Board Names Executive Vice President

Ohio University Alumni Director to Head Society of the Alumni

An award-winning alumni relations director from Ohio University in Athens has been named to succeed H. Westcott Cunningham '43 as executive vice president of the Society of the Alumni.

The Board of Directors approved in August the appointment of W. Barry Adams, 39 years old, director of alumni relations and executive director of the Ohio University Alumni Association since 1977.

A graduate of Ohio University where he received his bachelor of science degree in journalism in 1974 and his master of arts in international affairs in 1982, Adams has extensive experience in public relations, management, program planning and administration. His programs at Ohio have won five awards from the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education (CASE), including two Grand Gold awards, one for overall improvement in alumni programs and one for the total alumni relations program.

A member of the American Society of Association Executives as well as the Public Relations Society of America and CASE, Adams serves as a consultant to alumni programs. As a member of the CASE evaluation team for alumni programs, he has been a member of a committee which evaluated the alumni program at the University of Louisville during the past year and will participate in an evaluation of the Marshall University alumni program during the coming year.

Adams, who will also serve as editor of the Alumni Gazette, majored in public relations with concentrations in advertising, business and sociology at Ohio University. In addition to his other duties at Ohio, he has twice served as a visiting lecturer in the School of Journalism. In his master's studies, his major was Southeast Asia Studies with additional work in international communications and anthropology. He has studied both the Chinese and Japanese languages.

Noting Adams' strong professional credentials, John S. Entwisle '44, a member of the Board of Directors who served as chairman of the review committee for the search, said that from the beginning of the search "our committee agreed to look for the best candidate we could find regardless of College affiliation."

"Barry Adams met every one of our criteria and added a dimension of his own, which included 10 years experience in the field of alumni relations as a professional," said Entwisle.

"It is exciting to have such an experienced person on board to lead the Society of the Alumni at this particular period in the history of the College as we approach our 300th anniversary," he added.

Adams, who will assume his new position around Nov. 1, comes from a school with some similarities to William and Mary. A state institution that was founded more than 175 years ago, Ohio University stresses the arts and sciences, although it is considerably larger than William and Mary with 16,000 students on the main campus and 23,000 in the system-wide university with a total of five branch campuses. The university has nine colleges and 110,000 alumni.

Among the strengths that attracted Adams to William and Mary were the history and tradition of the College, a strong and outspoken alumni body, a recognition within the university of the importance of the alumni association, exceptional academic and admission credentials and the "friendly, creative and wonderful people I met during the interviews who have a real love for the institution."

"I personally feel that alumni have an investment in their institution and when an institution has as strong an alumni body as William and Mary has, that's a very good sign," said Adams.

Adams noted that the recognition of the importance of the alumni society at William and Mary by the institution "is one of the best I know." He added, "The executive vice president has good access to the leadership of the institution, and the opportunity to serve in that role will give me a lot of management and administrative responsibility."

A native of Circleville, Ohio, Adams joined the Navy after high school and served for four years as a cryptologist with Naval Security, including two and one-half years in the Far East. He served for a year as the personal cryptologist for the admiral in command of amphibious forces in the Pacific, traveling to countries throughout the Pacific including the Phillipines, Vietnam, Thailand and Hong Kong. Entering the Navy as an enlisted man, he is currently a lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve.

After completing his undergraduate education at Ohio, Adams worked as a public information officer for the Ohio Department of Transportation from 1974 to 1975 and as director of public relations for St. Francis Hospital in Cincinnati from 1975 until 1977 when he joined the alumni office at Ohio University. After six months as assistant director, he was promoted to director.

At Ohio, he administers an office of nine employees, including three assistant directors, who, with Adams, travel five to eight days a month servicing Ohio's 55 alumni chapters around the United States.

"An Ohio University alumni chapter program is going on every day and one-half somewhere in the United States," Adams said.

In addition to their alumni contacts, Adams notes his staff assists in fund-raising and admissions recruitment while on the road. Each director is assigned personal responsibility for individual chapters, and Adams himself has four chapters that he oversees.

"The mission of a good alumni association should also reflect the mission of the university," Adams says. "So we believe in working hand-in-hand with the university in our service to alumni and in service to the institution itself."

Ohio's alumni programs reflect many of the William and Mary programs. They include, in addition to the chapter development, an educational travel program, reunion weekends, homecoming, merchandising and an alumni college.

Adams notes that he is particularly proud of the success of the alumni college and the reunion weekend programs. The alumni college has programs for all ages of the alumni family from six years old up, he says, and the topics have ranged from the history of Iran to economics in the '90s. The participants attend three classes a day while living on campus. In the afternoon, they participate in athletic events and in the evenings they attend cultural activities.

Since Ohio has such a large alumni body, with 8,000 returning for homecoming to the relatively small community of Athens, the alumni office does not hold reunions during Homecoming Weekend. Instead, Adams says, reunion weekends are scheduled throughout the year, with special interests often serving as the focal point. For instance, two years ago the school's national small college football championship team returned for a reunion to observe its 25th anniversary.

Adams believes that the fact that he is coming to William and Mary "from outside the College family" can be an opportunity to bring some new ideas to the alumni society program.

"It's a good opportunity for me and the Society to have a new beginning while building on the strong programs William and Mary has in place," he said. Adding that alumni programs have come of age during the past 10 to 15 years, he said that they require professional supervision from a director, regardless of his university affiliation, and "I consider myself an alumni relations professional."

William and Mary's Role in The Making of The Constitution

By Paul R. Verkuil '61

The drafting, ratification, and subsequent interpretation of the Constitution has held an endless fascination for Americans, as witnessed by the great many scholarly conferences such as this one scheduled during this bicentennial period. It seems that virtually every conceivable aspect of the Constitution is being discussed — at length — by somebody! I must admit, however, that the ratification debates in Virginia and New York — hold a special interest. Of course, the Virginia debates also are a source of pride for the College of William and Mary, since our graduates had so much to do with the constitutional debate in Virginia! And, the College can boast of its contributions to the drafting of the Constitution as well, as four of the seven Virginia delegates to the Philadelphia convention were alumni. They are Edmund Randolph, George Wythe, John Blair and Dr. James McClurg. The latter was known for his proposal to make the office of President an effective office, a position he shared with his New York colleague, Alexander Hamilton.

As we all know, however, the drafting of the Constitution was only the first step. The Constitution — that great experiment in "government crafting" — had been hammered out in the summer of 1787, but the new government could not go into effect until it had been ratified. By June 1788, eight states had ratified, and on June 21, New Hampshire became the crucial ninth to enter the fold, thus putting the Constitution into effect with respect to the states that had ratified. But while the new government was in place as to those nine states, it was universally acknowledged that the success of the new order hinged upon its ratification by the two largest states — Virginia and New York.

Thus even after ratification was technically secured, the deliberations in those two conventions marked the high point in the ratification process. The New York and Virginia debates produced perhaps the most erudite discussion of the issues presented by the Constitution and the ratification process also produced the great tract of political theory — The Federalist Papers — authored primarily by Madison of Virginia and Hamilton of New York.

Let me take you back briefly to those ratifying conventions. The state of Virginia was badly divided over the wisdom of adopting the new form of government, and the delegation elected to the convention in Richmond reflected that deep division. When the delegates convened in Richmond on June 2, 1788, the matter was so much in doubt that few observers ventured to predict the outcome of the convention's deliberations. The debate which followed was unparalleled in the depth and lucidity of its analysis of the Constitutional provisions. Leading the charge for the advocates of the Constitution was James Madison, with strong support from three William and Mary men: Edmund Randolph, George Wythe and John Marshall. (Randolph by the way had refused to sign the Constitution in Philadelphia and switched his position in the favor of ratification.) The opposition was led by Patrick Henry (in one of the most magnificent performances of his career), who joined with George Mason and James Monroe (another William and Mary alumnus) in the effort to repudiate the Constitution. It is important for William and Mary chauvinists to note that the audience to which these orators addressed themselves (that is, the membership of the Virginia convention) contained no fewer than 43 (out of a total of 160) who were educated at the College of William and Mary!

In the end, after a monumental battle, Virginia ratified the Constitution by a narrow majority (89 to 79) on June 28 and thereby became the tenth state to accept the Constitution. Her decision undoubtedly aided the cause of ratification in New York which desperately needed support. The New York debates were extended arguments by Alexander Hamilton and the great antifederalist lawyer, McLaneton Smith. By July New York also ratified by 30 to 27, and the new federal government was well, if barely, launched.

Here we are in Chautauqua some 200 years later, drawn together by the concepts embodied in the Constitution and the ideas and disputes embodied in the Constitution and the ideas and disputes raised so eloquently in the ratifying conventions. It is a wonderful feeling to be part of the heritage that started it all in motion.

(President Verkuil made these comments at a conference on the Constitution in Chautauqua, N.Y., sponsored jointly by the Marshall-Wythe School of Law and the Chautauqua Institution.)

Former Alumni Executive Secretary Dies

Charles McCurdy Jr. '33 Served From 1937 to 1952

Charles Post McCurdy Jr. '33, former executive secretary of the Society of the Alumni and former editor of the Alumni Gazette, was found dead in his home in Arlington, Va., on Aug. 14. He died of a heart ailment.

While a student, McCurdy was elected to Omicron Delta Kappa and Phi Beta Kappa. He served as his senior class president, business manager of the Flat Hat, 1932-33, assistant business manager of the Colonial Echo, 1933, and manager of the golf team, 1932. He was a member of Chi Beta Phi, Phi Delta Gamma, the Dramatic Club and Sigma Nu, while also serving as the fraternity's representative to Interfraternity Council.

Following graduation with a B.S., he worked for Union Trust Company and the Treasury Department in Washington, D.C. During this time, he actively participated in the Washington Alumni Club, serving as secretary twice and as president. A member of the board of directors of the Society of the Alumni from 1936 to 1938, he served as the Society's executive secretary (comparable to today's executive vice president) from 1937 to 1952. During his editorship, the Alumni Gazette was named three times as one of the 10 best alumni publications by the American Alumni Council. He served as president of the council in 1951-52.

In 1952, he joined the development program of Harvard Divinity School. From 1952 to 1971, he served as executive secretary of both the National Association of State Universities and the Association of American Universities. He also worked as the Washington representative of the National University Extension Association. He attained the rank of lieutenant commander in the Navy during World War II.

McCurdy received the Algernon Sydney Sullivan Award from the College and was awarded the Alumni Medallion in 1936. He also received an L.L.D. from Gustavus Adolphus College in St. Peter, Minn., and a gold medallion in 1964 from Columbia University as one of the most distinguished alumni executives in this country. He returned to service of the College in 1974-75 as the national chairman of the William and Mary Fund.

His wife, Harriet Shaw McCurdy, died in 1956. He leaves no immediate survivors.

Harriett Stanley '72:

From Campus Rebel to Investment Banker

BY HILARY HOLLADAY

When Harriett L. Stanley '72 arrived at William and Mary in 1968, women were required to wear dresses just about everywhere. As freshmen, they were also required to take an etiquette test based on a booklet titled "The William and Mary Woman." To Ms. Stanley, all-around athlete and high school class president, the rules seemed silly. "Women wore suits to football games. I was astonished. When I'd visited campus, it never occurred to me to check out the campus lifestyle."

So she defied the rules and wore jeans and sometimes Bermuda shorts under a trench coat. "I was constantly getting into trouble my freshman year," she recalls. But in the tumultuous late sixties, her rebellion fit right in. By the time she graduated, women were allowed to wear jeans on campus, and men no longer offered their seats to women on the campus bus. Political and social awareness was high, and Ms. Stanley was in the thick of it.

Propelled by her successes on campus, she steadily advanced up the career ladder to her position as an investment banker. A government major, she remains fascinated by politics and seems to thrive on pressure. Gone are days of Bermuda shorts, however. She now wears suits and monogrammed cufflinks and allows that working within the system has its advantages. Even in college, when she listened to other students championing their causes, she says, "It occurred to me that the people doing all the screaming and yelling weren't always right."

Elected treasurer of the Society of the Alumni board of directors in February 1986 she believes the Society could be more influential and political than it currently is. "I think the Society of the Alumni has a very valuable role to play in the College community. I'm not sure that role has been everything it could've been. A number of us on the board think that role should increase in activity and visibility. We're now getting on the right track."

She adds, "William and Mary's overwhelming asset is its faculty. Yes, the campus is beautiful. Yes, the student body is excellent. But William and Mary's most enduring quality is the quality of instruction here. I'd like to see the Society become a partner in enhancing the value of that asset."

Ms. Stanley has intense blue eyes and a direct way of speaking. The theme of the Colonial Echo the year she edited it was "commitment and involvement," and she says those words continue to reflect her workstyle. She also likes her work a great deal. When asked why she accepted one job or another at different points in her career, she replies, "I would've been crazy not to."

When she became editor of the Colonial Echo, some people probably thought she was crazy to take the job. The yearbook was "a dying entity on campus," of little interest to students with newly awakened political interests. Some students did not want the 1972 yearbook to receive College funding. Ms. Stanley met the controversy head-on. When she decided to write to every member of the student body asking for support, then-dean J. Wilfred Lambert said, "That might just save this publication."

She also asked 50 or so student leaders to encourage everyone to show up for yearbook pictures. "I'm happy to say it worked. Everybody had a stake in the yearbook. We made sure we had a photographer there for all activities. We set out to create a volume that would reflect William and Mary, and we put out a prize."

Ms. Stanley was also a member of Pi Beta Phi, the Publications Council and the Student Association. She received the Virginia State Sigma Delta Award for journalism and the Rex Smith journalism scholarship. She was named "outstanding senior woman" in 1972.

After graduation she remained at William and Mary as editor of the Alumni Gazette. Then, after earning a master's degree in journalism from Boston University, she took a job with the Close Up Foundation, a non-profit group that brings high school teachers and students to Washington to learn about politics.

She was happy there, but missed Boston. "I taught a workshop called 'Fat America,' about our absurdly consumptive lifestyle, the way people use resources badly. It was an attention-getter. I would blast everyone and everything. One day there was a Boston Edison representative in the audience. Afterwards, he asked whether I'd be interested in a job. I said, 'No way.' Six months later, I was working there."

Switching to a corporate career called for some personal adjustments. "The first thing I did was get my waist-length hair cut. I learned to accommodate myself to a very different environment. I learned to couch my arguments in a very different way. Before, I did my battles up front; I called it as I saw it. At Boston Edison, I really had to learn to conform myself to a system. It was not an entirely comfortable transition, but it ended up making me a more effective individual."

After several years in the company's public information office, she left in 1979 to become assistant director of the Energy Office in Massachusetts. "A month after I got there, the gasoline crisis started. Talk about being on the hot spot. Major oil companies, legislators and high-tech companies all wanted gas. The fact was, there wasn't enough to go around. The job required pleading, bullying, and a lot of elbow grease, just to try to keep all the parties intact. It was a classic case of having to say no to everyone. But I think we did a pretty creditable job."

Ms. Stanley was not ready to settle down in that position, though. She enrolled in Harvard's master of business administration program in order to hone her business skills. While she says her values and intellectual interests were shaped at William and Mary, a degree from Harvard gave her a definite edge in the corporate world. "People will talk to you just because you went to Harvard Business School. But (the program) was a tough experience, just brutal."

After Harvard, she worked as an economic analyst before entering her current career as an investment banker. As vice president of Prudential Bache Capital Funding, Inc., she specializes in financing large capital projects for public entities. The job requires frequent travel to cities large and small. Though she likes the opportunity to work with both public officials and the private sector, she recognizes that "this is a very, very high burnout business. You don't do it forever." Looking to the future, she has considered running for public office or starting her own company.

On weekends, she enjoys restoring her 1752 home on the northern shore of Massachusetts and riding and showing her horse, Canadian Luck. She also visits Williamsburg about once a month. She didn't always come back so frequently, but once she got involved in alumni activities, she realized, she says with characteristic enthusiasm, "This is really fun!"

Defying the William and Mary dress code in the '60s, Harriett L. Stanley '72 used to wear Bermuda shorts under her trench coat. As an investment banker, she now dresses in suits.

New Muscarelle Museum Wing Opens

The Joseph and Margaret Muscarelle Museum of Art opened its new addition to the public on July 4, 1987. This enlarged facility, which more than doubles the museum's size from approximately 8,000 to 17,000 square feet of space, allows for a greater number of exhibitions as well as expanded educational programming.

Built entirely from private funds at a cost of $1.35 million, the new wing includes a graphic arts study and storage complex, sculpture and painting storage rooms, expanded offices and general workspace on the first floor. Three spacious exhibition galleries are on the second floor. Major benefactors to the Muscarelle Museum of Art addition are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Muscarelle, The Kresge Foundation, Philip Morris, Inc., and Mrs. and Mrs. Alexander M. Quattlebaum. Mr. Muscarelle is a member of the class of 1927.

