THE COLLEGE OF WILLIAM AND MARY

College Scores Major Acquisitions Coup William and Mary Buys John Marshall Letters at London Auction

William and Mary has achieved "a major coup in the field of manuscript acquisition" with the purchase recently of nine previously unknown autographed letters of alumnus John Marshall, Chief Justice of the United States from 1801 to 1835.

Written between 1814 and 1821 to another William and Mary alumnus, Bushrod Washington, Marshall's close friend and fellow justice on the Supreme Court, the letters were sold at auction by Sotheby's of London.

"While it is not unusual for a stray Marshall item to surface now and then, the sudden appearance of a group of his letters is an extraordinary, even singular, occurrence in this day and age," said Charles H. Hobson, editor of The Papers of John Marshall, who described the acquisition as a "major coup."

The Institute of Early American History and Culture and William and Mary are cosponsors of The Papers of John Marshall, an edition of the chief justice's correspondence and papers that will eventually comprise 10-12 volumes published by the University of North Carolina Press.

At one time the letters were at Mount Vernon, which Bushrod Washington had inherited from his uncle George Washington. The letters passed subsequently into the family of Sir Alfred Ewing, an Englishman who married into the Washington family in the late 19th century, and remained with the family until the sale.

Hobson is especially pleased that the purchase prevents the letters from disappearing into the autograph market and being lost to scholars. The new acquisition, says Hobson, significantly adds to Swem Library's holdings of Marshall manuscripts and more than doubles the size of its collection of Marshall-Bushrod Washington letters. Swem Library at William and Mary and the Library of Congress are the two largest repositories of Marshall's personal correspondence.

Marshall attended the first law lectures given at William and Mary by George Wythe in early 1780. The Marshall-Wythe School of Law, named for the two scholars, traces its roots to Wythe, who became the first professor of law in America in 1779. Washington attended William and Mary from 1775-1778.

Hobson says the newly acquired letters, which will probably appear in volume seven of the John Marshall papers, "fills a particularly large gap in Marshall's surviving correspondence." Several letters deal with cases pending before the Supreme Court and questions arising from cases heard in circuit courts. In those days the Supreme Court justices also rode circuit, he adds.

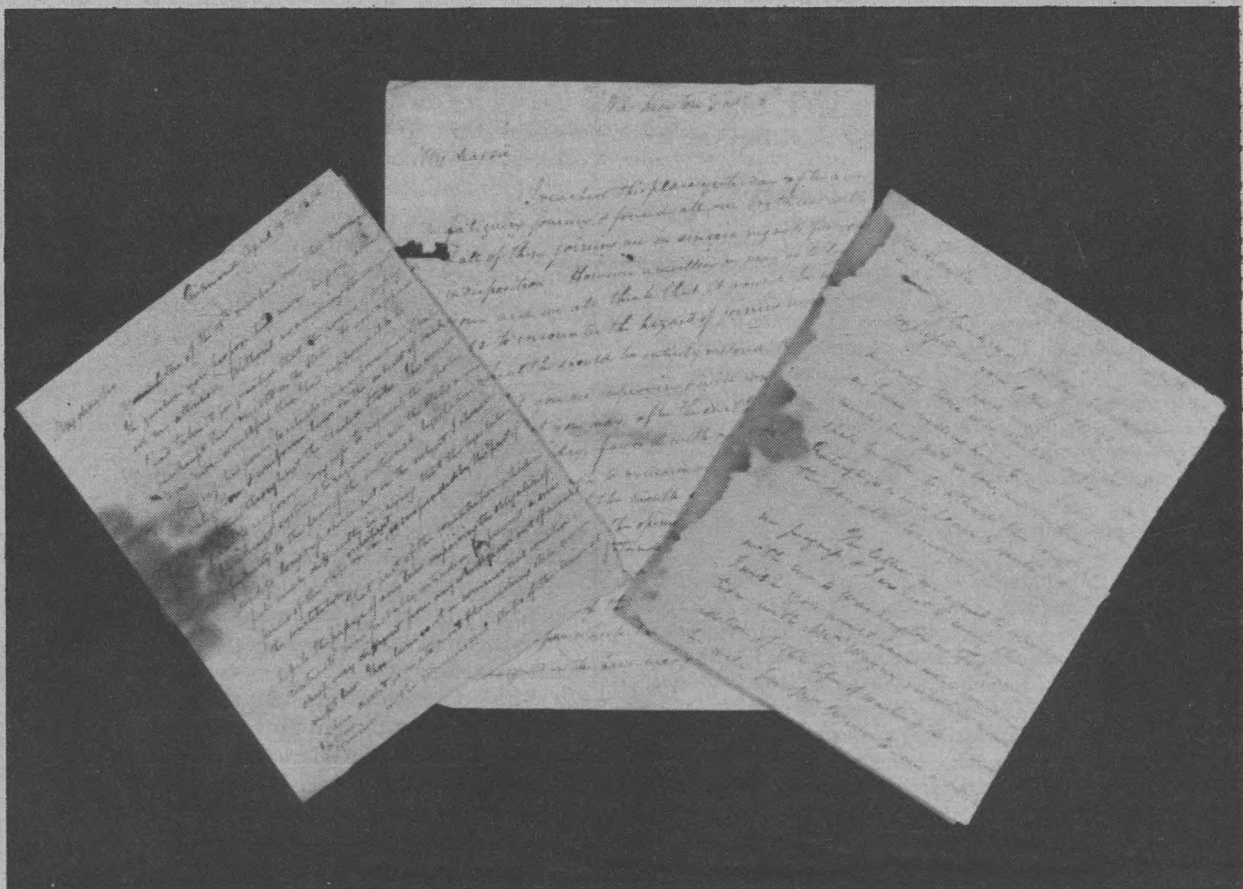

Hobson believes historians will be particularly interested in an 1814 letter in which Marshall ponders whether a bankruptcy law violates the clause of the Constitution prohibiting the states from enacting laws "impairing the obligation of contracts." Hobson says Marshall's comments on the topic foreshadow two of his notable opinions: Sturges v. Crowninshield (1819) and Ogden v. Saunders (1827).

Another letter shows the importance Marshall attached to having the justices live together during term time. After the British burned the capital in 1814, Marshall asked Bushrod Washington to make new arrangements for their accommodations during the ensuing session of the court: "If it be practicable to keep us together you know how desirable this will be. If that be impracticable we must be as near each other as possible. Perhaps we may dine together should we even be compelled to lodge in different houses."

In an 1815 letter Marshall asked Washington, who was then holding circuit in Philadelphia, for help in placing his erring 15-year-old, James, in a Philadelphia countinghouse. (Marshall had just learned that James had been suspended from Harvard for misbehavior.) "I am willing to bind him and to comply with the terms which those gentlemen may require," Marshall wrote. "I hope they will not be dissatisfied with my son should they take charge of him."

In several of the letters Marshall discussed plans for an edition of George Washington's letters and a second edition of Marshall's The Life of George Washington, which had been published in five volumes between 1804 and 1807. According to Hobson, because the first edition of the ponderous Life had not sold as well as Marshall had hoped, he was reluctant to produce another one prematurely. "I do not think a new edition ought to be hurried," Marshall wrote in 1816. "It cannot be pressed on the publick. We must wait until it is required." A second edition, reduced to two volumes, eventually appeared in 1832.

William and Mary has purchased nine rare autographed letters of the third Chief Justice of the United States, alumnus John Marshall.

Inside Admissions

The Athlete and Admissions at William and Mary

G. Gary Ripple
Dean of Admissions

Recent controversy over admissions standards for college athletics has raised many questions in the minds of our alumni about William and Mary's philosophy and procedures in admitting athletes to the College. What's really happening here? How have we been able to avoid all the negative publicity associated with college athletics these days? The answers to such questions rest on an institutional philosophy of rationality and restraint. William and Mary has definite guidelines established by a faculty committee, which place us in a highly favorable light when compared to so called "big time" sports programs.

Our athletic admissions guidelines require a coach-designated scholar to have SAT scores of 1000 or better with a public high school class rank in at least the top third. Students with SATs between 900 and 1000 must rank in the top quarter. All candidates must have an SAT verbal score of at least 400. Athletes whose credentials put them slightly below the guidelines can be reviewed by a nine-member committee (which includes five faculty members) at the request of one of our coaches. Each year we consider five to 10 students whose rank and test scores fall slightly below the established minimums.

The guidelines have been in place for eight years and seem to be working quite well. A majority of our recruited athletes are far above the guidelines and have historically had a mean SAT total of approximately 1100. This is 200 points above the national average of all students going to college and better than the entire student bodies of all but a very few of America's colleges and universities. Our athletes graduate at a rate that is slightly higher than that of the William and Mary student body as a whole (among the highest in the nation). At least 10 of our athletes achieved a perfect 4.0 average last semester, and last year William and Mary was one of the few institutions in the nation to have first-team Academic All-Americans in both football and basketball.

Whenever one of our teams is not having a great season, questions about the academic guidelines are raised. Should our minimums be lowered in order to enable our coaches to recruit a different type of student-athlete for William and Mary? My sense is that the College community would be solidly opposed to any lowering of admissions standards for athletes. Perhaps the best answer to the question can be found in the sentiments expressed to me recently by an alumnus who was recruited to William and Mary on a football scholarship and enjoyed four years of competition on the gridiron. He said: "Don't change a thing. William and Mary is one of the few places where a good athlete can be a good student and leave college with the skills and confidence so necessary for meeting big challenges in the game of life."

Verkuil Consolidates Athletic Programs

The men's and women's intercollegiate athletic programs at William and Mary will be consolidated into a single administrative unit as part of a comprehensive reorganization of the College's administration.

Under the consolidation, John Randolph '64, who returned to William and Mary as men's athletic director last summer, will serve as director of athletics for the reorganized program. Mildred West, director of athletics for women, will serve as associate athletic director, with responsibility for the administration of all non-revenue sports.

In announcing the re-organization, President Paul R. Verkuil '61 said the reasons for the change are related to the need for greater efficiency in the management of the sports programs and to his desire for a more centralized system of administration reflecting the directions of a modern university.

Verkuil said the new athletic administrative structure "more closely resembles those found at universities comparable to William and Mary." Only seven other Division I institutions maintain separate athletic departments for men and women.

The president said the shift should serve to enhance both men's and women's intercollegiate sports, noting that West's new role as associate athletic director places her in a key position to help determine spending priorities for all sports.

"Women's athletics have a long and distinguished history here," President Verkuil said, "and I intend to see that we continue to build on that tradition with Millie and John's help."

Alumni Medallion Nominations

The Alumni Medallion Committee is receiving nominations from alumni chapters and from individual alumni for candidates for the Alumni Medallion, the highest honor conferred by the Society of the Alumni.

The medallion is awarded for service and loyalty, recognizing extraordinary achievement in the vocational and avocational life of the alumnus. Consideration is given to distinguished service and exceptional loyalty to the Society and to the College; outstanding character; notable success in business or profession and contribution in worthy endeavors of such nature as to bring credit and honor to the College. The graduating class of the nominee must have been at least ten years prior to the awarding.

The nominations must be supported by a written statement outlining service to William and Mary and an assessment of that service; service to community, state, and/or nation; vocational achievements and recognitions.

The deadline will be May 15, 1986.

Send all nominations to: ALUMNI MEDALLION COMMITTEE, P.O. BOX 60, Williamsburg, Virginia 23187

Two hundred and ninety-three years ago, religious growth and faith were as important to William and Mary as its bricks and mortar. Queen Mary and King William had entrusted the College with the task of training young men to spread the faith as Anglican ministers.

Today, William and Mary is a state-supported institution of higher learning and as such maintains a firm separation of church and state.

Yet if you take a closer look, you'll discover that for many students, spiritual well-being is an essential part of campus life and learning.

Participation in student religious organizations provides students with friendship, fellowship and often an outlet for helping others.

At the heart of the campus's student religious activities is an organization known as Campus Ministers United, or CAMU. Its seven members represent seven religious denominations: Rev. William S. Parks, Baptist; Father Ron Sequin, Catholic; Mrs. Lois Hornsby, Christian Science; Rev. Ronald Fitts, Episcopalian; Dr. Robert Scholnick, Jewish; Rev. Benton Lutz, Lutheran, and Rev. Braxton Allport, United Methodist.

According to Jay L. Chambers, professor of psychology and director of the Center for Psychological Services, the campus ministers are called upon for a lot of things for which there are no administrative offices at William and Mary. He and his staff meet once a year with CAMU members to discuss their common interests. "We get together and share and get to know each other. We talk about trends and what's happening with the students.

"The campus ministers are a presence on campus and not focused on very much. They're there, they do a lot of work, and they touch the lives of a lot of students."

Reverend Allport is one of several fulltime campus ministers and one with a strong commitment to the academic life. Last year, on 48 hours notice, he taught two courses in the religion department when a faculty member got sick. "That's an example of how the campus ministers interact with the campus," he says. Now in his 12th year at William and Mary, Allport is sensitive to the growing pains college students, particularly undergraduates, go through.

A minister for 21 years, Allport coordinates a number of programs for students through the Wesley Foundation, which is the campus ministry organization of the United Methodist Church. The Wesley Foundation building on Jamestown Road is also residential. Starting next fall, the Wesley Residential Community, as it is called, will house five students, who will commit themselves to two hours weekly doing chores in the house, one hour per week for theological reflection with other community members, active participation in one of the other programs and serving in outside community programs.

"They'll probably be working on substandard housing in the Williamsburg area, winterizing the houses. We're plugging into a larger program at this point," says Allport, who points out that there are over 900 substandard homes in the area.

Senior Carol Rich is an elementary education major who's thinking of applying to the Peace Corps. She's also president of the Young Adult Council of the Wesley Foundation and a member of the Nuclear Disarmament Study Group. "I think it's really important to have a continuum, someone who's here year to year. The students are always in transit, but the campus ministries are unchanging, they're always here."

The Campus Ministry: Sharing Together

William and Mary's Campus Ministers Serve an Essential Role

BY LISA L. HEUVEL '74

Reverend Parks also has William and Mary as his major responsibility, although he is the Baptist director of campus ministry for the Peninsula area, which includes Christopher Newport College and Thomas Nelson Community College. Parks and seven undergraduates from the Baptist Student Union at William and Mary spent their spring break in the Lower East Side of New York City, working in the Baptist mission center. They winterized homes and worked with young people in community recreation programs.

"This is an annual thing for us," says Parks. "During spring break we try to have a trip for interested students to give of themselves."

Senior Janet McMinn, president of the BSU, went on a trip to New York last year and recalls it as "the most incredible week of my whole life — it's an incredible experience to talk to people who live on the streets." McMinn, who plans to go to law school, says that although there were people with hate, there were also people trying to make their lives better and individuals who were very giving even though they didn't have anything. "I may not have wanted their whiskey," she says, "but they offered it."

Parks, who has been a minister since 1979 and at the College since 1983, notes that the BSU is similarly active on campus and community projects. "They reach out beyond themselves and see what they can do," he says. "What they can do" includes working with senior citizens, visiting students in the College infirmary and setting up refreshments during room selection. "That's a tense time, so we set this up and say, 'Hey, relax a minute.'"

In addition to its regular programs, "family groups" are highly significant to students in the BSU. "We have students who commit themselves to leading a family group, a guy and a girl," says Parks, "and every fall we give other students a chance to sign up — they meet in a group, either in a dorm or apartment. Each family group is made up of people to spill your guts with, to get close to. They're really good friends to talk to about problems at home or about courses giving you problems."

This year, St. Bede's Catholic Church is celebrating its 52nd year of service to the College and the community, and it actually began as the campus ministry to Catholic students.

The campus priest fulltime for nine years, Father Ron Sequin is coordinator for CAMU, which has its own range of activities from sponsoring the Wren Forum, a discussion and panel on a particular issue (this year, the Virginia Statute for Religious Freedom, which had its 200th anniversary in January) to the sponsorship of the senior class interfaith baccalaureate service each year.

The Catholic Student Association is also active in campus and community projects, and 11 students went to Appalachia over spring break for a project. In Williamsburg, they have winterized homes and have ministries to Eastern State Hospital and the Pines convalescent center.

Their schedule of worship services and fellowship groups is also accompanied by a covenant, now in its ninth year, with the Episcopalian student organization, the Canterbury Association.

Father Sequin says that it's not enough to educate the mind; the body and spirit have to be integrated as well. "If you just educate the mind, other questions are left unanswered."

Sharing that belief is Robert J. Scholnick, professor of English and advisor to the Hillel Jewish Student Organization. For him, working with Hillel is part of his total life as a human being: intellectually, physically and spiritually. In 1985, he received the Hillel Award from the state B'nai Brith Association for his volunteer work. His wife Sylvia is also active with Hillel.

This past February, Hillel, the New Testament Student Association and the College Committee on Concerts and Lectures sponsored a concert performance on campus by "Phantom West," a musical quartet of young Americans who are trying to alert people in the U.S. to the plight of Soviet Jews and Christians. At William and Mary they played to a packed house.

Hillel celebrates its 25th year on campus this year, according to Scholnick. Of CAMU, he says, "All of us believe in the religious traditions that we represent. We value each other's faiths and approach each other with the common interest of meeting the students' needs."

What Makes William and Mary a Special College

Vincent DeVita, Clark Kerr and President Verkuil
Speak About Its Unique Qualities

Three distinguished individuals spoke recently at the College on what makes William and Mary special. Dr. Vincent T. DeVita Jr. '57, director of the National Cancer Institute and an internationally honored scientist, told Phi Beta Kappa initiates in December about the special teaching he received at the College and about one special teacher, Dr. Alfred R. Armstrong Jr. '32, professor emeritus of chemistry, whose interest in Dr. DeVita made him realize later in life that "the footprints of Dr. Armstrong were all around me." In February Dr. Clark Kerr, former chancellor of the University of California at Berkeley and former chairman of the Carnegie Commission and Council on Policy Studies in Higher Education, told about the legacy of another special man, William and Mary's first president, James Blair, and his impact on higher education. Speaking at Charter Day, Dr. Kerr described Blair as "the most effective college president in history," and said that the governance of higher education in America "owes so much to those few who presided over the founding and early development of the College of William and Mary." And at that same Charter Day ceremony, President Paul R. Verkuil '61 spoke about William and Mary today and its unflinching commitment to liberal arts education and to the relationship of student and teacher in its educational programs. In an era when there is concern among students about "a failure of communication between institution and students," Dr. Verkuil said, William and Mary "receives high marks on student-faculty interaction and our liberal arts curriculum is firmly entrenched." Excerpts from the three addresses follow.

"That youth may be piously educated in good letters and manners. . . ."

By Clark Kerr

(The following is excerpted from Dr. Clark Kerr's address at Charter Day at William and Mary on Feb. 8, 1986.)

The charter that we celebrate today said that William and Mary was established so "that youth may be piously educated in good letters and manners"; and that meant the Scottish approach; and that meant a lay board and a president. The intent was better discipline. The unintended consequences were enormous, and mostly good — another illustration of how consequences can go far astray from original intent.

So William and Mary started with a board of 18 trustees. These trustees took charge of faculty discipline. For example, they dismissed faculty members for drunkenness; an action that was impossible at Oxford or Cambridge then as it is now. For example, they introduced the elective system against faculty protests; the faculty said there were no electives at Oxford and therefore there should be none at William and Mary. For example, they insisted on the separation of church and state (and they represented the state), and the faculty was on the side of the church. There was, at the time, a faculty council, in a bicameral arrangement, as also at Harvard, but the trustees established their domain.

William and Mary also started with a strong president. . . . James Blair, who served "for life," which meant for 50 years. The first president at Harvard (under the title of "head") lasted only one year. His great act was to enclose the "Harvard Yard," partly to keep the cows out but also the students in. His wife, who was the cook, starved the students, and was charged, among other things, of serving the mackerel "with their guts in them" and "goat's dung in their hasty pudding." He beat his assistants, one for two hundred blows over two hours time. He also made off with funds of the college. He then fled, under pursuit of Governor Winthrop's constables, to Virginia, where, according to a contemporary account, he succumbed to "extreme pride and sensuality . . . being usually drunken, as the custom is there" — this was a Puritan account of the perceived Anglican way of life.

Harvard had seven presidents during its first 50 years. William and Mary only one. James Blair was the first most effective college president in American history. He founded the college. He served as its president for 50 years. He helped to obtain Christopher Wren as architect; and much else. At the end of his 50 years, William and Mary could compete in holding the young gentlemen of Virginia even from Oxford.

Clark Kerr

But it was not always all that easy for President Blair. Former President Graves, a few years ago, recounted how the students, in 1702, had occupied a building and armed themselves with pistols. President Blair made ready to enter and recounted later "that some of the boys, having a great kindness for me, called out 'For God's sake, sir, don't offer to come in, for we have shot [they had shot a servant of the president], and shall certainly fire at anyone that first enters.'" President Blair then wrote that "Upon hearing of this, I began to think it was something more than ordinary in the matter."

The faculty carried on a running battle with President Blair, a particularly active one from 1720 to 1735, during which they appealed to the crown to help them assert their rights versus those of the President and the board of trustees. Their appeal was not all that popular in Virginia for support for the Crown was, even then, by no means universal. In any event, the appeal was lost.

One can only speculate how history subsequently might have developed if the Anglican and English colony of Virginia had followed the Anglican and English model of university governance (in which the faculty were in control) instead of the Puritan and Scottish (under which the lay board and the president were the chief governing officers.) Then there would have been two models in contention. Which one would have dominated and where and in what form? Instead, there was only one model, and it became the standard American model; modified over time, of course, particularly as faculties, and especially after 1890, took more and more charge of academic decision making; but never of total responsibility for the institution as in the once guild system of Oxford and Cambridge. Pluralistic governance by the lay board, by the president and by the faculty senate, usually, but not always, working together is to this day the governance system of American higher education — a system of shared governance. This system has well fitted the general structure of our nation. It has been a generally effective system internally for our institutions of higher education. It started, on these American shores, in significant part, here. While a neglected aspect of your history, it appears to me, looking from the perspective of American higher education today, to challenge in its importance most of the other of your historic firsts. Thus the governance of American higher education, as the governance of our republic, both so highly successful, owe so much to those few who presided over the founding and the early development of the College of William and Mary.

"A cauliflower is just a cabbage with a college education. . ."

By Vincent T. DiVita Jr. '57

(Dr. Vincent T. DiVita Jr. '57, director of the National Cancer Institute, gave these remarks at the meeting of the Alpha of Virginia chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at William and Mary on Thursday, Dec. 5, 1985.)

When I was in college in 1953 the nucleus of a cell was a black box, a mystery. Right around that time Watson and Crick discovered the structure of DNA and opened up the entire field now called molecular biology. Ten years later I was at the NIH and Marshall Nirenberg broke the genetic code as a result of knowing the structure of DNA. Now we could uncode nature's messages. . . . But for another decade nothing really happened in molecular biology because this low-level revolution simmered along until about 1975 when fueled by the funds provided to the National Cancer Institute by an act of Congress. In 1971, the biologic revolution went into its expedient phase. We could snip pieces of DNA, sequence them. We can put them in bacteria and grow and produce large quantities of materials that are normally grown by the body.

