THE COLLEGE OF WILLIAM AND MARY

Charter Day Focuses on Library Ewell, Taylor Receive Thomas Jefferson Awards

The dedication of a $3 million addition to Earl Gregg Swem Library served as the theme for Charter Day celebrating the 295th anniversary of the founding of William and Mary on the weekend of Feb. 5-6.

Robert Wedgeworth, dean of the School of Library Service, Columbia University, delivered the Charter Day address in Phi Beta Kappa Hall on Saturday, Feb. 6, and received an honorary doctor of humane letters degree from William and Mary. On Friday, Feb. 5, he attended the rededication ceremony of Swem Library at which Jeannie P. Baliles, First Lady of Virginia, and Margaret E. Chisholm, president of the American Library Association, delivered remarks.

At the Charter Day ceremony, Judith Ewell, a member of the faculty since 1971 and a professor of history and Latin-American history specialist, became the first woman to receive the Thomas Jefferson Award. She was honored for her scholarship and commitment to her profession and to students.

The Thomas Jefferson Teaching Award went to Talbot J. Taylor, assistant professor of English. The citation noted that Dr. Taylor, who joined the faculty six years ago, has distinguished himself "as a scholar of growing international reputation and a teacher with remarkable skills."

The rededication of the library came 22 years after Swem Library was first dedicated on Charter Day in 1966 and marked the official opening of a four-story, 28,000-square-foot expansion that was completed last fall. The new space permits Swem to house an additional 160,000 volumes and provides seating for 280 readers, as well as a 24-hour study room, conference rooms, administrative offices, a facility of bibliographic instruction, a Friends of the Library room and a staff lounge.

In remarks at the rededication, President Verkuil noted that the expenditure of $3 million for the construction of the addition "demonstrates the recognition by the Commonwealth of Virginia of the important place which this library occupies in our academic mission."

"The university itself has already made a commitment to strengthening its library system by placing libraries among its top priorities as it looks ahead to its growing need for capital dollars," he added. "Private funds in the form of endowments for the enhancement of the collections and services of the library are being, and will be, actively sought."

In his keynote address at Charter Day, Dr. Wedgeworth said that information technologies of the past 20 years have created a quiet revolution that is transforming the libraries of North America as much as Carnegie philanthropy did in the early 1900s.

"The current revolution is far less visible than the Carnegie buildings," said Dr. Wedgeworth, "(but) its social and economic implications are the driving forces that are shaping libraries as we know them."

What library technology has done, he added, is "facilitate connections between libraries and among individuals. Gone are the days when scholars or students had to travel great distances to make handwritten notes from materials unavailable locally." Now, he said, most libraries are connected via networks in North America that routinely transmit data describing other library materials.

President Verkuil also announced during the weekend a $1.25 million gift to the College by Patrick Hayes of St. Augustine, Fla. The gift will establish the Ralph H. Wark Memorial Professorship and Fine Arts Endowment, which recognizes "Mr. Wark's keen interest in and support of the fine arts and art history (and) creates the first endowed professorship in that department." Both Mr. Hayes and the late Mr. Wark, who was a close friend of Mr. Hayes', shared an interest in and support for Swem Library as well. Mr. Wark donated to William and Mary over 600 books with fore edged paintings, and he and Mr. Hayes together contributed items to the library's rare book collection.

Jeannie Baliles, First Lady of Virginia, delivered remarks on behalf of the Commonwealth at the rededication ceremony of Earl Gregg Swem Library.

Ringling Far and Near

"A Stubborn Search For Excellence"

By W. Barry Adams

I once heard a university president initiate the title above as he spoke to an audience of alumni, community leaders and faculty. I have no way of knowing if his statement was original but I suspect that the line has been uttered in some form before by philosophers, corporate leaders and educators. Now I'm borrowing it for my first column in the Alumni Gazette. It fits nicely with my expectations.

As the Society of the Alumni begins to look beyond the 20th century in concert with the College of William and Mary, so must we look at the demographics which will influence higher education nationwide. And if there is one troublesome concern I have about the alumni profession it is that some of us appointed to posts are ambivalent or unconcerned with the fact that we are part and parcel a critical component in the advancement of higher education in the United States.

Although our worlds are often diffused through the many successful and important programs that alumni organizations sponsor, we have a need to look beyond. To see where our graduates of today will be tomorrow and to identify what we know about the 5-year-olds who will enter our campuses in the year 2000 is a necessary exercise. But just as some institutions are peering into the next century so must alumni organizations. After all, students eventually become alumni. Their perceptions and life experiences are almost certain to be different from those on campus today. It is not my intention to provide the readership of the Gazette with demographic studies, but a quick look at our future alumni population will provide you with a line drawing of what is ahead for alumni organizations

There will be more households where both husband and wife have long-term commitments to careers.

There will be an increased number of women and minorities as part of the alumni body.

There will be a significant number of our alumni who entered college from bilingual homes — Spanish and Asiatic languages being the most prevalent.

There will be an increasing number of alumni holding multiple degrees from multiple universities.

There will continue to be growing numbers of volunteer organizations who will compete for our graduates' time and donations.

There will be more and more professions that require continuing education and extended classroom work to acquire advanced professional skills and standards throughout careers.

New technologies will vastly change the methods of communication — electronic alumni newsletters and announcements will be commonplace.

There will be a larger percentage of over-65 alumni.

More alumni will reside outside of the municipality or state in which they received their degree.

As alumni associations step into the next decade they will need to identify the programs which best suit the needs of its ever-emerging alumni profile. It is certainly no accident that our nation's top universities have outstanding alumni programs.

Along the way, we must search for excellence in new alumni programs and stubbornly hold the programs that already have reached that plateau.

(With this issue, W. Barry Adams, executive vice president of the Society of the Alumni, begins a regular column in the Gazette.)

Former Secretary Gives $500,000 to College "Miss Pearl" Jones Served Five W&M Presidents

William and Mary has received a half-million-dollar bequest from the estate of Pearl H. Jones, a secretary who served five presidents of the college for a total of 38 years. The gift will benefit the college's Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

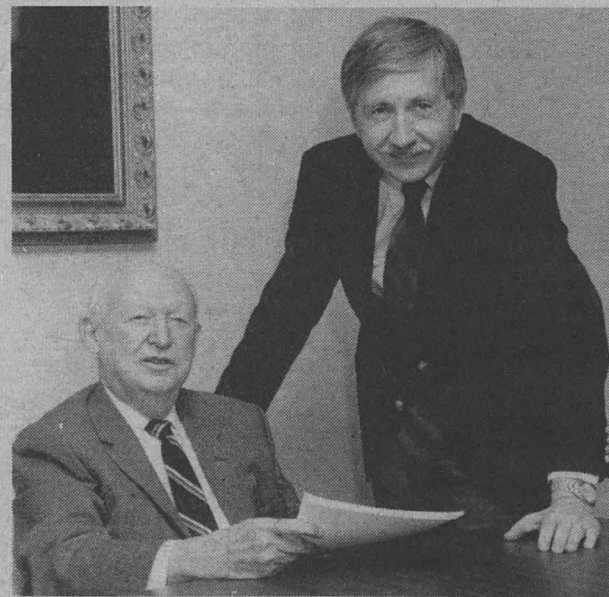

Miss Jones, who died in December 1986 at the age of 94, left in her estate a provision of $500,547 for the purchase of books for the law school library. The gift was made in memory of her brother-in-law, James P. Alexander, and his wife, Grace Virginia Alexander.

The funds were delivered in December to President Paul R. Verkuil '61 and law school Dean Timothy J. Sullivan '66 by President Emeritus Davis Y. Paschall '32, who was in office when Miss Jones retired in 1963, and local attorney C. Harper Anderson '40, 42 B.L., who handled her estate.

Dr. Verkuil said the gift represents "an enormous boost" for the law school. "The Marshall-Wythe School of Law has experienced a tremendous growth in the stature of its programs in recent years," Verkuil said. "This gift will accelerate its rise to new levels of prominence. We will shepherd these funds wisely in keeping with the wishes of the donor.

Miss Jones stayed in Williamsburg in retirement, and Dr. Paschall said he visited her each year at Christmas and Easter at her home on Scotland Street. Only once, he recalled, did she raise the question of giving to the College, and on that occasion he mentioned library resources for the law school as a possibility. Prior to her bequest provision, she has made gifts for student financial aid and faculty support.