The official dedication of the building addition to the Joseph and Margaret Muscarelle Museum of Art will take place on Friday, Oct. 23 at 3 p.m. Following the ceremony, the museum will host a reception and open house until 6 p.m. During Homecoming weekend the galleries will be open extended hours and museum staff will conduct special tours of the building, collections and exhibitions. On Saturday, Oct. 24, gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. with tours offered at 10 a.m. and 11:30 a.m. On Sunday, Oct. 25, gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. with a tour at 2 p.m. followed by a chamber music concert at 3 p.m. During the week prior to the dedication the museum will offer a variety of special programs and events. College alumni, faculty, students, museum members and friends are invited to participate and celebrate the opening of the expanded museum.

The Sheridan Gallery, named in memory of Edyth C. and Ralph M. Sheridan through the generosity of Jeanne and Gilbert Kinnamon '39 and '34. On display (through September 20) is an exhibition of portraits by internationally acclaimed photographer Yousuf Karsh. This gallery is normally used for large special exhibitions.

The Spigel Gallery with the Photographs by Karsh exhibition. This room was named in memory of Bernard B. and Enid W. Spigel through the generosity of Frederick '48 and Lucy S. Herman '47, their daughter Fredrika Herman Jacobs and their son Bernard L. Herman '73.

The Herman Graphic Arts Study Room, designed for the intimate viewing of works of art on paper. This room recognizes the generosity of Lucy Spigel Herman '47 and Frederick Herman '48.

Dedication Ceremonies Scheduled for October

Student Celebration

Oct. 18, 5-7:30 p.m.

William and Mary students are invited to a special pre-dedication celebration of the Muscarelle Museum of Art's new wing. Students will enjoy an evening of musical entertainment and a wide variety of desserts on the grounds of the Muscarelle Museum of Art. This event is free to all College students.

Lecture: "Andrea del Sarto"

by Marco Chiarini

Oct. 19, 8 p.m.

Marco Chiarini, director of the Galleria Palatina in the Palazzo Pitti, Florence, will speak on Andrea del Sarto, the early 16th-century artist who was considered the "perfect painter" by Vasari. Del Sarto was the subject of the much acclaimed exhibition mounted recently by Chiarini and others in the Pitti Palace with newly restored paintings and drawings. Dr. Chiarini is internationally recognized for his publications on Italian Renaissance and Baroque art and 17th-century Dutch and Flemish painting.

"Letters from the Yellow Chair"

A Play of Vincent Van Gogh

Oct. 20, 8 p.m.

"Letters from the Yellow Chair" is constructed from the voluminous correspondence between Vincent Van Gogh and his brother, Theo, an art dealer. Most scenes come from events directly described in the letters, and much of the dialogue is directly quoted from these letters. The play is performed in a flashback style, opening with Theo returning from Vincent's funeral.

Theo is played by Nick Pace and Vincent by Graham McTavish. Both performers are actor-scholars from Britain. The play has been presented at numerous museums including the National Gallery in London, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Cleveland Museum of Art, the Wadsworth Atheneum in Hartford and others.

"Letters from the Yellow Chair" will be presented at Phi Beta Kappa auditorium. Tickets ($4 general admission, $3 members and students) may be purchased in advance at the museum or on the evening of the play as seats remain. Following the play, the audience is invited to meet the actors at a reception at the museum.

"Panoply": Claudia Stevens in Performance

Oct. 21, 8 p.m.

Claudia Stevens is a classically trained pianist, singer and actress who combines her skills in the performance of innovative, interdisciplinary compositions. She has given world premieres of over 30 compositions, performing contemporary works at major concert series and festivals throughout the United States including Carnegie Recital Hall, the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts and the National Gallery of Art.

"Panoply" is a piano play with vocal materials, visual and acoustical effects, dramatic events and satire. Ms. Stevens' performance at the Muscarelle Museum of Art will include works by Judith Shatin Allen, Carlton Gamer, Betsy Jolas, Eric Satie, Francis Schwartz and Kurt Weill. Tickets for this special event ($3 general admission, $2 members and students) may be purchased in advance at the museum or on the evening of the performance as space allows. Seating is limited.

Below, The Cheek Gallery recognizes the generosity of Mary Tyler Cheek and Leslie Cheek Jr., the founding chairman of the William and Mary fine arts department in 1936. On display (through Sept. 27) is a special exhibition of 19th century American paintings.

Above, The Graves Gallery, named in honor of Zoe Wasson Graves and Thomas Ashley Graves, Jr., the 4th president of the College of William and Mary, 1971-1985, through the generosity of their friends. This large gallery will be used primarily for special travelling exhibitions. The unadorned design of the new upper level galleries allows for the installation of a wide variety of art exhibitions. Black ceiling baffles hide the many ventilation, security and lighting systems necessary in a museum building.

Legg Mason Celebrates 25th Anniversary

Alumni Build Brokerage House Into Regional Power

Jim Brinkley (left) and Chip Mason, both members of the class of 1959 visited the Newport News office of Legg Mason which opened its doors 25 years ago.

Daily Press

BY MATTHEW SHEERIN
Newport News Daily Press

In 1962, the Newport News business district was bustling with trade — lawyers and bankers, real estate and insurance firms, department stores and restaurants — but had just one securities brokerage firm.

So a group of 19 financial heavyweights, including Joseph Carpenter, former president of Carpenter Bros. Inc., and the late Frank Blechman, a well-known lawyer, pooled its resources to back a seemingly out-of-place business partner: Raymond A. "Chip" Mason '59, a 26-year-old stockbroker whose only connection to the group had been through selling some stocks and bonds.

"Yes, he was young," recalled one of Mason's backers, William E. Allaun of Allaun Corp. of Newport News, "but he had a good reputation. He worked himself through school and had good connections. We thought it was a good horse to bet on."

Today, 25 years to the month since Mason & Co. opened for business on 28th Street and Washington Avenue, the bet has paid off handsomely, and the horse has emerged into one of the largest regional brokerage houses in the country.

"It was the furthest thing from our thoughts," another original investor, Newport News lawyer (and former William and Mary rector) Herbert V. Kelly '40, '43 J.D., said of the company's expansion along the Eastern Seaboard and its continued aggressive posture in the industry.

Even Mason, now chairman, president and chief executive officer of the company, recalls in amazement the 25 years that have taken him from the small Newport News office to headquarters in Washington, D.C., and Baltimore, where the company is now based, and through several mergers that have turned the brokerage into Legg Mason Inc.

"I felt we would become a strong company, but within our own market," Mason said.

For the fiscal year ended March 31, the company posted record earnings of $10.29 million, up 24 percent from the previous year, and a record $148.65 million in revenue, a 33 percent jump over 1986.

Just five years ago, income was $2.5 million on revenue of $51.5 million, marking a significant growth pattern in recent years.

Legg Mason hopes to keep pace with that growth with the help of acquisitions in the last six months of Western Management Co., a company that manages assets of more than $3.5 billion, and Howard Weil Financial Corp. of New Orleans, a brokerage that specializes in underwriting municipal bonds.

The company has also become well known in the industry for its commitment to the "value theory" of investing, which favors undervalued stocks that have strong growth potential over a long-term period.

With the mergers of huge regional banks and other financial institutions, and the anticipation of laws that will allow banks to get more involved in the securities business, Mason says his company will need to further expand to survive as a regional institution.

Along those same lines, however, is the question of whether expansion at too rapid a pace would damage cost factors or the company's regional character.

Such concerns of interstate banking and industry deregulation meant little to Mason when he entered the business in 1959.

Armed with an economics degree from the College of William and Mary and job experience ranging from waiting on tables at Williamsburg restaurants to bill collecting, Mason went to work for his uncle's brokerage firm in Lynchburg.

He spent most of the next two and one-half years running the company's Richmond office, calling on Peninsula clients about once a week. It was on those trips that he built his reputation in the Newport News business community as an ambitious young businessman who knew the brokerage business.

At the same time, Joseph Carpenter, one of Mason's clients, had gotten together with local businessmen to form a locally-based brokerage.

"Back in those days, Wall Street brokerage houses didn't move into places like Newport News," said Kelly, one of the original investors. "It was something we all thought was needed."

Mason, too, was eager to get into business for himself, so the investors put up about $250,000 to get him started.

The first months were rough for the crew of Mason and a few of his college chums, including James Brinkley '59 (a member of the Board of Visitors and former member of the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni), who is now president of Legg Mason Wood Walker Inc., its retail brokerage subsidiary. The slow start, Mason says now, was due primarily to a lack of resources, experience, and a poor stock market.

With their reputation staked on the prominent investors, business picked up, and Mason & Co. plugged along, opening additional offices in Norfolk, Williamsburg and Portsmouth.

By 1967, the company was the third largest brokerage of 15 in Virginia, with six branches and 80 employees.

Despite the expansion, Mason and Brinkley knew well that growth inside Virginia would be limited, and that the key to success in the business at that time was in institutional investing, where brokers moved thousands of shares of stock at a time for the same commission rate charged for just one share. (Today, commissions are based on number of shares in a transaction, with larger blocks of stock costing considerably less per share.)

"The institutional business was an absolute gold mine, so we got into it," Mason recalled. To do that, the company acquired a Washington, D.C., brokerage, and moved its headquarters there from Newport News in 1969.

In August 1970, Mason merged with the oldest brokerage in Baltimore, Legg and Co.

"They had the one thing that we didn't have, and that was they were established," Mason said. What the staid, conservative Legg didn't have, however, were young and aggressive partners, and Mason says the combination of the two fit together well.

The acquisition in 1976 of Wood Walker wasn't as smooth as the merger with Legg, and Mason calls that year "the end of a real trauma period."

Subsequent mergers have helped expand the business to manage assets for large institutional investors, underwriting stock offerings and has helped it expand its biggest business, the retail brokerage offices.

"We continually work with the brokers to get them to realize that the principal function is to make money for the customers," Mason said.

And to make money, the company has relied on a strict application of the value theory, which Mason says has helped the company carve a special niche in the investment world. It also has helped turn up impressive profits with its two mutual funds and other stock portfolios.

James Brinkley, Mason's partner, best describes the theory by quoting Benjamin Graham, an author of investment textbooks in the 1950s. Graham said value investing was like "having a manic partner who one day was willing to sell you all of his holdings at one-half of what they were worth, and one day buy those shares at twice what they're worth, and having the discipline to accommodate him."

Legg Mason money managers look for companies that are strong financially, yet could still improve in both financial performance and stock price.

The theory, which also stresses diversification of stocks and the discipline to stick with the theory through rough times, has helped Legg Mason outperform most competitors in recent years and stay ahead of the 30 Dow Jones industrials and the Standard & Poors 500 Index.

With the rapid gains of stock prices in the last two years, however, finding values has become increasingly difficult.

Equally as difficult for the company has been growing amid the huge national brokerages, such as Merrill Lynch, and expected deregulation that will put still other players into the market.

Nevertheless, Mason says he has no plans to stray from his business plans out of fear of an unfriendly takeover or increased competition.

He probably will rely instead on the business savvy that led him to convince 19 well-to-do investors to back a 26-year-old.

"We went through some rough periods," Mason said, looking back at the early days of the company, speaking with the confidence that probably helped get the initial $250,000 investment.

"I never questioned whether we would make it. I was going to make it no matter what," he said.

Chris Gessner (l) and John Brosnahan (r) look forward to challenge of new season at new positions.

Kepa's Kids Make Good

Backup Receivers Land Starting Roles in Position Shift

BY BOB JEFFREY '74

Lbig Kepa might feel penalized by his success. The William and Mary receivers' coach has been instrumental in helping develop the dynamic passing game that has spearheaded the Tribe's recent march to gridiron dominance.

With such an embarrassment of riches, this past spring Kepa forfeited two members of his receiving corps to other positions on the team.

One of "Kepa's kids," John Brosnahan, is slated to start at quarterback this fall. The other, Chris Gessner, is battling for a spot at cornerback on defense.

"Yes, I lost two this year," Kepa said with a chuckle. But he seemed more excited for his charges than disappointed.

Brosnahan and Gessner are just several of the William and Mary athletes who have changed positions in midstream in order to better the team and themselves. Their experience points out the depth and versatility that have made W&M seem like a juggernaut to opponents in recent years.

Brosnahan's case is instructive. At 5'9", 170 pounds, the junior from Falls Church makes Doug Flutie look like a physical specimen. Coming to the College as a walk-on, Brosnahan sat out one season as a redshirt, then rode the bench for two years as a backup flanker. Last year he caught one pass for five yards and rushed once for two yards. Hardly star material, one might think.

But Kepa and head coach Jimmie Laycock saw something more. Of course they remembered that Brosnahan had starred at quarterback for J.E.B. Stuart High School, earning most valuable player honors in the Northern Region and Potomac District after his senior year. But it was his character more than his passing skills that recommended him.

Head coach Jimmie Laycock '70

Laycock said, "John has some traits that we felt would be beneficial to us. He's a tough competitor, someone who has worked very hard to improve himself by doing everything that he's been asked to do. He's got good leadership qualities. The other players will follow him; they'll play hard for him because they've seen how he's busted himself to do well."

Kepa added, "John Brosnahan is definitely a take-charge type of guy, just a cool quarterback type of individual that makes things happen. He might not have all the physical skills, but he more than makes up for it by playing on all cylinders when he's on the football field."

Brosnahan himself has no doubt that he's right where he belongs. "Quarterbacking is my first love. I feel more comfortable there than anywhere else," he said.

But he doesn't begrudge the time he had to wait. "When I was recruited, the coaches told me flat out that they couldn't offer me a scholarship because of the situation at quarterback. They had Stan (Yagiello), and Kenny (Lambiotte) in the wings, so they asked me to switch over to receiver," Brosnahan recalled.

Like a lot of overachievers, Brosnahan learned from the situation and turned necessity into a virtue. "Playing at receiver helped me more than anything because now I know the offense, not only from the quarterback's position, but I know where the receivers will be, what kind of routes they're running and against which defenses," he said.

The major knock on Brosnahan, his lack of size, could also end up being a blessing in disguise. "Our own defensive backs have told me that they can't really see me back behind the line. Defenders try to look at the quarterback's eyes to see where the ball will be going, so if they can't see me, they'll be frozen just a little longer," he said.

Unlike Brosnahan, Chris Gessner appeared to have all the tools for success at wide receiver: speed, size and raw athletic ability. Unfortunately, he also happened to be playing behind Dave Szydluk and Harry Mehre, two of the Tribe's premiere pass-catchers.

The junior from Ligonier, Pennsylvania, still managed to haul in 15 aerials for 239 yards last season, including a 30 yard touchdown grab in an exciting road win over Delaware. Gessner also saw action running back kickoffs, returning seven kicks for 148 yards, compiling a respectable 21.1 average.

Even with this potential, Gessner asked to be moved to defensive back, partly for the prospect of more playing time, but mostly just for the pure love of the position.

"I played cornerback in high school and really liked it a lot," said Gessner. "When the (W&M) coaches first recruited me, they asked if I had a preference between offense and defense. At the time I said I would play anywhere, just to play. But after a couple of years at wide receiver, I decided I'd really like to get the chance to play defensive back again," he said.

With last season's loss to graduation of both starting cornerbacks, the coaches were happy to oblige. "Chris is a very physical player, and for his size (6', 195 pounds) he's one of the strongest guys on the team," said coach Kepa. "With his talent, switching positions wasn't as much of a skill transition as it was a mental one," Kepa said.

After getting popped by defensive backs for several seasons, the turnabout is something that Gessner relishes. "There's a different mentality between offense and defense. You get to be much more aggressive on the defensive side," he said.

Gessner also feels that his background as a receiver will give him an edge on the competition. "It helps because you have an idea of what kinds of routes they're going to run against you. You see the receiver cut one way, and you sort of realize what their next move might be," said Gessner.

For both players, the switches in position stand out as new beginnings for players who had bided their time and worked hard in practice for several years. The happy endings for these two highlight what has become a hallmark of the Tribe's success on the gridiron.

"If we have a kid in our program and he sticks it out long enough and keeps working at it, he'll eventually find a niche and contribute to the team in some fashion," said Kepa. "What we do well is put the kid in a situation where he's able to succeed. We sort of plug our guys in to the things they do well, and if our team has come along well, it's because these guys have fun being successful."

Both Brosnahan and Gessner are looking forward to having that kind of fun this year. And if Kepa has to sacrifice another receiver along the line to make it happen, he's willing too.

Summer Duty in Bahrain

William and Mary swimming coach Anne Howes with friend in Bahrain where she spent part of the summer.

BY MARTY BENSON

Where is the last place you would want to spend your summer vacation? Certainly the Middle East has to rank right up there — average afternoon temperatures of 105 degrees make even high noon in mid-August Williamsburg seem downright comfortable. Add the fact that many people in the oil-producing countries look upon Americans as satanic ne'er-do-wells and the Middle East zooms to the top of the least desirable chart.