Nowadays you can go into a laboratory and dial a gene if you want to. . . . The black box, the nucleus that was the cancer cell has now become a blueprint, and it is not if, it is a matter of when, we will really understand the cancer cell. In my view, cancer, like tuberculosis, polio and smallpox, in spite of what the pessimists say, is a disease on its way out. Those of you who are in college may see the beginning of the end of this disease. It is also not a matter of if, but it is a matter of when we will map your entire genetic structure. The technology is already in our hands to do that. It is not a matter of if, it is a matter of when we will use genes to treat diseases that have been heretofore untreatable. Gene therapy is just around the corner. . . .

Half of the new initiates in Phi Beta Kappa are in the science field, and those of you in science and mathematics will in fact participate in this biologic revolution. Those in the humanities, business and politics will have to deal with the consequences of this biologic revolution. People are worried about retirement age, how to use the wisdom of our older citizens, how will we take care of health care for people who are reaching these advanced ages.

One of the things that is very interesting about the biologic revolution is that it is beginning to impact on the aging process itself, and what most scientists in the field now realize is that aging as we know it is really a cluster of diseases that are within themselves preventable. In fact, there is a good deal of evidence that the aging of the population I've talked about is associated not with any decreased vigor but actually with increased vigor in the aging population, so you may live to 90 or 100 and be very productive and will have to face changes in society that go along with that. . . .

This brings me back to where I started, back to college and teachers. Mark Twain said training is everything—a cauliflower is just a cabbage with a college education, and I think he was right. Given the pace of the scientific revolution, the best you can hope for from your college is that you can be taught how to learn and how to discipline to learn. And that is what Dr. Armstrong [Dr. Alfred Armstrong, professor emeritus of chemistry] and the College of William and Mary gave to me, and I am very grateful for that. In fact instead of the bumper sticker I have on my car from my daughter I thought perhaps I could have two others, side by side: 'Have you remembered your favorite teacher today?' or in the modern trend of the double entendre, I might say, 'Teachers do it forever'.

. . . I thought that if I would cite for you a few of my experiences that relate to Dr. Armstrong, it might give you some perspective about the role of teachers in college and future careers. . . . First of all I want you to know that Dr. Armstrong was not my adviser in College, someone else was, but he always advised me. And I can take this entire party to what used to be Rogers Hall and tell you where he advised me one fall in my sophomore year in front of Rogers Hall when he stopped me and told me he was not at all pleased with the way I was going in my studies. He gave me quite a lecture that to this day is still well imprinted in my mind and changed my attitude. I didn't know anyone was looking really at that time. It made a big impact on me. He was also a strict disciplinarian. When I took quantitative analysis it was a bear of a course. I must tell you I really didn't appreciate the discipline as much as I did later but when I went to medical school the two courses that were killer courses for medical students—biochemistry and pharmacology—were just duck soup to me, and when I went into those courses and did very well I realized the footprints of Dr. Armstrong were all around me.

"The College stands firm in this noble struggle for the minds of our youth. . ."

By Paul R. Verkuil '61

(President Verkuil gave the following remarks at the 1986 Charter Day ceremonies in Phi Beta Kappa Hall on Feb. 8, 1986.)

Higher education in the 1980s . . . is a considerably more complex proposition than it was 30, or even 10, years ago. The forces affecting its fortunes come at it from all directions, from the outside and from within its own walls and from forces friendly as well as critical of the academic enterprise.

We are experiencing a widening gulf between the faculty's expectations of students and, in turn, students' expectations of the learning experience. In a just-published survey by the Carnegie Foundation over 40 percent of undergraduates (from a sample of 5,000 students at 310 colleges and universities) said they would leave school immediately if it would not adversely affect their job chances. And the evidence is that many act on these impulses, since nationally only about 50 percent of college students stay to graduate. These statistics may also help explain the emphatic shift to undergraduate business programs on many campuses that has led to efforts arbitrarily to curtail business majors. . . .

President Verkuil

An earlier study by the Carnegie Foundation on faculty attitudes revealed frustration over students' preparation and academic interests. This failure of communication between institution and students would be less troubling from a societal perspective were it true that those students who leave early due to boredom or the lure of material success were in fact satisfied with their lives. But the Carnegie survey is not sanguine on that score. About 60 percent of the student respondents said they were "very apprehensive" about the future of their country and nearly 35 percent expected nuclear war in their lifetime. Faced with these distressing signals, universities today must take stock of the relationship of student and teacher and of their educational programs.

At William and Mary there are some reassuring signs. Our most recent statistics on the entering class of 1980 show that we graduated over 80 percent of our student body, the highest such percentage in the Commonwealth. These students do not flock lemming-like to undergraduate business programs. We award more Bachelor of Science degrees than Bachelor of Business Administration degrees, and the later category includes undergraduates of our prestigious accounting program. We receive high marks on student-faculty interaction and our liberal arts curriculum is firmly entrenched. Undoubtedly the College's selectivity among students helps make it buck the trends suggested by the Carnegie survey. Our natural advantages of history, location and physical beauty are not easily replicable. But we have one thing going for us that is significant and may be copied: that is our size. The survey results seemed to produce more negative responses about college life as the institution's number of students grew from 5,000 to 10,000 to 15,000 to over 20,000. Size is within any institution's control and should be considered when issues of educational quality arise. There is in this country's educational system room for a distinctive yet small public university. I suggest to you we are the model for that kind of university.

But this does not mean we should become complacent. In-depth and systematic review of our curriculum is overdue. Our new initiatives in honors and interdisciplinary study may have lessons for the curriculum as a whole that have been overlooked. The relationship of undergraduate and graduate professional curricula may be able to yield as yet unrecognized educational benefits. As an institution we must continue to educate students for a lifetime of learning despite pressures for so-called "relevant" employment-related courses. The lesson from the Carnegie survey is quite sobering here—if we do not convince students that lifetime learning in the broad and challenging liberal arts sense is indispensable, not only to their employment opportunities but to their emotional and civic well-being as citizens, we will lose them, and in the process render ourselves irrelevant. The College stands firm in this noble struggle for the minds of our youth. . . .

Marvelous Millie!

Millie West's Leadership Fuels Growth of Women's Athletics

BY FRANCES BOBBE

After 66 separate years, the men's and women's athletic departments at William and Mary will be consolidated. In February following a Board of Visitors meeting, President Verkuil announced that the departments will be merged into a single administrative unit as part of a comprehensive reorganization of the university's administration.

Under the consolidation, John Randolph '64, formerly director of athletics for men, will serve as director of athletics for the entire program. Millie West, formerly director of athletics for women, will become associate athletic director with responsibility for all non-revenue or olympic sports.

The move marks the end of an era for the William and Mary women's athletic program. And, for its last 16 years, the era has been marked by West's leadership.

West, who came to the College in 1959, was named director of women's athletics and chairman of the women's physical education department in 1969, and in 1979, she became full-time women's athletic director. In recent years, she has led the program through some truly dynamic changes.

On Oct. 21, 1982, the College held a press conference in recognition of its women's athletic program. "Our women's intercollegiate athletic program has evolved into one of the best in the Southeast," Millie said at the time.

And, it was true.

In the 10 preceding years, the women's athletic budget had increased from $20,000 in 1972 to over $600,000 in 1982. Because of increased student demand, the number of women's sports offered had increased from eight to 14. Further, West's staff had grown from eight to 23.

At that time West commented, "Although there have been a number of legislative changes in the past 10 years designed to bring equality to men's and women's programs, we at William and Mary have taken many initiatives to improve women's sports because we thought they were in the best interests of the College."

Looking to 1982-83, when the entire women's program (except for gymnastics and basketball, which rose in 1984-85) began competing at the Division I level, West said, "As competitors in Division I we need to concentrate on the full-scholarship athlete, the national-caliber athlete with the potential of becoming William and Mary's first Rhodes Scholar."

"The competition for women who are good students and good athletes is tremendous," West noted.

After 16 years as director of intercollegiate athletics for women, Millie West will become associate athletic director in charge of all olympic sports when the men's and women's athletics programs are merged.

"That kind of recruiting is expensive."

West did not, and has not, met such fiscal challenges indifferently. She has served as tournament chairman for the 1983 and the 1985 Nabisco Wightman Cup tennis tournaments. The first edition raised nearly $72,000 for women's athletics, while the second installment is expected to generate $95,000. These proceeds are invested in an endowment fund for women's athletics. The fund supplements the Martha Barksdale Scholarship Fund, the Constance M. K. Applebee Scholarship Endowment Fund, and income from the Athletic Educational Foundation's annual drive. In May of 1983, the first W&M Invitational Pro-Am was held and generated over $28,000 for the women's intercollegiate athletic program.

Aside from monetary implications, the shift to Division I raised the question of whether or not Tribe teams would continue to be competitive. In 1981-82, the program's overall record was 104 wins versus 69 losses, with four ties, for a 59.9 winning percentage. In addition, teams and individuals from eight sports represented the College in national competitions, and three women won national titles.

The following year, the program accrued a 54.5 record. This included the gymnastics team's NAIA national title, the lacrosse team's NCAA bid, and swimmer Erin Sheehy's qualifying for the NCAAs. Altogether, six teams competed through the regional level and five won state championships.

In 1983-84, only the program's second year in Division I, Tribe teams compiled an overall record of 122 wins—the highest of any Division I women's program in Virginia—against 66 losses and four ties. The resulting winning percentage of 63.5, nearly 10 percentage points higher than the previous year, was the program's best ever. The fencing and gymnastic teams placed in national contests, while eight Indians earned All-America recognition. Led by the ECAC-champion soccer team, seven sports competed through the regional level, and four squads won state crowns.

Though W&M's win ratio fell below .500 in 1984-85, it was a banner year in many ways. The women's soccer team and gymnast Lori Pepple advanced to the NCAA championships, and lacrosse player Mary Pat Kurtz was named to two All-America first teams. Seven teams were represented at the regional, and one team and 10 individuals took state titles. Further, field hockey co-captain Sheila Cunneen was named to the CoSIDA At-Large Academic All-America Third Team. She was also a Rhodes Scholar state finalist in New Jersey this past year.

Thus far in 1985-86, the program has a 53.8 ratio.

Highlights included the women's soccer team's second straight NCAA bid, its first two All-Americans and its three All-Regional honorees. Besides breaking every school record (not counting season averages), the women's gymnastics team has been ranked as high as third in the NCAA Division II as well as first in the Southeast and ECAC regional standings. The golf and volleyball teams won their respective ECAC championships, and the spikers also captured the first Colonial Athletic Association crown.

As the College's new athletic era begins, West, in her new position, will be responsible for the administration of all non-revenue sports. According to President Verkuil, reasons for the change are related to the need for greater efficiency in the management of the sports programs and to his desire for a more centralized system of administration reflecting the directions of a modern university.

With Millie's record, how can W&M become anything but modern?

Hall of Fame Adds 7 New Members

The 1973 men's cross country team and seven other individuals have been inducted into the William and Mary Athletic Hall of Fame.

In addition to the cross country team, the new members are: Jane Harland Bates '73, Virgilina, Va., who participated in five sports at William and Mary, serving as a four year member of the swimming team and as captain of the field hockey team; Roger Bergey '63, Dayton, Va., a three year starter at guard on the men's basketball team; Reggie Clark '75, Williamsburg, Va., who won the 880 meter NCAA championship in his senior year; Bob DeTombe '59, Hamburg, N.Y., a two time Southern Conference cross country champion and member of the track team; Bob Gill '49, Virginia Beach, Va., a starting pitcher on the baseball team for four seasons, who never had a losing record; Joe Montgomery '74, Williamsburg, Va., an All-American center on the football team; and Lonnie Parker '71, Virginia Beach, Va., who was twice Virginia State wrestling champion in his weight class.

The members of the 1973 cross country team inducted into the Hall of Fame are Murray (Mac) Collins III '77, Hampton, Va.; Tim Cook '75, Chambersburg, Pa.; Brendan Gallaher '76, Los Angeles; John Greenplate '76, Audubon, Pa.; Bill Louv '74, Birmingham, Ala.; Ron Martin '74, Greensboro, N.C.

Howard Smith '43: The Spirit at Work

Longtime PE Department Chairman Retires After 40 Caring Years

BY BOB JEFFREY '74

After an exciting upset victory at the Iron Duke tournament in Pittsburgh a few years back, William and Mary's men's basketball team returned in the middle of the night to a dark and silent campus. School was out for the Christmas holidays. Yet when the team arrived at the door to William and Mary Hall, the place was festooned with signs and banners welcoming them home and congratulating them on the win. Was there a spirit at work?

Yes, indeed! It was the hardworking spirit that has animated William and Mary athletics and physical education for 40 years — an enthusiastic spirit named Howard Smith '43. Putting up hand-made signs at 2 a.m. is just one example of the special care and devotion that have made this extraordinary man a favorite with students and colleagues alike.

"I've always tried to let the individuals on our teams know how much we appreciate what they're going through," says Smith. "I know if I was in their position, it would certainly be nice to be recognized."

This spring Howard Smith will retire after four decades of service to the College, including 27 years as chairman of the men's physical education department. In recognition, his many friends and associates have organized a scholarship fund in the name of Howard and his wife Betty. The scholarship will provide financial assistance to needy students who are interested in pursuing careers in physical education. As a further expression of their affection for Howard, there will be a dinner to honor the Smiths on Saturday, May 3, to be held, appropriately, at Blow Gymnasium, longtime site of the P.E. department. (A reception, with cash bar, will begin at 5:30 p.m., to be followed by dinner with a $10 charge at 7 p.m.)

"Howard Smith had done more for physical education than anybody who has ever been here," says Joe Agee '52, golf coach and professor of physical education. "He coached almost every sport when he first came here. Then he kept us all together through the years — athletics and physical education. When things looked bleak a couple of times, he just buckled up a little tighter and worked a little harder, and because of his effort, I think we're stronger now than we've ever been."

Smith has been taking care of details ever since he first came to Williamsburg from New England as a freshman in 1939. On the advice of a high school principal whose son was going to W&M, Smith turned down a baseball scholarship offer to Temple University in favor of the small town atmosphere and academic rigors of the College.

Lacking financial aid, Smith made ends meet by holding down a number of parttime jobs. He raked leaves on campus, worked as a lifeguard at Blow Gym pool, and waited tables at the College dining hall.

Smith also put his musical ability to work during his student days, playing drums in a 14-piece dance band led by law student Bill Arthur '38, who later served as rector of the College. "We played Saturday night dances in Blow Gym," Smith recalled. "At that time the girls had to be in at 11 p.m. unless they went to the dance; then they could stay out till 12."

Smith graduated with a physical education major and left Williamsburg in January of 1943 to attend midshipman school at Columbia University. Three years of active duty in the Mediterranean followed.

In 1946 Smith was teaching at the high school in his hometown of Wareham, Mass., when he got a call from W&M physical education department head Ken Rawlinson. "He asked if I'd like a job teaching five classes, coaching varsity swimming and junior varsity basketball, scouting for the football team, and directing the intramural program — for $1800 a year," Smith said.

At that time, the P.E. department consisted of two fulltime and three parttime staff members, including the varsity coaches and an athletic director. "We all wore lots of different hats," said Smith. "That's how we got along."

In the summers Smith pursued graduate degrees at Syracuse University. It was there that he made the catch of his life when he met and married Mary Elizabeth Humbert, a Syracuse native, in 1949.

Smith had to give up coaching the baseball team in 1952 when he was named chairman of the physical education department, a post he held until 1978. He presided over the growth and professionalization of the physical education faculty and department, while working closely with men's athletics. "I've always felt athletics and P.E. were hand-in-glove. We're in it together and we rise or fall together," says Smith.

Over the years Smith has sent out literally thousands of physical education majors into the professional world. He has been gratified by their achievements. "We've had so many outstanding young people who majored in P.E. We've probably got as many head coaches, heads of departments, school principals and superintendents as any school I know of, particularly here in Virginia," said Smith.

With the same meticulous attention to detail that goes into making midnight banners, Smith has maintained voluminous files of correspondence with his former students. "This past Christmas I wrote to 700 of them — with a personal note on each one," he said.

Along with his physical education duties, Smith has enthusiastically given of his time to a multitude of College activities. He fondly recalled the 12 years (1946-58) spent as faculty advisor to the student dance committee. Smith succeeded in attracting such top acts as Harry James, Louis Armstrong, Count Basie, Vaughan Monroe, and the Jimmy and Tommy Dorsey bands to play the weekend dances at Blow Gym.

Another highlight for Smith was the interaction with students gained through his 14 years (1958-72) as faculty advisor to ODK, the national student leadership group. "My opportunities to deal with the leaders on campus — presidents of the student body, presidents of each class — made my work that much more beneficial," he says.

The Order of the White Jacket is yet another organization that has benefited from the Smith touch. OWJ is composed of former students of the College, many of them athletes, who worked their way through W&M by waiting on tables. After Smith took over as president in 1982, he worked to replenish the treasury and increase membership.

"It was with the help of many people that we were able to revive the group," said Smith. "Then the ball really started rolling. Now we have people calling us trying to join."

Joe Agee summed up the feelings that many have for Howard Smith: "No one else would even consider doing all the things and spending all of the time to keep everyone — athletes, P.E. majors, and faculty and staff — together and in contact with William and Mary. I don't know if we could ever give him enough credit for all the things he's done for so many."

While Smith avoids plaudits for himself, he eagerly gives credit to his wife, Betty. "She's the one who made it all possible," he said. Together they raised a family that includes daughter Sharon and sons Sandy and Howard Franklin.

As for retirement, Smith said, "It's like putting new wheels on an old chassis," an apt metaphor for those who are familiar with Smith's car. He will continue to teach at least one class in the Spring semester; and if they're not careful, he's liable to keep sneaking into William and Mary Hall in the wee, wee hours of the morning to put up new signs and banners. The spirit never sleeps.

December. We took my sister, Evelyn, out for a birthday dinner Saturday night and the temperature was 58 degrees! Have a nice winter and I'll try to have some news next time." Yes Mathilda, weather conditions have been just as unpredictable here, most unusual!

Suzanne Garrett Montague tells us she is planning to join us for Olde Guard Day. That is good news; we look forward with much pleasure to being with you, Suzanne.

No recent direct report from Mary and Art Winder but I did hear by the grapevine that Mary is home and doing quite well. Good news, Mary! We are happy that you have recovered so nicely. Do take care. We shall continue to keep you in our prayers. We hope that you are keeping well and happy, Art, and don't get the flu! It has hit our area quite hard.

An interesting note from Caroline Sinclair. She takes no credit for the writing of Animal Limericks but gives all to her writing circle. Then she states "I was just chairman of the 'Publishing Committee.' It has been very popular. We sold almost 2,000 copies in less than three months. Someone has called it 'The Rage of Richmond.'" We still have a few copies available."

If you have not received your copy of "Cruise the Fjords," contact the Alumni Office. This is one trip you will not wish to miss. In 1962 we took the North Cape Cruise, which included Sweden, Denmark, Holland, Germany and Iceland in addition to Norway — a 35-day cruise — and a side-trip to Russia. Of all the countries Norway captured my lasting love!

Stuart and Helen have no earth-shaking news. We have enjoyed the travelogues at the Mosque sponsored by the Richmond Kiwanis Club of which Stuart is a member.

And saying that reminds me that on Feb. 24 he received his 40th-year membership pin. I was very proud to witness this. In March we will attend the Kiwanis president's party at the Commonwealth Club.

In December we attended the 50th anniversary celebration of the Junior Woman's Club of Hilton Village, which was organized in 1935 while I was president of the Woman's Club of Hilton Village. The Junior Club honored me by presenting me with a beautiful scroll making me an Honorary Member of the Junior Woman's Club of Hilton Village (Newport News). I have been their sponsor for these 50 years and was cited for my support.

Just before Christmas we had the pleasure of a visit from one granddaughter and her husband and one grandson and his "friend" (a very lovely young lady working on her doctorate at Virginia Commonwealth University).

Miss Eva, the kitty cat, still runs the house and gets sweeter every day she lives. A little four-month-old black cat is trying very hard to break into the "White household" but Miss Eva says, "No way," with which we quite agree.

When the April issue of the Gazette reaches you, Valentines Day, St. Patrick's Day and Easter, I trust, will have brought great joy and many blessings. So, I wish for each of you a beautiful May Day with baskets of beautiful flowers filled with bundles of love. God bless.

Dear Classmates:

Without help from you who can still read my efforts but never write, I find it increasingly difficult to turn out a newsletter four times yearly. I know that you feel others may not be interested in what you do, but I assure you that they are, so please try. Write to me by May 1 for the June letter — that's my deadline.

It was a genuine pleasure to hear from some of you at Christmastime — a word or two of thanks truly warms my heart! Thank you.

It's been five months since Homecoming but I assume you'd like to know, who from

Dear Classmates:

My daughter, Barbara, without our knowledge entered a radio contest for a Caribbean cruise on the SS Norway, hoping to make it surprise birthday gifts for us. She won! Stuart was still in the hospital. Barbara was so excited that she dashed into his room and revealed the secret! I assure you he quickly recovered, and the trip was perfectly delightful — just what we both needed.

We did return in time for Homecoming and found it another most pleasant occasion. Signing in with us on the registration board were Bill and Elisabeth Gravely, Jeannette Yates, Vernon and Elizabeth Nunn, John and Louise St. George, Sarah Rew Pennewell, Ed Islin, Elisabeth and Bill Cowne and John and Nan Fuller. Also Charlie and Betty Polard were there. If I have omitted names, please know it was not intentional.

Ed Islin was the first to respond to my call for news this month. He states that he had a good Christmas. He joined Betty and Bob (daughter and husband) in Emporia for the Saffelle family Christmas dinner on Sunday the 22nd. From there he journeyed to Betty's and Bob's home in Burlington and joined their family for Christmas. Then he drove to Charlotte, N.C., and visited his oldest grandson, Robert Saffelle, a practicing attorney, and his wife. Ed also visited "Heritage USA," a most fascinating and unusual venture — the vision of Jim and Tammy Bakker now a reality — about 10 miles from Charlotte on the South Carolina line. One must visit as brochures and word descriptions are inadequate to describe just what it is. Just unique and interesting." Ed tries to keep up with the Winders by telephone. Happy that Mary is improving, Ed has no long-range plans for 1986; he's just trying to "keep this old body in medium gear with the constant aid of medications. It is fun trying."

From Elizabeth Richter we learn that her oldest grandson, Gregory, who now holds a Ph.D., is still teaching Russian and German at the University of Missouri in Kirksville. Carolyn and her husband are at Penn State working for master's degrees while Kenneth, the youngest, is at Santa Cruz University of California studying English.

Marjorie Brulle Shook writes that she is looking forward to attending the next Olde Guard luncheon. She has moved to the Rappahannock Westminster-Canterbury and writes, "I'm still not completely settled as I brought too much with me and still am having decisions to make." Join the club, Marjorie, I'm still trying to render decisions since our move here three and a half years ago. Marjorie adds, "But I love it here. I'm where I wanted to remain in Virginia's Northern Neck." She concludes, "There are four other William and Mary alumni here!" Good, Marjorie, will you please send me their names and classes? Thanks. Please continue to keep us up-to-date on your activities.

I received a very pretty card from Jekyll Island, Ga., with no signature but I shall take a wild guess! This is the gist of the card: "Since last report our time has been spent in arranging for our trip down and since arrival getting settled with numerous changes in our facilities. In short, turmoil has existed since arrival. We are settled now and enjoying the sunshine. Both are doing as well as could be expected." Thanks, Vernon and Elizabeth Nunn. Just keep on enjoying that sunshine, and if you have a little extra to spare just bottle it up and send it to Virginia.