Dr. Paschall described Miss Jones as a "prim, Victorian-type lady of culture and refinement. She was not only very punctual and efficient, but also the most 'close-mouthed' person I ever encountered." While she greeted visitors warmly, he recalled, she was very discreet about the work of the president's office.

Miss Jones joined the College staff in 1922 as a secretary in the bursar's office, and in 1925 became secretary to President Julian A. C. Chandler (1919-34). She later served in the same capacity for the entire terms of presidents John Stewart Bryan (1934-42), John Edwin Pomfret (1942-51), and Alvin Duke Chandler (1951-60), and for the first three years of Dr. Paschall's (1960-71).

A native of James City County, Miss Jones lived most of her life in Williamsburg.

A scholar, poet, wife and mother, Mary Thedieck Ewald '42 is author of the critically-acclaimed new book of poetry "Weapons Against Chaos."

Alumna's Poetry Startles With Emotional Power

Mary Ewald '42 Wins Plaudits With "Weapons Against Chaos"

BY LISA HEUVAL '74

Against evil and confusion, a poem is not worthless. People need to think, and they must think in words."

So Richard Wilbur, Pulitzer Prize winner and poet laureate of the United States, wrote in his preface to Weapons Against Chaos, a book of poetry by Mary Thedieck Ewald '42 that has been critically acclaimed. Last October, Jeffrey Hart of the National Review compared her favorably to Frost and Yeats, calling Ewald "a formidably intelligent and learned poet, adventurous in her themes, but the effect of her learning and reason is to startle us with the power of her emotion."

A transplanted Virginian who now lives in Greenwich, Conn., Ewald graduated from the College in three years with the highest grade point average in her class. She earned two teaching degrees at Harvard and was tapped as its first female teaching fellow.

She has been a professor of literature at Wellesley, the University of Maryland and the University of New Hampshire. Hers was the only book of poetry selected by the National Press Club in Washington for its annual 1986 book and author fair.

This alumna, scholar, poet, wife and mother moves gracefully from role to role, blending all of her life's experiences in poetry. In "The Cheetah," she writes:

*I no longer fear what leaves no rack behind,
But rather hate the photograph, the date,
All things that reduce the free into the lined:
I'm like a cheetah chasing what's alive,
Since I know whatever does not move is dead.*

For 10 years, Ewald kept her poetry to herself, giving her first reading of poetry at a Christmas tea in 1982 for her fellow Radcliffe alumnae in Connecticut. "I had always done a little bit with poetry, but I didn't take it seriously," says Ewald. "At graduate school, my whole aim was scholarship, and there's a little bit of difference between that and the creative process. When I had children, there was so much work to do with them — being a mother is more than a 24-hour 365-day-a-year job.

"But I'm not sorry I did that, because nothing is more important than to create good human beings." Ewald and her husband, William Bragg Ewald, are the parents of three sons, all Harvard men. William, the eldest, went on to a junior research fellowship at Oxford University after Harvard Law School and is studying the fields of mathematics, logic and jurisprudence. Charles, their second son, is vice president of Goldman Sachs in New York City and attended Oxford and Stanford Business School. The Ewalds' youngest son, Thomas, graduated from Harvard in June and is working at Barclay's Bank in New York.

Completing the accomplishments of a gifted family are the formidable achievements of Ewald's husband, a scholar, teacher and author himself. William Ewald was President Eisenhower's speechwriter and with his son John, assisted Dwight Eisenhower in writing two volumes of memoirs of his eight years in office.

Her memory of seeing Washington from an airplane at night led Ewald to write this in "Sonnet for Washington, D.C.":

*The Doric columns of Lincoln's marble shrine
Across the calm Potomac waters shine
With Jefferson's, all lives threading the needle
Piercing black velvet in the fading light —
America's city stretches jewelled, necklaced in night.*

Having taught English and humanities at Harvard and written books on Jonathan Swift, early English journalists and the Eisenhower years, William Ewald Sr. is now program director of communication studies for IBM Corporation.

As a teacher herself, Mary Ewald has warm and admiring memories of her undergraduate education. "I can't claim not to know what good literature is," she says, "because I had wonderful training by great teachers, essentially at William and Mary." A crucial foundation course for her graduate work was taught by Grace Warren Landrum, then dean of women at William and Mary.

"She had us read every word of Shakespeare in her two-semester course, also all relevant scholarship. It was an experience of a lifetime. When I went to Harvard to do graduate work, I didn't feel I needed to do any more on Shakespeare."

Landrum and teachers like her, says Ewald, "didn't allow you to graduate from William and Mary without a concept that knowledge was infinite."

Ewald also feels that education should go back to the idea that you can only improve on the past if you know it.

"In art, certain peaks occurred in the past, and you must experience those peaks. Mozart, Michelangelo and Shakespeare give supreme pleasure today, just as they did when they were first produced.

"Life is very short, and people have been around for a long time. It's important for students to learn as quickly as they can the most important things.

"That's the concept of a liberal education. I'm exceedingly grateful to William and Mary for making that possible for me."

As a junior Phi Beta Kappa inductee with the highest scholastic average, Ewald had her first encounter with poet Robert Frost. "At William and Mary in those days, there was a different attitude toward what was proper for a boy or a girl. It was customary for the person with the highest average to give a talk, but they really wanted a boy to do it.

"So they asked me, 'Mary, would you rather deliver a talk or take Robert Frost around campus?' Of course, I wanted to take him around the campus." Despite the presence of his entourage, Ewald and Frost had some time alone. Both quiet types, they didn't say anything until Frost broke the silence by asking her if she wrote poetry.

When Ewald said she did, Frost asked if she would like for him to read some of it. When Ewald turned him down, Frost noted that probably meant her poetry was good and offered again to read it.

Ewald recalls, "I said, 'No sir,' and we were quiet for a while. Then he said, 'Have you ever read any of my poetry?' I said 'Yes, sir.'" When Frost offered to autograph her copy of his poetry, Ewald sought to honor him by running to the bookstore for a pristine edition. But, she says, "As soon as he saw it, I knew I'd done the wrong thing. He was expecting an old, dog-eared book. We were both just trying to do something nice for each other — he did sign it for me."

In her poem "Medicines," Ewald demonstrates her understanding of the darker side of life:

*Better than amphetamines
Beauty lifts the spirits
And makes a full heart sing,
But nothing cracks one's bones
And sets the ears to ring
Than conscious cruelty
More bitter than strychnine.*

"If you don't see the existence of evil, your life is sentimental," says Ewald. "So you have to confront it. But you hope that the fact that you put feelings into words helps to confront it.

"I think that's the secret of literature. Lear is a horrible story, but you come out of Lear feeling ennobled. Shakespeare turns it into something beautiful and controlled, putting it into a framework of glory."

Perhaps most of all, Mary Ewald sees her poetry as reaching mind to mind and heart to heart. "You're sitting in a room with a piece of paper — and until someone reads it, it isn't written."

$3 Million Gift Will Endow International Center

Endowment Honors Memory of Emery Reves

BY HILARY HOLLADAY

When Wendy Reves flew back to France after visiting Williamsburg last December, those associated with William and Mary's Center for International Studies may have expected to see her waving goodbye from Santa's sleigh.

After all, during the course of her visit, the Center went from a fledgling program to a permanently endowed one with the potential for national acclaim. Mrs. Reves left a $3 million commitment in the Center's Christmas stocking. The gift memorializes her late husband Emery Reves, a Hungarian-born financier and publisher with a long-time interest in international peace and world order.

Before her visit, Mrs. Reves did not have any personal ties to the College. A native of Texas now living in France, she became interested in memorializing her husband at William and Mary several years ago due to the encouragement of Williamsburg friends who shared her late husband's altruistic goals. Frank Shatz, a columnist for The Virginia Gazette, and George Tayloe Ross, a retired businessman, had suggested that she visit William and Mary and consider supporting the College's efforts in international studies.

Mrs. Reves said she did a great deal of background research before traveling to William and Mary. She liked what she learned, and, once she was on campus, she also liked what she saw and heard. After announcing her commitment, she said that the Center for International Studies "embodies the spirit of Emery's intellectual interests and ideas. By supporting the center, I am pleased to help William and Mary realize the dream so central to Emery's life and career. And a dream of mine also comes true."

Her endowment will serve as a permanent endowment for all of the center's activities. It will be used to establish a distinguished visiting scholar-in-residence program and to fund academic conferences, library acquisitions, multi-media resources, academic research and scholarships. The endowment will also be used to establish a peace prize recognizing an individual who embodies Emery Reves' writings on international peace.

