THE COLLEGE OF WILLIAM AND MARY

William and Mary Celebrates 293rd Birthday College's Role in Growth of Higher Education Subject of Kerr Address

William and Mary conferred honorary degrees on two distinguished educators on Feb. 8 as the College celebrated the 293rd anniversary of its founding.

Dr. Clark Kerr, president emeritus of the University of California at Berkeley, and Joseph C. Smiddy, president emeritus of Clinch Valley College in Wise, Va., were honored for their lifetime contributions to higher education with the honorary degree of doctor of humane letters.

In honoring Dr. Kerr, who also delivered the Charter Day Address, President Verkuil described the former chairman of the Carnegie Commission and Council on Policy Studies in Higher Education, as an "effective, eloquent champion of all colleges and universities," adding that Dr. Kerr's "thoughtful, persistent leadership and advocacy — during good times and bad — shows that you have been true to the ideal of liberal education for lifelong service..."

Smiddy was honored for "a career devoted to promoting and improving the welfare of the people of Virginia's mountain empire."

"You have used your humor and your professional skills creatively in the chancellorship of Clinch Valley College creating a center of excellence where no higher education had been offered," said President Verkuil. "You have been an exceptional teacher, a thoughtful counselor of your students, and a public servant recognized and respected beyond the confines of Virginia."

The College conferred the Thomas Jefferson Award, which honors personal and professional character, on Dr. Thaddeus W. Tate Jr., professor of history and director of the Institute of Early American History and Culture, which is co-sponsored by the College and Colonial Williamsburg. The award citation noted that Dr. Tate "has distinguished himself at every level of instruction from survey courses to graduate seminars," while at the same time serving as an effective director of the Institute and pursuing outstanding scholarship.

The Thomas Jefferson Teaching Award, which recognizes an outstanding young teacher at the College, went to Joanne Braxton, assistant professor of English. A graduate of Sarah Lawrence College with M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Yale, Dr. Braxton was honored for her "inspiring and demanding" teaching, for her scholarship, and for her efforts at William and Mary to improve the quality of life for the students.

In his address, Dr. Kerr quoted former William and Mary president Lyon G. Tyler, who said of the College: "William and Mary...is an institution from which, as from a fountain, has flowed much of the educational life of the present day." Said Dr. Kerr: "That is still true as it was a hundred years ago."

Dr. Kerr noted that William and Mary and Harvard were the two institutions that "initially set the distinctive American pattern of higher education."

Harvard, Dr. Kerr said, had seven presidents during its first 50 years, while William and Mary had only one. "James Blair was the first most effective college president in American history," he added. "He founded the college. He served as its president for 50 years. He helped obtain Christopher Wren as architect; and much else. At the end of his 50 years, William and Mary could compete in holding the young gentlemen of Virginia even from Oxford. Dunster at Harvard...and Clap at Yale...were among the few that could be placed in his class."

Noting that university governance gradually changed with the emergence of lay boards and the increasing power of faculty, Dr. Kerr said today's universities enjoy a "pluralistic" system of governance with the president, the lay board, and the faculty "working together" in a "system of shared governance."

In his remarks to the Charter Day audience, President Verkuil urged universities to "take stock of the relationship of student to teacher and of their educational programs" because of a "widening gulf between the faculty's expectation of students, and, in turn, students' expectations of the learning experience." Despite this national trend, President Verkuil said there are "some reassuring signs" at William and Mary.

"Our most recent statistics on the entering class of 1980 show that we graduated over 80 percent of our student body, the highest such percentage in the Commonwealth," said the president, who added: "We receive high marks on student-faculty interaction and our liberal arts curriculum is firmly entrenched."

Inside Admissions

Student's Opinion Important In College Decision

G. Gary Ripple
Dean of Admissions

This is a tense time of the year for many American families with high school seniors. The need to have a plan of post-secondary opportunity in place by graduation time is putting extra pressure on students while their parents are caught in a dilemma of trying to decide how much help they can or should give to their bewildered offspring.

It is my strong personal philosophy that students must assume a lion's share of the burden in this difficult but important process. They must write the letters, make the phone calls, schedule the college visits and personal interviews, write their own applications and make a final decision with regard to an appropriate first step after high school.

Family members should fill an important supporting role in this process. Parents can provide timely advice and the assurance of a financial contribution but must step back at crucial times and allow son or daughter the freedom to make the important choice at each step along the way. Parents should beware of placing undue pressure on the decision maker and they must walk a very thin line—providing necessary encouragement while avoiding the very strong impulse to jump in and take over a situation that appears to be headed for an undesirable outcome.

To whom can a parent turn for help at this extremely anxious time? The best person I know of is the high school counselor who has some idea of the student's credentials and capabilities and who has developed the expertise so necessary for assistance in this pressure-packed situation. Even if you have not had the opportunity to really confer with your child's counselor previously, there is no better time than the present.

Information and applications are now available on our 1986 College Counseling Seminar. Alumni children who are juniors in high school may receive materials for this program by writing or calling the Admissions Office at William and Mary. Our telephone number is 804-253-4223.

National Media Spotlights College

Surveys Rate William and Mary Among Best

Two recent surveys have placed the College and one of its programs among the best in the nation.

William and Mary is ranked 17th among the nation's 192 major universities in a recent poll of college and university presidents conducted by U.S. News and World Report, while the undergraduate accounting program has been named one of the 20 best in the nation by a poll of accounting professors conducted by Public Accounting Report, the independent newsletter of the profession.

Results of the U.S. News and World Report poll, published in the magazine's Nov. 25 issue, showed Stanford University at the top of the list. Only the top 10 institutions were listed in each of the nine categories identified in the survey.

In the "National Universities" category, Stanford was followed by Harvard, Yale, Princeton, the University of Chicago, Duke, Brown, California-Berkeley, North Carolina-Chapel Hill and Dartmouth.

Rankings 11 through 20, not published in the magazine but confirmed in a telephone interview with the editor of the story, were Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the University of Michigan-Ann Arbor, Wesleyan University, the University of Virginia, Rice University, California Institute of Technology, William and Mary, the University of Miami (Ohio), the University of Illinois and Cornell University.

The nine categories were based on a classification created by the Carnegie Foundation for Advancement of Teaching. Key criteria for the "National Universities" category were the number of undergraduate liberal arts and sciences degrees and the presence of Ph.D. programs.

In the survey of the top accounting programs, William and Mary and Northern Illinois cracked the top 20 for the first time in the five-year history of the newsletter's exclusive poll of accounting faculty members. They, along with New York University, Oklahoma State and Alabama, replaced Missouri, Washington, Minnesota, Stanford and Chicago among the top 20 schools. The University of Illinois and the University of Texas were first and second for the fifth consecutive year, while William and Mary tied for 12th place with New York University.

Statistics show that for 1982-85, an average of 45 percent of William and Mary accounting majors taking the C.P.A. exam for the first time passed all four parts. The statewide passing average for that period is around 19 percent, and the national passing percentage is said to be around 10 to 15 percent, according to James E. Smith, director of the accounting program at the College.

In recent months, the College has also been included in The Public Ivys, a book listing state universities judged to have education programs comparable to those of the nation's top independent colleges and universities; and in the Best Buys in College Education, a new book by Edward B. Fiske, education editor of The New York Times, describing high-quality educational programs available at moderate costs.

William and Mary is given a five-star rating for academics by the Fiske book, which says that the College has a long-standing commitment to "fine scholarship—a tradition that is actively upheld every day."

In addition, William and Mary is mentioned in the Feb. 10 issue of Newsweek Magazine in an article on the public Ivys. The article describes the College as "probably the most selective of the public Ivys and the one closest in spirit to their private namesakes."

"The Williamsburg, Va., school offers an idyllic residential campus, small classes and a superb graduate-placement record," says Newsweek.

Applications to William and Mary are up 10 per cent this year to their second highest level in the College's history. According to Gary Ripple, dean of admissions, the College has processed 6600 applications, second only to 1975 when 7100 applied to the College.

Nominations for Board

Alumni wishing to place names in consideration for nomination to the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni are requested to forward names and supporting statements to Dr. Marvin F. West '52, Chairman, Nominating Committee, Alumni Board of Directors, Post Office Box GO, Williamsburg, VA 23187. The suggestions should be received by April 1, 1986.

The committee will nominate two persons for each of the five vacancies on the Board of Directors that will occur in 1986. The slate will be published in the May issue of the Alumni Gazette, and the election will be held in the fall.

Other members of the nominating committee are: Melissa Eastman '77, Rosemont, Pa.; Leslie Fouts '80, New York City; James E. Howard '43, Richmond, Va.; Dr. Milton Salasky '31, Norfolk, Va.; and Martha Leef Stout '65, Richmond, Va.

Subsequent to the publication of the slate, nominations may also be made by petitions signed by seventy-five (75) active alumni and received by the Chairman of the Nominating Committee no later than July 15, 1986.

Author of three biographies on American writers, Scott Donaldson is currently finishing a new book on writer John Cheever.

THE SURGEON IN TWEEDS

Prolific Biographer Scott Donaldson Probes Delicately Between Fact and Legend

BY LISA HEUVEL '74

He may be tall and dressed in tweeds, but it takes only a slight twist of imagination to picture Scott Donaldson as a surgeon, eyes sharp above a surgical mask and gown. As a biographer, he probes delicately between fact and legend with a pen instead of a typewriter.

Fulfilling, yes. Easy, no. The gestation period for a Donaldson biography is four to five years.

As American author Ralph Waldo Emerson once noted, "The artists must be sacrificed to their art. Like the bees, they must put their lives into the sting they give." To chronicle such pain, passion and achievement is a craft in itself, but Scott Donaldson answers to another calling as well — teaching American literature in the Department of English at William and Mary. He has done so since 1966.

Unlike many academics who complete their degree work and then proceed to teach, Donaldson went from undergraduate studies at Yale and graduate work at the University of Minnesota to a decade as a newspaper reporter and editor.

Only then did he return to the academic world for a Ph.D. in American studies, and the beginning of a long teaching career at William and Mary.

Within the last 15 years, Scott Donaldson has had three critically recognized biographies published: Poet in America: Winfield Townley Scott (1972); By Force of

Will: The Life and Art of Ernest Hemingway (1977), and Fool for Love: F. Scott Fitzgerald (1983).

Donaldson is currently almost 200 pages into a biography of the late Pulitzer Prize winning author John Cheever, which will probably be published in 1987. He's already contemplating a fifth book-length project on poet Archibald MacLeish, another Pulitzer Prize winner who also served as librarian of Congress and later undersecretary of state during Franklin Roosevelt's administration.

As biographer of Hemingway and Fitzgerald, Donaldson has written candidly about the dark and bright sides of those two giants of American literature. In his first biography, Donaldson described the despair of Win Scott, who called himself a "failure-poet" because, despite 10 published books of poetry, critical notice and several awards, he never received the widespread recognition he desired.

After having touched on alcoholism, envy, affairs and other aspects of these authors' very human lives, Donaldson can note differences between writing about a person like F. Scott Fitzgerald, who died in 1940, and John Cheever, who died in 1982. For one, he's been able to interview, talk with and correspond with 100 friends, neighbors, family members and literary acquaintances of Cheever's, including Saul Bellow, Norman Mailer and John Updike.

"When you're dealing with people who are fairly recently dead, which is what I've done — Win Scott died in 1968 and my book came out four years later — that's pretty fast. It will be the same with Cheever, because my book will come out five years after his death. When you're doing that, there are an awful lot of people alive who are in a position to be damaged or hurt," says Donaldson.

"It's very difficult to be sensitive. You don't want to distort the evidence to protect survivors, on the one hand; on the other hand, you want to be as tactful as you can, so as to not cause any more pain than need be."

"I do think you have to tell the whole story. I don't believe in holding back. Hold back one thing, and you end up holding back the adjoining thing. Pretty soon, you're telling what you know is at best a half truth."

Although Donaldson acknowledges that the "Truth with a capital T" will always elude him, he strives for whatever truth he can piece together from a careful reading of the person's work, his letters, and, in the case of someone like John Cheever, talking to a lot of people who knew him well. That includes actress Hope Lange, with whom Cheever had one of the 100 affairs he claimed.

Although Lange was willing to discuss her relationship with Cheever, Donaldson says that many friends and neighbors felt there were painful and delicate things about Cheever, his life and marriage that should not be aired — such as his alcoholism and homosexuality in later years.

"It's as if, by saying whatever they must have thought about it to anybody who was going to put it into print, that they would somehow be betraying their trust, and I can understand that. There's simply nothing you can do, because that's the way some people feel about it. You can say, 'I'm going to tell it, what I know about it, and I'm certainly not going to skim the surface of it, but I'm going to try to treat it as sympathetically as possible. But if that's not enough, that's not enough.' And for some people it isn't."

If Donaldson has been commended for his "scholarly patience" as a biographer, he is less tolerant of biographers who hype themselves or their approach. "I wouldn't think of writing about Cheever without going back and trying to find the house he was born in. You don't think you're a big deal when you do it, that's all."

If Scott Donaldson doesn't suffer fools or arrogant biographers gladly, that trait is welcomed by the many students who take and have taken his 400-level seminar on writing non-fiction. Drawing on the experience that he gained as a newspaperman, Donaldson passes his insights on to the unique breed of William and Mary students who are aiming to be journalists: unique because there is no school of journalism at the College. There's Scott Donaldson's class and whatever practical experience they can get from the Flat Hat staff or with local papers. (One of Donaldson's former students, George Stukenbroeker '80, has been named Virginia's Journalist of the Year for 1985.)

His seminar students often have turned in excellent final articles on such topics as the subculture of George's Restaurant, the rugby team, and the local drug scene. He has a high regard for those students and for the juniors and seniors and graduate students in his American literature courses.

"The hard part of teaching well is not letting it become rote. That's not a problem of teaching when you're coming to something for the first time, or the first couple times. However, this statement is true: I will never be able to teach The Great Gatsby with the same enthusiasm I had the first time, although I know that book extremely well. The freshness of the first experience is hard to maintain. But there are ways of trying to maintain that enthusiasm and one is to stay in touch with these writers and to write about them."

That has been Donaldson's approach, and one senses his affinity and admiration for the authors he writes and teaches about. Of all of his subjects, Winfield Townley Scott is still his first and favorite. "With the staggering eminence of the others, it's difficult to make that leap of identity. Whereas with Scott, he's a minor poet: not famous, not well paid but extraordinarily skillful. He was also extraordinarily vulnerable, and a kind man, or wanted to be."

While he finds his students refreshing and learns from them, Donaldson says that writing is the hardest and most satisfying thing he does. "Putting down words isn't hard," he says. "Putting down the right ones is."

THE PRESIDENTIAL SCHOLARS

Program Helps Attract The Best and the Brightest to William and Mary

BY TINA JEFFREY

IN 1982, 20 special freshmen enrolled at William and Mary. They were the first Presidential Scholars in a new program designed to attract and challenge the best and the brightest.

They averaged 1400 in the SAT scores, and half of them ranked first in their high school graduating classes. The other half were in the top percentiles. Eleven had received college credit or advanced placement because of previous work, and most of them had been chosen as National Merit finalists and runners-up. They were a well-rounded group as well, having participated in extracurricular activities that included student government (12), public speaking (6), newspaper and magazine staffs (5). Twelve were female and eight were male. At William and Mary they have proved their worth, excelling both in academics and student activities. In December eight of them were tapped for Phi Beta Kappa.

They will graduate in May, the first group to have the designation "Presidential Scholar" after their name. Did the program make a difference in their lives at William and Mary? Overall, the answer seems to be yes, but some of them still see room for improvement.

One of the program's greatest successes has been in helping to attract exceptional students like freshman Jon Tuttle of Fairfax, Va., where he was valedictorian at Robinson High School and a Parade Magazine high school All-American in soccer in his senior year. Recruited by several Ivy League schools, Tuttle narrowed his choices to William and Mary and the University of North Carolina, finally selecting William and Mary for its excellent academic program.

"Athletes don't choose a college for sports, but for the education they can obtain," says Tuttle who is attending William and Mary on a partial soccer grant-in-aid. "I am challenged intellectually and am very happy here; it was the right decision for me to come to William and Mary. It's a great school with a good soccer program, a perfect atmosphere for blending social and educational features." In his freshman year, Tuttle has maintained a perfect 4.0 classroom average and has excelled on the athletic field as well. He is the Tribe's second leading scorer, having been named to the first-team Colonial Athletic Association soccer team.

The Scholars Program took some months of gestation before being set up in 1982. It had been recommended enthusiastically by the Honors and Experimental Programs Committee and supported by the College faculty. Modeled after plans at some other topflight educational institutions, William and Mary's program begins each year in the Admissions Office when prospective students apply. The office flags academically distinguished applicants and from these a faculty-student committee invites some 80 to 100 applicants to receive the designation of Presidential Scholar. If they matriculate at William and Mary and accept the designation, they are automatically offered a place in the one-year Honors Program, normally reserved for upperclassmen only.

The Scholars are assigned their own faculty adviser, who counsels them on course selections and gives individual attention to their academic needs and wishes. It is a supportive arrangement designed to challenge the exceptional students and to insure them a good educational experience at William and Mary.

Central to the Scholars' experience, the Honors Program focuses on a study of ideas that have shaped our culture. This year's topics, for instance, have been "The Human Predicament" and "The Individual in Society," with primary emphasis on the reading and discussion of ancient and modern classics. Participants in Honors engage in small seminars of 10 to 15 students, led by members of the faculty, meeting for two one-and-a-half hour sessions weekly. Additionally, participants attend a Wednesday night program featuring films, discussions, lectures or concerts. It is a multidisciplinary and non-departmental approach to learning.

Any new program takes time to mature and develop. And the Scholars Program is learning from experience what works at William and Mary. Dr. Thomas M. Finn, dean of undergraduate studies for the faculty of arts and sciences, who is responsible for the Honors Program, listens to the students' suggestions about how the program can be improved. This year, in response to requests from the students, he will ask the College's Educational Policy Committee to drop the distribution requirements for the Presidential Scholars in the future, so they may achieve some of their educational goals in subjects of their own choosing.

"This will require careful and savvy work for the students with their own advisers," Finn cautions.

Addressing another hope of Presidential Scholars — that there should be more peer socialization between individuals — the Scholars this year are meeting at least once a month for lunch and informal talks.

Carrying this even further, the College plans to make Taliaferro Hall a dormitory for Presidential Scholars next year. The building, recently remodeled, will house 56 students, a residence life assistant and a senior faculty member who will occupy a small apartment. This will give the Scholars the opportunity for closer relationships with students of similar interests and needs.

Dean Finn says he hopes that Honors can be expanded as the number of Presidential Scholars grows. He notes that the Honors Program is not only a drawing card in recruiting top students, but that over the past few years it has directly affected the teaching lives of some 30 members of the faculty who have undergone rigorous study in a three-week-long seminar before they lead an Honors session.

Freshman Heidi Eger of Williamsburg is not only well-pleased with the Scholars Program and her experience with Honors, so is her dad. He is Dr. Waldemar Eger, associate professor of modern languages at the College. Heidi says she has "really enjoyed Honors this year and being around people interested in learning. Presidential Scholars get to know each other better through being in class together."

Several of the scholars have some suggestions on how the Presidential Scholars Program can be improved. They suggest, for one thing, that more information on its goals, features and rewards is required. They recommend more privileges for the students in the program, such as priority in the choice of classes, freedom from distribution requirements and the assurance of not being bumped from College housing. And some suggest that a meaningful gesture by the College toward its Presidential Scholars would be a one-time monetary reward. Now, the Scholars designation is all honor.

Senior Allen Meese, who is headed for law school at the University of Chicago next year, says a stipend to the Presidential Scholars would help the College as well as the Scholars. "There is a lot of competition for excellent students from Ivy League colleges and good universities like Duke, North Carolina and Virginia," says Meese who carries a heavy academic load with a double major in ancient Greek and economics. "William and Mary's role is to draw the best students it can and to educate them in the best way possible, and this means the best allocation of its resources. The College, its alumni, and the Commonwealth all need to demonstrate some sort of financial incentive to draw high-caliber students here."

"If the Presidential Scholars Program is to succeed here," adds Meese, "others have to get involved, in addition to the faithful few who give so much to it. It needs support and direction from the entire College to attract high-quality scholars, and it needs full financial support from the entire College."

BY BOB JEFFREY '74

It's been a long time coming, but Kenny Lambiotte is finally getting a chance to show what he can do.

Back in 1982, when he graduated from Central High School in Woodstock, Va., Lambiotte was touted as one of the most versatile and talented athletes ever to come from the upper Shenandoah Valley. He averaged 23.5 points a game on the hardwood and was a four-year starter at quarterback on the gridiron. All-district, all-region, and all-state in both football and basketball, Lambiotte had over 100 colleges vying for his formidable talents in both sports.

When the 6-4, 190 pounder accepted a basketball scholarship at the University of Virginia, his future seemed set. Putting aside hopes of football glory, Lambiotte joined a powerhouse hoop squad that featured the likes of Ralph Sampson and Othell Wilson.

A year and a half later, the picture looked different. Lambiotte had shown promise as a freshman, averaging 2.8 points per game in limited duty. But when it became obvious the following year that more playing time was not forthcoming, he decided at midseason to transfer to William and Mary.

"I was looking for a better situation in athletics, one that suited me better," he said recently. One of the attractions at W&M was the opportunity to play football and basketball. "I knew I wanted to play football," said Lambiotte. "I talked to Coach (Jimmy) Laycock about playing basketball also. I was just seeing what my possibilities were," he said.

At W&M the possibilities looked good. Both Laycock and head basketball coach Barry Parkhill had recruited him before he opted for Virginia. Lambiotte's grandparents live in Newport News, which helped ease his transition to the new school.