So guess where women's swimming coach Anne Howes spent part of her summer vacation? The Middle East, Bahrain, to be exact. You're right, THAT Bahrain, the one near where the U.S.S. Stark was struck by two Exocet missiles.

Although it may seem logical to question Howes' sanity for embarking on her journey, first consider two points: One, she went there to coach and was paid to visit a part of the world most only see on television, and two, Bahrain is really quite safe and quite Western, the Stark incident aside. Everyone also speaks English.

"Everybody went out of their way to let me know how safe it was," Howes said. "Bahrain is the 'Switzerland of the Mideast' because it is the banking center of the Persian Gulf. Nobody is going to bomb their own money — that's why it has been able to remain a neutral country."

In regard to the Stark incident, Howes said she asked about it, but wasn't quite prepared for the response — the people were surprised to find out that she knew the country had a naval base — no one is supposed to know, despite the fact that its existence was published throughout the world.

Howes traveled overseas through a branch of the United States government called Sports America, which sends coaches and teachers to underdeveloped countries. The swimming coach had a friend who had traveled to El Salvador through the same organization. Sports America was pointed to the William and Mary coach by that friend. Usually these government representatives travel in groups, but Howes went by herself.

When the Tribe swimming coach was approached about taking the job, she was told that she would be coaching swimming and teaching aerobics. Well, both endeavors proved to be different from what she had expected.

"The people I 'coached' were a bunch of out-of-shape women who couldn't swim a length of the pool," she said. "So what I ended up doing was teaching them how to teach swimming. To them, a woman coach is nothing more than a teacher; they knew nothing of competitive swimming."

The dry-land part of her job also turned out to be an adventure.

"Aerobics to them is just doing leg lifts, push-ups and sit-ups," Howes pointed out. "After one aerobics session, they were ready to die. I modified the routine some, but it still was something they weren't used to."

One fact that became apparent to Howes very quickly was that the people she was dealing with, and the others in the immediate vicinity, were immensely wealthy. Although most of the women she taught had children, having their maid babysit was never a problem. She never saw an old car; the streets were jammed with Mercedes and BMWs. The country had had only one college, Bahrain Polytechnic (where most of her students had gone), until it decided to build another one in the middle of the desert, Arabian Gulf University. No one teaches at or attends the college although it is about the geographical size of William and Mary. Students will need to come from abroad, since there aren't enough people in the country to attend. Although most of her students had college degrees, none of them worked.

The most striking example of wealth was a wedding reception Howes attended, for which a ballroom bigger than William and Mary Hall arena had been rented for about eight hours.

"The people (only women aside from the groom) wore the type of clothes you only see on 'Dynasty,'" she said. "The bride's dress cost $6,000."

Bahrain is an Islamic country, but despite the fact that religion dominates everyday life, the attitude toward women's rights is much more liberal than would be expected, especially with foreigners.

"I could do anything I wanted, within reason" Howes said. "Women don't have to cover their heads, but shorts can't go above the knee and sleeves can't go above the elbow.

"I could wear anything I wanted, but I usually covered up pretty well so I wouldn't stick out."

The people she came in contact with were almost too hospitable. Every time she complimented someone on one of her possessions, they gave it to her, so she had to be careful about what she said.

Howes said that most of the people she worked with wore Western clothes — and that the Western way of life was prominent, although reminders that religion dominated were constant. Television stations broadcasted from 4:30 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. All were government owned, so there were no commercials. The only interruptions were for prayer. Howes said she could hear people wailing (praying) while she was teaching. Although one could drive around the perimeter of the country in less than an hour, there were roughly 400 mosques.

Howes said that she loved her time spent in Bahrain, but once her two weeks and two days were up, she was ready to come home. She was tired of Arabian men bugging her and had taught her students all she could.

Although Williamsburg temperatures were pushing 100 degrees when she got home, she said even that seemed like a relief compared to the shadeless heat of the Persian Gulf.

Howes said that the opportunity to go back to Bahrain is there if she wants to go, but that once may have been enough. Sports America will send her back to Bahrain during the next four years, but she'll have to wait until that time is up before the organization will send her to a different country.

The Society of the Alumni invites you to experience the adventure of Europe

We invite you to join this special alumni tour as we explore the cities and cultures along the fabled Rhine River, one of Europe's great water routes.

Begin in AMSTERDAM, a bustling and vigorous city set in a world of 17th-century charm. Walk the charming streets of the old city and crisscross the rings of canals on the many quaint bridges. Visit the fabulous Rijksmuseum and Van Gogh Museum, and actually walk through the secret rooms of the Anne Frank House. Shop at the floating market or peek into some of the city's vibrant night spots.

Next travel to COLOGNE, West Germany. Explore the cultural center of the northern Rhineland since it was founded by the Romans. Visit the cathedral, one of the most magnificent Gothic structures in the world.

Cruise upstream past Deutsches Eck, or German corner, where the Rhine and Moselle rivers meet at KOBLENZ. Experience the most romantic stretch of the Rhine where castles or ruins dominate every hilltop.

Arrive in BRAUBACH and enjoy a medieval banquet in the famed Marksburg Castle. Pass the haunting Lorelei and explore the extraordinary wine-producing region of the Rheingau. Sample the great Riesling wines.

Visit the Cathedral in SPEYER which contains the burial remains of no less than eight emperors or kings.

Join the optional excursion to the picturesque medieval city of HEIDELBERG to see the site of Germany's oldest university and the lovely downtown pedestrian mall.

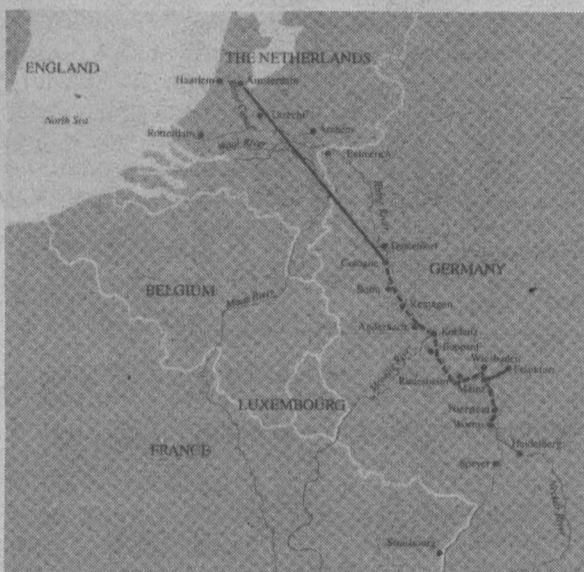

Savor the sophisticated styles of STRASBOURG, the largest city in the Alsace-Lorraine region of France.

THE SHIP

Your floating home for five nights is the M.S. VIRGINIA. This 90-passenger Dutch vessel offers excellent European cuisine and private facilities in each air-conditioned passenger cabin. The friendly and efficient Dutch crew and tastefully-appointed public rooms create a warm and casual atmosphere. The M.S. VIRGINIA has all the amenities and services that you have come to expect from a deluxe European vessel.

Prices from WASHINGTON, D.C., based on double occupancy, begin at $1,575 to $1,775 per person. Connecting flight reservations will be made at the lowest available air fare.

The October 2 to October 10 cruise dates do not conflict with Homecoming.

Fabled Rhineland Cruise
—Netherlands, Germany and France.

ATTENTION

Cabin space for the Fabled Rhineland Cruise is still available. However, as of July 7th, all cabins on the Romance of the Danube cruise are full. A waiting list has been established in the event of cancellations. Deposits (check or credit card number) must accompany all waiting list reservations but will not be processed unless a cabin is secured. STUDENT LIFE EXHIBIT

"Fixing Our Destinies: Student Life at the College of William and Mary" will be on display from August 10 through October 31, 1987, in the Zollinger Museum in Swem Library. The quality and flavor of life as a student at William and Mary, from the earliest days of the College through the present, are portrayed.

Making use of such items as the photograph shown here (from the scrapbook of M. Carl Andrews '27, on loan from the Society of the Alumni), the exhibit illustrates student life in terms of admission, student organizations, athletics, rules, dormitory living, graduation and even classes. It shows how conditions and life at the College have changed for students over the years, starting with the strict regimentation of every aspect of the students' lives in the 18th and 19th centuries. As much as things have changed, however, William and Mary students have protested the quality of food served to them, and have presented petitions to the president and faculty almost from the beginning.

Materials from the College Archives are featured along with several items borrowed from the Society of the Alumni. Given to the Society over the years by alumni, they include duc caps, a letter sweater, photographs, a baseball and glove, gym bloomers and an airplane propeller, goggles and helmet used in the Flight School in the 1930s.

The exhibit was created by archivists Kay Domine and Laura Parrish and archival apprentices Sheryl Brown, Carl Hinton, and Brian Tilley. The Zollinger Museum, Ground Floor, Swem Library, is open 8:00 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 9:00 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. on Saturdays. For more information contact the College Archives at (804) 253-4550.

HOMECOMING 1987

SCHEDULE

ATTENTION OLDE GUARDE

I know you are pleased to learn that Homecoming will once more be celebrated in October. After all, that even feels more like Homecoming time, doesn't it? The weather will be more pleasant, the Luncheon-on-the-Lawn will taste better out-of-doors, and the game will be much more enjoyable.

Additional changes have been planned. Although the Olde Guarde luncheon will still be held at the Hospitality House on the Friday of Homecoming weekend, it will be held, weather permitting, just outside of the Colony Room in the lovely Courtyard of the Hospitality House. I will be looking for each one of you.

Special shuttle buses will be running around the Campus for Old Guarde members. Information on this bus service will be available at the Registration Tent.

Another change concerns the Alumni Dinner and Dance on Friday evening. Imagine how elegant that will be, served in the Sunken Garden with carefully planned and executed arrangements. You will certainly be missing something BIG if you are not there.

You have probably heard some of your alumni friends complain that there is not much to do after the game. Well, they'll have no reason to complain about that this year. A postgame cocktail party with heavy hors d'oeuvres is planned to please everybody and to give us all an opportunity to get together with former classmates and old friends. The cocktail party will be held in the William and Mary Parlor adjacent to the front lobby of the Hospitality House. One thing you may depend on, I'm sure, is telling whopping tales about "the good old days."

The various groups and individuals who have been working to plan a great and different Homecoming have gone to a lot of trouble to please us. Don't disappoint them; you will really be short changing yourselves. Call some friends and urge them to come . . .

If you have any questions, get in touch with your class representatives on the Olde Guarde Council and be sure to read the Alumni Gazette carefully for reservation information. Without any problems you can find out how to make reservations and how to get your tickets. You may even contact me at the address below.

Attention All Former Cheerleaders!!!

It's Time to GET THE SPIRIT and GO BIG GREEN for Homecoming 1987. All Friends of the Cheerleaders and all former cheerleaders are invited to participate with the 1987-88 squad for several exciting Homecoming events. To begin the weekend, all interested persons should gather at 8:30 a.m. on Saturday in front of Brickhouse Tavern. The tavern is located on The Duke of Gloucester Street one block from the Capitol at the parade starting area. Former cheerleaders attending will join with the student squad and ride the old pumper truck in the parade. Immediately following the Parade, a reception will be held on the patio of the Alumni House with practice for the football game activities following. This year the Tribe will be playing James Madison at 1:00 p.m. and we want to have as many cheerleaders both former and current on the field supporting the team as possible.

Sweatshirts and T-Shirts are available for all Alumni Cheerleaders. If you will be able to participate, please contact Mrs. Sharon Jenkins at 804-229-5960 as soon as possible. Also, remember to bring those megaphones and poms.

Looking forward to your participation,

THE WILLIAM AND MARY CHEERLEADERS

Far-Flung Alumni Gather for Summer Fun

Chapters in West Germany, North Carolina and California Meet

From California to West Germany, William and Mary's far-flung alumni gathered this summer to renew ties and reminisce about old times at the College. In Los Angeles, where about 450 alumni live in the greater Los Angeles area, the alumni chapter has been dormant for about five years but now has been revitalized with great enthusiasm. More than 80 alumni have attended the past two chapter events in Los Angeles, including those pictured in the accompanying photos at an event this summer.

About 250 alumni live in the greater Charlotte, N.C., area, including a large contingent of younger alumni. But also a member of the local chapter is one of William and Mary's oldest living alumni, David Sizer '09, a charter member who has attended every meeting of the chapter.

In West Germany, the chapter consists mainly of alumni who are in the armed forces. About 75 alumni, some of whom are pictured in the accompanying photo, gathered this summer, and they plan another meeting in the fall.

And in Cleveland alumni gave a party to welcome freshmen from that area who are attending William and Mary this fall.

The Greater Los Angeles Chapter of the Alumni received its charter on July 19 at a barbecue held at the home of Karen Richardson '72 in Manhattan Beach, Ca. About 80 alumni from all over the greater Los Angeles area attended, with each decade of class years represented. Celebrating around a cake specially made and decorated with the William and Mary cypher are left to right: May Haven '38, secretary and Kathy Yankovich Hornsby '79, vice president for publicity. Back row, left to right: John Jacobsen '66, president, Karen Richardson, '72, second vice president, and Roy Shelor '49, first vice president.

Diane Hagemann '75, director of alumni chapters, presents the chapter charter to President Jacobsen.

A number of alumni living in West Germany recently held a gathering in Garmisch. Shown in the photo, framed by the Alps are: Steve Johnson '83, Kathryn Potter '86, (top) Sharon Winn '85, Kathey Powell '83, (holding sign) Caitlian Porter '84, Bill Koziar '74, Nathan Lucas '86, Randy Perkins '84, Alyssa Perkins '83 and Chris Sell '83. The group of students were all taught by Bill Koziar while at the College. The West Germany group plans to meet in October to watch a tape of the 1986 W&M vs. Richmond football game.

President Jacobsen welcomes one of the incoming freshmen from the area, Melissa Aldrich, from Long Beach.

Greetings to all you delinquents out there who like to read class news but never send any! This is likely to be short for want of material.

Remember, please, that the 60th anniversary of our graduation lasts all this year. So, if you were unable to get back for Olde Guard Day in May, there is still an opportunity to make it up at Homecoming, Oct. 22-24. I'll be looking for you.

Some of you will remember that Mary Maxwell Brockenbrough Houghland was one of our more artistic classmates during college days. This talent has carried over,

I'm happy to report. Last May, Max was the first resident of Williamsburg Landing, a James City County retirement community, to be honored by the invitational display of her oil and acrylic paintings in the community center. The Newport News Daily Press and Times-Herald printed quite a nice "spread" on her work, including a window portrait of an elderly man and the flight of a covey of wildfowl. "I have always been drawing or painting for as long as I can remember," she told the newspaper. "I have no specific style. I just paint according to my mood."

During our college days Max majored in art, was president of the art club and served on the art staff of the Colonial Echo. She was one of my top and most dependable aides when I was editor of The Flat Hat. A list of her other activities would fill much more space than I have available. Max moved back to Williamsburg 10 years ago. She has held art shows in numerous places around the country. I happen to know that she is also a poet of distinction. Furthermore, some of her artistic ability seems to have rubbed off on her son, Wright B. Houghland, who is a prominent architect with headquarters in Williamsburg.

A final observation from Max: "Creative activity is the only thing that keeps us from getting old in the head!" Amen to that.

Bill Morrow, the senior faculty member of Northfield Mount Hermon School in Massachusetts, had hoped to be present for our 60th, but Olde Guard Day coincided with the spring board of trustees meeting, much to his regret.

Bill also was scheduled for his second eye implant surgery just two weeks later. Remarking on the almost miraculous progress of eye surgery, he reported entering the hospital at 7:30 a.m. and being home by noon. In "the olden days" the patient was immobilized with sand bags on either side of his head as he spent several days in bed. Having had Bill's experience, I can join in a salute to such progress.

Incidentally, Bill, as senior faculty member, has the honor of carrying Northfield's mace in academic processions. Other items from Bill: (1) "Grandson Number Two was married June 27 in Connecticut", and (2) four Northfield graduates were to enter William and Mary this fall. It helps to have contacts!

Frank Hopkins has reason to be proud: his son, Nicholas S. Hopkins, of the American University in Cairo, Egypt, is visiting professor of anthropology at Princeton University for the 1987-88 session.

Frank reports that after leaving our reunion, he and Louise arrived at Yorktown on their way to his native Gloucester only to find the Coleman Bridge open for a procession of Navy vessels and a delay of over an hour. Anyhow, they were able to spend some time with Frank's two sisters and numerous cousins before heading for Bethesda, Md. Running short on gas in a long line at Yorktown, Frank asked about the nearest gas station only to find it was on the Gloucester side. He had visions of having to push his car across, but luck prevailed.