In February the Board of Visitors approved President Verkuil's recommendation that the center be designated the Wendy and Emery Reves Center for International Studies. He said, "Mrs. Reves' magnificent commitment could not come at a better time for the Center for International Studies. Her support permanently endows the center and paves the way for an academic program of the highest order.

"As more and more students and faculty members seek an international dimension to their educational capabilities, the center must grow in response to that demand. Mrs. Reves' foresight will enable the center to reach its highest goals in international learning, teaching and research," he added.

Professor James A. Bill, director of the center, was equally gratified. He said that the gift is "a giant boost for our program, which seeks to build international understanding through the intensive study of foreign languages, cultures, economies and political systems. It will assist us in the recruitment of bright and interested students, leading scholars and distinguished guest lecturers in the field of international affairs."

The center brings together several programs in one organization. It serves as a coordinating office for the undergraduate interdisciplinary major in international studies, in which students may concentrate in East Asian, Latin American, or Russian/Soviet studies, or in international relations. A minor is offered in African studies, and plans are in the works for concentrations in Middle East Studies and Japanese Studies.

In addition, the center oversees the operation of the university's study abroad programs in France, England, Scotland, West Germany, the Netherlands Antilles, and the People's Republic of China. It is also involved in helping to attract foreign students to campus for exchange programs and full-time enrollment. Tyler Hall is being renovated this year to house both the center's offices and many of the students participating in its programs.

Bolstered by the Reves endowment, Professor Bill is now confidently charting the center's future. "Ten years from now, I hope to have in place an integrated program offering courses that touch on all places in the world. The center will be a beehive of activity. I want to put together exciting and relevant programs."

Last fall, the center sponsored a symposium featuring three ex-hostages whose views on political freedom attracted an audience of 600. A forum on "Violence and Instability in the Middle East" was held in January, and a lecture series established by George Tayloe Ross will begin later in the spring.

Bill added that he is especially eager to take advantage of the strengths inherent to William and Mary's location between Washington, D.C., and Hampton Roads. "I want to have the community intimately involved in what we do. There is tremendous expertise in international relations in this part of the country. There are interested and interesting people with a wealth of experience that have much to offer us," he said, citing the large population of retired military personnel in the region.

A native of Marshall, Tex., Mrs. Reves moved to New York City where she became one of New York's most successful fashion models. She worked for the John Robert Powers agency, making $25 an hour, five times the standard modeling fee. She met Emery Reves in 1945, and they left the United States together in 1949. In 1953, they purchased and restored a villa on the French Riviera, where they entertained Winston Churchill, Charles de Gaulle, Konrad Adenauer, Greta Garbo, Noel Coward and Somerset Maugham.

In his day, Emery Reves attracted a great deal of attention on his own. A naturalized British citizen, he made a fortune investing in European industry after World War II. He was also founder and president of the Cooperation Press Service and Cooperation Publishing Company, an international syndicate publishing the views of leading statesmen. Before World War II, the syndicate's articles appeared in 400 newspapers daily.

Reves, who held a doctoral degree in political economy from the University of Zurich, was the author of A Democratic Manifesto (1942) and The Anatomy of Peace (1945). The latter book, publicly praised by Albert Einstein and Thomas Mann, was translated into 25 languages and became an international best seller. Reves was nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize in 1950.

Integral to the couple's life at La Pausa, built in 1927 by the Duke of Westminster for Coco Chanel, was their passion for art. Through their years together, they amassed a collection of more than 1,400 paintings, drawings, sculptures and examples of the decorative arts. The collection included pieces by Monet, Degas, Rodin, Manet and van Gogh, among others. After Reves died in 1981, Mrs. Reves donated art and furnishings valued at $35 million to the Dallas Museum of Art. The museum built a six-room, partial facsimile of the Reves villa to house the collection. The new wing opened to the public in 1985.

Now under renovation, Tyler Hall will be the new home of the Wendy and Emery Reves Center for International Studies.

Iranian Specialist Ready for Center Challenge

Dr. James Bill Assumes Leadership of Center for International Studies

James A. Bill is the Class of 1935 Professor of Government and director of the Center for International Studies at William and Mary. A specialist on Iran, which he has visited several times, his latest book, The Eagle and the Lion, will be published this month.

Late one night in November 1978, Jim Bill stepped off a plane in Tehran. A dark mood permeated Mehrabad Airport: revolution against the Shah's regime was imminent, and crowds in the airport bristled with anti-Americanism. Though he had come only to observe the political upheaval, Bill knew that his nationality alone was cause for anger among Iranians.

While most Americans, in fact, were packing up and leaving Iran as fast as they could, Professor James A. Bill was planning to settle in and stay for a while. A student of Iranian society and politics since 1961, he wanted to watch his own prediction come true. In a paper presented in Washington nine months earlier, he had warned that Iran was ripe for revolution and that "the American future in Iran can in no way be considered bright." Thus he risked his life in order to watch the next stage of Iran's history unfold.

"I watched a country explode from within. I lived with Iranian friends in their home behind a gas station in southeast Tehran. There I had the rare opportunity to see the timbers of a government crack and crumble," he says, his voice taking on a note of drama as he remembers the two-week stay he describes as "a harrowing adventure."

Last July, he was appointed William and Mary's Class of 1935 Professor of Government and the director of the Center for International Studies. In addition to teaching and directing current programs in international studies, he is charged with shaping the future of the new Center, recently endowed by a $3 million commitment from Wendy Reves. (See opposite page).

A native of Wisconsin, Bill says he is probably "the only Wisconsin country boy who speaks Persian." His blue eyes light up with enthusiasm when he talks about his adventures in the Middle East. Though he has had machine guns waved in his face, he has grown fond of the Iranian people. He says they have been friendly to him over the years and that they are characteristically generous and hospitable. This spring he plans to travel to Iran again.

Dr. Bill began his academic career on a basketball and baseball scholarship at Assumption College in Worcester, Mass., where an injury during basketball season forced him to spend more time studying than dribbling. Though he continued to "hobble around" the baseball diamond, he concentrated mostly on his studies and graduated in 1961 as class valedictorian. Then he enrolled in Pennsylvania State University's graduate program in political science.

At Penn State he found his niche as a Middle East specialist if not completely by accident, then at least not by deliberate choice. During a seminar in International Relations, the professor listed a dozen countries on the blackboard and asked each student to pick a country and write a paper about its international politics. Bill's heart sank as, one by one, the other students made their choices. The last to select a paper topic, he ended up with Iran by default.

Thus began his abiding fascination with the countries and cultures of the entire region. After completing his master's degree at Penn State, Bill took his growing curiosity about the Middle East to Princeton University where he earned a second master's degree and a Ph.D. He got married midway through his graduate studies and, in a move that would probably surprise even the most jaded travel agent, the couple headed to Iran on their honeymoon.

From Europe, Bill and his wife, Ann Marie, traveled by train to Iran. Trundling along in the company of chickens, goats and Iranian peasants, they arrived in Tehran on a bus. It was the beginning of a thorough immersion in the sights, sounds and smells of Iranian culture. Since then, Bill has been back half a dozen times, the most recent trip occurring at the onset of the revolution.

Before coming to William and Mary, Bill was a member of the government department at the University of Texas for 19 years. He has lectured at universities across the country and is frequently consulted by the national news media. His views on foreign affairs have appeared in The Wall Street Journal, Time and Newsweek, among other publications, and he has appeared with Walter Cronkite and Mike Wallace on CBS news specials about Iran.

Knowing a country inside-out is vital to any kind of political or historical research, he maintains. "Fly-ins and excursions through capital cities simply won't do it. Reports and books and maps aren't enough either. You have to understand countries at the gut level as well as the brain level."

His gut-level knowledge of the Middle East has helped him write five books and numerous articles about the politically troubled region. He believes that The Eagle and the Lion, which will be published this month by Yale University Press, is his most important book to date. Over a decade of research went into the 544-page volume in which he explores the political relations between the U.S. and Iran and recommends ways the U.S. can improve its policy in the Middle East. He declares that the Iran-Contra operation commandeered by Lt. Col. Oliver North was "an international embarrassment," but the U.S. government's goal of reopening communication lines with Iran was sound. The situation, he says, can be summarized as a case of the wrong people taking the wrong actions in order to achieve the right goal.

In 1966, Professor Bill, who has studied Iran since he was an undergraduate at Penn State, is pictured in a Turkoman tent in northern Iran with two tribal leaders in 1966.

