting the demonstrated need of graduate students. According to the report, inadequate funding of student aid has caused the College to lose qualified students to other institutions which have better-funded programs.

According to Sutlive, the campaign had the strong support of William and Mary faculty because of their concern about maintaining the quality of students and their interest in seeing a strong financial aid program at work. Planners of the fundraising effort also felt that an internal effort to improve the level of financial aid would send a signal to alumni, to parents of students, and to the public that the people most closely allied with the College care enough to contribute money to keep standards high among the student population.

"For nearly three centuries the College has sought to assist deserving and needy students, not only out of a sense of humanity but also to assure quality and diversity," Sutlive said. "We believe that it is time that the William and Mary family act more aggressively on the students' behalf."

College Approves Executive M.B.A. Program

A new Executive Master of Business Administration program at William and Mary will give experienced area professionals the opportunity to complete a graduate degree in management without having to spend three or four years taking courses.

The College's new Executive M.B.A. program, or EMBA, expected to begin in January of 1986, is designed to serve those who have considerable management experience and wish to pursue part-time graduate management studies. By attending intensive class sessions on alternate weekend days, with some extended residency periods, EMBA enrollees can complete their studies within two years instead of the usual three or four required by most graduate business programs.

It is expected that most EMBA students will be sponsored by their employers, who will provide both financial support and release time for their employees in the program.

The total cost of $17,500 for the program will include purchase of a personal computer for each student. "The students won't be here on campus as much, so they need computer support with an arrangement to communicate with our main computer on campus," says Franklin E. (Bud) Robeson, associate dean and professor of business administration.

The new director of the College's EMBA program, Dr. Lawrence J. Ring, has been teaching in a similar program at the University of Toronto, where he has been a member of the Faculty of Management Studies since 1982. From 1976-82, he was a member of the faculty at the University of Virginia's Colgate Darden Graduate School of Business Administration.

The College would like to enroll between 25 and 30 students for the first year of the program. Other universities with EMBA-type programs include the University of California at Berkeley, the University of California at Los Angeles, the University of Houston, and Chicago, Northwestern, Columbia, Emory, Ohio State, Duke and Indiana universities.

Verkuil Will Be Inaugurated Oct. 20

William and Mary has set Sunday, Oct. 20, 1985, as the day that Dr. Paul R. Verkuil '61 will be inaugurated as the 25th president of the College.

Verkuil, 46, who is now dean of the Tulane School of Law, will take office Monday, July 1, after being sworn in at a brief ceremony following a meeting of the College's Board of Visitors.

He will succeed Dr. Thomas A. Graves, Jr., who left the College in January to become director of the Winterthur Museum near Wilmington, Del. Dr. George R. Healy, provost of the College, is serving as acting president in the interim.

The inaugural ceremony will take place in the courtyard of the Sir Christopher Wren Building beginning at 2:30 p.m.

Cost Will Rise

The cost of attending the College of William and Mary next year will rise 9.3 percent for in-state students and 10.9 percent for out-of-state students.

The total cost of attending the College which includes tuition, fees, room and board, will increase from $4,993 to $5,456 for in-state students; and from $8,413 to $9,334 for out-of-state students.

A large portion of the total cost increase is in tuition and fees, which will go up 14.5 percent, from $2,000 to $2,290, for in-state students; and 13.8 percent, from $5,420 to $6,168, for out-of-state students.

General fees will rise a little over 7 percent for the 1985-86 academic year. They include a 6.2 percent increase in the auxiliary services fee and a 9.4 percent increase in the athletic fee.

For law students, tuition costs will be $370 higher than the tuition figures listed for undergraduate students. For students in the School of Business Administration, tuition costs are $280 beyond the tuition listed.

More than 200 people attended the opening luncheon at Trinkle Hall. Among the special guests of the Class of 1935 was Warne Robinson (left), president of the Society of the Alumni, who is shown here seated with John Mapp, chairman of the Class of 1935 Reunion Committee.

A member of the 50th Reunion Committee, Virginia Mister Walker '35, and two classmates, Helen Hayne Fries '35 and Hebe Ruggieri Redden '35 recall memories of their time at the College.

A. Addison Roberts '35, chairman of the Class of 1935 Reunion Gift Fund, presents a $250,000 Professorship in Government to Dr. Melvyn D. Schiavelli, dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences. The professorship was financed by funds raised by the Class of 1935 for its 50th Reunion. The presentation was made in the Botetourt Gallery of Swem Library.

50th Reunion Class Gathers at Commencement

Cecelia Thomas Clow '35 and Charles Fuller Jr. '35 spend time at registration looking through a copy of the Class of 1935 edition of the Colonial Re-Echo.

At the 50th Reunion Banquet in the Williamsburg Hospitality House, Olde Guard medallions were presented to each member of the Class of 1935 including Adelaide Mason Miller who receives her medallion from David Varner '86, chairman of the 1986-87 Alumni-Student Liaison Committee.

One hundred and twelve members of the Class of 1935 attended the Commencement Exercises for the Class of 1985 in William and Mary Hall. Shown here the Class processes to the applause of the more than 10,000 persons attending the exercises. At the conclusion of the exercises the class was welcomed and acknowledged for its 50 years of service to the College by Acting President George Healy.

Pro-Am Better the Third Time Around

Tournament Raises $15,000 for Women's Athletics at W&M

BY FRANCES BOBBE

If the first was very good and the second was even better, then the third, Shearson Lehman Brothers W&M Invitational Pro-Am was definitely the best yet. Old and new "ingredients," cooked by sunshine and cooled by easy breezes, combined for a delightful day of fun and fundraising.

Altogether, the tournament raised approximately $15,000 for the women's athletic program, up from last year's record of $9,600. Counting the 19th (cocktail) hole, all 18 holes were sponsored, an increase from seven holes in 1984.

Once again, Colonial Williamsburg contributed its gorgeous Golden Horseshoe golf course. "It's always such a treat to play the Golden Horseshoe. The course brings out the champion in everybody," Women's Athletic Director Millie West said. "Del Snyder (the course pro) was just wonderful. Without his help and his guidance we wouldn't have such a fine tournament."

West further noted that the addition of a major sponsor, the increased support from local businesses, and the larger number of participants made the 1985 event an unprecedented success.

"The first contributing factor was having Shearson Lehman Brothers as our major sponsor. Second, local merchants, such as Massey's Camera Shop, which did our (film) processing, the Virginia Gazette, which did all of our printing, and Colony Travel, which helped with travel arrangements for the professionals, made a significant contribution. Puma donated prizes and the Williamsburg Merchants, Inc., alone, sponsored three holes," West said.

Representing Shearson Lehman Brothers was Joe Plumeri '66, senior vice president of marketing. Shearson Lehman Brothers' other sponsorships include three major tennis events, the French Open, the U.S. Open and the Tournament of Champions. Plumeri, who had come to Williamsburg from the Tournament of Champions at Forest Hills, announced at the Pro-Am awards ceremony that he and Shearson Lehman Brothers would be back next year.

Also promising to return was Ladies Professional Golf Association great Kathy Whitworth. The game's winningest professional had just come from her 88th victory at the United Virginia Bank Golf Classic in Suffolk, Va. Making her second Shearson Lehman Brothers W&M Pro-Am appearance, she teamed with Plumeri, Evan Katz, Ed Campbell, president of Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., and Bruce Jenkins for a fourth-place 62 (based on matching cards).

"The enthusiasm throughout the day was extremely high," noted West. "I thought the golfers were terrific. The pros are beginning to feel that they like coming to William and Mary, and they feel that they are helping the program." Besides Whitworth, Debbie Austin, Dianne Dailey, and Mary Dwyer were playing for the second time.

The amiable Austin led her team of Ron Carmean, John Hagee, Eleanor Hornsby, and Tom Tolbert to victory with a 13-under-par 58. The quintet carded 29 strokes out and 29 in, their score including an eagle on the sixth hole and 11 birdies overall.

Three strokes back with 61 were Dianne Dailey, last year's winning pro, Charlie Madrey, Dr. George Oliver, women's golf coach Ann Davidson, and Rick Ford.

In third place with 62 were the LPGA's Noreen Friel and partners Bill Bull, John Jamison, dean of the School of Business Administration at William and Mary, Jeff Fleishman, and Barrett Carson '74, director of development at William and Mary. Only in her second year on the tour, Friel donated her appearance fee to the tournament as she is also the godmother of Tribe golfer Jody Carreiro.

Mary Dwyer's team of Sam Wallace, Prentis Smiley, Joe Sliakis, and Thomas Steeg also carded a 62. The last two teams shot 64. They were: pro Shelley Hamlin and her "ams" Bob Crouch, Don Walker, Debbie Spencer '82, and Bill Gallagher; and Janet Anderson, the 1982 U.S. Open champion, Jim Ukrop '60, Jay Lawler '84, Gary Ripple, dean of admissions at the College, and Richmond judge Pete Stout '64.

West said that the Pro-Am has become "a real team effort on the part of the women's athletic program." Debbie Hill, volleyball coach and director of promotions and special events, assisted in nearly every phase of the outing. Lacrosse coach Feffie Barnhill drove the beverage cart throughout the thirst-creating rounds. Again, Tim Steeg '84 served as official photographer.

"I feel that our Pro-Am is a quality event," West concluded. "It's one which we're pleased to be able to sponsor, and we intend to keep holding it. I expect the field will continue to grow as it has the past two years. The only thing we hope to decrease is the number of May flies!"

THE INDISPENSABLE MAN

Ed Derringe Was Always There When Men's Athletics Needed Him

Ed Derringe has been the man behind the scenes who has made men's athletics at William and Mary run smoothly for the past 21 years.

BY BOB JEFFREY '74

While William and Mary coaches and players are busy preparing for a big game, concentrating on strategy, motivation, and conditioning, someone else has been laboring behind the scenes for months in advance to make sure the event comes off as planned. He's ordered and purchased all the equipment and uniforms, plotted the travel, lodging, and eating arrangements, fitted out the stadium, paid the bills, and kept track of every detail, major and minor.

For the past 21 years that man behind the scenes at the College has been Ed Derringe, the business manager for men's athletics, and an unsung hero if there ever was one. Derringe has provided a sense of continuity and quiet competence for generations of William and Mary athletes, coaches, and fans. His name may not have graced the headlines, but his efforts have kept Tribe sports afloat where it counts — on the bottom line.

Derringe has worn several hats during his career at W&M, starting in 1957 when he arrived in Williamsburg as an assistant football coach. He coached baseball for several years, and taught physical education classes until three years ago.

In 1963 Derringe began additional duties, assisting the legendary William S. ("Pappy") Gooch in the business office. The next year he took over from the ailing Gooch, and has continued in the position ever since.

In 1981, Derringe added the title and responsibilities of associate athletic director, handling even more financial responsibility. Many close to W&M sports believed that Derringe merited the athletic director's post then. Derringe himself ignored the potential controversy and simply continued doing his job. Coinciding with the end of this fiscal year in June, Derringe will retire, concluding 28 years of service to the College.

But this story starts much earlier, in the coal mining town of Shenandoah, Pa., where Ed Derringe was born. His prowess on the gridiron carried him to Georgetown University in 1939, when Eastern football was in its heyday.

The husky youth played center on offense and linebacker on defense during a period when the Hoyas were among the nation's elite in college football. Derringe's hard-nosed play led his team to a berth in the Orange Bowl in 1941. In 1942 he was named all-conference center and won the John J. Egan award as the team's most valuable player.

Following graduation, Derringe entered military service. He earned the rank of captain in the U.S. Air Force, piloting B-29's in the Pacific. He eventually flew 35 combat missions and was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and five Air Medals.

After the war he returned to the gridiron with the Scranton (Pa.) Bulldogs of the old American Football League, which Derringe described as "a farm league for the NFL." Scranton was affiliated with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

At the end of that first season Derringe received an opportunity that ultimately resulted in his association with William and Mary. One of the back-field coaches for the Scranton team had been offered a job coaching the Norfolk Shamrocks, a professional team that played in the Dixie League, and he asked Ed to come along as a player-coach.

"That team was a disaster," Derringe recalled with a laugh. "They were all good guys, but the only time they hustled was on pay day," he said.

Derringe realized he needed to do something more than playing football, so he landed a job coaching and teaching at Holy Trinity High School (later to become Norfolk Catholic). He coached basketball, a sport he claimed to know little about, and his teams responded by winning two straight state parochial school championships.

"That goes to show the importance of coaching," Derringe said with a touch of irony. "I bought a book on basketball and went through it with the kids. They corrected me when necessary."

Derringe moved on to Norfolk's Granby High School in 1949, where he coached football and taught history, government, and math. In 1953 his football team compiled an undefeated record and won the state I-A title. "Those were some beautiful days," he said.

During the fifties, Derringe's accomplishments attracted the notice of Milt Drewer, who coached at Warwick High School in Newport News before moving on to the University of Richmond and finally back to William and Mary as head football coach and athletic director. In 1957 Drewer invited Derringe to become an assistant football coach at W&M.

"I was quite surprised when Milt asked me to come up," Derringe said. "The big factor back then was money. I had always wanted to work someplace where I could make $6,000 a year," he laughed.

Like many jokes, this one was half-true. Derringe and wife Arlyne were raising a family that would eventually number six children: Ed, Jr., Diane, Mike, Renee, Jennifer, and Eric. For the kids, Williamsburg was a nice place to grow up.

In those days all the football coaches taught P.E. classes, and many coached additional sports in the spring. "It got a little hectic when you were trying to recruit and you had to find someone else to take your class or coach your ball team," Derringe recalled.

The fraternity of coaches at the College was less specialized then, almost a family affair. "We were closer together, in that we all tried to help each other out. At track meets for instance we would all be out there as timers or whatever," he said.

Coaching was a way of life, but two decades on the sidelines left Derringe longing for something more. "I had determined that there had to be a more stable life than coaching," said Derringe, "and when President Davis Y. Paschall gave me the opportunity to help "Pappy" in the business office, I jumped at the chance."

His college degree in economics helped somewhat in the transition, as did classes he had taken at the American Institute of Banking previously. But, according to Derringe, "There's no experience like practical experience."

Over the years Derringe has steered the athletic department through a period of dramatic change. "When I started, Pappy was literally running the place out of a shoebox. He kept the money there, the tickets, everything," he said.

Now, by contrast, the business operation is part of a fully computerized system capable of producing up-to-the-minute reports on the financial status of any sport. "It lets us know how far behind we are," joked Derringe.

Maintaining a high level of quality in athletics, not to mention solvency, has been a challenge, but it has its rewards. "William and Mary is a very demanding place, not only for the students, but also for the people who work here," he said. "And that's not a bad thing."

A highlight for Derringe has been the friendships and professional association with top-notch individuals. "There have been so many outstanding people that have coached here, starting with Drewer and Mary Levy, Lou Holtz, Jim Root, and of course we've got a fine football coach now in Jimmie Laycock. And the same holds true up and down the line, for all sports. They have to be good to do a good job here," said Derringe.

Coaches and co-workers will tell you that Derringe's contributions have been more than simply fiscal or managerial. He has exerted an intangible influence that helped others do their jobs better too. "He's a steadying influence," said Jim Root, head football coach for eight years. "Ed stays on an even keel. He doesn't get too far up or too far down. He's like the rudder on a ship," Root said.

For a succession for athletic directors and coaches, that unflappable personality has meant support and experience. "When you came in from outside the program, like I did," said Root, "Ed always seemed to be there to help out. And when it came to decisions, 'What time should the bus leave for an away game?' 'Will the Stadium be ready for the opening game?', you knew you could turn to Ed," Root said.

On a day in late May, with retirement a month away, Derringe was sitting in his office, attending to projects as major as finalizing the fall football travel schedule and as minor as having a trophy engraved for a graduating player. Come July it will be someone else's turn to toil behind the scenes. But Ed Derringe has seen to it that a steady course has been set.

A reception honoring Derringe will be held on Friday, June 28, in the Person Room at William and Mary Hall. For more information, contact Helen McLintock in the athletic department (804-253-4320).

Judge Hooker '08

THE FIRST HUNDRED YEARS

BY LISA L. HEUVEL '74

You could call Judge H. Lester Hooker's first 100 years a slice of Virginia history. This member of the Class of 1908 who celebrated his 100th birthday this past April 25 with some 80 relatives from around the state has much to remember.