From Mathilda Crawford Whitehouse we have an interesting weather report for Hingham, Mass. "The only interesting thing around here has been the weather. Here it is Jan. 20, and we've had only a few flurries in

F. EDWARD HARRIS '64
NAMED UNITED WAY HEAD

F. Edward Harris '64, president-Western Region of United Virginia Bank, has been named the 1986 United Way Campaign Chairman for United Way of Roanoke Valley, Inc. A native of Newport News, Va., Harris served as campaign chairman for the Peninsula United Way in 1977 and president of the board in 1979. Harris has been in the banking profession for 20 years, beginning his career as a management trainee for UVB in Norfolk. In addition to William and Mary, he studied at the University of Virginia, Rutgers University and the University of Oklahoma. He was named an Outstanding Young Man of America in 1977 and received the Presidential Citizenship Award from Hampton Institute in 1982.

ALUMNUS NOMINATED FOR TOP CIA POST

Robert M. Gates '65 has been nominated by President Reagan to replace John McMahon as deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency, the No. two post in the CIA. Gates, who received his B.A. in history at William and Mary, his M.A. from Indiana University and his Ph.D. from Georgetown University in 1974, joined the CIA in 1968 and served as a member of the National Security Council Staff of the White House from 1974 to 1979. In 1982 he became deputy director for intelligence of the CIA, and in 1983 he became chairman of the National Intelligence Council.

'27 besides me made it: Eleanor Calkins, Margaret Holman McCoy, Annette Peterson Clark, Joe Muscarelle and Margaret, C. M. "Spike" Smith, R. E. B. "Buzzy" Stewart and Martha, and Tom Yates with Kitty.

True, our numbers dwindle inexorably, but there still are over 100 of us and most could come. This time I'll lay blame on the terribly late date for Homecoming. Please note that you can make up for that by attending Olde Guard Day in April. See details elsewhere in this issue.

As I mentioned in the December Gazette, we need to have a meeting before or after the luncheon and elect some officers for our 60th anniversary reunion just a year from now, 1987. Please don't miss this opportunity.

Frank B. Snyder, of Harrisburg, Pa., who practiced accounting for more than 40 years, recently was named honorary member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants. This AICPA honor is bestowed only on long-time faithful members of the Institute from among a total membership of 231,000 nationally. Congratulations, Frank, and may your retirement be long and happy.

Amazing is a good word for Marie Hofmeyer Tuttle who still commutes five days a week from Westminster-Canterbury in Virginia Beach via the Hampton Roads bridge-tunnel to work full time at NASA's Langley Field Research Center. There she follows her lifelong interest as research librarian. Our admiration, Marie. There's nothing like keeping busy at things you like in order to keep from growing old like the rest of us!

I glean this from the William and Mary Theatre Alumni News for December: "Marquerite McDaniel (Mac) Dawson, homemaker and great-grandmother, involved in play directing at Monterey High School (that was shortly after graduation), Blair Junior High in Norfolk and the Lutheran Church for many years; she remembers fondly the directing skills of Miss Althea Hunt from student days."

The Theatre News also lists accomplishments of Frank Hopkins and W. H. "Bill" Morrow that I have cited here before.

That reminds me: Bill, who has spent most of his life since June 1927 at Mount Hermon School in Northfield, Mass., is one of those who turns out a Christmas letter in lieu of cards to greet the host of friends he's made over the years. In contrast to many such communications, Bill always makes his interesting. Samples: "Grandson Craig is at the U. of Mass. and engaged. Granddaughter Joan is in San Diego going to UCLA. Scott Morrow in February will complete his Navy training for nuclear submarine service and Bethany, his sister, is a freshman at Hendrix College in Arkansas."

Bill describes himself as "the Pearl Mesta of Moore Cottage, greeting everyone from guests at seven wedding receptions and baby showers to the Harlem basketball team." (Moore Cottage is Mount Hermon's guest home.)

Then, there's my running exchange with old pal, Bill Hogan re: our actual graduation date and place. He's right, of course, it was in "old" Phi Beta on June 8, not 7, because finals ran three days.

Next, Bill picks on Frank Hopkins (see December letter) about theatrical productions. Says he: "Frank missed a golden opportunity to report where the thespian contests were held before the first PBK Hall was built! The present crop of students live on the lap of luxury and think it was always thus!"

Bill reports that his sister, who lives next door to his "Tipperary," was ill at time of writing, so he was staying with her, doing the cooking, caring for her dog and being thankful for so many friends in Keysville.

Just received another welcome letter from Frank Hopkins with a copy of some of his remembrances about college in 1923-27. I've often thought of doing the same but never get around to it despite importunings from some of you classmates. Instead, several years ago, I donated my College Memory Book to the Paschall Library in the Alumni House. It's full of pictures, clippings, dance cards, snapshots, programs and greetings from scores of fellow students. If you haven't seen it, ask Frankie Martens to pull it out of the archives.

Finally, a personal note, if you don't mind. Recently, after nearly 40 years on the Salvation Army Advisory Board, I was made a life member, an honor accorded only one other. This I regard as one of the highest compliments I've ever received. Through the years since Navy service in WWII, I've known and worked with some of the most dedicated people in the "Army" that one finds anywhere in the world. With meager pay, long hours and selfless dedication to serving their fellowman, these wonderful men and women carry on with cheerful smiles and unending vigor.

All of which convinced me long ago that "when the saints go marching in" through the portals of Heaven, these followers of Gen. William Booth will be leading the procession. I wonder if there are any others in the class who have been or are associated with this great organization. If so, drop me a line. It's an interesting subject.

Until Olde Guard Day then, Cheers!

Your response to my request to write in often has been very gratifying. We hope you will keep up the habit, so your classmates will hear from you regularly.

Eva Lucille Atkinson Trombley, New York City, writes, "Having sold my stock as one of the two owners of the Tobe-Coburn School for Fashion Careers . . . I am in a doctorate program at Columbia University where I received my master's in 1981 and have been an adjunct professor at New York colleges and universities as well as a director of educational programs post-secondary." Over 29 years, Eva covered the couture showings in Rome, Paris, London and Madrid while her husband, the late William A. Trombley '31 contacted international accounts for major insurance companies he represented. Eva was honored with membership in the New York Academy of Women Achievers. Past president of the New York Panhellenic, she serves on its board of directors. Other interests are Kappa Kappa Gamma, St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church, the Advertising Women of New York and the William and Mary and the Taft School alumni associations. Eva reports that the William and Mary-Princeton game was exciting and well handled with its tailgate and cocktail parties.

Eva's son is the urban affairs writer for the Los Angeles Times. He travels extensively and often comes to New York on assignments. A granddaughter is in college and another works in TV in Los Angeles. Eva plans to take the William and Mary Alaska trip.

Polly Hines Brown, Eden Prairie, Minn., reports, "We've had 21 inches of snow and more predicted, so it will be a white winter for sure! It's really surprising how quickly the city gets control of it — those little bulldozers jumping around skillfully like grasshoppers and piling up great mounds of the white fluff. I'll tell you what Minnesota is like. I went to a doctor for a checkup. She said 'Take off your clothes.' So I did, and she put them on. Zero temperatures cause strange behavior." Polly reports that the year brought a hearing aid, which was a struggle but kept her in the mainstream of things. She says her grandchildren are somewhat bewildered by their active grandmother, and she enjoys their hockey games and ice skating competitions. Brutus, Polly's beloved walking companion, died and the new pup proved too strenuous for Polly. However, there's good news. She now has a "wonderful two legged companion whose pace matches mine." They go to the Baptist Church on Sunday nights and play a lot of UNO, at which Polly is "getting to be a whiz."

H. Caleb Cushing, Roanoke, Va., writes, "Old Man Noah knew a thing or two — so he built an ark and floated off on the flood! We couldn't do that, so our backyard creek floated a lot of us off. We came home from a 10 a.m. Monday rehearsal to find seven feet of muddy water in our rec room and storage — so did our neighbors. That's why this is a handwritten communication. My 'office' — desk, typewriter and papers — were part of the mess of mud and clothes that covered the floor.

"Many people were hit as bad — and worse — as we, but I thought I would let '29 know of the demise of 'Sammy' the guitar, which for 60 years was an inseparable pal. He was made, literally, matchwood as the rushing water stirred and tossed everything. 'Sammy' was named for my roommate at W&M, the famous Samuel Granville Douglas DeJarnette Staples and carried the name 'Sammy' for short. Tell the girls of the old dorms not to weep for him — he had a long and busy life and had accumulated almost as many cracks, creases and wrinkles as I have. He helped put me through college and get married and give many programs for people. Farwell, 'Sammy.' Sleep in pieces!"

Peggy Eacho Corcoran, Houston, says, "After three years in Florida we decided to move near the grandchildren and enjoy having four seasons once again, although winters here aren't all that extreme. Nice to have a fireplace going for a change. Take care, and everything nice in '86. With best wishes for a Happy Holiday Season from our new home."

WAYNE LORGUS '75 PROMOTED BY CAMPBELL

Campbell Soup Company has appointed Wayne R. Lorgus '75 as director-long-range planning on the operations logistics staff. Lorgus, who joined Campbell in 1982 as manager of corporate audit, has been director-corporate audit since last year. Before joining the company he was a manager with Arthur Andersen & Co.

Virginia Smyre Maupin, Richmond, writes, "As a member of the Class of '29, your threat to give up 'the job' was shocking!"

"Would nostalgia be interesting to our members? Something that happened nearly 60 years ago we could all relate to? We were once asked to write memories of our professors. I wrote about three, but never mailed them. One was about Dr. John Garland Pollard. In our time he taught required government course. Each of us remember him with love and affection. He began each class with a poem or Bible verse. One day he called me to come to the front of the class and announced, you and I are going to put on a play today! This was a rainy day and like everyone else I had on a yellow slicker — Indian head on the back — names and messages all over. Now, he said, our drama takes place 40 years hence on a pullman train. You are a lovely lady dressed in mink and silk! I am an old man reading a newspaper. Suddenly you spot me — rush over — and gush, 'Oh, Dr. Pollard, you remember me.' Pulling his glasses down on his nose, staring at me long and inquiringly he said very slowly, 'Well!' Then rapidly asked these questions! What is a constitution? What does it set forth? State the preamble, etc. (at least six questions). Now if you can answer these questions accurately, I will rise, shake hands and say, 'Of course I remember you, sit down and tell me about yourself' — But if you can't I shall say, No, I don't remember you and go on reading my paper.' By this time the class was in an uproar, and I was blushing. As I write this word-picture I truly hope it will tickle your funny bones — P.S. You asked those that never wrote in to write, so I did!"

Barton D. Pattie, Staunton, Va. — "When I read in the Alumni Gazette that you were considering quitting as class reporter because of lack of response, I began trying to think up something to submit to avert that disaster." Barton, editor of the 1929 Colonial Echo, is now living in retirement near Staunton after a long career with the Associated Press. He and his wife, Augusta, are natives of that area and recently celebrated their 53rd wedding anniversary. They have two sons. Burton Jr. is marketing director of a Union Carbide chemical division, Danbury, Conn., and Kenton is vice president of the International Communications Industries Association, Fairfax, Va.

Edith H. Shackman Clarke, Lake Wales, Fla., reports "No change! Still director of volunteer service at Lake Wales Hospital and Extended Care Facility. Also serving on vestry of Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd and as coordinator of the church thrift shop."

I want to thank all of those classmates who wrote and hope you and many others will continue to write. The next issue will be in June, and the deadline is May 8.

P.S. The following classmates attended Homecoming 1985. Mary Cabaniss Bridges, Macon C. Sammons, Elizabeth J. Hines, Joe James, Stuart White, Ernestine Boyce, Agnes Brittingham Willard, William (Billy) Bickers, Margaret Shreeves Bozarth and Arthur P. Henderson.

It was fun to renew friendships at Homecoming. It was good to see Martha Savage. She said that after leaving Richmond where she had been a librarian, she worked in the Southampton County Library until she retired in 1978. In August she enjoyed a vacation in the Poconos, and, in the fall, she saw "Singing in the Rain" on stage in New York City and Lily Tomlin in a solo performance. While at the Metropolitan Italian Asto Restaurant in Greenwich Village she saw several opera stars.

Liz Griffin Conkling and Gerald were honored with a surprise reception given by their sons, Ged and Clark, on Nov. 9. The occasion was their 50th wedding anniversary. The reception was held at the Bethesda Country Club.

Herbie Stewart's wife of 44 years, Idoline, died last July. Our thoughts are with you, Herb. Herb did enjoy several W&M home games in the fall. Since moving into a high-rise apartment, he has given his baby grand piano to West End United Methodist Church where he is minister of music. He played a concert on the piano, and it was dedicated in December at the church. His 1984 Thanksgiving cantata, "My Cup Runneth Over," was sung on Nov. 24, and his 1983 Christmas cantata, "Ring Noel!" was performed on Dec. 22 at West End.

Herb's new address is: 1 Harbor Court, B-20, Portsmouth, VA 23704.

Martha Barrow Hatcher, Marian Handy Anderson, and Katherine Lam found it exciting to be present at the inauguration of President Verkuil. They attended the reception, luncheon, and inauguration at William and Mary Hall.

Louis Arthur Perillo retired in July after almost 40 years of pediatric practice. Now, he and his wife, Teresa, are looking forward to having time to visit their five children and seven grandchildren. Son, Peter, graduated from W&M in 1969.

Elizabeth Allen Snead writes that she was the oldest alumna attending the 1985 Return to the Wren and really enjoyed it. She said it was not only educational but fun.

Sorry to be so late to extend sympathy to Ellen Ticer King upon the death of A. Stanley King '26. We have been thinking of you, Ellen. Her new address is: 5700 Williamsburg Landing Drive, Apt. 103, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

Hope to see you at Olde Guard Day in April.

Editor's Note: Classmates and friends will be saddened to learn that Cornelia died unexpectedly on Feb. 12. A devoted and faithful class reporter since 1980, she wrote her class letter shortly before her death. The Alumni Office is saddened by our loss. We will miss her.

We were sorry to hear of the death of Nelda May Kingsolver on Oct. 27, 1985. Nelda is survived by her husband, Price Kingsolver of Robersonville, N.C.

Camilla Nelson Crockett is actively engaged in business as the president of the Duke of York Corporation of Yorktown, Va. Her granddaughter graduated from the College this past June. For a vacation Camilla likes ocean cruises. Last November she went to the Caribbean on the QE-2. In college she was house president of Brown Hall and a member of the judicial council.

William W. Webb Jr. is engaged in real estate development in Bowling Green, Va. While in college his athletic specialty was pole vaulting.

BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION OPENS RESOURCE CENTER

William and Mary's School of Business Administration has a new Professional Resource Center equipped with not only standard business reference works, but also with computer data bases providing the latest national and international business information. Funded by a $100,000 grant from the Anheuser-Busch Foundation, the new center in Chancellors Hall is open to both students at William and Mary and to local business people in the Williamsburg community. The center will stock over 800 reports representing all public companies in Virginia and the Fortune 500. The Business Index, Business Periodical Index, F&S Index, and the Accountant's Index will be part of its holdings as well as video equipment for classroom use. Other resources include the Dow Jones news retrieval system and about 200 business bibliographic and statistical data services through the Dialog system, as well as Nexis, which provides a news service from major newspapers across the country. Charlotte Davis Brown, former business reference librarian at Old Dominion University, has been named director of the center.

Florida. He attended Ohio State University for his D.V.M. degree. He survived a heart bypass operation in 1977 and has been in good health until recently.

Margaret Jack Griffin attended William and Mary from 1929 to 1931 and transferred to Longwood College, where she graduated in 1933. Margaret reports that she has one daughter and two grandchildren. The granddaughter is working on her master's degree at the University of Illinois. The grandson is a freshman at Carnegie Mellon University. Until five years ago, she lived in Sherwood Forest, Md., before retiring to Sun City Center, Fla. Europe, the Orient, Canada and the National Parks have been some of her travel destinations.

Catherine Cubberly Beamon enjoyed the alumni trip to Greece this past May. Her three sons gave her a birthday party on Jan. 29, 1986, her 75th birthday. In college, Catherine was president of the Women's Student Government among many other extra-curricular activities.

Jeanne Rose, who is retired and lives in Arlington, Va., visited her cousin in Switzerland in August. While there she made side trips to St. Moritz and Lugano.

Colin Vince, who lives in Newport News, had a visit from his son-in-law, daughter and granddaughter, Michelle, for Christmas. Michelle and her parents live in West Germany.

Lota Spence Reid reports that her grandson John J. Reid II now attends St. Christopher's school in Richmond.

William and Mary has made much progress since it became a state institution in 1906. It is expected that President Verkuil will enable the College to add to its prestige and usefulness to the coming college generations.

Even though our class came to the College before the days of "selective admissions," good students were enrolled. An old 1931 document reveals that at the close of our sophomore year, 31 men of the 204 men in the class of '33 were on the dean's list.

In those days the dean's list for men and women were separate. We even preceded the present universal system of assigning grades of A,B,C, etc. Numerical grades were given, indicating great faith in the reliability of the tests and examinations.

The number attending Homecoming was smaller than usual, coming so near our 50th reunion probably accounted for this. The sign-in board showed the following registered: J. Nelson Jester, Margaret Edgar Knight, Mason Sizemore, Hazel Johnson Sizemore, Ann Northington Westlow, Dr. Edward J. Westlow, Anne Nenzel Lambert, Joe May, Ned Scott, John A. Mapp and Mary Bell Mapp. When the Olde Guard's picture was taken the Pope twins sat just in front of us. They are still as neat and attractive as ever and we still cannot tell Edith from Sarah.

A letter from Elise Barnes Hardy tells of the Library Science Class of 1935 having breakfast together on Sunday morning of the 50th reunion weekend. Nine of the 10 living members were present and they had a wonderful time.

A kind note from Pauline Stanley Ogden told of her and Cam's travels of recent date. They saw the Indians defeat Princeton. Pauline and Cam are two of our most loyal members of '35.

Ferrum College has recognized Ann Ramsey's father, Curtis L. Ramsey '29, by awarding him the "Distinguished Alumni Award for Service to Education." Yet another honor came to him last April when he was recognized for his service to the youth of Virginia. The Model General Assembly named him the recipient of its Service to Youth Award with a presentation made by the governor.

The following note from Esther Stokes Swink was passed to us by the Alumni Office.

"After 42 years of service as a teacher and counselor with the Norfolk City School System, I have now retired and am thoroughly enjoying traveling (have toured Europe twice during the past two years), playing bridge, swimming and being with my three little grandsons and their families who live nearby.

"In June of this year, my husband, Gilbert Swink, also retired and we plan to enjoy many more years together.

"How many of you realize that Cary Stadium along with our class celebrated its 50th birthday in 1985? You may remember that the first game played in the stadium was on Sept. 21, 1935, with UVA. The weather was very hot. It was before the day of Coke sales in the stands. Several energetic students sold ice water for 10¢ per cup. President John Stewart Bryon addressed the crowd and said the stadium was once the playground of Indians who scalped the original Cavaliers of Virginia. There was no scalping that day. The game ended in a scoreless tie. The Richmond Times Dispatch had a most interesting story on this."

From the W&M Theatre Alumni News of Dec. 2, 1985, comes the following items:

Ralphe E. Ladd, Warsaw, Va., retired professor of American history: "Since W&M, my address has been primarily in Massachusetts — graduate student at Harvard, history instructor at MIT and almost 30 years at Boston State College where I retired in 1983." For two years, 1946-48, he taught at W&M Division Norfolk, now Old Dominion University. He served in the Navy in the Pacific — eight campaigns in four years. He has had no theatrical activity but did have "a slight reputation as a lecturer for being dramatic, evoking an understanding of historical personages. As professor I was involved in union activities and AAUP and got black studies started at Boston State. I was in 'Cousin Althea' Hunt's freshman English class, where she — and frequent girlish giggles in the class — cured me of much of my New England accent. I spent many hours building and moving scenery in old Phi Beta Hall and as prompter wrapped in the curtain, wrote reviews of plays in The Flat Hat which cost me some friends. As president of the Dramatic Club, I secretly substituted wine (Prohibition having just been repealed) for the usual grape juice at our annual banquet — to the surprise of all. Much coughing at the first swig — instant disapproval by Cousin Althea! But Howard Scammon, my fraternity brother, was delighted."

Frances Cosby Nettles, Newport News, Va., retired public school teacher, put on plays at Hilton Elementary School, 1935-37, worked with plays in PTA and helped in church plays. She has been active in AAUW, Delta Kappa Gamma and teacher organizations. AT W&M "it was fun being small and being in plays that needed 'little people.' I surely enjoyed 'Midsummer Night's Dream.' I remember Miss Hunt with fond memories. Howard Scammon's sister, Sarah, was a friend of mine."

J. Stanley (Jack) Smith, Cranston, R.I., retired high school math teacher, has been in community plays and light operas. "I met my wife when she was in chorus and I had a lead in Victor Herbert's 'The Fortune Teller' in 1936." He has been cantor and choir director for 50 years, recalls "taking part in Prof. George M. Small's musical productions. I wish I had taken Prof. Small's advice: A scholarship to Juilliard School of Music and a possible career on the light opera stage." At W&M he was in "H.M.S. Pinafore," "Iolanthe," "The Royal Rotary Minstrels" (he was Mae West!) and "The King's Revelers."

LINDA LAVIN '59 SPEAKS AT WILLIAM AND MARY

Actress Linda Lavin '59 visited Williamsburg in February to deliver the keynote address at the Work for Women Program sponsored by the Center for Executive Development of William and Mary's School of Business Administration. Miss Lavin, who took time out from her schedule to visit with her former teacher Howard M. Scammon Jr. '34, former director of the William and Mary Theatre, spoke on "Women and Work: A Challenge, Not a Choice." The star of CBS-TV's long-running comedy "Alice," Miss Lavin is on the National Commission on Working Women.

What a wonderful Homecoming 1985! You really don't know what you are missing. I took my two granddaughters to see the College, and they loved it. Everyone was so nice to them.

The class of '37 is very fortunate to have Harold Gouldman and Elliot Bloxom as our co-chairmen. They put on a wonderful party. Thanks, too, to the rest of their committee, Jane Sunderland Broudy, Carol Richardson McMurrant, Connie Land Hardenbergh, Ann Reynolds Wood, Fay Bryant Sanedge and Elliot Cohen. And we were so proud of Warne Robinson, who was President of the Society of the Alumni. He and his wife rode in the Parade.

Other '37ers at Homecoming were Doris Campbell Desmond, Bertie Fox, Courtney Zuger, Sally Morse Snyder, Peggie and Linwood Jones, Ben Kincannon, Oscar Ward and his wife and Ellen Latane Gouldman. I hope I didn't omit anyone. These are the ones that were on my reporting list.

Those Theta girls do really stick together. I envy them. Doris Campbell Desmond and Ellen Latane Gouldman met in London in June for tea. I was there then, too, but didn't bump into them. They went on to Edinburgh where Doris met Peter Prentis Causey '36 — 50 years after!!

And speaking of traveling, Jane Sunderland Broudy and Harold were in Italy twice in 1985 — February and August. Glad they weren't there when that horrible bomb went off. It's amazing how much news you can get at Homecoming. All the classmates present said they expected to be at our 50th, so this is my first list. Where are those cards or letters from the rest of you who plan to attend?