He stresses that "America's future and fate are intrinsically tied up with the Middle East. Iran is the major piece of real estate separating the Soviet Union from the Persian Gulf. And the Persian Gulf is where the superpowers stand eyeball-to-eyeball. If there's going to be a World War III, there's a good chance it could develop out of the Persian Gulf.

"We badly need to be educated and be sensitive to the Middle East. Americans tend to underestimate these people and to consider them uncivilized and unsophisticated. But their history goes back thousands of years. They've seen it all. We cannot afford to misread these people."

After nearly two decades of campaigning against the misreading of the Middle East at the University of Texas, he says he was ready for the new challenge which William and Mary's Center for International Studies offered him. When he visited the College last spring, he says, "I was deeply impressed by the vision and enthusiasm of the administrative leadership, particularly the president and provost. There was a sense of excitement when I came here. This was a university on the move."

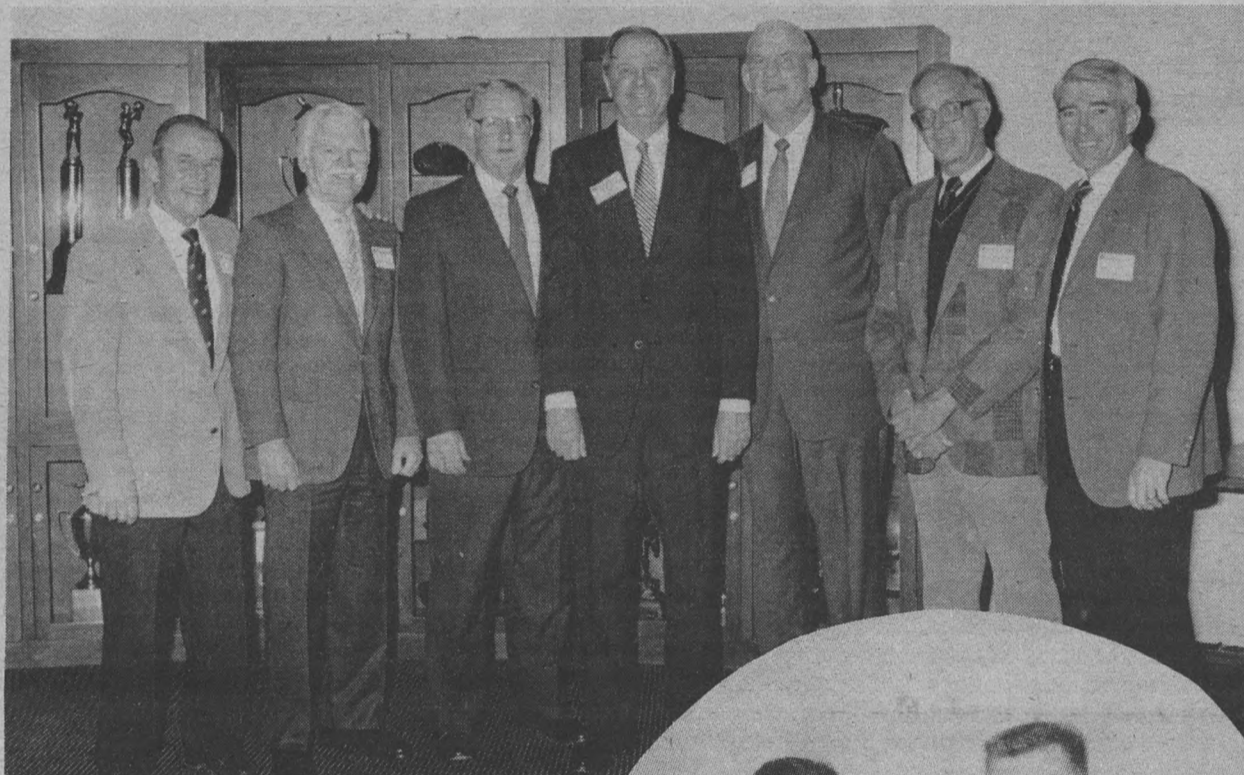

He adds that he was also impressed by the faculty's "spirit of civility, competence and concern for the education of students. I very much appreciate William and Mary's commitment to teaching and to undergraduates."

Along with directing the Center, teaching a course in Middle East political systems and traveling to Iran and Europe, Bill plans to present lectures this semester at half a dozen universities and participate in book-signing gatherings in Washington, D.C., Texas and Williamsburg.

He says he thrives on his admittedly hectic schedule. "I work all the time, seven days a week. But it's not really work. It's fun, even exhilarating."

BY BOB JEFFREY '74

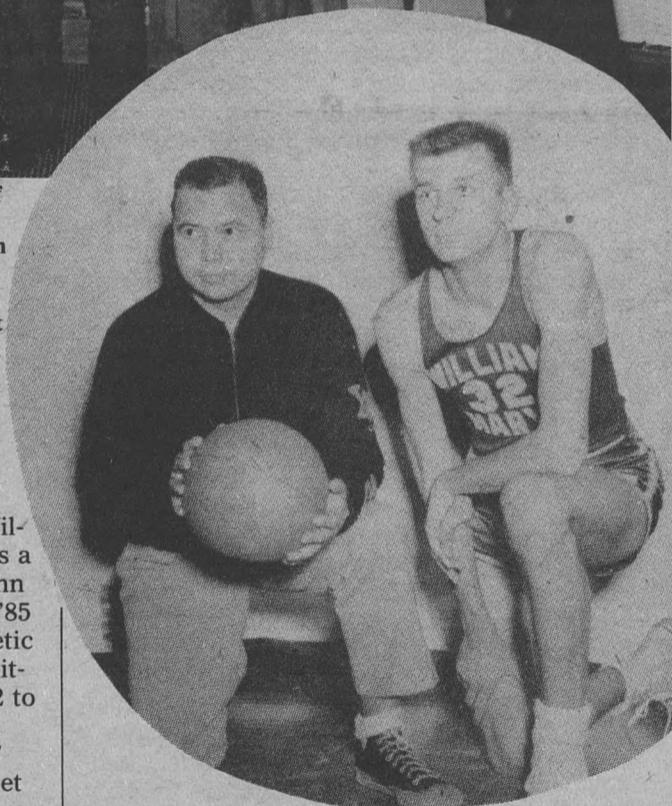

Chet Giermak '50 (center) gathered with some of his old teammates at William and Mary on Jan. 23 at a ceremony retiring Giermak's jersey, No. 32. From left to right are the Jere Bunting '50, Harry Hilling '51, Bill Roughton '50, (Giermak), Dick Forrest '52, Wray Sherman '50 and Peery "Bitsy" Lewis '51. At right in a photo from the 1949 Colonial Echo Giermak kneels with Coach Barney Wilson. During the 1948-49 season Giermak led the nation in points with 740 (21.8 points per game), and the Tribe compiled one of its best records in history with 24 wins.

Retiring the numbers and jerseys of William and Mary basketball players is a recent idea. Until this year only John Lowenhaupt '78 and Keith Cieplicki '85 had been so honored. When the athletic department's special awards committee decided to add the jersey of old number 32 to that hallowed list, the reaction from long-time Tribe fans was an emphatic, "It's about time."

For the uninitiated, number 32 belonged to Chet Giermak, probably the greatest basketball player who ever graced the court at William and Mary. During his four years at the College (1946-50), Giermak and his teammates brought the sport out of the shadows and into the spotlight of national attention.

After almost 40 years no William and Mary player has surpassed Giermak statistically or in legend. The self-described "skinny Polish kid from Chicago" is still the Tribe's all-time leading scorer with 2,032 points. In 1948-49, Giermak led the nation in scoring with 21.8 points a game and 740 total points. He was named to All-America teams in his junior and senior seasons, sharing company with basketball immortals like Bob Cousy and Alex Groza.

Better yet, from Giermak's point of view, William and Mary's hoop squad attained its best marks ever, recording 24 wins in 1948-49 and 23 in 1949-50. Overall during Giermak's career, the Tribe won 74 contests and lost 41, while playing in the tough Southern Conference, which at the time included heavyweights like North Carolina, North Carolina State, Duke, Wake Forest, Virginia and Maryland.

But Giermak is not merely one of William and Mary's most illustrious athletes. In the years since graduation he has become one of the College's finest representatives in the world of business. As president and CEO of Eriez Magnetics in Erie, Pa., Giermak oversees one of the world's largest producers of magnets, with six wholly owned foreign subsidiaries and sales offices around the world.