Judge Hooker can well recall what it was like to be educated in a one-room Virginia schoolhouse and has had the distinction of serving 12 Governors of the Commonwealth as a member of the Virginia State Corporation Commission for 48 years. As one of three judges on this state regulatory body, Hooker served full time from 1924 until his retirement in 1972. That's the longest term of service for any commissioner in the nation, according to his proud son, H. Lester Hooker, Jr., '43, associate professor of physical education and director of William and Mary Hall.

The College of William and Mary has been a vital part of Judge Hooker's life as well. Three generations of the Hooker family, including his grandson H. Lester Hooker III '71, have attended the College, making it a true family tradition.

"I guess my reason for going to William and Mary is that I had a brother at William and Mary, 10 years ahead of me," says Judge Hooker, referring to the late James Murray Hooker, Class of 1895.

When he arrived on campus in the fall of 1904, this native of Patrick County, Virginia, had never seen the College or Williamsburg. "Of course, the President's House and the Great Hall (of the Sir Christopher Wren Building) were there, and a gymnasium and dormitory," he says of the way the campus looked then. "It didn't have but a small space for the boys to board, so I boarded out in town on Henry Street."

One of 13 children, Judge Hooker was born in Buffalo Ridge, Virginia. Familiar with baseball and basketball, he'd never seen a football game before he came to William and Mary.

"My main athletic prowess was rooting for the team, although I was very much interested in athletics, and have been ever since," says Judge Hooker. He was chairman of the College's athletic committee from 1936 to 1941, "when William and Mary had the finest football team it ever had," according to this sports fan. In recognition of his contributions to the athletic world and the Commonwealth, Judge Hooker was made a member of the Virginia Sports Hall of Fame in 1978.

His contributions to William and Mary go beyond athletics. Although he went on to earn a law degree at Washington and Lee University, Judge Hooker has made significant contributions to the College through the years.

A member of Phi Beta Kappa, he served as president of the Alumni Association from 1926 to 1928, on the Board of Managers of the Alumni Association from 1924 to 1928, and as a member of the Board of Visitors from 1956 until 1964.

Judge Hooker was awarded the William and Mary Alumni Medallion for service and loyalty in 1934 and received an honorary degree from the College in 1969.

Looking back over the years, he feels that the key to William and Mary's growth was the decision by President J.A.C. Chandler to admit girls to the College in 1919. "That was a great boon to the number of students at William and Mary," says Judge Hooker. "When I was there, the student body numbered somewhere about 200. When girls came in, from the first day on, they filled their quota, which was 40 percent at that time. I think that seems to be the starting point to William and Mary's growth, and it's been doing pretty well ever since.

"As a whole, William and Mary has advanced as well as might be expected. It's one of the top in the country in excellence of education," Judge Hooker adds. He feels that William and Mary had good presidents during his two terms as a member of the Board of Visitors and expresses special admiration for Davis Y. Paschall '32 as a "worker" who took his duties and obligations as President very seriously.

As the saying goes, "It takes one to know one," and Judge Hooker has been recognized during his career as an individual truly committed to his work. In 1984 he received the James Madison University Commonwealth Award for outstanding service through government work. The award, which honors persons with careers in non-elected government positions, was given to Judge Hooker by JMU President Ronald E. Carrier just prior to the William and Mary-JMU football game on Sept. 29.

The list of Judge Hooker's titles and responsibilities is an impressive one. He served as special assistant attorney general of Virginia in 1923-24, as president of the Southeastern Traffic Association 1926-29, and as President of the National Association of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners (beginning his term in 1933 after successive terms as second and later first vice president of that association).

Judge Hooker also was chairman of the legislative committee of the National Association of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners for 25 years, which, as part of his duties, required him to appear before Congress on matters of legislation affecting jurisdiction of the various state commissions.

Among SCC members, Judge Hooker is unique: not only has he served longer than any other commissioner, but he was the last to be elected by popular vote (in 1924, positions on the commission were elective offices) and the first to be named by vote of the General Assembly.

In Virginia, the duties of the commission multiplied during Judge Hooker's tenure as new developments have occurred in the fields of insurance, utilities and transportation. When he became chairman of the board in 1928, anticipation of the complexity transportation and utility regulation would reach caused Judge Hooker to institute important changes: a revolving chairmanship, requiring each commissioner to take his turn as chairman and the practice of dividing duties among the three commissioners. This allows each one to devote his time to the study of a particular field, which has become a significant asset as the commission's work has become more complex.

H. Lester Hooker, Jr., says that his dad never wanted to take a vacation when the rest of the family did. "He would take one day, but he might as well have been at the office," says Les Hooker.

"On the other hand, if there was a problem at home, he was always there to give his advice. I don't think there's anything he wouldn't do for his family, any sacrifice he wouldn't make. He always put his family first, but the State of Virginia has always meant a lot to him."

Married to the former Miss Nell Sanford, Judge Hooker has two children, his son, Les, Jr., and Mrs. Eleanor Hooker Boisseau '36. He has seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

And just how did the Hooker family get its love of sports? H. Lester Hooker, Jr., says this about his father and late mother: "My mother was a history teacher and basketball coach at a private high school, and they met when he was a referee. She disputed some of his calls." The two were married in Stuart, Virginia, in June 1912, and, jokes Les Hooker, "I think she thought she'd get good referee calls by marrying him."

The College of William and Mary has been a vital part of Judge Hooker's life for more than 80 years. Three generations of the Hooker family, including his grandson H. Lester Hooker III '71, attended William and Mary. The Judge's son, Les Jr. '43, is director of William and Mary Hall. At left is the late Mrs. Hooker.

“You Have Just Been Drafted Into The Future”

Commodore Hopper Calls on Graduates to Use Their Liberal Arts Education

To all those who are receiving degrees today, greetings. You have just been drafted into the future. In fact, you are the future and I want you to always be aware of it.

It's very hard to dream of the future sometimes. We sometimes forget how fast it comes at us. You've been stuffed with a tremendous amount of information over the past four years. Now you're going to have to learn to analyze and use that information.

We've been feeding data to computers for 50 years now; we've taken information out of computers, but we've spent the last 40 years looking at the process, the hardware, the software, the communications, the training of people, and we have totally failed to evaluate the data we are feeding into the computers and the information that is coming out of them. Information has an actual value, and we have failed to place those values on the information.

In fact, one of these days, information will appear on a corporate balance sheet as one of the assets of a corporation. That means we will have to place a value on it. A few months ago, I had to go speak for the IRS. Now, as far as I'm concerned it's always fair to bait the IRS. So I asked them how they were going to depreciate the value of information. Isn't that a nice question?

Some information is good overnight, some of it lasts a thousand years. And yet, we have failed to look at the value of this information when we're talking about this information revolution. And one of the biggest jobs you will have in the future is to establish those comparative values of information.

Please remember something else: information by itself is absolutely inert. It never does anything. It is something you see on a printed page, on the computer screen, you hear it over the telephone; it never does anything. It still must be fed to a human being, who must analyze it, compare it, and use judgment on it, and turn it into something we call knowledge, we call intelligence, upon which we can make decisions.

We spend a great deal of time training people for the technical side of things. How often have we remembered that we must train those people with a broad judgment to look at that information and make good use of it. Technical alone will not be enough for them. They must know history; they must know economics; they must know philosophy, if they are going to make proper use of that information as we move into the future. It's a revolution we're facing.

I can remember, when with my family on a Sunday afternoon, we went out and sat on Riverside Drive, which was then a dirt road, and watched all the beautiful horses and carriages go by. Then along came the Model-T. You could have any color you wanted as long as it was black. It cost between $300 to $600 and people started to own cars, and that started the revolution of transportation.

Now we have little black boxes with bright screens and people are beginning to own them. And we are only at the very beginning of the revolution of information. And it's high time we began to look at it and examine it critically and look at the value of it.

I did meet the first computer back on the second of July 1944. Commander Aiken waved his hand at it and said, "That's a computing engine." I was a brand-new J.G., so I said, "Yes, sir." I've watched it all grow and develop. I've watched it change. And I've watched us do remarkable things with it. And yet, I warn you: we must begin to look at the information we are producing.

I learned two other things. And that was when I made a plan, I must make two evaluations of that plan. I must evaluate every plan in the light of possible enemy actions, possible future events. And I must always evaluate every plan in the light of the cost of not doing it. So, I would give you those. If you're making a plan always take two points of view; evaluate it in the light of the possible future.

Probably the most dangerous phrase you could ever use will be that awful one: But we've always done it that way. I'll promise you something. If during the next five years any one of you says, "but we've always done it that way," I will instantly materialize beside you, and I will haunt you for 24 hours and see if I can get you to change your mind.

That's a forbidden phrase in my office. To counteract it, I keep a clock which operates entirely counter-clockwise. The first day people meet it, they can't tell time; the second day they discover that what used to be ten after is now ten of. It's not until the third day that they realize there was never any reason why clocks shouldn't run counter-clockwise. The hands don't have to go by the digits either. I have another clock that has a pointer and the digits go around it on a drum. And of course by now I have a digital clock, and my very helpful crew gave me an hour glass. And they sit there day in and day out and say, "Never, never, never in this office say, 'but we've always done it that way.'" So, I don't want any of you to ever do it again.

I had to give a presentation to the EDP policy committee of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, all admirals and generals. I had to remind them that they'd had tremendous reports on their desks that they'd had to absorb, tremendous decisions to make. They had not had time to keep up with the technology that was changing overnight. They were going to have to learn to listen to their juniors, to you. I've been watching it happen in the Navy with the greatest of glee.

Professor R. Wayne Kernodle places the honorary degree hood on Judge Hoffman while Acting President George Healy looks on.

Michael Powell, the first black commander of the ROTC cadets at William and Mary, had the proud honor of hearing his dad, Major General Colin R. Powell, deliver the principal address at the ROTC commissioning ceremonies.

There was one young lieutenant-junior grade; he was ordered to a very small ship. The Navy thought it was too small to have a computer. So, he took his own computer on board. He very quickly got all the files in his computer and was getting all the reports out on time. When he was transferred, the captain had to buy his computer, because the ship wouldn't run without it anymore.

Then there was the young commander of a squadron who was told to take his squadron out to an aircraft carrier. He found out that when he did, he would have to leave the maintenance records of his planes in the local naval air rework facility ashore. This didn't suit him at all; he wanted his maintenance records with him.

So, he went out and bought an Apple, and he went over to the NARF and liberated, stole, his maintenance records out of the NARF and into his Apple, got a case for it, put it in the space behind his seat and flew off to the carrier with all his maintenance records and a computer with which to maintain them. He was highly successful.

Well, he came back and told about it at the Department of Defense Computer Institute, and somebody looked at him and said, "You supposed to do that?" And he said, "I didn't ask."

Now that brings me to the most important piece of advice I can give to you for the future: If it's something that's good, I want you to go ahead to do it. It is much easier to apologize than it is to get permission. And then when they catch up with you, "Oh, gee, I didn't know I wasn't supposed to do that, but ain't it pretty." And it works every time.

And I'll even give you a motto to back it up. A ship in port is safe, but that is not what ships are built for. And I want every one of you to be good ships and sail out and do the new things.

Where Do The Crown Jewels Of America Reside?

BY DAVIS Y. PASCHALL '32

Dr. Davis Y. Paschall '32, 23rd President of the College of William and Mary, offered these thoughts at the ROTC Commissioning Ceremonies on Commencement weekend prior to inducting Judge Walter W. (Pete) Stout III '64 into the Roster of Distinguished Graduates.

Before proceeding with the happy task of making an induction in the Roster of Distinguished Graduates, may I recall an instance during World War II when we were escorting a vessel to this country which, we were told, was bringing the Crown Jewels of a foreign nation for safe-keeping.

I ask you what would you take aboard as the Crown Jewels of America? We have no throne, nor orb, nor crown, nor scepter of state. But I submit, we possess crown jewels of more than regal splendor or priceless worth.

Think of the little church at Jamestown during the starving time, and the old church in Richmond where words of "liberty or death" were spoken, and the pleasant dells at Valley Forge where the winter snows hung heavy, and the little monument at Yorktown where a storied struggle ended.

And remember the Alamo in Texas — a mute memorial to sacrificial gallantry — and the peaks of the Rockies named for those who dared the dangers in pushing back the frontiers.

And, then, those white crosses at Gettysburg, at Chateau Thierry, at Normandy, at Iwo Jima, in Vietnam — and "all over," where they gave their "all". Yes,

They shall grow not old, as we that are left grow old;
Age shall not weary them, nor the years condemn.
At the going down of the sun and in the morning —
We will remember them.

And there is more — our freedom of the press, of speech, of worship according to the dictates of conscience, and so much more precious liberty.

These are the crown jewels of America, and they don't reside in Richmond or in Washington to be packaged and carried abroad. They are to be found in every crossroads and hamlet of this great country. They reside in the hearts and souls of our people, and the challenge of your Commission today is to add luster to them in the years to come.

In anticipation of these Exercises, I walked through the entrance hallway to the Wren Building, and viewed again the memorial tablets to Alumni who gave their lives in all our country's wars. I was shocked and saddened by the stark absence of any memorial to those of the Korean conflict and the Vietnam War.

And, then, I recalled your Awards Ceremony in November at which time John Bane of the Class of 1968 donated a saber in memory of his classmate Brian Speer who died in Vietnam. I recently heard that Captain William Koziar of the ROTC Staff — a graduate of the Class of 1974 — is doing some research as to other alumni who died in Vietnam and the Korean conflict. I commend him, and urge that he and John Bane, as alumni, bring the matter of the missing tablet to the attention of the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni.

During the '60s I presented many ROTC Commissions. As the years passed, I felt the traumatic anguish of what was happening in Vietnam more poignantly because of what was happening at home. Whatever anyone today may think of that war, one thing is for certain: those who fought it gave it all they had! And, we shall remember them! For nothing is more dishonorable than the failure to accord appreciation for noble sacrifice — whether it be that of a mother, a friend, or one who is wounded, or dies in service to his country.

Before inducting Judge Walter W. (Pete) Stout III '64 into the Roster of Distinguished Military Graduates, former President Davis Y. Paschall '32 called for a memorial to those who gave their lives in the Korean conflict and Vietnam War.

In Defense of the Liberal Arts

By Mike Branch '85

From what I have been given to understand, the student response is frequently a sermon on the benefits of a liberal arts education, and I wish to acknowledge up front that that is precisely my intention as well. The reason I have chosen so traditional a subject is quite simple; I am of the opinion that the liberal arts sorely need defense, and I believe that each of us has a stake in the advocacy of the kind of educational environs which we have enjoyed here at William and Mary.

I recently discovered a horrifying letter to the editor in the Washington Post in which the author suggested that a trimming of Shakespeare and other less "useful" aspects of the American curriculum would enhance our production efficiency relative to that of the Japanese. I am certain that this group needs no convincing that the eradication of Shakespeare is a frightening proposition, but what is important is that there is a trend in the eighties which works against the liberal arts, and which damages the culture which such scholarship supports. I simply wish to suggest that the liberal arts program is not "inefficient," as critics who prefer a more pragmatic approach often claim.

Learning how to think and learning how to learn are prerequisites for any specific application of knowledge. While I am aware that we are not the individuals who need to be told the value of a quality liberal arts education, we do need to be reminded of it, and this is especially true today as we prepare to move into circumstances perhaps less conducive to the values which we encountered here.

In 1838 Ralph Waldo Emerson addressed the graduating members of the literary society at Dartmouth College, and he offered just such a reminder, which I think is particularly relevant to us as we leave William and Mary in 1985. I quote from that address which is entitled "Literary Ethics":

You will hear every day the maxims of a low prudence. You will hear that the first duty is to get land and money, place and name. "What is this truth you seek? What is this beauty?" men will ask, with derision. If, nevertheless, any of you be called to explore truth and beauty, be bold, be firm, be true. When you shall say, 'As others do, so will I. I renounce my early visions, I must let learning and romantic expectations go until a more convenient season' — then dies the man in you; then perish once again the buds of art, and poetry, and science, as they have died already in a thousand thousand men. The hour of that choice is the crisis of your history, and see that you hold yourselves fast by the intellect.

I don't believe that Emerson intended to chastise us for not all becoming starving artists; rather, he is reminding us that the principles by which we have grown here are not to be relinquished as we move into that afterlife which students call the "real world." Hopefully, we have learned the principles of open-mindedness, self-discipline, and academic integrity, or, put simply, we have benefited from a liberal arts tradition which now requires our support. Liberal arts is a scholarly curriculum which we leave behind, but more important, it is a humanistic way of thinking which we take with us.