I had the nicest letter from Walt "Red" Taylor. After graduating he went to work as an assistant to the city manager of Norfolk, Va. Until 1960, he stayed in the field of local government, serving five cities as their city manager. He left that calling for the greener pastures of the aerospace industry and retired from the Boeing Company of Seattle in 1980. He and his wife have three children and seven grandchildren, (I beat him — I have nine grandchildren) who are the apples of their eyes. Their sons are graduates of Seattle University, but their daughter is the "easterner" and has a degree from Trinity College in Washington, D.C. "Red" is an amateur radio operator and enjoys talking to good friends and acquaintances the world 'round.

In my last column (written Nov. 1) I wished everyone a "Merry X-mas and a Happy New Year." Was I embarrassed when it came out the middle of January! Anyway, the thought was there, so have the best 1986 ever.

(Peggy Prickett Miller is the guest reporter this month.)

Homecoming, though late this year, combined lovely Williamsburg fall weather with a winning football team and a great turn-out of the '39 regulars. Harry and Tina Gravely were there. Harry has sold Gravely Furniture Company of which he was chairman of the board, after 45 years of service. He's retired and gone home, so Tina can fix his lunch, which he admits wasn't part of the marriage contract.

Jan Billet and Tom Kennedy have sold Woodlawn, their historic home outside Richmond, and moved to a condo in Richmond. This was a sad blow to those of us who courted in Woodlawn's charming parlors, but the Kennedys are singing "Hallelujah" that they no longer have a ton or more of leaves to harvest this fall. Now that the rest of us have grandchildren in college, the Kennedys finally have managed to add Kelly, 3, and Tara, 1, to their clan. Jan was the first of us to qualify to have her name affixed to our Visiting Scholar-Artist in Residence Program — our 50th reunion gift to the College. "The Janet Billet Kennedy Class of '39 Visiting Artist" had a nice ring we think, remembering her many delightful performances as one of Althea Hunt's Own.

Evelyn and Carl Casella were welcomed with joy this year. Carl has been loyally returning for 20 years, but he was too ill to come last year. He looks fine. Carl has a great-granddaughter, born in April of 1984. Do we have any other "greats" in the class? Carl's oldest g.g. is in school this year! Our college-age granddaughters keep needing us that "it won't be long!" Maurine and Bill Dulin look wonderful and are spry enough to be still cutting a rug, enjoying the organ dance music we had at the class dinner on Friday evening.

George and Hanne Sweetnam had an almost "flawless" year. How many of us can say that? They did go on to admit that their boat ran aground and has caused costly (in time, money and aggravation) repair problems. They've increased the size of the dental practice at which they are both busy, taking on additional associates. They're serving on the board of the Chicago W&M alumni chapter. They host one meeting a year aboard the Hanne II. Don Stetson was with us from Washington State with his nostalgic music from our era and the delicious northwest smoked salmon which he brings every year as his special treat.

Carlton Stublen retired from Sears after 12 years. He plays tennis-doubles three mornings a week and is enjoying doing some traveling. Esther and Lee Shimberg have bought a "teeny-weeny" boat to complement their new condo on Grand Bahamas. They have moved this residence to Washington, D.C., to be close to the shows, theater and other cultural activities there. They're excited about these changes in their lives and beg you to visit them.

Dede and George Bunch are enjoying retirement and six grandchildren and promise to hang in with the faithful Homecomers as long as we keep doing our thing. Helene and Ed Vogt (adoptees — but such long-time Homecoming pals that we forget Helene's other class affiliation) were there helping as always with the opening of the Hospitality Suite. Lucy Ruffin Greene has finally (her word) retired and loves it. Her co-workers gave her A House for a President and Hark Upon the Gale. "What else do you give a librarian?"

Marion and Martin Gracey, hostess and treasurer for the Fun Time Committee respectively were functioning in their usual grand style. Martin says everyone else retires, but he keeps on the job, performing service contracts for NASA at Langley Research Center in Hampton. He's just signed a five-year contract and expects to sign five more — that should take him about to age 98! Martin and his boys, the Dukes of Gloucester Street whom he engaged to sing at the class dinner, wrote a class song to the tune of "Nothing Could Be Finer than to Be in Carolina." You all are invited to pen another verse for next year's performance.

ALUMNUS GAVE NASA SHUTTLE WARNING

A NASA budget official who wrote an internal memorandum warning that rockets on the space shuttle might leak and destroy the shuttle is a William and Mary alumnus. According to an article in the New York Times, Richard C. Cook '70 warned of a possible space shuttle catastrophe in an internal NASA memorandum last year. But Cook told the Times that a "gung-ho, can-do" ethic at the space agency made it difficult to raise concerns about safety seals on the space shuttle's booster rockets. Cook, a 39-year-old Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the College, joined NASA last year after holding jobs with the Food and Drug Administration, the White House Consumer Affairs Council, the Civil Service Commission and in military industry.

Don Stetson, Bill Altenburg and Herb Krueger visited the Gracey's for their annual golf fling at the James River Country Club and later at Kingsmill near Williamsburg. Lucille Eldridge Harkless, still teaching in Washington, was off to Rome and Switzerland for Christmas. We were so happy to have June Brown, Fred's widow, join us for the weekend. Margaret and Herb Krueger were present, and Herb is doing spectacularly well with his hip replacement. With us also were Bert Slaughter, Fran and Bud Metheny, Dale and Maxey Davis and Louise and Brad Pulley.

Other '39ers present did not leave a note and "vital statistics" for me. I wish you had so that your news could be included in this class letter.

Latest advices: Gwen Evans has been Elderhostelling: England and Scotland in '84; Fordham (Bronx campus) and Johnson and Wales (a restaurant managing and cooking establishment in Providence) last summer; this year three country houses (one per week) and Russia in May with Bill. Let's keep growing and learning!

Jerome Griffin Jr. retired in Jan. 1985 after 36 years as a food broker in Norfolk. Fred Felmet Jr. and his wife are enjoying a delightful retirement playing together in their local symphony, singing in two choirs, gardening, and pursuing their interest in photography. Fred, who lives in Chevy Chase, Md., was an elementary school principal.

Dorothy Dickie Dunlop moved to Tucson, Ariz. Her permanent address is 5515 North Arroyo Grande Drive, Tucson 85718. Jane MacDonald Themak writes that she's pretty much house-bound these days, but is interested in hearing news of classmates and other William and Mary friends. Her address is 849 Cambridge Road, Cleveland Heights, OH 44121.

The "Current" folder is fairly bulging, for a change. So let's roll up the proverbials and have at it.

Here's a welcome letter from Ruth Rapp Thayer who has been busy traveling, more-or-less working on the house at Lake Almaner and marveling at how fast the grandchildren grow. I would have liked to have added your letter to the last report, Ruth, but it was due on Nov. 4. I'll pass on your greetings to your friends, and you can do it in person at the next homecoming. Three grandsons? Aren't there any girls at all in your family?

Which reminds me, Sunday, Feb. 3, our daughter Claudia added James Kyle McKenna to the Book of Life. Kyle our third grandchild, is Claudia and Jim's first child.

Here's a note from good old Davey Jones threatening to be with us during the festivities. He and Ann were as good as their word and were the swizzle sticks in the Class of '41 Bloody Mary.

Peg Apperly Knowlton responded to my tears and tantrums with a pithy note. She tells us that Peggy Ford has retired from her teaching job at Lasell Junior College in Massachusetts and that Mildred Russell has also retired and is living in a Christian Science home in Princeton, N.J. As for Peg herself, in the past seven years she's had two cataract operations and two hip replacements, which if I remember correctly uses up all her eyes and hips. They have four children — two in the North and two in the South — and one grandchild. One of her activities is (and I don't know how she is involved) U.S. English, which Virginia and four other states have made the official language. I didn't know that. Did you know that? What is U.S. English? I refuse to believe it's what I hear spoken in these parts. Why don't you tell us more about it, Peg? We'll make this a continuing saga.

Here's a brief note from Elizabeth Davis Hartman. Beth retired from the Richard Bland College Library in 1984, while hubby, Harry, did the same this past January after 26 years as sheriff of Petersburg. How about coming to the next Homecoming, Beth and Harry? I can't believe that card really describes your lives, and we'd like to hear about it.

Guess who has been named to a three-year term on the board of the Endowment Association of the College of William and Mary (in Virginia, understood)? Good old Herbert V. Kelly Sr.! I've heard of him often, but have never seen the man. I'm convinced he doesn't really exist, but is a fig newton of collective imaginations. I'll keep reporting anyway.

Ellen Kindsay Miller was expecting grandchild number seven on Dec. 10. I assume that's not to be his/her name. OK now, Ellen, what was it? Is everything all right?

Nancy Chisholm Akers was still in the hospital on Dec. 23 with some unspeakable problem and would not be going to Florida. If she won't tell me what's wrong, maybe she'll tell you (and you can tell me, you see). I, for one, am getting a bit leary of hospitals as I mature. Even when I go for a visit I check around to make sure there's an exit where they're guiding me.

And Mary Virginia Armstrong McKinney took early retirement as trust officer with a bank in Ft. Lauderdale. Her husband retired at the same time, and they celebrated with a six-month tour of the West in their motor home, including a month in Alaska. She tells us what a pleasure it is to travel with no time constraints. Williamsburg is high on their list. Why not try to time it with Homecoming, Virginia?

Good old Robert Hazen tells us he'd enjoy visiting the campus, but Williamsburg is a long way from Palm [?] Calif. I'm sorry, Bob, but I have a not-too-clear copy. They must be preserving the original under glass someplace. I'm being tactful blaming the copy. It could be that you have other than the Palmer Method of conveying written thought.

Because Charlotte and I have "what's going around," I'm attaching a list of those who attended Homecoming omitting the usual asides and comments. This is the first thing other than cry and complain that I've done since Sunday. And I'm going right back to crying and complaining. So here's the list, and I'll see you next time when I hope you're not so cranky:

Nancy Chisholm Akers, Lillian D. Andrew, Sid Broocks, Griffin C. Callahan, Al Chestnut, W. C. Cross, Bill Edwards, John A. and Mary Ellen '43 Geddes, Elizabeth Hartman, John P. and Dorothy H. '42 Harper, Ella D. Hurt, David H. Jones, Arthur B. Kneip, Waldo Matthews, John Prince, Harriet McCarthy and John S. '40 Purtill, Don Reid, Austin L. Roberts, Maggie Snyder, William J. and Grace E. '40 St. John, C. E. and Elizabeth C. '42 Stousland, Ralph A. Taylor and Herbert W. Young.

Greetings from the Gentle City. We have had the snows of winter and the flowers and birdsongs of spring — all within a week. To paraphrase a former student, "some scene always coming to perfection."

Some of our classmates have moved since retirement. Francis Jarvis Smith has taken up residence in Atlanta, Ga., after 20 years of teaching in Mountain Lakes, N.J. Fran is teaching part time at Georgia State University and serves as the education chairperson of the Atlanta chapter of the AAUW. Good to hear from you, Fran.

VIRGINIA SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL ANNOUNCES NINTH SEASON

The 1986 Virginia Shakespeare Festival will return for its ninth season July 3 through Aug. 16 at William and Mary with the revival production of Shakespeare's perennial favorite, "Romeo and Juliet." The show, which was the premier production of the festival's first season in 1978, will also tour the state of Virginia in late August after the regular season. Also on the main stage for the coming season will be the Shakespeare comedy featuring the rotund buffoon Falstaff, "Henry IV, Part 1," and the first long-running musical hit in English theatre, "The Beggar's Opera," by John Gay. The festival will also present Shakespeare's, "Love's Labour's Lost," in the smaller studio theatre adjacent to the main stage in Phi Beta Kappa Hall.

Jean Parker Land moved from Norfolk to Emporia, her husband's hometown. The two of them are enjoying the satisfactions of living in a small town.

Virginia Mae Blunce Tinney and husband, Bill, formed their own planning consulting company after Bill's retirement from IBM. They are also leaders of a Stephen ministry program in their church. Stephen ministers are well trained in the lay ministry and give supportive care to those experiencing crises in their lives. Virginia and Bill find this most rewarding. They are grateful for all their blessings including five married children and their spouses and 10 grandchildren. Their cup is trophy size and does indeed "runneth over."

Had a card from Jean Clark Ford '45 and Virgil. They have lived in Norfolk since their wedding in the Wren Chapel in 1945. They return frequently to Williamsburg.

Elizabeth Davis Hartman '41 has retired from the Richard Bland College Library. Harry retired in January after a 26-year career as sheriff of Petersburg. Happiness to you both.

Joe and I spent the first week of the year on the Outer Banks with middle grandchildren, Meghan and Kyle. Then they returned to school, and we drove up to Basye for a few days in the mountains. While we were at the Apple House, Jean Boyd Lacy '44 came in. She and her husband have a new sparkling cider made with scuppernong grapes. "Alpenglo" is truly delicious. We bought two cases.

Have a nice spring. If you see a car with license 43 W&M, wave, it's me!

Dear Classmates,

Those of you who weren't with us for our big 40th missed a swell party. We had a marvelous time visiting and talking, catching up and reminiscing.

Having the Hospitality House as headquarters was great. Friday's weather was just lovely. Unfortunately on Saturday it rained just enough to dampen part of the parade, and the luncheon was moved to W&M Hall. Other than that everything was great, including the football game.

The Alumni Banquet was excellent — delicious food beautifully served. Our new President made a few brief remarks, the awards program was short, and we were on our own before ten o'clock. (Quite a change from the long, boring affairs of the past.)

Our Hospitality Suite was a popular gathering place. One wall was filled with memorabilia which we all enjoyed browsing through, especially the old yearbooks.

Our Class Dinner on Saturday night was a lovely affair, well attended. After those present introduced themselves and brought their autobiographies up-to-date, Ruthie Tillar carried on with a delightful fun-filled program. Sheila Stewart won for being farthest away; Jack Merriman won for being married the longest (got hitched in June '44); for the most children graduating from W&M we had a three-way tie — Jeanne Preston, Betty Schutz and Ruth Schmitz each have two; June Neff Williams had the youngest grandchild at that time, born Nov. 3.

Then we traveled down memory lane a bit. Do you remember that there were 550 of us to start our freshman year in '41 and that in June '45 only 125 of us graduated? Do you remember that our first class history was written in 1945 by Nellie Greaves? How many of you remember Abner Pratt scrubbing the steps of the library with a toothbrush for using abusive language? Even he had forgotten. That one brought forth gales of laughter.

We decided that the person who had changed the least was Sunny Murray Cosgove. There was no contest to that choice. There were more silly, fun questions that everyone loved trying to answer. We had fun because we remembered. Scotty Cunningham and Cecy were our guests for the evening, along with some of the members of the class of '44.

Ruthie Tillar deserves many accolades for her untiring efforts to orchestrate our fun weekend. Jeanne Preston and I added our moral support. And I want to add a special thanks to Jess Jackson who handled our finances for us and helped get the Hospitality Suite ready. Thanks to all for a job well done, frankly, I had a blast.

Fred Veader sent a card saying that he had planned to be with us, but his trick back acted up and had him immobilized. He has retired from Readers Digest and is having a ball. He promises to be with us on our 45th.

Gloria Gruber Blakelock sent a nice note on her Christmas card. After her daughter's wedding, she and hubby went to Europe to recuperate only to have their trip cut short by her sister's death. (We are sorry about that, Gloria.) They saw George Blandford and wife, Nancy, at a surprise party for her oldest daughter. Gloria said that George and Nancy were a very handsome couple who had aged little. She was sorry to miss Homecoming.

I received a long letter from Abner Pratt recounting 1985's activities of both Libby and himself. Believe me, they are interesting. I am a history major, and I am ashamed to admit that I am not familiar with some of the places they traveled to, much less able to pronounce their names. Libby went to China on an art tour that took her to Urumqi, which is on the Silk Road Marco Polo traveled. She went as far west in China as San Francisco is from New York. She saw Buddhist cave temples at Dunhuang — the object of the trip — also Turpan, Xian, Shanghai, Guanagzhou and Hong Kong. Now, while Libby was in China, Abner was on a Biblical Archaeology Society tour of Turkey which began in Ankara, went south to Antioch on to Orontes, then west to Ephesus and Izmir. The tour ended in Istanbul. They were in a 40-passenger Mercedes bus, which at times was very hairy for Abner he said.

I will save the rest of his lengthy letter for the next issue.

Received a nice note from Floss Metuis Johnson on her Christmas card along with a picture of her lovely family. She and Dwight went to Hungary and Yugoslavia last year. She has a new grandson and a new son-in-law.

By the time you read this I will have moved. I am in the process of packing as I stop to write this letter before I forget it in the midst of the mess. Then I depart for Florida for a couple of months of R&R. I'm ready for it now. Please note my new address.

For those of you who missed our 40th reunion, we are sorry. We missed you. Here's hoping that you will join us for our 45th. And I wish for all of you the best in 1986.

Dear Friends,

Again, I am writing this news letter at the very last minute. Health problems have plagued me since March 1984, and it is about all I can do to muster strength to teach seventh- and eighth-grade science and math students during the week and recuperate on the weekends.

The Christmas vacation was far too short. Beth shared the long weekend here after

ADAMS SERVES AS MASON PROFESSOR

Charles J. Adams, former director and current professor of the Institute of Islamic Studies at McGill University in Montreal, is serving as the 1986 Walter G. Mason Visiting Professor of Religion at William and Mary. A scholar, teacher and writer, Adams has spent more than 25 years as a student of religion, particularly Islam and the resurgence of militant groups responsible for the attack at the Marine barracks in Beirut, the Iranian revolution and the assassination of Egypt's Anwar Sadat. Adams has lived in several countries in the Islamic world, including Pakistan, Afghanistan and Iran. He is a consultant to the Encyclopaedia Britannica, one of the editors of Religion Studies Review and the editor responsible for "Islam and History of Religions," in the forthcoming Encyclopedia of Religion to be published this year by Macmillan.

Christmas. Thanks to her untiring preparations both in Washington, D.C., and Williamsburg, we enjoyed entertaining friends of all ages at our holiday party Dec. 27.

Mary Martin and Harman Hoffman '49 were in town for the weekend and joined us for the festivities.

Since then, Lieutenant Douglas Clark, son of Eustelle Ryan Clark '49, returned to Norfolk from the Mediterranean from his latest tour of duty. Doug drove up here to share a Sunday with me and brought pictures of my son Brook, Debbie (Brook's wife) and Brook II who is 2 1/2 years old. Doug was in port in Naples, Italy, twice and contacted Brook and Debbie. This last time he shared Thanksgiving dinner with them and other friends.

The following weekend Brook arrived in Washington, D.C., for a two-week special NIS training course. I had not seen him for a year and a half, and it was nice to have some time together as it was a long-anticipated reunion.

I looked forward to the Williamsburg Chapter of the Society of the Alumni meeting at Chownings, Feb. 18, which featured cocktails, dinner and special guests, Paul and Fran Verkuil.

In March I'll share "Festival on Ice" with a friend at The Carpenter Center (the old Lowe's Theater) in Richmond, and in May. I'll be on a whale-watching excursion 60 miles off the coast of Ocean City, Md., sponsored by the Peninsula Nature and Science Center.

I've received news from Priscilla Cobb Denison, that she and John moved to 65 Drinkwater Rd., Hampton Falls, N.H. 03844 when John retired in August. Cobbe wrote that the move two weeks before Christmas made the holidays more hectic than ever. They are on the sea coast only 47 miles from their previous home of 28 years. They invite any alumni in the area to give them a call.

Jan Heller Frieden suggests we get started on our 40th reunion in 1987. She mentioned her husband's 50th reunion at Va. Tech. was spectacular.

Jan is willing to help — who wants to volunteer to organize a super 40th reunion with her help?

Ruth Paul Katherman writes she is in her 24th year as a professor of psychology at York College of Pennsylvania and 11th year as a licensed clinical psychologist. I applaud her work in Friends of Animals to reduce unnecessary use of animals in research and in ending abuse of these animals. I am an active member of this society and many related activist groups in ecological pursuits.

Please keep sending me news of you and yours. This is what keeps our class letter meaningful!

Jack Groves has retired from the Army and is working as a senior technical analyst with Computer Sciences Corporation. He and Jean Owen Groves '48 live in Fort Monmouth, N.J., where she is director of the Fort Monmouth Child Care Center and pre-school, which cares for 500 children each day. They are the proud grandparents of three grandchildren.

Virginia Parthenis Elmendorf is enjoying her work as a personal shopper at Saks-Fifth Avenue in Pittsburgh. Ginger Hawkins Smith, who works in education, participated last summer in an Anglo-American Institute on English teaching sponsored by New York University and held in Oxford, England. She particularly enjoyed living with a British teacher and visiting English schools.

An article by Henry Rosovsky appeared in the January-February edition of The Alumni Gazette Magazine. The article, "The Virtues of Academic Life," is part of a projected book titled The University: An Owner's Manual, which is based on Henry's experiences as dean of the faculty of arts and sciences at Harvard University.

Charles Nimmo is teaching a course on Biblical animals, birds and plants at Newport News under the William and Mary Special Programs. He has written more than 30 articles on birds, nature, photography, philately and related subjects for various magazines and journals. As an avocation, he studies the natural history of the Bible and collects books related to the subject.

The first issue of the William and Mary Theatre Alumni News brings us the following reports: Ernest Edwards is now living in Santa Ana, Calif., where he is a physician specializing in pathology. Dale Parker has retired from a TV corporation in New York and now lives in Boone, N.C. Henry Rhodes lives in Miami, Fla., where he is director of development for the Dade County Department of HUD. John Spivey is living in Winston-Salem, N.C., where he is a purchasing agent.

My husband and I enjoyed meeting President and Mrs. Verkuil at a reception in Scotch Plains, N.J., in November. The following day we headed for the William and Mary-Princeton game with plans to meet Lou Hostetter Winder and Gus. We missed most of the pregame fun, though, as we were involved in an accident en route that demolished our car, but, thanks to seat belts, left us unharmed. We were eventually delivered to the tailgate site by police car. We did see Jack Hickman and Lucille briefly and also Lou Bailey and Jeanette, who were scheduled to make a trip to Germany after the holidays.

WOW — hardly know where to start so will jump right in with Joan Kohler Fahey's news of her promotion at the South Bend Public Library this past year. She's now in charge of the subscription services department. She also toured Europe last summer and visited with daughter Nancy Fahey Smith '79, who has earned a degree from the Free University of Brussels.

Joan Carpenter Dollard, Rome, N.Y., is still enjoying real estate brokering after 14 years in the business. She and Mark are looking forward to his retirement in a year and plan to enjoy the USA in their motor home. Maybe you can do some roving reporting for the class, Joan?

And from Fred Karus, the news that daughter Caroline is a freshman at the College. Fred, a pathologist in a community hospital in St. Louis, teaches residents and med students from Washington University, does some medical writing from time to time and enjoys jogging. Can't translate the Greek message on your note, Fred, so you'll have to come to Homecoming and tell us in person.

Ann Lewis Burrows, executive director of the Mary Ball Washington Museum and Library in Lancaster on the Northern Neck, has announced the selection of a William and Mary grad from the class of 1984 as the museum's new curator.

In Upper St. Clair, Pa., Jean Murphy Meili was appointed to the board of school directors to fill a vacancy in June and in November was elected to a full four-year term. Daughter Trisha will graduate from Yale Graduate School in May. Both sons were married last year, one in Dallas, one in Princeton.