Known as a "people-oriented company," Eriez reflects Giermak's personality and unique management style. The company's 300 employees are all on a first-name basis with the boss, all on salary and share in the company's profits. The conference tables in the plant are round, to avoid projecting an us-vs.-them syndrome between management and labor.

"Our policy here is simple," said Giermak. "It's called the Golden Rule. We try to treat people the way we'd like to be treated," he said.

Giermak's service to the College has been unsurpassed. He has served as the chairman of the Annual Fund in 1984-85, on the President's Council, the Alumni Society's board of directors, and the Order of the White Jacket's board of directors.

And what can you say about the loyalty and school spirit of a man who named his first child "William," and his next one "Mary." "We were fortunate the second one was a girl," Giermak joked. He is also lucky that his wife, the former Dorothy Podorsky, is as crazy about the College as Giermak himself is.

In fact, all four of the Giermak offspring graduated from the College: William '73, Mary Lou '75, Patricia '77 and Lynn '86.

But for a lucky twist of fate, Giermak might never have attended the College. William and Mary's tennis coach in the mid-1940s, Dr. Sharvey Umbeck happened to be scouting a prospect at Giermak's high school in Chicago when he witnessed Giermak's exploits on the hardwood. As Giermak recalled, "Dr. Umbeck suggested to me that when I got out of the service, I ought to come on down to William and Mary. There was no scholarship involved. So when I arrived in Williamsburg, it was really sight unseen, on both sides."

Despite his size and skills, Giermak was unsure he would make the varsity team as a freshman. Again fate took a hand. An upperclassman named John Jorgenson, another Chicagoan, took the youngster under his wing.

"I was just a skinny freshman trying to make an impression on the coaches," said Giermak. "John had played at DePaul with George Mikan, and because of his experience, the coaches listened to him and I was selected," he said.

Ironically, Jorgenson got hurt at midseason and dropped out, paving the way for Giermak's elevation to the starting role at center.

The 6'6", 165-pounder gained renown as one of the first, if not the very first, to make extensive use of the hook shot. "I don't know exactly how it developed, but I had to play center and I needed a shot that the bigger fellows couldn't block," said Giermak. "So I worked on it until it became so natural that I felt comfortable shooting it anywhere from the foul line on in," he said.

Under the tutelage of Barney Wilson, W&M became a potent force in the regional hoops. Against a North Carolina State team ranked in the top five nationally, the Tribe pulled off a 54-50 upset in 1950. On one occasion the Tribe rallied from a 10-point deficit in the final minute to nip Wake Forest. In another contest Giermak poured in 45 points, singlehandedly outscoring the entire University of Baltimore team by 17 points.

Many veteran Tribe boosters remember what may have been Giermak's most valiant moment, a 36-point performance in a 78-74 triple-overtime loss to George Washington in the semi-finals of the 1949 Southern Conference tournament. The game was cited by sportwriters of the day as "the greatest game ever played in the Southern Conference." Though he finally was forced to the sidelines with muscle cramps, for his supreme effort Giermak was named the tournament MVP.

When former teammates, friends and family gathered at the Person Room in W&M Hall to honor Chester Giermak prior to the half-time ceremonies on Jan. 23, 1988, lighthearted quips alternated with sincere tributes.

Peery Brittain "Bitsy" Lewis '51, a defensive specialist, recalled the team's unusual practice regimen. "At one end of the court Chet practiced shooting. At the other end, the rest of us practiced running backwards," he laughed.

Jere Bunting '50, the team's point guard, chimed in, "Our coach, Barney Wilson, tried to teach us right out of (Kentucky coach) Adolph Rupp's playbook. But when the going got tough, we'd just say, 'Get the ball to Chet.'"

Giermak's response to the honor was to spread the tribute among his teammates. "We achieved a lot against a tough schedule and with players, who for the most part, weren't on scholarship. This recognition is for that whole group of guys who did so much to initiate good basketball at William and Mary and in the state of Virginia," he said.

When Chester Giermak walked to center court at half-time, he received a standing ovation from the crowd, many of whom weren't yet born when his last hook shot swished through the net at Blow Gym.

Indeed it was a long time coming. But as number 32 ascended into the firmament of William and Mary Hall, one had to think that maybe it was worth the wait.

Eight Named to Athletic Hall of Fame

Tribe Greats Honored for Contributions to William and Mary

BY MARTY BENSON

Eight alumni, ranging from the class of 1948 to the class of 1973, have been inducted into William and Mary's Athletic Hall of Fame.

Honored at halftime of the William and Mary-Richmond basketball game on Jan. 30, they are Martha A. Adams '48, James R. Kaplan '57, B. David Kurland and Robert W. Stoy, both members of the class of 1961, Robert C. Herb '71, Charles J. Strode '72, David R. Knight '73 and Donald C. Fergusson '75.

Adams was an all-around athlete, spending four years on the swimming and basketball teams.

Before retiring in 1987, Adams spent 25 years at Penn State University actively involved in the Faculty Senate, holding positions of Chair of Curricular Affairs, Chair of the Commission on Committees, Rules and Elections Secretary, and Senate Council. She is a member of the National Association for Physical Education in Higher Education, chair of the Eastern Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics for women, and liaison to the AIAW and HAGWS Executive Boards.

Like Adams, Knight also earned the most recognition after he left Williamsburg, although he also attained national prominence as a collegiate wide receiver. An honorable-mention All-America player in 1973, he was the New York Jets' 11th-round draft pick that year. Knight had his best year in 1974, finishing ninth in receptions in the American Football conference.

Success has followed Knight since graduation. He now works as a systems analyst for the Department of Justice.

Herb was an All-American center for the football team in 1970, when he snapped the ball for current head coach Jimmie Laycock '70.

In addition to serving as a co-captain as a senior, Herb was All-Southern Conference for the third straight year and won the Jacobs Blocking Trophy recipient. He also helped lead the Tribe to the Tangerine Bowl.

Still involved in football, Herb has served as head football coach at Oakton High School in Vienna, Va., for the last five years.

Stoy was a two-sport athlete (baseball and football) at the College, but he gained his notoriety on the gridiron. The quarterback was runner-up in Player of the Nation balloting in 1960, finishing behind Richie Pettibon, now an assistant coach for the Washington Redskins. His success came as no surprise to anyone who had read a feature on Stoy in the Saturday Evening Post two years prior, tagging him as the most promising young player to watch in the Southern Conference. His most memorable game came in 1958 when, in his first start, he engineered an upset of nationally-ranked North Carolina State, led by future professional star Roman Gabriel.

The Tribe star had contacts from a few professional teams following graduation, but fulfilled a military obligation instead. He is presently vice-president at George Washington Junior High School.

Fergusson still holds the William and Mary gymnastics record for highest score on the high bar (9.45). In his final two years at the College, the high-bar specialist was undefeated in his event. He also helped lead the Tribe to the first of head coach Cliff Gauthier's ongoing string of 13 consecutive state championships.

A successful businessman, Fergusson is president of his family's company, Rust-Oleum, which his grandfather founded in the 1920's.

A basketball and track star at William and Mary, Kaplan averaged 13.6 points per game as a senior cager in 1957, including a school record 35 points in a game against VMI that same year.

After graduating in 1957, the former student-athlete was commissioned 2nd Lt. in the U.S. Army and in 1960 was promoted to the 1st Lt. Missile Officer at the Nike Hercules Missile Site in Los Angeles.

After retiring from the service, Kaplan joined Cornell-Dubiller Electronics, a company he eventually became president of in 1978, then purchased in 1983. CDE now has plants in Taiwan, Calif., Mexico, North Carolina, and Massachusetts, with the corporate headquarters in Wayne, N.J.

Also a successful businessman after graduation, Kurland, became senior vice-president of Connecticut Bank and Trust in 1984 after 20 years of service. He started his own bank, Community National, in 1985.

While at William and Mary, Kurland was a standout competitor and team leader of the swimming team for four years. He was team co-captain in 1961 and held various school records throughout his career.

Strode reached his athletic heights pole-vaulting for the Tribe. He won four state titles, four Southern Conference titles, placed ninth in the finals of the NCAA pole vault in 1972 and after 15 years still holds the Southern Conference and school record in the event with a mark of 16-6. In addition, he placed second at the prestigious Penn Relays as a senior.

Now a successful CPA in Clemons, N.C., Strode, like all of the inductees, said his college experience in athletics helped him greatly in life and also offered a bit of advice.