Sports, and particularly basketball, are in the Lambiotte family blood. Kenny's father, Arthur, played for the University of Richmond; younger brother, Walker, is a freshman sensation at North Carolina State; and sister, Ann, a junior in high school, has been contacted by over 75 schools with scholarship offers.

Despite all that basketball tradition, Lambiotte is equally enamored of the gridiron. "I knew in high school I liked basketball better. But since I've been able to play football in college I've really enjoyed that," he said.

Transferring, however, meant he would be ineligible to compete for at least a year. Some athletes might have gotten impatient with the wait, but Lambiotte wisely used the time to his own advantage. "Sitting out gave me more time to study," he said. A junior math major and an excellent student, Lambiotte has another full year of eligibility left.

In addition to playing two sports and keeping up with his studies, Lambiotte recently wed his sweetheart, Joanne Morse, a 1985 graduate of Old Dominion. As a result he's becoming an expert in budgeting his time. "Sometimes having a lot of demands on your time can help you do better," he says.

Lambiotte also discovered that he needed the extra time to readjust to the rigors of football. "I didn't know what to expect, since I hadn't played football in two years, but I was able to go through spring practice and fall practice just to work on getting back into playing football again," said Lambiotte.

In the 1985 spring game Lambiotte displayed his return to form by scoring a touchdown and being named the co-offensive player of the game, along with Michael Clemons. During the fall campaign, he was listed third on the depth chart behind record-setting quarterback Stan Yagiello and backup Rod Lawrence, both seniors.

Next season, however, Lambiotte will be competing for the starting spot at quarterback. "He's shown that he can do some things well in practice; and in scrimmages he's looked good," says Laycock. "We'll see this spring how he does with the offense."

The main competition will come from Greg DeGennaro, another transfer student who sat out last season, and Craig Argo, a rising sophomore from Athens, Ga.

Though lacking in game experience, Lambiotte's personality has made an impression on Coach Laycock. "Ken came in here and made the transition from one school to the other very smoothly. He's very well liked by the other players. He certainly seems to have leadership capabilities and is a very mature young man. All those characteristics will help him perform."

If Lambiotte does earn a starting berth, Laycock

KEN LAMBIOTTE: His Time Has Finally Come

After An Uncertain Start, UVA Transfer Shows His Talents for Tribe

will have his second consecutive two-sport quarterback. Yagiello is a standout second baseman who was drafted by the Cleveland Indians while still in high school.

As his first basketball season at William and Mary approached, Lambiotte found himself on the sidelines again, waiting to see if the Tribe gridders would receive a postseason bid to the NCAA I-AA playoffs. That put him six weeks behind in joining the team. "I wasn't able to play basketball competitively at all during the football season, so there were some things I missed out on," he said.

After losing four of five starters to graduation last spring, the 1985-86 edition of Tribe basketball has found the going tough. But the emergence of Lambiotte, along with the steady play of senior point guard Scott Coval, has given hope to W&M fans.

In the fifth regular season game, against the University of Georgia, Lambiotte earned his first start in a green-and-gold uniform. Though the Tribe was outclassed 77-44, Lambiotte responded with 13 points on six for seven shots from the floor. The following night he led W&M to a 61-39 conquest of Colorado State, scoring 15 points and pulling down seven rebounds from his small forward spot.

As the season has progressed, Lambiotte has shown the capacity for clutch play. In a recent conference game with the Tribe trailing East Carolina by 39-29 midway through the second half, Lambiotte led an inspired comeback, scoring 10 points of W&M's next 12 points as they battled back to a 41-41 deadlock before succumbing 56-54 on a last-second tap-in.

A week later, against James Madison at Harrisonburg, Lambiotte brought the Indians back from a big deficit again, tallying six of his team's 10 points in a run that closed the gap to 50-48 with 4:52 left. Though the Tribe lost 58-57, Lambiotte put on his finest display to date, hitting seven of eight shots from the floor and three for three from the line, while grabbing six rebounds. Then after a seven game losing streak, Lambiotte led the Tribe to a 71-64 upset of VMI with a game-high of 17 points, including 15 in the second half.

Parkhill is grateful for the leadership Lambiotte brings to the inexperienced Tribe. "I think Kenny's going to be a player that we can depend on to come up with the big play when we need it, along with Scott Covall," Parkhill said. "The more guys like that we have, the better off we're going to be when things aren't going so well."

Parkhill also praises Lambiotte for the positive influence on his teammates. "He's a very mature young man. He's been around a lot of situations. That helps the younger kids, and even the upperclass guys," he says.

But most of all Parkhill is glad that Lambiotte's time has finally come. "I'm happy for him because he's finally getting a chance to compete, which he hasn't been able to do since he's been in college. He really deserves it, and he's making the most of it."

Coach Laycock voiced similar sentiments: "He's paid his dues. He's worked hard in practice and he's accomplished a lot since he transferred. I'm sure that he's anxious to get into the thick of things and compete with the opportunity of being the quarterback."

It's been a long time coming, but it looks like Ken Lambiotte's time has finally come.

KATHY WELCH:

William and Mary's Premier Swimmer

Talent, Hard Work Helps Stellar Tribe Senior Set Eleven Records

BY FRANCES BOBBE

What, to date, has been her most memorable meet at William and Mary? Kathy Welch doesn't need to look it up.

"It was the first meeting of my college career. We swam against James Madison; it was up there. I was a nervous freshman. I had these visions that every college swimmer was a Tracy Caulkins," she recalls.

Nervous? You can look it up: Harrisonburg, Va., Friday, Nov. 12, 1982. Besides swimming the third leg of W&M's victorious 200-yard freestyle relay, newcomer Kathy Welch wins the 100 free in 53.9, the 50 free in 25.0, and the 50 fly in 27.2. All three times are personal and school records.

"I think that (meet) set my mind at ease," she says. And, if her subsequent swims have been less nerve-racking, they have been no less stellar.

You can check the record book: Welch holds 11 records and has 18 record-setting performances overall. She holds the 50, 100 and 200 free; the 50, 100 and 200 fly; and the 100 and 200 IM standards. She shares the 200 and 400 medley relay and the 800 free relay marks.

"This is my 16th year of competing. It's gotten better every year. I'm really pleased, because I feel like I've accomplished what I set out to do," Welch says.

Besides the records by the end of her freshman season, Welch had figured in 28 wins — 21 of them individual. She took first 26 times — including a total of 38 solo victories — during both her sophomore and junior seasons. Each year she has qualified for and placed in regional championships.

Kathy admits that she sometimes wonders about spending so many hours in the water just to drop a tenth or two-tenths of a second. But, she says, "Considering it's my last season, I want to do my best." Welch 1, Burnout 0.

Hard work, both in training and on technique, is making her goal to improve upon an already impressive career a reality. "We're definitely doing much more yardage, which has helped in terms of overall physical conditioning, strength, and capacity," Welch notes. "Also, the types of sets we've been doing have really helped."

During preseason, new coach Anne Howes led the team through rigorous aerobics. Then the former University of North Carolina assistant added a weight-training program. When the Indians finally plunged into Adair Pool, they were prepared for her weekly "cruise intervals." In these sets the swimmers must do 50-, 100- and 200-yard lengths in repetitions of six and 12 and in a specific amount of time without stopping. "The goal is to lower your interval times," says Welch. "Everyone knows that they can improve."

As for technique, Howes says, "Kathy's turns were really sloppy. With her height (5-11) she should be ahead of everyone else coming off the wall. So, we've worked on that and they've improved tremendously."

Through the Tribe's 5-1 season to date, Kathy has won 14 races — 13 in a row and 12 on her own. She has already made the Eastern Women's Swimming League (EWSL) cuts in the 50, 100, and 200 free, the 100 fly, and the 200 IM.

"The big thing about Kathy, which I realized at our first meet, was that, when she has to win, she will," Howes says. "We were swimming the 800 medley relay and Kathy was swimming the 200 free at the end. We were in the lead and Kathy just took off. She went so fast, I thought, 'Oh, my God, she's going to die.' I don't know how she did it — but she held on and won the race."

Thanks to the Colonial Athletic Association, Welch and the women's swim team now have a conference championship to shoot for. The first CAA meet will take place at UNC-Wilmington. "At our conference meet, we can enter a swimmer in five individual events and three relays," says Howes. "Kathy really can swim anything from the 50 free to the 500 and swim it well. She should place in the top three or four in each event that she swims. We definitely score a lot of points because of her."

Out of the water Welch is a business major who pulled a 3.0 last semester. She is a two-year member of the College Management Association and the William and Mary Advertising Society. Interested in a career in marketing or investments, she has already sent out resumes and is currently interviewing.

Welch is a four-year member of the Catholic Students Association. During her junior year, she was active in CSA's Ministry to the Aged, visiting the elderly in the Pines Nursing Home in Williamsburg. "It's hard to fit in with swim practice, but I'm going to try to do it again this year," says Welch.

This student-athlete also makes time for fun. "Wherever you go, you meet friends. Anyone can always go out and have a good time here. I have made friends through swimming, friends through sorority (Delta Delta Delta). Everyone's different, I enjoy that," she says. "I feel that I really have a good balance. I came here to get an education, not just academically, but socially and physically."

Welch came to W&M from Woodbury High School in her native Woodbury, N.J. She was ranked first in her high school class throughout most of her scholastic career, graduating third. Swimming was naturally among her many extracurricular activities. She swam for the Greenfields Swim Team and the South New Jersey Tri-County Swim League and received Greenfields' Outstanding Swimmer Award six times. As a member of the Gloucester County YMCA swim team, she qualified for three YMCA national championships. She also made the South New Jersey All-Star and Colonial Conference All-Star swim teams and was a New Jersey State Top-Ten Swimmer Award recipient. And, she was a Colonial Conference All-Star during her four seasons of varsity track.

If Welch had the jitters during her first collegiate swim meet, she was even more skittish when she took up the sport at age six. "Our coach was so dominating, I was always scared. The first year was tough," she recalls. "I would swim to the other end of the pool, climb out and go hide."

Thank goodness, she climbed back in.

NEW SOCIETY OFFICERS

William A. Armbruster '57 (above, right) of Blackstone, Va., was elected president of the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni at a board meeting in February, while J. Edward Grimsley '51, Richmond, was elected vice president. Dr. Lesley Ward '63 of New York City (seated on left) was elected secretary, and Harriett L. Stanley '72 of Brooklyn, N.Y., was elected treasurer. Joining the board for the first time since their recent election to three-year terms were Ann-Meade Baskervill Simpson '65 of Virginia Beach and John S. Entwisle '44 of Williamsburg.

Jeff Trammell represents a new tradition in Washington—the young lobbyist—a man who has experience on Capitol Hill and who applies his experience and expertise to the best representation of his clients," says James C. Jennings '67, chief of staff at Gray & Co. in Washington, D.C., one of the fast-growing public relations firms in the country.

"You do not have to be a white-haired mandarin to be a counselor in Washington today, or to serve your clients well," adds Jennings. "Jeff understands this. He keeps up his contacts on the Hill, he is deeply immersed in the political process, and he stays in touch—three characteristics of a successful lobbyist."

Jeffrey B. Trammell '73, a Florida native, is a senior vice president and legislative counsel for Gray & Co. Trammell, who received his law degree from Florida State University, came to Gray & Co. in 1981 after a brief but remarkable career on Capitol Hill. In Florida Trammell worked for Senator Richard Stone, but he later came to Washington as a legislative assistant for Democratic Congressman Paul Rogers. Soon afterward he became an administrative assistant to Florida Congressman Ed Stack. Trammell admits that his experience on Capitol Hill was "telescoped," even for the Hill, which is renowned for fast climbs to the top, but he attributes his success to the fact that his bosses "kept retiring or losing, while I kept on progressing."

Trammell first met Robert K. Gray in 1981 when he interviewed with Gray's new firm. "I didn't know him from Adam," says Trammell, "but I was a lawyer who knew the House, and I was a Democrat. You cannot meet Bob Gray and not know he is tremendously able. The real innovation of Bob Gray is his concept of importing the media into public policy. No one else has done it on the same level of sophistication as Gray & Co. Although the Senate was among the first to pioneer a lot of it Gray applied it to the private sector."

Indeed, Robert Gray has been successful in his venture. He prepared to reach his goal of creating "the biggest public communications firm in the world" by hiring an all-star cast of executives who had access to powerful people in Washington. In Washington, a city where names open doors, Gray peddled what is always in demand: influence. "If you hire good people," he says, "the accounts will follow."

"When I founded this company five years ago," Gray says, "I had the luxury of starting from scratch and picking the best professionals, which was critical to the type of company we wanted to launch. Jeff has been with us since the early days, and everyday he has reinforced my judgment that he is an outstanding professional."

Trammell has his admirers outside of the company as well. Stewart Gamage '72, director of former Governor Charles Robb's Virginia Liaison Office in Washington and a member of the Board of Visitors, describes Trammell as outstanding. "He is a person of major influence on Capitol Hill," she says. "When you want something done, he is the man to see." Another admirer is Connie Warren Desaulniers '75, promotion manager at Busch Gardens in Williamsburg. She says that Trammell is a "people-oriented person."

"At William and Mary, he was a diplomat who would sit back and listen, and then respond in a very appropriate, very diplomatic way," says Desaulniers. "He's a natural, perfect for Gray & Co."

Indeed, Trammell is a man who inspires confidence: tall, quiet, at peace. He has the aura of a dignitary, a man who listens and does not give away secrets. Yet he does share a glimmer of his thinking:

"If an issue is not controversial, people are not going to go to the government. When taking sides in governmental affairs, you have to be the best advocate you can be on behalf of the client. You cannot be all things to all people in politics. The process is adversarial. You must clearly state who you are and on whose behalf you are working."

Trammell describes himself as a "jack of all trades" in business, but he is a particular expert on the legislative and political background that underlies Democratic Party politics. He has handled legislative issues for Gray's corporate clients, such as NBC, Group W, Motorola. He states, in his Florida accent that has been tempered by his years in Virginia, that he finds his work enormously challenging and he looks forward to coming to work every day.

At William and Mary, Trammell says he learned to communicate, a skill "which is necessary in law and politics and in a firm like this."

"I have a strong allegiance to that period because it was a formation time for me," he said. "I made friends with people from all over the country and developed my personal skills. It had a profound impact on me. I have heard others make similar comments."

Trammell was president of Lambda Chi fraternity at William and Mary, which he says "taught me responsibility in dealing with people. Imagine organizing 90 guys who all had different ideas of getting things done! Fraternity life is a learning experience. The diversity is very important."

A varsity basketball player and co-captain of the Tribe team in 1972, Trammell says his allegiance to William and Mary is still very strong. He comes back to his alma mater every fall at Homecoming to play in the alumni basketball game.

"When I look back, I'm glad I went to William and Mary," says Trammell. "I get a very favorable response when I mention William and Mary as my undergraduate school."

writing again. We will look forward to seeing some of her thoughts and observations in print.

According to Hayden Gwaltney she feels she is the same, only older. She does much church work as a member of Saint Paul's Episcopal Church where she is treasurer of the Women of the Church, helps on Sunday mornings with the breakfast for the married couples, and helps serve the street people on occasion. In addition she also volunteers at the local hospital, enjoys bridge and last summer took a grand trip to England.

Page Drinker Hogan with her husband and Annetta Gwaltney '27, Hayden's sister, say they enjoyed Olde Guard Day in April and were impressed with the new buildings. In Sept. Frances Gordon, who now lives in Boston, Mass., visited Page for several days.

George Whitley and Warren Russell, friends from Monroe days, both wrote about seeing each other frequently. They live not too far apart — George (Buck) in Falls Church and Warren (Barney) in Arlington. George and wife, Edna, regularly come to Homecoming where I usually see them, and Warren hopes to come in 1986. Both are retired. Warren had worked for the government for 34 years and retired because of health problems. After having heart surgery in '83, his health has improved. He spends much time reading and does some watercolor painting, which he says is good therapy.

Elizabeth Glenn Hartman and husband, who also live in Arlington, spent about two months this past fall visiting relatives in Ohio, Indiana, Mississippi, and Alabama. They are expecting the arrival of their seventh great-grandchild in 1986. If they stay in good health, 1986 will see them again on their annual trek to visit their children and grandchildren who live away from the Northern Virginia area.

From Christiansburg came a nice note from Seibert Simpkins telling of his retirement in 1985 after 55 years with W. R. Angle and Company (supermarket). Since then he has enjoyed working in his yard and garden. He replaced old shrubs with English boxwood and raised enough vegetables for his family and plenty to give to friends. He is involved in his church and visits nursing homes, the hospital and friends.

Included in a Christmas card from John Branch (Dauba) Green was a nice letter that brought me up to date on what is happening in his family. He and Betsy '29 aren't feeling as young as they once did. Betsy suffers from arthritis, and he doesn't hear and see as well as formerly — but they manage to be a crutch for each other. They have two children, a son who lives in a western state and a daughter who is married. He didn't mention grandchildren. Will have to inquire about that.

Elizabeth Lam Vieg had two grand trips this past year. She says, "In Jan. I attended the 10th anniversary of the Asian Women's Institute in Hong Kong — a gathering of 25 administrators from 12 women's colleges in seven Asian countries and a dozen American women who have given support to this remarkable organization. What these women educators are doing to change the traditional status and public role of women in their communities is truly remarkable.

"Following the meeting I went to China for a few days 'on my own' — sans tour group or guide or hotel reservations: only with train and plane reservations that took me to Kwangshy and Kweilin, the scenic gorge that John and I had missed on our China trip in '78. Don't let anyone tell you that you can't get about China on your own initiative but be prepared for dramatic adventures. I had them!

"This fall John and I took off for Portugal and Spain. We spent two delightful weeks in a charming seaside hotel north of Lisbon and another two weeks chiefly in Madrid.

"In Claremont I am a member of a small group setting up community programs to enlarge our understanding of the U.S.S.R.: e.g., a series of eight lectures, 'Update on Soviet Society,' given this fall by several college professors and four Soviet films scheduled for the spring."

"And here the spirit of the Cavalier asserted itself . . . William and Mary did not protest that decision.

"Cost them a touchdown! What of it! There are other things worth a lot more than touchdowns. . . . Yea, verily, the Cavalier came to Cambridge."

We witnessed the above incident from our vantage point of the "bench," our customary roost on Saturdays. That same play worked well against Syracuse the year before, but did not prevent our taking quite a licking.

This is being written Jan. 1, the beginning of a new year that I hope will be a good one for each of you in the Class of '28.

Have received some interesting notes from a few of our classmates. Some were in response to my plea for news. Two were indeed brief and to the point. One from Willard

Cardwell who wrote, "Age 80, retired physician, no plans except to enjoy myself doing nothing." After a career of tending to the ills of others, I'm sure, Willard, you deserve a time in which to do nothing but enjoy yourself. Ruth James Turner commented, "I haven't done anything newsworthy unless breathing in and breathing out are exceptional!" At our age we are probably fortunate to be breathing — so keep it up, Ruth.

Because we had no reporter for a while, some news had been waiting in the Alumni Office since last Feb. Even if it is not current, it is of interest.

Dorothy Broughton Brennan commented that she had enjoyed attending Olde Guard Day in the spring of '84. She stays busy with church work, Pilot Club and Woman's Club and had taken a trip to New England in Oct. Know she enjoyed the beautiful foliage.

Lucille Eastman Michie has retired from the Fluvanna school system as school psychologist, but still supervises practicum students and interns for the University of Virginia Institute of Clinical Psychology. She was serving her fourth term as the chairman of the Virginia Board of Psychology and was

On Oct. 31, 1925, William and Mary played its first football game with Harvard. The game was played in Cambridge. The result: Harvard, 14, William and Mary, 7. An incident occurred in the game, which resulted in the following editorial published by the Dedham (Mass.) Transcript.

"With the whole essence of football strategy concentrated on keeping the presence of the ball in play a secret from the opposing side, what does it avail when an official loses sight of the ball and his officious whistle stops the play?"

"At the end of the first half, this team of football players from Dixie had the score seven to nothing in their favor. They . . . were going strong, when, presto, the referee's whistle put a damper on it all. And for no other reason than this official . . . had been unable to follow the ball. He did not know where it was!

RICHMOND DESIGNER WINS STATE AWARD

Allan Denny Ivie III '54, a Richmond, Va., designer, has received the annual Designer of Distinction Award from the Virginia Chapter of the American Society of Interior Designers. Ivie, who is the president of the firm J. Frank Jones, Allan Denny Ivie III, Hampton Stanley Hall, Inc., is the third person to receive the award. Ivie is involved with the refurnishing of the President's House project at William and Mary, working with Clement Conger, curator of the White House, who is chairman of the President's House Committee.

In October the Daily Press, a Newport News paper, carried an interesting article about Bill and Mary Thompson's tailgate parties which are held on the lawn of the Alumni House before most W&M football games. According to the article these parties are elaborate affairs attended by a large group of friends. Some of Mary's favorite tailgate party recipes were included, such as mystery spread, chocolate dreams, and potato chip cookies.

The following signed in during Homecoming: Virginia Vaiden Bowen; Malvern H. Omohundro Jr.; Dr. John S. Brooks, District of Columbia; George Robert Whitley, Falls Church, Va.; Hammond Branch, Toano, Va.; Jefferson Carey; Bill Thompson; Meb C. Davis.

I think there were more there. Please send me some news for our next column.

From Ed:

About a dozen members of our class were present for the Olde Guarde Luncheon on Friday of Homecoming weekend. Most of the spouses accompanied the class members. The total attendance for the luncheon did not appear to be as great as it has been in former years. Milton Salasky and his helpers provided a very interesting program. Anne Dobie Peebles, Rector of the Board of Visitors, spoke briefly to us.

Even though our numbers were not great I still missed speaking to some class members. If I do not see you and you see me, speak and give me the news. Sam Hurley and his wife, Betty, ate at the table with me so while the ladies chatted about current happenings,

Sam and I recalled events of former years. The only two classmates I have heard from recently are Fay "Pete" LeCompte and Richard "Dick" Jones. Fay's health is not so good and he asked Bernice and me to visit him and Cynthia. The note from Dick and Ruth says that they plan to attend an Olde Guarde get-together sometime next year, spring or fall.