For me, induction into Phi Beta Kappa is simply a recognition of that "way of thinking" to which I am already personally committed. That, in my opinion, is precisely what makes that membership the great honor that it is. On my own behalf, and that of my fellow initiates, I thank you.

Mike Branch graduated on Sunday, May 12, from the College of William and Mary with high honors in English. He made this address at the Phi Beta Kappa Initiation on Saturday of Commencement weekend.

I'm counting on our young people. I've seen you all across the country in the schools, the colleges. There are some that are a little bit ahead of you. I visited a third-grade class in Independence, Mo., and they were writing programs in BASIC and debugging them. So, the rest of you will have to become acquainted with computers in due course.

I find that our young people today are the brightest, the healthiest, the most eager to learn that we've ever had in the history of this country, and I think we haven't recognized it. I blame the media — TV, radio, newspapers — they only tell us about the 20 percent that are no good. They completely fail to tell us about the 80 percent of you, who are the brightest, the healthiest, the most eager that we've ever had in the history of this country. And I'm proud of you.

And yet, I find those young people are looking for something. The thing they are looking for is a positive leadership. When I left midshipman's school, they told me my primary job would be to provide leadership. And that leadership was a two-way street; there was loyalty up and loyalty down. Respect for your superior, keep him informed, make suggestions. Superior, take care of your crew.

For instance, in my case, I decided that every member of my crew should be able to get on their feet and give a report and not say, "you know." I put a little square box on their desks with a slot in it, and if they said "you know" during a report they had to put a quarter in. We didn't take the quarters, but it tied up their capital, and you'd be surprised how fast they learned not to say "you know." Then, when they could give a report and not say, "you know," there was a reward.

When I was invited to give a presentation for an admiral, I would arrive with my entire crew trailing after me. I would not give the report. One by one I would introduce them to give the report on their part of the work. And I watched those young people grow two inches when an admiral said, "Well done."

That's something else we've forgotten. We've forgotten to give praise when praise is due. We bawl people out all the time. How many times do we remember to say, "Well done. That was a good job. Thank you." It will be your job to provide leadership for the future. I want you to remember that. Always give praise when praise is due. Remember that two-way street of leadership.

We forgot it at the end of World War II; we went overboard on management. Everything could be done by management, and we forgot leadership. And it must come back, not alone in the armed forces, but in government, in industry, everywhere. Only one outfit never forgot it; that was the Marines. And I think if I had a Marine standing beside me, what he would say would be: "When the going gets rough, you cannot manage a man into combat; you must lead him." And he would add: "You manage things, you lead people." That's going to be the most important job you will have to provide leadership.

For that reason, I will wish you good sailing. I will wish you fair winds and following seas and good sailing to that future.

I'm deeply appreciative of the honor that's been given to me today. I'm proud to be part of this university. And yet, I must remind you of something else. I have already received the highest award I'll ever receive — no matter how long I live, no matter how many more jobs I may have — and that has been the privilege and the responsibility of serving with true faith and allegiance, very proudly, in the United States Navy. Thank you.

We also recall the hardships many of our parents experienced in trying to accumulate the necessary funds with which they might give to us that which they had been denied. We ask ourselves, "Did we appreciate the sacrifices of our parents to the fullest?" I'm afraid not until we were faced with the education of our own children! It was then we began to realize the struggles and sacrifices many parents of our day kept unto themselves that we might not be anxious over their responsibilities.

As we are reminiscing may we turn the hands of time a short distance back and witness April 12 and 13, 1985, the celebration of the 60th reunion of the Class of 1925!

What a gala occasion this must have been! As your class reporter I regret I cannot give you a "blow-by-blow" account on a firsthand basis. Come with me, close your eyes, and let's slip off to the festivities of this great occasion!

The reunion of which we have been dreaming for ten years has begun, and there are warm handclaps and joyful embraces. We join forces as we meet first at noon for the Olde Guard Luncheon. Then on to the Hospitality House where we are greeted and welcomed by our President Art Winder and his wife, Mary. The reception has begun in the William and Mary Parlor and is soon to be followed by the banquet in the Governor Berkeley Room, culminating over coffee in the Parlor. The banquet is truly beautifully served and indeed delicious!

Finally, the magic hour of midnight has arrived and it is time to say "goodnight" but not "goodbye" for tomorrow at 9 a.m. breakfast will be served in the Main Parlor of the Alumni House.

Once again fond farewells have been said. Hearts are beginning to feel a bit heavy. Yes, each, I am certain, is thinking "I wonder if this is my last time to say 'Goodbye' to these classmates!"

Already we are thinking of Homecoming next fall and better yet of Homecoming 1986, our 61st class reunion. May it be the good fortune of all of those who were present for our great occasion plus those who wished they could be there, to come back at that time and make that another "Happy Occasion!"

The following members, spouses and guests were in attendance: Jamie and Dorothy Campbell; John Fuller and his wife, Nan; William Gravely, Jr., and his wife, Elizabeth; Edward Islin; Elizabeth Kent Lazo; Vernon and Elizabeth Nunn, and John, Joyce '58, and Andrew McKnight; Charlie Pollard and his wife, Louise; Matilda Crawford Whitehouse and Evelyn Crawford Cheney '28; Arthur Winder, his wife, Mary, and Wes and Tabbie Layton; Muriel Valentine Yale; Jeanette Beazley Yates; and Aline Hall '51.

Many, many thanks to Ed Islin who so promptly called and clued me in on the festivities.

There will be no more Class of '25 news due until August for the October Gazette. The deadline is August 1 to my desk so I beg of you, please start now and keep notes on your activities and those of your family and mail them to me before then. Remember each of us is extremely interested in hearing from you so please do not disappoint us.

May the summer bring many happy experiences and may you unselfishly share them with us. Drive safely and God bless each and everyone of us as we begin the track of our 61st class reunion year.

Dear Classmates:

It is hard to realize that it has been 60 years since we said our farewells and set out in life full of vim, vigor and vitality — perhaps a bit fearful — of the turns of the winding road which lay ahead!

Those were challenging days for some — yet often disillusioning for others — for jobs were not easy to come by for many. We kept faith knowing God was with us to guide us to our destinations, and the proof of it all is the great success with which a large majority have met.

We continue to reminisce, and we recall happy and true friendships made, heartaches from the loss of "loves" we thought would always be ours, and knowledge so inspiringly imparted by our professors that someday we would recognize it as having bestowed upon us knowledge that would prove of far greater importance and worth than dollars and cents. Hanging on our wall is a sampler made by an ancestor, which reads, "When land is gone and money spent learning may prove most excellent." All of us have lived long enough to appreciate this.

FLAT HAT HONORED

The Flat Hat, William and Mary's student newspaper, has been named the best weekly student paper in the nation by the Society of Collegiate Journalists. The group also chose the William and Mary Review as the second best literary magazine in the competition. SCJ has over 100 active members and is the oldest collegiate journalism society in the country.

COMMITTEE NAMED FOR A.D. SEARCH

William and Mary has appointed a search committee that includes five alumni to conduct a search for a new men's athletic director. Chaired by biology professor Lawrence L. Wiseman, the committee includes Board of Visitors members James E. Ukrop '69 of Richmond and Joseph R. Koons '68 of Great Falls, Va.; former Athletic Educational Foundation president G. Elliott Schaubach '59 of Norfolk; AEF trustees Joseph W. Montgomery '74 of Williamsburg and James J. Porach '61 of Petersburg; G. Gary Ripple, dean of admissions at the College; and a student to be named later. Dr. George R. Healy, acting president and provost of the College, said the new athletic director should be named no later than September 1. He will succeed W. James Copeland who has been named athletic director at the University of Utah, effective July 1.

MASON HEADS 1985 UNITED WAY CAMPAIGN

Raymond A. (Chip) Mason '59 has been named general chairman for the 1985 United Way Campaign of Central Maryland. Mason is chairman, president and chief executive officer of Legg Mason, Inc., with headquarters in Baltimore. He received the Alumni Medallion in 1983.

Dear Classmates:

Just think, it was 58 years ago this month that Dr. "Jack" Chandler and Dr. J. Leslie Hall handed us those degrees (in Latin, yet) out in front of Wren, which we knew then as "Old Main"! It really doesn't seem that long ago, especially for one who returns as often as I do to the scenes of our happy youth.

Memories of those golden days came flooding back as over 300 of us gathered for Olde Guard Day on April 12. There were 21 pre-registered from '27: Fairfax Griffith Bahr, Fairfax Berkley, Eleanor Calkins, Annetta Rives Gwaltney, Frank S. Hopkins (and Louise), William J. Hogan (and Page D.) Maxwell Brockenbrough Houghland, Eugenia Portlock Joyce, Leon Lasting, Eulah A. Massey, Gay Burruss Meisel, Margaret Moore Melton, Nina Trevvett Miles, Marguerite Bickers Miller, Harriette A. Patteson, Anna Withers Rolling, Jesse F. Slauson (and Helen), C. M. "Spike" Smith, R. E. B. "Buzzy" Stewart (and Martha), James E. "Dick" Trible (and Johnnie), Marie Hofmeyer Tuttle, and Edward L. Wilshin (and Blanche).

A few didn't make it for one reason or another, and I missed a few more during the reception on the Alumni House lawn or in Trinkle Hall, newly restored, which we packed for a grand luncheon and program directed by our own Buzzy Stewart, who has been a real "wheel" in the origin of the Olde Guard.

By the way, Trinkle is now a valued adjunct to the Student Center after serving several years as a storage place following opening of The Commons on the "New" Campus. Its one great drawback is poor acoustics because of the tile floor and high ceiling. It beats eating in vast William and Mary Hall, however.

On April 16 after returning home, I received a card from William J. "Bill" Hogan, asking where I was at the OG shindig. His name wasn't on the preregistered list and much to my chagrin, I didn't know he was there. Awfully sorry, Bill, after all my begging you to come back. No wonder you promise to see me "in '93."

"I was pretty impressed with the appearance and behavior of the present day students," Bill adds. To which I would comment that things have changed a great deal in the past few years. I noticed in my walks about campus that many, both men and women, spoke cheerfully even the joggers who whizzed by. 'Twas not always so. Back in the 60s and early 70s few even returned a greeting and when greeted often expressed surprise. So, we have a change for the better.

There was true joy in being able to see and talk with so many from other classes whose college years overlapped ours. An added pleasure came that afternoon when Frank Hopkins drove his wife, Louise, and me to Jamestown, which she had never seen. Frank and I recalled Sunday afternoon hikes down to the island during student days. There is an undeniable thrill in browsing the island, visiting the restored church, inspecting the old foundations, pausing near the ancient tombs, tipping a hat to the statue of the indomitable Capt. John Smith as well as stopping by the tricentennial monument of 1907. All of which reminded us of times when the College housed the House of Burgesses after Jamestown was destroyed by fire.

We thought, too, of how Dr. Richard L. "Dick" Morton brought Virginia history to life during those lectures in the old chapel, long before Rockefeller restoration. Williamsburg, Jamestown and Yorktown are inseparably bound together. If you haven't driven the Colonial Parkway that joins the three, by all means put that on your next travel agenda.

As usual, I stayed over another day for the Order of the White Jacket spring board meeting. OWJ, as we call it, has grown into one of the most prestigious organizations ever founded on campus. It now has over 650 members who will provide seven scholarships this year to deserving students. Naturally, I'm proud of the part that Lee Todd, Art Matsu and I had in its founding.

Seeing Frank Hopkins again reminds me of a letter he composed recently for some who helped him with his class agent job. It concerns the relationship of the Hepburn family with William and Mary. Actress Katherine Hepburn is first cousin to Frank and his late brother, Sewell, whose middle name was Hepburn. For the benefit of those who did not receive a copy of Frank's epistle, I'll borrow a few interesting facts:

Frank and Sewell's mother was the daughter of the Rev. Sewell Stavely Hepburn, who served as Episcopal minister in Hanover from 1881 to 1906. She had four brothers, of whom Charles and Lloyd were William and Mary students around 1892 to 1894. Charles, who had played football at Episcopal High School in Alexandria, found William and Mary without a team and proceeded to help organize one. Frank's father, N. Snowden Hopkins and Uncle Joseph were students at the same time and played on those early teams.

"There is another part of the story," writes Frank. "My mother's brother Sewell attended the Medical College of Virginia and her brother Norval went to Randolph-Macon College and later to Johns Hopkins Medical School; both became physicians. Norval became Dr. Thomas N. Hopkins, a well-known urological surgeon in Hartford, Conn., married a Miss Katharine Houghton of the Corning Glass family of upstate New York, and produced a family, which included the well-known stage and screen actress, Katharine Hepburn."

Katharine attended Bryn Mawr at the same time Frank and Sewell were with us at William and Mary. He saw her in her first stage role in "The Warrior's Husband" and visited her backstage. Like me, Frank admired her greatly in "On Golden Pond" with Henry Fonda and daughter, Jane, one of the few good movies produced in the last 10-20 years.

Cotton Rawls, slowly but steadily coming back from his stroke, aroused an amusing memory with a recent letter asking if freshmen these days still have to pay an "Egypt Fee." I failed to verify that on my last visit, but will pursue this fascinating subject for its cultural enlightenment.

I don't recall if the girls in our class, among the first co-eds, had such an intriguing assessment by sophomores, but for those who don't remember: The Egypt fee was two bits and privileged lowly ducs to use toilet facilities of the College. Upon reaching sophomore status they could retrieve the fee from the next unsuspecting array of "green ducs." Ah, me, those were the days. Some who failed to pay wound up in Supreme Court later on.

Bill Morrow, who was one of those Jamestown Sunday hikers, writes that his "batteries needed recharging" so he went to Bermuda in March for the 12th time. "College kids are here (spring vacation) and the type sure has changed since 1923-27," he summarizes. Sort of a seagoing Fort Lauderdale for the more affluent, I guess.

Well, that's about it for this time, friends. If you want to read more class news come autumn you'd better sit down and write some. Meanwhile, have a happy, not-too-hot, but relaxing summer.

I had the pleasure of receiving a letter from H. Caleb Cushing. He and "Winkie" are retired, technically, but he stays busy as interim at a small but active Methodist church. They have been "interiming" there for the past six years! Various reunions and anniversaries keep them on the move. They went back for the Campbell University Choir reunion and also attended a thirties celebration at Shenandoah Conservatory. His 60th reunion at Covington High School is coming up, as well as the 50th from Westminster Choir College.

Caleb kindly enclosed an article from the December 13, 1984, issue of the Roanoke Times & World News, entitled, "It Takes a Good Showman to keep a Choir on Its Feet." The article refers to Caleb's wit and dramatics in leading a choir made up of about 40 people who love to sing. They sing for their own enjoyment and for groups who invite them to perform.

Caleb and Winifred have sung, played, directed, taught and conducted music for many years, in the U.S. and abroad. They met at Westminster Choir College and since then have headed various music departments. They have performed solo work for Albert Einstein and Franklin Roosevelt, singing under Leopold Stokowski and the National Symphony. They have traveled with concert groups through Europe and for 10 years directed Roanoke's Greene Memorial United Methodist Church choir.

Martin Laning Worrall sends greetings to all. Marian is a widow and lives in Escondido, Calif. One of her children and two grandchildren live nearby.

Marian writes, "I devour each issue of the Alumni Gazette." Caleb enjoys the Gazette, also. I hope all of you who enjoy reading the class news will follow Marian's and Caleb's examples and drop your reporter a note. News is hard to come by sometimes, so why not do your part and let us hear from you.

Summer is approaching, and I hope there will be plenty of news telling about vacations.

Marion Sargent Lane writes that her son William J. Lane, Jr., '58 and Sarah had their third son last October; it was Marion's fifth grandchild. Congratulations!

Mary Ware Fetner and husband have been spending the winters in Florida since his retirement. They pull an Airstream trailer and enjoy traveling.

Congratulations to Elizabeth Erwin Higbee and Charles who are celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary by going to London and to Holland, from where they will take a 17-day cruise down the Rhine. They were married June 12, 1935, in Philadelphia.

Dr. Walter De Martini has written that he is retiring from dentistry. He graduated from Harvard in 1933.

Harold B. Lewis writes that he has finally, fully retired from all academic teaching and will try to settle down to a leisurely country life. On May 4, Harold began a 14-day Trans-Panama Canal cruise.