"Student-athletes should concentrate on academics, but also pursue their dream in athletics. Don't ever look back and say 'I wish I had.'"

All of the inductees are looking back now, but certainly not with regrets. Just some well-earned pride.

and prior years

An interesting letter from Etta Belle Walker Northington '24 serves to straighten out our thinking pertaining to this column. She says, in effect, that instead of news from classmates, we should expect reflections. Octogenarians are not going anywhere, they have been.

In this vein, Etta Belle referred to a book, The Closing of the American Mind by Allan Bloom, in which the author deplores the abandonment of the humanities in university teaching. It stirred reflections of her own experiences at William and Mary. Dr. Chandler suggested she study Greek against the probability of failing physics or mathematics. As a result, Dr. Gelsinger inculcated a strong desire to study the language and the philosophers as well. Dr. Geiger brought this interest into full flower. Etta Belle was fearful of Dr. Hall, however, and did not take a class under him, whereas, her husband, Orville '24, sat at the doctor's feet.

The big happening of the past year, was the celebration in June of Etta Belle's 85th birthday and the Northingtons' 60th wedding anniversary. Congratulations!

Just to shatter our conclusions about what we should expect as news from classmates, two reported they not only have been but are still going. Elizabeth Palmer Thompson attended a celebration in Independence, Mo., honoring a school named after her parents, both of whom had taught in Independence for many years. Harry Truman and his wife, Bess, were students of the Palmers.

Elizabeth advised us she had also signed on for a Christmas cruise on the Mississippi Queen. That should be fun.

Our other wanderer was Hilda Stephenson Woodall. Hilda has a thing going about South Norfolk, Va., and they respond the same way to her. She taught in the high school there for 10 years until her marriage. For 10 years now, those classes successively have celebrated the 50th anniversary of their graduations and each one has invited Hilda to attend. Last year saw the 50th for the class of '37, and Hilda was there. It was a great affair. Hilda reported being a little shaken and "done in" upon her return home.

Williamsburg — Jan. 1926: The College reported that 1,100 students registered for second term, a new high. Swanson Smith visited the campus following his recent election to the Virginia State Legislature.

As I write this, 1988 is one day old. May the succeeding days during the year be blessed ones for each of you.

Just after mailing the last "Class Notes," a nice letter arrived from Dorothy Bundy Turner. She lives in Waynesboro and has been a widow for 13 years. Her grandson Edmund Potter, is a shining light in her life. In 1987 he became an Eagle Scout and graduated from Virginia Episcopal School. He is now an exchange student at Rugby in England and has been accepted at William and Mary.

Received grand letters or notes from several classmates. Walter Albert Porter, who Miss Weeks discouraged from being a teacher, became a doctor and settled in Hillsville. He married Virginia Lee McMillan, had two daughters, and built a nice home in which his family lived for 50 years. He has sold the house "to seek smaller quarters."

Walter has been an active participant in a variety of professional and social affairs. He was county coroner, jail physician, county doctor and is still county medical examiner. He has been president of the Southwest Virginia Medical Society and served on councils and committees of the Virginia Medical Society, but he refused to run for president-elect. He has also been state president of the Sons of the American Revolution (S.A.R.), surgeon-general of the National S.A.R., grand patron of the Virginia Order of the Eastern Star, grand master of the state Masons, the chairman and president of the local bank and, for 40 years, was an elder in the Presbyterian Church.

Walter pleasantly recalled the happy years at William and Mary. Don't we all?

Ruth James Turner, the pianist of our class, still lives in Atlanta where her two children and their families also live. She and her two sisters had a lovely trip to New England in October at the height of the gorgeous colors of the maple trees. She wrote that her sister Leah '26, had a successful knee operation and now "gets around wonderfully — doesn't miss a trick."

Raymond T. Driscoll sent a copy of an interesting item he cut from a 1927 newspaper. In bold headlines it announced, "Scandal Sheet Withdrawn from Sale at William and Mary." The article stated that The Scalper, which was printed in bright red ink on yellow paper, contained jibes aimed at a number of students, fraternities and clubs. Because of the objection of College authorities, it was quickly withdrawn from sale, but not before several hundred copies had been sold. Wonder how many of you remember it?

Raymond wrote that he was in a drug store when Dr. J. A. C. came in to question one of the owners concerning the origin of The Scalper, but that he didn't remain to hear the outcome. Wish he had so he could tell us the "gory" details. Raymond retired in 1971, is a guest worker at the Bureau of Standards, does a little gardening, and is "trying to maintain."

Rose Mountcastle Flannery, with her husband, Vern, has traveled "all over the world" in the last 30 years. Last June they revisited Hong Kong, China, South Korea and Japan. On the Royal Viking Star, they had a 15-day cruise along the China coast, visited the principal cities along the way and then drove overland to the Great Wall, which she climbed. They now plan cruises up the Amazon River and to the South Sea Islands. When not on the move, they continue to spend their winters in Mesa, Ariz., and summers in Provo, Utah — "the best of two worlds." In November she was anticipating a three-week visit in Dallas with her daughter's family.

To the above five classmates go my heartfelt thanks for their grand letters. It was wonderful to have heard from each one.

From the Alumni Office came three welcomed and appreciated notes. In October Pomona College celebrated its centennial and Elizabeth Lam Vieg, representing William and Mary, proudly marched "third in line . . . behind the delegates from Loxford (1249) and Harvard (1636) . . . with the green and gold of our alma mater's hood hanging over her academic robe." Her husband, John, who taught at Pomona for 26 years, represented the University of Chicago. They shared the event, but Elizabeth marched ahead of him.

Active in church work (sings in the choir), the Women's Club and bridge clubs, Ellen Jordan Glasscock stays busy. Says she's fine, only slower. She enjoys her friends and family — is expecting her son Harry for a Christmas visit — and finds that "it's not so bad to be 80." Hope that's true with the others in our class.

Dorothy Broughton Brennan has been occupied with church and club activities this past year. A cousin of hers is a junior at W&M and lives in Jefferson Hall as did Dorothy her junior year.

Christmas cards brought a bit of news. John Branch Dauba Green and wife, Betsy '29, continue to look after each other and are doing a good job of it. George Whitley and wife, Edna, have moved from Falls Church to Richmond.

Shelton Baker '26 and his wife haven't been well, but he didn't mention it on his Christmas card. Hope it is an indication that they are better.

The class of 1928 has a 60th anniversary invitation. Malvern Omohondro wrote that he and Bob (Robert Randolph) Jones will be glad to furnish the refreshments for "a little get together for our 60th reunion on Olde Guard Day" in the spring. Come join them. Malvern and his wife plan to go to Barbadoes for January, February and March. A grand place to be during the winter months.

Elizabeth Lanier '30 and I had a delightful time on the W&M Danube cruise. For more details see Elizabeth's class notes.

Hope to see many of you at the Olde Guard luncheon in the spring.

Alumni College 1988

June 9-12

Alumni College 1988 will focus on the 300th anniversary of King William and Queen Mary's accession to the throne of Great Britain and the unique royal heritage of our alma mater.

The Alumni College will feature an excellent academic program spotlighting outstanding members of the College's faculty. Lectures, special events, and activities will focus on various aspects of the reign of William and Mary including the literary, religious and political thought and influences of the period. Classes will take place in the Wren Building.

Special activities will include evening dinners and a special evening program of Baroque music presented at Bruton Parish Church by members of the music faculty as well as a special banquet in the Great Hall of the Wren Building. A special tour of the DeWitt Wallace Decorative Arts Gallery in Colonial Williamsburg is also planned.

The cost per person is $275.00. This includes accommodations in air-conditioned residence halls, lectures, tuition, special events and meals.

Plan today to come to Williamsburg for an enlightening and inspiring experience, and renew your ties to our Alma Mater through the Alumni College 1988.

For a detailed brochure and reservation form contact: Diane Hagemann, Alumni College, Society of the Alumni, P.O. Box 60, Williamsburg, VA 23187, or call Mrs. Hagemann at 804-229-1693 or 804-253-4302.

ANTHROPOLOGY PROFESSOR TO VISIT PAKISTAN

Rita Wright, assistant professor of anthropology at William and Mary, will be part of a team of scientists excavating at the site of Harappa in West Pakistan, a city in the Indus Valley. The excavations are supported by the Smithsonian Institution and the University of California, Berkeley. Beginning this spring, the project will include scholars from a number of American universities as well as students and scholars from Pakistan. Professor Wright has carried out field work in Pakistan in 1980, 1981, 1982 and 1984.