In thinking of our days at William and Mary, I recalled that one year when Bob Covington and I roomed together in Taliaferro Hall, he devised a method whereby he could close the window and turn on the heat on cold mornings. He slept in the top bunk and he tied a rope around the radiator

PINHOLE PHOTOGRAPHY

Willie Anne Wright '45 Excels in Unique Art Form

BY BARBARA BALL

Willie Anne Wright '45 must sometimes be amused by the extravagant claims and complexity of today's high-tech photography. With the simplest of cameras she achieves an art form that is probably closer to the picture in the mind's eye than space-age lenses can produce.

For the past two decades, Willie Anne Wright of Richmond has been exhibiting her prints, paintings and pinhole photographs nationally and in Canada, but is best known for her pinhole photography. She is included in the new book The Visionary Pinhole since 1977, published by Gibbs M. Smith, Inc. Her work is continually represented in major magazines in the field including Darkroom Photographer, The American Photographer, Arts News of Canada and Photo Metro. She was most recently featured in the June issue of Piedmont Airline's inflight magazine, Pace.

Already a painter and printmaker, Miss Wright took a basic course in photography in 1972 to learn how to document her work with slides. One of the first assignments in that course was to construct a pinhole camera. Intrigued by the interesting results of working in that medium, Miss Wright began developing what has become a major direction in her art. The pinhole camera is her instrument, she says, and it will continue to be as long as it intrigues her artistic curiosity with everchanging possibilities.

The pinhole camera is lensless and can be constructed from a wide range of materials. As artist-in-residence for the Virginia Museum's state services, Miss Wright has held pinhole photography workshops for schoolchildren and retirees and made cameras from oatmeal boxes and fine woods. The largest she has made is 16 by 20 inches and is made of wood. Miss Wright has developed a system of producing a positive color print with Cibachrome, a material originally designed for making color prints from slides. She was one of four winners in the 1985 Cibachrome Grant Competition for creative use of Cibachrome, an Ilford product.

Because there is no lens in the pinhole camera (a tiny hole drilled in a metal shim is used instead), it requires bright light and an extended exposure time to produce a print. Also the subject must be stationary. To fulfill these two basic requirements, Miss Wright focuses in on swimming pools. Swimming pools are open in the summer when there is a great deal of sunlight, the water provides interesting patterns, and it is easy to find stationary subjects in the people who are relaxing in deck chairs or on floats in the pool.

During the winter months when pools are closed, Miss Wright concentrates on painting and printmaking. She is currently working on a large painting of women at a pool.

Being a successful artist, she says, is all a matter of self-confidence, "and each success confirms it in your mind." And her successes have been numerous. The exhibit "Pinhole Photographs by Willie Anne Wright," toured with the Virginia Museum's outreach program since 1975. Her work is currently included in two other traveling exhibits, "The Visionary Pinhole," designed by Lauren Smith, author of a book by the same name, with an itinerary in Ohio. In January 1986, Wright's work was shown at the Ledel Gallery in New York City.

Her paintings, prints and photographs are included in numerous private collections in the U. S. and Canada. Public collectors include the Virginia Museum, the Walter Cecil Rawls Museum, Mary Baldwin College, Longwood College, the Bank of Virginia, Sovran Bank, Philip Morris, the Richmond Public Schools, Thalhimers, the City of Virginia Beach, the Federal Reserve, the Greenville, S.C., Museum of Art and the New Orleans Museum of Art.

Miss Wright's work is represented by Witkin Gallery in New York City and Afterimage Gallery in Dallas, Texas. She is a member of 1708 E. Main, an alternative space gallery in Richmond.

Making a living as an artist is a risky business, says Miss Wright. Most artists need patrons, she concedes. "Also a lot of stamina and push." There's a wry smile on her face as she speaks. It took a lot of energy recently to relocate an exhibit in Richmond to higher ground during the recent floods.

"Artists also need to be able to carry on an inner dialogue with themselves," she says. "All of us are rejected at sometime or another, all of us overestimate success. But everyone has creative potential, they just need to keep working on it," she adds.

Miss Wright earned a degree in psychology from William and Mary. She minored in elementary education to prepare herself for a career in teaching. Art had always been an interest and she nurtured that interest with classes in the fine arts department with Tom Thorne. In the 1960s, after marriage and three children, she continued her study of art and in 1964 received an M.F.A. in painting from Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond. Her husband, Jack, former Reynolds Metals executive, is retired. Daughter Anne, a B.F.A. graduate in sculpture from VCU, designs environments for aquariums. Elder son, John, is a graduate of Georgia Tech and an engineer with Bell South in Atlanta. Her younger son, Hank, is an emergency medical technician in San Francisco. Willie Anne and Jack have three grandchildren.

DR. DIVITA RECEIVES SEVERAL HONORS

Dr. Vincent T. DeVita Jr. '57, director of the National Cancer Institute, received several honors this fall, including induction as an alumnus member of the Alpha of Virginia Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at William and Mary. In addition, the American Cancer Society presented Dr. DeVita its Medal of Honor Award on Nov. 8, and on Nov. 18 he delivered England's annual Leukemia Research Fund lecture in London. The American-Italian Foundation for Cancer Research presented Dr. DeVita with its second Barbara Bohlen Pfeifer Award for scientific achievement on Nov. 24, and on Dec. 8 he delivered the Stratton Lecture of the American Society of Hematology meeting in New Orleans. The lecture is the highest honor of the Society. In addition to his induction as an alumnus member of Alpha of Virginia Chapter at William and Mary, Dr. DeVita delivered an address to the group at its December meeting.

NICHOLAS ST. GEORGE '60
NAMED TOP EXECUTIVE

Nicholas St. George '60, J.D. '65, president and chief executive officer of Oakwood Homes Corporation, has been named the best chief executive in the manufactured housing industry for the second straight year by the Wall Street Transcript, a New York financial publication. The publication bases the award upon how the CEO "enhanced the overall value of the enterprise for the benefit of the stockholders." Said the publication of St. George's performance as CEO: "St. George takes the gold because of his ability to continually maintain an outstanding growth record and an excellent cash position year after year." St. George is a trustee of the Endowment Association of the College of William and Mary.

valve before we turned in for the night and when he pulled on it the next morning it would open enough to heat the room.

The closing of the window was a bit more complicated but it was done by putting an eyehook in the bottom portion of the lower sash, inserting the end of a piece of rope in the eye and then through a pulley on the bottom of the window frame and another at the top. When he awoke in the morning he pulled the end of the rope from his position in the bed, and presto, it closed.

Please make plans immediately to attend Olde Guard Day in April. Let's exceed last year's attendance, which was about 20.

This month I am planning to drop a card to some of our members we have not heard from in years. There are at the present about 200 members of our class who are still living so please let us hear from you. Each of us is interested in others of you. Let it be a mutual feeling.

From Betty:

We were pleased to see the following members of our class at Homecoming in November: Ned and Dot Langford Bradford, Mary Edgar Calcotte, Albert Cornell, Norris Halpern, Sam Hurley, Eleanor Williamson James, Betty W. Lanier, Ed Trice, W. Harvey Trevilian, Liz Griffin Waters and Sara Ann Everette Wolford.

Harriet Smith Warren writes that there is nothing of great interest to write about and then goes on to tell us some very exciting news about her work in the theater. (Would that more of you, who think you do not have any interesting news would do just as Harriet did — send us information about whatever you are doing. It will be of great interest to your classmates just to see your name among those present.) Harriet has received great reviews about her career in the theater. She sent interesting newspaper clippings about her work in developing the theaters in Jamestown and Rochester, N.Y.

In 1972 Harriet lost her husband, who shared her interest and her career in the theater. In 1982 she returned from Rochester to Jamestown, where she is now living and still enjoying a close connection with the theatrical activities there. Harriet has a daughter and a son and six grandchildren, one fairly new one. Her interest in writing continues, and she has published several children's plays.

At present she is back in school taking classes in philosophy, anthropology and logic. She says "It's fun and it keeps me young."

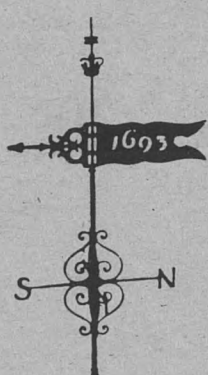

We had a card from Elsie Beebe Swezey who says she and her husband are enjoying retirement and traveling. This summer they had a great time with their six grandchildren at their beach home. She misses coming to William and Mary for Olde Guard Day and Homecoming, but they usually go in the opposite direction where their children live.

We were delighted to hear from Alice Harwood Marshall, who many of you will remember as president of Women's Student Government our senior year. She is thankful for good health and enough work to keep her "from rusting." Alice sent us a most interesting copy of a 1945 Flat Hat.

From North Carolina comes a note from Mary Owens who was thoughtful enough to let us know she is still very much alive even though she had no news. However, she did ask about several of her classmates. (If you would like to know if she asked about you, write me.)

Wyllhart (Billey) Bailey Kenny wrote from Columbia, S.C., where she is now living. Billey still likes to travel, play bridge and do needlework. She has two children, eight grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

We were pleased to hear from Eleanor Williamson James and to see her and Joe at Homecoming. Their latest news is that they celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary not so

C ALUMNI COLLEGE

The Society of the Alumni's Alumni College is scheduled for June 1-5, 1986. This event will bring together alumni, spouses, friends, faculty and administration on our lovely campus, endeavoring to balance a learning experience with a vacation in Williamsburg. Feedback from and contact with alumni indicates a continued strong interest in this kind of alumni activity. Our alumni and friends also tell us they wish to remain on the Old Campus and visit the new. Therefore, the group will be housed in air-conditioned, newly renovated Jefferson Hall with meals in Trinkle and classes in the Wren Building.

A curriculum is being designed to work with our main theme — A Vision of a Modern University: State of the Art. A select faculty from a number of departments will take part as lecturers. Lecturers will come from the School of Education, the School of Arts and Sciences (History, Religion, Philosophy, Chemistry, Biology and English) and the School of Marine Science. In addition to lectures, activities will include a welcome picnic at the Alumni House, a reception at the President's House with the President and Mrs. Verkuil, and a "field trip" to the Virginia Institute of Marine Science at Gloucester Point, VA. To conclude the Alumni College there will be a Summary Convocation with "conferral of degrees" and a farewell luncheon on the last day.

Registration is now open on a first-come, first-served basis. We are striving to keep costs minimal. Therefore the entire program — room, meals, lectures, and activities — will be offered for $225.00 per person from registration Sunday to "graduation" and departure on Thursday.

Won't you join us for this unique William and Mary experience? Spend a few days in June with us back on campus, renewing memories, friendships, and ties with the College. We invite you to return to the Alma Mater of a Nation . . . to return home to William and Mary.

For further details and information, write to: Diane Hagemann, Director of Chapter Programs, Society of the Alumni, Box GO, Williamsburg, Virginia 23187. For advance reservations (early admission) please send a $25.00 deposit check, not refundable after April 15, payable to "The Society of the Alumni" and mail to: Alumni College 1986 — Diane Hagemann, Box GO, Williamsburg, VA 23187.

long ago at Millwood with over 80 family members present.

Last fall Eleanor and Joe went to Colorado to visit their daughter and her family. Eleanor and Joe are looking forward to living in their new Florida home on a canal off the Inland Waterway. Their new address is: 6449-1 Bay Club Drive, Ft. Lauderdale, FL. 33308.

By way of the Alumni Office, we have news of Susan Carpenter Carter who has been honored again with a write-up in the Boydton News-Progress. Susan has been a contributor to the newspaper for a number of years. She writes a column devoted to poetry. The editor of the paper says, "She is one of the warmest and most loving people I have ever known. Her contributions to the paper add a dimension of appeal that few community newspapers can offer."

We end this report on a sad note. During the past year we have lost three of our classmates. Eunice L. Hall, Mildred B. Matier and Willard M. Entwisle. We send their families our deepest sympathy.

'83 ALUMNA RECEIVES PARACHUTIST BADGE

First Lt. Georgina L. Murray '82 has received the parachutist badge upon completion of a three-week airborne course at the U.S. Army Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga. Lt. Murray completed the program with five static-line parachute jumps including one night jump. She will serve with the 85th Medical Battalion at Fort George G. Meade, Md.

DITTMAN WILL RETIRE AS VICE PRESIDENT

Duane A. Dittman, vice president for university advancement at William and Mary since 1980, has indicated his intention to retire next summer. Though the retirement will occur on July 1, 1986, or as soon thereafter as his successor assumes the post, President Verkuil has requested that Dittman remain with the College as a senior consultant to the fund-raising program through June 30, 1987. Dittman, 61, is a veteran of more than 30 years in the college and university development field. He came to William and Mary from Davidson College. In the five years of Dittman's service, total gifts to William and Mary amounted to $28,895,000, a growth from $14,413,000 in the prior five years. During Dittman's tenure, William and Mary conducted the first capital campaign in its long history. In the last five-year period, the value of endowment assets also doubled from $21.3 million to $42.9 million. President Verkuil noted that "we should be very appreciative of the outstanding service Duane has rendered during his tenure as vice president for university advancement."

Those registered from the class of '32 were: Bill Renn, Virginia Beach; Ema and Jack Tuthill, Washington, D.C.; Mildred Steinhardt Jones, Franklin, Va.; Brooks and Elizabeth George, Richmond; Vernon and Frances Tillar, Emporia, Va.; George and "Toots" Diggs, Florida; Ben Bruner, Richmond; Jack Doniphan, Alexandria, Va., and Dr. Davis Y. Paschall and Agnes '31, Williamsburg.

I had Christmas cards from Elizabeth and Brooks and Vernon and Frances Tillar. They are all fine and enjoying the good things in life.

Anna Katherine Weatherford and her sister, Dorothy Dunlap, were with us on the Southside Alumni trip to Lexington in the fall.

Mary White Sheffield Nelson was a guest of the Southside Camera Club meeting at Armbrusters in Dec. She lives in Crewe, Va.

Some advice to senior citizens came to me from a casual acquaintance I met in Chicago, the author unknown. It seems to be good for the Olde Guard group.

Pamper the body and prod the soul
Accept limitations but play the role
Withdraw from the front, but stay in the fight

Avoid isolation, keep in sight
Beware of reminiscence except to a child
To forget proper names be reconciled
Refrain from loquacity, be crisp and concise

And regard self-pity a cardinal vice.

Have the best year ever.

Many thanks again to Joseph Turner of Scottsville, Va., for his report. Joe wrote, "Homecoming was a big success with large crowds, good food, and a football victory! Saturday's luncheon had to be moved from the Alumni House lawn to William and Mary Hall because of rain — but that was the only disruptive factor." Joe mentioned, too, that it was hard to find and identify '34 grads in such a crowd — a fact that has been mentioned before — even at Olde Guard meetings. Perhaps at the meeting this spring, Helen Dau will call for a brief '34 get-together immediately after the regular meeting. In addition to Dagma and Joe Turner, those attending Homecoming from our class this year were: Helen Singer Dau Williamsburg; Anne Moreland Dickinson, Hampton, Va.; Sarah Pope Dix and Edith Pope Howitz, the twins from White Stone, Va.; Frank Hall, Newport News, Va.; Cecil Harper, Richmond, Va.; Evelyn Maynard Harris, Williamsburg; Frances Spindle Harris, Williamsburg; Emil O. Johnson, Austin, Texas; Henry C. Land, Alexandria, Va.; Alice Cahill Marquez, Clear Springs, Va.; Kitty Blanton Seay, Norfolk, Va.; Lillian Carmine Sterling, Nexera, Va.; and W. Gordon Williamson, Petersburg, Va.

Following Homecoming, Joe and Dagmar were leaving to spend a week or two with their daughter and grandchildren.

It's always good to see Lit and Nancy Davis Upshur at Good Shepherd on Sunday mornings or having lunch on other days at the club (NYCC). Lit said recently, "No one will believe, but Nancy and I performed for the third year in a tap dance routine in the annual Joy Fund Dance Show — not bad for great-grandparents!"

Helen Lewis Janson wrote from Orlando, Fla., that she had been homebound much of the year because of the illnesses of both her sister, who lives with her, and a brother who lives nearby. In Oct. her brother from California and his wife visited and the three of them flew to Maryland where they visited relatives and spent a few delightful days on the oceanfront at Ocean City. Before returning, they also saw a number of relatives and friends in Lancaster, Va.

Lucille Maxfield Greenwood, Sedgwick, Me., wrote, "My husband and I retired to the coast of Maine 11 years ago and have never regretted leaving the busy world of suburban Philadelphia for the peace and quiet of this beautiful coastal country." She said that she has started a small business enterprise — a travel game for children touring with their parents in the state of Maine. The profits (if any!), Lucille says, will be shared with a local alcoholism and drug out-patient facility much in need of funds. If not successful, she'll be looking for storage space for several thousand games. Best luck, Lucille, we hope your game will be an all-out best seller!

A newsy letter arrived from Mildred (Bunny) Refo Carr, Greensboro, N.C., just before she left for a holiday in Spain and Portugal. Bunny thought some of you would remember Sara Doughtie Crocker, with whom she roomed her freshman year and with whom she also pledged Gamma. While on a trip to Chapel Hill, Sara and David, her husband, drove over to Greensboro to see Bunny. The last time the girls had seen each other was 47 years ago at Sara's wedding at old St. Paul's Church in Norfolk. "We managed to pick up where we had left off and had a wonderful time," Bunny wrote. The Crocker's live in Cleveland, Ohio. Bunny sends her best wishes to all her friends in both the classes of '34 and '35.

Thomas D. McCahill '39 (M.D., Hanover Courthouse, Va.) wrote to ask Kitty Seay for Dr. Jose Simon's address. Dr. Simon had conducted her recent trip to Spain. The McCahills had taken a similar trip to the Rhone delta in June.

It was with the greatest interest and pleasure that I read the wonderful article, "Kindness Reaps Many Rewards," which appeared in the Nov. 25 issue of the Wilmington, Del., The News Journal, concerning Fred Hill's activities in the Big Brother of Delaware program. The "Program . . . matches men with boys 6 to 14 who need an adult role model." Fred and his wife, Betty, have three grown children and four grandchildren of their own. When Fred retired as sales manager of the DuPont Company in 1975 he found the Big Brother-Big Sister program "something meaningful and challenging" to do. He has had five Little Brothers so far, including the current three. Two are 10 and one is 13. He has been highly praised by all of the boys' mothers for his patience, understanding, dependability and help. He has been selected as "Big Brother of the Year" for the area that includes Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and Washington, D.C. I'm sure all of you join me in congratulations to Fred for the great work he is doing and has done. Did you know that Fred holds 19 patents for discoveries made while at Du Pont?

Mary (Teddy) Turpin Acree wrote from Miller's Tavern, Va., that she seems to have settled in a comfortable rut with nothing exciting enough to write about and then mentions some horse racing she has attended over in Maryland! That sounds very exciting, Mary. Thanks for writing.

A freshman's call to Ruth Proudman Bierman, Piqua, Ohio, for the W&M fund prompted a nice letter. Ruth wrote that, with happy memories of our 50th reunion still lingering on, she and David celebrated their 50 wonderful years together in Sept. with all of their family, including the first great-grandson, present. They had just returned from a fabulous trip to Austria, Hungary and Bavaria — a part of the world whose history, Ruth says, is simply overwhelming. During the year they have also enjoyed Florida's sunshine and, in the summer, sailing on Ohio's Indian Lake. It all sounds lovely, Ruth.

A delightful letter came from Annie Pharr Goodykoontz, Louisville, Ky., telling of her busy summer and fall. In June, she and Jack attended a family wedding in Birmingham and visited friends at their summer cottage in Frankfort, Mich. In early Aug. three of their four children and their families visited them in Kentucky. With an assist from AAA, Jack spent a lot of time planning a lovely trip to England and Scotland, which they enjoyed in Sept. They had a Brit Rail Pass, which Annie says was great, particularly for their conducted day-tours out of London to such places as Stratford, Warwick Castle, Canterbury, Coventry Cathedral, Stonehenge, Bath and Wales. On their first tour, they met a delightful young couple, Stan and Katie Faling, and discovered that Katie was a Class of '65 graduate. They enjoyed the Scottish highlands, spending several days each in York, Edinburgh and Ft. William. A final weekend was spent in London. Everywhere they went, they met with interesting and friendly people.

Thanks to Faith Vogel and Fred for their beautiful card taken in their home in San Rafael, Calif. Following a custom of taking their Christmas pictures in "far away places," this one was supposed to have been taken in Peru or on the Galapagos Islands, but their scheduled Nov. trip was canceled. Concern turned to thankfulness when they learned that on the day before they were to have been in Bogota, Colombia, 12 supreme court justices were murdered, and street riots occurred the following day. Then the whole country was disturbed by a volcanic eruption! This was a good time to be at home, Faith!

A nice card came from Lucille Ozlin Mays, Orlando, Fla. She had spent four weeks in Nov. and early Dec. in Richmond and with a niece had taken a trip to Williamsburg. Sorry it turned out to be a "rainy, rainy," day.

Was happy that Huldah Dimmitt Goldsmith shared her and John's Christmas card and letter with us. Although the naturalists in Easton, Pa., had predicted a drab fall, it had been spectacular. Because of difficulty walking, Huldah had decided in July that it was time to have a new metal and plastic hip. "It works wonderfully," she wrote, "but it takes time, exercise and practice to learn to walk again." Even so she has managed "to persevere at my on-going project of reading Douglas Southall Freeman's biography of George Washington." She has finished five volumes and is now on the presidential years. Huldah ended her letter with, "This is the year of Halley's Comet, so keep your eyes on the stars. Stay well. We'll compare notes again next year."