Sympathy is extended to Polly Swift Slate upon the death of her sister, Lt. Commander Grace Swift '23, U.S.N.R. (Retired) on January 9 and the death of her husband, Marvin, on January 10. Also sympathy to Kenneth Graham's widow, Tommy, following his death on February 11.

It was good to have the following class members present for the Olde Guard luncheon and program on April 12: Marion Handy Anderson, Amy Reid Bibb, Anne Wynne Boelt, Jerome P. Carr, Calvin J.

Charnock, John T. Chewning, Eleanor Griffith Clark, Elizabeth Griffin Conkling, Clare Cook Grayle, Ethel Nunn Gregory, Ellen Ticer King, Katherine Lam, Marion Sargent Lane, Marie Spence Moffett, Lucy Morton Neill, Agnes Winn Paschall, Harry C. Paxson, Jr., Milton Salasky, Martha L. Savage, Dorothy Reese Smith, Elizabeth Allen Snead, Edwin Curtis Thomas, Leigh R. Trotter, and Alice Addis Washer.

Hope to see most of you at Homecoming.

Another beautiful spring in Virginia has arrived! With it comes nature's beauty and a new beginning for all growing things. It is a time for renewal, awareness, and thankfulness — a time for putting away winter's bleakness.

On Easter Sunday I had a pleasant surprise as I came out of church. Someone called to me as my husband and I were going to our car. It was Elizabeth Garrow McFall (Mrs. Wilber R.) of Newport News whose daughter married the son of friends of ours. Elizabeth was visiting them and had gone to church with her grandchildren. Later that same day we saw Fanny Martin Richardson and her daughter. They had had dinner where we had dined also.

It's fun to run into our school friends and acquaintances. That bond of William and Mary ties us together. In fact, I read somewhere the other day why a young man chose the College of William and Mary over a northern well-known university that had also accepted him. He said when he visited the campus he was astounded at the friendliness of everyone. Everyone greeted him on campus and many in the town, too. This was the very thing that I remember vividly that made me feel at home and welcome that hot September day in 1929. I knew no one on campus or in Williamsburg.

Many thanks go to John Holberton for his "newsy" column in the April issue.

The night that John J. Reid was inducted into the Athletic Hall of Fame, I was watching the basketball game on TV. I even caught a glimpse of Lota Spence Reid as Johnny returned to the bleachers. We are all proud of you, John.

Jean Walker Ogden of Chevy Chase, Md., has a granddaughter at Old Dominion University in Norfolk. Jean, now retired, spends many pleasant hours at the Washington museums and attending the opera at the Kennedy Center. She has seen the Nutcracker and also Romeo and Juliet danced by the Joefrey Ballet Company which she enjoyed.

William L. Shephard of Virginia Beach and his family donated an "E-Z-Go" golf cart to the College. His daughter, Mrs. Thomas Regan, also of Virginia Beach, presented the golf cart to the director of the College's assistance program for handicapped students, Dean Carroll F. Hardy. The welcome gift is a much-needed addition to the College's equipment, which can be used by handicapped students. William's granddaughter, Elizabeth Heil, who is a sophomore at William and Mary was the recipient of the cart last year when she was having difficulty getting around because of a broken leg. When the family heard of the school's need they donated it this year. What a wonderful and useful gift!

Jeanne Rose of Arlington, Va., is still "on the go." In June she went to Europe, and included a trip to Oberammergau where she saw "The Passion Play," a most moving experience.

HAULMAN RECEIVES FULBRIGHT

Clyde A. Haulman, associate professor of economics at William and Mary, has been awarded a Fulbright grant to lecture at Wunan University in the People's Republic of China for the 1985-86 academic year.

GLADYS CALKINS COOK '25 RECEIVES HONORARY DEGREE

Bucknell University has conferred an honorary doctor of humane letters degree on Gladys Calkins Cook '25 who taught at Bucknell for 43 years until her retirement in 1973. Dr. Cook served as chairman of the French department and the Department of Modern Languages, Literature and Linguistics and as director of the French program. In 1973, she received the Harriman Award in recognition of her contributions to the intellectual and cultural life at Bucknell. Dr. Cook, who received her master's degree from William and Mary in 1926, received her doctorate from the University of Pennsylvania and also studied at the Sorbonne. Four members of the Calkins family are graduates of William and Mary.

OWJ INCREASES SCHOLARSHIPS, ELECTS NEW LIFE MEMBERS

The Order of the White Jacket will give out two more scholarships in 1985 and will add $250 to the amount of each scholarship. At its spring semi-annual meeting, the OWJ board increased the number of scholarships from 7 to 9 and increased the amount of each from $500 to $750, representing an increased funding of over $3,250 over 1984. This represents OWJ's suggested donation to the scholarship fund by members of $1.00 per year since graduation plus additional generous donations by members. In addition, two Charter Members, Dwight C. Brown '32 of Arlington, Va., and Andrew J. Christensen '34 of Roanoke, Va., were made Life Members in recognition of their many contributions and service to OWJ. Both served on the Board of Directors and as OWJ officers.

Olde Guarde Day, April 12, dawned a beautiful spring day. This year the luncheon was held in Trinkle Hall, which has been renovated. (To me it was still "The College Dining Hall" or Refectory. When was it given the name Trinkle Hall? (Governor Trinkle) I don't remember anyone calling it that during '29-'33, do you?) Everything was well arranged under the guidance of "Capt." John Phillips. There were visits to the Muscarelle Museum and the Marshall-Wythe School of Law. The latter I had not seen before. One of the law professors gave us an informative talk about the courtroom, which is both functional and modern and equipped with many electrical gadgets. Their uses were explained to us. Then we saw the iron-barred cell in the adjacent corridor. This is seldom used, however. (I was glad I was outside looking in.

Before lunch, we had a reception on the lawn of the Alumni House. Scott Cunningham '43 and his wife, also an alumna, greeted us informally and made us feel welcome.

Reunions are always emotional delights! It was the first time that I had seen Boyd '32 and Ruth Graves since 1932. I babysat for them that summer when Boyd was working on his master's degree. Their daughter, Glenna, was a dear friend. She spent several nights with me in the dorm. Ruth and Boyd had an apartment which they rented in the old KA house (now our Alumni House).

Several of the Class of '33 were on the list to attend, but I didn't see them. Were you there Camilla Nelson Crockett of Yorktown, William Gracey of Hampton, or Oscar Kennedy of Suffolk? Doris Sutton and I came from Richmond. Mary Painter Caldwell from Williamsburg. Flora Wilcox Berkeley and Lucie Grossman Titus from Petersburg, John Holberton, our other class reporter from Potomac, Md., John and Lota Spence Reid from Emporia, Mildred Wallace Drummond and her husband from Norfolk, Charles S. Thomas, Jr., and his wife from Hampton, and Eleanor Willis Troiana from Suffolk. Alice Weigand Koller and her husband came back this year, too, from Flushing, Long Island, N.Y.

I ate lunch with Dottie Reese Smith and her husband from Norfolk. After lunch, several people spoke including George B. Healy, acting president of the College, who presented several medallions. One went to Mr. David Sizer '09 who will be 100 years old in September. Then the president of the Class of '85, Anthony McNeal, brought us to the present with his remarks. I liked what he said about respecting traditions and also making traditions today. Mr. R. E. B. Stewart '27, the retiring president of the Olde Guarde, was his witty, delightful self, poking fun at others and himself. He also informed the group of the Guarde's accomplishments.

Last, but truly a highlight were the songs from the days of our romantic youth made famous by Nelson Eddy and Jeannette McDonald sung by Mrs. Lavinia Pretz Phillips '57. We sang along with Kord Basnight '85 such oldies as K-K-Katy. Delightful! It was a day we shall recall with pleasant memories.

Our thanks to the students who escorted us on the buses that took us around campus. They were courteous and charming as they made us feel welcome.

You know that it has been two years since the class of '33 celebrated our 50th reunion. Charles Thomas, our treasurer, says that we have not met our goal of $25,000 as a pledge toward furnishing one of the new rooms to be added to the Alumni House. Let's keep adding to our class gift. If you sent a contribution in '83, add it to NOW. If you didn't send a contribution then, it isn't too late. Do it Now! Send it to the Alumni House and designate it for the Class of 1933 Gift Fund.

Don't forget to send John Holberton news and your comments by August for our next column in the Alumni Gazette. This is your newspaper, so please contribute your ideas, too. Have a good summer, all of you!

When this appears in the Alumni Gazette our 50th reunion will be past. We are fortunate to be able to experience this once in a lifetime event.

Bruce Kent of Florida writes that he and Clara are looking forward to being in Williamsburg on May 11 and 12. Bruce is busy working in his yard and garden. He said his brother, Dr. Paul Kent, wrote him recently and promised to bring his wife, Eleanor Martin Kent, to the 50th reunion. Eleanor was the class reporter for many years. She has problems with arthritis but does not intend to let it keep her from Williamsburg in May. Bruce and Clara are still traveling and have reservations for a trip to France this summer.

A nice letter from Harriet Council Mead arrived recently stating that she plans to be at the 50th reunion. Harriet has been included in Who's Who and Why of Successful Florida Women. Congratulations to Harriet on this honor. Remembering her W&M days we are not surprised at this recognition.

Ronald B. Hall of Easton, Pa., sends his regrets that he will not be able to attend the 50th reunion. After 45 years of happy married life to a beautiful redhead from Goucher he is enjoying his retirement. His daughter, Judy, is a graduate of W&M '64 and son, Geoffrey, received his B.A. from Presbyterian College and his M.A. from Marshall University. Ronald spent most of his life in the writing field. Upon his retirement in '80 he did some free lancing for a while until he got plain lazy. We are sorry you will not be with us in Williamsburg in May.

Welcome into the Olde Guarde.

Well, I am afraid it has finally happened. I have no news at all to report. I do hope you will write before the middle of August so that I will have some news for the fall letter.

Since I have the space, I would like to pass on a little advice. If you are going to Europe, please leave all your jewelry at home. In London, a beautiful pin was stolen from the lapel of my suit coat. This was the second theft I experienced in London. The last trip there my glass case and glasses were taken from my coat pocket. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Remember, send your reporter a postcard this summer.

Hello, there.

Received three flaps which were thoughtfully forwarded by the Alumni House. Do you remember when the alumni office was in a corner of that building to the left of Botetourt's statue as you approached the Wren Building? Did you ever go in there? I didn't either. Wasn't very much then, but it grew like a government agency. Anyway . . .

Here's one from good old Myra Birchett Butterworth, who, among other things, says, "I have reached the age of enjoying my grandchildren." Good for you, Myra. I'm still working on that. Two grandsons, says Myra, joined the family this past year. So we can assume that you have more than one child. (It's thinking like that that has put me where I am today.) She adds that they are prospective William and Mary students. Better not be too cocky about that, Myra. It's harder to get in now than it was when they let us in.

Good old Jean Stevenson Walsh missed the last Homecoming because she horned in on a W&M trip to Scotland, Yorkshire and Wales in late September and then moved into a larger apartment. One does tend to put on weight on trips, doesn't one? The new apartment is near Gaithersburg, Md., still in the Washington, D.C., area, which is good because she enjoys the cultural activities, available. Washington is a great city and we enjoy our visits there. She likes it better where she is because she is still close to her friends and relatives, and it's less noisy. Where did you live before that there was so much din and bother?

Good old Dorothy Judd moved, too — across the state to Easthampton, Mass. She is "enjoying life in the Pioneer Valley." Dorothy closes with the question, "Where else can you combine country living with the cultural outlet that five nearby colleges can provide?" How about Tidewater, Virginia? Lots of colleges here. But you may have a point. The most cultured thing here is the buttermilk. (If that doesn't bring a response, then nothing will.)

You may wonder why there was no answer when you tried to call and give me the up-to-date news about yourselves. That's because we weren't here. Charlotte and I decided to take off for a couple of weeks and found ourselves in Germany. We saw Frankfurt, Heidelberg, Rothenberg, Nurnberg, Arnbruck, Westheim, Nordlinger, Underamergau, Oberamergau, Garmisch, Innsbruck, Austria, Fussen, Ludwig's castles, Stuttgart, Frieberg, Marcholsheim, Richtolsheim, Diebelsheim, Obenheim, Strassbourg, Saverne, Saarbrucken, Trier, Moselle River, Luxembourg, Cochem, Boppard, Rhine River, Bingen, Uberlingen, Weisbaden, Frankfurt, Kennedy Airport, Norfolk. We did stop the car now and then to investigate the toiletten. Was writing a paper on the influence of the Holy Roman Empire on sanitary standards in Europe and the Far East. Auf Wiedersehen.

P.S. Forget the Zugspitz.
P.P.S. And Kempton.

Greetings from the Gentle City. This has to be the loveliest of springtimes in Williamsburg. Although the azaleas suffered some damage, the other flowers and trees must have received all their required nourishment during the winter sleep.

Nancy Wescott Larsen and her husband spent a month in the Maritime Provinces. They were there in August, and Joe and I were there in June. It is truly a place of beauty. The Larsens visited Marian Smith Turner and husband, Dave, in Naples, Fla. The Turners are enjoying their retirement there.

Jane Enberg Kindel's daughter Bonnie is now married and lives just outside San Francisco. Jane has two other children with homes outside Boston and Denver. Makes for beautiful visiting from coast to coast.

Nancy Guptill Searle's daughter Ann graduates from the College in May. On their way to the festivities, Nancy and Bob will travel to Hawaii and then spend a week on the slopes at Keystone, Col.

Joe and I took granddaughter Meghan to Festival Williamsburg at Berkeley Plantation. We spent a wonderfully contented afternoon under a willow, listening to the New York Trumpet Ensemble. During our picnic lunch, Steve Allen played piano as only he can, and then Mitch Miller conducted the National Orchestra of New York in an all-Gershwin concert, with Barbara Nissman at the piano and Gail Nelson singing. We left after "Rhapsody in Blue," the notes still drifting out over the James River.

Have a safe and happy summer.

Dear Classmates,

I feel that I just wrote my last letter. My, how time does fly!

I do not have much news to report this time, but I do have some news of interest.

The New York Times, March 8, 1985, carried an article on classmate Lewis Gluckman. It was lengthy and intriguing. He "plays in the big league" it seems. A former chairman of Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb before that company's takeover by Shearson American Express, Inc., he became vice president of Fireman's Fund Insurance Company. After less than five months with that company, he reportedly planned to resign to start a new firm of his own, a corporate finance consulting company. He would remain as an adviser to the Fireman's Fund. What has actually transpired since that time, I cannot say. It would be interesting to know more of this exciting saga in the world of high finance.

From Nancy Hochstrasser Lichliter comes word that she is the librarian at R. E. Aylor Middle School in Stephens City, Va. Her daughter, son-in-law and 10-year-old grandson live in Georgia. Her son, William, wife and five-year-old grandson, Daniel, live in Winchester, Va. Husband, Bill, has his own machine sales company.

Bob Ailsworth sends word that he has had his own family practice in Keysville, Va., since 1951.

Betty Willcox D'Agostino went to San Francisco in December. She visited her grandchildren in Mill Valley, Calif.; nine-month-old Martha and three-year-old Matthew. She also toured the Monterey Peninsula, including the Pebble Beach Golf Course and climbed Mt. Diablo.

Dinny Lee McAlinden sent a newsy letter. She became a grandmother for the first time in March. Shannon Ann Delaney was born to daughter Mary Ann and son-in-law Brian. Congratulations to all. Needless to say, Dinny is extra busy with her camera these days.

Willie Anne Boschen Wright had some of her pinhole work in a show in New York. She has also been doing some painting lately.

Dinny said that Edie Marsh Traylor plans to attend our 40th. She is also trying to persuade Sunny Manual Murray Connors to join us. Sure hope she succeeds.

I had a marvelous March in Florida. It rained only one day. The middle of May will

For the second straight year, the William and Mary Magazine has been awarded a Gold Medal for outstanding quality from the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education. BARRY FRATKIN '64 RESIGNS POST

Barry Fratkin '64, director of development for athletics at the College, has accepted a position in executive sales for the state of Virginia in bank marketing with PCA International. Fratkin's resignation is effective June 30, 1985. Fratkin has worked at his alma mater for the last 24 years, first as sports information director and the last 12 years as the College's athletic fund raiser. During that time the Athletic Educational Foundation's fund total has increased more than 10 times from $67,000 in 1972 to an expected $700,000 this year.