JOYCE VAN TASSEL-BASKA NAMED SMITH PROFESSOR

Joyce VanTassel-Baska, a former faculty member at Northwestern University's School of Education, where she was director of the Center for Talent Development, has joined William and Mary's School of Education as the Jody and Layton Smith Professor of Gifted Education. Professor VanTassel-Baska has co-authored three books on the subject of gifted learners, has contributed chapters to numerous scholarly works and has written dozens of juried articles and monographs. Since 1974 she has been principal investigator on seven projects totaling nearly one million dollars in grants. She received her bachelor's, master's and Ph. D. degrees in education from the University of Toledo.

Notes from Ed:

Hi! I have more news than usual so thanks to those who communicated. I wish, however, that more of you would let us hear about what's going on. It was great seeing those of you who attended the Olde Guard luncheon on Friday of Homecoming Weekend.

Bernie and I had the privilege of dining with Mitt White and his wife, Evelyn, on that occasion. It was the first time that Mitt had been present for several years. In talking with Evelyn I found that she had graduated from the University of Maryland, the same institution from which I received my graduate degree.

It was great to see Bill Halpern from California. He had not been back to the College since he graduated. He has practiced law during the years. He was visiting his brother Norris, also one of our classmates. Norris and his wife, Fay, regularly attend Homecoming events.

I was also delighted to see Phyllis Cornell and two of her lovely daughters. Phyllis and Albert were regular attendants at Homecoming during his lifetime. Albert was very liberal in his contributions to the College.

Richard "Dick" Jones and his wife, Ruth, stopped by our home for a visit, but we were away. Sorry to miss you, but try again.

Lawrence Brewster, a professor of history at East Carolina University, has been reelected historiographer of the Episcopal Diocese of Eastern Carolina. Lawrence was one of our studious class members, a Phi Beta Kappa.

I received a note from Leroy Ober in October stating that he had recently visited the Trapp Family Lodge in Ottawa, Canada. He further says, "I am still in the estate consulting field and manage to keep up my tennis." He was on the College team. Best of all he said, "I just want to let you know we appreciate your efforts on our behalf." Thanks, Leroy.

I received a Christmas card from Truman Welling, who was very active in dramatics during his college days. It was good to be remembered, Truman.

I also received Christmas cards from Sam Hurley and Faye LeCompte. Sam lives in Richmond and Fay in Portsmouth. The three of us are natives of Middlesex County, but each of us graduated from different high schools. Middlesex is a small county but there were 20 of us from there attending the College during the 1927-28 session.

We regret to hear of the passing of two of our classmates: Walter Blake in June 1985 and Waring Tribble this past fall. We extend our sympathy to both families.

Olde Guard Day for 1988 is April 16, so make plans to join us at that time as guest of the College. This event gets bigger and better each year, so make an extra effort to attend while you are still able to generate some power.

See you.

Notes from Betty:

Happy New Year to all of you. We do hope you will start the year right by sending us some news about yourself and your family.

The attendance of our class members at Homecoming this year was smaller than usual. We missed some of the "old faithfuls." Among those we did see were Eleanor Williamson James, Frances Griffin Waters, Milton White, Ed Trice and your reporter. The only news we gleaned from them is that Frances Griffin Waters' grandson is a student at the College this year. We know that pleases her.

Recently we had a note from Sue Cornick Barlow, who is settled in Fallbrook, Calif., now. Since she seldom gets back to Virginia these days, she does enjoy reading about her classmates in The Gazette. So please send us some news to keep Sue happy.

Mary Edgar Calcotte keeps us up to date about her many activities. She had a great trip to England in the latter part of the summer; she visited her family's ancestral home. She learned much about her English and Scot ancestors and had the pleasure of meeting some of her English kin.

Recently Mary received recognition for having served the International Extension Homemakers for 50 years. The city of Chesapeake has also recognized Mary for her many hours of volunteer work with nursing home patients in the area. She leads a group of volunteer singers and musicians who entertain shut-ins. The Virginian Pilot devoted a whole page to a feature story about Mary's group of senior singers and musicians.

Mary is still writing music and poetry and has had some of her poetry published. She attended the Tidewater Writers' Conference and entered in the writers' competition.

We received Christmas letters from Louise White Johnson and Lucy May Boswell Crymble. Louise spent the holidays in Raleigh with her two daughters and grandchildren. Her son and his family joined them for Christmas day. All are well.

Lucy May is fortunate in having a son and his family living in Kingsport as well as a brother and his family not far away in Bristol. Her eldest grandson graduated from Emory University this past June. Lucy keeps busy with many local activities.

This fall your reporter and 18 other William and Mary Alumni had a great trip cruising on the Black Sea and up the Danube River. From Istanbul to Vienna, we enjoyed ports-of-call in four other countries along the route. This was our eighth William and Mary-sponsored trip, and we think it was one of the best. Not only was the itinerary and the cruise on a U.S.S.R. ship most interesting, but also the fellowship among the William and Mary Alumni was very warm and cordial.

At the December meeting of the Olde Guard Council, it was decided to collect interesting stories about the College and the students "in our day." These will be published and offered for sale. You are asked to send any recollections you may have by Feb. 15 (if possible) to: Mrs. Lota Spence Reid, Chairman; 5701 Williamsburg Landing Drive, No. 15; Williamsburg, VA 23185.

Another new year and the good news from the class of '32 is the multi-million-dollar estate bequest to the College to endow the new Center for Honors and Interdisciplinary Studies by Roy Charles. It was reported in The Richmond Times Dispatch, Sept. 29, 1987. President Paul Verkuil '61 is asking that the center be named the Roy R. Charles Center and the new professorships as the Charles Fellows.

Roy was an executive director in the Smith Douglas Fertilizer Company from 1932 until 1965. He is president of Property Development Corporation and is owner and president of Crestwood Company, Inc., and Crestwood Housing Company of Norfolk.

He was presented the 1981 Distinguished Service Medal by the Cosmopolitan Club of Norfolk. He served as a member of the William and Mary Board of Visitors from 1952 until 1960, and he received the Alumni Medallion for services and loyalty in 1961 and an honorary Doctor of Laws degree in 1975.

Davis Y. Paschall, the 23rd president of William and Mary, has been appointed to the commission on the Tercentenary Observance of the College. Governor Baliles established a 34-member commission to plan the anniversary of the founding of the second oldest college in America.

It was a joy to hear from Frances and Vernon Tillar from Lawrenceville and Elizabeth and Brooks George from Richmond during the holidays.

I found an old friend in the Southside area William and Mary alumni group. They held their fall meeting in Farmville. Helen Thomas Callius '33 was there. It has been over 50 years since I have seen her.

Anna K. Weatherford and Betty '58 and Bill '57 Armbruster were with us at the meeting. The director of the Muscarelle Museum of Art at the College, Mark M. Johnson, discussed the newest addition to the museum, recent art acquisitions and upcoming exhibitions.

Anna K's sister Dorothy Dunlap '33 passed away and was buried Jan. 10. Our deepest sympathy to the family.

My family is most pleased. Our grandson Timothy Bradshaw has been accepted for early admission to William and Mary in the fall.

Have a good year and write to me with the news.

Your new class reporter will find it difficult to replace Dorothy Ford, who did such an excellent job. We shall miss her.

I was unable to attend Homecoming this year because of a date with the hospital. I am now fully recovered and back playing golf.

Emil Johnson, my assistant reporter, advised me that only a few attended Homecoming. Our goal next year will be to do a better job.

Elizabeth Leland Mason attended the graduation ceremonies at Randolph Macon when her oldest grandson received a B.A. in economics and business.

Robert Carrington Vaden Jr. is a member of the board of trustees for the public library of Gretna.

Frances Spindle Harris is recuperating from an illness. She enjoys the Gazette news and particularly the notes from the class of '34.

Howard Scammon is quoted by the Virginian Pilot and the Ledger Star: "The play is still the thing and the director loves them all." This quote followed the opening in June of the Shakespeare by the Sea's production of "Julius Caesar."

Rita Moreno was one of the stars appearing in the above play.

Marian Holl is now residing at Williamsburg Landing with other W&M alumni.

Nov. 21 was a cold day but how sweet it was — Final score: W&M, 20; U of R, 7.

Dear Classmate:

Here's a new news reporter for the class of 1936.