Another lovely card came from Millie Lockhart Dickinson, Burnside, Ky. The Dickinsons had been to the Caribbean aboard the QE 2. Also on the cruise were Winnie Hall Proctor and her husband from Richmond, Va., and Camilla Nelson Crockett '33, Yorktown, Va. "How good it was to see old friends at our 50th reunion — which I loved," she added. Millie was back in Virginia for Thanksgiving.

It was good to see the class well represented in the William and Mary Theatre Alumni News. There were notes about Ruth P. Bierman, Templin Licklider, Northport, Mich., Robert Rodman, Newton, Mass., and Ann P. Goodykoontz. Among many comments about Howard Scammon was one from Fran Green '65 who said, "Mr. Scammon was tops!"

And from the Alumni Office came the Dec. 11 story from The Virginia Gazette: "Scammon as Scrooge." His dramatic reading was given at Prince George Graphics near Merchants Square. This was his latest in a long series of seasonal readings. He had first worked with gallery director Fred Miller 30 years ago when Scammon selected him to sing the lead in "Amahl and the Night Visitors" at the College.

From the Hanover County, Va., Herald Progress for Oct. 30 came a notice of the golden wedding anniversary celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Epps Jones. Congratulations and best wishes!

Also from the Alumni Office came a note from Ralph Levine, Walpole, Mass. Ralph wrote that he retired four years ago and now travels and spends his winters in Florida.

We were happy to welcome sister Pat Updegrave '40 from Texas City, Texas, for her wonderful visit between Christmas and New Year's and to visit with her and her classmates.

The Norfolk-Virginia Beach Chapter of the Alumni Association held a "Meet the President" reception recently in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Paul Verkuil.

My best to all of you for 1986! Please continue to write!

Is everyone now preparing to come to our 50th reunion in May? Please, please, come!

Prof. Margaret "Peg" Sheahan says since she has driven all over the world and the U.S., she plans to come by train to our 50th reunion. Peg still volunteers slide lectures on "Wonders of the World" 20 times a year to groups from churches, colleges, senior citizens clubs, etc. She always mentions Williamsburg and William and Mary of course. She says she is probably the only one in New York City who lectures all year on William and Mary. Peg, who has just retired as professor of history and communication arts and administrator at Marymount Manhattan College, was recently among those honored as leaders in the civic life of New York City. Mayor Ed Koch held a great reception for them at his home, Gracie Mansion.

After graduation Lucy Arnold Perkins went to Wichita, Kans., to train to be a medical technologist. After 12 months of training she passed her registry exam and stayed in Wichita to work. She was married in 1945 and has two daughters. Elizabeth teaches math near Houston and has two boys; Martha lives in Houston and has a boy and a girl. Lucy and husband, John, moved to Dallas when the girls were very young. Lucy was the organist of her church in Dallas for six years. She still sings in the choir and belongs to the hand bell choir. She retired from the medical profession in 1980 after 43 years as a medical technologist. Lucy and John plan to attend our 50th reunion. Good for you, Lucy. It will be good to see you after 50 years!

Helen Conner Young, who now lives in Fort Worth, Texas, says she does not know if she can make it to our 50th. Try, try, try to come, Helen. We all want to see you so much. It will be so good to get together again after 50 years.

Mary Savage Deyerle attended William and Mary from 1932 through 1933. She graduated from the University of Virginia School of Nursing in 1938 and married Dr. Henry P. Deyerle in 1942. They have three children. Their daughter, E. Warwick Deyerle, graduated from William and Mary in 1970.

Marian Stuart Hotaling writes that, "Margery Croft and I celebrated the upcoming 50th reunion of our graduation trip abroad by returning to England in Oct. for a two-week tour by auto. I also saw Priscilla Nickerson Hoxie when I went to Boston to see the Renoir Exhibit."

I am quoting below an interesting letter from Dorothy Toulon Smith.

"I hope you'll find it interesting enough for your alumni letter to know that nine of us from the Class of 1936 will have kept a Round

SAN DIEGO CHAPTER CELEBRATES CHRISTMAS

The San Diego Chapter held a "Christmas Celebration in the Williamsburg Tradition" at the home of Nancy '65 and Ward Deems in La Jolla, Calif., on Dec. 22. Some members attending were, top row: Ray Barger '69, Jerry Humphries '56, Stewart Sell '56, Keith Blomstrom '63, Ward Deems and his son; middle row: Robin Reighley '63, Pam Barger '70, Harris Hartman; bottom row: Barbara Humphries, Nancy Deems '65, Pat Sell '58, Gigi Schiff '66 (chapter president), Babs Anderson '63, Ann Boyd '60 and Diane Blomstrom. The chapter was grateful to the Deemses for opening their home to the chapter and extending their warm hospitality.

Robin letter going for 50 years this coming summer.

"Nine of us living in the Kappa Alpha Theta house wanted to keep in touch and the wonder of it, we have!"

"Jane Parker married Robert Bosman. Jane was a home economist and teacher. Bob attended Duke Medical School after serving in WWII and returned to the Army for internship and residency in pathology and a 30-year career, much of it spent in Germany. Jane and Bob have four daughters and six grandchildren all used to moving around the country. Bob was associate director of the Armed Services Institute of Pathology in Washington when he retired from the Army. They lived in Maryland while Bob was deputy director of Maryland State Laboratories. Now Bob has retired again and Bob and Jane live in Farmville, N.C.

"Ann Cummings taught physical education and was secretary at Meadowbrook School, Weston, Mass. In 1943 she enlisted in the Army and after Officer Candidate School in 1945 was commissioned second lieutenant. Ann had the good fortune to travel throughout much of Europe right after WWII and saw much of the devastation. She had various duties in the U.S. as well as a return to France before she retired in 1964 as major and the recipient of the Legion of Merit. She now divides her time between her home in Annandale, Va., where she is an avid gardener, and Largo, Fla., where she enjoys swimming and salt water fishing.

"Eleanor (Tita) McCallum Biggs was employed at the Mead Corporation in Chillicothe, Ohio, until she married William F. Biggs, a mechanical engineer, in 1941. They were in Honolulu during the Dec. 7 bombing. Bill's career took them to Cuba, Chile, and Saltillo, Mexico, where Tita took over the education of her children, three sons and a daughter. They returned to Cincinnati where they lived until Bill's death in 1969. Since then Tita has lived in her lovely old family home in Chillicothe. She has worked as secretary for a judge and now is in the county auditor's office. She promises to retire in 1986.

"Anne Bowen Smith received an M.A. degree from the University of North Carolina in 1939, then taught in Florida for five years before returning to Russell County, Va., where she continued teaching. Anne married William Smith who farmed land owned by his family since before the American Revolution. They lived in the beautiful home rebuilt in 1850 after a fire. Since Bill's death, their son John has continued to farm there, and he and his wife have two sons. Anne has been dividing her time with her son and his family and with her sister in Blacksburg, Va.

"Margaret Wilson Kriete taught home economics in Essex County, Va., then moved to Richmond where she attended business school. She held a secretarial position in Richmond for four years. She married William Kriete in 1941. After WWII they moved to Tappahannock, Va., where Bill was executive vice president of a bank until his death in 1977. They have four children — one attended William and Mary. Margaret continues to live in her home on the beautiful Rappahannock River raising flowers, traveling and enjoying her children and grandchildren.

"Sally Dobbs married Louis Blanc and lived in Peoria, Ill., for many years. They have six children and 10 grandchildren. They participated in community, school and church activities, and twice Sally represented William and Mary at the installations of new presidents at Bradley University in Peoria. Since Lou's retirement they have lived in Dunlap, Ill., and in Florida.

"Ann Fairleigh Denove attended the Royal Academy of Dramatics in London and played the lead in Clare Booth Luce's "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" on tour in the U.S. She left the stage to work for Harper's Bazaar before joining the Navy as a WAVE officer in WWII. Ann returned to New York, then with her husband, Jack Denove, moved to California where Jack was an independent film producer. Ann moved to Westlake Village after Jack's death. She has four children and five grandchildren. She enjoys playing golf and bridge and recently returned from a safari trip to Kenya.

"Dorothy Toulon Smith now lives in San Diego. She married Jerome Frost Smith, a Navy doctor, and continued her early life as a member of a Navy family. After Jerry's retirement from the Navy, they lived seven years in Richmond, Va., while he was medical director of Richmond Memorial Hospital. It gave Dorothy time to renew old ties with William and Mary and friends. After Jerry's death Dorothy returned to San Diego where she is busy with volunteer work, her three children and five grandchildren. She manages trips to Alaska, Japan and the Philippines as well as New York and Virginia to visit them all.

"Our round robin letter lost two members. Marion Hobbs (Mrs. Herbert H. Smith) of Brookline, Mass., and Helen Simpson '35 from Norfolk, Va. Both died in 1983."

38 Mrs. Erling B. Hauge
(Jane Speakman)
211 Willow Valley Square
Apt. D105
Lancaster, PA 17602

Greetings, classmates!

First, on a personal note: Sometime in Nov. as I answered the phone a man's voice asked, "Is this Jane Speakman?" When I responded that that had been my name, he announced that he was Bob Greene '41 and that we had met on the train in Sept. 1937 as he was going to Williamsburg for his freshman year and I was returning as a senior. I was mystified as to how he had located me after 48 years until he explained that my Lancaster address had popped out at him from the pages of the Alumni Gazette and he had called to welcome us to Lancaster. He also told me that Lucy Dobie Hartman and Minnie Dobie Musser and Bill from our era live in the Lancaster area. As I write this on New Year's Day we are planning to have dinner together at Willow Valley Manor — Bob and his wife Louise, Nick and I, and golfing friends of the Greens who also live at the Manor. Wasn't that great of him to call?

Gleanings from Christmas cards and from notes sent to the Alumni House:

Dottie Kincaid Portz from Solon, Ohio, wrote, "I regret so much that I didn't know — or realize — that you had changed your living area to Lancaster, Pa. Woody and I generally go to Hershey in Oct. for the antique car meet there. If I had just thought, I would have called you or even taken the car and come over to see you. Maybe next year . . . News of us: Woody still enjoys his retirement. We have sold off some of the old cars (the '34 Packard Coupe, 'his' Corvette and 'my' Mark II Continental), but we have added a '41 Buick and upgraded the stable for our drivables around town. Woody also put in a fireplace insert with the idea of reducing our huge winter gas bills. So, with wood available from our place (we had to take down an old maple to clear the viewing area for the satellite dish), Woody decided to build a log splitter. It's a marvel! Big (10'), bright (electric blue, with a fire-engine red gas tank), and brawny — it satisfies him (and the neighbors). . . . Son David is back in Houston (thank goodness) after a three-month trip to Peru hiking around the Andes and living the peasant life in the country. We expect him home for the holidays. He is still writing and apparently developing a talent for photography, taking first prizes and selling prints at $200 apiece! . . . I'm still practicing law and managed to get re-elected to council with a comfortable 87.6 percent vote over a C.P.A. contestant. I do enjoy being part of the government process and believe I have made a difference in the quality of life in Solon."

From Anaheim, Calif., and Doris Johnson Hocott: "I expect you are all settled and enjoying your new home. We would like to move but are not sure where. California weather is so mild that I have roses all year. I do miss the change of seasons; haven't seen snow for 17 years."

Mollie Waters Christie reports a change of address. "The Lord sold my huge house, and I'm now in a small house in Brevard, N.C. — close to doctor, stores, church, etc. Still haven't fully unpacked, but I'm running out of cabinets. Should have sold more. Why do we spend much of our lives accumulating and the rest unloading? Am planning to spend a few holiday weeks with my son and his family in Arizona."

Gretchen Kimmel Price comments: "My physician husband and I feel fortunate to have had nine wonderful years of retirement in this delightful mountain community (Hendersonville, N.C.). We spend 10 weeks a year at our beach home at Kiawah Island, S.C., just 20 miles from historic Charleston. We are both in good health and enjoy life with our children and five grandchildren."

Several items from Jack Morpurgo: He has left the University of Leeds as emeritus professor of American literature and has taken up residence in London where he is consultant director to one of the largest tour operators in the English-speaking world. He has just finished a book on William Cobbett in America. . . . On Nov. 21 members of the UK Chapter entertained President and Mrs. Verkuil, Dr. and Mrs. William Spong of the law school and Dr. Hoak of the history department in the home of Dr. Morpurgo, President of the UK Chapter. . . . As part of their 50th birthday celebrations Penguin Books have published an anthology: Penguin New Writing, 1940-1950 selected from their most famous literary periodical. Many of the great names of the 20th century are represented — Greene, Auden, Spender, Pasternak, Orwell, Isherwood, Sartre, Capetanakis. There is also a short story, "The Pipes," originally written on the back of signal pads somewhere in the Western Desert" by J. E. Morpurgo.

I trust it is not too late to offer the sympathy of the class to Elizabeth Rumsey Weber whose husband, Frederick, died in 1966, as listed in the Alumni Gazette in Sept.

Bert Capps Sheeran reports that she and Louise Hall, who were roommates for one year at the College, have found each other again. Louise has retired from the Air Force as a colonel and is now living in Virginia Beach and working in real estate.

Our class gift to the College was voted upon at the Oct. meeting of the class reunion committee. The Eminent Professor Program was passed unanimously. A gift base of $200,000 is needed, and we will be hearing more about the fund from our class representatives. Contributions should be addressed to the Class of 1938 Gift Fund, Office of University Advancement, at the College.

Members of the Class of '38 50th reunion committee are: Bertha Capps Sheeran and Jane Speakman Hauge (co-chairman), Robert Dew, Mildred Albee Babb, Virginia Betts Chapman, Dorothy A. Herron, Frances Jenkins Taylor, Horace G. Dyer, Robert Simpson, Carney Pearce, Annabel Hopkins Mitchell, Anne Thompson Graves, and Louise C. Hall.

Approximately 160 members of our class have been located and an all-out effort to locate others will be initiated. Our 50th reunion will be held in conjunction with graduation, May 13-15, 1988. Mark these important dates on your calendars. More details will be forthcoming.

HILL SCHOLARSHIP WINNERS NAMED

Two juniors at William and Mary have been awarded Frederick L. Hill mathematics education teaching scholarships. Lisa Clement of Springfield, Va., and Elizabeth Harmon of Wattsburg, Pa., have received the $1,000 awards, which will be used toward their college tuition. The scholarships are made possible by an endowment fund established by Mr. Hill, a Williamsburg resident, and a matching donation from his employer, the Anheuser-Busch Corporation. Mr. Hill set up the scholarships to emphasize the attention he feels should be given to a good preparation in mathematics.

Those of you who couldn't make our 45th reunion at Homecoming really missed a great weekend. Over 70 of our group attended, and our time together was heartwarming indeed. Our accommodations at the Holiday Inn 1776 were very nice — a fine hospitality room, though a distance from where we were scattered.

Most of us attended the Friday night Alumni Banquet. Our seats were near a loud speaker which made conversation difficult, but the dinner itself was outstanding.

The parade took place in a light rain and the luncheon had to be moved indoors. However, it cleared for the football game against the University of Richmond. It proved to be a very exciting game, and we won!

All gathered for our class dinner that evening. It was indeed fitting that Jack and Ann Garrett should be recognized for the outstanding job they have done these 45 years keeping us together and making arrangements for all these reunions, and Al Alley and Jack Purtil did just that. It was my pleasure, also to be thanked for these letters for the past 25-plus years, and the handsome brass trivet is much appreciated.

Jack Garrett had spent hours with Ann in the William and Mary library, and he put together a very nostalgic and entertaining slide show of headlines and pictures from Flat Hats of 1936-40. It represented a tremendous amount of work, which assuredly was appreciated. The program ended with a movie (in color yet!) taken by my father at our commencement. In shooting the film Dad thought that by turning the camera on its side he'd get a wider picture (like his ancient Kodak) so, though the pictures are lovely and clear, they required a lot of neck bending — a comedy of errors, so to speak, ending the evening on a light-hearted note.

Those classmates at our reunion were: Scrib and Ginny Clauden Allen, Al Alley, Bill and Lil Waymack Amburgey, Chet and Helen Jones Baker, Jean Clarahan Bratton, Nils and Gervais Wallace Brekke, "Casey" and "Cookie" Cason, Al and Janet Wood Chestnut, Frank Cuseo, Nina and Stan Ebb, Mary and Merritt Foster, Marj and Vance Fowler, Jack and Ann Garrett, Virginia Garrett, Charles and Mary Holmes Hall, Bill and Chris Cowan Halsey, "Gus" Hanna, Frank and yours truly, Bob and Marie Harris Hoffman, Bob Lansburgh who brought his new bride, Helen, Elmo Legg, Rosa Ellis Long, Carolyn Moses Lusardi, Bill and Ruth Ann Holzmueller Mahood, Mildred and Ed Miller, Sonja and Bob Newton, Eldon and Louise Eppinger Nuernberger, Harriet and Jack Purtil, Charlie Quittmeyer, Fran Wagener Read and her daughter Fran Bergquist '68, Marilyn and Charlie Roberts, Liz and Sy Shwiler, "Billy" Holmes Slaughter, Willard and Florence Mode Smith, Bill and "Jimmy" Elliott St. John, Clarence Suber, George and Hope Biting Szabo, Joe and Sue Duncan Thomas, Margaret and Rudy Tucker, Leah and T. Waller, John and Betty Wood Walton, Ed and "Dinny" Forwood Wetter and Walt and Betty Carter Zable. We also saw Jane and John Barba at the game. Isn't that an impressive list?! I hope I haven't left anyone out.

Before reporting on my Christmas cards and other news, I had a nice letter from Carlton Laing back in Oct. right after the last deadline. He said he gave up ideas of attending Homecoming because of two other transcontinental trips he had to make in Nov. and Dec. He says "Do plan a great 50th in 1990! I'll go!" Well, we'll do our best. Carl says

SCHOLNICK NAMED GRADUATE DEAN

Robert J. Scholnick, professor of English at William and Mary, has been named dean of graduate studies for the Faculty of Arts and Sciences. Scholnick, who began his duties on Jan. 1, replaced Rolf G. Winter, professor of physics, who will take a year's leave of absence to pursue research activities. A native of Boston, Scholnick has been a member of the faculty since 1967. He received his A.B. degree from the University of Pennsylvania and his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Brandeis University.

he's been appointed by the board of supervisors to serve as a director on the Sacramento County Board of Retirement. "Otherwise busy raising my five-year-old" — and that's his SON not grandson! Sorry this has taken so long to get in, Carl.

Betsy Green Breman says she spends her winters in Naples, Fla., and summers in Upstate New York. Her daughter (class of '76) is an accountant in Schenectady, N.Y., while her son lives in N. Kingstown, R.I., and is a musician. Betsy travels when she can and recently has been to Northern Italy, Alaska, and the Panama Canal.

Frank Rafto is currently serving as the chairman on the Loudoun County Board of Supervisors and will be completing 16 years on that board. A clipping from the Washingtonian names him "Best Public Official" and "Mr. Loudoun County." Congratulations, Frank!

Now Christmas cards:

GINNY ALLEN'S poem-story and darling picture of two-year-old Nicholas, Scrib and her, arrived before I'd collected myself for Christmas. We'd just said a fond goodbye at Homecoming and BOOM, here's poetry all printed and a rundown on 1985. SOME people are so organized! She and Scrib divide their time between Palm Desert, Calif., and Burlington, Vt., with much travel to and fro. Scrib plays lots of tennis, and Ginny swims and does lots of writing and is a polo correspondent for some newspapers. Daughter, Pam (Nicholas' mother), is teaching learning disabled children in St. Paul and son, Jeff, who was valedictorian of his class at Antioch, has opened an office in Burlington where he is a psychotherapist. He also finds time to lecture on birds of prey and work on environmental issues.

"Cookie" Cason's Chronicle, 1985, was tonic as usual and most enjoyable. Both she and "Casey" had cataract surgery and lens implants so now they have a good pair of eyes between them! They can now follow their golf balls and read street signs again. They bought Eastern "Get Up and Go Passes" this year and they did "go" but not as much as they might have if Cookie didn't have over 250 orchids that demand a lot of attention. She works as a volunteer in the orchid greenhouses at Selby Botanical Gardens in Sarasota, and they sell orchids and she's "weak-willed"!

A nice card from Bud and Mary Holmes Hall, and thank you for the picture of Jack and Ann Garrett and me taken at Homecoming. Mary says they will spend Feb. and March in Naples, Fla., and en route home in April they are taking an Elderhostel course in Highlands, N.C.

We were indeed saddened to hear from Bobbie Milligan Molyneux that she lost her husband, David, Nov. 18 after a short illness. As planned she has moved back to Dansville, N.Y., to be closer to her family.

A fine picture card from Rosa Long saying how she enjoyed the reunion. Her next trip was to be to the National Cathedral in Washington for the installation of our new presiding bishop Ed Browning in Jan.

Hope Hunt White writes that they've had a busy year. Son, John, found the girl of his dreams and tied the knot at Ft. Leavenworth in June. His bride is an Army major and they're stationed in the D.C. area. After 35 years she says it's nice to have a daughter-in-law. Hope says they got "side-swiped" by hurricane Elena. After three days in a shelter they returned to find the house dry but minnows in the swimming pool, and they lost most of the landscaping. They were lucky and thankful. She's sorry to miss the 45th but intends to make the 50th! Great, so do we!!

Our son, Daniel, his Ann and little William were with us for 10 days before returning to The Hague. In early Jan. our family gathered to have an early celebration of Frank's 70th which is later in the month.

Time passes too quickly but we're thankful for our family, good health and happiness. A Happy New Year to one and all and do let me hear from you soon and often.

A good letter from Margaret Dunham reporting on her activities. Last summer a family reunion in Berkeley, Calif., some news of Homecoming, where she chatted with Tom Crane and Regina Williams, and a wide variety of community jobs that keep her very busy.