V. Phillips Weaver wrote to tell us two of his children graduated from the College: Tamea Phillips B.S. '77 and Scott Cameron B.S. '79.

Mary Null Cloutz sends us news from San Antonio where she and her husband have been living almost 20 years. Three children, two grandchildren, and her father and step-mother are all within a 50-mile radius, which makes for happy family gatherings. Mary remains active in the theatre, stage, industrial films, and radio and TV commercials.

We heard from Robert L. Freeman last year, and now he's gone another rung up the Coopers and Lybrand corporate ladder. Formerly managing partner, he was named executive partner by the organization in February. This will give him more time to devote to the areas of mergers and acquisitions and tax planning for clients and more free time for civic activities. These latter have not been insignificant — to name a few: director and chairman of the advisory board of the Central Fidelity Bank; director, Advex Corporation; Board of Trustees, Virginia Baptist Homes, Inc.; commissioner, Virginia Port Authority; trustee, Certified Public Accountants PAC of Virginia; past director, College of William and Mary School of Business Administration Sponsors, Inc.; and past director and finance committee chairman, James River Country Club. Coopers and Lybrand is a leading accounting, tax and consulting firm in the U.S. and around the world.

A notice of change of address was received from Jane Dill Gleason. Since last November she has been back in Williamsburg, living at 130A Chandler Court and gives her employer as the City of Hampton where she is a social work supervisor. Hope to see you at our 35th reunion, Jane.

Ralph Hart of Portsmouth sent us a copy of his Christmas letter as the most expeditious method of catching up. Since 1983 he has had eye surgery, an automobile crash, which resulted in a broken hand, a super European trip in the summer of '84, culminating at Oberammergau and the Passion Play, Innsbruck and Vienna, where he danced a Viennese waltz in Kur Salon with a "fabulous Catholic nun!" Add to that more eye surgery last fall, which at his writing was presenting complications. Hopefully, it has all healed now and you're looking forward to another trip, as you hoped.

Early in January the Times-Dispatch published a lengthy sports section article on Old Dominion University's Paul Webb who was then one game away from his 500th collegiate victory as varsity basketball coach. Paul's career has encompassed four years at Highland Springs High School, followed by 19 at Randolph-Macon before moving to Norfolk and O.D.U. The Webbs have three sons and one daughter. Eddie has been with his father as player and assistant coach. Hate to leave it as a cliffhanger, but I just bet that 500th victory came right on schedule.

Poetic license or correspondent's privilege — call it what you wish — just have to announce the arrival of our first grandchild, Kathryn Loftus Nielsen (Katie) during March in Hyannis Hospital. Mother, Susan, father, Peter, baby all doing fine — and grandma beaming.

Y'all write!

55 Larry O. Phillips 100 Oxford Road Williamsburg, VA 23185

Barbara Regan Sumner is a graduate student at Holy Name College in Oakland, Calif. She missed the exams and term papers. Marge Willard Duer reports she traveled the Amazon River in the spring looking at flora and fauna. Hope you found some. Alison Sandlass Carr is going for the grandmother record in our class. She now has 20 grandchildren!

Phyllis Hall Raymond is associate dean of admissions at Swarthmore College. Herbert Goldberg is associate professor of pediatrics at the University of Kansas School of Medicine in Wichita. Don Glover has Bill '82 and Chris '85 at William and Mary. Bill is now in law school. Alice Knight Glover teaches at the local community college.

Vivian Krick Hill is deputy mayor of Chatham Township and an aide to State Senator Leawna Brown in New Jersey. Fred Malvin is tax manager of Hall, Cottman, Garrison, Roseberry, Certified Public Accountants in Newport News.

Martha Jordan Stringer is still in Atlanta. Allison '85 will graduate in May. Mark is at Juilliard, and Stephen is in high school.

Your reporter has a son who is an architect in Atlanta and a daughter who will graduate from Sweet Briar with honors in May. They take after their mother, Lavinia Pretz Phillips '57.

Now is the time to make your plans to come home for your 30th in November. See you there.

59 Mrs. Peter K. Bommer (Sollace Molineux) 995 High Mountain Road Franklin Lakes, NJ 07417

Barbara Ann Brant Knight is still at George Mason University in the position of associate professor of political science. Her second book, Prisoner Rights, will be published by Nelson Hall this spring. Ed Knight continues to ply his trade as senior economist with the Congressional Research Service in the Library of Congress.

Bill Davidson, now Dr. William Davidson, is superintendent of the Pottsville Area School District in Pennsylvania. He is teaching part time at Penn State and auditing the Pennsylvania schools for the State Department of Education. Although he sat on the Penn side during the football game with William and Mary, he assures all that he was loud in his loyalty to his alma mater!

Quoting from the Virginia Gazette, "Llew N. Smith, Jr., senior vice president and loan administrator, has been named retail division manager of United Virginia Bank — Williamsburg." Now we all know where to go when we need a loan while retracing steps in Billsburg!

Margaret Divens Hauben has not been idle. After completing two master's degrees, she is currently enrolled in a doctoral program while continuing her career as coordinator of curriculum for 50,000 students in California. Her husband is a program manager for a large aerospace project with Lockheed. In their spare time they do volunteer work and travel.

All of you who wish our column continued, do write. If it hadn't been for the energetic Alumni Office, we would have no news this issue!

PROFESSORS RETIRE

Five longtime professors retired at the end of this academic year from the College faculties. They are William B. Spong, Jr., dean of the law school and Dudley Warner Woodbridge Professor of Law since 1976; Raymond W. Southworth, professor of mathematics since 1966 and the first director of the Computer Center; William J. Maddocks, professor of business administration and a member of the business faculty since 1970; F. Donald Truesdell, professor of music and a member of the faculty since 1960; and Willard A. Van Engle, professor of marine science who completed nearly 40 years of service to Virginia. The Board of Visitors presented each professor with certificates of appreciation and a William and Mary chair.

61 Diana Titolo Alexander 6410 Forest Mill Lane Laurel, MD 20707

Stacy McMarlin is winding down his stay at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C., where he is an associate clinical professor at the Uniformed Services University of Health Sciences in Bethesda, Md. He and his wife, Susan, expect to move to Germany this summer for a final assignment before he retires from the Army.

Nancy Espey Bedford writes that she is an associate with Powell, Goldstein, Frazer and Murphy, an Atlanta law firm.

In California, Dr. Vida Kenk is still teaching biology at San Jose State University. Her husband, Bill Minkel, also teaches biology, and they both sing in the church choir as well as teaching Sunday school. The best part of their life is spent enjoying their children, Christopher, 7, and Lauren, 3.

I spent a lovely afternoon with Dottie and Ron Monark recently in Cincinnati while I was attending a convention. We had fun catching up on old (?) classmates and wondering about the whereabouts of others. Any ears burning? Their son, Ron, is a freshman at Bowling Green State University in Ohio.

It's not too early to start thinking about our 25th reunion!!

63 Judith Murdock Snook (Mrs. Donald Snook) 1029 Sanderling Circle Audubon, PA 19403

Neal Fridenstine is building a small townhouse development of 27 units in a resort/retirement community. For pleasure he flies a Piper Cherokee Lance, sails, travels by powerboat on the Rappahannock River and Chesapeake Bay, and skis in Utah. His and Judy's children are cadets at Randolph Macon Academy in Front Royal.

Career Exploration Day at the College in February found Gene Galusha moderating a section on the performing arts and Wade Johnson leading a section on health sciences. Gene is an actor/announcer/narrator in New York City, Wade a psychiatrist with Colonial Psychiatric Associates in Newport News.

Susanna Black Gould and her family have moved back to Flemington, N.J., the home of her husband's heavy construction company.

Sharon Chapman Torkelson is an evangelism coordinator for the Texas-Louisiana Synod of the Lutheran Church. She keeps the books for her husband's computer company, serves on the PTA board, and is a Girl Scout Gold Award Review Group Leader. She enjoys traveling with John when time allows, most recently to Australia in November. Both of their sons are at Texas A&M. Their daughter plays oboe for the Greater Dallas Youth Orchestra.

Don '61 and I joined Owen Knopping '61 and his wife, Margaret, at St. Mary Hospital's 125th Anniversary Ball in April. The Knoppings are pleased that their son Jamie will be attending the University of Pennsylvania next year. While our daughter Pam is presently a freshman at Penn this year, our second daughter, Sharon, has decided to go to Boston College in September. It is nice to have eight-year-old Jimmy at home to keep us busy.

QUEEN'S GUARD HOLDS DINNER

The Queen's Guard, a ceremonial unit sponsored by the Society of the Alumni, held its annual dinner and officer induction at the Alumni House on April 18th. Special guest speaker was Col. Robert Goodhart '65, the outgoing chairman of the Department of Military Science. On the right, Guard Commander Robert Zaza '85 presents new Commander William Matlack '87 with the insignia of the command.

ALUMNA NAMED SPECIAL ASSISTANT

Linda Lugenia Arey '66 has been named special assistant to President Reagan and deputy director of the Office of Public Liaison. Ms. Arey is currently Executive Secretary to the Department of Transportation and has served in both the Department of Justice and the Department of Education in Washington. She received her M.A. degree from Wake Forest University in 1975 and her J.D. degree from the University of Richmond School of Law in 1977.

Homecoming fast approaches for our class. I hope to see you at the College in October. If you cannot come, please write to me so I can share news of your activities.

Jim Korman is a partner in the Arlington, Va., law firm of Bean, Kinney, Korman and Hylton. He is also serving as a member of the Virginia State Bar Council. He is married to Babs Lewis Korman, '66.

Janet Thurman Murphy is presently working on a master's degree in American studies at Trinity College, Hartford, Conn. Her husband, Bob, is a partner in Charles G. Andrew and Company, a consulting firm for management and education. The twins, Maureen and Kelly, age 13, are in Form 2 at the Kingswood Oxford School in West Hartford.

Spring is here, and summer will follow in no time. This is our last news until the fall. If you haven't written in a while (or ever!) why not send a postcard from your summer vacation for me to share in my August deadline?

I. Mitchell Wilborn wrote that he lives in Chesterfield County with his wife, Kathy, and two children, Amy, 10, and Eric, 6. He is a division sales manager with World Book-Childcraft and is responsible for Richmond and Northern Neck. I have a Childcraft set from my childhood that I use now with my three children. The books never go out of date it seems.

Roger Blomquist is a lieutenant commander in the U.S. Navy Reserve and a nuclear engineer at Argonne National Lab. He and his wife, Barbara, just had a baby girl, Amanda Christine. Congratulations!

Nancy Verser Brumback and Jim Barton represented our class at the February Career Exploration Day at the College. Nancy spoke about publishing careers. She works for Fairchild Publications in Boston. Jim spoke on health sciences careers. He is an emergency medical physician at Williamsburg Community Hospital. Also participating at Career Day was Patrick Stoner and John Quaintance. Patrick is a critic with WHY-TV in the Philadelphia/Wilmington area and spoke on communications careers. John is a regional director for Children's World in Fairfax and spoke on education/training careers.

Savannah is the home of Suzanne Fauber Butler and Ty. Ty received his J.D. degree from Mercer University in 1974 and practices labor law as a partner with the Savannah firm of Bouhan, Williams & Levy. Suzanne is active with the Junior League and raising Meg, 7, and Ty III, 2. Phyllis Kline Appler feels she is the only W&M alumna in New Hampshire. She ordered "vanity plates" for her car, reading "W&M" and got them!

James Green wrote that he is finding his election to the Board of Ruling Elders at his church to be a mixed blessing. "The support and advice from church friends is terrific," he wrote. "On the other hand, my younger sister heard, and immediately translated 'elder' into 'elderly'." James asks that any of Dr. Fehr's or Dr. Lendrim's choirs should call him in Newark if they move to Delaware and are looking for a place to sing.

I had a chance to see a Kappa Delta newsletter from the class of 1968. In it, Malcolm Shick and his wife, Jean Michael '68, reported that they took a trip to England last year where they had spent a sabbatical year four years ago. Malcolm went to Austria, Belgium and then to England. He is a zoology department faculty member at the University of Maine at Orono.

Hal, the three children and I spent Easter up in Virginia visiting family. I had a chance to call a few friends and catch up with them. Steve Cochran has started his own law firm specializing in civil litigation in McLean. He sounds very busy building the firm, sailing in the Virgin Islands with his wife, Ruth, and enjoying their two-year-old daughter. When Steve was in Williamsburg last year he saw Wellford Marshall. Wellford is a banker and participated this past February in the Life After DOG Street Program sponsored by the Society of the Alumni.

I also spoke with Nancy Beachley Newins who is still working part time for Randolph-Macon College in Ashland in their library. Carol Knight Mullen is also working part time although her schedule sounds full time to me! Carol has a two and a four year old and works as a psychologist with children.

Coleman Sheehy was busy working at Robertshaw when I caught him on the phone. Coleman has been with them over seven years, doing DP auditing with travels to the West Coast periodically for special projects. I met Linda McIndoe Chenery's four-month-old son, Taylor, and saw their new house. Linda is enjoying being a full-time mother to her three children while decorating the house and trying to start a lawn.

De Garber Steverson, her husband, and six-year-old son will be going with Hal, myself and our six-year-old daughter to Walt Disney World the end of May. It will be fun to have four full days to gab and catch up with each other.

Have a GREAT summer and do remember to write!

Dr. Jerry Coyne writes that he and Lyndal Andrews are still "living in sin near the University of Maryland where I instruct the future Ed Meese's of the world in evolutionary biology. I am appalled at the careerism and political conservatism of my students, who think of me as a Marxist because I oppose apartheid! I have recently realized that all my scientific work is futile because the entire universe will die a fiery death in the distant future. Thus, I am resigned to wait passively for the Reaper, living quietly between large meals like a python." Lyndal works part time at the University and teaches voice at St. Mary's College. "We have a microwave oven and a child substitute in the form of a black cat." Jerry bemoans the lack of "humor, absurdity, and scurrilous lies" in recent columns, and accuses your reporter of "lapsing into recounting the boring lives of yuppies." (In all fairness, Jerry enclosed gobs of juicy gossip in his letter to "re-prime the pump.")

But who says all yuppies are boring? Just look at William and Mary economics professor Will Hausman. Will recently won the Phi Beta Kappa Faculty Award for the Advancement of Scholarship for his work in economic history. The plaque joins the computer terminal, Meerscham pipes, rock radio sticker, and other upwardly mobile accouterments of his crowded office. In honor of the award, the Flat Hat did a big spread on Will, including some tales of the good old days of campus protest: "The associate professor was then living in Taliaferro and can remember students lining the Campus Center walk with signs protesting the Vietnam war. . . . Hausman described it as 'exhilarating' to be involved in the protest action." Will was asked his secret of success as an undergrad: "He advised students to work steadily and not cram, avoid all-nighters and never study on Saturdays" (which goes to show he hasn't completely forgotten what life in Taliaferro was like). Will's specialty is the British Coal Industry, which he sees as holding some of the secrets of the world's economic foul-ups, bleeps, and blunders. When the Flat Hat asked him to spill the beans "he replied that students can find out in Economics 342."

The enigmatic Jamie Cowles is now studying sports medicine in Wisconsin. He plans to become a trainer for a professional sports team "massaging and treating mindless behemoths." To make it easier for the players to spot him on the bench, he is now wearing his hair in a Mohawk dyed day-glo purple.

Bubba Hooker has been elected vice president of the American Football Coaches Association - Junior College Division. Bubba is athletic director and head football coach at Marion Military Institute, where he has pioneered a program allowing four-year colleges to recruit his players during their freshman year. "Our students come to M.M.I. to be recruited. I would want my son to be able to receive a four-year scholarship ahead of schedule." Steve Frisbee has his kids right on schedule for the 2001 Winter Olympics. The Frisbee fry (age 3 and 5) are already shushing down the slopes at Vail like gold medalists. Steve is vice president of Vail Associates and director of resort operations at Beaver Creek. He, Kathy, and the little Jean-Claudes have been on a Rocky Mountain high for five years now.

In North Carolina, Sarah Johnson is teaching French I, II, III, and IV (c'est tout?) at Roanoke Rapids H.S. Mary Bruce McKenzie Serene is an anesthesiologist in Statesville. Bruce and her orthopedic surgeon husband are raising three children.