A belated note about the late Dr. E. Cotton Rawls: The genuine affection of so many who knew this wonderful classmate-surgeon is deeply touching. One of his nurses during his 30 months of suffering, Candice Hayden Jordan, sent me a copy of a poem she wrote about him. Unfortunately, we can't print it here.

You probably noted in the June Gazette the death of Macon C. Sammons '29, who entered the College with our class but had to drop out for two years and graduated later. Macon and I were friends for 64 years, and since Naval service in World War II, we had met for lunch every week and always talked about W&M. His son, Macon Jr., administrator of Alleghany County, and daughter, Mary, both alumni, suggested memorials through the Order of the White Jacket Scholarship Fund, c/o Alumni Office. I include this in response to inquiries.

Make plans for Homecoming now! See you then!

I was saddened, as I know most of you were, to learn that Macon Sammons had died. He was our class reporter and one of the most loyal of all William and Mary alumni. He looked forward from year to year to Homecoming.

The Ruritan Club of Shawsville dedicated its 1987 Community Information booklet in memory of Macon. The dedicatory picture showed him holding his two grandchildren, Kate Sammons and Gardner Rordan. The considerably delayed second grandson, Landon Bering Rordan, arrived June 23, a month after Macon's death. He had hoped to still be around to greet the baby.

A note from Kendall Keller, husband of Camilla Fauntleroy Hughes Keller says: "Camilla has been in Eastern State Hospital for nearly eight years with Alzheimer's disease."

I have just learned that E. Armstrong Smith is in a nursing home in Fredericksburg, Va. His daughter Lynn (Mrs. M. C. Wright III), 605 Galveston Road, Fre-

ED BRICKELL '50 HONORED ON RETIREMENT

More than 1,200 well-wishers attended a banquet honoring Dr. Edward E. Brickell '50 who retired this year as superintendent of the Virginia Beach, Va., school system after nearly two decades of service. The people who attended the banquet included school administrators, teachers, secretaries, custodians, students, city officials, state officials and community leaders. Speakers chronicled the highlights of Brickell's 36-year career in education, which included service on William and Mary's Board of Visitors and as rector of the College. School employees contributed more than $1,000 for a trip to London for Dr. and Mrs. Brickell. Dr. Brickell retired on June 30 after 19 years as superintendent, the longest tenure of any superintendent in the state of Virginia.

dericksburg, VA 22405) tells me that he had a stroke in Nov. 1986 and another in Jan. 1987. Those of you who know him should send "get well cards" to him at her address.

Why can't some of you give me some good news for a change. Eleanor and I are enjoying living at Williamsburg Landing, which is less than two miles from the College.

Come to Homecoming this fall and come to see us.

Marie Winifred Fries DeCarlo, after a distinguished career in education, retired from the Montgomery County, Md., school system as director of instruction. She moved to Carmel, Calif., where she is near her three children and five grandchildren, ages 20, 18, 16, 14 and 10. She says living in Carmel is beautiful but she gets a special thrill whenever she returns to Virginia. She reports that certain places in Portugal, where she spends her "spring breaks," remind her of Virginia. Marie was originally from Winchester, Va. Her husband, Michael DeCarlo '32, died in 1976 after retiring from the National Academy of Science. Marie received her Ph.D. in education from the University of Wisconsin in 1956.

William Alexander Williams and his wife, Mary Grant, and John Vaughan Holberton are planning to attend an Elderhostel at the Southern Seminary Junior College at Buena Vista, Va., in August.

If you missed the Olde Guard Day this spring you missed a treat. Several hundred were present. As we were leaving, we ran into Mason's old roommate Joe Pollard and his lovely wife, Henrietta. Then, of course, we were the last to leave the Alumni House.

Roland Hall writes that in 1975 he had a coronary bypass. The doctors told him he should live forever after but Roland said after 12 years the doctors did the unusual, they bypassed the bypass. Now he believes he is good for at least 12 more years. When J. Rogers Mapp, M.D. '36 heard this he said, "I always knew Roland had a great heart, but antique cars seldom enjoy the luxury of being restored twice." Come on back for Homecoming, Roland. If you haven't been back since 1978, it's time you did.

A note from Claudine Moss Bryant sent to the Alumni House was passed to us. Claudine says she is still practicing medicine on Capitol Hill, Washington, D.C. The last time we saw Claudine she was in medical school at the University of Virginia.

A very interesting letter came from J. Stanley (Jack) Smith. He remarked about Albert Nurnberger's many hours of hospital volunteer visitation. Jack still does much of this work, finding time every day to take his lovely wife riding. She is in a nursing home with Alzheimer's disease. Jack also expressed regret upon the death of George M. Small, chairman of the music department. Jack mentioned many of the operettas directed by Professor Small. If our memory serves correctly, Jack had the male lead in many of these productions. Jack mentioned one worrisome item of news of the class of 1935: "They are getting closer and closer to page one." Just remember to rejoice in the fact we are here to remember.

ALUMNA NAMED VICE PRESIDENT IN PRIVATE BANKING GROUP

Deborah Patterson '75 has been named vice president and manager in the custody services department of Wells Fargo Bank's private banking group. She manages a statewide staff of 30 employees, who administer trading, safekeeping and recordkeeping services for securities portfolios held by clients of the bank's asset management division. Her staff operates out of offices in San Francisco and Los Angeles.

The Virginia Gazette of May 6 carried a story of the Williamsburg Democratic Committee honoring Leonard L. Graves as one of three persons who had rendered valuable service for many years. Each was presented a commemorative bowl for his years of service to the Democratic Party. The Squire of Merchants Square deserved this recognition.

A sad note was received from Mrs. John D. May telling of the death of Joseph L. May Jr. on June 18. Joseph was a member of Sigma Nu and claimed the title of captain to the unofficial "Woo Team." He served in World War II and worked for the Federal Government until his retirement in 1963. His survivors include Joseph III, John D. '72, James H., Jeffrey T., and one grandson, Briant. Our sympathy goes to the entire family. Thank you, Mrs. May, for writing.

MEMORY FLASHBACK

The committee members have received notes from classmates thanking us for all the perks and pleasures we enjoyed at our 50th reunion. The thanks for all the activities, coordination, the attentive student aides, transportation and our pursuit of happiness go to the Alumni Society. Specifically, we are indebted to Scotty Cunningham, executive vice president of the Society (and his charming wife, Cecy); John Phillips, director of alumni affairs; Betsy Cobblestick, executive secretary, assistant for class programs; and the office force and recruits. It was GREAT!

The committee handled the fiscal part. Response to our efforts was wonderful. The very first communication that went out stated we were aiming for 100 percent participation rather than a monetary goal. Though $91,000 isn't the largest gift ever (pretty amazing considering the little band that came to Williamsburg in Sept. 1933, on a shoe string), we can take enormous pride in being the class that had the highest proportion of donors of any on record since 1693.

Thank Heaven for '37! The festivities had a gala send off Friday evening with a cocktail party at the lovely 18th-century home of Cary and Carolyn Richardson McMurrin on Burns Lane, off Jamestown Road, Williamsburg. Our special thanks to them.

The luncheon on Saturday was in Trinkle Hall, which has been greatly changed since 1937. The balcony and fireplace are gone, entrance doors changed, but we had fun reminiscing about how it "used to be" — where the athletes sat, where our table had been and the ones we were with at all the meals.

On Saturday afternoon Scotty Cuningham accepted the sundial for the Society of the Alumni. See it when you next visit the College; we think you will be proud of it.

Dr. Henry E. Mallue Jr., associate dean for administration and external affairs, School of Business Administration, accepted the class of '37 gift, given in memory of Dr. Charles Franklin Marsh.

Harold Gouldman has received a letter from John Marsh expressing appreciation for the endowment established in memory of his father, Dr. Charles F. Marsh.

Bernice Shield Hassinger would like her friends who promised to write to her to know that her address is: Mrs. Richard Hassinger, 2204 Brookshire Place, Birmingham, AL 35213. She wrote regarding the reunion, "It has been difficult to settle down after such a wonderful weekend at William and Mary."

Ann Reynolds Wood is sending an SOS to the unknown person who exchanged his (or her) 1937 Echo with hers. It happened at the hospitality suite during Homecoming 1986. Her address is: 5116 Scarsdale Road, Bethesda, MD 20816. A few months before the reunion Ann went to Japan, Hong Kong and Singapore and spent several days in the Philippines with friends. Immediately after the reunion, Ann was again traveling — to England and Scotland. We hope she will travel to Williamsburg for Homecoming 1987. Ann will be our class representative on the Olde Guard Council. Thank you, Anne!

We were saddened to learn (at the reunion) of Clover Johnson's death on March 17. She was game to the end. Although Clover had been diagnosed for cancer of the esophagus in September, she went on a Caribbean cruise in January with her niece, niece's husband and a friend. Anyone wanting to write can contact Mrs. Helen Cloyd Rusk, 1005 D Street, Petaluma, CA 94952.

Our deepest sympathy to Ellen Latane Gouldman whose husband, John C. "Jack" '36, died June 1. Ellen's address is Route 1, Box 701, Washington's Birthplace, VA 22575.

Nelia Beverly Mackrell died July 1. Nelia had Alzheimer's disease, but her daughter Beverly brought her to the reunion. Nelia was confined to a wheelchair. She enjoyed the festivities and still recognized her friends of 50 years past. It was delightful to meet Beverly and have her with us. It was dear of her to write to several of us and say it was wonderful to meet her mother's friends from college. Our sincere sympathy goes to Beverly, her husband, their three sons and Nelia's brother. The address is: Mrs. Andrew Brazelle, 5011 Scandia Road, Sandston, VA 23150.

We are now officially members of the Olde Guard and justifiably proud of our status and medallions and that we were able to be present to receive them. However, we do not want to lose our identity as the class of '37. So, we are planning to have a hospitality suite at Homecoming this fall. Hope to see a lot of you there.

From the Alumni House notes, Laura Colburn Lindblad wrote, "I'm getting old! Deteriorating rapidly! But have fond memories of those good old days — Chandler Hall." Laura, hope there will be a remission in whatever is causing that deterioration and hope, perchance, you're just pulling our leg.

An item from a newspaper concerning Bud Tulin. "Shale L. 'Bud' Tulin has established the Connecticut Boat Owner's Association and is its first president and executive director. He is the oldest Vietnam War veteran in Norwalk, awarded the Legion of Merit for combat duties in Vietnam, the French and Belgian Croix de Guerre, having retired from USAF in 1970.

BOOK EXPLORES FINANCIAL STRESS

A new book by a William and Mary business professor explores the ever-increasing financial stress experienced by nonprofit organizations such as hospitals, museums, universities and charitable foundations. Published by Prentice-Hall, the book, Financial and Strategic Management for Nonprofit Organizations, was written by Herrington J. Bryce as a culmination of his 15 years as an employee, officer, board member and consultant to nonprofit organizations. Professor Bryce suggests that the organizations need to search for alternate ways to finance their missions and suggests that making a profit may be one way for them to survive and thrive.

He also just completed his 10th year as a commissioner of the Norwalk Housing Authority having been chairman twice in his 10-year tenure. He has also been the author of a weekly column in the Norwalk News called "Shore Lines," for the past five years."

That's all for now. Keep those cards and letters coming!

If memory serves me correctly, there is an old song which goes something like this, "You can't keep 'em down on the farm after they've seen Patee." Well, it may not be "Patee" that did it, but from all appearances, the 39ers are on the road everywhere.

June Joy Hyatte Prah sends a note that she and her husband recently enjoyed an extended trip to Australia and New Zealand. Koalas, penguins (guess they're still "all dressed up" in tails — but never wear top hats), kiwis and sheep abounded.

Alma Van Blarcom and Lorimer Walker took an Elderhostel trip to France and the Netherlands in June and July. They stayed on an extra week in the Netherlands to find the city of Blaricom where Van Blarcom originated. You can ask them about the results of their search at Homecoming. Yes, they will be there.

Dick and Adele Crane spent two weeks in Anguilla and St. Martin in February, and were in Aspen for skiing in late March. Apart from that, tennis, biking, charity work and management of a condominium take up most of their time. They, too, plan to be in Williamsburg for Homecoming.

Latest travel notes from the Miller message is that Peggy and Miley will probably be Australia/New Zealand bound in early fall. Peggy Prickett Miller, Miley and I got in on the Wyeth "Helga" show early in June, when I was in the District before going on to Baltimore and then, the shore for several days.

Bill Eppes has also been on the move. Before going to Boot Bay, Maine, to see the Theatre Museum, founded by a friend of his, he dog-sat for friends in upstate New York. His next trip to England will be with an Elderhostel program in September.

Dr. John C. Tinsley Jr. writes that he is now in his fourth year of retirement and enjoying not working.

Please keep those notes and letters coming in my direction. Have a good fall season — and fun at Homecoming. And, oh yes, happy travels.

Here we are again racing to meet the deadline. Always wait 'til the last possible moment hoping to get more news. Nothing. But we did get three notes from old friends.

The first is from Jean Klinefleter Nakhnikian, and it says, "I am a programmer-analyst for academic computing at Indiana University." And that's all. And it isn't really true. First of all you're a lady, a wife, and perhaps have a family. Tell us about that, Jean. That you do whatever you do with computers is of interest, marginally, but I'm sure there's a lot more to you. We'd really like to know what happened to you after you grew up. By the way, how did you learn about computers? Surely it wasn't one of the subjects offered the gold medal class of '41.

SMITH PROMOTED BY WILLIAM AND MARY

James E. Smith has been promoted by William and Mary from the rank of professor of accounting to Distinguished Professor of Accounting. The professorship is funded by the Big Eight accounting firms and is matched by the Eminent Scholars program of the Commonwealth of Virginia. It is named for John S. Quinn, who recently retired after 37 years on the accounting faculty at William and Mary. Dr. Smith joined the faculty of the School of Business Administration in 1970.

TRUDY C. NIX NAMED DIRECTOR

Trudy C. Nix '75 has been named director of the Hogan software project for the Florida Banking Group of NCNB National Bank. The Hogan project involves the design and installation of a new customer information and accounting system for the bank. An honors graduate at William and Mary, Ms. Nix has been with NCNB since 1979.

in Florida hosting children and grandchildren in visits to Disney World. Regent of local chapter of DAR, life member of state and national Library associations. It makes me realize how little I've accomplished. The only thing I'm a life member of is life.

And this last one is from Dorothy Jordan Pully telling me to "Please notify the Gazette and Alumni Office that I have moved to a condo: Woodlake Towers, 6001 Arlington Boulevard, #605, Falls Church, VA 22044." Done!

The best thing that's happened to us is that my brother and his wife, (or my sister-in-law and her husband for you women who are itching to get in the Rotary), Bob and Babette, (or Babette and Bob for the same people) moved to Kingsmill. Now we have someone to play with. And two of our dearest friends from when I was a kid, Larry and Rosemary Brady, will be moving there in September. Larry is one of the few lads I can beat in golf once in a while. It depends on who cheats better on any particular day.

So there you have it. Please be reminded that I am anxious to turn this chore on to whomever would like to take over. There would be a new perspective, and many of you keep in closer touch with our good, old classmates. So, who shall it be? Let me know. I'm suffering from burnout, as you can easily tell.

Hold on. Here are three more. One is from Ruth Rapp Thayer saying, "Attended Homecoming. Many 41ers returned for our special 45th. It was great!" You are so right, Ruth. Homecomings are always a pleasure.

And here is a long newspaper article about Lois Hornsby, wife of Bob and mother of Bruce, the newly recognized star of rock music. She is a member of a peace organization that believes that the only way to achieve peace is by people-to-people dialog. She recently attended a meeting in Copenhagen of a world peace organization. She accepts the truth that it is a communist-inspired and led organization to disseminate the propaganda that the communist government is for peace and that we are against it. But she is of the belief that it is important to meet with all peoples if peace is to become a reality. I hope I have accurately reported your views, Lois. It isn't easy to miniaturize an article of that scope.

This is the last one. Honest. It says here that eight William and Mary graduates and former star athletes were formally inducted into the William and Mary Athletic Hall of Fame in February. Prominent on the list were our Chuck Gondak and Harriet McCarthy Purtill. Congratulations, friends.

Greetings from the gentle city.

Where did everybody go? Fortunately there was a letter from Betty Buntin Matthews. Their Kentucky Derby guests this year were Nat and Mary Jane Riddick Coleman and Nancy and Dixon Foster. They all went to a dinner party at Mary Minton Greigor Eitel's and saw Mary Stanton Willis and Bob Doll there.

Betty enjoys the company of her 2-1/2-year-old granddaughter and 3-month-old grandson who live nearby. Both sons and their families live in Shelbyville, Ky., where the Matthewses also dwell.

Since we only go to press every other issue, y'all have time to send in some news. Thank you, and thank you, Betty.