ANNE DOBBIE PEEBLES '44 REELECTED COLLEGE RECTOR

Anne Dobbie Peebles '44 of Carson, Va., has been reelected unanimously to a two-year term as rector of the College by the Board of Visitors. Hays T. Watkins LL.D. '82, chief executive officer of CSX Corp., was reelected vice rector, and Henry T. Tucker Jr. '72, vice president of Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Company of Chicago, was reelected secretary. Although Miss Peebles was reelected to a two-year term as rector, she will serve until March 1987 when she will retire from the board after serving 13 consecutive years, longer than any other board member in 20 years. The first woman rector in the College's history, Miss Peebles is not eligible for reappointment to the board, but a board member noted that the visitors were fully aware she had only one year left and didn't care because the board wanted her to lead one more year. Miss Peebles noted she was delighted by her reelection and said, "I would do anything for the College."

Vito Ragazzo was written up in the Newport News paper in December. The article centered on his playing and coaching careers — does anyone need reminding of the former? Vito, in his seventh season as head football coach at Shippensburg University in Pennsylvania, started there as defensive coordinator under Joe Mark and took over the Red Raiders' helm from Mark in 1979. In 1981 his team finished 11-0 and he was honored as Kodak's Coach of the Year for the College Division as well. The Red Raiders broke even 5-5 last season. Unfortunately, that's about all the personal news the sportswriter had to convey.

The William and Mary Theatre has published the first edition of its Alumni News, and naturally, since our class had such theatre elite I was delighted to find some had contributed news from which I am excerpting the following, necessarily abbreviated.

Ann Buckles, who calls Williamsburg home now, earned her master's degree from NYU and from 1951 to present has accumulated a long list of credits from Broadway, London, television and television commercials and stock companies all over, culminating in "The Ladder" and "Through the Garden Wall," which she directed in Caux, Switzerland in 1981 and 1982.

Marianna Brose, assistant professor of English at Arizona State University, Scottsdale, Ariz., studied at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts, London, and earned her master's degree at Arizona State. It appears she has specialized in Shakespearean drama and also has lectured on Tennessee Williams. She has acted with Scottsdale Sugarbush Theatre, Phoenix Little Theatre and Phoenix Performing Arts Theatre, studied with Lee Strasburg and traveled extensively in Europe.

Bruce and Fran Thatcher Crowell live in Grand Junction, Colo., Bruce is dean of humanities and fine arts and Fran teaches English at Mesa College. Bruce has written for small performing groups and both have acted in benefit performances. Their son Richard carries on their love of theatre and acted while at Kenyon College and in productions in Chicago, Wisconsin and Colorado and writes screen plays. A son-in-law is a stand-in on "Different Strokes." Fran coordinates a NEH-funded state library program and is president of the local American Association of University Women.

Closer to home, Dr. Eugene L. Kanter, Virginia Beach dentist, continued theatrical interests with two seasons in "The Common Glory," as well as acting in Richmond while in dental school and while on board ships in the Navy Dental Corps. Gene has acted in numerous roles in Norfolk Little Theater and the Tidewater Dinner Theater. He is past president of Norfolk Fraternal Order of Police Associates and an 18-year board member of Beth El Temple.

Jan Noyes MacLeod, Montchanin, Del., county mortgage commissioner and business manager for the Delaware Children's Theatre in Wilmington had roles in dinner theater and amateur theater groups in the area after college and her two seasons with "The Common Glory."

An elite corps, yes? And each of these people wrote so glowingly and lovingly of Althea Hunt and their learning experience under her while in college.

The gallivanting Jim and Elaine Campton Baker '49 left Williamsburg in February for Florida and a Caribbean cruise and in the fall for a trip abroad, touching down in London and Basel, Switzerland, where they had three days on a Rhine steamer, then nine days touring Germany. Back home again, Jim writes and continues with his magic, and together they participate in several volunteer jobs in the community.

Betty Mitchell was in Williamsburg in November for the Wightman Cup matches.

Virginia Gallaher Sharp, Rockford, Ill., and two younger daughters spent Christmas in Richmond while surgeon spouse, Ed, gave six weeks of his time and talent relieving a surgeon at a small hospital in Papua, New Guinea, something he had long wanted to do. Ginny wrote she had hoped to go along but they were advised against it as foreign women were subject to attack by roving gangs in the region. Because they would not be together for Christmas, the whole family got together at their St. Maarten condo in July, including the two married girls and their husbands.

I mentioned our brief get-together with Olaf and Martha Wood Kongshaug in the fall and to emphasize how brief it was, I didn't know 'til Christmas she had been promoted at March of Dimes to managing editor, which helps explain those cross-country jaunts.

The holiday season again brought news from many dear friends, and now that we have become grandparents we do tend to mellow out at each new announcement. Roy and Carol Gardner Lorenz, Carmel, Calif., with the cooperation of daughter Connie, have Kristin Nicole Summers to introduce; Phoebe Martin Harcum and Rae '50, Williamsburg, have a grandson, Jessie Christian, born in Charleston, S.C.; Betty Cox Scott and John have their second grandchild, David Andrew Scott, in Charlottesville; and Joan Padden Hickman's son David is father of Sara Lawton Hickman in Norfolk.

A weekly column on life in the foreign service written by Jim Baker was to begin running on a regular basis starting March 1 in The Virginia Gazette of Williamsburg. The column, titled "Americans Abroad," consists of true stories about foreign service life and takes readers on vicarious adventures in remote lands from India to Nepal to Burma and beyond. Jim, who served 20 years with the U.S. Information Agency before he retired in 1983, and his wife, Elaine Campton '49, now live in Williamsburg. Jim and Elaine lived overseas for 17 years, serving in India, Turkey, Pakistan, the Philippines and Tunisia. They also traveled in more than 50 other countries in Asia, Africa and Europe.

Just a word to remind each of you we have a big date coming up in Williamsburg in the fall — our 35th anniversary Homecoming. I'm sure it's not too soon for some of you to put it on the agenda.

Thank you for each note included on your holiday greetings. Please keep me posted on your summer news.

Bill Farley sent an interesting picture from "Breakfast with Les and Bess," a production in which he starred during summer theatre at St. Michael's Playhouse in Vermont. He also has performed in "Painting Churches" and Agatha Christie's "Go Back for Murder." Bill, since his years of memorable acting with "The Common Glory," has played in theaters all over the country.

Scott and Caroline Young Petrequin spent a fabulous three weeks abroad in England. Back home two of their children received their college degrees. Caroline still keeps in touch with "Buumpy" Bozarth Davis and Emmy Ketterson Smith. Emmy is serving the second year of a two-year term as vice chairman of the Mailers Technical Advisory Committee (MTAC). She also is a member of NACUBO's newly created communications committee and continues to act as director of the Office of University Communications at the University of New Hampshire. She will become chairman of MTAC next year for a two-year term. At UNH she is responsible for mailing, printing, media photography, promotional television and publications. Emmy recently received two silver medals in the Council for Advancement and Support of Education's 1985 Recognition competition. One was in the Communicator of the Year category; the other in Public Relations Projects for development of her program "UNH on the Move." Emmy's Christmas card added that son, Boyd, has his college degree and has married. They joined their daughter, Laurie, who is spending her junior year studying in Europe. On Christmas day the Smiths were in the Swiss Alps; then traveled on to Florence, Rome and Paris.

NEW BOARD MEMBERS NAMED

Governor Gerald L. Baliles has appointed three new members to four-year terms on the Board of Visitors of the College while reappointing to a second term former Lt. Gov. Richard J. Davis '42 of Portsmouth. The new board members are James W. Brinkley '59, president of Legg Mason Wood Walker Inc., a brokerage firm with headquarters in Baltimore; Carlisle Humelsine, former chairman of Colonial Williamsburg, and Pamela Harriman of Middleburg, Va., wife of former New York governor W. Averill Harriman. Going off the board are Jeanne S. Kimmamon '39 and Caroline T. Egelhoff '46, both of Williamsburg, and A. Addison Roberts '35 of Philadelphia.

Jim and Barbara Schwartz Smith visited Williamsburg for Thanksgiving this fall.

Ed and Ginnie Gary Lupton have officially launched their boat in Florida and had planned their first long trip in January or February. We hope they will stop to see us during one of their trips up the eastern coast. Daughter, Karen, married in Ft. Lauderdale this summer. My other college roommate, Ginny Campbell Furst, and husband, Bill, have recently moved to Glencoe, Ill.

Anna Inge Jump and husband, Gordon, traveled to Hong Kong and Singapore for the "Special Olympics" Committee. They have three children and a granddaughter. Anna enjoys her church teaching job, PTA, Alpha Chi Omega Sorority alumnae group and National Charity League. Their home, decorated as "Christmas with a Williamsburg Touch," was open last year for the Glendale-Hoover Tour of Homes in California. Gordon continues acting in commercials, television shows including "Amazing Stories," "Night Court," "The New Love American Style," "Love Boat" and an up-coming "Simon and Simon." This past summer he acted in the musical "Hello Dolly" with Vicki Lawrence. He also enjoys flying and continues making appearances for church and charities and being M.C. for telethons.

A note from Nancy Carol Yowell Starr mentioned that her son graduated from Juniata College; daughter, Kathy, is a senior at the College and rooms with the daughter of Shirley Haabestad Hollen '54.

Easton, Md., on the Eastern Shore is the home of "Dolly" Coutu Rhea and husband, Arthur, who is organist and choir director of the Church of the Holy Trinity, Oxford.

Jack Martin's note was difficult to read! He has remarried and has several grandchildren. Jack is executive vice president of Dudley Martin Chevrolet Agency in Manassas, Va.

The following are excerpts from alumni and have been taken from The William and Mary Theatre Alumni News. Dr. Harriet Willimon Cabell — her "theatre background at William and Mary was invaluable in organizing and motivating persons" in her experiences at the University of Alabama, in Community Theatre and Children's Theatre.

William Richard Martin — "All the staff at the College, Althea, Howard, Roger Sherman and Al Haak affected all our lives. I have used the wonderful training there in teaching drama and speech and in community acting groups. There is no better training for preaching three times a week than having to do a scene for Althea Hunt." Rev. Martin is chaplain at St. Christopher's School, Richmond, Va., and has been extremely active in Little Theatre, television dramas for Williamsburg, director and producer capacities, extensive roles with Norfolk Savoyards and other theatrical responsibilities.

Francis Dale Vazquez, now tailor at Jaymar Slack Shop in Houston, Texas, has fashioned costumes for Camden Hills Theatre, Camden, Me., at the University of Virginia and for Fairfax Community Theatre in Virginia. He remembers "hours spent in the costume room especially true with massive Backdrop Club Productions. It was an opportunity to be creative and initiative was encouraged."

Happy spring to all. Phil, the groundhog, did not see his shadow in Punxsutawney, Pa.!

If your lifestyle ever needs an exhilarating and uplifting experience head for Williamsburg during Homecoming weekend. Abandoning earlier plans to build an ark (it had rained in Pittsburgh for 28 days straight), we started for Homecoming weekend amidst clouds and gloom. As we drove, lo and behold, the sun appeared, the dark clouds lifted and the temperature rose to the 80s. When we arrived the smell of the boxwood, the charm of the town and of our College and the camaraderie of old friends was everywhere. Because it was our 30th reunion (how time flies!), the class of 1955 had an especially large group returning. Those seen included: Bill and Libba Neal, Pat Perkins Berryman, Marcia Seffrin Wennberg, Sara Miller Boyd, Joan Showalter who received the Alumni Medallion and rode in the annual parade), Anne Lunas Vincent, Bob and Ed Coco, Ron and Joan Pearce Jabaut, Don and Cissy Spivey, Dave and Shan Duis Carico, Betty Holladay Neal, Joan Evans Swanson, Bernice Magruder Sherwood, Bea Verra Wisel, Nancy Lewey Spigle, Pat Sperb Waby, Yolanda Grant Harrell, Sue Rosar Sheehan, Marge Willard Duer, Bill Gatling, Allan Roby, Martha Jordan Stringer, Darrell High Wittkamp, Bunny Scheie Belford, Joan Mattson, Mary Lou Riggan Baird, Pat McClure Caplice, Jane Kesler Upshur, John Kepley, Bert Chase, Lewis Saunders, Larry O. Phillips, Betsy James Simmons, Cynthia Kimbrough Barlowe, Barbara Coogan Kledzick, Betty Wright Carver, Harry Carver, Larry Young, Bill Neal, D. G. Sam Tyler, Jane Topping Underhead and Elsa Stromberg Bandi. I know I missed some of you. Please drop me a line.

Mary Bogue sent news of the birth of their first grandchild, Ryan Andrew Bogue, last July. William T. Prince, a partner in the law firm of Williams, Worrell, Kelly and Greer of Norfolk has been re-elected to the board of directors of the American Judicature Society, a national organization for the improvement of the courts.

My first holiday note brought news of the January wedding of Laura Steele, daughter of Anne Myers Steele. Diane Broderick Hamilton's card told of Will's new business, her four children's busy lives and their plans to Christmas in Hawaii. Helen Male Katze and Chuck's card was packed with happy active experiences of children John, Dave, Margaret and Nancy.

Alison Sandlass Carr, Marcia Seffrin Wennberg, Patti Perkins and Marge Willard Duer got together and nostalgically poked through old College scrapbooks this fall. Anne Lunas Vincent wrote that she, Mary Lou Pardue and Marty Robey Mattox were planning to have lunch when Mary Lou is in town. Mary Lou is planning a leave of absence from her teaching of developmental biology at MIT for a teaching trip to India. The greeting of "Joy and Good Times Ahead" came from Barbara and Charlie Sumner along with a handsome photo of them both looking marvelous as always.

To all of our class a happy, healthy New Year. (I'd like to hear about it!)

ANNE TYLER NETICK ELECTED JAMESTOWNE SOCIETY GOVERNOR

Anne Tyler Netick M.Ed. '67, an associate professor of Russian in the Department of Modern Languages at William and Mary, has been elected governor of the Jamestown Society, a national organization composed of descendants of those who resided, owned land or held key offices at Jamestown during the period when it was Virginia's colonial capital (1607-99). The society's chief objectives include the preservation of colonial records and monuments in Virginia and the encouragement of scholarship in early Virginia history. In 1985 the society established a fellowship for graduate students in colonial Virginia history, which is administered with the assistance of the Institute of Early American History and Culture. Netick received her M.A. from Columbia University and her Ph.D. from Vanderbilt University.

busy schedules to drop me a note. Only three Christmas cards from y'all so if it wasn't for the Alumni Office I wouldn't have any news at all.

Bob Anchell writes that he is still a realtor in sunny Florida . . . while all my appointments to show houses get cancelled because of snow! Bob has hit the big FIVE-O and will definitely be at our 30th reunion in the fall.

Mal Anderson from Lompoc, Calif., is a clinical psychiatric social worker and still very active in the theater, directing "All My Sons" for the Bellarmine Players in Cincinnati. His 17-year-old twins, David and Claire, are members of the Thespians International. Mal has continued choral singing with the Ventura County Master Chorale and the Hancock Chorale, touring Poland twice and Austria once.

Diane Oakerson Fleming is living in Bowie, Md., since husband, Brian, was transferred to D.C. in July. Her son, Mark, is in Baltimore working in the medical photography department at Johns Hopkins and also working toward his M.A. in visual communications. At the time she wrote Diane was planning a sun-filled Caribbean vacation to St. Maartens.

A note from Mary Jane Haymaker Heiss says she is working in the athletic department at Texas Christian University. Two of her children have graduated from TCU, and a third is a junior there.

Anne Hannegan Prince received her M.A. in humanities from Old Dominion University in Norfolk in 1984.

More greatly deserved accolades have come to Vince DeVita. In December he was initiated into the Alpha of Virginia Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa. In his address to the guests at a dinner at the Williamsburg Lodge that night, Vince told of a new cancer treatment that has been developed at the National Cancer Institute and paid a tribute to Dr. Alfred Armstrong, professor of chemistry emeritus and his teacher at William and Mary.

Nothing new from the Scotts. It was great having the children home for the holidays — Anne from Charlotte and Ken from Dallas. I am anxiously looking forward to warmer weather except for one thing — the big Five-O arrives for me in May — where, oh where, have the years gone?

William D. Henderson is a professor of history at Richard Bland College of the College of William and Mary and is also the current president of the Richmond Civil War Round Table. He has written about the 12th Virginia Infantry of the Confederate Army, which fought at the battle of the Wilderness, the battle of the Crater, and the siege of Petersburg.

Peggy Anne Rayburn Ma wrote that she and Te celebrated their 25th anniversary with a trip to Scandinavia this year. Their four children are all in colleges — Lyndon is at Western Illinois University, Lindsey is in the University of Illinois Medical School, Lineete and Linwood are sophomore and freshman respectively at the University of Illinois. While Te teaches and does research in biology at Western Illinois University, Peggy is kept busy teaching biology at Macomb High School and serving as a regional director of the Illinois Science Teachers Association.

Among this year's travelers were Elaine Rankin Bailey and her husband. After completing an intensive course in Russian language, history and culture, they spent three weeks in the USSR with 35 Andover colleagues. It was a thoroughly enjoyable and unforgettable trip.

Charlotte Tolley Etgen and Garry celebrated their 25th anniversary in August. Charlotte reports "we may look older, but don't feel we are falling apart yet — so we're game for starting a new 25 years all over again!" Their eldest son, John, is doing graduate study in geophysics at Stanford University. Garry Jr. is attending Brown University, and Michael is picking up medals throwing the discus in prep school where he is a freshman.

Through the Alumni Office comes word that Robert W. Grigsby is one of the five founders of a new stock brokerage and investment advisory firm in Richmond, Financial Corporation of Virginia. He is the vice president and treasurer.

Diane Phelps Rivinus is currently working as a computer analyst for the Commodity Futures Trading Commission in Washington, D.C.

Christmas brought a long letter from Joe Ponc. Finding himself with "free" time this spring, he decided to spend May in France during the 40th anniversary celebration of VE Day. He related that "talking to WWII vets on corners and in cafes was one of my best experiences." Joe then joined friends in Avignon and had a week's beach holiday on Corsica. "What a marvelous spot, as yet undiscovered by North Americans." (Not anymore, Joe. We now all know of your secret "get-away" — it's just a question of getting there!) This past fall he attended the University of British Columbia and finished a degree in art history.

Paula Margolf Whitaker sent holiday greetings from their Waters Edge Farm. She continues "to dig away at the Ph.D. dissertation" while teaching full time and, with husband Jeff, runs the horse farm, feeding and caring for mares and babies. Daughter Diane and her horse, Chibouk, are training with the U.S. Equestrian Three-Day Team headquartered near Boston. I know that someday we all will be watching Diane compete internationally on TV.

From the W&M Theatre Alumni News I learned that John E. Anagnostis is an English teacher in Saco, Me. He relates that he has been directing plays for 15 years in the high school and has participated in variety shows and community theater. He also speaks extensively to service organizations, has done radio announcing and presently is doing a weekly Greek radio hour in Biddeford.

Lewis A. Crickard is in Denver where he is a college professor/scene designer. After receiving a Yale M.F.A., he taught at Hollins College, Webster College, University of Denver and currently is a visiting professor at Dartmouth.

Legg Mason Wood Walker, Inc., headquartered in Baltimore, has a new president — James W. Brinkley. This company has 425 brokers and 38 offices providing securities brokerage, investment banking, asset management and other financial services.

Now I'm going to send you all running for your atlases to keep track of Barclay Bell Nakhleh! In March she toured Jordan and the surrounding desert castles. April found her in Northern Yemen where "the scenery is gorgeous — mountains with decorated multi-storied sand houses and then plains and beaches in another area looking like a tropical paradise." In the fall, Barclay headed for India where she toured Rajathan, Auran-gabad, Delhi, Agra, Fatehpur and Bombay. This winter she is back home in the Arabian Gulf with her husband, Ziad, and their son Samir, where she is teaching English to government and oil company employees. Her older son, William, is attending Tulane.

During the summer, Barclay visited Betsy Treiber Peccatiello at her horse farm in Warrenton, Va. Larry Peccatiello '58, is with the Redskins organization. Betsy has six horses

GOVERNMENT PROFESSOR ON "60 MINUTES" PROGRAM

George Grayson, a professor of government at William and Mary, appeared in a segment on corruption in the Mexican oil industry on the CBS news magazine "60 Minutes" in February. A Latin American specialist and author of a new book, The Politics of Mexican Oil, Grayson was interviewed by correspondent Morley Safer on corruption among union and government officials involved in the oil industry in Mexico. The segment was filmed about a year ago, but was delayed because of the earthquake in Mexico in September. Grayson, who is also a member of the Virginia House of Delegates, makes several trips a year to Mexico.

that she shows with her daughter Marcie, who is in college along with sister Kathy. Betsy and Larry's son, Arnie, is an engineer on the West Coast and another daughter, Laurie, is married.

Letters come in slowly, but when they do, it makes this job more fun. News from Roy Leshner, in Norfolk: Roy retired as lieutenant colonel after 22 years in the Air Force, finished an M.A. in international studies at Old Dominion University and is currently working as a market analyst for Schenkers International Forwarders, Inc. Spare time is used working for the local Lions Club and making it to the choir reunion for "Pappy" Fehr last June. Roy and his wife, Suzanne, are looking forward to our 25th.

Allan Brownfeld, his wife, Solveig, and their three children live in Old Town, Alexandria, Va. In 1985 he published his fifth book, The Revolution Lobby, which was issued by the Council for Inter-American Security of Washington, D.C. He writes a nationally syndicated column, serves as associate editor of The Lincoln Review, a quarterly journal, and lectures widely.

Don Snook will have a new book out soon, Fifty Effective Print Hospital Ads, published by the American Hospital Association. Another, How to Start and Manage a Hotel Hospital will be out in March, published by Efreem Publishing. He just finished a series of national seminars on how to use empty hospital space.

Ron Willard has been working as a position classification specialist with the Navy for 20 years and is currently assigned to the Naval Civilian Personnel Command in Washington.

News from the following classmates comes from the William and Mary Theatre Alumni News. Jane Ridout Meitz from Charlotte, N.C., is a housewife and volunteer, and has participated in Junior League Follies in Philadelphia, Houston and Charlotte.

Marvin Bowman, from Athens, Ohio, is a director of educational telecommunications. He has directed or produced hundreds of programs in six states and two foreign countries. He has lived in Malaysia and Nigeria and is currently living in an underground home, which is economical and efficient.

Richard Westlake is the director of drama at Edison Community College in Ft. Myers, Fla., and is presently directing his 70th play in educational theatre.

Besides being the new President of the College, Paul Verkuil has been appointed to a three-year term on the board of the Endowment Association for the College.

Linda Schneider Peterson, who is a housewife with occasional library volunteering, has two sons attending college; St. John's College in Annapolis, Md., and the University of Connecticut. Her husband is a second mate — navigator — on a merchant marine ship with a company known as Crest Tankers, Inc.

Pete Siegenthaler has one son at UVA and another at the College of Charleston, S.C. A third son is in ninth grade.

The northern Theta Deltas recently got together for a dinner with Frank Silcox who is moving back to the area. Attending were Dan Dopp '62, an executive with the Internal Revenue Service; Jerry File, a broker with Johnston, Lemon and Company; Arnold Jones '64, an assistant principal at Lee High School; John Pforr '60, a Secret Service agent in Baltimore; Tom Scott '63, a school teacher and coach at Hayfield High School; Tom Secules '59, head football coach at South Lakes High School; and Larry Suiters '62, an Arlington attorney.

Joe and I attended his 25th reunion in November. An incredible number of people returned, some after being away for 25 years. Start making plans, or at least think about it. We had such a good time, I hope ours is as much fun, or better!