Carol Clayman Woody is a Project Manager at Yale University. Janet Tuthill designs and evaluates development programs in Africa and still finds time to do management training in Haiti.

Where are they now?: Carol Ware, Bob Hancock, Randy Lucas, Suzanne Streagle, Linda Zuber, Carol Billman, Lenore Uebelher (contact Dr. Coyne, please), Andrea Tulloch, Les Zimmerman, Bill Snow, Kathy Betton, Penny Cherry, Pat Gang, Gary Hayden, and Brian Festa.

Hollywood's newest star is Lyle Rosbotham who took the picture of Glenn Close seen in the opening moments of the "The Big Chill" (when all the yuppies were unpacking their suitcases).

It's time to pack ours up for another year. Please do your bit to make sure there's no drought of news between now and the next column (this fall). And have a bright, lively summer!

Here we are again. Spring is allegedly here in northwestern Connecticut, but you can't tell by the temperatures and brown grass. The kids seem to be off from school more than they are in it this past month. Ann Marie is in Chicago visiting friends; our son is on a camping trip; and Claire and I are roughing it at Pizza Hut and Dunkin Donuts.

I waited until now to write this edition of class notes hoping that more news would come, but such was not the case. So what little I have I'm passing on. Don't read too fast or you'll miss it.

In January Herbert O. Browning was installed as pastor of the Culpeper Baptist Church. Herbert received his Master of Divinity degree from Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary and is nearing completion of his Doctor of Ministry from Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, Va. John S. Norris writes from the Tidewater, Va., area that he was recently elected president of the area chapter of the Federal Bar Association.

Betty Thiele Martin and her husband, Earle, greeted a new baby boy into the world in September. Jonathan Earle. Betty is anticipating staying in the Boston, Mass., area a few more years since she just started as a pathologist at Mt. Auburn Hospital. Steve Snyder, wife, Beverly, and daughter, Libby, are awaiting the arrival of "Baby Snyder No. 2" in August. Steve is keeping busy in the meantime with his geologist's chores and home renovations.

Now for something completely different. A new cartoon in our local paper caught my eye one day. "That's Jake" shows two beer-drinking cronies at a bar with a wide-screen T.V. in the background showing a football game. The quote from one of the "Lite Beer" drinkers went like this: "That big ol screen's kinda hard to ignore when yor team's gettin whipped by William & Mary." Must have been two University of Virginia graduates. So much for the lighter side.

In case any of you non-writers read this, have a good summer and let's get on the stick and push some paper my way. Surely the 2c postage increase can't hurt that much. Hasta Manana.

Hi, all. We have a disappointing lack of news that filtered through, so if this letter seems like a lot of padding, it probably is. I can only assume you are all so busy achieving and procreating that you have no time to write. So let's hear about it in the next letter.

Dave made it home from Japan with a healthy case of jet lag tempered by real enthusiasm for the Japanese culture and industry. He did see Bruce Pflaum and reports that he and his wife, Becky, are enjoying their time in Tokyo. If anyone would like their address, we'd be happy to pass it along.

Bob Blenner has finally been heard from and is living a carefree bachelor's existence in Virginia Beach. Two and a half years ago, after seven years of teaching and coaching baseball, he made a career change and is now designing computerized information management systems for a government contractor in Norfolk. He travels quite a bit on the East Coast but spent a week in Honolulu last September. You can track Bob down at the reunion this fall. He'll be there.

Mary Kay Zavilla Sullivan wrote to fill us in on the highlights of her last 10 years. Her background in government at W&M led to a government career as a paralegal after finishing the legal assistant program at George Washington University. She works in a small legal office of the Treasury Department that handles the disciplinary procedures of attorneys, CPA's and others who represent clients before the IRS. Mary Kay has continued singing since leaving the Chorus at W&M and sang a season with the Arlington Metropolitan Chorus and a season with the Washington Oratorio. Her participation in the chorus of some community theater productions in Arlington was responsible for reacquainting her with Patrick Sullivan '74. They were married in June 1983. Pat is an engineer with the Defense Department and still manages to play his tuba in various area

DIANE HAGEMANN '75 HEADS CHAPTER PROGRAM

Diane K. Hagemann '75 (right) has been named director of chapter programs for the Society of the Alumni. Mrs. Hagemann will continue her duties as director of travel programs, and student programs (Life After DOG Street and the Alumni-Student Liaison Committee) and will continue as Alumni House contact for Career Exploration Day. Mrs. Hagemann was formerly assistant for class programs for the Society. She worked for 4 1/2 years for the Virginia Historic Landmarks Commission in Williamsburg before coming to the Society in the fall of 1981.

BETSY COBBLEDICK TO ASSIST WITH CLASS PROGRAMS

Betsy Cobbledick, now executive secretary of the Society of the Alumni, will assume additional duties as assistant for class programs. In her new capacity Mrs. Cobbledick will work with all alumni classes and with special programs including Homecoming, 50th Reunion, Olde Guard Day and Burgesses Day. Mrs. Cobbledick has been with the Society for the past six years.

groups. Mary Kay and Pat are expecting their first child this summer and hope to go to the reunion. Will the cost of the Ludwell 304B crowd be there?

Dianne Doyle Tamberrino and Steve are proud new parents of Denise Marie, born in February. Dianne has been on maternity leave from Systems and Applied Sciences Corporation where she is a computer programmer/systems analyst. Steve works as a systems programmer for Inco, Inc.

The Tamberrino's have kept up with Kevin and Carol Vogel Jones. Kevin is an attorney for the Department of Justice. Carol is staying home to raise their son, Nathan, 3.

Jean West Mueller completed 10 years of teaching at J.E.B. Stuart High School this fall. Then she left teaching to join the Education Division of the National Archives as an education specialist.

And now, for short notes. Wendy Anstaett was married to Anthony Schlegel in August 1984. Susan Kraterfield was due to have her first child this February; we need an update. Edward Thompson and his wife had their first child, Katherine Margaret, last July.

Susan Hildebrand Ruegger had her second child, Catherine Grace, in October. She's been serving on the Board of Directors of the W&M Southern Connecticut Alumni Association this past year and has enjoyed it.

The Alumni Office sent a list of our classmates who participated in the College's fifth Career Exploration Day presented by the Office of Career Planning and Placement in cooperation with the Society of the Alumni. Marnie Montgomery represented art careers. Mary Ruth Payne, unit administrator for child and adolescent care at Eastern State Hospital, was the moderator for counseling psychology careers. Van Black, employee relations representative for G.E., represented education training careers. And Sharon Pandak, senior assistant county attorney in Prince William County, spoke about law careers.

That wraps up the news, folks. There's not much time to get your plugs in for the reunion, so make haste. Dave and I fully intend to be there this year barring any unforeseen broken limbs, chicken pox, etc. We'll meet you there!

John and Mary Sue Hogan Sharp are the proud parents of a baby girl, Jessica Dawn, born in February. They recently moved into a new home in Cape Girardeau, Mo. In November Steven and Dava Hensen Unglesbee became parents of twin sons, Jonathan and Jeffrey.

Bonita Saunders expects to complete requirements for a Ph.D. in computational and applied math at Old Dominion University this May. Before going back to school full time she taught at Norfolk State for one year and Hampton University for two years. She is doing her research at NASA Langley Research Center.

Once again, several of our classmates participated in Career Exploration Day at William and Mary. On the business panels were Susan Cleghorn, manager of pricing and margin analysis for Best Products in Richmond; Susan Reddish, senior international officer for Maryland National Bank in Baltimore; and Doug Pearson, marketing representative for IBM Corporation in Arlington. Laura Townsend, an adolescent and family counselor at Bacon Street in Williamsburg, was on the counseling/psychology careers panel. Deborah Davis who served on the higher education panel, is director of student financial aid at the Peabody Institute of Johns Hopkins University in Columbia, Md. Discussing careers in publishing was Pat Daniels, senior editor of the National Wildlife Magazine in Washington, D.C. Mary Ann Hart, supervisor of services for Big Brothers/Big Sisters of the Peninsula in Hampton, was on the community agency careers panel. Anne Weekley Thompson, director of physical therapy at Wayne Memorial Hospital, discussed careers in physical therapy.

David and Susan Stewart Bowles are living in Blacksburg, while David completes a master's degree in athletic administration. In May 1984 they became the proud parents of a son, Scott. Susan temporarily retired from teaching and is providing day care to two children in addition to her son.

Ward Richardson is engaged to be married in July. He is currently a guidance counsellor and his fiancée, Karen, is a school psychologist in Powhatan, Va. Mark Tezak is living in Des Moines, Iowa, where he arranges large conferences and conventions for a major insurance company.

Cory and Karen Stephan Young recently moved into a new home in Fairfax County. Karen is working for a patent firm and attends law school full time at night. Mike and Marion Roby Lugar became the parents of a baby girl last November. She arrived three months early but is now home and according to the proud parents, "perfect in every way." Marion plans to return to work on a part-time basis in the E-Systems' industrial relations department. Mike is branch manager of the Washington commercial group of Burroughs Corporation.

In Richmond, Richard John is now with Virginia Commonwealth University; Barb Bowen John keeps busy with their daughter and son. Zack and Judith Sirota Perdue are currently living in Iowa City. Zack is finishing his residency in neurology, and Judith is chief resident in pediatrics. They had a baby girl, Katherine, last November.

Diane Hull Gansauer recently accepted a position as capital appeal coordinator for National Rehabilitation Hospital in Washington, D.C. The hospital is under construction and due to open in late 1985. Jeff Hosmer is associate pastor at First Presbyterian Church in Lancaster, Pa.

From Columbia, S.C., Ellen Burkhardt writes that she has finally completed all requirements and qualified as a registered dietician. She is working part time as a nutritionist in two nursing homes while attending the Columbia Graduate School of Bible and Missions part time.

Kathleen Durden was recently promoted to partner in Peterson & Company, a national financial consulting firm specializing in litigation support. Richard Denton was married to Mary Nettles. They are living in New Carrollton, Md., while Richard pursues his Ph.D. in plasma physics at the University of Maryland.

Living in San Juan, Puerto Rico, Martin and Rebecca del Castillo now have a daughter, Jacqueline, born in October 1983. She has left IBM to become a full-time mother. After graduating from the M.B.A. program at the University of Baltimore, Charles Andreatto accepted a position as research director and associate editor of the Penny Stock News, an investment advisory publication. Last June he passed the Level I exam on his way toward the chartered financial analyst designation.

Calvin Koons was recently appointed a deputy attorney general for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Maggie Kneip is living in New York City where she is working in the theatre as an actress/singer/dancer. Let us know which shows, Maggie, so that those of us who get to N.Y.C. can take them in.

Maureen Lawlor Yelovich just completed her residency in family medicine and is in private practice in Paoli, Pa. She recently gave birth to a son, Matthew, her first child. Karen Murphy Haas has gone into partnership with her husband, Bill, in his auditing, accounting and financial services business in Vienna, Va.

Keep me posted on your whereabouts, careers and family expansions. Your classmates are interested.

Hope everyone is enjoying the gorgeous spring weather! North Carolina has a beautiful climate in the spring — ALMOST as nice as the 'Burg. Anyway, on with (to?) the news!

Received a Christmas card from Sharon King Lyon. She and husband, Bob, are currently petroleum geologists for Amoco and are living in a suburb of New Orleans. Sharon writes that Cherry Williams is now a lawyer in Corpus Christi, Texas, and that Margaret and Bruce Ford are also employed in the oil field, Margaret working for Mobil and Bob for Shell. The Fords welcomed Benjamin Eliot Ford into their life in the weeks preceding Christmas.

September brought with it a "rash" of births to '79ers. Thomas John Dembinski and wife, Anne Whitmire, welcomed their second child, Helen Anne, while Patricia Kuntz Klag and husband, Al, became the proud parents of Daniel Joseph on September 1.

Last June James Ryan completed his master's in business at the University of Denver, with an emphasis in real estate and construction management. James is currently playing pro football with the Denver Broncos and enjoying newlywed life with wife, Sara Lynne Fritz, of St. Paul, Minn. The Ryans tied the knot in June 1984.

Congratulations are also in order for Elizabeth Galloway Finke, who married husband, Chip, last November. The Finkes have moved to Cincinnati where Elizabeth will be practicing corporate law at the firm of Taft, Stettinius and Hollister. Diane S. Monroe reports that she and her husband are living happily in Virginia Beach where Diane is still showing horses. Diane notes that she "was fortunate enough to compete successfully with my hunter at Madison Square Garden in 1983 and again in 1984."

Janette Hansen reports an exciting and busy post-W&M life. After graduation she worked with VISTA in South Dakota and was then employed in Virginia. Janette moved on to Ohio where she completed her master's degree in geology at the University of Cincinnati. She is now employed with Dames and Moore, an international consulting firm in the earth sciences.

Chris Hux is currently performing in productions and studying vocal techniques with the TriCities Opera Company while earning an M.M.A. in music from SUNY.

Ray Lupold is making his mark in the world of law. According to an article gleaned from the Jan. 25, 1985, edition of the Petersburg Progress-Index, Ray has recently joined Petersburg's commonwealth attorney's office. Since receiving his law degree from T. C. Williams Law School at the University of Richmond, Ray has worked as a clerk/assistant in the U.S. Justice Department's Drug Enforcement Administration, clerked for the Richmond law firm of Boone and Warren, and worked in the Virginia General Assembly as lobbyist for a historic preservation group from Williamsburg. It is great to receive all of these newspaper clippings "starring" the class of 1979!

A long letter packed with news arrived in the mail from Debby Smith Johnson. Debby, husband, Bruce, and dog, Bozo, are presently in Atlanta/Marietta, where Debby works in human resources for Mead Packaging. Bruce is employed by Northside Realty. The Johnsons claim that it would "almost take an act of Congress to get us to move," even with their daily commute to downtown. Debby wrote such a wonderful letter that I will quote directly from it!

Debby writes that "Lisa Cross Buck, et al, are living in Maplewood, N.J. Eric makes the commute from there to N.Y.C. . . . their two sons, Scotty and David, are now almost 3 1/2 years and 19 months, so you know what Lisa is busy doing. Anne Watkins Ray, her husband, Ken, and their new addition, Kevin, live in Courtland, Va. Ken works for Union Camp in nearby Franklin. Anne is still teaching, but she did take some time off in October for the arrival of Kevin.

"Sherry Jennings is living in Arlington, Va., with Amy Moll. Until January 3 of this year she worked for Congressman Elliott Levitas. Unfortunately he was not reelected, but Sherry immediately got an offer from a D.C. law firm, Brand, Lowell & Dole, where she is their government affairs coordinator. Pattie Bagley still lives and works in the D.C. area. I guess that her big occupation these days is organizing a September wedding. . . . After the wedding, Pattie will be joining Bill out in Missouri, where he is taking over his father's farm.

"Sue Cofer finished up her master's program at Georgia Tech (studying robotics) at the end of last year. She then packed up and moved back to Virginia, more particularly Charlottesville, where she is working for General Electric. Marjie Beck Duffy and Tom ('78) are now living in Sacramento, Calif. . . . Marjie is still pursuing a career in stained glass."

Additional news from Debby includes Jeff Harris move to an Atlanta law firm and Birdie Johnson's employment with a law firm in Boston. Capt. Jeff Rupp and Robin are in West Germany, while Alison Kelly is pursuing graduate studies at Oxford University in England. Many thanks to Debby Smith Johnson for her "mini-book!"

That is all the news for now. Everyone keep writing and have a wonderful summer!

Welcome springtime! Isn't it nice to have warm weather and see the sun again? Even in California we welcome the coming of spring — 'cause it brings beach weather with it! You still can't beat springtime in the 'Burg though. . . .

Congratulations to our classmates who have recently or are about to "tie the knot." Glen Smith was married to Marilee Massey in Arlington, Va., last August. Their wedding was well attended by W&M alumni: Jerrie Varrone '79, Leah Cohen '80, Jack Dunn '80, Debbie Hodge Dunn '80, Evan English '80, Pat McGibbon '80, Mark Mercready '80, Clay Perfall '80, Bill Pommerening '80, Ann Rickerich '80, Hal White '80, David Back and Doug Cook. Glen and Marilee honeymooned at Niagara Falls and are now living in Arlington.

Teena Hucul was married last May to D. K. Waybright, a Richmond real estate broker. Teena is currently in her second year of pharmacy school at M.C.V. She's also working part time at the M.C.V. pharmacy and really enjoys it.