Dear Classmates:

Another brief letter. I wasn't going to write at all but a letter from Vivian Foltz Englebrecht changed my mind. She answered my plea for news. Oh yes, Viv, indeed I do remember you. So will a lot of your classmates who read this. Ready for a 45-year capsule?

Viv left W&M after her second year. She transferred to Cornell and graduated in three semesters. Following that, she attended Western Reserve School in Cleveland and received her degree in library science. After World War II, she returned to Cornell as librarian of the College of Architecture where she met and married Bob. In 1955, they moved to Princeton, N.J., and have been there ever since. They have two sons. Viv says, "though I don't see any of my W&M classmates, I think of them often and of the dorm fun and games." Hey, Dinny, you two should get together. Loved hearing from you, Viv. Keep in touch.

Ruth Weimer Tillar sent some news also. She says that now that the hospital "Folies" and the Emporia Centennial are behind her, she will find time to concentrate on some of her favorite things. She was very involved in both projects, and naturally, they were great successes. She and Cato again plan to attend the National Annual Championship Air Races this September in Nevada. She also hopes to visit daughter, Elizabeth, who is teaching English at the Rochester Institute of Technology. Ruthie's daughter-in-law, Darrel, was elected president of the women attorneys of Virginia. Quite an honor. Son, Tommy, is very busy with the Virginia Tech Alumni Association.

A note from Eleanor Harvey Rennie. She saw many Tri Deltis from W&M at the installation of a new collegiate chapter at the University of Richmond.

As I write this, I find that I am reminiscing about those wonderful years at William and Mary — the fun, the hard work, the friends I love and still try to keep in touch with. It is really just as easy to write a letter with lots of news as one with only a little. However, I cannot produce without the material. Please drop me a line. I'm about ready to throw in the towel. HELP!

Dear Classmates:

Thank you for the largest number of responses I have received in a long time.

Lucia Cosby Webb is enjoying retirement in her hometown. This news was received this past April.

Eugene D. Purdum wrote in June that he is really going to try to get to Homecoming this year for our 40th reunion.

An interesting article from a newspaper, titled "Prof Preaches Fishing Simplicity," was enclosed with a note from Harold D. Eastman. He wrote that he is a guest professor of sociology at The School of the Ozarks. His part-time teaching schedule includes courses in aging, retirement and death and dying. He and his wife, Ruth, serve a local hospice as volunteers. Harold has just published his first book, Trout Fishing on the Taneycomo, a how-to book.

Allen Edmund Sullivan wrote in May that he is looking forward to the Yale and Holy Cross games this fall.

Marthann "Sally" Phillips Mileur sent news of the family. She and her husband, Don, plan to come to Homecoming this fall. They built a home out in the country last summer and are enjoying it. Their daughter Ann graduated from high school this year and will be attending Oklahoma State University this fall. Both Charles and Martha were able to attend their sister's graduation. Charles lives in Oregon, and Martha and her husband in Maryland.

Dorothy B. O'Connor is now the coordinator of the Transition Center at the Miami-Dade County Community College in Miami, Fla., where adults returning to education receive academic and career counseling. That sounds like an interesting profession!

One of the most pleasant surprises I have enjoyed this summer was the phone call I received from Jane Heller Frieden, who lives in Norfolk. She has been the only one who has responded to my pleas for help in planning something special for our 40th class reunion. She drove up here several weeks ago and we met for lunch at the Trellis restaurant. We had a delightful visit "catching up" with our lives the past many years.

Jane is an exuberant and talented person, and she and her husband seem to be living life to its fullest. He is retired, and Jane teaches art part time as well as being involved in many interesting activities.

I will see her again this Wednesday when we'll lunch at Taliaferro's Kitchen and then meet with John Phillips at the Alumni House to see what has been planned for our reunion and what we might do to make it even more special for our classmates.

I now have a second grandson born in Italy in May. Debbie, Brook II and Danny have arrived in the States, and Brook will begin a new assignment in Washington, D.C., the first of September. He will arrive Aug. 15 and I have rented a cottage on the ocean at Nags Head for the last week of August so we may have a family vacation together. Beth and her friend Martin, who is an architect in the same office with Beth, will join us for part of the week. My friend Bill is looking forward to teaching Brook and Brook II how to fish from a salt-water pier.

I cannot believe I have been a retiree for more than a year, but I am loving every minute of it.

Our class is supposed to be based at the Hospitality House across from the stadium and one block from my home. I hope you will feel free to knock on the door at 517 Richmond Road to say, "Hi." My American flag and Statue of Liberty flag are always flying during good weather.

Mervyn Wingfield has been appointed by Governor Gerald Baliles to a five-year term as the educator member of the Virginia State Board of Accountancy. He served last year as president of the Academy of Accounting Historians, an international organization with members in 23 countries and is currently on the Academy's board of trustees.

Henry Rosovsky, an economics professor at Harvard University, has been elected president of the William and Mary chapter of Phi Beta Kappa. He is a specialist in Japanese economic history and had been dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences for a number of years before assuming a University Professor of Economics Chair in 1984. He is also a fellow of Harvard College, the senior governing board of the university. He plans to visit Williamsburg in December when the Alpha chapter will commemorate the founding of Phi Beta Kappa at William and Mary in 1776.

Edwin Logan, who is a retired captain in the U.S. Naval Reserve, recently spoke at a chapter meeting of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution on "Space Flight in the USA." Prior to his retirement, he had served as a coordinator of astronaut activities and educational specialist at the space center in Texas and later as educational program administrator for the U.S. Department of Labor in Washington.

Dixie and Nancy McFadden Walker report that they are both still enjoying golf and their winter visits to Del Ray, Fla.

H. Vann Rhodes has recently begun a "semi-retired" position as the executive director of the Deland, Fla., Housing Authority. After living and working in Miami for 35 years, he is looking forward to life in a small community. His new address is P.O. Box 285, Deland, FL 33721.

Also retired is Ronnie Morton, who is now living at 1513 Waverly Road, Kingsport, TN 37664.

51 James W. Baker 100 Saint George's Boulevard Williamsburg, VA 23185

Hillsman V. Wilson, who served as president and chief operating officer of McCormick and Company for the past 10 years, announced his retirement, effective last May, thereby completing 32 years with the Baltimore-based company, an international producer of seasonings, flavorings and specialty foods. "Hilly," who earned a B.C.L. degree from Marshall-Wythe School of Law following his graduation in 1951, is a native of Crewe, Va. He joined McCormick as manager of the legal department in 1955 and rose through the ranks to head the company.

Shirley Spain Smith of Richmond, who teaches third grade in Chesterfield County, hopes to take advantage of the county's early retirement program in about four years. Shirley, mother of two children, wrote that she and her husband, William, have built a retirement home on the bank of the Potomac River, where they spend weekends and summers. Her husband is already retired. "I keep my crab pot in the creek," she wrote, "and do a lot of beach-combing."

Dik Kavaljian, an attorney in Alexandria, Va., who I saw at a high school reunion in Northern Virginia, said that he and his wife, Ann, purchased an old house in Alexandria's Old Town some years ago and have been busy remodeling it. The house, which they have restored, dates back to before 1830, has a wine cellar, and is one block off King Street in the old section of the city. Dik has practiced law in Alexandria for the past 30 years. "I think," Dik wrote, "that someone once said that you are a very fortunate person if you can do in your lifetime what you enjoy doing. You are doubly fortunate if you get paid for doing that. I have had the opportunity of doing both."

Dik reported that he had lunch recently with Robert Fraser, who has been very active with the NASA program. Bob recently retired and now lives in Annapolis, Md.

Christian H. Moe is professor and director of graduate studies in the theater department at Southern Illinois University-Carbondale. Chris has sustained his interest in history by writing several historical dramas, including a dramatized history of William and Mary called "Hark Upon the Gale," which was produced at

WILLIAM AND MARY CHEERLEADERS
WINS AWARDS

The William and Mary Cheerleading Squad for 1987-88 won five awards from the National Collegiate Spirit Camps. Twenty-five students attended the camp which was held at Rutgers University from August 17th to the 21st. Among the awards won were Most Progressing College Squad, Most Improved Mascot and 2nd place in Cheer Championships. The '87-'88 squad is coached by Sharon Jenkins.

ARMY ENGINEERING COURSE

Second Lieutenant Aurelio R. Valeriano '86 has graduated from the U.S. Army engineer officer basic course at Fort Belvoir, Va. During the course, newly commissioned Corps of Engineers officers were taught management principles and were familiarized with the weaponry and equipment used in their future duties as platoon leaders.

WILLIAM AND MARY MAGAZINE

The summer issue of the William and Mary Magazine includes a profile on Sarah Brady '64, wife of presidential press secretary Jim Brady, who was wounded in the attempted assassination of President Reagan. Titled "Of Courage and Conviction," the article explores the path that led Mrs. Brady to her crusade for national gun control in the wake of the March 1981 shooting of her husband. Other articles in the issue include an account of "The Silent Years" at William and Mary from 1882 to 1887 when the College, ravaged by fire and the Civil War, ceased to have any students; an irreverent look at the history of Williamsburg, called "No Mean City;" a personal account of terrorism in the diplomatic corps by Robert E. Fritts, Ambassador-in-Residence at William and Mary; and an exploration of how dining halls affect the lives of students. The William and Mary Magazine, which has won two gold medals from the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education, is published twice a year by the Society of the Alumni.

the College in the late 1950s. He is the coauthor of Creating Historical Drama (1965) and has directed outdoor productions of Lincoln plays and indoor plays on Illinois history and other subjects.

Robert M. Rittenhouse, who teaches sixth grade and operates the Rittenhouse Motor Lodge in Cape Charles, Va., wrote that his main activities these days are "teaching and getting old." Robert, who has been a widower since 1968, has three children and seven grandchildren. He lists his hobbies as the latter.

Evelyn Gardner King, who lives in Largo, Fla., is the owner of Flying Needles, Inc., a needlepoint-knitting shop in Belleair Bluffs, which was started by her mother 25 years ago. She has three grown children, all living in California. Leslie and Scott are in San Diego with Evelyn's new — and first — grandchild, Catherine Gardner Lindberg. Constance and Mike live in Newport Beach. Jim and his bride of a year, Julie, live in Santa Ana. Evelyn stays busy serving as president of the merchants' association, working with the Kappa Kappa Gamma alumni, reading, doing needlepoint and gardening. She said her dearest friends are still those from William and Mary days.

Many thanks to you who took time to write and share your lives with your classmates. And for those of you who didn't, how about sitting down now and writing me a short note about what's going on in your life these days? I will appreciate it and so will your classmates.

We've been busy watching the hummingbirds, the chippies and squirrels and trying to stay ahead of the growing grass and invasion of insects resulting from our mild winter and wet summer. Hope this newsletter finds all well and thinking about some news for our column.

A letter from Donald Glover told of his and wife Alice Knight Glover's son Donald '85 and his marriage to Alice E. Cobey '85 in July 1985. Alice is a computer software engineer. (Note two Alices and Dons in two W&M classes 20 years apart — must be something special in those names!) Their son William E. '82 is a 1986 Marshall-Wythe graduate working with the law firm of Roberts and Ashley; daughter Catherine W. Glover '81 married David K. Glover in 1981 and has a son, David K. Glover Jr., age 1. Fourth child, Alice, is a junior at Duke. Donald said that he and Alice "continue to believe that W&M provides the highest quality education."

Glen Albert Pearce is alive and well and teaching philosophy in the University of Western Ontario. He gets to Virginia once or twice a year and tries to see something of Williamsburg when possible. He also has a sporadic contact with other alumni in the Ontario area.

Joan Burton Pontius wrote that she is advertising manager and buyer for Fishers Foods in Canton, Ohio. She is the first woman in the 101-year history of Canton YMCA named to lead its annual membership drive. Good luck!

Our daughter, Caroline, will complete her masters in psychiatric nursing at Pitt this fall while son, Richard, will soon be starting graduate school. Our two Dobermans, Wimpie and FuFu, continue to rule the roast here at the homestead.

Don't forget a short note to me!

Sorry you haven't heard from me in such a long time. I do have a backlog of news to tell you.

Dan Wood wrote that he is now living in Santa Fe in an old adobe home with his daughter, Kelly, who is 26. Dan enjoys all the outside activities in the New Mexico mountains such as skiing and hiking.

Ann Vaughn Riggensbach and husband, Henry, live only a few miles from me in Lansdale. There is a possibility that they will be returning to the Williamsburg area in a few years to take up residence in Ford's Colony.

Ann B. Carlson is still working at White Sands Missile Range as a missile engineer. Last year she received two M.B.A.s from Florida Institute of Technology and spent a memorable Christmas in Williamsburg.

Word from Sue Fryer Ward that she is director of the Department of Aging for Prince George's County. Husband, Archie '46, is retired and enjoys writing, gardening and photography.

Mary Ripley Barry still lives in Mays Landing, N.J., and is busy in the insurance business. Her daughter Leslie graduated from the College this spring.

John P. Scozzari is assistant general manager of Lowry Industries, Inc., in North Wales, Pa. Daughter Allison is with Dow Jones in Princeton, and son Richard is with GMAC. John says he spends his free time playing tennis and sailing.

Received a nice note from Ben Field. He is a member of the board of directors of the Proprietary House Association in Perth Amboy, N.J. Ben would love to hear from any Jersey alumni who would be interested in helping to save and restore historical residences in the area. You can contact Ben at Box 235, Far Hills, NJ 07931. He has also been recently elected to his second term as secretary of the Society of Colonial Wars in New Jersey.

The spring of '87 was very hectic for the Scotts. On May 2, our oldest son, Jim, was married to Kathy Gedeon of nearby Willow Grove. With this marriage Big Jim and I became "grandparents" to two wonderful teenagers, Craig, 19, and Kristina, 15. Now can any of you top that? Then, on June 27, our Anne was married in my 30-year-old wedding dress to Greg Moseley of Dublin, Ohio. Both were fantastic affairs even though I did shed a few tears. Our youngest, Ken, is still unattached and living in Dallas where he works for IBM. The house is pretty empty now with all the kids gone and on their own, but Jim and I are enjoying the peace and quiet.

Do write, all of you, and I promise not to miss any more issues of the Gazette.

tioning on weekends and holidays at "a Gloucester waterfront retreat" that they recently acquired.

Barbara Beckman Schaaf was vacationing in London earlier this spring. While at the Physic Gardens, she bumped into Lee Sykes Dickinson and her husband, who were celebrating their 25th wedding anniversary. Barbara declares Lee is aging gracefully as she has not changed in 26 years. Barbara and Edwin Perkins were rendezvousing in Naperville, Ill., this summer for their 30th high school reunion.

Fred Denny was recently elected president of the Rocky Mountains-Great Plains Region of the American Academy of Religion-Society of Biblical Literature. Fred was program chairman for the 1987 annual meeting of the University of Colorado-Boulder in April. Harper and Row is publishing Fred's new book, Islam and the Muslim Community, this fall.

Bev Vaughan is creating a big splash in the Newport News area as he steps down as athletic director at Christopher Newport College and pursues his swimming pool business full time. Bev is credited with building the CNC program from a two-sport to a 17-sport program for men and women during his 20-year tenure. A native of Portsmouth, Bev had similar success with programs at both Ferguson and Denbigh high schools.

Bill and I are on our way to a furniture market in Atlanta as I write. In June, our daughter Marie joined us for a week's trip to New York City where we visited our elder daughter, Michele '83, and took in several plays, among other activities. Have a safe summer and send word of your travels and accomplishments.

I spent some delightful time with Betty Bishop Griffin and Gene '66 in mid-June, returning to Williamsburg for the first time in 17 years and departing with more finely tuned, fond memories, some very special thoughts about old friendships, a great anticipation for our 20th reunion in October and a feeling that indeed "the more everything changes, the more it stays the same."

Anne Yount Manson was ordained to the Episcopal priesthood last March and is assistant rector at St. Mary's in Goochland. She earned a master of divinity degree from Union Theological Seminary in 1985 and was awarded a Walter W. Moore Fellowship for graduate study. She was ordained deacon in June 1986 upon graduating from Virginia Theological Seminary. Anne's son, Tom, 12, is a student at St. Christopher's School in Richmond.

Mike Chesson is an associate professor in the Department of History, University of Massachusetts in Boston. Mike was recently in Williamsburg doing research.

Brian Brennan lives in Australia where he is a general manager of John Wiley and Sons, publishers, Australia/New Zealand.

Jerry Hendricks has been named the vice president and general manager of the Bay Tower restaurant and the private Bay Club in Boston. Jerry has been in restaurant management in food and beverage administration, marketing and operations and training. He lives in Salem, Mass.

Jim Purtil wrote that he has been in real estate since graduation (he's now with Merrill Lynch), living in Glastonbury, Conn. He is still active in sports — playing and officiating. Jim is married with three children, ages 12, 10 and 9, who all participate in sports as well. Jim has been our class agent for the annual fund these past years, and he enjoys all your nice notes (and contributions).