Talked with Betsy Wakeman Serbell recently. She has retired from teaching in Whittier, Calif., and runs a full-time weaving and yarn business. She is also president of the Southern California handweavers guild. We hope to get together in Jan. sometime.

I'll quote from Janice Harvey's letter, as she says it better than I can. "I'm retiring in Feb. after 15 years at Educational Testing Service in Princeton, N.J. — most of this time as program director for the College Board's Student Search Service. Prior to that I was director of admissions at Douglass College of Rutgers University in New Brunswick, N.J. I plan to continue to live in Somerset, N.J. and pursue my interests in playing the organ and duplicate bridge, traveling, and burning up the turnpike to New York City for opera and theater."

Virginia Alexander Jacocks writes that her husband, Claude, retired from Conoco, and that they returned home to Virginia after 40-plus years away. They have three children — Ellen, a microbiologist at St. Luke's Hospital in Houston; Alex, a surgeon in Oklahoma City; John, a doctor, commander of the 5th General Dispensary in Bad Tolz, Germany; and four grandchildren.

My household seems to be all female these days, including my dog, Christine. My 93-year-old mother is doing quite well, and daughter, Ruth, is here too and a big help. Planning and hanging art shows at our cultural center, a small wearable art business and a brand new appointment to the board of directors of the College of Osteopathic Medicine of the Pacific in Pomona, keeps me going. Please keep those letters coming.

A news release from the American Judicature Society brings us information. Robert L. Weinberg, a partner in the Baltimore law firm of Weinberg and Green, has been re-elected to the Board of Directors of the American Judicature Society, a national organization for the improvement of courts.

"A graduate of Johns Hopkins University and the University of Maryland School of Law, Mr. Weinberg served as chairman for two statewide conferences sponsored by the Society and the Maryland State Bar Association to help create the Maryland District Court System. He is a former assistant state attorney general and is a member of the Baltimore City, Maryland State and American Bar Associations and the Maryland Bar Foundation, and the American College of Real Estate Lawyers."

A short but welcome note from Beverly Postles Tyler says that she has retired after 15 years of teaching in Sussex County schools.

'80 ALUMNUS NAMED TOP VIRGINIA JOURNALIST

George H. Stukenbroeker '80, a former Flat Hat editor, has been named the 1985 Virginia Newspaper Journalist of the Year by the Virginia UPI Newspaper Association for his work as a reporter for the Newport News Daily Press/Times Herald. Now a reporter in the Williamsburg bureau of The Richmond Times-Dispatch, Stukenbroeker was cited for a series he did on foreign espionage in the heavily militarized Hampton Roads area. The series preceded exposure of the Walker family spy ring there. A history major at William and Mary, Stukenbroeker joined The Times-Dispatch staff in November.

from Wayne and Marge Retzke Gibbs in Hawaii. An outline of "Gibbses, Goin's — 1985" indicates we'll all have a time keeping up with the Gibbses, or even keeping track of them. A few highlights will explain. June of '85 was a busy month finding the Gibbses in Northfield, Mass., for Wayne's 45th prep school reunion. Then on to Cornwall, Ontario, Canada, and finally Lake Placid, N.Y., for the annual Airstream Rally. In Oct. New Zealand was their goal with the International Caravan Association; Nov. and Dec. they reached Australia and Fiji respectively. The holidays were spent in Kailua, Hawaii, where they were joined by their sons and wives.

I was fortunate to receive the Christmastide message from Rev. and Mrs. John Paul Carter. Jack was installed as rector of St. John's Church, Ellicott City, Md. Although Jack and Joan had been planning to retire to Sewanee, Tenn., a current need of the parish caused a change in plans. Joan Worstell Carter '45 is pursuing her genealogical researches. Steve, their oldest, received his B.A. with high honors in geography at the University of Maryland, and is now a graduate student and teaching assistant at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio. Chris had a daughter, Katherine Elizabeth, in May, and is now working as a licensed family counselor in Massachusetts. Janet, the mother of two-year-old David, teaches at St. Ann's School, Charlottesville, Va. Andy, who received his master's degree at Wharton School of Finance, is in marketing research with Young and Rubicam in New York City. 'Ginia is completing her degree in graphic arts at the University of Maryland, and Tom has completed his thesis in materials science at Duke and received his master's in Dec.

An enthusiastic Christmas card from Jane Thomas Folk '45, reveals a wonderful family gathering in McLean, Va. Son Tom, his wife, Anne, and two daughters will fly from Germany to join Jane and Colonel Ted Folk. Son Rob and his wife, Brenda, are coming from California. Sue, husband, Iraj, and young son, Bijan, will complete the reunion. One more note: watch for a made-for-TV film titled "The Prince of Belair." The musical score is by Robert Folk.

Another excerpt from a Christmas card, Eleanor Dumper Singer of Garden City, N.Y. Ellie and Bill are long-time residents of Garden City, as are their two married sons.

"Qui Transtulit Sustinet."

Notes from Sunny Trumbo Williams:

Gwen asked me for some '44 news, so here goes:

Homecoming was great, a bit rainy, but we beat Richmond for the greatest upset at Homecoming in years!

We didn't see as many people since the luncheon Saturday was moved to William and Mary Hall. We tailgated (in the rain) with our son and daughter (W&M) and their friends.

Jean Boyd Lacy, Ben, Rolf and I joined in '45's festivities. Also at their dinner were the Fosters, Marge Talle Merriman and Jack.

Dropped by Lois Spratley Donald's (and Doug's) elegant new house after the game. Saw the Merritt Fosters, Dixon Fosters and Sandersons, Youngs, Jane Craig Beaver and Bob, Entwistles, Kings, Smiths, Mary Hamner Burton and husband and many others.

Bill and Jane Spencer Smith put on a good tennis tournament and Marilyn Miller Entwistle and I represented '44 (didn't win though). The Entwistles have sold their home in Pennsylvania and are real Williamsburg residents.

Spied Louise Spalding Hollis at the '45 suite, all excited about Martha's engagement. A W&M grad, she's published a book recently.

Had dinner at the Inn Saturday night with a group. Jane Rohn Tabish is still our class glamour girl. She told us she was selling her shoe stores and is building houses in Princeton. Said Billy Snead and her husband were in Williamsburg for the weekend. I didn't see them, but she said they live in Baltimore.

Missed Marge Retzke and Wayne Gibbs (on a trip), Dot Agurt Edmunds and Dave (a sick relative). Saw Don Ream and wife at the sunset ceremony at the Wren Building.

Great to have Joan Kable Griffith's husband, Max, with us (from Charleston). Toured the wonderful DeWitt Wallace Museum with him and Bob and Fran Brunner and Ruthie Weimer Tillar and K.T. Don't miss it!

The President's House Committee had a great trip to Winterthur and to D.C. to see the British exhibit. Lois Donald, Jerry Healy Clay and I were among the group that enjoyed lunch with the Thomas Graveses and then a beautiful party after our tours at Chandler Farm. Great to see that hospitable couple. In D.C., believe it or not, our guide was Deek Phipps Shryock '46.

Anne Dobbie Peebles was officiating at all kinds of events, President's Inauguration and Homecoming. She was enjoying the many '45 Tri Deltas that returned (about ten). The Thetas, too, had a large contingent — all looked great. Lee Ann Avery Merrifield and Edie March came from Houston. Nancy Keene Norman and husband have moved from Australia to Charlottesville. She, Sheila Stewart, June Neff, and I were reminiscing about our summer in Mexico. Suzy Parsons Cosgrove and Cliff have recently moved to Cape Cod.

We were at a dinner at the Swedish Consul General's recently for past Nobel Prize Winners. Concerned that I couldn't converse with such brilliant folk, I was delighted to find that my dinner partner's daughter had just graduated from William and Mary! No problem conversing after that!

Deadline date — that certainly has an ominous tone about it and it rolls around much too quickly. Christmas has come and gone, but I did receive several nice notes on cards with family news and words of encouragement. Ellen Irvin Newberry gave a glowing account of their daughter's wedding in June. Virginia Ratcliffe attended the gala function and also included pictures of the event. Henrietta Kapler Margraf planned to travel to Iowa for a family gathering of her clan. Henzie also hopes to make our 40th next year and I trust many more of you have similar plans! Doris Brandt Bauer and George became first-time grandparents in Nov. They are enjoying the new title and the retirement status as well. Brief notes from Priscilla Fuller Downs and Carolyn Kreyling Folz. Priscilla Norris Moore added grandchild number seven in the family in Oct.

Catherine Mitchell Holladay's daughter, Hilary, is a graduate student in English at the College. Tas loves hearing about Williamsburg first hand. She had sent a copy of her recent article on fraktur to the Alumni Office, and they in turn forwarded it to me. It appeared in the Sept. issue of The Antique Trader Weekly, and I now appreciate those old artistic records much more.

You will find Jeanette Freer Scantlebury in her Herb Shop at the historic Belle Meade Mansion in Nashville. She also has a mail-order and wholesale business. Jan also mentions hopes of making the reunion in '86.

Dr. George R. Brunk II is an ordained Menonite minister and is presently president of Brunk Revivals, Inc. George received B.D., Th.M. and Th.D. degrees from Union Theological Seminary. He is dean emeritus

CAREER PLANNING NEEDS ALUMNI HELP

Many William and Mary students count on summer earnings to help defray their college costs during the academic year. To help as many students as possible locate summer jobs each year, the offices of Career Planning and Placement coordinate a Summer Job Bank. Alumni can support these efforts by notifying the planning and placement offices of any job openings they may have in their organizations. Job description forms are available from the Career Planning Office, Morton Hall 140, or by calling (804) 253-4427.

PAST ISSUES AVAILABLE OF COLONIAL ECHO

Past issues of the Colonial Echo yearbook for the following years are for sale for the price of $12 per copy: 1972, 1976, 1980, 1982, 1983, and 1984. Checks should be made payable to the Colonial Echo and sent to The Colonial Echo, Campus Center, College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, VA. 23186.

BANK PROMOTES '70 GRADUATE

R. Allen Bowen '70 has been promoted to systems manager, Information Management Group, by The Life Insurance Company of Virginia. Bowen, who joined the company in 1984, will have responsibilities equivalent to those of a vice president, according to Samuel H. Turner, president and chief executive officer.

of Eastern Mennonite Seminary, author, lecturer, professor of theology, Bible teacher, tour guide and a licensed pilot. He is married and the father of four sons and one daughter.

Martha Adams and I had a delightful phone conversation one evening in the fall. Tippy retired from her job as a civilian chemist with the Army. She was first at Aberdeen Proving Ground and later transferred to Fort Belvoir, and is currently living in Crofton, Md., and enjoying her retirement to the fullest.

Dorothy Hammer was the tour guide for the recent William and Mary alumni trip to Australia and New Zealand, from mid-Oct. to Nov. There were 15 in the group, which included Mary Sue Ebling, who is a retired Navy commander now living in Ormond Beach, Fla. Dottie also plans to be the guide for the upcoming alumni tour to Spain and Portugal in April. Prior to that event, she is taking a tour group to Hawaii in Feb., which sounds ideal!

Florida turf gained another class member within the last year — Marcia Levering Balzereit and George moved from Rydal, Pa., to Stuart for their retirement days and found, by chance, one of their closest neighbors to be none other than Eleanor Herman Pustay and Fred. Back to the "small world" category!

We had the pleasure of having Nancy Grube Williams as our weekend guest in Oct. and together attending the inaugural ceremonies for Dr. Paul R. Verkuil '61. We were joined by Frank Davis, Fritz Zepht and Fred Frechette with their wives for the grand occasion, which seemed a mini-homecoming. Grubie is heading for Reno the end of Jan. — strictly on business, but I wouldn't mind being tucked in her suitcase.

Ann Davison has been east to Washington twice recently to place her mother in a retirement home.

I shall continue to anticipate hearing from others about their activities and accomplishments — don't forget me.

My class notes this quarter will be a potpourri of news that I have learned via letter, Homecoming, and notes from the Alumni Office. I feel slightly apprehensive about this letter ever appearing in the Gazette because I have, for the first time in the years that I have been writing the class notes, missed the deadline. I am truly sorry and have no excuses other than being busy (and who isn't) and having thought the date was a double digit number when it was a six (— of January).

A Christmas card from Ann Potterfield Gregory brought the news that their three-year "vacation" on the outer banks of North Carolina has come to an end. She and her husband, Brodie, have moved to Mathews, Va. I share Ann's hope that now they will be seeing us all at Homecoming each year!

A news release from the National Park Service brings us up to date on Joan Lyon of Alexandria, Va., who has been named this year's most outstanding volunteer at the lower end of the George Washington Memorial Parkway, a unit of the National Park service. Joan is the behind-the-scenes organizer for events such as the annual Teddy's Birthday Celebration commemorating the birth of the nation's 26th president, an event attended by more than 200 people. She was also instrumental in organizing the publicity for the Fort Hunt Park concert series which were held for the first time this summer. Top volunteers have been selected from more than 4,000 persons who served the needs of 28 park sites in the National Capitol Region of the National Park Service. These volunteers, all enrolled under the nationwide volunteer-in-parks program of the National Parks Service, contributed more than 143,000 hours in 1985.

Mark Waldo writes from Montgomery, Ala., that the nave of the church of which he is rector was gutted by fire in June of 1984. I believe I mentioned this in an earlier newsletter. Mark brings us up to date, however, by saying that they rededicated the Church of the Ascension on Thanksgiving Day — a most appropriate date! The cost of restoration and adding new facilities amounted to more than $4 million. When the extensive additions are completed next summer, Mark will have served as rector for 25 years.

Bill and I were delighted to have Christmas cards from so many of you: Bill and Jane Smith, Jean and Buddy Boudreau, John and Janet Pierce Waller, Elaine Campton Baker and Jim, and many others. Thank you. Every one of you will have a personal note from us next year when I get organized or, at least, retired.

Homecoming was great, as usual! We enjoyed seeing all of you who made it down to the "Alma Mater of a Nation," and we are counting on each and every one of you next year, for sure!

Billy May and Nathalie made it to Norfolk a month or so late to see her family for Christmas, I understand — next year see if you two can't get to Homecoming!

In the meantime, have a happy New Year!

As I write this column for the first time I want to express our sincere thanks to Marge Huff Brown for her devoted efforts in class reporting for 30 years! I understand that she plans to do some traveling with her husband. Marge, keep us posted on what you are doing.

So much news came in about our class members that it has been thoroughly enjoyable to read and write about it. I think the lead story should be that Mary Maples Dunn was inaugurated on Sept. 29 as the eighth president of Smith College. The ceremony must have been something with a 15-minute procession of delegates from 65 colleges and universities, led by students carrying the flags of all 50 states, as well as the standards of the 50 countries represented in the Smith student body! According to the news report, Mary was greeted as she stepped to the podium, with the thundering of stomping feet, and a delegation of her former colleagues from Bryn Mawr, where she served as dean of the undergraduate school, stood to give their college chant and bid her farewell. Julia Child, a Smith alumna, served as consultant for all the inaugural meals, creating a special dish "Crepes Maples Dunn en Flammes," which was served at the post-inaugural garden party. Sounds like something we would all like to have attended!

Rene A. Henry Jr., who resides in Los Angeles, has recently been appointed to several positions. He has been named a special adviser to The President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports and as a special consultant to the National Fitness Foundation. In addition, Rene has been appointed a member of the public relations committee of the United States Olympic Committee.

And speaking of fitness, I see from a news clipping dated Nov. 26, that Gordon Vliet, who used to direct the Society of the Alumni at the College, is combining his many talents (planned many college tours) and is now owner of the Norfolk-based company Health Ventures. This company offers special vacation programs that "immerse travelers in a healthy schedule." It seems that more and more people (and organizations) are looking for the healthy way to go where food and exercise are concerned. I'm all for it!

Before leaving health and fitness, I will share that AXO sister, Shirley Haabestad Hollen, and husband, Gene, who live in Bernardsville, N.Y., are into exercise in a big way. Shirl, who was a tennis player at the College, is still into tennis, platform tennis, jogging, Nautilus workouts, and if that isn't enough, she and Gene gave each other exercise bikes for Christmas! Their sons, Ken and Jim, both completed M.B.A.'s last year (Harvard and Stanford) and are now employed by Rolm and McKinsey respectively. Last child, Debbie, is a senior at the College. I am pleased that the Hollens visited North Carolina, my new state, during the year and wrote in their Christmas letter that went to all their friends — not just those in N.C.! — "We wanted to see what everyone has been raving about as far as N.C. is concerned. And N.C. does have just about anything one could want! Seashore! Mountains! Stimulating University centers!" Thanks, Shirley.

Karlee Smith Gifford and family reside in New Haven, Conn., where husband, Bob, is professor of medicine at Yale University School of Medicine and associate dean of medical education and student affairs. Karlee works part time as the librarian for the Cowles Foundation for Research in Economics at Yale University. Their four children, David, 23, Bruce, 21, Jenny, 20, and Suzy, 18, are at Case Western Reserve Medical School, University of Vermont, William and Mary, and Kenyon respectively. Good to see our College among that nice array!

Francis Joseph (Mickey) MacCoy III is now living at 1301 Sea Hawk Lane, Vero Beach, FL 32963, where he is associated with the Ronald Rathbun real estate company. Mickey also is involved with his own corporation that develops, constructs and manages single-family housing in the Vero Beach area. He and his wife have started their own business dealing in image consulting for women and men.

A note from Stanley Ward reveals that he retired from the Army on Feb. 1, 1985, after serving 30 years and achieving the rank of colonel. He is currently working with BETAC, a small firm in Arlington. Sadly, his 28-year-old son Stephon D. Ward was killed in an automobile accident in Vermont. Our sincere condolences to you, Stan.

John H. Tucker has been making news as headmaster of Virginia's oldest secondary school, Norfolk Academy. The Academy was among 281 public and private schools from across the nation honored in Oct. at the White House by President Reagan and U.S. Secretary of Education William J. Bennett. The Norfolk school was the only private school in Virginia, and one of a total 65, recognized as a model school for the nation, meeting 13 criteria to win recognition. Among the criteria was "challenging students to engage in complex reasoning and to grow in intellectual and moral judgements."

Sarah Hurst Keller and husband, Dick, both retired during 1985 from government work in Washington and have bought a home in Manassas with frontage on the Occoquan River. Their house, gardening, and travel will consume their time. But Sally, a Bostonian who used to room with me at the Alpha Chi house, writes, "Did you ever think I'd settle in Virginia, and right in the heart of Civil War activity? If I ever have time I'll work on the family genealogy and maybe I can turn up a southerner among all the northerners." Good luck!

A news release dated Dec. 13, from Richmond brings the word that Allan Denny Ivie III is again making news in the designer world. Denny has been awarded the annual Designer of Distinction Award from the Virginia Chapter of the American Society of Interior Designers. Alumni will recall that Denny has been involved with the refurbishing of the President's House at the College, and some of his other projects include the refurbishing of Alumni Hall at the University of Virginia and advising on the fabrication of window treatments for the period at Stratford Hall, the Lee family home. When questioned about his citation Denny said he "always stresses quality rather than quantity," and tries to work with clients in a very personal way."

A letter from Henretta Trent Band brings news that Jean Carlson Scheibe and husband, Murray, are living in Santa Barbara, Calif., and enjoy the parental status of having all their children out of college now. Jean and Murray visited Austria, Germany and Belgium this past fall and enjoyed the three-day Rhine cruise. Retta and husband, Neal, are on the faculty at Michigan State University where they both do research. Her research deals with the cold-hardy drosophilid (a type of little "fruit fly") which "extolled in genetics texts are still the most commonly used organisms in molecular, developmental and population studies world-wide." Retta writes that she spent five weeks doing studies at Mt. Lake Biological Station during the summer and that it was enjoyable to be back in both the Virginia academic and mountain climate. Retta also reports that she had an article, "Patrick Henry and the Fight against Religious Tyranny," in the Nov. DAR Magazine, saying it was "motivated by the fact that an earlier article on the topic of Separation of Church and State made no mention of Virginia." Her daughter, Beth, now in her third year at MSU, is studying year round doing a five-year double degree in physics and astrophysics.

A few years ago at our 25th reunion I was fortunate to sit next to Betty Bodley Dunker at dinner and learn that she is a resident of Greensboro, N.C.! We have become great friends, and with my new job as Class Reporter I know that I will have a great source of information — especially from the Pi Phi! Betty still enjoys teaching at Greensboro Day School and her husband, Bill, is manager of Custom Business Systems. Her daughter Liz is a senior at the University of Georgia, daughter Janet works in Charlotte, and son Brad works in Greensboro. Betty heard via a Christmas card from Barbara and Bill Brink of New Haven, Conn., that they had seen John Westberg and his wife, Nina, at Homecoming and the Westbergs planned to be back in Washington, D.C., for a time.

In 1985 my husband, Phil, and I celebrated our 25th wedding anniversary and graduated two children: daughter Lee from Wake Forest and son Ray (M.B.A.), from Case-Western Reserve. We gave ourselves a four-week trip to Europe and visited youngest daughter, Morgan, who was a Rotary Exchange student in LaRochelle, France, and is now a student at Chapel Hill. Ray, who was a Duke undergraduate, is employed at Research Triangle Park (Silicon Valley East) and Lee in Greensboro. We all are happily situated in North Carolina and invite you to visit and send letters.

ONE LAST NOTE: Shirley Hollen, who is serving as Class Agent, asks that we ALL give "wholeheartedly" to the Annual Fund. I look forward to hearing from many more of you before the April 3 deadline!