Suzanne Sale married Joseph H. Stepp III, in Bowling Green, Va., last October, and Becky Noreiko married Douglas Heden this past February. Becky and Doug spent their honeymoon skiing in Maine and are now living in Wilmington, Del., where Doug, a UVA

FERGUSON GIFT

In the supplemental Investors Report in the May issue of the Alumni Gazette, Ferguson Enterprises, Inc., was inadvertently left off the list of members of the President's Council. The Office of University Advancement regrets this omission.

Nancy Westervelt and Brian Mulvey are getting married in May. Nancy is working as a convertible securities specialist for E. F. Hutton & Company in New York. Additional congratulations are due to our classmates who are completing graduate degree programs this spring.

Stacy Steimel will receive her master's in Latin American economics from the University of Texas, Austin, this month. Stacy seems to have kept herself busy not only with her studies at U of T but also as president of the Institute of Latin American Studies Student Association and as the leading scorer on the Jalapenos soccer team! After graduation, Stacy is planning to return to Washington where she had spent 2½ years before going to U of T working as a research assistant for Senator Floyd Bentsen and as a legislative aide for Congressman Ronald D. Coleman.

Conrad Schwab will soon graduate with honors from Baylor College of Medicine. He has been elected to membership in Alpha Omega Alpha, the national honor society of the medical profession. Students chosen for membership in AOA are in the top 25 percent of their class and are judged on their academic and student activity achievements as well as on their display of leadership, responsibility and good citizenship. At Baylor Conrad has also received high honors in basic sciences and the Burden Award in Microbiology.

Kate Morgans will graduate, also with honors, from the Amos Tuck School of Business Administration, Dartmouth College, this spring. She was chosen by the school's faculty to receive the prestigious Charles I. Lebovitz Memorial Award, a cash award made to the second-year student at Tuck who, in the judgment of the faculty, made an outstanding contribution to the daily life of Tuck and whose personal conduct has inspired respect and confidence.

Lee Richter is finishing his studies in surface physics at Cornell University. He's passed his admissions to candidacy exam and is completing his research to write his thesis. Last summer Lee married Cheryl Allen, an engineering student at Cornell. Mary Lu Martin is finishing her fourth year of medical school at UVA and is looking forward to serving her residency in internal medicine.

Roma Huk is in her sixth semester as a graduate English student at Notre Dame and is still teaching composition and literature to the Notre Dame freshmen. She has completed her master's degree requirements, passed the Ph.D. qualifying exam and begun writing her dissertation on a poet now alive and living in England. She will be spending this summer in England on a scholarship grant working with several poets and critics in London. Roma also recently finished 21st in her first full marathon!

Mary Beth Boyle Hansen and her husband, Randall, are still in Boston. Randall will receive his M.B.A. from Harvard in June, and Mary Beth has three more semesters to go to get her law degree from Boston University.

Bart Seitz is working on his law degree at George Washington University. He's also working as a legislative aide to Congresswoman Bobbi Feidler of Los Angeles County.

Riley Bates and Susan Martin Kolhoff have both taken off across the seas to work and wander. Riley is "alive and well in Thailand. At times even prospering," he says. Susan and her husband, Paul, are living in Vienna, Austria. Susan is teaching German, grades K-5, at the American International School in Vienna, and Paul is writing his first novel.

Several of our classmates are pursuing careers, quite successfully I might add, in the

UPJOHN PROMOTES SELVI VESCOVI '51

The Upjohn Company has named Selvi Vescovi '51 corporate vice president and general manager for international and president, Upjohn International, Inc. Vescovi has been corporate vice president for international pharmaceutical subsidiaries. The company is a worldwide, research-based producer and marketer of human health care products and services, agricultural products and chemicals.

STATE FARM AWARD GOES TO JILL PRYOR '85

Jill Anne Pryor '85 has been awarded an Exceptional Student Fellowship from the State Farm Companies Foundation. She is one of only 20 students in the nation to win the award. She will use her $2,000 fellowship at the Yale Law School next fall. The school will also get a $500 award from State Farm, and William and Mary will receive $250 from the Foundation. Miss Pryor, a government major, has a grade point average of 3.90. She is president of the Debate Council this year and has been in charge of the Marshall-Wythe Debate Forum for two years.

graduate with bachelor's and master's degrees in engineering, is working for DuPont. Becky had to leave her accounting job in Washington to make the move, but is looking for a job in the Wilmington area.

U.S. armed forces. Patricia Duffy Dillion is in the Military Intelligence Branch of the Army and is currently enjoying a joint assignment with her husband, also an Army officer, at Ft. Campbell, Ky. Suzanne Sale Stepp, besides having been married last October, was decorated with the Army Achievement Medal, also at Ft. Campbell, Ky. The Achievement Medal is awarded for accomplishment, meritorious service or acts of courage. Suzanne is an operations officer with the 101st Airborne Division.

Beth Pepper graduated from the U.S. Coast Guard Officer Candidate School in Yorktown, Va., last September. She's stationed at HQ (Washington, D.C.) and is working in the Personnel Division with post-graduate school and flight school selections.

The beginning of this year, Marine 2nd Lt. Thomas Dykers completed the initial step of the Naval Integrated Flight Training System, a 14-week basic course, with his first solo flight. Thomas' follow-on training with jets, helicopters or multi-engine aircraft will lead to designation as a naval aviator.

Navy Lt.-j. g. Peter M. Richards recently completed the Lawyers' Military Justice Course, an eight-week course at the Naval Justice School, Newport, R.I. Pete studied the application of prior law school training and legal knowledge to the military community. His instruction was designed to provide a thorough working knowledge of the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

And of course we also have our share of classmates who are making their mark in the business, education and political arenas.

Janice Pickrell, married last May to Navy LCDR James Anderson, is branch manager and branch officer of the Bank of the Commonwealth in Virginia Beach. Also in banking, Cindy Linderer was recently elected assistant vice president at Wachovia Financial Corporations office in Tampa, Fla. Cindy is an international banking representative for Wachovia.

Jeff and Claudia Lamm Wood are living in Oak Park, Ill. Claudia is an editor with the Institute of Financial Education, and Jeff is working for the law firm of Crowley, Barrett & Karaba, specializing in banking, tax and corporate law.

Mike Garrett and John Fessenden are also enjoying their new careers in law. Mike is working for a Lynchburg, Va., law firm and recently won his first two trial cases! John and his wife, Kali, are living in San Antonio, Texas, where John is working for a large law firm, and Kali is working in biomedical research for the Air Force.

Evy Lowenstern is happily working as a personnel representative at E. Sytems Melpar, Kira Rathjen is in charge of the new mail order division of Beauty Control Cosmetics, and Pam Pritchard Pudgett is "very happy with her job with Mead Pharmaceuticals in Orlando and with her new husband."

Back in the Northern Virginia area, Jamie Baylis is an associate editor with The Washington Weekly, Meg Brosnahan is an employee assistance counselor, Department of the Treasury, U.S. Secret Service, and Cathy Jones Gunderson is a nutritionist with the Department of Agriculture at the Beltsville Human Nutrition Research Center.

Kathryne Anderson Marple, Beth Forbes, Karla Kraynak Bruno and Nancy Scott have stayed in the Old Dominion to pursue their careers. Kathryne is working with her husband, Stephen, at the Centrifuge Research Laboratory at UVA. She does the bookkeeping and accounting for the lab, and Stephen is a computer programmer/analyst. Nancy Scott has returned to William & Mary as the head women's athletic trainer. Beth is in Chesapeake working as a probation officer for the First District Court Service Unit, and Karla is teaching ninth grade at Norfolk Collegiate School.

Ann Gordon Lebew has relocated to Statesville, N.C., where she lives with her husband on a 49-acre estate and works as the only computer programmer for Statesville's City Hall Town Works Department. And Mary Goffwald Williams still "finds Kansas City, Mo., to be a fascinating place to live and work." She is a teacher and keeps her "spare" time filled with backpacking, cross-country skiing, mountain climbing and "working out."

And back here on the West Coast, life is busy (actually busier) than ever. Bob's still helping the Campbell Soup Company's profitability as account manager in charge of one of Southern California's largest grocery store chains, and I'm promoting the sale of industrial process controls as promotions manager for Fluid Components, Inc. We're both also going to school at night — Bob is working on an M.B.A. degree at the University of Southern California, and I have been taking commercial/advertising art/design classes. And, since we moved into our very own house in San Clemente in mid-April, we are spending a lot of our spare time being happy homeowners — working in the yard, decorating the house and enjoying our new home and view of the Pacific Ocean. We certainly have no complaints about our life in Southern Calif!

Thanks to everyone who contributed to this writing of the class notes. I hope everyone else is doing well and will let me know what they're up to. Now that Bob and I are in our own house, my address should remain the same for the next few years!

83 Carolyn J. Finocchio
2020 Walnut Street
Philadelphia, PA 19103

Despite last-minute tax return preparations, many of you met the April 15 deadline and mailed me the latest Class of '83 news. Thanks for your contributions!

Do I feel old! Not only did I have to start an IRA but also host a "Freshman Reception" at the Wanamaker House with the Philadelphia Alumni Chapter. Unlike Robin Manix, who was asked several times whether or not she still attended school, I addressed questions like, "Did they have ___ or ___ when you were at W&M?" Things haven't changed that much in two years. Or have they?

One definite transition: many of our female classmates' last names have changed, including Kristine Reckmeyer, who married James Adams of McLean, Va., last September. Jim is a real estate entrepreneur; Kristine is starting her own craft business. Candace Celeste Carlisle married Steven David Tompkins in October. Candace and David are electronic engineers in different departments at Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md. Debra Leigh Bucklen, pursuing a master's in library science at the University of Kentucky, married Joseph Shoop last December in the Wren Chapel. Newlyweds Rob and Kim Clarke Guillen, married in October in Kim's hometown of Carney's Point, N.J., mentioned several other weddings in their letter: Connie Tracy to Nick Andre, who now live in Poquoson, Va., married last Thanksgiving; Cherie Dow this March; and Laurie Delsereone to Scott Phillips. Laurie and Scott live in Drexel Hill, Pa., where Laurie serves as the office manager for a legal publishing firm, and Scott works as an advertising assistant at Philadelphia magazine.

Speaking of Philadelphia (just to break up this wedding tidal wave), here's the latest from Philly. Rani Anne, recovering from foot surgery, hosted Robbie Brynant and Joe Claytor during their recent Philly trek. Philadelphia also welcomed Mary Evans to the area. Busch Gardens recently promoted her to field sales manager, which necessitated a move from Richmond to King of Prussia.

The break's over; back to weddings. Beth Turner plans to marry Washington and Lee graduate Scott Lindsay on June 1. Also planning a June wedding is Beth Carter. September '85 appears to be another popular month for several classmates, including Teresa McCoy to Mike Madsen. Teresa is the administrative manager at Parking Systems of America. Karen Anderson and Robert Parchision are also planning to marry in September. Shana Aborn wrote to me about Susan Hatton's engagement to Roger Balance. Susan presently works as an assistant manager in a Rochester, N.Y., bookstore; Roger is with the Air Force in San Antonio, Texas. By the way, Shana works in D.C. in the editorial department of American Film magazine. She is also active in community theatre.

Congratulations go to several other classmates for reasons other than matrimony — namely, graduation. Paul Markowski graduates this spring from Duke's M.B.A. program. Following graduation, Paul begins working as a financial analyst for General Foods in Rye Brook, N.Y. Edward Bond recently received his M.Div. from the Divinity School at the University of Chicago. John Kilgore has recently completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center in San Diego. Jeff Connor is working concurrently on a master's in telecommunications and a law degree at Syracuse University. He expects to graduate in 1986. His career plans include becoming a legal counsel for either a cable TV operator or one of the three major networks. Pamela George is seeking a master's in forensic science at V.C.U.

Onto the working world. Cathy Evans works for Public Storage in McLean, Va., and rooms with Andrea Spessard, who works for Tysons Corner Shopping Center with Sue Newman. Cathy mentioned seeing Lisa Schwarz, Melanie McVikar, Anne Golwen, Ned Monroe, Mark Forde, Jeff Carr, Cesar Conde, and Becky Rogers at one of the inaugural balls. Kirsten Leafstrand moved to D.C. from Chicago and now works for the Ritz-Carlton. She lives in an Alexandria townhouse close to classmates Molly Coxson and David Poulsen. Rebecca Hanmer also lives in D.C. and works for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. Presently, Rebecca serves as director of the Office of Water Environment and Permits. Suzanne Brown is a software engineer for Intellinac in Rockville, Md.

Far, far away, in Puerto Cortes, Honduras, John Rebstock is still teaching English in an Episcopal mission school. Despite the American news reports, John reports a very calm and beautiful environment.

Cynthia Gunnoe Dalton now works in Lincoln, Neb., for the Nebraska Grain and Food Dealers Association. Dan Nass is an account executive at the Palo Alto office of Merrill Lynch. Dan lives in San Jose and really enjoys it. (So would I!) Leslie Staiko lives in Richmond and works for the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities. And finally, in Williamsburg, Kitty Brandon works for a television production company on DOG Street.

So that's the latest. Please continue to send me your news. But before I end, I must advertise Philly one last time. The Alumni Chapter is hosting a "Welcome, Dr. and Mrs. Graves to the Philly area" reception at Winterthur on June 16. All of you within driving distance to Wilmington, please be on the lookout for the chapter's newsletter/invitation. If you have any questions, feel free to contact me.

PERRY ELLIS '61 INTRODUCES NEW FRAGRANCES

Perry Ellis '61 drew a large turnout at Saks Fifth Avenue in New York for the introduction of his new fragrance line for men and women. Already well established as one of America's foremost fashion designers, Ellis also has a successful line of bedding. Inundated by well wishers, Ellis signed autographs and passed out samples of the fragrances that bear his name, and which, he says, reflect "the American Spirit."

FREEDOMS FOUNDATION HONORS BOB HECKEL '49

The Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge has selected Robert J. Heckel '49 as the winner of the Leavey Award for Excellence in Private Enterprise Education. Heckel, director of the Stetson University Small Business Development Center in DeLand, Fla., is being recognized nationally by the Freedoms Foundation for having created a unique business fraternity at Stetson called the Order of the Small Business Institute (OSBI). OSBI has the novel purpose of bringing together on a long-term fraternal basis small business entrepreneurs and their Stetson student counselors who provided management and technical assistance over an entire semester. This is the third time Heckel has been honored by the Freedoms Foundation. He was awarded the George Washington Honor Medal in 1969 for his essay, "A Free Ballot — a Free Country." In 1972 he received the highest award possible to a military reservist, the Encased George Washington Honor Medal and $1,000, for his essay, "What Is An American." The Leavey Award provides a prize of $7,500 and a commemorative plaque. Both were awarded to Heckel at a ceremonial dinner in Los Angeles, Calif., on May 24, 1985.

In June 1984 George Jacobson M.A. '65 was promoted to associate professor of psychiatry, Medical College of Wisconsin. In September he signed a contract with CRC Press, Inc., for his third book, Adolescent Alcoholism and Drug Abuse. In October he was named the Outstanding Researcher of the Year by the Wisconsin Alcoholism and Other Drug Abuse Research Advisory Committee, for outstanding research contributions in the field of alcoholism and drug abuse. In November George became director of medical education at the DePaul Rehabilitation Hospital in Milwaukee.

James G. Snead, Jr., has been named vice president of Dominion Bank. He will become manager of Dominion's Virginia department effective June 1. He is a 1972 graduate of Randolph Macon College and received his master's degree from William and Mary in 1977.

Lt. Col. Robert E. Jones of Spokane, Wash., has been decorated with the fifth award of the Army Commendation Medal at Fort Shafter, Hawaii. He is an executive officer with the U.S. Army Western Command. In 1973 he received his master's degree from the College.

Dr. M. Kent Cueman M.S. '73 and Ph.D. '76 has joined the General Electric Research and Development Center as a physicist. A native of Fredericksburg, Dr. Cueman received his B.S. degree in physics from Randolph-Macon College in 1969. He served as an assistant professor at William and Mary from 1976 to 1979.

Capt. Ronald N. Johnson was involved in a NATO-sponsored exercise by participating in the Army's return of forces to Germany in 1985. He is a brigade chaplain with the 4th Infantry Division at Fort Carson, Colo. He received his master's degree in 1970 from the College.