Dr. Richard Mohs will apparently leave his beloved rat mazes and electromagnetic brain wave manipulators long enough to participate in a very unscientific experiment: marriage. The exact identity of the lucky lady is secret, but sources say she is a young dental hygienist from Scarsdale. Richard was said to be bewitched by the way she would sensuously swirl mouthwash in one of those little plastic cups as she whispered, "Now rinse." And that's not all; Richard also notes: "She taught me everything I know about flossing." The couple is looking forward to years of "stimulating psychosocial interaction."

Alan Katz has put his airline industry career in a holding pattern while he spends some time "in search of personal growth." Alan has moved back to Atlanta, where he's doing volunteer counseling at the Physician's and Surgeon's Hospital on the alcohol and drug detox unit. He plans to make connections with another airline company soon.

Last year, Steve Harvith received his Ph.D. in developmental psychology.

Immigration law is the specialty of Virginia Miller Bedor, who is an attorney in Portland, Ore. "I live in the forest with my new husband (also a lawyer) and teach at Northwestern School of Law (Lewis and Clark College)."

Gaye Keller Bland is now director of the Siloam Springs Museum, a small local history museum in Arkansas that was featured recently in Southern Living magazine. Five-year-old twin daughters keep her busy at home.

The hotplate and refrigerator she used to keep in her dorm room were the beginning of what has become an amazing collection of cookware in Mary Swift Clogh's kitchen. The Daily Press did a big, full-color spread on the place for the food section. Mary is seen peering out from behind a gaggle of sparkling copper pots that would have been the envy of Trinkle Hall's goulash-mongers. Mary's kitchen includes a three-basin sink, a scullery table, a commercial refrigerator, a monster six-burner gas stove, 250 cookbooks and countless utensils. Says Mary, "I love pots and pans. They're all like friends."

Cary Kennedy invites all ex-members of the Rugby Football Club to play in a reunion match during this year's Homecoming Weekend.

Linda Lee Mimms is "still teaching in Fairfax County, chairing the foreign language department, teaching a classroom management course for teachers and trying to go to Spain every spring." In her spare time, she helped her husband, Paul, proofread his new history of Arlington Cemetery, In Honored Glory.

I hope your summer was relaxing, but lest we start running on empty here, please jot down a few items of news/gossip/whatever and send it off to me. Also let me know if there is anyone you'd like included in "Where Are They Now?"

Until next time, pleasant dreams.

Summer has arrived here in the hills of western Maryland. We are sweltering in the 90s with high humidity and no relief in sight. The kids are adapting well; now if only the adults could get the hang of it. This first news comes to you a little bit late because of my tardiness and an errant U.S. mail system that sent the original news in May to San Antonio, Texas, and then to Williamsburg.

"So here now the News."

Mary E. Jeter Burton visited the White House in December as an invitee for a ceremony honoring 85 leading women entrepreneurs.

preneurs. This was on top of her appointment as divisional vice president for Perry Drug Stores in which she was placed in charge of 205 drug stores and 232 auto stores and general health care units in the Midwest. The Richmond native, after her W&M days and a M.B.A. from the University of Chicago, worked with the Osco drug chain, Victory-Alberto Culver, and then in 1985, she started her own holding company — Learning Edge. The coup de grace was the inclusion in the National Federation of Independent Business' book, Risk to Riches: Women and Entrepreneurship in America.

Eileen St. Denis Werber was promoted in January of this year to senior vice president and director of human resources development with Sovran Financial Corporation, headquartered in Norfolk. (Now we all know where to go for a loan.)

Another Virginia resident, Richard Gayle, recently joined the VCU faculty as associate professor, Division of Health and Physical Education. Rich earned his master's and Ed.D. from the University of Tennessee. He came "North" from UNC-Greensboro to pursue his research interest in the relationship between exercise and chronic disease. (How about a cure for writer's block?)

More Virginia-based news from the Mary Ann (Sam) Stuckmeyer-William E. Richeson's in Midlothian. They are proud parents of four, with the latest arriving last February; the two girls now have two boys to keep up with. Bill is international executive officer with Sovran Bank, N.A., with a recent transfer from Virginia Beach to Richmond under his belt. Sam is very preoccupied with the brood as the oldest is only seven.

Ronald E. Singleton is in Winchester, Va., where he is vice president for college relations at Shenandoah College and Conservatory. He is wrapping up his work on a master of science in mass communications (remember Dr. Bence?) from Shippensburg University in Pennsylvania — quite a commute, Ron!

One last Dominion State report from Debbie Tait Grover, who with husband, Tim, just moved into a new house in Old Church, a half hour outside of Richmond. Their new address is 11625 Candle Court, Richmond, VA 23233.

From across the sea comes word from Mary Timmins Onderank in Scotland, where from the West Highlands (place of origin for the terriers of the same name?) she is keeping an eye on the BBC and the current exchange rate. Keep a pound for us colonials, Mary.

Well, that does it for part I, the "Oliver North Follies" have given way to the "Poindexter Shuffle," and I'm writing this updated second half while we are on vacation in the Garden State.

Speaking of Texas, Colleen Whiting McCall wrote from the Texas Department of Human Services (just where in the Lone Star State are you, Colleen?) that she is a children's protective services' supervisor and is proud to announce the adoption of her 6-year-old foster daughter, Valarie.

In the same neck of the woods/plains, John Pagan (another King Dorm survivor) was recently elected justice of the peace in Little Rock, Ark., beating out a five-term incumbent. The unpleasant campaign and fund-raising chores behind him, John also found time to attain tenure at the University of Arkansas law school and to be promoted to professor.

Another W&M transplant in Texas, David Peterson, just received his doctorate from Cornell after a history teaching stint at Stanford. Now he is at the University of Texas at Austin.

another barrister on the Virginia Peninsula, and his 2-1/2-year-old son, Aaron Mathew, have updated their residency in the Ghent section of Norfolk.

David Tinker, right here in the Cumberland area, has turned in his Chuck Taylor All Stars for a contracting business and finds western Maryland more inviting for him and his family than his native Baltimore.

A quick close before I get back to the Contra-Conga hero worship cannonization mini-series: I need more information and pithy quotes to keep this column perky and eye-catching since vulgarity and recaps of the Chicago Seven trial will not suit our Gazette. Please just drop me a note, or better yet, get on the National Highway (route 40/48) and come visit Cumberland for a first-hand report of your progress/regression, post-W&M. Even a tale of "what you did on your summer vacation" for the fall edition. Keep the faith.

Notes from Dave:

Linda has delegated this class letter to me because of her delicate state. More specifically, child four is due in October. You'd think that our W&M education could have spared us such a surprise. Oh well, one more for the class of 2009. Now we're sure that we've done our share to support the College in future years.

Our lead story certainly had to be dedicated to Jeff Doyle. He wrote a four-page typewritten letter catching us up on the last 10 years. I've done my best to condense it and cover the highlights.

After graduating from W&M, Jeff worked at Shenandoah National Park as a seasonal naturalist for a summer, then headed to Indiana University for a Ph.D. in botany. He roomed with Doug Soltis, also working on his Ph.D. in botany, and studied under Dr. Charles Heiser, who was the major professor of W&M's own Dr. Gus Hall. In 1980, Jeff married Jane Ann Leclere who doubles as wife and molecular biology lab technician in "guess who's" lab. But that's jumping ahead.

Jeff earned his Ph.D. in 1981 and was appointed assistant professor at Indiana. He then went on a three-year postdoctoral fellowship at Washington University in St. Louis. In 1984, he accepted an assistant professorship at Cornell in molecular plant taxonomy and has passed the first hurdle in the tenure process. After getting accustomed to the winters (you're telling me!), Jeff and Jane have found their home and acreage to be an ideal spot despite the mowing and weeding. (At least he knows what he's pulling.) The scientific field keeps him in contact with several W&Mers. He's published collaborative papers with Doug Soltis and has run into George Diggs and Drs. Coursen and Mathes. He does have questions concerning several alumni. Whatever happened to freshman roommate Rick Laughman. How about Debbie Gortner? Does Cherie Bouchey still have his Beatle albums? Jane says he should get them back. Jeff's address is 9 Muriel Street, Ithaca, NY 14850. He'd love to hear from anyone.

We also heard from Mark and Carmella Maurizi Bladergroen. Mark is finishing his residency in cardio-thoracic surgery in Boston, while Carmella is finishing law school at Boston College. Their children, Erin and Leigh, who are 6 and 5, are enjoying New England. The Bladergroens will soon be out on the job market and looking for a permanent home.

DAVID D. SIZER '09
CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

David D. Sizer '09, one of William and Mary's two oldest living alumni, celebrated his 102nd birthday on Sept. 8 in his hometown of Pineville, N.C. Mr. Sizer, an active member of the Metrolina, N.C., alumni chapter, is approximately five months younger than the Honorable H. Lester Hooker '08 of Richmond, Va., who was born on April 8, 1885.

Terri Bartlett Osborne wrote that she retired from full-time teaching three years ago when her son, Christopher, was born. However, she fills her spare time with some private piano lessons, directing the church choir and a little modeling. By now, the Osbornes should have had their second child. Best of luck, Terri.

Crystal Orndoff Kurtzberg has moved to 11729 Ledura Court, #104, Reston, VA 22091. Crystal is divorced and lives with her son, David, 4. She works as a librarian at Council for Exceptional Children in Reston.

Trudy Campbell Nix has been named the director of a software project for the Florida Banking Group of NCNB National Bank where she is a vice president. Her project involves the design and installation of a completely new customer information and account system for the bank.

Barclay and Linda Grass Poling are to be congratulated on the birth of their first child, Ashley Joy Elizabeth. Linda is teaching high school history as well as aerobics and tennis. Barclay is an associate professor of horticulture science at North Carolina State. Linda says that motherhood is her toughest job yet. Fortunately, Patty Monk Smith (married to Greg Smith '78) has been able to give them some babysitting help.

Shelley Nix dropped us a note while she was on this side of the Atlantic. She's started a job with the European branch of an American computer company called Metaphor. She is responsible for training customers who speak Spanish, Italian and German, as well as translating some materials. She'll be based in London for a while.

Now some quickies for our "Faces in the Crowd" section.

Bill Smyth is teaching in the Charleston County School System, Mt. Pleasant, S.C.

Lucy Moys completed a Ph.D. at Duke in 1985. She spent time in England working on a revision of her dissertation. Lucy is presently a visiting professor at North Carolina State.

Mary Prescott Metzger received an M.A. from the University of Alabama, Birmingham. Her thesis concerned the archaeology of an Early Bronze-Middle Bronze site in the Jordan Valley.

Diane Kessel Hagemann is currently the director of chapter programs for the W&M Society of the Alumni.

Hey, who says we can't have it all? Linda told me that this is my summer to have it all. My goals are a couple of minutes off my running time and several strokes off my handicap. She also told me that next summer these endeavors would be encumbered by a papoose and three very short caddies! Those who play, pay, I guess. Keep those cards and letters coming.

COLLEGE NAMES PASCHALL
ANNUAL FUND DIRECTOR

Elizabeth W. Paschall '64 has been named director for annual support in the Office of Development at William and Mary. Paschall, who has been associate director of annual support since 1985, succeeded Jacquelin W. Crebbs '64, who took a position with the Chrysler Museum earlier this year. Paschall served as director of chapter programs for the Society of the Alumni from 1982-85 and taught English at Hampton Roads Academy for six years before joining the College. She received a master's degree in counseling from William and Mary in 1986. The William and Mary Annual Fund is the college's primary source of expendable gift income, receiving gifts in excess of $1.7 million during the 1986-87 fiscal year.

spring he completed his doctoral dissertation in philosophy for Boston College.

After moving to Washington, D.C., Craig Hoffman began practicing law with the firm of Onek, Klein and Farr. Joan Harrison Burnette has been promoted to vice president in commercial lending at Colonial American National in Roanoke, Va.

Joy Fessenden MacNichol and her husband, Chuck, moved to Jacksonville, Fla., in Sept. 1986 to open their own business. Their Florida move proved fruitful as their son, Charlie, was born there this past May.

Now working at a Cincinnati law firm, David T. Croall attended Harvard Law School, 1977-80, and then worked in Richmond for a year. Dave attributes his legal education to Harvard but his writing ability to W&M and a sympathetic colleague in his first year of practice.

Joyce Marie Downey writes that she has traveled to Italy, France and England in the last two years. She is currently working in D.C. as a social studies editor for the high school equivalency examination at the American Council on Education.

Shelly Movroydis Kays tells us that she and her husband have just finished building their new home in Union Township, N.J. They each work for different New Jersey mortgage companies. Shelly says the fluctuating interest rates are keeping them both very busy.

Currently a purchasing agent for Tyger Construction Company, a large marine construction company, Emily Deaver is engaged to be married in the fall. She has her master's degree in oceanography from Old Dominion University.

Christopher Kelly is a lecturer in the government department at William and Mary. His return to William and Mary followed a route that included obtaining a master's degree in journalism from Columbia University and working as a professional journalist for a business newsletter in New York and Washington, D.C. He was called to fill a last-minute opening at William and Mary.

Hope to see many of you at Homecoming for our 10th reunion. If anyone is interested in helping out, please let me or the Alumni Office know. Thanks for being diligent and sending in your news over the last 10 years. It made my job easy. Let's welcome Carol by sending her lots of news for the next issue.

I surely cannot believe that our classmates in Virginia are the only people doing anything exciting this summer! Write and let everyone know what's new with you. After all, the next newsletter will be pre-Homecoming and we need "who's who" information by then.

Mary Ann Baumann Brewster writes that she and her husband, Jim, live in Yorktown and have two children — Megan, 3-1/2, and Matthew, 1. Mary Ann is completing her M.A. in education at William and Mary this summer.

Kathie Ellen Scherer, long-distance runner while at W&M, won the women's open division of the Capital City Biathlon in Hanover County in April. Congratulations, Kathie.

Kristen S. Huntley of Danville received her master of business administration degree from the Darden School at the University of Virginia in May. Kristen accepted the position of associate with Morgan Stanley & Company in New York.

Kate Morgans is also working in New York as a consultant with APM. She received her M.B.A. from the Tuck School at Dartmouth.

Becca Hart works as a vice president for Chase Manhattan in New York.

This news comes from Nancy Jennings, who visited the two in April in New York, and evidently they left their mark on the upper West Side! Nancy is living in Richmond, working in commercial lending at Central Fidelity Bank and moving toward her M.S. in finance in the evening program at Virginia Commonwealth University.

Thanks for writing, Nancy, since we also would not have known where to find Claire Dickie. Claire is in her second year at law school at UVA and is working in Boston this summer. Also in New York City is Molly Ashby, who works in corporate finance at Morgan Guaranty.

Rebecca Anne Miller graduated from veterinary school at Virginia Tech in 1985 and now is a veterinarian in Newport News, Va.

Maybe Beth (Viola) Forbes Lutz and Rick Lutz should think about taking their black Labrador pup, Cinder, out to Rebecca for checkups. (A lot of us own these temporary "baby-substitutes.") Anyway, Beth and Rick are still living on their farm in

FORMER PRESIDENT'S WIFE DIES

Louise Michaels Chandler, widow of Vice Admiral Alvin Duke Chandler, former president and chancellor of William and Mary, died recently in Virginia Beach, Va. Admiral Chandler, who served as president of William and Mary from 1951 to 1960, died in May.

Chesapeake. Rick is working with Industrial Marine Service as a supervisor of its underground department. The company recovers oil and gas from spills and leaks in the area.

Beth writes that Karen Reese is getting married in October at Wren Chapel to Mike Fay '84. Karen works for Sovran Bank in the tax department, while Mike is finishing law school. Best of luck and love to you both.

The Lutzes went camping in Hatteras over Memorial Day weekend with Sandra Harton McCloskey and husband, Bill.

I wish I could have been at what several people have said was one of the prettiest wedding ceremonies of the year. Evy Lowenstern married Pete Severino in May at the Cosmos Club in Washington, D.C. Amid the paparazzi were Kate Morgans, Sandra McCloskey, Anne Gordon Lehew, Bonnie Newton Tomlinson, Beth Lutz and Jamie Baylis. Love to you both, Evy and Pete.

Beth Scott is still in Annadale and works for Advanced Office Systems. The company is an IBM dealer that sells software and computers to the construction and real estate industries. Beth specializes in the construction area and does training and customer support for the construction software package they sell. Lots of luck to you, B.S.

Caroline Bolte serves as assistant director of public relations at Randolph Macon College in Ashland, Va. She lives in western Henrico County, is active in the Richmond KKG alumnae group and her local church and is working toward her master of humanities degree at the University of Richmond.