ROBERT WACHS '61 ESTABLISHES SCHOLARSHIP ENDOWMENTS

Robert D. Wachs '61 of New York City has established two scholarship endowments honoring his father, Irving Wachs, and his principal client, comedian Eddie Murphy. The Eddie Murphy Scholarship will provide financial assistance to minority students from the New York area on the basis of academic merit. The Irving Wachs Scholarship will assist students interested in pursuing study in philosophy, also on the basis of need and academic merit. Wachs, a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Omicron Delta Kappa leadership fraternity at William and Mary, is a graduate of the Harvard Law School. A native New Yorker who majored in philosophy and worked with Professor Howard Scammon '34 in the William and Mary Theatre, Wachs has focused on managing entertainers, with the majority of his time now spent on Eddie Murphy's career. Murphy first appeared in The Comic Strip, a comedy club Wachs opened with a friend in New York in 1976.

ALUMNUS APPOINTED NASA DEPUTY CHIEF SCIENTIST

Joseph K. Alexander '60 has been appointed to the position of Deputy Chief Scientist for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. In his new position, Alexander, who joined the NASA Goddard Space Flight Center in 1962, will assist NASA's Chief Scientist in advising the Administrator and establishing policy related to specific aspects of the programs and missions of NASA. A native of Staunton, Va., Alexander received his B.S. degree in physics from William and Mary in 1960 and his M.S. in physics from the College in 1962.

Joy Schlappizzi Thunstrom and Len sent a nifty Christmas card created by the A.S.P.C.A., as well they might. Their "family" includes five dogs and eight cats. Included in the card was a nifty photograph of their grandson David, 15 months old and already a charmer. Joy hears from Dick Gatehouse and Rosemary frequently. The Gatehouse kids, Mark and Holly, are both grown up and married. Joy also reports that Joan Marsh Myers is now living up in Minnesota — brrrrrr.

Ann Dennis Lewis keeps busy as a freelance photographer. Lew '54 is still with C&P.

Elizabeth Hiner Swecker is now principal of Highland High School. Her children, Kim and Jesse, live in Richmond. Kim is married and Jesse toils at Wheat First Securities.

Laura Lou Lawson Struthers sent a cheerful card enclosing a long letter about her busy life. Tom had a full year with his work with the Pittsburgh Ballet, a Pepsi TV commercial, sets for the Pittsburgh Civic Light Opera and on and on! Thomas is a sophomore at the University of Wisconsin. Charles is a senior in high school, a budding architect. John is in third grade, much involved in soccer. Laura is an active elder and chairman of the Christian Education Committee. She was a delegate from her church to the National Triennial Conference of the United Presbyterian Church Women at Purdue University. She is also membership chairman of her sorority alumnae group. She listed several other activities plus the fact that she plans to work part-time as a tax preparer later this year. Whew!

That's the budget of news this time 'round — all from the female side of the aisle. Come on, guys, loosen up and brag a bit. Also plan to reunion in the 'Burg in the fall. It doesn't seem like 30 years ago that we graduated, but it was. Come on down.

I really enjoyed our 25th! It was nice to see that no one had aged! The Gamma Phi's had a good turnout at the Sheraton Patriot Inn. There was myself, Sallye Branham Nahill '61, Carole Waller Welborn and Jerry '58, Peggy Clement Haines and Barry, Kathy McCurdy Sterner and Gary and Janet Caldwell Elling and Mike. Judi Urian Lownes and Ken were staying close enough to partake of the sessions after the reunion events.

It took two days, but I finally met up with my roommate, Gin-Anne Joyce Conger. She, George '58, Mike Colleton and Maureen and I were among the many enjoying the hospitality suite after the victorious game! It was fun seeing some Ludwell faces like Nancy Read Burkhardt and Vern, at the cocktail party.

I know that I haven't mentioned many of those I saw, but now you can write to make sure that your name is in the next column! A bit of fame came to our class during the weekend. Carole Welborn and her partner won the tennis tournament. But Jerry Welborn and I put up a gallant fight!

From the alumni office I also got lots of news. Frank Cornell has been living in Columbia, S.C., since graduation and is working in the insurance business. He has two daughters at home, two married, and two grandsons.

Debbie McMahon O'Hara is living in the Baltimore, Md., area, where she is enjoying her work with the Baltimore Symphony, tennis, trips to Williamsburg, and her fewer car pools! Two of her children graduated from the University of Richmond, one is a junior at Villanova, and one is a freshman at Western Maryland. Two more children are still in high school.

Raymond "Chip" Mason, the president of Legg Mason, became the head of the Securities Industry Association at its annual meeting Dec. 6.

Mary Lou Hagan Taylor received her M.A. in management and supervision from Central Michigan University in 1984. She assumed a position as management analyst for the performance standards support office of the Defense Logistics Agency in Richmond, Va., in June 1984.

Jane Clemens Ambrose Parker is living near New Hope, Pa. She has three daughters; one is a junior at Juniata College.

Fay Young Kaufman and her husband, Les, and 13-year-old son, Kyle, live in Hidden Hills, Calif. Five years ago she started Catherine Kaufman Designs.

Nicholas St. George has been named trustee for a three-year term on the board of the Endowment Association of the College of William and Mary.

Nancy Petty is working as a reator with Howard Perry & Walston and as a builder with Petty Builders, Inc. She finds little time to enjoy her new condo at Pebble Beach, Emerald Isle, N.C.

Carol Krider Vaughn has four children in college: Miami (Ohio), University of Florida, Indiana University and Stephens College. One son is a high school senior, and her oldest daughter is getting her M.B.A. at Case Western Reserve and will be a May bride. C. L., herself, has been named coordinator of community relations at Mount Union College in Alliance, Ohio.

Bob Cree was recently appointed scout executive of the Tidewater Council, Boy Scouts of America.

Kathleen Schoonmaker is the head of Norfolk, Virginia's Gifted and Talented Program and is chairwoman of the Governor's Magnet School for the Arts regional advisory committee.

Rev. Dr. James Thomas has just resigned after eight years as dean of the faculty in order to return to full-time teaching of religion and philosophy at Marlboro College, Marlboro, Vt. He spent two weeks at an international seminar in Austria and also traveled to Israel last year. He traveled to China and Japan this year.

Nancy Carman DeRamus lives in Manassas, Va., and has been an upper elementary teacher for 20 years. She is a supervising teacher for student teachers from George Mason University in Fairfax, Va.

Mary Ellen L. Draper, her husband, David, and two sons live in Silver Springs, Md. David Jr. is an Echols Scholar at the University of Virginia.

Gayle Crabill Kerns, her husband, Waldon, and two of the three children are living in Blacksburg, Va. Their elder daughter, Laurie, graduated from the College in May and is now living in Arlington, Va. She is getting her master's in public policy at Georgetown University. Their other daughter, Kelly, is a senior in high school. Their son, David, is a freshman this year.

Mary Alice Adams Betts, her husband, Lee, and family live in Winter Park, Fla. Their daughter, Kathy, is a sophomore at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill and loves it. Keith, their son, is a senior in high school this year and hopes to attend the University of Florida next fall. Mary Alice is the administrative assistant at the local Girl Scout council, and Lee is still with Liberty Mutual.

Linda Lester Hagen and Jim and their four children live in Kent, Wash. Their oldest son, John, is a sophomore at the University of Washington. Charles will hit college next fall with Chris not far behind. Katie is still in elementary school.

Jackie Fleming was home to visit her mother in Dec. and found Upperville, Va., just the same. Jackie is a social worker for the V.A. Hospital in Denver, Colo.

Sandra Hancock Martin, Dr. David Martin '63, and their two sons live in Montvale, N.J. Their elder son, Todd, is a freshman at the College this year — the third generation to attend W&M on Sandy's side of the family. Their other son, Drew, is 16 years old. Sandy is still teaching at Ramsey High School in the Spanish department. She went to England with the English students from the high school last Easter. Great fun, Sandy says, but no sleep! David works at Teledyne Isotopes where he is testing for radon in homes — a big topic in N.J.

Judy Case Falkenrath, Jim, her husband, and their two children live in Annandale, Va. Judy works for Fairfax County in the Office for Children. Jim retired from the Army in July and now works for Honeywell Information Systems in their federal systems division. Michelle is in the 11th grade, and Michael is in the 7th grade. Last summer found all the Falkenraths visiting many of their Hawaiian friends.

Joan Buhlmann received tenure at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and has been recommended for promotion to associate professor. Joan wrote that her critical edition of Louis Le Caron's Dialogues (1556), co-edited with Donald Gilman of Ball State University is being published by Droz of Geneva, Switzerland, in the Textes litteraires francais series. It contains five philosophical dialogues, among the first in French. Playing the recorder with two groups provides Joan with some interesting leisure time activities.

John Muhlhausen is president of Muhlhausen Design and Associates, a Roswell, G., design firm specializing in environmental and corporate graphics. John was at the College until he transferred to the Rhode Island School of Design where he received his degree. His field is architectural, industrial and graphic designs and he has worked both in the United States and Denmark. He met his wife in Denmark. They were married in 1968 and have one son, age 10. In their free time the Muhlhausen family sail. John has kept in loose touch with his roommate, Bob Boyd, who is the treasurer of the San Diego Symphony.

It was great hearing from all of you and I hope you will drop me another line or two soon. For all the rest of you who love reading this column and says "I should write Nancy about my family and career" — DO IT NOW! I am waiting for your interesting news. HAPPY NEW YEAR to all of you!

Joseph Plumeri and his wife who live in Scotch Plains, N.J., entertained lots of alumni and friends at their home in Nov. prior to the W&M vs. Princeton game. Joe is a senior vice president at Shearson Lehman Brothers in New York City and is in charge of all sales and marketing. John and Maynard Williams Randolph were at the party as was President Paul Verkuil, who was the honoree. Charlotte Elder was up from Virginia as were Pete Stout and Tish Paschall. Lots of alumni from a wide range of classes attended. It was fun to see Don Beck and Susie at the game who came down from Cape Cod. Both of their boys are now in prep school in Virginia.

Late this fall I received a call from Pat Walsh '66 who also works for Merrill Lynch and is in charge of all cash management accounts (CMAs), IRAs, capital builder accounts and college builders accounts for Merrill Lynch customers. Pat and I were discussing how many William and Mary alumni are on Wall Street. In addition to Joe Plumeri at Shearson Lehman, Bob Andrialis '65 is a senior vice president at Standard & Poor's, Marshall Acuff is at Smith Barney as a senior vice president and Terry Glenn '63 is the executive vice president of Merrill Lynch Asset Management, Inc. Pat reported that his brother Art is an attorney in Arlington, Va. Pat is married to Margaret Kahn '66 and their oldest son is a freshman at Notre Dame.

Pamela B. Whitman lives in Dunkirk, Md., and is teaching high school Spanish. Her husband is an agent with the secret service. They have a son, Michael, who is in the 10th grade and a daughter, Jennifer, who is in the ninth grade.

Carol Evans Tetu is working in Washington, D.C., as a system analyst for Computer Sciences Corporation. Her son, Michael, is in his second year at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point and her daughter, Stephanie, is a student at T.C. Williams High School in Alexandria, Va.

On the Christmas card front, Ginnie Pierce Volkman's from Belgium just made me drool. They have traveled all over Europe and have lots of social activities with our Embassy and NATO ambassadors and new international friends. Kate is 12, Max, 8 and Fritz, 7. Ginnie is in her second year of French study and loves using the language on a daily basis. Ginnie, Al and family expect to come home next summer.

Marcia Ballard Scott and Tom were joyful over son David's first Christmas. They live in Aylett, Va.

It was so good to hear from Bobbie Mulcahey Frazier who is teaching high school French and has developed a program for gifted and talented children for the county. She is involved in physical fitness and her son Kip's many activities. Her husband, Bill, is with IBM. They live in Leesburg, Va.

Dick Kern and Sharon (Cosminsky) enjoyed Homecoming and were able to take their two sons who were "between" sports seasons.

This marks the 22nd year since we graduated from college. As I write this and note all the "senior vice presidents" and note that their children are young adults in college, I am struck that these are the same people who as young adults danced to "Runaround Sue," etc. (I heard that song over the holidays), on Saturday night in Williamsburg and that it has been 22 years since that new year. May we all recapture a bit of that youthful gaiety and have happy times in 1986.

1984-85 COLONIAL ECHO ISSUE DELAYED

Publication problems have delayed the 1984-85 edition of the Colonial Echo until March. 1985 graduates who left their name, address, and $2 mailing fee last year will have their books mailed to them directly from the company. All others must mail the above information and $2 mailing fee to the Colonial Echo, Campus Center, College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va. 23186.

holidays were nice and the new year will be your best ever. It is our 20th year since leaving William and Mary, and my how those years have flown! Start planning now to come back next fall and celebrate our 20th reunion!

Arthur and I enjoyed his 20th reunion in Nov., and I did get to see a few classmates. The rains Saturday morning chased most people into stores, but luckily the weather held during the football game and W&M beat the University of Richmond before a sell-out crowd at Cary Field.

At the game, I saw Dave Kern and his wife, Sandy McNeil '68. They are living in Kennett Square, Pa. (mushroom capital of the world), where Dave works for Container Corporation of America. They had their children Allison, 13, Craig, 10, and Lee, 8, at the game with them; Sharon Cosminsky Kern and Dick '64 also had their sons, Scott, 16, and Michael, 12, with them at the game. Dick works for Central Carolina Warehouses in Greensboro, and Sharon stays busy with volunteer work. I saw Debbie Thomas Pomeroy for a quick hello. Denny Taylor Kelly is vice president of Bouvier Associates, Inc., an advertising agency in Greensboro, N.C. Jim Dick and his wife Merrill Barber '67 live in Northern Virginia, where Jim is a guidance director at a McLean high school. Gail Morgan Bryant works for the CIA in Washington, D.C., and lives in Burke (Fairfax County). Babs Lewis Korman also works for the CIA and her husband, Jim '65, is an attorney.

Martha Wessells Steger and Tom '65 were at Homecoming, celebrating Tom's reunion year. Martha is anxious for our reunion next fall and mentioned Letty Lynn also plans to attend. Letty is godmother of the Stegers' 12-year-old daughter, Kathy. Martha participated in Career Exploration Day at the College this fall, as a member of the communication panel. She is now public relations manager for the Virginia Division of Tourism. In July, she received a second-place national communications award in public relations from the National Federation of Press Women.

Jennie Nottingham Bass resides in Americus, Ga., with her two daughters, 17 and 12, and her husband, Ron, who is the vice president of operations for Metalux Corporation, a fluorescent lighting manufacturer. Jennie stays busy with volunteer work through the Junior Service League. She made a trip to Williamsburg last fall with her daughter's seventh-grade class and enjoyed seeing the campus again.

Derris Raper has published a documentary survey of U.S. history entitled, The American Experience: Documents and Notes. He remains busy as the historiographer of the Diocese of Southern Virginia, authoring a series of articles on the colonial parishes in the diocese, which is being printed in the church newspaper.

Mary Brennan Alie and her husband, Ray '71, are both teaching — Ray in the management department at Western Michigan University and Mary in a middle school in Comstock, Mich. She is president of the Comstock Education Association for 1985-86 and writes this year will be a challenge, as it's a contract negotiation year for the union.

Robert Holmes is a staff member in the personnel office of the Rhode Island Department of Mental Health. He lives in Foster, R.I., where he is on the school board.

Linda Arey, special assistant to President Reagan and deputy director of the Office of Public Liaison, was grand marshal and speaker at the opening ceremonies of the Festival of Leaves this fall in Front Royal. Linda received her M.A. in Education from Wake Forest University and her J.D. from the University of Richmond School of Law.

Wilford Kale, Williamsburg news bureau chief of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, has been selected to the national board of the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi. He will be the Region 2 director, representing the professional and campus chapters in Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina and the District of Columbia. Wilford will be coordinator of the Region 2 annual convention to be held in April in Richmond.

Cecile (C.C.) Greider McKenzie is living in Morristown, N.J., with her husband and four children, ages 10 months to 11 years. Although she writes her daily life is ordinary, she feels very grateful and blessed with her lovely family. A few years back, C. C. spent two years in Libya, which was very interesting, yet familiar after her years in Turkey with the Peace Corps. By accident, C.C. and Sharon Cosminsky Kern met on a NYC commuter train. After their surprise at seeing each other, they enjoyed their quick visit.

Grace "Gigi" Guin Schiff moved to San Diego, Calif., eight years ago; had two sons, Randall now 7 and Cameron, 4; divorced her husband of 10 years; and is now having more fun than ever with her own yacht chartering business, "Pacific Offshore Charters, Inc." Gigi is also involved with a separate yacht venture, "Yachts By Gigi." She works as liaison to the San Diego Chamber of Commerce finding yachts for the motion picture and television industry. When a producer or director needs a special vessel in Southern California, Gigi helps locate one. Gigi is presently serving a two-year term as president of the San Diego Alumni Chapter.

John Jacobson has been appointed commanding officer of Naval Reserve Naval Beach Group One, Detachment 119. His unit trains to coordinate all beach and ship-to-shore activities during an amphibious invasion. In civilian life, John works at Northrop Corporation Electronics Division as the automated scheduling unit manager. He lives in Canoga Park, Calif., and is married to Becky Smith '70. They have a daughter, Jennifer Anne.

Fran Gibson Verkuil is discovering that being first lady at the College can be interesting, but demanding. This fall was unusually full, with her husband Paul's '61 inauguration as the 25th president of the College. Along with a heavy social schedule, required of a college president's wife, Fran also has helped their children, Tara, 19 and a freshman at the College, and Gibson, 7, adjust to a new home and new schools.

Bob Trice began the new year by keeping his resolution to write and let our class know what he and his wife, Susan Saulmon, have been doing the past 17 and 1/2 years. (It couldn't have been that long, could it?) The Trices have been busy with varying jobs and moves. Bob writes, "Our first stop was Chicago where I attended the University of Chicago Graduate School of Business and went to work for the First National Bank of Chicago. After deciding I didn't want to be a banker, we went to Madison, Wis. Susan worked, we had our second child, Samantha (Rob had been born in Williamsburg in 1967), and I went to graduate school. In 1974, I got my Ph.D. in political science (international relations and foreign policy) from the University of Wisconsin, and we moved to Columbus, Ohio, where I was an assistant professor in the Ohio State Department of Political Science specializing in U.S. foreign and national security policy and Mid-East politics.

In 1978, we took a year's leave from Ohio State and moved to Washington, D.C., where I had been offered a temporary position in the Office of the Secretary of Defense. I left

DAVID R. RUCH '75

Northwest Orient Airlines had appointed David R. Ruch '75 to the position of director of sales - Orient Region. In his new position, Ruch will be responsible for the direction of marketing and sales activities for Northwest Orient's operations in Asia and the Pacific. Ruch joined Northwest Orient in Dec. 1978 as comptroller representative at John F. Kennedy Airport in New York and later served as assistant manager and manager - Korea.

academia and became director for counterterrorism policy, then director for technology and arms transfer policy at the Pentagon under President Carter. When the Republicans came in, I left the Pentagon and went to Capitol Hill, where I served as legislative assistant to U.S. Senator Dale Bumpers (D.-Ark) for foreign, defense and economic policy for almost three years. In the summer of 1983, I took a position with General Dynamics Corporation at their headquarters in St. Louis. I'm now corporate director, responsible for activities and operations in the Middle East."

Bob will be working out of the Washington office, and the Trices will move to McLean in Feb. He continues, "Susan has worked on and off over the years, but has specialized in the development of our two great kids. Rob, now 18, is a freshman at UVA. Samantha, 15, is a high school sophomore. Susan's major outside activity has been the League of Women Voters. For the past two years she has served as vice president of the St. Louis County League. My primary distraction has been rugby. After playing serious rugby for more than a dozen years, I now referee and play 'old boys' (over 35) rugby. The highlight of the year for me came in October when I traveled to London with the U.S.A. Owls old boy rugby team to play in the international 'Golden Oldies' tournament. There were 140 teams from around the world. It was a marvelous week of rugby, and the Owls went undefeated!" The Trices' new address is 6903 Ridgedale Ct., McLean, VA 22101.

As Carolyn Peery was leaving for Jakarta, she dashed off a note saying she was married in Oct. and has taken a leave of absence from GTE Telenet Communications to accompany her husband, Bruce Haslam. He has accepted an 18-month assignment working for the Indonesian Ministry of Education and Culture on a teacher education project.

Ed Herring is proud of his daughters. They excel in sports — especially tennis. Ed writes that Kathleen, 9, won the Tennessee championship in G 10 singles, and Jennifer, 16, and Deborah, 15, won the state championship in G 16 doubles. This was the first time three sisters had won state championships in the same year. Deborah has been named a high school All-American Tennis Player. She led the Tennessee Junior Wightman Cup Team to an intra-sectional championship. Deborah is ranked first in singles and doubles in G 16 in Tennessee. She also achieved southern and national ranking. Jennifer is a Chattanooga All-City Tennis Player and runs cross country.

Richard A. McKittrick has been named a new member of the Board of Overseers of the Bar for the state of Maine. The board is charged with superintendence of the legal profession and registers all lawyers authorized to practice in the state. Ric is a graduate of the University of Virginia School of Law. Following service as a law clerk to former Associate Justice Pomeroy of the Supreme Court, he began a law practice in Camden in 1974. He is chairman of the Maine State Bar Association section on general practice and is active in many civic organizations. He and his wife, Anne Hamilton '69, have four sons.

Literature and Love of the Sea is a new book of articles and essays discussing the role of the seas in America's cultural development edited by Patricia A. Carlson. The book is published by Rodopi Press of Amsterdam, Netherlands. Patti is a professor of American literature at Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology and has taught a course about literature and lore of the sea. She is also the author of Hawthorne's Functional Setting.

Gerald H. Burnett has been chairman of the Greene County School Board since 1984. He is a teacher for Albemarle County, Va., schools teaching computer education and gifted programs at the elementary level.

Mary Grace Cook Becker received her

M.Ed. in education administration and supervision from the University of Virginia in May 1985. She is an assistant principal in Caroline County, Va.

Jack Tompkins is assistant vice president for savings administration at First Federal Savings and Loan of Roanoke, Va. He is active in Democratic Party politics and has attended the last several state conventions.