Peter Sturm joined the Bank of America last June as vice president and deputy chief auditor. He and his wife, Nancy, live in the San Francisco area. Pete hoped to see some old friends at the San Francisco chapter of the Society of the Alumni Christmas Celebration. He has a son who is a junior at William and Mary and a daughter, a freshman at East Carolina University.

Rosemary Brewer Philips and Charlie met Dick '61 and Dale Harris Cohen for dinner after the William and Mary-Princeton football game.

Lee Williams McBride and her family are in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia. Lee is taking an oil painting course, doing tours of the city and participating in a French conversation group in addition to volunteering at the school library. Chip Damminger made an official visit to the embassy and came over for lunch in November.

Marie Lynn Hunkin is a public participation coordinator on various government sub-contracts, which gets her involved in planning issues from new parks transportation plans in Tucson.

Dale Harris Cohen and Dick enjoyed Homecoming and seeing Lucy Lawlor Huggett and Bob. Dale divides her work week between Union Carbide and Exxon.

Sherry Parrish Swan is still a chemist with Mead in Atlanta. She and Al work on restoring their 75-year-old house and enjoy their boat. Mark is a senior at Stanford and applying to graduate schools, and Evan transferred to the University of Colorado. Heather is at the University of Georgia. They saw Bill Wallace and his family last summer.

Pat Thomas Ogren and Ken went to a family reunion in Orlando after Christmas.

Ilona Moody Salmon was elected vice chairman of the Prince William County School Board and was appointed for another four-year term.

Carolyn Welch Morgan received her library certification and became a librarian at Captain John Smith School in Hampton, Va. Last May she completed her master's degree at Old Dominion University. Her husband, Jim, is a designer for Wyle Labs. Carolyn is active in Kappa Alpha Theta alumni chapter events.

Pam Johnstone Hitt is an administrative secretary at the First Interstate Bank of Oregon, while her husband, Dave, is a vocational rehabilitation counselor with the State of Oregon. They visited her sister, Julie Johnstone Estes '64, in Charlottesville where Julie and her husband have just built a new home. Pam also saw her old roommate, Betty Burleson Douglas who is director of the National Association of Gerontology in Higher Education. Pam wrote of various news clippings she had seen over the past few years. The Portland newspaper, The Oregonian, mentioned Roger Bergey had coached Ralph Sampson in high school. She also noted quotes from Carol Kirkup Blomstrom, a data-processing training expert, in the Wall Street Journal and another quote in USA Today from toy store executive Armen Bahadurian.

Sally Siegenthaler Lichtenstein is helping her stepdaughter to plan her wedding in the spring. Sandra Bowen will be secretary of the commonwealth in Virginia. John Findlay is a senior vice president at L.L. Bean. Alexan-

KENAN TRUST TO SUPPORT TWO ADDITIONAL FACULTY

Funds from the William R. Kenan Jr. Charitable Trust at William and Mary will be divided to support not only the William R. Kenan Jr. Distinguished Professor of Humanities, but two additional permanent faculty members as well. The Kenan Trust currently supports one visiting faculty member in the humanities at William and Mary. By splitting the $1 million endowment fund, the College can qualify for additional Eminent Scholar matching money from the Commonwealth of Virginia, enough to fund three faculty salaries, according to President Paul R. Verkuil. The two additional professorships will become effective during the 1986-87 academic year. The William R. Kenan Jr. Distinguished Professorship in the Humanities was established at William and Mary in 1981 by a $750,000 grant from the Kenan Trust.

der White is executive director of Texas Children's Hospital in Houston. Judith Linton Heald is treasurer of the Atlanta Junior League.

Frances Newton Harwood and Glenn are living near Upper Marlboro, Md., where she is teaching at the Owens Science Center and Glenn is with the Small Business Administration.

Barry Walsh still works for the U.S. Postal Service Headquarters in Washington, D.C. After his divorce, he married again and has a new baby daughter, Kristen Marie, born last September.

Penny Kight Simpson reports that her husband, Mickey '59, has retired from teaching and coaching after 26 years with the Alexandria and Fairfax County school systems. He is now building full time in the Northern Virginia area, specializing in custom homes, particularly in the Williamsburg style.

Jerry Van Voorhis is rector of Chatham Hall. He recently offered a senior honors tutorial on "Technological Issues and National Security." Wilfred Joseph McCall is a dentist and practices in Hampton, Va.

Sue Bonner Rhett lives in Wilmington, N.C., where she teaches math and drama. She has been the drama teacher at the high school and junior high school and has done acting and costume design with community theaters, winning Best Actress Award in the community theater, Thaliens, for two years. The rest of her time is spent sailing and raising children.

Ann Harvey Yonkers has co-authored a book, Capital Entertaining: Caterers to Call and Places to Party in and around Washington, D.C.

Phillip Albright is getting involved in international marketing, representing a number of U.S. firms in China. His son is a sophomore at Dartmouth, and his daughter is a junior in high school.

Homecoming provided an opportunity to collect news from many of our classmates. Mary Chichester Schwartz is a special education teacher in Glastonbury, Conn. Jay Louise Weldon is a computer consultant in Montclair, N.J. Bridgett Sullivan Hampson and her husband, Harry, live in Virginia Beach where she teaches math and computer science at Cox High School.

Chuck Riecks remains at St. Luke's in Charleston, W. Va., and also serves as dean of the area district of Methodist churches. Sally Lyons Hardy Burke and her husband, George, a physician, have two children, one and four years old. Nibs Smith Biddlestone and Bob live in Asheville, N.C., where he is a psychiatrist. Lynn Meushaw Parent teaches swimming and devotes considerable time to raising her three daughters; the youngest, Diana, is eight months old.

Trilby Busch Christen lives in Minneapolis where she is a free-lance writer and editor. Libby Gebhart Cottingham has lived in Denver for 15 years. She works for Country Time, Inc., a cable-TV station. Becky Ruffin Collins works as a social security disability analyst, serving on the appeals council in Springfield, Va.

Rusty and Kent Stevens are building a new home in Bluemont near Purcellville, Va. Kent has been administrator of Loudon Memorial Hospital for five years, and Rusty is selling real estate in Loudon County. Don and Carol Olson live in Macon, Ga. Don runs his own company called Confederate Packaging, and Carol is working on her master's degree. She will return to teaching next fall. They have two daughters, age 10 and 13.

Janet Neal Morrison has two children, 15 and 16. She works part time in a stitchery shop in Newport News, Va. Loreli Adams Ingram and Ned live in Gainesville, Ga., 50 miles north of Atlanta. They have three children. Ned is a pilot with Eastern Airlines. They have a home on a lake and enjoy boating and other water sports. Loreli has been doing some free-lance graphic art work.

Margie and Mickey Furr remain in Greensboro, N.C., where Mickey runs his own consulting psychology firm and Margie is a medical librarian. Donny Owens is an attorney with the firm of Mays, Valentine, Davenport, and Moore in Richmond, Va. Don and his wife, Harlean, have two children, Scott, 4, and Daniel, 3.

Marcia Anderson Partch has two children, a son, Greg, 15, and a daughter, Suzy, 12. Her husband, Bart '62, is a manager of quality programs for IBM in Ryebrook, N.Y. IBM has sent them to McLean, Va., Palo Alto, Calif., Holland, Paris, and most recently New Canaan, Conn. In California, Marcia earned a master's degree in mass communications at San Jose State University. Marcia is currently a copy editor on Inside Print, a trade magazine for the advertising industry.

Elise Medinger was not able to get to Homecoming, but did find time to write. She is still working in her own practice as a psychotherapist in Louisville, Ky. Several years ago she began weight lifting and has since added other activities such as running, swimming and biking. She plans to enter a triathlon event this summer. This spring, Elise is marrying David Friedman, the litigation director for the Louisville Legal Aid Society. He also serves as general counsel for the state chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union of Kentucky and will enter the triathlon with Elise.

The William and Mary Theatre Alumni News reports that Fran Green, general manager of the Miller and Rhodes Willow Lawn Store, has been involved with lights and costumes for the Virginia Museum Theater. She has also done some acting with a Richmond little theatre group, but had to curtail some of this activity since the birth of her son.

Wade Cheatham has been named senior vice president and operations officer of Jefferson National Bank in Charlottesville. Wade and his wife, Shirley, have recently purchased a home and moved to Charlottesville, Va.

Richard M. Simpson was recently promoted to vice president in charge of the Virginia operation of Great American Insurance Company. He was also elected outstanding company representative by the Professional Insurance Agents of Virginia and the District of Columbia for the year 1985.

Robert Michael Gates earned a master's from Indiana University in 1966 and joined the CIA in 1968. In 1974 he earned a Ph.D. in Russian/Soviet history from Georgetown University and then served as a member of the National Security Council Staff, the White House, from 1974 to 1979. Robert then became CIA deputy director for intelligence (research and analysis), a position he still holds. He is responsible for preparing all assessments for the president and Congress. He also serves as the chairman of the National Intelligence Council.

A letter from Craig Carlson made me homesick for Washington State: "This is my first letter since leaving the College. Isn't it remarkable how quick our time flies? We were just kids then. I traveled after graduation. It took time for me to settle down. I finished a Ph.D. on Blake, published two books of poetry, was a sergeant in the Army. I worked in a zoo, taught tennis in a country club, lived in Paris for two years and guided in Alaska. For the last years I have been teaching native American studies at Evergreen State College in Olympia, Wash. I am married to Laura Young, and we have four children — Amy, Sarah, Matt and Two Hawks. We live on the side of a cliff overlooking Puget Sound. Trout swim in our front yard. So do loons. They said there'd be no wind out here, but something blows from star to star to clean our eyes and touch our hair. We are still just kids."

KIRKPATRICK TO GIVE COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS

Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, former United States representative to the United Nations, will deliver the principal address at Commencement in William and Mary Hall on Sunday, May 11. Mrs. Kirkpatrick will receive an honorary degree along with J. Bruce Bredin '36, a former member of the Board of Visitors and president of the Bredin Realty Co. and the Bredin Foundation of Wilmington, Del.; Richard Hendrik Fein, ambassador from the Netherlands to the United States; George F. Kennan, retired foreign service officer, a Soviet-American relations analyst and professor emeritus of the Institute of Advanced Study in Princeton, N.J., and Charles R. Longworth, president and chief executive officer of the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation.

Peggy Korty Schreur and Eric live in Kalamazoo, Mich. Last June they had their first child, Emily Joy. Richard Kraemer recently completed two years as chairman of the Tempe, Ariz., planning and zoning commission, as well as one year as president of the Arizona Homebuilders Association. Rich was elected president and chief operating officer of Universal Development Company in 1985. UDC is listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Micki Leef Stout and Ann-Meade Baskerville Simpson organized a joint Pi Phi-Tri Delta breakfast during Homecoming weekend. It offered an opportunity for relaxed personal contact with some of our classmates. Micki owns a fabric shop in Richmond and has numerous responsibilities related to the activities of her two daughters. Pete is a judge in Richmond. Ann-Meade works as a real estate agent in Virginia Beach and serves on both the William and Mary Alumni Board and the William and Mary Athletic Education Foundation. Joyce Hoskins Walk helped with the breakfast. She teaches kindergarten in Williamsburg. Larry is principal of Bruton Heights High School. Barbara Wampler Melby came all the way from Los Altos, Calif. She has three daughters, 11, 14 and 16. She stays busy with church and school activities, as well as playing tennis and golf.

Laurie Yingling Soleau is a realtor with Merrill Lynch. She has two children, a daughter, 13, and a son who plays football — already larger than his dad, Bob Soleau. Laurie and Micki are going to Europe together. Janet Thurman Murphy is going to Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., working on a graduate degree in American studies so she can teach in college. Ellen Reynolds Brouwer lives in Fairfax, Va. Both Janet and Ellen have twin daughters.

Deedle Rowland has been busy getting her three boys to soccer matches in and out of state. She lives outside of Richmond and currently is serving as co-president of the PTA at her sons' school.

Bonnie Cheshire Greenwalt works with "the learning center on the road," a project sponsored by the Reynolds Homestead learning center and art gallery. They are currently doing a program about latch-key kids using puppets. Ginny Blount Fluet and Joe live in Boca Raton, Fla., they were married in March 1983. Ginny has a management position with the software division of IBM.

Mary Liz Smith and Sam moved to a new home close to the College in Williamsburg. Leslie, their older daughter, is attending Wake Forest, and Erin is in high school.

Jeanne English Bedell has a four-year-old son, Brad. She lives in Atlanta where she has a private practice as a clinical social worker, sharing an office with her husband, Dave. Sally Wells Quigley, David and their three sons live in Greenwich, Conn. Sally has enjoyed taking some history courses at Columbia.

Susan Roberts Chadd and Chuck came to Homecoming from the Chicago area. Their three sons all play hockey from September to March. Judy Pollard Harned and Dave live in Richmond with their three daughters. Judy works with Honeysuckle House, an outlet for handcrafted items at the sixth Street Market. Barbara Riley Scott and Jim '63 have a son and a daughter. They live in Cincinnati, Ohio, where Jim is vice president of human resources at a hospital and Barbara is working on electronic filing of tax returns as a trial project of IRS.

Susie Shomon Forehand lives in Virginia Beach; she has been enjoying some time to travel this past year. Kim Routh Gaines serves as postmistress in Germantown, N.Y.

Kathy Weiss Ester and Mark live in California. Kathy is director of financial aid at the University of California at Santa Cruz. Howard Busbee is an attorney. (I failed to write down where he practices!) Bob Barton works for the federal government, and Martha Bean lives in Los Angeles. Obviously I was getting tired of writing when I jotted down these items!

While I talked to many of you at Homecoming, there were many I missed, others who didn't make it to Williamsburg and still others who suffer from my poor memory. Please write!

The most distant news for this issue is from Bitsy Plybon Saunders in Berkeley, Calif. What a treat to hear from those of you heretofore (or very infrequently at least) unmentioned! Bitsy earned her M.A. in special education after we graduated and taught second grade in New York City for four years. Afterward, she moved to California with her husband, Charles, and stepson, serving as director of a preschool program for retarded children for nine years. For the past two years, Bitsy has been the public school coordinator of infant and preschool special education programs, enthusiastically welcoming the hiatus of summer vacations. This summer they are looking forward to a trip to Bali and Hong Kong.

Brenda Childress Porter writes from Lake Murray, just outside Columbia, S.C., having relocated from Greensboro, N.C., with husband, Gene, and daughter, Katie. She says they are really living in the country, never having anticipated excitement at seeing a pick-up truck with mud flaps coming down a dirt road. Having lived by a lake myself for five years, I can easily understand why they LOVE it.

Harry Bennett is the assistant principal at Phoebus High School in Hampton and sent news that he and his wife attended the NASSP Conference in Boston. Mentions of two more of our classmates in Virginia came from the William and Mary Theatre Alumni News. Helen Virginia Daggy Sanders is a registered nurse with the College Health Center in Fredericksburg, where she greatly enjoys working on a medical team and realizing the pride and pleasure of seeing a graduating student attain a goal. Susan Szadokierski Stone is a homemaker in Vienna, busily and happily immersed in the many facets of family life.

Marjorie Arnold was married in May to Eugene D. Biddle Jr. They are living in Princeton, N.J., and Margie is an account executive with DMB&B in New York City.

Kathy Hill Court and Larry recently moved to Annapolis, Md., having lived in North Carolina, Florida, Germany and Texas. Larry is still in military sales with Procter and Gamble, and Kathy is putting her real estate background to work in buying and building THE house. Their three sons are 11, 12 and 17, and they are presently down to one dog and two cats until becoming permanently situated. They are looking forward to getting back to Williamsburg, sorry to have missed the Godspeed's arrival last fall, having seen her in drydock in Jamestown in 1983.

In September, Bob Flinn accompanied a group from historic Petersburg's Fort Henry to the site of Governor Spotswood's Fort Christanna, built in Brunswick County in 1714. The College has artifacts from this early fort. Bob wrote that members of this same group toured historic sites in North Brunswick last year, calling it the Meade-Haskins Pilgrimage and discovering where the "original" Brunswick Stew was first made in

RAPPAHANNOCK AREA ALUMNI CHAPTER

1828 under the auspices of Dr. Creed Has-kins. (It is snowing and 2 degrees outside as I'm writing this; I haven't had Brunswick stew since Chowning's during winter finals our senior year and could negotiate selling my soul for a bowl of it now. What memories!)

Leila Smith Shanker is president of Information Dynamics, Inc. (no additional information furnished). Jere Rapp is living in Solebury Township, Pa., having recently joined Weichert Realtors as a sales associate. Jere has worked for American Express as manager of marketing support, for Irving Trust Company as a systems analyst, and as an instructor and manager for a data processing service bureau. He restores houses in his spare time and enjoys playing tennis and collecting antiques for his newly renovated houses.

Hollace Casey Koman had a lengthy write-up in the Friday, Dec. 13 Los Angeles Times as the harpsichordist for the San Diego Symphony Orchestra's performance of the Bach Violin Concerto No. 2 in E Major. She continues as the general director of the San Diego Gilbert and Sullivan Company, having conducted The Pirates of Penzance in November and Iolanthe in February. She has become a widely acclaimed free-lance musician and last summer played two synthesizers, piano and celesta in back-to-back productions of I Do, I Do and Annie at the Lawrence Welk Village Theater. In addition to being a keyboardist, accompanist and conductor, Hollace is the organist and choirmaster at Pacific Beach Presbyterian Church.

I continue to enjoy the challenge of having returned to work after a five-year respite. My job touches on tax-sheltered syndications, real estate development and management and working for the owners of the Force, Cleveland's professional indoor soccer team. For those of you who have never attended a professional indoor game, I enthusiastically recommend doing so — what a dynamic, fast-paced, sport (undeniably a tremendously positive facet of Cleveland's professional sports scene!)

Please take the time to let me hear from you before our next class column this spring. I'm still awaiting news from alumni gatherings I know are taking place. Note my new address (thanks to Donna Says Schultz and Glick for helping me get here through the snow and very un-Williamsburg-like weather conditions) and please send news!

Winter is moving through most parts of the country now and spring will soon be here. I do have some news for this issue thanks to those who sent contributions to the College as well as some Christmas cards and calls I got.

Eric Assur wrote that he has held the same job now for 16 years — supervisor, Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court in Fairfax, Va. That is a record few of us can match! Eric also has written recent articles for publication (on what he did not say). Jim Runyon returned from England last January after spending five years there with a GE affiliate. Jim now is working in Hickory, N.C., as manager — finance for GE's transformer business.

Ed Weisberg is moving his dental practice to a new office in Norfolk this year. Jim Green reported that he visited Sue Moffitt Cox and Herb '65 last summer. Sue's church was heavily involved in financing a new senior retirement complex on the Northern Neck of Virginia, and Jim came to attend an open house.

I had a Christmas card from Mary K. Thompson Pruett. Mary K. has had a rough year with surgery in July for a brain tumor growing in the brain stem area. The tumor was non-malignant, thank goodness, but Mary K.'s recovery has been slow. All this happened with the Pruetts still adjusting to their first child, Timothy, who is just now turning one, and Mary K. returning to IBM after maternity leave. I know they hope 1986 will be easier on their family.

Congratulations to Jim Douthat who has been named the executive vice president of Albion College in Albion, Mich. De Garber Steverson shared a picture and note she received from Malcolm and Jean Michael '68 Shick. Their daughter Laura is in second grade, Jean works part time, and Malcolm was going to a meeting in Baltimore near Christmas. De reported that she has a new member of her family — a puppy named "Bogie" who is very affectionate and never cries. We will see De and her family over Easter when we are in Richmond to christen our new son. De and Neil will be the baby's godparents.

Lorelei Bonck Garrett has been appointed lead teacher and assistant director of the Plaza Presbyterian Weekday School in Charlotte, N.C. Lorelei is also a Christian education consultant for the Mecklenburg Presbytery, P.C.U.S.A. She published the Broadly Graded Teacher's Resource Guide in 1984 as part of the Children's Bible Series. Lorelei has also published three articles in J.E.D. Share, a Christian educational journal.

Jeanne Forrer and Jack McPherson sent a card this year. Jack had been to Taiwan and Hong Kong last January and Jeanne to Hawaii in March. They both went rafting through the Grand Canyon in June. Jack had a sport parachuting accident in the summer and broke his left thigh requiring surgery to insert a metal plate to "hold all the pieces together." The McPhersons are working on remodeling a house in a woodsy setting in Arkansas while operating Lanar Militaria, a company that deals in antique military items.

I received an article from the Amherst, Va., New Era Progress describing the background and campaign approach of Dennis Brown who was running for the 24th District seat in the Virginia General Assembly. I have no idea of the outcome of the race but hope Dennis won. He works for New York Life Insurance, has been married for 15 years and has a son, age 11.

The Virginia Gazette carried a feature article on Mamie Ruth Hutchens who is the dispatcher for the Williamsburg Fire Department. Mamie Ruth has lived in Williamsburg all her life and has been active in Colonial Williamsburg and the "Common Glory." She still manages some theatre work in her free time.

There was a long letter from Alice Carlton but the photocopy the Alumni Office sent me was very difficult to read. Next time, send it to ME, Alice! Alice has been working for the psychiatric unit of Memorial Hospital of Alamance County in Burlington, N.C. She is the chief clinical social worker and the coordinator of the adolescent program — family therapy is her specialty. For relaxation, Alice enjoys singing and guitar playing, gardening and poetry writing. Alice was married two years ago to Ed King, the Carolinas regional director for Church World Services, and has two college-age stepchildren. Ed and Alice are interested and involved in peace work and attend such events as the tying of the Peace Ribbon around the Pentagon last August. She vacationed in Brazil last year.

Our newest son, James Burke Williams, was born on Dec. 14. He is a great baby — fitting in well with the collection of siblings all under seven. I am back doing some consulting although I admit time for me is very limited right now. Thank goodness it is winter and there is not much going on except school, carpools, Brownies, ballet . . . and an occasional demand from the cat and my husband!

Hand clenched on lapel, finger stabbing the air for emphasis, this legal leprechaun struts slowly in front of the wood-paneled jury box, casting his spell on the courtroom. Even the judge leans forward, E. F. Hutton-style, to listen. No Hollywood histrionics here, this is the "Little General," Joe Daragan, at work. The Arlington attorney says he owes his stenographer delivery to the vocal practice he got during his one-man sit-in in front of the Wren Building (medleys of Irish drinking tunes) and to the happy hours he spent in William and Mary Theatre productions (boisterous backstage card games). "As a spear carrier, I got to play a lot of bridge."

Larry Raiken has parlayed his experience at PBK Hall into a rollicking, wide-ranging Broadway career. He has acted in musicals such as "Woman of the Year" and "Baby," written one-act plays with titles like "Scherzo: A Harliquinade" and directed for the National Shakespeare Company.

Et tu, Curry? Betsy Mays Curry taught high school drama for a time before becoming a guidance counselor at a regional vo-tech school in Mt. Solon, Va.

Cathy Slusser is staff archaeologist for the Historic Preservation Division of the D.C. government, "working to preserve the hidden aspect of Washington's rich prehistoric heritage." She says the experience has been fascinating, although she "digs more paper than dirt." Cathy is also president of the Washington Archeological Society and an avid science fiction buff.

Geraldine McCall Kaufman is a veterinarian on the faculty of the University of Pennsylvania where she's in charge of the intensive care unit for animals. Linn Acton Tyrrell has turned her practice in marriage and family therapy into a full-time business with two offices. She and her husband have just expanded their family, too, by adopting a 1-1/2-year-old Korean boy.