We got a lot of news from Liz Lynn Perraud, who is living in Columbia, Md., with husband, Art Perraud M.B.A. '82, and their 1-1/2-year-old son, Allan, born in Jan. 1986. Liz is working for her father selling hardwood floors (installation and refinishing) to homeowners and builders in Howard County, Md. Liz wants to know what the rest of her freshman hall (Yates second center) and their "brother" hall (Dupont third east) are doing. Come on, you know if you were there in 1977!

Liz writes that Dot Suter Smith is living in Richmond with her husband, Walter, and they expect their first child in September. Also "due" in September is Peggy Stassi Coale, who is at Edwards Air Force Base in California with her husband, Scott.

Leslie Casson is with one of the "Big Eight" in accounting in the D.C. area, and the last Liz knew, Cathy Chapman Miller was moving from Florida with her husband, Jack, to continue her banking career in Georgia. Thanks for the news, Liz.

Ann Burke Moretz sure knew where a lot of 1981 graduates were, too. Ann married Bill Jones Moretz in May in Charlotte, N.C. Bill is president of Camera Tech, Inc., and specializes in professional art photography. Ann is still with NCNB, writing corporate brochures and being involved in the development and coordination of NCNB's corporate advertising strategy.

Ann writes that Natalie Mosher was married to James Hessler, M.D., in Norfolk. Natalie got her doctorate in nursing from Case Western and is in pediatrics. Jim is chief resident in ENT at the Cleveland Clinic. Also, Ann is waiting to hear from you, and Becca Hart!

Theresa Norman Spicer and her husband, Joe, welcomed a baby daughter, Jessica Elizabeth, in April.

Robin Emery has returned from Europe and is back in the Washington, D.C., area. He is working in free-lance convention planning.

Taking two steps outside Virginia . . . Carol Binzer is finishing a year's tenure as the dean of students at Methodist College

CUMMINGS GIFT ESTABLISHES FUNDS FOR MINORITIES

William and Mary has received a gift of $300,000 from the Frances L. and Edwin L. Cummings Memorial Fund of New York. The gift will be used to establish a $100,000 endowment for the Frances L. and Edwin L. Cummings Scholarship Fund for minority students and a $200,000 endowment for the second Frances L. and Edwin L. Cummings Professorship for a distinguished minority scholar-teacher in the Faculty of Arts and Sciences.

in Fayetteville, N.C. She came to Methodist College in July 1985 as the assistant dean of students for residence life. She is now leaving for UNC-Chapel Hill to finish her doctorate, which she began working on while at Vanderbilt. Her Ph.D. will be in adult and higher education. Best of luck, Carol.

That about wraps up new news. Please take a minute to write — even a postcard will do. We're waiting to hear about you!

Thanks to a letter from David Seamon and input from several other classmates, I was informed that approximately 16 members of our class were awarded doctors of medicine from MCV, including David, Robert Schmidt, Amy Levine, Mark Williams, George McBeath, Sandy Craig, Jeffy Haynes, Ron Clark, Warren Koontz, Angela Ranzini, Mike Kontos, Kenneth Manning, Mariss Spraders and Alice Kuteroff Hirata.

Rob Schmidt's next challenge is an emergency residency in Pittsburgh. Amy Levine is headed for Texas for a residency in pediatrics after marrying classmate John Dolara.

Both David Seamon and Alice Hirata are staying in Richmond. David is beginning a pediatrics residency at MCV. He and wife, Wendy, just became homeowners in the southside of Richmond. David says hello to everyone and to keep on making babies (its great for business)!

Alice married Peter Hirata on May 30th and begins an OB/GYN residency at MCV on July 1.

Brian Krachman also received his degree — a doctorate in osteopathy at the University of Health Sciences — College of Osteopathic Medicine in Kansas City, Mo. Brian is serving a one-year internship at Metropolitan Hospital in Springfield, Pa. Congratulations, Brian!

Kudos to Todd Curry as well. Todd married Elizabeth Dickens in April. (One of the ushers was Brad Dunkin.) After four years of studying, training and working towards a career in aviation, Todd begins working for American Airlines as a pilot on the Boeing 727.

Some more marriage notes . . . Denise Savino married David Parker in June. Tracey Braun, Laura Zinni '84 and Laura Luter Sullivan '85 were three of the bridesmaids. Both Denise and David are in the Foreign Service and have embarked on their first post, Tunisia.

Sandy Crill married David Hood in May in Ohio. After honeymooning in Hawaii, the couple will reside in Michigan. Colleen Kearney and Kriss Fillbach served as two of the bridesmaids. Colleen was recently promoted to senior group underwriter for Crown Life Insurance Co., in Alexandria.

Kriss's letter captured my attention by starting out that no, she's not getting married, and no, she didn't win the lottery — but yes, she was selected to be a staff member for the semester at Sea Program, a 100-day cruise around the world. From Vancouver, British Columbia, the SS Universe sails around the Pacific to Japan, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Malaysia, the Philippines, India, Turkey, Yugoslavia and Spain. Kriss comes back to earth on Dec. 22!

Rob Guillen and wife, Kim, hosted Steve and Cindy Goff Bretsen when the Bretsens came East from their home in Boulder, Colo., for vacation. Steve is an attorney for Texaco, and Cindy teaches junior high school science. Rob and Kim spend their free time with their two Scottish Terriers

ALUMNA NAMED HEAD OF MEDICAL SOCIETY

Dr. Wilma Bergfeld '60 has been installed as president of the Academy of Medicine of Cleveland, Ohio, the first woman president in the academy's 84-year history. Dr. Bergfeld is a third-generation physician whose grandfather and father were both physicians. After graduating from William and Mary, she earned her medical degree at Temple University and did her internship at the Cleveland Clinic Hospital. She belongs to more than 20 professional societies and is on the board of directors or president of six. She has written more than 200 publications, including a book. She is married to John A. Bergfeld, an orthopedic surgeon.

WOOTTEN CO-AUTHORS CHAPTER ON WELFARE

Thomas M. Wootten '85 J.D., technical specialist with Touche, Ross & Company, has recently co-authored the "Welfare Benefit Plans and Cafeteria Plans" chapter of the 1987 edition of Employee Benefits Law to be published by the Illinois Institute for Continuing Legal Education. Wootten is a member of the Virginia Bar and the American Compensation associations. He received his undergraduate degree from Pennsylvania State University.

'70 ALUMNA PROMOTED

Jeanne B. Jenkins '70 has been appointed vice president for marketing and development by the Crozer-Chester Medical Center in Chester, Pa. As vice president, she will direct the fund-raising, development and marketing activities of the medical center and its affiliate health care facilities. Ms. Jenkins has spent a total of 17 years working with non-profit institutions in both the health care and education sectors.

at terrier field trials. One of their dogs, Rufus, has almost earned his championship in hurdle racing. Kim works as a deputy project manager with General Research Corporation, and Rob is the assistant director of the Accrediting Commission of the Association of Independent Colleges and Schools in D.C. Every so often, Rob lunches with Catherine Dehoney, who works for the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education as a program assistant.

Other dual-career couples include Sheila Muir and Edward Kimball Call. The Calls live in California, where Sheila is an account executive at Information Resources Inc., and Kim works for Sierra Federal Savings and Loan.

Catherine Agnew has been named senior associate with Joseph Blake and Associates, Inc., in the San Francisco office. Catherine is married to Michael Stellmacher.

Steve and Dee Doverspike McHenry have returned to the 'Burg and begun their own investments and insurance business.

Terrell Rutledge Jones is very happy but busy juggling work, marriage and motherhood. With son, Collin, now 10 months old, Terrell has returned to work. As an employee of Trammell Cron Co., Terrell's talents are aimed at marketing research, design and development of residential housing in the Hampton Roads area.

Also enjoying life is Jeffrey Jordy who, living in Boston, works as the accounting manager for Christian Science Publishing Society.

Anne Richter is a claim executive with the General Reinsurance Corporation and attends NY Law School in the evenings.

Laura Gilbert is an assistant buyer with Thalhimers in Richmond. Judy Kidd is a tutor coordinator at Rappahannock Community College and is working on her master's at ODU.

Rob Sherman is ready for his second year of Ph.D. work in drama at Tufts University in Boston. Kim Crase, who rooms with Tracy Baynard and Karen Reeks '85, works for Arthur Young as a systems consultant.

And finally, Douglas McKay has been promoted in the U.S. Army to captain. Doug is a student at Fort Eustis with the 8th Transportation Brigade.

Well, Guys, that's all for this installment! Myself and hubby, Bryan, are busy working so that we can take some vacation time in August. We hope that we can make Homecoming this year, too. So until the next edition, be good and take care!

85 Janet L. Reed

Annadale, VA 22003

Hope everyone is having a wonderful summer. You may notice that my address has changed. Aileen Aderton purchased a three-bedroom condo and we have really been enjoying the extra room. As I write Aileen is in sunny California visiting Todd Armstrong in San Francisco and will then hop down to L.A. for a one-week audit. While at home, though, she has been enjoying fixing up the new condo. We have both started frequenting antique shops and have collected a few pieces—an expensive but fun hobby.

Todd is looking forward to a trip to Milan in August for a publishing conference. After the conference he's going to stop through London and meet up with Aileen and me. Aileen will be completing a three-week audit, and I will be vacationing with my mother. We hope Aileen will be able to join us in brief tour of Scotland.

Ex-roomie Bridget Keally is moving to Arlington in August and is looking forward to a promotion in her job at A.L.E.C. in D.C.

I ran into Mark Thalhimers recently in a customer's office. Mark is selling copiers for Harris.

Brian White has taken a new job with a research company on Capitol Hill. Mark Tucker '83 and Brian Desmond '82 are moving into a house in Vienna in August.

I spoke with Sean Prosser a while back. He is living in Reston and working in D.C. for Fanny Mae.

Also working in D.C. is Patty Anderson. She will be leaving her job with an economic research firm in the fall to begin her Ph.D. studies in economics at Princeton University.

Lisa Antonelli has two new things in her life. She has a new job with McGuire, Woods, Battle & Boothe and has bought a one-bedroom condo.

In Falls Church, Mary Kach started a new job in management at a Volvo dealership.

Quite a few people are working on the Hill. Tracey Sinnott is a legislative correspondent for a Texas congressman. She has learned a lot in her job, like how to two-step well enough to win a contest!

Henry Plaster is in a Michigan office working on "special projects."

Lisa George is working for a Congressman from Pennsylvania and living with Vida Ugineus in Alexandria. Kris Fedewa is working for French Slaughter from Virginia. Mitch Cooper is in Congressman Toricelli's office. Also in Congressional offices are Nancy O'Brien, Jenny Holt, Rob Goodling and Tom Crapps.

Also in D.C., Jane Knott is working in the convention department for an association and living in Arlington with Mary Halahan. Mary was just promoted at National Geographic and has already had a photograph published in the subscribers' newsletter. J. D. Neary is working in a law firm and lives in Alexandria.

Quite a few alumni showed up for a birthday bash for J. D. Jeff Kushan is back in this area working for the U.S. Patent Office. Ron and Allison Haller Downing were in attendance as well as Amy Caramanica, who is with Coldwell Banker. John Boyd has begun a sales job and may soon leave the D.C. area.

Tom Brooks works in Rosslyn and lives in Alexandria with Kent Schaum '86 and Steve Silverberg '86.

Jeffrey McQuilkin has moved back to Alexandria after spending some time in Williamsburg.

Kathy Woodcock was transferred to Northern Virginia and is living with Janet Lawson '86.

Kellie Larsen is living in Falls Church, as well as Colleen Rouche, with Sara Shea, Ansley Calhoun and Micah Yarborough.

Also in the area are roommates Dan Head, Henry Plaster, Doug Neal '86, Mike Dutton '87 and Chris Walker. Working downtown are Tracy Brownlee, Jennifer Campbell, Liz O'Brien and Jeff Brockman.

I received a letter from Jim Palumbo, who is working at Blue Cross in D.C., and living with Herb Mac Arthur.

Eric Strubinger is in the area living in Arlington and working for Xerox in Bethesda.

Mary Ruth Uhrig Phillips and husband, Kevin, are still happily married after two years and are buying a condo in Reston.

Moving on to weddings and engagements—a lot is happening in that department. Albert Hannaman wrote to announce his wedding plans with Elizabeth Ziskind from Richmond. Acting as ushers will be Tom Tierney, Mark Tucker '83 and Brian White. Al is working in management at Sovran Bank in Richmond and will be attending VCU's M.B.A. program this fall. The couple are building a house in Mechanicsville to be finished in November.

In a July wedding in Massachusetts, Al's old roomie, Larry Larsen, tied the knot with Mimi Larouche '87.

Megan Dowd is also engaged, but the wedding isn't scheduled until April 1988. She is marrying a co-worker at Computer Sciences Corporation, Don Dortenzo.

John Bennett and Mary Coates were married in March at the University of Richmond chapel. In attendance were Gary Held, Kenny Barr, Dave Clark, Jim Palumbo and Dave Pastore '84. John was almost late for his own wedding as he insisted that the Lodge 12 gang play basketball that morning. But, he made it with two minutes to spare. Of the others, Gary Held is living in Tennessee. Kenny is with the Nielsen Ratings Company in New Jersey, and Dave is studying law at W&M.

Melanie Perper and Brad Love were also married this past spring and are now living in Richmond. Jeff Hughes and Sherry Leigh Gill are planning a September wedding.

Beth Henry and Kevin Jones tied the knot this past spring as well. Hunter Milligan also married recently.

Mimi Murray was married in Texas earlier this summer, and Mikki Hubbard is soon to be married to a guy she met while working in Atlanta.

Laura Stockmon Luter married Kerry Sullivan last October. The couple lives in Smithfield, Va., where Laura is a buyer for Smithfield Foods, Inc. She also writes that Denise Savino '83 was married June 13.

Back in Aug. 1985 Lisa Smitt married J. Kirk Ring and now lives in Virginia Beach.

In May, Ranu Chatak and Steve Hubbard were married in the Wren Chapel by Father Ron Seguin. Attendees included Ted Shin '86, best man; Lila Ghatak '86, maid of honor; Harold Goldston and Brad Jacobs '86, groomsmen; Mona Czuch '86, bridesmaid; and Anne Hiller, scripture reader. Other alumni attending were Alison Chapple, Joan Doerflinger '86, Terry Hall, Karin Hillenbrand, Michael Gur '86, Brian McGahren '86, Anne Nevlud, Mike Pemberton and Doug Riggan '86.

Ranu is a graduate student at MCV in Richmond, while Steve is a management trainee at Sovran Bank and a student at VCU working on his M.B.A.

Mike Pemberton is working for Deloitte Haskins & Sells in D.C. Mike was working in the Richmond office and rooming with Mark James '84, a manager for Progressive Insurance Company.

Ted is the office manager at the Coca-Cola bottling plant in Alexandria. Lila is in graduate school at UVA, while her fiancé, Brad, is attending graduate school at Cal Tech.

Harold is a real estate agent for Bowers, Nelms & Fonville in Richmond and is engaged to a dental student at MCV. Anne Hiller is in the graduate geology program at the University of Delaware. Alison is working on special projects for Sovran in Richmond, having graduated from the management associate program.

Brian worked at the Arena State in D.C. until May, and then left to attend the six-week school of the American Dance Festival in Durham, N.C. Anne Nevlud works as a marketing coordinator for National Advanced Systems in Northern Virginia.

In various parts of Virginia: Ann Leslie Tuttle is in her second year of graduate study in history at UVA. She is editing the memoirs of Helen Dodge for her M.A. thesis and is also an editorial assistant with the George Washington Papers.

Martha Lauren Cunningham is an intern at the Museum of the Confederacy in Richmond.

Tracy Gruis is in her second year at Marshall-Wythe.

Also in law school, Benton Bailey is working as a legal intern for the summer for the Virginia Real Estate Board before resuming her studies at T.C. Williams School of Law in Richmond.

Billy Garvey has moved to Waynesboro from Dallas and is often seen sporting a 10-gallon cowboy hat.

Down in Richmond the news is that Scott Ukrop is headed for volleyball super-stardom. Dave Warren is there working in an accounting firm. Susan Davis is working at Blue Cross/Blue Shield and living with Diane Limm.

After getting her master's in journalism from VCU this spring, Betsy Powell began free-lancing for the Richmond paper.

Ginger Baskett is pursuing a career in teaching and is spending the summer working with foreign exchange students.

Mark Franko is living in Richmond working on his master's. Other Richmonders are Kelly Huffman, Alice Bengston '86, Kay Fanestil '87, Jim Chappy, Chris Jones and Aldo Ashworth.

Chuck and Tracy Krautheim Murray celebrated their first wedding anniversary in June. Chuck will start his second year of law school at Washington and Lee, and Tracy teaches in Lexington.