Richard E. Lunsford is a biology teacher at Falls Church High School in Falls Church, Va.

Robin Wood Mann writes that she will soon be packing for the move from San Antonio, Texas, where Sheldon has done post-graduate work in dentistry. She says the Air Force could move them anywhere. She works two days a week as a receptionist-office manager in addition to taking care of Christopher, 13, Eric, 5, and Melissa, 3.

Gregory F. Jennings has been named partner-in-charge of Seidman & Seidman's Washington, D.C., office. Greg has been a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants since 1973. He joined Seidman & Seidman in 1980 and was admitted to the partnership in 1982. He has served as partner-in-charge of tax practice for the Washington office since 1982. He also received a master of science degree in taxation from American University in 1982. Greg is a member, past vice president and past director of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce. He also serves on the board of directors. He is chairman of the Alexandria Industrial Development Authority, a member and past director of the Greater Washington Board of Trade and corporate board member for the Alexandria Hospital. Greg resides in Alexandria with his wife, Linda.

Macon C. Sammons has resigned as city manager of Manassas, Va.

Thanks to all who wrote. I hope to receive letters from the rest of you soon!

And now we are five! Our family had a new arrival in Oct. — Theodore Hendrik — all 8 lbs., 13 oz. of him! A delightful child, he has made adjustment to three (Martha, 6, and Tommy, 3) quite easy for us all. Young Teddy was our "excuse" for missing Homecoming. However, Saturday morning I was sorely tempted to pack him up and catch a flight down!

Reports from Homecoming were good. The "keg party" moved indoors to the Campus Center, but a good time was had by all. Thank you to Bob Beason for all the planning and thank you to all of us who sponsored with $$$! Congratulations to Coach Jimmy Laycock for the football team's timely win over Richmond — and for another winning season!

Having left the Senate Committee in Washington, D.C. in early 1985, Cass Weiland returned to Corpus Christi, Texas, to practice with the 50-man law firm of Matthews and Branscomb. The firm also has an office in San Antonio. Cass and his wife had a second son, Frank, in Oct.

Living in Williamsburg, Herb Armstrong and family returned to Virginia in 1984 after two years in Texas. In August 1985 Herb left the Federal Aviation Administration after ten years to be coordinator of a new Airway Science Program at Hampton University. Their second daughter, Claire Marie, was born in Sept.

Condit Cooper Lotz quit teaching after 14 years and is enjoying her free time. Husband, Bill '71, purchased a small travel agency in downtown Atlanta. Bill and Condit enjoy the travel benefits, which complement their in-involvement in Masters' swimming. They both competed at an international swim meet in New Zealand in 1984. This summer Bill and Condit will travel to Toronto for another swim meet.

The Nov. 13 issue of The Chronicle of Higher Education included the announcement that James Douthat, formerly administrative vice president at Albion College, has been promoted to executive vice president.

Berie Gomez Grobe was promoted to special assistant to the general superintendent of human resources (i.e., head of personnel) in Dallas. In her new position, Berie is responsible for staffing 14,000 support and professional positions in the district. Berie and husband, Bob, were married last July and despite their busy schedules enjoy trips to Pagosa Springs, Colo., for skiing.

Judy Leeming Thompson is still doing executive search, and husband, Bob, works at National Steel and Shipbuilding. They recently moved to a 30-year-old home in the Point Loma area of San Diego, Calif.

From Anchorage to Washington, D.C., Major Bob and Barb Pate Glacel moved last June. Bob is at the Pentagon working for the deputy chief of staff for personnel in the Policy and Programs Analysis Office. He'll be promoted to lieutenant colonel this spring. Bob and Barbara bought their first "real house" in Burke, Va. Barbara, a full-time independent consultant with Barbara Glacel and Associates, has commuted once a month since last March between Washington, D.C. and Anchorage. ARCO Alaska is still her major client. In Washington, D.C., Barb does training, instructional design and research for several organizations including Hay Associates and the Army Research Institute. Barb looks forward to work with the Center for Creative Leadership in North Carolina.

Barbara Burket's Christmas letter told of another exciting sports adventure — hot air ballooning! Still in Santa Barbara with Raytheon, Barb has had a busy year: an 18-day raft trip down the Colorado through the Grand Canyon, a 10-day get-away to Paris (with road trip to Chartres, Versailles, Loire Valley), a ski trip to Utah, and as mentioned hot air ballooning. Barb is crew for a newly formed ballooning company in Santa Barbara. The job can get her up at 4 a.m. to set up the balloon for customers' one-hour champagne flights. Presently, the ballooning company hot airs out of the wine country northwest of Santa Barbara.

Reid Williamson, on the go again, sent a postcard from Mentor, Ohio, where he toured Lawnfield, home of 20th U.S. President James Garfield, before returning home to Virginia.

The last column's news from Steve Miller and the Taliaferro boys sparked a nostalgic "whatever happened to" note from Deac Manross who is, after a 13-year silence, letting us know what happened to him. Armed with his degree in sociology, Deac worked his way around Europe for a year and came back to get a master's degree in molecular genetics. (If the truth be known, he would have majored in biology but was devastated by a "C" in biology his first semester.) After that, he married — honeymooning in Williamsburg — and took a job teaching biology and computer science at Alliance College in northwestern Pennsylvania. After five years Deac was swept up in the personal computer revolution and got in on the ground floor with Apple Computer, Inc., in 1980. Swept "up" is right because he was their Salesman of the Year in 1983 selling Apples to the educational market and ending up managing a $50-million territory. "It was an experience of hyper-growth and travel I doubt I'll see again in a lifetime." For now Deac is taking a management sabbatical for a year and enjoying staying around home in a circa 1790s town in southern Ohio. He has three children — Brooke, 15, Aaron, 14, and Perry, 8. After all that, Deac would like to know how to contact Bruce Libonn, Roger Dillow, Mike Wildasin, Craig Whitham and Jim Miller. (And Deac, I wasn't a fellow sociology major; I majored in English.)

Joanne Dukeshire Pulliam is a teaching tennis pro who, when she wrote, was in temporary retirement because of the birth of a daughter, Karen Lynn. She joins three-year-old Michael. Don '71 is the manager of electrical systems engineering on a weather satellite built by RCA, which involves a fair amount of travel.

Things are booming for Dave Miller at Duke University. He was promoted to associate dean and director of M.B.A. programs at the Fuqua School of Business. Formerly he was director of admissions and financial aid. He passed along the information that a Wall Street Journal survey placed Fuqua School among the 10 leading business schools in the country. Dave and his wife are excited about a Sept. addition to their family, Kristin.

There is news of several classmates who entered the ministry. Doug Clark is director of adult education for the Diocese of Savannah, Ga. He studied at the Pontifical Biblical Institute at Rome, Italy. Art Thomas received his Th.M. from Union Theological Seminary in Richmond and his Ph.D. in 1981. He wrote an article on revivalism that appeared in the Journal of Presbyterian History.

Richard Beard is currently serving in the Air Force as a B-52 aircraft commander, but he is considering flying with a commercial airline. His wife, Elizabeth, is a former Air Force officer and nurse. They have two children — Cassandra, 9, and Jennifer, 7.

John Gleason works for Security Pacific, a large bank holding company, as a senior vice president in charge of the industrial term lending division. He and his wife have two sons and live in San Diego.

Scott Key, a doctor in private practice in Augusta, Ga., has been elected as a Fellow in the American College of Cardiology. The ACC is a nonprofit professional medical society and teaching institution. Scott attended medical school at Emory University School of Medicine in Atlanta.

Gary Franklin was promoted to vice president of Speitel Associates — Consulting Engineers/Scientists. (Hope I read the name of the company right.)

Last summer I had a reunion of sorts with three suitemates from freshman year at Ludwell. I saw Gayle Vester Pera who teaches elementary school in Arlington and has a six-year-old daughter, Ginnie. Doris Patterson Kidwell came from Harrisonburg where she has stopped teaching and is busy at home with two-year-old Tara. And Debbie Forster Thomas '71, who precipitated the whole thing when she came to Washington for a La Leche League conference from North Plainfield, N.J., definitely stays busy with her three children. And I am now working in the public relations department of Boeing Computer Services — a nice change from the hectic schedule of proposal work.

Guess that's it for now. Stay in touch.

PLACEMENT OFFICE OFFERS JOB HELP

William and Mary's Office of Placement is happy to assist alumni in job searching. Those who file an Alumni Qualification Record will be sent twice a month copies of "Career Placement Notes," which include current listings of job opportunities. Also, members of the placement staff will attempt to match job notices with individual interests and communicate directly with alumni. Robert P. Hunt, associate director, who is primarily responsible for working with alumni, invites individuals to contact him by phone or letter. Alumni who have information regarding specific job openings are encouraged to communicate this information to the Office of Placement. This information will be made available to appropriate students, alumni and faculty members and will be a great value to those who are job searching. All alumni, when they are in the Williamsburg area, are invited to visit and use the resources of the Offices of Career Planning and Placement, which are located in Morton Hall. Those who are interested in obtaining more information regarding alumni placement services should communicate with: Bob Hunt, Associate Director, Office of Placement, 140 Morton Hall, The College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, VA 23185, phone 804/253-4604.

The first bit of news this month is about Jim and me — we've moved. Please note the new address when you next send information about yourself or about other classmates. It wasn't a big move: just from the east side of Richmond to the west side, but the new house is twice the size of the old one and we are overwhelmed with all the space! (We are also overwhelmed with the mess created by the painters removing all the old wallpaper and painting the walls, but I hope that will be finished soon.)

Let's start off with some exotic news: Jon Elsasser was named director-president of Timken do Brasil, a company that manufactures tapered roller bearings and other steel products. He and his wife are moving soon to Sao Paulo, Brazil, where Jon will begin his new responsibilities. Good luck, Jon, and I hope you took Portuguese courses at William and Mary!

Brenda Buddeke Fairgairn is back in Williamsburg. She completed her M.A. in American studies last year and teaches history at Lafayette High School here in the 'Burg. Brenda has two children.

Barbara Creech and Bert Kramer had twins last Nov. Lisa and Robert joined their older brother Matthew, age 7, at home just in time for the Thanksgiving holidays.

Melanie and Bob Keith had their second child last Aug. The Keiths also have a daughter, Jacqueline. The family lives in Fairfax, Va.

Ellen and Milt Mooney of Atlanta had their first child, a son Eric, just before Christmas.

Stephen French and his wife, Lou, are living in Wilmington where he works as a planning analyst for DuPont. Their first child, Stephanie, was born in Dec. 1984. Steve writes that Rich Lafferty was married last fall — any more details?

Deborah Brown Gibbs is director of computer education in Allendale, N.J. She received her M.Ed. from William Paterson College in 1982. Also in the computer world is Thomas Boswell. Tom is a freelance computer programmer with a wife, Sandra, and four children! (That sure sounds like a lot to a mother of two!) The Boswells live in Chase City, Va.

Charles Menges was made a partner at McGuire, Woods and Battle, a large Richmond law firm, last May. Charlie's practice is involved with commercial real estate and municipal finance law. He and his wife, Penelope Kyle, recently moved to a new house.

Dr. Carroll Gallagher has accepted a faculty appointment as assistant professor of oral and maxillofacial surgery at the Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston.

Gary Hinson was promoted in the U.S. Army to the rank of major. Gary is an adjutant in West Germany with the 5th Signal Command.

Cary Hoagland of Takoma Park, Md., is busy with three jobs: she is an editing consultant, has her own proofreading business, and a translating business (finally made those German courses pay off!) She has been a volunteer career counselor for the Society for Technical Communication for the past four years and teaches German at adult graduate school in D.C. as well. Cary's mother passed away recently after a long illness. She welcomes alumni contacts and asked that I print her address: 7117 Willow Avenue, Takoma Park, MD 20912 and phone (301) 270-3131.

Joyce Ng Werking gets the prize for the newest letter. Joyce writes that she is employed by the federal government in Washington, D.C., as an auditor and that she lives in Springfield, Va., with her husband, Jerry, and their two daughters, Nicky, 2, and Erika, born last fall. She says that Jan Wingo Cousins and husband, Fred, live in Richmond where both received M.B.A.s from the University of Richmond last year. Jan works for Sovran Bank.

Keith Benton, adds Joyce, is still working for Denver University while simultaneously pursuing his M.A. Dr. Patty Hays is married and lives in Richmond where she practices medicine. Laura Bechtel Meltzer works for AT&T and lives in a neat old house in Highland Park, N.J., which she and her husband, Fred, have been furnishing with lovely antiques. Martha Aurand Hicks lives in Richmond and stays home with her two sons, ages 4 and 7.

Joyce was looking for Carolyn Torrice Ross and Annie Davis. Coincidentally Annie just started working for Colonial Williamsburg last Sept. and is director of corporate and foundation giving. She lives in one of the restored houses in the Historic Area. She came back to Williamsburg from Mt. Holyoke College where she worked in a similar position. I gave Annie your address, Joyce, but here it is for anyone else: 8836 Sweet Gum Place, Springfield, VA 22153. Another victory for the Bureau of Missing Alumni!

Do you have any "missing alumni" to ask about? Most aren't as lost as you think. Write me and I'll make a public appeal for information.

The last issue went a little overboard lengthwise, so at the request of the editor I have attempted to scale back this issue. We'll begin with the ladies from . . .

DELTA DELTA DELTA: Linda Soller provided information on those she could locate. Linda is currently personnel manager for Kelly Ryan Associates, a technical recruitment firm in Herndon, Va., while she and Dave live in nearby Reston. They had their second baby girl in Dec: Beth Gregory Thornburg and husband, John, live in Dallas with three-year-old daughter Kate. John is a youth minister, and Beth works in the law school at SMU, which gives her additional time with Kate. Susan Mariani Castle also lives in Dallas where she works for EDS as manager in personnel/recruiting. Toni Werner Smith lives in Highbridge, N.J., with husband, George. Sher Wilkins McCoy is also up north, living in Connecticut with her husband, Steve, who is a doctor. Margaret Davis Hicks lives in Chesterfield, Va., with husband, Tom, and two children. In the same area Susan Harrow Barban is juggling a child and work with husband, Mark. Finally, unconfirmed reports have it that Gail McGrath Albert is married to Al Albert and is living in Williamsburg.

WAMMA GAMMA WAMMA: This rather clandestine group was organized our freshman year and disbanded following their big event, the invitation-only Lake Matoaka party that was crashed by campus police. Holding meetings in the cafeteria on Friday afternoons, Corey Trench spearheaded the group and has managed to track down info on almost all members. Corey is enjoying the laid-back life of a self-employed southern Californian as he is an environmental scientist in Westlake Village, just north of L.A. Former fraternity bartender, Tim Melester, is now mixing other things as he is a doctor in New York City. Jim Harbert is an attorney in Chicago in private practice, following a stint with the U.S. Treasury. Glenn Gundersen is also an attorney in Philadelphia with Dechert, Price & Rhodes. Keith and Dodge Havens were last seen white water canoeing in Adair Gym. Paul Sandman has also been seen around Virginia. Harrell Tweedy is in Louisville working in chemistry with a private company and will be getting married this coming May. And Corey says he doesn't know where in the world Tom Gayle is.

COMPUTER WRITING COURSE

Patricia Carlson '68 has developed a course on how to write for the computer industry at Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology in Terre Haute, Ind. Professor Carlson developed the course utilizing her experiences during the past six years as a consultant for NASA. She has worked at the Goddard and Langley NASA research centers rewriting computer instruction manuals so scientists could better understand and utilize complete computer programs. She said the popularity of the new course is "due to the fact that students realize that the dramatic increase in the use of computers has created a tremendous shortage of professionals qualified to communicate technical information."

ran is a corporate trial lawyer in Boston. Jackson Metcalf is living and working at Odiyan, a Buddhist monastery in Marin County, Calif.

MISCELLANEA: Bonnie Barrows is an associate scientist at Tracor Jitco in Rockville, Md. She supervises an analytical laboratory, which will provide support for Navy and EPA contracts. She is also in her church's choir and plays violin with a local chamber orchestra. John Metz is happy to be back in Virginia after four years in San Diego. John is working at the Federal Voting Assistance Program, Department of Defense. In Lynchburg Walter (Chip) Mason has been promoted to vice president and area manager for Sovran Bank, Virginia's largest bank. Fred and Joyce Crawley '77 McCune are controllers of the air waves in Beaufort, N.C., where they own radio station Z-103.

Next issue: Who were the individuals thrown into Crim Dell and why does that memory still haunt them? Inquiring minds will want to know!

The new year begins with exciting news from Philadelphia: Emily Hunsicker has opened her own travel agency in the suburbs. She plans to specialize in corporate travel in addition to providing full vacation services. Keep your eye on Avian Travel Inc.! Best wishes Emily!

John Duer has been residing in Marrakech for the past four years. He originally served in the Peace Corps and then taught English at the American Language Center in Marrakech. Most recently John portrayed the general's driver in a new comedy filmed by Columbia Pictures. Dustin Hoffman stars as the general. The film, which is presently untitled, also features Warren Beatty. John began his film experience as an extra in the film "Harem," which starred Ben Kingsley and Nastassia Kinski.

Kristen Wollman Maloney and her husband, Graham, are living in San Francisco where Kristen is working as an attorney. Kristen graduated from UVA Law School in 1981.

Garry Morse returned to the Marshall-Wythe School of Law in 1980 and completed his law degree in 1983. He married Margaret Chandler '81 after her graduation. After law school, they settled in McLean, Va., where Garry practiced law for two years. Last July they relocated to St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands where Garry has joined a new law firm. They report that they are enjoying life in the tropics with their dog, Esquire.

I hope many of you were able to see the ABC movie "Toughlove" in Oct. It was written by Karen Hall. As a result of this effort, she established an overall deal with ABC to write movies for them for a year. Her latest project is "The Betty Ford Story," a two-hour movie about Mrs. Ford's unusual occupation at the White House and her subsequent struggle with drugs and alcohol. Researching her subject has been very exciting. In July, she and her husband, Sheldon Bull, were guests of the Fords for three days at their home in Vail. In Dec., they visited the Fords at their winter home in Palm Springs. The movie will air in either May or Oct. 1986. Karen would like her friends to know that they can write to her in care of ABC Circle Films, 9911 W. Pico Blvd., L.A., CA 90035.

Carol Antonacci is trying to locate residents and friends of Asia House from the academic years, 1976-77 and 1977-78. She would like to hear from you soon. Please write to Carol at 11 Schermerhorn St., Brooklyn Heights, NY 11201.

Sara Black Heiser and her husband, Don, have a daughter, Elisabeth Ann, who was born last May. They are living in Virginia Beach where Don is officer-in-charge of a helicopter detachment at NAS Norfolk. They expect to be in Virginia Beach for at least two more years.

Stephanie Tsacoumis and her husband, Dr. Wayne Meyer, became parents for the second time in Sept., when their daughter, Mariana, was born. After several months of maternity leave, Stephanie will return to law practice at the firm of McKenna, Conner and Cuneo. Wayne completed a residency in internal medicine at George Washington University in July and has joined an internal medicine practice in Gaithersburg, Md.

Steve Edwards has been named assistant director of Jamestown Festival Park with responsibility for developing and managing the park's daily interpretive programs. Steve recently graduated from the Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

Buoyed by Karen Hall's success, other alumni have pursued opportunities in television script writing. Lisa Seidman wrote two segments for "Cagney and Lacey." Karen and Lisa meet weekly with two other alumni, Cheryl Anderson and Kit Wilkson to keep in touch and share ideas.

Brad and Catherine Read Peterson are enjoying living in Denver where Brad practices law with the firm of Sherman and Howard and Catherine commutes to Hewlett-Packard in Loveland to work as a financial analyst.

Peter Post is the contractor who renovated the exterior of Enos House in Surry County. Enos House is considered historically significant because it shows the evolution of a middle-class farmhouse over several generations. The house was originally built in the last quarter of the 18th century. One of Peter's assistants during the summer was Glenn Anderson '79.

Martin LeClerc has been named associate vice president, investments, by Dean Witter Reynolds. He is also assistant manager of the Dean Witter/Sears metro center in McLean, Va. Martin's wife, Cary Catherine Holladay '80, works in the marketing department of the Washington bureau of U.S. News and World Report.

Jim Crafton and his wife are restoring an old house and planning to purchase sheep to breed and raise for natural-colored wools.

John Lowenhaupt has joined the staff of Rauch, Witt and Company as a supervisor in the Williamsburg office.

Tina Laprad Steenburgh is now working as a jewelry buyer at Best Products Corporate Headquarters in Richmond. She is married and pursuing an M.B.A. degree at VCU.

Ed Amos is a third-year resident in oral and maxillofacial surgery at LSU medical center in Shreveport, La. He recently married Suzanne Miller of Pensacola, Fla.

Cathy Butler is in her third and final year at Boston University, working toward degrees in both law and public health. She worked during the past summer in Baltimore for Venable, Baitjer and Howard.

Debra Balducci is a chemist living in Boulder, Colo.

It was good to see so many of you at Homecoming again! Liz Gessner visited me that weekend from Massillon, Ohio. She is in management with Massillon Cable TV Company.

I hope 1986 is a very good year for everyone. Send your notes soon for our next column.

'58 ALUMNUS RECEIVES TEACHING AWARD

James S. Angle '58, professor of English at Ferrum College, has received the Distinguished Alumni Award from Ferrum in recognition of his service to education. Professor Angle, who received his Ed.M. from William and Mary in 1961, joined the Ferrum faculty as an associate professor of English in 1963. Among his honors are the Hurt Faculty Achievement Award at Ferrum for excellence in teaching. From 1966 to 1975 he served as chairman of the humanities division at Ferrum and has also served on the faculty at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Note the new address! The year 1986 really got off to a quick start for me — I quit my job in juvenile probation, moved to Florida and began law school — all in the first week of the new year! I hope you brought in the new year in a less hectic but equally exciting way and that 1986 is good for all of us.