"Cadmium Yellow Light" is a giant-sized, acrylic-on-canvas work that was just one of the paintings by Don Alberti exhibited this winter at an upscale Soho gallery in Manhattan. Michelle Trahan is an account executive and financial planner with E. F. Hutton in Alexandria and president of the Northern Virginia Panhellenic Council.

Betty Delk writes that she is "teaching in Newport News and has seen several Chi-Os this past fall." She is also pursuing yet another advanced degree. In Prince George's County, Md., Mary Alice Coleman is teaching school. She is also on the adjunct faculty of St. Leo College in Fort Lee, Va.

Linda Mimms Bigler is packing for a trip to Spain and Portugal with 10 of her students this spring. She's a Spanish teacher and head of the foreign languages department of the J.E.B. Stuart High School in Falls Church. Matt Klimczak got his law degree several years ago and is now assistant vice president of the Continental Insurance Company, where he works in the bond department. Tom Parnham is C.E.O. of united medical and dental division of United Health Care, Inc. He and wife, Wendy, live in Reston and have two children.

Where Are They Now? A mysterious, anonymous postcard from Pocatello, Idaho, depicting a gray, stuffed horse asks for word from Gail Hobson, Ken Keppel and Greg and Angela Rubano.

Hope you all have a sparkling springtime. How about sending in a bizarre postcard of your own?

MUSCARELLE EXHIBIT

William and Mary's Muscarelle Museum of Art will feature the works of 18th-century artist and satirist James Gillray through April 13. Called "The Biting Line: Caricatures by James Gillray," the exhibit features 50 works on loan to the university from the collection of syndicated political cartoonist Draper Hill of Chicago.

Happy New Year! It has been a busy winter so far for the Class of 1973 if the volume of letters, notes, etc., is any indication. Here in Connecticut it has snowed on and off for the past week, and both the kids have colds. Ann Marie's literary agent is getting ready to "peddle" her book, so 1986 could be a watershed year for the Gsells. It's budget time in local government so my days and some of my nights are filled with figures and pleas for money.

Back to the real world. Our Virginia contingent this month includes Richard Gillespie who is head of a social studies department in the Prince William County school system. Robert W. Storm Jr., presently an independent consultant in management of information and records, is also vestryman and commissioner of finance for St. George's Episcopal Church in Arlington.

Ken Hines now in his native Richmond was recently promoted to creative director for the firm of Lowler Ballard Advertising, which he joined in 1980. Ken has had several individual triumphs with the firm while he was a "mere" senior copywriter. Teresa Burridge Hughes married James M. Burridge in July 1984 (Teresa let us know more of your whereabouts).

On a sports note, Jane Harland Bates was selected to the W&M Athletic Hall of Fame for her four-sports prowess in diving, field hockey, volleyball and tennis. Induction is in February.

Our Sunshine State residents include Bruce and Joanie Spiegel Wachter and their two children. They keep in touch with Teresa Boykin Anstey who you may remember is living in Merritt Island, Fla., with hubby, Stephen, and teaching in Indialantic. Laurie Baker Manning is an executive accounts agent for Eastern Airlines in Tampa, Fla., and is absorbing all the French courses locally available. Husband, Charles M. Manning II, a '72 alumnus, helps out with their home in Redington Shores.

Moving slightly to the north, we find that Mary E. Raines has been promoted by Delta Airlines in Atlanta, Ga. to assistant secretary and senior attorney. Mary is a Georgia native and has been with Delta since 1980. She graduated from Emory Law School with distinction.

A quick shift to the West finds us in Amarillo, Texas, with Colleen Whiting McCall. Colleen is a social worker for the Deaf Education Program in Amarillo. She and husband, Don, an instructor at Amarillo College, are adoptive parents of Lee, 1 1/2, and Valarie, 5.

Pam Thorburn Bloch writes from Linthicum, Md., that she and husband, Chris, have made the transition from Vermont along with their two dogs. Pam is director of catering for the Baltimore International Culinary Arts Institute and working on her master's. Chris manages a Gap Clothing Store. Pam has put out an A.P.B. for any Old Dominion cronies as well as the following all-stars: Bev and Tom Hill, Robin Shakshater, Glen Bowman and Buzz Chalmers. Pam's address is 506 Hammonds Ferry Road, Linthicum, MD 21090, (301) 959-8783.

James Smith and Darlene Lercher Smith are in Waynesboro, Pa., where she is a school psychologist and Jim is curator of the Renfrew Museum.

Finally James B. Newman a none-too-proud Pi Lamb, was married in Annapolis, Md., last November to Wendy A. Jamisen. The newlyweds are living in Lawrenceville, N.J., where Jim is president of a financial services company.

ALUMNI COLLEGE

ALUMNI COLLEGE: A VISION OF A MODERN UNIVERSITY

The 1986 Alumni College, sponsored by the Society of the Alumni, will be held at William and Mary from June 1 through June 5 with the theme: "A Vision of a Modern University." Several senior professors will develop the theme, including Scott Donaldson, professor of English; James C. Livingston, professor of religion; Ludwell H. Johnson III, professor of history; David W. Thompson, professor of Chemistry, John F. Lavach, professor of education, and Lawrence L. Wiseman, associate professor of biology. Other activities will include an orientation supper, an outing to the Virginia Institute of Marine Science, a reception with President and Mrs. Paul R. Verkuil at the President's House, a special tour and reception of the School of Business Administration, and a summary convocation. Alumni who plan to attend the Alumni College should send their tuition check for $225.00 to the Alumni College, c/o Diane K. Hagemann, Society of the Alumni, Box 60, Williamsburg, Va. 23187, by April 30.

Well that's the end of our communiques. This is a new year, and there are still 10 months left for you to get us all "up to speed" on your latest carryings on. Maybe we should start communicating by videotape or cassettes — even though the 22¢ postal service is still the best bargain. I'll try anything once to get a few pearls for the newsletter. Peace.

Mrs. David C. Larson
(Linda Cool)
805 Lakeshore Drive
Beaver Dam, WI 53916

Doug Reichert STEALS HOMECOMING SHOW! It escapes me, as I write this in February, why I promised Doug in November, that I'd open the newsletter with that particular line. Needless to say, he must have been very convincing. Several months later, Dave and I still reminisce about Homecoming '85. Our one complaint is that the weekend flew by and really didn't give us a chance to spend enough time with old friends.

I'm going to take the coward's way out and not even try to list everyone we saw and what they were doing. I didn't play roving reporter with notebook in hand, and I'm positive my memory will not suffice. I can tell you, though, that William and Mary seems to be the same old familiar place. The football game reminded us of the David Knight/Bill Deery days. It rained on the Homecoming parade, but nothing could dampen the fraternity parties. The W&M choir sounded wonderful and looked young. And the City of Williamsburg seemed to take the influx of strangers without blinking. I hope those of you who do have stories will send them in and those who missed the reunion will come to the next.

One of those missing persons, Shelly Nix, was flattened by the flu that weekend, but wrote to fill us in. She's still working at Four-Phase, the mini-computer company, in the D.C. area as a systems engineer. Her job includes managing accounts, installing software, troubleshooting, training and acting as market liaison. Shelly has also been traveling extensively — Paris, Hawaii and two weeks in New Zealand, a country of three million people and 70 million sheep. (That's about the same ratio as people to hogs in Iowa, Shelley.) For fun, she's trying her hand at designing clothes and hopes to get back into stained glass.

Wayne Lorgus wrote, bursting with pride over new baby, Geoffrey, who chose to arrive during the height of Hurricane Gloria in September. To back up a bit, Wayne and his wife, Linda, are living in West Chester, Pa., where they've spent four years renovating an old house. Wayne left Arthur Andersen and has been working for Campbell Soup where he is director, Long Range Logistics Planning. And, yes, he does eat lots of soup. He's also been attending Wharton School at University of Pennsylvania to work on an M.B.A. The Lorguses invite any classmates passing through West Chester to stop.

Paige Auer Winck, Mike, and sons, Adam and Ryder, have just transplanted themselves to Knoxville, Tenn. They're both working for the U.S. Attorney's office (Paige part time) and are in the midst of building a house, which should be completed in June.

Leslie Scent Knicely wrote. She went back to school at MCV and earned a degree in physical therapy in 1981. She married Jim Knicely and worked in a small rehab hospital in Richmond until Rebecca Shell was born. They moved to Williamsburg in July '84 where Jim, an attorney, has an office at Busch Corporate Center, Graber and Knicely. Their second daughter, Ester Marie, was born last March. Leslie keeps busy with the girls at home and is very active in their church, Williamsburg New Testament.

Margaret Stephens Enos is a teacher at George School, a Quaker boarding school outside Philadelphia. She lives in a small dorm with her husband and 23-month-old son and serves as head of the history department and director of the school's work-study program in the People's Republic of China. She's heard from Carol De Wilde Lee, who lives in upstate New York with her husband and two children.

Ten years later, Nancy Burgess Gofus is still working for AT&T Communications. She's now regional sales manager responsible for major business customers in Virginia and West Virginia. Having previously lived in Maryland and Philadelphia, she's back in Reston, Va., with husband, Joe, and two-year-old son, Matthew.

Michael Hause spent the last three years in Manila, the Philippines, teaching and coaching high school missionary children. He's now working as a sixth-grade teacher at Williamsburg Christian Academy and receiving training in bible translation with Wycliffe Bible Translations.

A. Scott Anderson attended W&M in 1971-72. He graduated from the University of Texas in '75 with a B.A. in English. He earned a law degree from Texas in '78 and is currently the general counsel of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association, an oil and gas trade association.

Mike Tedesco is a labor union attorney practicing in Portland, Ore. He has two children, Lisa, 8, and David, 3.

Randolph Gould is in the practice of general surgery and surgical endoscopy with the Norfolk Surgical Group in Norfolk, Va.

Crystal Orndoff Kurtzberg just moved from Bayside to Plainview, N.Y. She's at home taking care of David, 2, and says guests are welcome.

Don Acree wrote to say he's still living in Pine Knoll Shores, N.C., despite Hurricane Gloria. "Most amazing was my survival of the evacuation to Raleigh, fleeing with my wife, Jonnas, and eight other female family members from ages six to 92."

In an excerpt from the W&M Theatre Alumni News, we learn that Jeff West has been an actor in New York City since 1981. He acted in Asolo Theatre and had five months study and performance with Israeli director Nola Chilton. Film work includes Falling in Love, Turk 182 and Four Seasons. On TV he did the Richard Belzer Show for Cinemax and has done TV industrials. Jeff's wife is actress Christine Morris. They had a baby in September.

Effective Jan. 1, Dave Ruch has been appointed director of sales — Orient region, by Northwest Orient Airlines. He's based at the regional headquarters in Tokyo. Dave joined Northwest Orient in December '78 as comptroller representative at JFK Airport. He became assistant manager — Korea in February '82 and manager — Korea in May '83. Congratulations, Dave!

Before I close, I should add that Ban Rafey is thriving in Colonial Heights, Va., and is becoming the entrepreneur I always knew she was. She continues to manage The Farmer's Market in Petersburg and has become an accomplished pianist and tennis player. Spending a wonderful evening with Ban at her parents' home in Hopewell made our Homecoming complete.

I hope this finds you all basking in a warm spring, no matter where you are. We'd love to hear from you.

Richmond, VA 23236

Things have been busy these last few months. Besides doing some traveling for work at Coopers and Lybrand, I was elected to the board of directors of the YWCA, which requires a great deal of time. My husband, David '75, left the F.D.I.C. and is now with Sovran Bank, which has reduced his traveling.

Debbie Allison has taken off her lab coat and joined the computer world. She is still with Merck but is now a chemical data systems analyst. She is handling in-house training teaching chemists to use software. She gets to do some traveling — possibly England and Montreal in the spring.

Last May Sherry Poskanzer Wainger finisher her M.B.A. in finance. She, Allen and two-year-old Robbie are anxiously awaiting a new addition to their family in April.

Beth Hutzler Brennan moved to Ithaca, N.Y., last June after five years in administration for the Department of Medicine at MCV. Husband, Peter, began practice in gastroenterology in mid-July. She advanced to membership in the American College of Healthcare Executives last spring. Presently she is a full-time mother to Thomas John, born last August.

One of the highlights of Homecoming last November was the first annual Wayne F. Gibbs Accounting Society Dinner. It seemed as though our class had more present than any other. I saw John Blankenship, Ron Clark, Carolyn Jones and Carrine Klingman Reilly. Carrine and her husband, John, are parents of a baby boy, Myles, born in April of last year.

Kevin Holmes received his Ph.D. in anatomy from the Medical College of Virginia in 1981. He has a staff fellowship at the National Institute of Health and is engaged in research in immunology. Richard Danila is completing his Ph.D. in epidemiology at the University of Minnesota. He is employed full time at the Minnesota Department of Health where he heads the A.I.D.S. unit of the acute disease epidemiology section.

In Aug. 1983 Stephan Halenda married Ruth Marrion. He has been appointed assistant professor of pharmacology at the University of Missouri School of Medicine, effective Jan. 1. Karen Claussen married Mark Shields last June. They are living in Alexandria, Va. She is an assistant personnel officer for the World Bank, where she has worked for the last five years.

Also in Northern Virginia, Pam Walker is a French and Spanish teacher in Fairfax County public schools. Joyce Downer has been teaching senior high U.S. history and upper-level electives in Arlington, Va.

Patrick Johnston received his Ph.D. in physics from Washington University in St. Louis, Mo., last August. He, his wife, Dee, and their two children live in St. Louis where Patrick is a postdoctoral research assistant in the department of physics at Washington U.

Bill Smyth is now assistant director of the Charleston, S.C., Development Board. A manager of accounting for Newport News Shipbuilding Mary Lou Kline Roaseau received her master's degree from William and Mary in 1984. She is very active in the community, particularly the United Way.

Kitty Dichtel Heffington has been promoted to director of the Kee Business College in Newport News. Glen Crafford recently left Dean Witter Reynolds, where he was an associate in the mergers and acquisitions group, to join Peers and Company a newly formed investment banking firm.

In Middletown, Ohio, Sharon Peake is public relations manager with Mead Data Central. She has sung and acted with Dayton Opera and Middletown Lyric Theatre. She is currently on the Board of Artists in Residency, Inc., a non-profit group that brings artists to schools.

Katie Kraft Beers is enjoying teaching preschool this year in Annandale, Va. She also teaches music and rhythms. Husband, David, is president of his own computer company, N.C.I. Systems. They have two children, Lara, who is six, and Caroline who is three.

The Virginia Stage Company produced a play in January written by Deborah Pryor titled, Wetter Than Water. Deborah holds an M.F.A. degree from the University of Iowa. She has won the Goucher College Open Circle Playwrights Award.

Al Whitley is living in San Diego where he moved after living in Philadelphia. Since graduation he has also lived in New York and Manama, Bahrain. Linda Vorhis has completed her third year at the Peace Corps headquarters. She is now country desk officer for Thailand, New Guinea and the Seychelles. She is in charge of the administrative support and policy interpretation for the programs in these countries.

Prior to returning to W&M to teach southern folklore, Bob Jeffrey attended graduate school at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He worked for two years in the field, locating traditional artists for the Tennessee State Parks Folklife Project.

Debbie Rennolds Taggart is a C.P.A. with Mann Frankfort. How she works with three children, John, 4, and the twins, 2, I don't know. Her husband, Rip, is a marketing representative with IBM.

Jeanie Tebault recently moved to Minneapolis and is working in the research area of the investment advisory group of IDS/American Express. Prior to this move she lived in Atlanta for two years and worked with the investment counseling firm of Montag and Caldwell as a securities analyst. She completed the chartered financial analysts program in 1982.

Recently, Janet Sanderson was awarded the Department of State's Meritorious Honor Award for her economic reporting at the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait. She has returned to Washington after assignments in Bangladesh and Kuwait where she is a desk officer at the State Department. She was a member of the U.S. delegation to economic talks held in Saudi Arabia in December.

My next deadline is early April so there isn't much time to send me your news. Just drop me a quick note.

The Class of '81 is taking the world by storm. With almost five years of post-graduate life behind us, we've managed to infiltrate most areas of the world and most facets of life. It's amazing to think that at one time we were all going to classes at W&M.

1985 was another "graduating" year for many of our classmates. . . Robert Pope graduated from the Dickinson School of Law and Brad Saxton and Chris Hockett both graduated from UVA's law school. Brad is now clerking for U.S. District Judge Louis F. Oberdorfer in D.C. and Chris is working for the law firm of McCutchen, Doyle, Brown & Enersen in San Francisco.

Len Brooks received his M.B.A. from Duke University's Business School and is now working for Salomon Brothers in New York City. (Len also was married in early December to Jan Balmer.) Jeff Anderson and Ann Burke both graduated from UVA's Colgate Darden

OLD DOMINION DAY

An Old Dominion Day event was held on Nov. 23, at the Edsel and Eleanor Ford House in Grosse Pointe, Mich. The Detroit William and Mary alumni contingent included: (left to right), first row: Beatrice Frank, Denise McGarrin '85, Anne Sandvig '56, Susan Puock '80; second row: Sue Brown '82, Jane Ottoway Dow '55, John P. Ottoway Jr. '58 (chapter president); third row: John P. Ottoway III '84, Rusty Quinn '81 and Kevin Link '83. Attending but not in the photograph was Jenny Ottoway Dow Murphy '82 and Devin Murphy '82.

Graduate School of Business Administration.

Spencer Pugh received his Ph.D. in physical chemistry from Stanford University, and Mike Buchanan received a Ph.D. in chemistry from UC, Berkeley. Both Spencer and Mike, along with Beverly Hawk Pugh, are now working for Eastman in Rochester, NY.

Warren Wingo graduated from Harvard Divinity School and is living in New York City as a "struggling artist and freelance graphic designer." Becky Hartfield graduated with a D.D.S. from the University of Kentucky. She's now practicing dentistry in the Air Force.

Patricia Schmid kept herself busy last year, completing her M.S. degree in telecommunications policy from George Washington University while working as a technical writer for GTE Telenet Communications Corporation and planning a wedding. She was married last May to John Haman.

Linda Secrist, after having worked as a mental health counselor at Roanoke Valley Psychiatric Center has returned to school. She is presently working on a master's in psychology at Hollins College.

Susan Shoaf is a doctoral candidate at Cornell University and is also president of Cornell's Graduate Student Association. Cindy Skoglund and Bernie Renger are both working on Ph.D.'s at Carnegie-Mellon. Cindy will receive her Ph.D. in chemistry, specifically in nuclear magnetic resonance, and Bernie will receive his in physics.

Michael Morris and Charlie Lutz are at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, in the archaeology and geology graduate programs respectively.

Kathy Bess is attending law school at the University of Georgia, Athens. Last year she won the University's 1933 Tort Award — a scholarship awarded to the best student in the first-year torts course.

Several '81 grads have returned to the 'Burg and W&M as "non-students." Alfreda James is assistant to the dean of admissions at W&M and was recently appointed by the then Virginia Governor Charles Robb to the statewide student recruitment committee of the Virginia Plan Bi-racial Advisory and Consulting Committee. Usa Henning Rogers is organizing W&M's campus center in her job as the campus center facilities director.

Dede Atkinson Bruden also still has close ties with W&M. Her husband, Joseph Bruden, is the Indian's new head baseball coach. Dede is working for Arthur Young in their healthcare consulting practice and said she absolutely loves her job.

Carter Barrett is working in Williamsburg in the accounting department of Badische Corporation, and Loretta Forbes Spacek is a senior internal auditor with the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation.

Down the road from the 'Burg, Patricia McAuliffe is a pediatric resident at Kings' Daughters Hospital in Norfolk. She was married in October to Richard Strauss. Patti Lane, Mary Brennan Wirship and Dawn Zimmerman '83 were in Trish's wedding party.

Richie Andrews and Karen Hanaker are in Norfolk, too. Both work in the Norfolk office of Peat Marwick and were recently promoted to management positions.

Rick and Karen Kirtley Ramsey bought a house in Richmond last year. Rick is working as an account manager for a computer consulting firm, and Karen is a trainer in the corporate safety department at Virginia Power. Dave Cheek is also working at Virginia Power in their accounting department. Tommy Vaughn is working with Rick at the same consulting firm.

Todd and Patti Faini Billet also have a new house in Richmond. Todd graduated from MCV last May and is now doing his residency in obstetrics and gynecology at MCV. Patti was recently promoted to retail banking officer at Sovran.

Debbie Meek McEachran and her husband, Dan '80, are also in Richmond. Debbie is studying to be a minister. Judith Weinstein graduated from MCV School of Nursing and is now a practicing R.N. in Richmond. John Blanton is a programmer for Pyxel Applications.

In Ashland, Caroline Bolte is the assistant director of public relations for Randolph-Macon College. She says she loves her job and is "doing lots of writing and designing, advising the yearbook staff and working with great people." She has also started to work (parttime) on a master of humanities degree at the University of Richmond.

Susan White has decided to relinquish the "city-life" and return to the family farm in Danville. She spent three years after graduation working as a geologist, first in Richmond exploring for oil and then in Charleston, W.Va. analyzing oil and gas wells to determine their value. Now she's doing what she always wanted to . . . farm — enjoying being outdoors, seeing things grow and being her own boss. Susan is now successfully operating Gentlemen's Ridge Berry and Vegetable Farm, a pick-your-own farm 6 1/2 miles out of Danville. She raises 10 acres of vegetables, six of tobacco, three and a half of fruit and one hundred head of beef cattle.

Chris Phillips is making a name for himself in the journalism field. He is currently working as a reporter for the Washington Country News in Abingdon and has sold four articles to Parade (one of which appeared as a cover story) and three to Reader's Digest. Chris' journalistic specialty is the human interest story about the unsung hero.

Toni Goff Sheads and Ruth Trice have both entered the field of education. Toni is teaching in Stafford, Va., and Ruth is teaching German and French at Albemarle High School in Charlottesville. Ruth received her M.A. from UVA in 1983 and as a Ph.D. candidate, also at UVA, she received a fellowship for advanced study at Tubigen University in Tubigen, Germany, where she spent the 1983-84 term. Last summer she was chosen to be one of a select group of teachers to attend the Goethe Institute in Freiburg, Germany.

Laurie Nicholson received a master of divinity in church music degree from Southeastern Seminary and is now a minister of music at Ferry Farm Church in Fredericksburg.

Nancy Kucan, Mike Garret and Ginny Bidwell Theisen, all graduated from Marshall-Wythe School of Law in 1984. Nancy is now practicing in Harrisonburg, Va., with Bishop Dansby; Mike is practicing in Lynchburg, specializing in personal injury cases; and Ginny is an Assistant Commonwealth Attorney in Roanoke. Joel Branscome, another law school graduate, works with Ginny.

Conrad and Mary Beth Hennessy-Schwab have moved to Charlottesville. Conrad is doing his internship in internal medicine at UVA. Mary Beth is working as a law editor at the Michie Company, a law publisher in Charlottesville.

Linda Blanchard Douglas is living in Urbana, Va., with her husband, William, and two children. She is teaching high school math. Jan Pickrell Anderson is a bank manager in Virginia Beach.