Down in Tidewater, Martha Feathers is living in Hampton and working with State Farm Insurance. Ron and Annette Harlow have moved into a new house in Chesapeake with a pool, hot tub and huge yard. Sounds like a good place for a party! Ron is still at Schenker's and has been traveling to N.Y.C. and Trinidad. Annette is with Kidder, Peabody and has just passed her securities exam.

At UVA, Ward Thomas continues working on his law degree, while Tracey Wright, Jenny Holt, Jennifer Campbell and Rachel Walker will start on theirs this fall.

And congratulations to Juergen and Julie O'Neill Kloo who are the proud parents of Juergen Horst Kloo, born in June.

Teresa Russo spent the summer at Leigh Memorial Hospital in Norfolk as an administrative assistant and will return to UNC-Chapel Hill to rejoin forces with Meg Lanchantin and Bob Tormey '86 this fall. Also in North Carolina, John Upshur Dennis has been admitted to the School of Veterinary Medicine at N.C. State.

Todd '81 and Lindsey Willis Stravitz are in Chapel Hill, where Todd is in residency at UNC and Lindsey has finished her first year of law school at Duke.

In other news, David Vannort is an accountant in Atlanta. Matt Dowdy is in Miami, and George Kurisky is in law school in Texas. Bob and Patty Coble are in Charlotte, N.C., where they are both accountants.

I heard from Tony McNeal a while back. It wasn't a social call; he called for help because he was stranded in Northern Virginia after missing his train back to Hampton. Typical Tony!

Moving to the northern states, Julia Garrett has been elected notes editor of the Dickinson Journal of International Law for 1987-88 at the Dickinson School of Law in Carlisle, Pa. In Ann Arbor, Mich., Craig Smith is a staff writer for the Ann Arbor Observer, a monthly magazine.

Dwayne Therriault, working on a degree in East Asian studies at Yale, devoted the 1985-86 academic year to Chinese language training at the Mandarin Training Center in Taipei, Taiwan.

In New York, Debbie Packman finished up her graduate degree at St. John's.

'76 ALUMNUS HEADS MANAGEMENT DEPARTMENT

William B. Carper '76 M.B.A. has been appointed head of the Department of Management at Georgia Southern College in Statesboro, Ga. Dr. Carper has published or presented over three dozen papers primarily in the areas of management and microcomputer applications. He currently serves as the 1987 program chair for the southeast chapter of the Institute of Management Sciences and as vice president for planning and development of the southeast region of the Decision Sciences Institute. He was previously a member of the management department at George Mason University where he received the school's Distinguished Faculty Award.

Marco Odiaga is living in Boston where he has a restaurant in Faneuil Hall. Ann Burhans, who will return to the Harvard Divinity School in the fall, is spending the summer in Boston.

Mary Mitchell is working at Ogilvy and Mather in New York while pursuing her writing career. Anne Sorensen is working for American Express and living with Ann Searle in Hoboken, N.J.

Mike Lorch is at Price Waterhouse and living in Westfield, N.J. Sarah Dobbin keeps N.Y.C. as her home base while she bikes across the country this summer. Others in New York include Chris Megale and Jim Cason, who works at the Bank of New York.

Gregg Crump and Tom Simpson, an advertising salesman, are in Philadelphia. Dan Vandegrift has been accepted to the University of Connecticut's graduate economic program.

Margee Krebs Haynes and husband, Greg, are moving to Atlanta where Greg will attend law school at Emory University.

Out on the west coast, Betsy Danbury is a production assistant for Hollywood film makers and lives in Torrance, Calif. Paul Libassi is a police officer in San Diego.

Up in Alaska, Jim Loviegren is performing in a theatrical production, playing a prospector during a gold rush.

Kelly Lindes Swenson and husband, Dane '83, are in Minnesota working as accountants.

In my last article I reported that Maryellen Farmer and Ed Feeley M.B.A. '85 had tied the knot. Well, the whole scoop is that they honeymooned in Paris and then left for New Zealand where Ed will be consulting for Booz Allen Hamilton for four months. What a life!

Also overseas are Sharon Winn in West Germany and Steve Smith all over. He was in Egypt when he was last heard from.

A couple of addresses for those abroad: John Harmon, c/o Peace Corps, Eaux et Forêts, Diourbel, Senegal, West Africa; and Dwayne Petty, Yeo Eui Do, P.O. Box 165, Seoul 150, Korea. I'm sure they would love some mail.

And last, but definitely not least, I have heard from Leigh McDaniel, also in Seoul. At that time she was trying to survive Korea's monsoon season!

Thanks to all of you who wrote letters. I apologize if I left someone out. There seem to be boxes everywhere!

We are delighted to have so much news from so many of you. Since our space is limited, we give a brief statement about each one.

Martha L. Winston has been promoted to human resource manager-marketing at the corporate offices of Oscar Mayer in Madison, Wis. Originally from Norton, Va., Martha has a B.S. degree in business administration from the University of Richmond and a M.B.A. from the College. She joined the company in 1983 and most recently was corporate recruiting manager.

VICK NAMED M-W FUND-RAISER

Deborah S. Vick, formerly a fund-raiser for the Washington Center, Washington, D.C., has joined the staff of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law as associate dean for development and alumni affairs. Her top priorities are to widen the scope of the law school annual fund and raise funds for the Bill of Rights Institute. She succeeds George L. Follansbee Jr. who left the position this past summer to return to private law practice. Ms. Vick is a graduate of Lewis and Clark University in Oregon and a Ph.D. candidate in higher educational administration at Vanderbilt University.

Claudette A. Moody has been promoted to manager of government relations for the Los Angeles County Transportation Commission. In his new position, he will oversee Ethyl's banking operations, foreign currency management and short-term investment activities. His office is at the corporate headquarters in Richmond, Va.

Charles E. Burt M.A. '80 has completed his Ph.D. in clinical psychology at the University of Delaware. He has returned to Virginia to go into practice.

Susan Pirog M.A. '79 recently relocated in New York City to take a promotion to senior marketing specialist with the Data General Corporation for which she has worked since graduation.

Agnes Braganza M.A. '78 was selected by Peninsula Women's Network as Networker of the Year. As a co-founder and former president of the network, she was cited for continued support of women's career goals through the organization and as director of continuing education at Christopher Newport College.

News has come of several history department graduates:

Barbara Austen M.A. '86, assistant curator at the New Hampshire Historical Society in Concord, has become a bit of a celebrity. She designed a toy exhibit that was featured on five television shows, two radio shows and in several newspapers. Barbara writes that getting to do all of the radio and TV interviews was great fun.

Tad Baker Ph.D. '86 successfully defended his dissertation in early September after a summer of archaeology in his beloved Maine. His discovery of a sunken dugout canoe (with the help of doctoral candidate and underwater archaeologist Dick Swete) gained national media coverage. This year Tad is working as resident archaeologist at the Old York Historical Society in York, Maine.

John Barden M.A. '83 is a Ph. D. student in the history department at Duke.

Lisa Broberg recently left her position as curator of the Middlesex County Historical Society in Middletown, Conn. She is now in Wethersfield.

Marcie Cohen M.A. '85 is at Plymouth Plantation, Plymouth, Mass., where she is a project coordinator in the education department.

Janet L. Coryell Ph.D. '86 presented an invited paper titled "Successful Methodology in a Failed Cause: Anna Ella Carroll of Maryland" at the Women's Studies Conference in Nov. 1985. Janet successfully defended her dissertation on Anna Ella Carroll last July. She has been named assistant professor at the University of Dayton, where she is teaching women's and family history as well as western civilization.

Christopher Daly M.A. '86 entered Jesus College, Oxford University, in the fall of 1986. He was admitted to the D. Phil. program in Tudor ecclesiastical history.

Lynn Doggett M.A. '81 lives in Charlotte, N.C., where she is an education coordinator at the Mint Museum of History.

Diane Dunkley M.A. '83 has been named associate curator of Carter's Grove. The plantation is operated by the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation.

Tori Eberlein Setterholm M.A. '82 is working at the Minnesota Historical Society where she is tour registrar in the public information office.

Sue Eltscher M.A. '82 is director of the library at the American Baptist Historical Society in Rochester, N.Y.

John Fitzhugh Millar M.A. '81 of Williamsburg discussed how he compiled his latest book, A Complete Life of Christ, at a meeting of the men's breakfast group of the Williamsburg Presbyterian Church. He is a lay reader and chalice bearer in the Episcopal Church and sings in the choir at Bruton Parish Church.

Susan Ocksreider M.A. '84 is involved with the craft programs at Colonial Williamsburg.

Jim O'Toole M.A. '73 joined the faculty at the University of Massachusetts, Boston, in the fall.

Susan Patterson M.A. '74 was promoted to managing editor, Chicago, by the University of Illinois Press.

Jonathan Poston M.A. '80 is director of programs for the Historic Charleston Foundation.

Paul Pruitt Ph.D. '80 received a M.L.S. degree from the University of Alabama in 1986. He was recently appointed assistant librarian at the law school at Alabama.

Jeff Scheib M.A. '82 is assistant editor of the Biographical Dictionary of Early Pennsylvania Legislators at the Historical Society of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

Bill Siener Ph.D. '82 has just been named director of the Buffalo and Erie County Historical Society, which houses, among other things, the pistol that killed President McKinley. Bill was formerly a curator at the Rochester, New York, Museum and Science Center.

ALUMNUS FUNDS SCHOLARSHIP

A scholarship fund for students from three Virginia counties has been established by Louis I. Almand '64 of Henderson, N.C., in honor of his parents. Income from the Iverson Hawthorne Almand and Grace Briel Almand Scholarship Endowment will provide financial assistance to talented and deserving students, with preference given to freshmen from Arlington, Brunswick and Lunenburg counties. The late Iverson Almand graduated from William and Mary in 1938 and attended Marshall-Wythe School of Law. He practiced law in Arlington County for over 40 years. Mrs. Almand, a member of the class of 1941, lives in Arlington, Va.

Tim Silver Ph.D. '86, assistant professor of history at his alma mater, Appalachian State University, published (with John Craig, Ph.D. '86) "Tolerance of the Intolerant: J. A. C. Chandler and the Ku Klux Klan at William and Mary" in the South Atlantic Quarterly (Spring 1985). He is revising his dissertation on the ecology of the southeastern forest for Cambridge University Press.

Ken Smith Ph.D. '81 is still teaching at a private school in Milwaukee (University School) and is writing a history of the school.

Jane Townes M.A. '76 is vice president of the Shelbyville Pencil Company, Inc., a supplier of woodcased pencils in the advertising specialty industry. She acted as a restoration consultant for a 20th-century railroad depot project and learned a lot about state bureaucracy and the IRS while securing a corporate charter and tax-exempt status for a local historical organization. Townes has been elected to the advisory board of visitors, Mary Baldwin College. Off and on she has been working on a Tennessee follow-up to a paper on 19th-century land tenure in Virginia done under Herb Gutman while she was at W&M.

Brian Varnado M.A. '74 is Fort Sumter, S.C., National Monument supervisor. He reports that restoration work has been completed on the flag believed to have been flying over Fort Sumter when the Confederate bombardment began in 1861 to open the Civil War. Work on the flag was completed at Harper's Ferry, W.Va., by the National Park Service.

Mary Hoffschwelle West M.A. '80 is the executive director of the Oakland Historic House Museum, Murfreesboro, Tenn.

Jeanne Whitney M.A. '83 is a research assistant at Old Sturbridge Village in Massachusetts.

Sarah Weatherwax M.A. '84 is a museum cataloger with the Brooklyn Historical Society.

Linda Wentworth M.A. '84 is employed by the Cornell University Press where she is a manuscript editor.

Jo Zuppan M.A. '78 published an article on "Electronic Editorial Advice" in the Oct. 1985 issue of Scholarly Publishing. She is editor of publications at the Cleveland Museum of Art.

GENERAL ELECTRIC
GIVES COLLEGE $20,000

The General Electric Foundation has given William and Mary a grant of $20,000 to develop an undergraduate course on ethics in marketing in the School of Business Administration. The seminar-type course will bring together students and a variety of outside speakers for discussions on ethical issues related to marketing and advertising.

with Dean Perkins, Hank Humphreys and Mo and Gin Lynch enjoyed a very hot but pleasant evening.

A fall gathering of Washington area VIMS alumni and friends will be held at Scott Whitney's farm. If your mailing address in the VIMS Alumni Directory is D.C., Northern Virginia, Baltimore or places between you'll be getting a notice. Any other alumni who might be interested or who might be in the D.C. area during this fall, keep in touch with D.C. friends or me and we'll see that you get a notice.

Donna Turgeon M.A. '68 donated a limited copyright of her painting "Striped Bass" to VIMS for use as a gift to the Founder's Society members of the VIMS Associates.

Jim Weaver Ph.D. '75 stopped by on his way to visit the Fish and Wildlife Service's

W&M, HU COOPERATE

Beginning this fall, William and Mary will share $40,000 in state education funds with Hampton University for a cooperative venture to train special education teachers in new or different areas of instruction. The program will allow 20 area teachers to participate in a two-semester program at either institution in the areas of learning disabilities, emotional disturbance or mental retardation.

Harrison Lake Fish Hatchery to discuss the development of a cooperative program between VIMS and Fish and Wildlife. Jim managed to get back to one of his old avocations, canoeing. He and Dean Perkins regained some lost years paddling on Contrary Creek.

Carl Cerco Ph.D. '82 will be leaving the VIMS staff to join the Corps of Engineers in Vicksburg, Miss., to work on the Chesapeake Bay 3-D Model.

All the alumni who haven't been to VIMS in recent years have quite a pleasant surprise coming to them when they see Watermen's Hall. I'll guarantee it's different than what we were used to in the good old days. Make it a point to stop by and see me, and your name can also appear in these notes for posterity.

Start the cards and letters coming.

EVENTS CALENDAR

1987-88

AN INVITATION FROM PRESIDENT VERKUIL

The 1987-88 academic year is going to be an exciting one for William and Mary. We are looking forward to participating in the celebration of the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution. Our Chancellor, Warren E. Burger, retired Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, is chairman of the bicentennial committee.

In 1988 we will take part in another celebration, this time on an international scale. The College is the official U.S. representative to the Tercentenary Celebration of the Glorious English Revolution (1688-89), which brought to the throne King William and Queen Mary who gave the College its charter in 1693.

A week-long calendar of events in October has been announced by the Muscarelle Museum of Art to observe the dedication of a new wing of the museum building.

The Earl Gregg Swem Library is also looking ahead to opening expanded quarters this year. The library begins the school year with a lively exhibit about student life, which is now on display in the Zollinger Museum on the ground floor.

The Concert Series is anticipating another sold-out season for 1987-88, which will include appearances by the Feld Ballet, the Empire Brass Ensemble and pianists Misha and Cipa Dichter. With season tickets at $17 for five concerts, it is probably the biggest concert bargain on the East Coast.

The William and Mary Choir is back from a very successful tour of Europe this summer. The choir and the women's chorus will give concerts at Christmas and next spring.

The William and Mary Theatre will present a season of plays, including the musical "Anything Goes," and also invites patrons to its Second Season.

The calendar for the coming year also includes encore performances by the William and Mary Band, the orchestra, Sinfonicon and faculty and student recitals.

The plays, concerts, musical events and lectures on campus next year are special events that we are delighted to be able to share with our neighbors.

We encourage our students to attend as many of these events as they can to enrich their college experience. We hope you will also find the many cultural and sports events on campus add to your enjoyment of life.

Some regularly scheduled events of which you may wish to take special note are:

Wren Chapel organ recitals every Saturday at 11 a.m.

Bruton Parish Church organ recitals every Tuesday (March-Dec.) and Saturday at 8 p.m.

Town and Gown Luncheon at noon in the Campus Center ballroom every Thursday when classes are in session. (Some programs are held in other locations because of the nature of the talk or presentation.) Reservations are required. For more information, contact Cindy Tracy, special events coordinator, University Relations (804)-253-4600.

Oceanography for Landlubbers, first Wednesday of each month, Watermen's Hall, VIMS. For more information, call Joe Choromanski, Program Director, Sea Grant Marine Education Program (804) 642-7000 or write to "Landlubbers," VIMS Aquarium, Gloucester Point, VA 23062.

Ticket Information

Concert Series: Five-performance series; subscribers can choose Nov. 5 or 6 performance of Feld Ballet. William and Mary students, faculty and staff, $13; General admission, $17. Tickets for individual concerts (if seating available), $5. For more information, call 253-4557.

William and Mary Theatre: Four-play series. William and Mary students, faculty and staff, $10; General admission, $13. Tickets for individual performances: "Anything Goes," $5; all other plays, $4. Box office opens two weeks before performance; subscribers must call for reservations. For more information, call W&M Theatre, 253-4395; box office, 253-4272.

William and Mary Choir and Chorus Concerts: General admission, $2.50; tickets available at the CC main desk, at the box office the night of the concert or phone 253-4230.