Elizabeth Davies Morie, assistant superintendent for instruction for Albemarle County schools, will become superintendent of Lexington, Va., schools on July 1. She received her bachelor's degree from Mary Washington College, a master's degree in guidance and counseling from the College of William and Mary, and a doctorate in educational administration and supervision from the University of Virginia. She has had many years of experience as a teacher and a school administrator.

Greg Vogel M.A. '80, Washington, D.C., science writer, is being hired by the high-tech advertising and marketing agency of Robert LaPointe Advertising and Public Relations, San Francisco, as a public relations account executive. His background in science, journalism, and consulting, will help him assist high-tech companies that communicate with media, business, and the research community.

Leigh Jones M.A. '70, chairman of the bluebird committee for the Williamsburg Bird Club, is taking steps to fulfill her dream of increasing the number of bluebirds. A high school teacher, she says working with birds gives her a practical approach to teach conservation to her students. She has helped in placing 100 bluebird boxes in choice locations in and around Williamsburg and last year found 150 bluebirds in 60 boxes that were monitored. Leigh is a member of the North American Bluebird Association and the Virginia Society of Ornithologists.

OBITUARIES

GRACE SWIFT, '23 A.B., died January 9, 1985, in Emporia, Virginia. In addition to her William and Mary degree in Mathematics and History, she earned both an A.B. and an M.A. in Library Science from the University of Michigan. For six years she served as Reviewer and Editor of Cataloging for the Library of Congress before entering the United States Naval Reserve Midshipman's School, Northampton, Massachusetts. Upon completion of her work there, she was commissioned an Ensign in 1943. That same year, she attended Basic Naval Intelligence Training School in Frederick, Maryland. Her military service included two tours of active duty during which she was assigned as an Intelligence Analyst, Foreign Merchant Marine Section; as editor in the Office of Naval Research; and as screener of intelligence reports, dispatches, and official documents. For sixteen years she was employed with the National Security Agency. When she retired from the U.S. Naval Reserve, she held the rank of Lieutenant Commander. Her civilian duties included heading the Catalog Section, Office of Technical Services, Department of Commerce; editing for Edwards Publishing Company, Ann Arbor, Michigan; and directing the Catalog Department and serving as instructor in Library Science at Washington University, St. Louis, Missouri. Her library assignments for the government led to her work as an editor and joint-editor of publications for the Department of Commerce and a contributor to articles in professional library periodicals. Her compilation of the Defense Department's Thesaurus of Scientific and Technical Terms was one of her most satisfying achievements. Upon returning to reserve status after the War, she resumed her studies at George Washington University, studying mathematics and history again, and specializing in computer science. Finally, she moved back to her alma mater where she joined its staff as coordinating librarian. Here she did research and expanded the library of the Virginia Associated Research Center. She is survived by her sister, Pauline (Polly) Swift Slate, '31, and her brother, Stuart (Dean) C. Swift, '23.

JAMES DANIEL (PAT) MURPHY, '26 A.B., died March 24, 1985, in Cincinnati, Ohio. Following his graduation from William and Mary, he taught in the Virginia school system for four years. He then worked as an insurance claims manager. He made significant contributions in Cincinnati toward the organization and operation of facilities for the training and care of the mentally retarded. Survivors include his wife, Margot, and five children.

FRANK O. BIRDSALL, '27 A.B., of Afton, Virginia, died November 17, 1984. He worked for the State Department of Education from 1945 until 1966, and he later served as Director of the Woodrow Wilson Rehabilitation Center in Fishersville, Virginia. Survivors include his wife, Eunice.

NORA I. COLE, '27, of Williamsburg, Virginia, died May 5, 1985. A native of Yankton, South Dakota, she was a resident of Williamsburg for 83 years, and a former schoolteacher. She is survived by two nieces.

CAROLINE HARDY, '27 A.B., of Takoma Park, Maryland, died in August, 1983. In addition to William and Mary, she attended the Universities of Virginia, North Carolina, Maryland, and Vanderbilt, and she participated in the Southern Study Program in 1938 and 1939. Following her graduation from W&M, she taught English for two years at Craddock High School in Norfolk, then served as assistant principal of the school until 1941. From 1941 until 1951, she taught at Hyattsville Senior High School in Hyattsville, Maryland; and from 1951 until her retirement in 1971, she taught at Northwestern High School. From 1942 until 1970, she also served as a Critic Teacher with the University of Maryland Student Teacher Program. She was a recipient of the Outstanding Teacher Award for Prince George's County. Survivors include a sister, Mary D. Hardy, '31, and a niece.

MACK GILBERT (JACK/SPEEDY) BRITTON, '32, died March 18, 1985, in Orlando, Florida. A member of the track team and the Philomathean Society at William and Mary, he was a veteran of World War II who retired from the military in 1949 on full disability, following a helicopter crash in 1948. He taught high school electronics for two years before forming the Florida Communications Company and the Deep South Radio Communications Company. After retiring in 1960, he worked for the State Civil Defense as Communications Coordinator for the Central Florida area until 1972. From 1950 until 1963, he was also a communications consultant for General Electric, and from 1957 until 1962, he was a Deputy Sheriff for Ocala. For nearly 50 years, he raised show dogs, and he was a former president of the Rhodesian Ridgeback Association. For many years, he was Chaplain of the Knights of the Kilocycles. A member of the Order of the White Jacket he is survived by his wife, Svea.

CAREER EXPLORATION DAY SCHEDULED FOR SATURDAY, OCTOBER 19

The Society of the Alumni and Career Planning and Placement Offices are planning to have Career Exploration Day on October 19 rather than in February as has been the case in the past. Sixty-three alumni will be invited to serve on 21 different panels representing a wide variety of career fields. This will be the sixth year for this program, which has been given positive evaluations by student participants. Panelists are selected from those who are involved in the Alumni Career Advisory Service (ACAS). Alumni who would like to participate and have not been contacted are encouraged to write or call Bob Hunt, associate director of placement, College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, VA 23185, phone 804-253-4604.

RAYMOND STANLEY WICKERS, '33, of Portsmouth, Virginia, died November 19, 1984. Survivors include a son.

ROBERT HUNT LAND, '34 A.B., of Alexandria, Virginia, died May 7, 1985. Prior to attending the College, he attended the Norfolk Division for one year and Tyler Junior College in Texas for one year. He enrolled at William and Mary in 1932, earning his degree in English and history. At W&M, he was a member of Kappa Alpha, Phi Beta Kappa, Omicron Delta Kappa, Theta Alpha Phi, Debate Council, Wrangler's Club, Dramatic Club, and History Club; he was managing editor of the Flat Hat, manager of the Debate Team, chairman of the senior class play, winner of the John Stewart Bryan Scholarship in 1933, and twice winner of the Cincinnati Award. He earned an M.A. in history from the University of Virginia in 1936 and a B.S. in library science from Columbia University in 1940. Following his graduation from William and Mary, he worked as a salesman for Spratley-Rogers Motor Company in Hampton for one year, and then as a National Park Service Junior Historian on the Jamestown archaeological project for one year. From 1938 until 1942, he was an instructor of history and archivist at W&M. He served in the U.S. Navy during World War II, attaining the rank of Lieutenant Commander. After the War, he returned to the College, serving from 1945 until 1951, first as Associate Librarian, then as Librarian. He joined the staff of the Library of Congress in 1951, as Assistant Chief of the Manuscript Division. In 1953, he received a superior accomplishment award, and in 1958, he was promoted to Assistant Chief of the General Reference and Bibliography Division. From 1964 until his retirement in 1976, he was Chief of the General Reference and Bibliography Division. In addition to working at the Library of Congress, he lectured on the custody and service of manuscripts and taught history courses at the Northern Virginia Center of the University of Virginia. In 1961, a Civil War course that he conducted for George Washington University was telecast, bringing the University an award from the Civil War Centennial Commission. He also taught library science and American history courses at the University of Maryland and R.P.L., and he served as the first coordinator for the Library of Congress, and George Washington University. Following his retirement from the Library of Congress, he was employed for two years as consultant at the James Madison Memorial Library, where he taught the organization, registration, and cataloguing of manuscript collections to special history students at Mary Washington College. He was the author of several published articles on history and reference work with manuscripts. A loyal supporter of William and Mary, he was a member of the Olde Guard Council, chairman of the Class of 1934 50th Reunion Committee, and a former member of the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni. Survivors include his wife, Elizabeth, two daughters, two brothers, one of whom is Henry C. Land, Jr., '34, and three sisters, including Mary L. Gill, '28, and Cornelia L. Hardenbergh, '37.

ELMO FRANK BENEDETTO, '37 B.S., of North Andover, Massachusetts, died April 12, 1985. At William and Mary, he was captain of the baseball team and a member of Alpha Phi Delta, Omicron Delta Kappa, Sigma Rho, the 3-3-3 Athletic Committee, the 13 Club, the Seven Society, and the football team. Following his graduation from W&M, he became a temporary teacher at the Cobbet Elementary School in his hometown of Lynn, Massachusetts. That fall, when the football coach at Lynn Classical High School was injured, Benedetto was asked to take over the team and some of the physical education classes. He left Lynn to teach in New York and to pursue a master's degree in physical education administration, which he earned from Columbia University in 1940. He enlisted in the Army during World War II, and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Medical Administrative Corps. Following the War, he returned to teaching in Lynn, and in 1953, he earned his Ph.D. from Boston University. In 1959, he became Lynn's first Athletic Director, a position which he held until his retirement in 1982. He was coordinator of Title IX in Lynn; and for over 30 years, he was executive director and All-Star Football and Basketball Game chairman of the Agganis Foundation and Polio Drive. As director of the Agganis Scholarship Foundation, he was mainly responsible for the raising of over $300,000 for scholarship awards to young athletes — for which he was cited by the Governor of Massachusetts. He was instrumental in sending approximately 400-500 young athletes and students to higher education on scholarship grants. A member of the Order of the White Jacket and a former Class Reporter for the Alumni Gazette, he was inducted into William and Mary's Athletic Hall of Fame in 1983. Survivors include his wife, Carmeline, two sons, a daughter, and four sisters.

FRANKLIN CARTER LIVESAY, '37 B.S., died May 12, 1983, in Norfolk, Virginia. A member of the football team, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, and Omicron Delta Kappa at William and Mary, he was a retired Navy Commander. Survivors include his wife, Grace, and a stepson.

At William and Mary, he was a member of the Flat Hat staff, tennis, swimming, and freshman track and cross-country teams, and Phi Kappa Tau. A U.S. Navy veteran of World War II, he was a structural engineer of helicopters and airplanes at Boeing Vertol Corporation for 19 years, retiring in 1964. He continued the business his father once owned, Fred Brown and Sons, until 1965. He was also the owner of the former Upland Boat Works. He is survived by his wife, June Rickard Brown, '57, three children, and two step-daughters, one of whom is Diane B. Herkness, '80.

MARGARET CORNELIA GRAMMER (RUSSELL), '40 A.B., of Disputanta, Virginia, died April 18, 1985. In addition to William and Mary, she attended Madison College and Virginia Commonwealth University, earning her master's degree in rehabilitation from V.C.U. in 1973. She was a school teacher for 14 years and a counselor with the Virginia Employment Commission for 35 years.

RAYMOND FRANCIS FREED, JR., '49 B.A., died May 4, 1985, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Born in Philadelphia, he lived in Williamsburg for more than 35 years. Prior to attending William and Mary, he served with the Army Air Corps in India and China during World War II, and then taught young teenagers at an orphanage in India. After returning to the United States and earning his B.A. in guidance and history, he began teaching at Matthew Whaley School in 1950. He moved to James Blair in 1955 when it opened as the city-county system's high school. He was appointed part-time assistant principal in 1960 and continued to teach classes. He became a full-time assistant principal in 1971, then moved to Lafayette High School as assistant principal in 1973. He earned his M.Ed. from William and Mary in 1974. At his request, he returned to the classroom at Lafayette in 1977, teaching history and advanced American government, primarily to juniors and seniors. He was instrumental in introducing a vocational education program to the Williamsburg-James City County Schools. His career as a classroom teacher and administrator also included service as a school treasurer and a guidance counselor, and for several years, he performed the duties of all four jobs at once. He received awards for his accomplishments in the field of education from the Freedom Foundation of Valley Forge, Pennsylvania, and also from the Williamsburg Area Chamber of Commerce. He is survived by his mother, a sister, and a brother.

FRED MONROE FLANARY, '50 B.A., died April 21, 1985, in Williamsburg, Virginia. He came to William and Mary in the summer of 1942, under the War Work Program, but he left early in 1943 to join the Army Air Corps, serving the Pacific. Following the War, he returned to the College, earning his B.A. in accounting. From 1950 until 1954, he worked for the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, and from 1954 until 1956, he was clerk of what became the General District Court of Williamsburg and James City County. He became a Certified Public Accountant in 1957, and from then until December 1980, he ran his own accounting firm in Williamsburg. In 1980, he was appointed clerk of the Williamsburg-James City County Circuit Court; he served in that post for one year. Most recently, he was an assistant professor of accounting in the School of Business Administration at William and Mary. He was a member of the James City County Board of Supervisors from 1965 until 1969, serving as chairman for two of those years. At one time active in numerous civic groups, he was also a former member of the Board of Trustees of the Alumni Endowment Association. He is survived by his wife, Nori Smith Flanary, '50, and by two sons.

GEORGE WASHINGTON BELK III, '52, died May 4, 1985, in Richmond, Virginia. At William and Mary, he was a member of Phi Kappa Tau and recipient of the 1950 Barter Theater Award. In addition to William and Mary, he attended the University of North Carolina. He was a former editor for the Dallas Times Herald; the Philadelphia Inquirer, for 10 years; and the Swarthmorean, a Philadelphia suburban newspaper. He had also been an account executive for Gray, Rogers and McKinney Agencies, and a news director for Radio Station KGBC. At the time of his death, he was director of public relations for Thomas Jefferson University. Survivors include his wife, Phyllis, a daughter, three sons, his mother, and a sister.

JAMES COLIN MOUNIE, '57 B.A., of Virginia Beach, died April 8, 1985. A member of Kappa Sigma at William and Mary, he earned not only his undergraduate degree from the College, but also his M.Ed. in 1959 and his Ed.D. in 1972. From 1959 until 1965, he was a teacher and assistant principal at several Virginia Beach schools. He was appointed principal of Virginia Beach High School in 1965; and in 1966, he became principal of First Colonial High School. In 1968, he was appointed director of secondary education for Virginia Beach public schools. He served as director of research and testing from 1970 until July 1984; at the time of his death, he was director of planning assessment and resource development for the Virginia Beach schools. Survivors include his wife, Jeanne, his mother, two daughters, a son, a sister, and two brothers.

JOSEPH FRANK LIGART, '60 B.S., died February 1, 1985, in Norfolk, Virginia. An honor graduate of W&M's Norfolk Division, he earned his M.Ed. from the College in 1966. He did additional graduate work at New York University, the University of Virginia, and Budapest University. A World War II veteran of the Army Air Corps, he gained recognition as a trumpet player and an arranger for the Ray Anthony Band. He moved to Norfolk to direct the pit band in the Gaiety Theater, as well as to attend W&M's Norfolk Division. He began his teaching career in Norfolk in the early 1960s and also worked in the state of New York. He went to Virginia Beach as a band director in the public schools, bringing national recognition to the marching and concert bands of Bayside and Princess Anne high schools. He retired in June 1984. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and various professional organizations. Survivors include a daughter, two sons, and his stepmother.

ALEX CLOYD MIGHTON, '62 A.B., died April 27, 1985, at his home in Wilmington, Delaware. At William and Mary, he was a member of the Baptist Student Union, the Flat Hat staff, and the Society for the Advancement of Management. He received an M.B.A. in marketing in 1965 from Cornell University, and joined the First National City Bank of New York (now Citibank) as a market research analyst in 1965. From 1967 until 1969, he was an economic analyst with the University of Delaware's Division of Urban Affairs, and in 1969 he was promoted to associate economist. From 1978 to 1979, he was a statistician, first grade, for the State of Delaware Department of Labor. He is survived by his father and a brother.

JOHN WESLEY RAYMOND, JR., '72 B.S., died suddenly on December 17, 1984. A major in the U.S. Army, he was commissioned in 1972, and then served at Fort Storey, Virginia, and Fort Greely, Alaska. He entered duty after graduation from Virginia Commonwealth University Dental School. He is survived by his wife, Irene, two daughters, and his mother.