Marie de la Cruz Adams and her husband are living in Newport News. Marie had been working as a sales manager in a cable TV company until Dec. 1984 when she quit to become a full-time mom. Her son Christopher was born in Feb. 1985, and, according to mom, is a "full-time joy!" Gail Clifton Domaleski and her husband, Gary M.S. '82, are living in King George County, Va. Gail also temporarily "retired" from teaching last year to spend time with her new son, Gregory John.

Kate Knott Welch seems to be doing quite well in the Northern Virginia area. She and her husband, David, have established their own business, Welch Communications, Inc., a communications consulting firm specializing in political direct-mail advertising and fundraising. Kate and David are living in Arlington with their new son, Andrew David.

Sarah Baird was married last September to Bruce Arthur. They have settled in Baltimore, where Sarah is the clinical trial coordinator for Johnston Laboratories Division of Becton, Dickinson and Company. Bruce is an assistant to the architect of the Capitol in D.C.

Audry Bender Winston and Moiria Holly Monk are also in the Baltimore area. Audry is working as a software systems engineer at Westinghouse Electric Corporation. She received her master's degree in computer science from Johns Hopkins University and has been teaching several courses in their graduate science school since Sept. 1984. Audry was married last June to Colin Winston. Moira is working as a C.P.A. in Bethesda.

Ellen Marchiano is working in the Washington, D.C., office of Peat Marwick and was recently promoted to a management position within the accounting and auditing group. David Hirsch is practicing law with a small firm in Fairfax and has been getting a lot of courtroom experience. William Hemburster is the controller for Executone of Virginia, Inc., and Debra Cook Mauro is an accounting manager for the Tobacco Institute in D.C. Debra is also expecting her first child in March.

Moving to other parts of the country . . . Patty Lane is in Cincinnati working in marketing and hoping to get into the New York School of Fashion soon. Mark Bataglia received an M.B.A. from the University of Chicago and is now a corporate planning manager at Deltak, Inc., in Naperville, Ill.

Patti deVries is in New York City working in the international department of Arista Records, Inc. She's also formed a company with partner Frank Gallagher called Pre-War Management. They are currently managing Twin Tone/Coyote Recording Artists "The Clitons." And if that's not enough, Patti is also playing bass guitar in a garage girl group called "We're Beatrice."

In another facet of the entertainment industry, John and Lisa Brown Buchanan have settled in Rochester, N.Y., where they have established their own successful business raising chinchillas for fur coats.

Mary Kennelly is in Farmington, Conn., working as the director/curator of the Stanley-Whitman House Museum. Anna Maria Sanchez-Moreno was recently promoted to assistant vice president at the Philadelphia National Bank. She works in the national cash management sales group of PNB's marketing division and does a lot of traveling calling on large corporations on the West Coast and in the Chicago area for the sale and maintenance of corporate cash management services. Mary Brennan Wirship is a family practice resident in Lancaster, Pa.

Back down south again, Paul and Holly Teeter Shannon are living in Miami "with a gorgeous view of the water." Paul is a reporter for the Miami Herald and was recently promoted to a position as an investigative and special projects reporter. Holly is a television news producer at WPLG-TV, ABC's affiliate station in Miami.

Jim Riley is in Atlanta, working as a sales representative with Data General. Karen Van De Castle received her M.B.A. from UNC-Chapel Hill and is now an associate at Bankers Trust-Airlines, Aerospace, Airframe Division.

Barbara Tulloh and her husband Mark Flatin '83 are in North Carolina. They are living in Winston-Salem where Mark is a corporate calling officer for Wachovia Bank and Trust Company. Barbara is the branch manager of First Union National Bank's main office in Greensboro. Frank Stubbs is also in North Carolina. He was recently promoted to captain in the U.S. Army and is currently serving with the 17th Airborne Corps Artillery at Fort Bragg as the medical operations officer.

ALUMNUS RE-ELECTED TO LEADERSHIP POST

Michael B. Moore '69 of San Francisco has been re-elected to the board of governors for 1986 with the 5400-member California Trial Lawyers Association, the nation's largest state trial bar.

Linda Lang is also a member of the U.S. Armed Forces. She was commissioned a second lieutenant in the U.S. Air Force upon graduation from Officer Training School at Lackland AFB, Texas. Linda was an OTS "distinguished graduate" and is now stationed at McConnell AFB, Kan.

In the Lone Star State, Julie Jenkins is the new head coach of the women's volleyball team at Trinity University in San Antonio. John Fessenden and his wife, Kali, are also in San Antonio. John is working for a large law firm there. Marie Cruz Buck is still in Texas, too, enjoying her job with BASF Corporation. She's currently planning a business trip to Germany where she will be undergoing technology training for a new process that BASF will bring on-stream in the fall.

In California, John and Iris Redmond are living in Sacramento and practicing law. John is working with a Vallejo law firm, and Iris is with a Sacramento firm. Laurie Kazanjian is an intern at Lobero Theater in Santa Barbara.

Across the oceans, Riley Bates is working for Exploration Logging International (oil and gas exploration) and living in Bangkok, Thailand. Peter Richards is in Subic Bay, Republic of the Philippines, serving active duty as a Navy (lieutenant) lawyer.

Elizabeth Tolley is a volunteer with the Peace Corps. She is currently living in Morocco, teaching English and working with the Handicapped Association in Oujda. Kathy Luben is teaching second grade for the Department of Defense in Stuttgart, West Germany.

John and Laura Sanderson Healy have relocated to London and really enjoy life there. John is the financial director at the Anglo-American Center for Cervical Cancer and Laura is an American region editor at the headquarters of Amnesty International.

And life in Southern California is as wonderful as ever. Bob's and my jobs are both going well. Bob was promoted to marketing manager for Campbell Soup's canned foods division in their Los Angeles district and is working in his M.B.A. at U.S.C. I'm the promotions manager at Fluid Components, Inc. The job is full of new challenges since the company is growing rapidly, and my department and responsibilities are consequently expanding. Our new house in San Clemente is great and keeps us quite busy during our "free time." We still have managed to get in quite a bit of snow skiing this winter and do some sailing on the great Pacific.

Thanks to everyone who contributed news to this writing. Keep it coming!

Since 1986 marks the third year since our illustrious class's graduation, many of us now prepare to graduate from even higher levels of learning.

Rich De Marco is finishing up at St. John's law school. Ted Fauls has accepted a position with a Richmond law firm following his graduation from Marshall-Wythe this year. Also at law school are Sally Locatore and Patty Sanders, both at Rutgers. After completing his first year at law school, Robert Culp spent last summer interning with the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund.

Onto medical schools: John Pitman is a third-year med student at University of Virginia. Phil Dawson is studying medicine in Montreal. Both Lori Pate and Joanne Cassani are nurses at UVA's hospital in Charlottesville.

LIFE AFTER DOG STREET

A record 30% of the senior class attended the Alumni Society's 6th annual LADS program held Feb. 11, 12, 13 at the Alumni House. Alumni chapters in Williamsburg and Lower Peninsula provided the panelists who spoke on the practical information that will help seniors make the transition to the real world easier. Panelists from the Williamsburg chapter included: Dr. Tom Powers Jr. '68, Tom Smith '64, Ingrid Johns Gleason '84, David Sisk '74, Sheldon Franck '75, Gary Owens, Linda Walker '79, Sheila Myers '78, Steve Griggs '78, Sam Powell '68, and Dr. Jan Jenkins '68. Panelists from the Lower Peninsula included: John Greene '70, Tom Norment JD '71, Austin L. Roberts, III '69, and Dave Mercer '73. In the accompanying photo are the Senior Class LADS Committee, which worked in cooperation with the Alumni House staff. The committee was co-chaired by Susan Doyle (l) and Lisa Matick (r). Center is John Poma, vice president of the Senior Class.

ville. Anne Ferguson is a nurse in neurosurgery at MCV in Richmond.

Onto other graduate studies: Randy Lohr attends a Lutheran seminary in Chicago. Until next fall when she plans to work on her Ph.D., Caroline Watkins is working in the collection management department of Emory University's Woodruff Library. In August, she graduated with an M.A. in classical archaeology. During her studies, she participated in an archaeological excavation in the Jordan Valley called Kataret es-Samra. Sounds like a Harrison Ford adventure!

Also planning an adventure was Todd Baldwin. When he wrote me last fall, he intended to join Laura Chambers, a Peace Corps member, in Senegal. As Todd said, "Laura has been in Senegal, which is on the western tip of Africa, since July '84, leading a sultry paradisiacal existence among mongo trees and ocean breezes in a small village about two miles from the Atlantic."

Scott Steele and his dog, Ginger, completed their journey last Sept. 6, when they hiked the last mile of their 2000-mile trek along the Appalachian Trail.

Traveling the highways and byways of the Carolinas is Marian Eller, who moved to Charlotte, N.C. Marian still works in technical support for Shared Medical Systems Corporation, which provides software for health care management.

Moving up the East Coast, we find that Karen Butler lives in Blacksburg and works for a congressman. Barbara Cline works in the purchasing department for the Virginia State Supreme Court. In D.C. Peter Bartlett is enjoying another year as a sales manager. Ray Landis works for the Close-up Foundation.

In the banking business are Kevin Bradish and Patty Witmer. Kevin was recently promoted to assistant manager and assigned to the South Freeport branch of Long Island Trust. Patty serves as a marketing analyst for Investors Savings and Loan in Richmond.

And on the West Coast, John Kilgore reported for duty aboard the aircraft carrier USS Enterprise, stationed in Alameda, Calif.

Congratulations to William O'Toole, who received yet another award, the Award of Merit-Special Mention, for his poem "Happiness Was." He plans to send out his short story "A Different Dance" in hopes of publication. Also kudos to Paul Markowski and Jacob Wilson for their selection as Outstanding Young Men of America.

Congratulations of a different sort to the following engaged and married couples. Per Caroline Watkins, Sarah Cornelius is planning a July wedding. Carol McGuire mentioned seeing Spring Pechan's engagement announcement in the newspaper. Ann (Little) Koch married David Koch and now lives in Chicago. According to Ann, the city is one of the best kept secrets; it is fabulous.

Dual-career couple, Suzy (Halboth) and John Graham celebrated anniversaries at their respective work locations: Suzy, 1 year in the research department of Richmond's Federal Reserve, and John, 2.5 years as an associate economist with Virginia Power. During their get-away weekends, Rob Saunders (who is doing well in MCV's hospital administration program) takes care of the cat.

Kathy (Houser) Bruinsme married Clifford Bruinsme in Jan. '85. Her husband serves as a first-class interior communications electrician with the Navy. She is pursuing graduate work in reading education at the University of Rhode Island while teaching at a private preschool.

Kathryn (Bruzas) Hauer married Kim Hauer, a lieutenant on the submarine Francis Scott Key. Kathryn is an adjunct professor at the College of Charleston.

Rita (Ward) and Joe Fucella are stationed in Wildflecker, Germany, a small post 15 miles from the East German border. Joe is a lieutenant in the Corps of Engineers, and Rita is a lieutenant in the Ordnance Corps. They are expecting an addition to their family in July.

Adjusting to parenthood are Ellen (Alden) and Jim Mulvey. According to her proud parents, Colleen Michele is beautiful, but has a temper to match her red hair. Ellen, Jim, and Colleen now live in Rochester, N.Y.

Also living way up north in Manchester, Conn., are Cheryl (Dow) and Ken Baker. Cheryl works as an employee benefits underwriter at Travelers Insurance Company and teaches tennis at an indoor tennis club.

Well, I hope everyone has noticed the change in my address: 202 Crest Road, Marlton Lakes, NJ 08004. Bryan (my fiance) and I have bought a "house in the suburbs." (Actually, Marlton Lakes is more of a wood/lake community.) My next deadline is May 8 for the Gazette's June issue, so keep filling my mailbox with your cards and letters. Owning a house means the postman delivers more bills than anything! I welcome the diversity! Be good.

I hope everyone is enjoying a prosperous '86. The holidays were great for seeing college friends scattered across the nation.

I spent New Year's with Todd Armstrong (out in California); Tom Johnson (relocated to Newport News and sharing an apartment with Gary Williams) and Aileen Aderton. We hit Georgetown with a bang and then headed over to the Party Palace to visit Leigh McDaniel, Jennifer Stewart, Jill Bobbin and Michelle Ebe (who was partying, not a new addition).

I also had a chance to see Janice Harrup over the holidays. She is still in Courtland and is looking for permanent employment.

Another group of D.C. friends also got together for a pre-New Year's Eve party: Carol Pomponio, Cheryl Long, Jane Knott, Marty Agard (in grad school in Michigan), Lisa Vaughan, Sherri Dorsheimer, Nancy Krafft and Maria Santos '87 flew to New York for dinner and a show. Unfortunately Keith '83 and Julie Carlson couldn't make it as they were working hard in Virginia Beach.

Some of our friends have lost all sanity; they have decided to get married. David Oslin, at UVA med school, and Sharon Archer, in grad school in chemistry at MIT, are engaged, but haven't set a date.

Marsha Youngblood and Steve Clinton '84 announced their engagement at Homecoming. Marsha is living in Northern Virginia with Jennifer Lewis and Wendy Thomas. I heard they are planning another party, so it's time for all of you D.C.ers to look them up.

Cathy Walsh and Howard Bos, both in Richmond, are also engaged and are getting married April 26. Steve Policastro and Susan Pasteris have also announced their engagement.

On the marriage front, Mary Willis Jones and John Tammi '83 tied the knot in August in the Wren Chapel. The wedding party included Jen Cox, Marsha Youngblood, and Debbie Frey '83. Ushers included Dave Roberts '82 and Bob Skellit '83. Reverend Chip Austin '79 presided over the ceremony. Wendy Thomas sang a solo ("The Wedding Song"), Emily Early '86, read a scripture passage and John's sister, Nancy Tammi '80, also did a reading. The happy couple is now living in Charlotte, N.C., where Mary is working on her master's in clinical/community psychology, and John is a cost accountant with Process Systems, Inc.

Rachel Wright married Robert Lewis in September and is living in Suffolk.

Ellen Duffy married Ensign Paul Jenkins

in the U.S. Naval Academy Chapel last May. Beth Meinicke, Jody Norris and Pamela Pearsall participated in the ceremony. The couple is living in Athens, Ga., until June while Paul attends U.S. Navy Supply Corps School.

Joining the Richmond alumni is Elizabeth Tankard Neal who traveled for several months in Europe after graduation. After that she worked in a family business, Tankard Nurseries, on the Eastern Shore. She moved to Richmond in January to look for a job in advertising and commercial art.

Julie Gedro is also in Richmond working as an assistant tennis professional at Salisbury Country Club.

Michael Pemberton is with Deloitte, Haskins and Sells, and Dwight Smith is working for the Virginia Auditor of Public Accounts. Mark DeCoster is in his first year of the Ph.D. program in biochemistry at MCV, and Stephen Franzysen is with A. H. Robins in Richmond. Katie Hoffman is a Customer Service Rep for Investors Savings and Loan in the Brandermill office.

Up in Northern Virginia, Cynthia Regan is working in the U.S. House of Representatives and living in Alexandria. Brian White is with Britches Great Outdoors and claims that he just loves retail! Suzanne Schaeffer is working for Britches of Georgetown in the Fair Oaks Mall and living with fellow Alpha Chi Julie Jones. Suzanne plans to go to law school in a year.

Brandon Owen is living in Falls Church and working for a strategic planning consulting firm which does acquisition and competitor analysis for major U.S. corporations. Thomas Moriarty has taken a position as a financial analyst at Computer Sciences Corporation in Falls Church.

Nancy Hildreth actually found a job in her field and is an archaeologist in Mt. Vernon. You never know what kind of ancient ruins one might discover in Mt. Vernon!

Another analyst, Steve Milkey, is working for Joel Popkin and Co., a D.C. economic consulting firm. Paul Strata is "working feverishly and cleverly as a management consultant in Washington, D.C., living in the heart of Northwest D.C. and partying through all the mayhem in our beautiful nation's capital." Sounds fulfilling.

Sue Kren finally got a real job at Computer Software Engineers, Inc., in Falls Church. She went to Florida in January (the bum) and all she brought us back was a bunch of snow.

Elsewhere in Virginia, Michael McDonough is working as a school psychologist for the Portsmouth Public Schools. David Bisese is working for Comptek Technical Services and just moved into a place that's only two blocks from the Virginia Beach oceanfront. Is he bragging or complaining?

The last scoop on Wendy Wilson was that she was planning to move to Newport News. She is working for the shipyard as a production controller. That means she makes sure all the papers get stapled in the right order!

Somewhere, Carrie Allison is teaching sixth- and seventh-graders in a private school. Even the location is private!

Bart Edmunds is in the flood city, Roanoke, working for Peat, Marwick and Mitchell.

In Charlottesville, Amy Marshean is attending Law School at UVA, and Dave Butler is in the UVA School of Medicine.

Down in the 'burg, Scott Bailey is attending Marshall-Wythe after a summer of teaching drama at a summer camp in Maryland. Julie Rosche is also hanging out in Williamsburg.

I am pleased to announce that our class president, Tony McNeal, has finally graduated from the College of Knowledge. The last news I heard was that he was still unemployed. Tony will be Tony.

Heading north, Julie Beth Woodring and Vickie Sorongon are in the dance therapy program at Goucher College in Baltimore. Michael Schonfield is up there too in the corporate officer training program at First National Bank.

Studying law, Thad Weaver is at the University of Pennsylvania, and Steve Williams is on a full-tuition scholarship at Cornell University.

At Princeton, Jeffrey Mayer is trying to earn a Ph.D. in chemistry, but he welcomes visitors. School must be so easy he has lots of time to party!

I heard from Jeff Grossman a while back. He is still living it up in New Jersey (as best anyone can) and enjoys the life of a salesman.

Thomas Jensen has entered the political arena by working as finance director for U.S. Representative Stewart McKinney's (R-Conn.) re-election campaign.

'Y'all might be interested in what's happenin' down South: Chris Cole is at grad school at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville, and Melissa Conner is living in Columbia, S.C., and working on her M.A. in archaeology at the University of South Carolina. Maybe she could join Nancy Nildreth in Mt. Vernon.

Kyle Baker is living in Ashville, N.C., and is working with Procter and Gamble. Since his district includes Charlotte, he gets to see Mary Willis and John Tammi a lot.

Down in Louisiana John Morton has completed his management training program with the First National Bank of Commerce in New Orleans and has been placed in the branch system as a lending/business development officer. In his spare time he plays soccer for Tulane University. During the summer Scott Ukrop, Teresa Russo, Janice Harrup and Marna Ashburn came to visit.

Angela Hussey Williams received her parachutist badge upon completion of the three-week airborne course at the U.S. Army Infantry School in Fort Benning, Ga. She is scheduled to serve with the 24th Infantry Division at Fort Stewart, Ga. Her husband, Brian Williams, completed the field artillery officer basic course at Fort Sill, Okla. That's a long commute from Georgia!

Also in the military, Sharon Winn is a military intelligence officer for the Army. She is finishing an intelligence course in Arizona and will then be assigned to Munich, West Germany, for approximately three years. Watch out for that beer; it's a killer.

Marna Ashburn is stationed in Alabama with the Army and recently took her first solo helicopter flight. Rumor has it she is at the top of her class — of course!

More news on Lieutenant Kerke Johnson. He has graduated from Cavalry Officer's Basic Course and will serve with the 194th Armored Brigade in Fort Knox, Ky., as a cavalry platoon leader.

In Washington (the state, that is) Victoria Martinez is working on her master's in geological engineering.

Brian Sturm is teaching at a nature-environmental camp in California — like wow!

Up in Michigan James Ramsay has almost completed Phase I of his training with Electronic Data Systems. Phase II (10 weeks of intensive classroom training) will begin in April.

On the other side of the Atlantic, Aicha Cesar is studying medicine in Besancon, France. Frontis Wiggins is in Cairo (yes, Egypt) working for the Foreign Service. It's a two-year post to be followed by a stint in either Kabul or Moscow. He spent the summer working as a D.J. in Georgetown and as a soccer coach/ref. In October he went on board at the State Department, and, well, you know the rest. If you are in the neighborhood and would like to drop in, his address is American Embassy, Cairo, Egypt, Box 44 CPO, EPO New York 09527.

A special note to Stephanie Leyland: where the heck are you, child?

And that's the news on the home front — quite a bit. But keep those cards and letters coming.

The General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Virginia provided William and Mary with virtually all of its budget requests for 1986-87, according to President Verkuil, who termed the session "an outstanding year for the College in all respects." The President said the College received a 12.5 percent pay increase for faculty, the highest percentage increase of all colleges in Virginia; full funding of $4.3 million to construct a new physical education facility, which will allow the College to move its physical education and intramural facilities from Blow Gymnasium to the new campus; $2.2 million to refurbish Ewell Hall for the music department; restoration of 25 positions removed from the College in former Governor Robb's budget and the $1,074,232 that these positions represented; and various budget items for the Virginia Institute of Marine Science.

LAW

Ellen Pirog
1005 West 42nd Street
Richmond, VA 23225

Because of the large turnout for the Homecoming cocktail party, which was held this year in the lobby of the law school, we were unable to invite the current students. We hope for next year to find a location in Williamsburg that is large enough to accommodate both the students and the alumni so we can continue with our tradition of a jointly sponsored party.

We hope that everyone, particularly those in the classes for which reunions are scheduled, will come to Spring Reunion Weekend, April 19-20. Reunions will be held for the five-, 10-, 15-, and 20-year graduating classes.

Chief Judge Henry Lam '52 has announced his retirement as judge of the Circuit Court of the City of Virginia Beach. Judge Lam was appointed as a judge of the General District Court in 1969 and was elevated to the Circuit Court bench in 1975.

CONSTRUCTION TO BEGIN ON SWEM, MUSCARELLE ADDITIONS

Construction began in March at William and Mary on major additions to the Earl Gregg Swem Library and the Muscarelle Museum of Art. A $3 million dollar four-story addition to Swem Library is expected to take approximately 15 months. Built on the front of the existing library, it will provide much-needed stack space, reading areas, administrative offices, a 24-hour study room and a snack area. The new construction will add 28,600 square feet to the existing 112,000-square-foot library building. Construction funds will come from the General Fund of the Commonwealth of Virginia. The Muscarelle Museum will be nearly doubled in size with a second phase addition of 7,635 square feet, which is expected to take about one year to complete. The addition includes three new galleries, a graphic arts complex, additional office and storage space and a new work area for care of the College art collection. The second phase, like the initial phase of the Muscarelle Museum, is funded entirely from private sources.

cation and special programs officer for the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation. Tramosch is enrolled in the doctoral program in higher education and will travel to New Zealand in April for a six-month Fulbright Teaching and Research Fellowship.

GUY ENDOWMENT FUND TO HONOR FORMER CHAIRMEN

Three former chairmen of the chemistry department at William and Mary will be honored through the establishment of a permanent professorship in their names. Mrs. Gladys B. Guy of Williamsburg has established an endowment fund in memory of her late husband, William George Guy, and two of his predecessors, Van Franklin Garrett and Robert Gilchrist Robb. Income from the Garrett-Robb-Guy endowment will be used to support a professorship in chemistry, beginning in the fall of 1986. Dr. Guy taught in the chemistry department from 1925 to 1968, serving as chairman from 1946 until his retirement in 1968. Dr. Garrett, who received his master's degree from William and Mary, was a licensed medical doctor who practiced in Baltimore before returning to Williamsburg and joining the faculty in 1888. Dr. Robb, also a William and Mary alumnus, joined the faculty in 1918 and served as chairman of the chemistry department from 1934 until his retirement in 1946.