From the letters I've received, it looks like I'm not the only one going after an advanced degree. Lynn Murphy is in her final year at the University of Richmond Law School and will be clerking for a Bristol judge. Skip Dolan is finishing up his M.B.A. at the University of the District of Columbia. Ruth Lindsey finished her M.A. in geology at Syracuse and will be at the American Museum of Natural History in New York as a minerologist. (She adds in her note she has yet to find a place in the city to live and would appreciate any help!) Chris Timpanelli just finished law school at Whittier and passed the Connecticut Bar. Somehow along the way, he found time to help plan a wedding. He and Patricia Ann Fleetwood will be wed on May 6, 1986, at Bruton Parish in the 'Burg.

Bill Savage is in his third year at the University of Richmond. Douglas Yarrington is studying Latin at the University of Texas. Susan Burns is getting her M.A. from Sophia University in Tokyo and going on to get her Ph.D. in Japanese literature from the University of Chicago. Wayne Curtis is working on an American history degree while employed as a program associate with Paul Revere Memorial Association in Boston. William Naphy is at Southwest Baptist Theological Seminary in Ft. Worth. He is also teaching Latin there. He will get his M.Div. and go on for his doctorate. Sue Quine graduated from Harvard and is with Reed, Smith, Shaw and McClay in Pittsburgh, Pa. Susan LaParo is starting her second year at UNC-Chapel Hill studying library science and interning with the EPA in Research Triangle Park.

Katherine Leister got her M.A. in cognitive psychology from Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem. She's been directing research programs there, but hopes to relocate in the Tidewater area. Devin Murphy, after three years with Procter and Gamble seems headed for M.B.A. school. Mike Alessi got a military advanced degree by being commissioned a second lieutenant in the Air Force upon completion of Officer's Training School in Texas. He will now be stationed in Ft. Monroe, Va.

I'm as "excited" as one can be about studying hard for the next three years and its nice to know I'm not the only one working on a "commuter" marriage between a two-career, two-city couple. David and I plan to fly into Hampton for an Aug. 2 wedding, fly out for our honeymoon and still get me back to Florida in time for the fall term at the end of the month.

As I reported in previous columns, there is proof positive among our classmates that this marriage madness can work! (Keep those supportive letters coming, Sue!) Laura Schwarz and Dean Buckius '81, for example, were married in Oct. in the Wren Chapel. After honeymooning in Bermuda, Laura left her job as a N.Y. graphic design studio manager to be with Dean, a Virginia Beach attorney.

H. Konrad Spicer is with management of Ukrops, Inc., in Richmond. In Sept. he married Laurie J. Taybert. They are living in Bon Air. Tony Delserone, his wife, Edith Ann Tucker '83, and their cat, Julie, are living in Chesapeake. He is now an investment officer with Sovran Bank. Nancy Sharp and fiancé, Michael Linsey, flew from San Francisco to be wed in Nancy's hometown of Robersonville, N.C. (They'll reside in San Francisco.)

Keith "KiKi" Dalton finally wrote to let us know his big news. In June he married Kim Wagner, a "hometown sweetie." Hinton Sutherland attended the wedding. After honeymooning in Jamaica, Keith and Kim are prepared for winter in "the great white north" of Michigan. Keith is a program manager with EDS there, working exclusively on the General Motors project. Mary Blackburn is busy at Citizens S&L in operations, but not too busy to plan a June wedding to Jack Randolph, a University of Richmond grad. Erica Holzbauer got married in Oct. while a graduate student at the University of Pennsylvania. (See, it can be done!)

What are classmates who aren't professional students, aren't already married or don't plan to be married anytime soon up to? All kinds of neat jobs, adventures, vacations and practical jokes! Mary Wilkinson is running a golf shop in the Boston area. Eleanor Ferguson is running, literally, in distance races in New England when she's not at Beneficial National Bank, USA, trying to collect from customers who haven't paid their credit card bills! Congrats Ellie, on your win in the Wilmington 10K! She writes that Tami Olenick is at Institute of Technology in Rochester, N.Y., studying medical illustration. Laurie McAvoy Hissey traveled to Brussels and Paris as an employee of Pepsi-Cola last year. (If anyone works for Coca-Cola, I promise equal billing.)

Kevin C. Ruffner has published two historical articles while serving as a fire support team leader with an artillery battalion in Butzbach, Germany. One article dealt with movie theaters in Alexandria, Va., the other with Indian artillery! Lou Ann Charters worked for the Sheraton Washington, then opted for managing the jewelry and accessory area of G. Fox and Company in Waterbury, Conn. Margaret Maher relocated to Hartford, Conn., as a systems analyst in the Traveler's home office. Tricia Ferris recently became manager of Central Fidelity Bank's Bayberry office. She lives in Newport News. Joseph Cohen is with Science Applications International Corporation studying energy conservation. He lives in Arlington. Ginny Roberson who was in Arlington has relocated to Atlanta where she is a financial planner for Prudential Bank.

David Eye, while "serving Uncle Sam" in San Antonio, Texas, has been doing some theater and dance work as well. He'll finish his four-year stint with Army this Oct. and plans to settle in The Big Apple. John Sullivan is the coordinator of the Homeless Outreach Unit of the Port Authority of N.Y. and N.J. Steve Cooley has gone corporate on us as a systems manager with Southland Corporation. He lives in Fredericksburg. (According to Ray Dunn, fellow classmates and ODX brothers Dunn, Cooley, Rich Choate & Mike Shuler rented a cottage on DOG Street for Homecoming. As Ray put it, after years of having to choose between Bloody Mary's at the frat house and the parade, they had Bloody Marys at the cottage and the parade came right to their doorstep! Sounds like a great idea — see you there next year?) (Also, for Tom Brooks: Yes, the party I went to over a year ago in Old Town Alexandria was by far the best, most stupendous event I've ever attended, and I'm sorry it took me a whole year to get over the excitement and get it in the Gazette.)

Obviously having nothing else to do, a certain group of "tubular surfers" concocted a phony profession for themselves, which I wrote about in the last A.G. column. Yes, that's right, the phony surfers (and you know who you are) actually are white-collar rat racers and promotion chasers just like the rest of us from Northern Virginia. (Okay, you guys, I'll admit I "wiped out" by printing the story, but you gotta admit it made great copy!)

Before I forget, more babies have arrived for the Class of '82! Rumor has it Laura Moody Neary is awaiting her second! Catherine Glancy Kurzenkenaber has definitely had her first, a 7-pound baby girl. Welcome to future W&M alumni child Amanda Elizabeth! Catherine, incidentally, has been teaching kindergarten, which surely prepared her well for her own little one.

ALUMNUS IS PRESIDENT OF VIRGINIA BAR ASSOCIATION

Edmund L. Walton '61, '63 BCL, '68 JD has been named president of the Virginia Bar Association. A partner of the law firm Walton and Adams in McLean, Va., Walton is a former director of the William and Mary Law School Association. He is listed in Who's Who in American Politics.

Again, note my change of address and write to me now — even if it's hate mail because I'm living in Florida and it's 75 degrees in January! (It's still cold in the law library though, and I'm not here on a permanent spring break!) It was so good to see lots of '82s at Homecoming. Until next time!

I hope that each of you had a wonderful holiday. A rather large holiday affair on Friday, Dec. 13, marked the beginning of the season for me. My housemates and I threw a Christmas party for over 200 people, which of course included many William and Mary alumni.

Sharon Haegele traveled down from Pennsylvania. She is working at a publishing firm in Princeton, N.J. Diane Hawley drove from New York City, where she is employed by Citibank. Diane is in the management associate program with the international finance division. She says there is a lot of hard work, but even more fun! She has recently moved to the Upper East Side with a fellow Citibanker and has quite a snazzy apartment, I hear. She hasn't been running as much as in the past few years, but ran for Citibank in the Corporate Challenge in late Nov.

My roommate, Alison Hawley, gathered her freshman hall, Fauquier Third, for the Christmas festivities. Alison is an assistant buyer at Woodward and Lothrop. Jane Hatcher has just returned from Europe, and she will be venturing out to California soon to start her new career. Alison Busby has just moved into a new apartment in Atlanta, and she is one of the few people I know who have been able to land a job that utilizes her language skills (in French). Angie Johns Hardy is enjoying married life at the University of Tennessee, where her husband, Greg, is in school. Debbie Fuess is working for Peebles as an assistant buyer for the linen department, and she loves it! She is living in southwest Virginia, beautiful country! Linda Reynard is busy planning her March 22 wedding to Kord Basnight '85. The wedding will be in Carlisle, Pa., but she is currently living in Virginia Beach and teaching nursery school. Lots of long distance planning! The showers have already started, too. Her students' parents recently gave her a Christmas shower!

Gary Bland came, and was wild as usual. He is working in politics in D.C., as is Henry Plaster '85, who is working for Senator Gramm from Texas. (Yes, the Gramm of Gramm-Rudman fame.) Henry sure keeps busy. Ody Granados and Jim Martin told us that they are each managing stores called the Record Works, one in Oakton, and one in McLean. They are still roommates — from W&M to the real world in Northern Virginia! Robert Pasqual is working for Perpetual American Bank in D.C. Mary Edgette is living in Northern Virginia, working for Computecare. Kelly Halligan took some time away from her studies at George Mason Law School to stop by the party. Sheila McDonnell brought along her cute brother. She is working at the National Soft Drink Association in D.C. Amy Anderson is getting ready to move into a new apartment and is working for IBM in Bethesda, Md. Tim Wilson has just moved into a new townhouse and is working for GTE Telenet. Christine Villa '85 is working in Northern Virginia in the math field. Anne St. Clair has returned from her fest in Europe, where she ran into Jane Ephrussi, Lisa West and Steve Gerard. Finally, a surprise visit by Mike Cousins (sans shadow, Kevin McGettigan, who was basking in the sun of the Virgin Islands) was the highlight of the holiday party.

CHOIR SCHEDULES SPRING TOUR

The William and Mary Choir will begin its spring tour on March 13 with a concert at Ferry Farm Baptist Church at 1 West Moreland Drive in Fredericksburg, Va. at 8 p.m. Other concerts are scheduled for Conrad High School at 110 Berkshire Road, West Hartford, Conn. with a reception for the choir to follow the concert; for The Church of the Heavenly Rest at 90th St. and Fifth Ave. in New York City on March 16 at 10:30 a.m.; for the First Presbyterian Church in Strasburg, Pa., beginning at 8 p.m. on March 16; and for South Lakes High School at 11400 South Lakes Drive, Reston, Va., on March 17, beginning at 8 p.m. All alumni in the areas of the concerts are encouraged to come out and hear the talented choir perform.

It seems that with the holiday season has come more weddings! W. Patrick Wagner '85 dropped me a nice note telling me another installment of the "William and Mary Wedding Watch." On a beautiful Saturday in Oct. in Arlington, Va., C. Curtis Croley and Rebecca Weaver became Mr. and Mrs. Croley. The two are now back in Austin, Texas, where Curtis is studying film making at the University of Texas, and Becky is the director of the Austin Nuclear Freeze.

Gwendolyn Snyder wrote me about her wedding. She married James Smuts, in Sept. Unfortunately, that was the day after Hurricane Gloria, which prevented many of their friends from attending. However, Virginia Cox '85 traveled from Kentucky to serve as the maid of honor. Local classmates Jan Pickrel and Melissa Moore were also in attendance. Gwendolyn has been promoted to staff accountant at First Federal Savings and Loan, and James is a management associate at United Virginia Bank.

I received a great letter from Miriam Oakley. For the past year she has been working as a personnel analyst for the City of Newport News in the employment division. She says that although her job is extremely hectic, she really enjoys it. Now if you missed Miriam at Homecoming this year, she had a good reason. Guess! Yes, another wedding. She was attending Anne Wampler's wedding in Richmond. Anne married Ray Faszewski at Forest Hill Presbyterian Church. Theirs was a "girl/boy-next-door" kind of romance — they lived on the same street for years before they met and fell in love. Lisa Clark, Kathy Mackin '85 and Miriam were three of the six bridesmaids. Miriam especially enjoyed catching up with Sheila Mertes and Mary Kay Gorman '85. Anne and Ray were originally planning to honeymoon in the Florida Keys, but Hurricane Kate seemed to deter them. These hurricanes sure put a kink in the wedding schedules this time! The couple will be living in Richmond in a lovely new home.

Suzy Tierney and Kim Shanks write that they have finally landed real jobs in D.C. They have an apartment in Falls Church and found the commute much shorter than from Dumfries and Warrenton. Kim and her long-time associate Bill Williams '83 sing with the Oratorio Society of Washington, and Suzy says that she just sings in the shower!

Susan P. Anderson is also in Northern Virginia, living in Alexandria and working for a small computer firm. Deb Smith writes that she is working in D.C. for the International Monetary Fund (IMF) as a technical administrator for computer operations. She is surprised at how many W&M buddies she runs into downtown.

Jeff Cole has received several promotions at First Virginia Bank in Alexandria. I also hear that Rod Macklin is working as an accountant in Baltimore.

From another part of the East Coast, Lamar Brown writes that he is currently employed as an executive trainee for Ferguson Enterprises, Inc., in Hilton Head, N.C. He is enjoying life at the beach.

I also heard that George Jack played the leading role of the minister in last summer's production of "The Lost Colony" in Manteo, N.C. George is working on his master's degree in theater at the University of Louisville.

Another upcoming theater star is Nancy Lowery, who played Lenny McGrath in the play "Crimes of the Heart" in Oct., at Southern Seminary's Chandler Auditorium in Lexington, Va.

Back North, Pam Hudson is working as a sales manager for Macy's New York. She has been in New York for a year, but has recently been transferred to Houston to open a new store!

The northern east coast alumni congregated at the William and Mary vs. Princeton game. I ran into Liz Somers at the reception afterward. She is in Philadelphia working for Vanguard Investments. Liz is living with Sally Lewe, who is employed by Warner Amex Cable Communications as employee benefits administrator. Noah Levine and Dan Zebrowski were also among the Tribe fans. Noah is spending part of Dec. in London. Dan is working in Philadelphia as an accountant. I also hear that Brian Black is in the nuclear engineering program with the Navy. He has been stationed in Norfolk, Rhode Island and Orlando. He recently became engaged to his high school sweetheart and is currently stationed in Connecticut.

While I was home in Pennsylvania for Christmas vacation, I received a call from Richard "Tim" McDonald, who, after working for Peat, Marwick and Mitchell in D.C. for a year, has ventured up to Cherry Hill, N.J. and is working for Blender Robinson and Company, an investment firm.

While I was down in Tennessee working on campaigns, I spoke with Andy Kane, who is now the assistant dean of students at Tennessee College.

Farther west Donald W. Hearly is working for McGraw-Hill Book Company as a marketing representative in Colorado and New Mexico. He loves the Denver area, but says that he misses the colors of the east coast mountains. His spare time is devoted to working with a high school youth group at the Church of the Hills. Christopher L. Chaten is enrolled in the master's program at the Thunderbird Campus of the American Graduate School of International Management in Glendale, Ariz.

Other '84 grads furthering their education include Sally McWilliams, Doug Klein, Volko Ruhnke, Don Lucidi and Bill Scott. Sally is attending law school, after working in the "real world" for a year at the Smithsonian. Doug is attending the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, but still finds time for both writing and politics. Volko is doing graduate work at Georgetown, Don is at the University of Pennsylvania Law School, and Bill is attending law school at UVA.

Eric Bowman is working toward his master's in the neuroscience program at Princeton. Caleen Norrod is working part time toward an M.A. in English. She is living in Fairfax, and working for Best Programs, a computer software publisher, coordinating all direct marketing and advertising.

Bob Cormier sent me an update. He is still with Williams and Wilkins Company, a large Baltimore-based publisher of scientific/medical books and journals. He has been promoted to copy editor of manuscripts. He has also been practicing weekly with a Dickinson College (Carlisle, Pa.) based jazz band known as Blue Infinity. They hope to be a working band within months. Their first major gig was Friday, Dec. 6 at Dickinson's snack bar. So keep your eyes on the charts for Blue Infinity!

I also heard from Courtney Reid. She spent the summer as a park ranger at the Yorktown Battlefield, giving tours while wearing a Smokey-the-Bear hat. She has now moved back to Richmond and is working as a dorm supervisor (she lives with 18 teenage girls) and U.S. History teacher at St. Catherine's School. Fellow alumnae Mary Sue Busser '81 and Katie Johnson '83 work with Courtney. She says that they are having fun encouraging seniors to attend W&M. In her spare time, Courtney rides her bike all around Richmond and teaches aerobics.

Also in Richmond, David Murphy is enrolled in the training program with E. F. Hut-ton.

I ran into Tim Meell at my fifth-year high school reunion. He is in Yardley, Pa., the operations manager for Grieshaber, an ophthalmic surgical instruments company based out of Switzerland. It was great to have another W&M alumnus at the gala.

I was recently out in Seattle, and Amy Marcos flew up from San Francisco to visit. We had a blast and called our friends from the top of the Space Needle. It is a great city, with friendly people and the best hot chocolate we've ever had. Not to mention Mt. Rainier and fresh salmon.

DINNER TO HONOR HOWARD M. SMITH '43

A dinner in honor of Howard M. Smith '43, professor of physical education who is retiring after 40 years on the faculty, and his wife Betty will be held at William and Mary on May 3. Friends have established a scholarship fund in Professor Smith's honor, and anyone who would like to contribute to the fund may send a contribution to the Office of Development and direct it to the fund. Additional information on the dinner will appear in the April issue of the Gazette.

Jeff Deal sends news from the other end of the country — Boston! Apparently Jeff had quite a wild time when Jeff Bishop and Mike Cousins (he always seems to pop up where the wild times are) trekked up to Harvardland for the Harvard vs. W&M football game. But the three had reason to celebrate because Jeff Deal had recently popped the big question to Jennifer Loomis. Jennifer and Jeff are planning a June 1986 wedding. She is a 1984 graduate of Williams College in Massachusetts. Jeff is living in the Boston suburb of Brookline and working in the inpatient unit at the Erich Lindemann Mental Health Center. He is the day facilitator there. He is also applying to graduate school and is hoping to be enrolled in a master's of health administration program by next fall.

Now some news from those who are serving our country. Second Lieutenant Harold W. Reeves Jr. and Second Lieutenant Richard Wiersema have completed the military intelligence officer basic course at the Army Intelligence School in Fort Huachuca, Ariz. First Lieutenant Dean Bland is assigned to the 4th Psy Op Group in Fort Bragg, NC. He summers at the family house on the Riviera. What a life!

Mark Williams has been commissioned as a second lieutenant in the U.S. Air Force upon graduation from Officer Training School at Lackland AFB, Texas. He was a distinguished graduate of the course and is now assigned to Sheppard AFB in Texas. Terri Watson '85 is a second lieutenant in the U.S. Army and is now in flight school in Alabama. She is rooming with Second Lieutenant Margaret Ashburn '85, who is enrolled in the same program. Janet Payne '85 paid them a visit recently. Janet is attending the Military Police Officer Basic Course in Anniston, Ala., and will soon be moving on to Germany. Jennifer Blackwell '85 is also in the course at Anniston.

Second Lieutenant David Hart and Second Lieutenant Kevin Corning graduated from the U.S. Army Flight School at Fort Rucker, Ala., last July. David is now assigned in Germany, and Kevin is at Fort Bragg, N.C.

Second Lieutenant Randall A. Perkins III has completed an officer rotary wing aviator course and received the silver wings of an Army aviator at the U.S. Army Aviator School in Fort Rucker.

Caitlin Porter sent me the most wonderful handmade Christmas card. She just returned from leave in Korea in late Oct. While dancing at the Hilton in Seoul, she ran into some old friends. She proves that it really is a small world. She was glad to be back in the good ol' USA in time for Halloween. Caitlin was planning a trip to West Virginia for the holidays, maybe stopping in Williamsburg. She hopes to be assigned to Germany.

Well, I hear that the place to be for New Year's was George and Lynn Foreman's in Richmond. Everyone had a great time in their sleeping bags. George recently started a new job, with Nabisco. Lourdes Ramon spent her New Year's in Rio. Hanif Moledina is enjoying life in Africa. My roommate Alison Hawley spent her New Year's in St. Maarten with her family. My other roommate, Laurie Raymond, rang in the new year skiing in Colorado. But probably the biggest news for me this time is that my third roommate, Alison Horrocks, is now engaged to be married to Greg Miller. There couldn't be a nicer couple! I know our house will be full of excitement in the coming months.

Well, please write and tell me about the excitement in your lives! Be sure to keep an eye out for Young Guard events in your area. They should be exciting! And please be sure to call or stop by with news if you are in the D.C. area!

MICHAEL MOTT IS WRITER-IN-RESIDENCE

Michael Mott, author of the best-selling "The Seven Mountains of Thomas Merton," is serving as Writer-in-Residence at William and Mary this year. Mott began the book, which won the Guggenheim Prize and was a runner-up for a Pulitzer Prize, while a Writer-in-Residence at William and Mary during the 1978-79 academic year. He is also the author of five collections of poetry, two children's novels, and several essays. He has been Writer-in-Residence at Emory University and has taught at Kenyon College, the State University of New York at Buffalo, and Concordia University in Montreal. He came to William and Mary from the faculty of Bowling Green State University in Ohio.

KEN HINES '73 NAMED CREATIVE DIRECTOR

Lawler Ballard Advertising has appointed Kenneth C. Hines '73 creative director in its Richmond office. A native of Richmond, Hines has been with the firm since 1980 and until his new appointment served as senior copywriter. Lawler Ballard is a full-service agency with 140 employees and $50 million in annual billings.

OBITUARIES

CLAUDE MANBY RICHMOND, '24 B.S., died December 11, 1985, in Newport News, Virginia.