We have had our 50th reunion, but that is not a reason to stop commenting on noteworthy happenings in our lives. Will each of you let us hear from you this year? We deserve to share with each other as well as with members of other classes.

Former Governor of Virginia Mills E. Godwin Jr. has been named to the 34-member Commission on the Tercentennial Observance of the College of William and Mary in Virginia. Retired U.S. Chief Justice Warren E. Burger heads the commission, which has been formed to insure that the 300th anniversary of the founding of the second oldest college in America is appropriately commemorated.

Louise and Bill Fritsch are fully retired on Whiskey Creek, Fort Myers, Fla., and enjoying life in their 70s. The welcome mat is always out for William and Mary alumni!

Professor Margaret M. Sheahan has been doing volunteer work for over 15 years. She lectures to colleges, clubs, churches and to various other groups on the "Wonders of the World" and always includes some slides of William and Mary! Professor Sheahan publicized and attended the William and Mary Monday April 20 Auction at Sotheby's in New York.

Class of '38: Now is the time to contemplate.

Did you donate to the class gift? If not, why not? Give it a lift.

If you were here a year or more, you know the score.

We want you all. To the Fiftieth, come. We will all be on the run.

To make it the most wonderful you've ever seen — Beautiful William and Mary and our dream.

There are memories that we do share and there are many of us who care.

So, class of '38, contemplate. Join us all and have a ball. You'll love it all.

P.S. We'd like 100 percent of the class to enjoy our reunion.

That from our class poet, Bert Capps Sheeran, who doubles as co-chairman of our reunion committee. The time for our reunion is drawing close, and, like Bert, I am more and more enthusiastic about it.

Your reunion committee met last October, and although I was not able to attend, I've been told that a new member has been added. Bunny Wood Walker and her husband are now retired and living in Williamsburg, and Bunny joined the deliberations.

Some quick messages:

From Sally Robbins Carmalt: "We continue to enjoy our eight grandchildren, mostly in Susquehanna County, Pa., where we spend the summers. We are busy with our various volunteer activities... and are grateful for our health. We look forward to the 50th in May."

Two sad but hopeful notes: Annabel Hopkins Mitchell wrote, "We are in Florida for the winter. We came down Oct. 22 to stay until Nov. 10. Unfortunately Lee had a heart attack at the airport that morning. So he spent nine days in the hospital, had one angioplasty procedure, which was

PRESIDENT'S HOUSE FRIENDS PLAN ANNUAL SEMINAR

The annual seminar of the President's House Friends will be held March 12 at William and Mary. The day will include lectures by J. S. Darling on "The Music of the Barraud House," Ron Hurs on "The Restoration of the Barraud House" and Mary Wiseman on "The Characterization of the Barraud House." Besides the lectures, the day will include coffee, lunch, tea and a tour of the Barraud House in Colonial Williamsburg and a tour of the President's House at William and Mary. For further information, please call 804-253-4174 or write The President's House Friends, College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

FORMER WILLIAM AND MARY PROFESSOR DIES IN INDIANA

Floyd Bailey, an assistant professor of mathematics at William and Mary from 1927 to 1930, died recently in Indianapolis, Ind. After teaching at William and Mary, Professor Bailey moved to Indiana where he became a civic leader and state Republican leader.

BANK NAMES FITCHETT SENIOR VICE PRESIDENT

Kenneth W. Fitchett '79 M.B.A. has been elected senior vice president of the Eastern Operations Center of First Virginia Banks, Inc. Fitchett has been cashier for the Eastern Operations Center, where he was responsible for managing the financial reporting for the corporation's six eastern region banks as well as the three departments within the cashier's office. He joined the bank in 1979 as special projects officer.

a great success, and another one is scheduled. He has a great team of doctors. He says he feels better now than in the last couple of years."

And from Dottie Kincaid Portz: "Woody had an angina attack in December; fortunately there was no damage to his heart. They did the angioplasty to his right coronary artery and sent him home with pills and no dietary regimen so far. . . . I got reelected to Solon Town Council (no great feat: I was unopposed!) and have been made vice-mayor for the coming term. I am still practicing law and keeping busy at everything but housework! We hope to be there for the 'doings' in May."

We surely wish Lee and Woody complete and speedy recoveries.

May Fielder Haven reports a new granddaughter near Jerry and her in California and adds: "See you in May!"

The committee is thrilled with the number of classmates who indicate that they are planning to attend the reunion. Jane McEnally Randle is another. She adds, "My son Jay and family moved to Oklahoma where he teaches at O.U. There the new granddaughter grows more enchanting each time I see her."

Still another, Elizabeth Rumsey Weber says, "I look forward to the class of '38's 50th reunion. . . . My daughter Elizabeth Weber Hoskins is working on her master's in education. My other daughter, Mary Carolyn Williams, followed her husband to the Northern Virginia area, closer to me."

Let me hear from more of you who are planning to attend.

Now for some longer communications. Cyril Mirmelstein wrote: "Your request for material for the class letter is appreciated, but this is not my usual cup of tea. The telethon experience, however, did kindle a lot of enthusiasm for sharing and seeing old classmates and friends, so I'll try. My first dental career for two years was as an instructor at the Medical College of Virginia School of Dentistry. . . . Then I served three years in military service during World War II. July 1946 I came home to Newport News and opened an office for the practice of general dentistry, which I still operate, albeit on a reduced schedule with fewer active patients. During this 45-year interval I married Evelyn, a Westhampton College beauty, who is now a devout Tribe fan — even when we play Richmond! We've had four children, four homes, eight cars, four dogs and now have returned to dear old Williamsburg.

"My principal interests during this time outside the office were in community health services and local, state and national dental organizations. I have just completed a five-year term on the Virginia Board of Dentistry, the last year as its president. I am proud to have been rewarded for my service to the dental profession by receiving fellowships in the American Academy of General Dentistry, the American College of Dentists, the Virginia Dental Association and the International College of Dentists. I still practice three days a week and spend my free time playing golf, attending most W&M athletic events and gluing and patching antique furniture and assorted broken-down treasures.

"Evelyn is active in the Muscarelle Museum and many community volunteer programs. Our nest is empty but busy and a good mix of fun, anxiety, friends and family. Our two grandchildren live in Cleveland, and that's what it's all about. See you soon!"

Another splendid catching-up letter came from Ruth Merkle Tucker. "Tuck and I spent most of our married life in the small town of Hillsboro, Ohio, where we raised our two sons. After the boys were in school I was pressured into teaching, which meant going back to college for my education courses. I taught English and French . . . directed the junior and senior class plays and was junior class sponsor. It kept me on the go, but I loved it, and retired after 21 wonderful years. While I was busy at school, my husband was busy as distributor of Standard Oil products in Highland County. Gary, our older son, attended the University of Cincinnati, and Greg attended Morehead State University in Kentucky.

"In 1979 we retired to North Ft. Myers, Fla., and enjoyed four years of retirement. Unfortunately my husband lost his battle to pancreatic cancer in May 1983, and five months later my younger son was killed in an accident.

"Gary is married to a Ruth, which is confusing at times. They have two daughters, Toni and Brooke. Needless to say, the girls are Grandma's main attraction. They keep me busy."

Ruth continues, "I have just completed two years as president of Kappa Delta Alumnae Association of Ft. Myers, am currently president of Contemporary Women's Club, am a member of the Community Women's Club and Symphony Women's Organization and am Kappa Delta representative to our Panhellenic Alumnae Council of Lee County. These activities, plus church and bridge clubs, make a full schedule. My live-in companion is my 16-year-old dog, Bozo.

"I see quite a bit of Louise Merkle Fritsch '36 and Helene Stein Vogt '38. Both live in Ft. Myers. I'm planning to attend our 50th in May and am looking forward to renewing many old acquaintances."

Ruth's postscript is sad, "Marie Rapp Peterson is in a nursing home, and I'll pass along her address in case anyone might want to drop her a note. The address is 232 Long Acre Ave., Erie, PA 16509." I have sent a note, and I'm sure some of the rest of you who know Marie will, also.

Last fall on a trip to Austria and Switzerland, Nick and I met and enjoyed Dick and Marge Recharad Free. Marge attended William and Mary for one year (1932-33) and remarked that she now regrets immeasurably not having attended her 50th reunion. Is there a message there for us?

Our class gift fund is progressing well, but we still need to hear from more of you. At Homecoming exactly 50 percent (117 located class members) had responded. We'd like to have that number increased, as well, of course, as the amount of money.

Another memory flashback: Lord Botetourt as he used to stand in front of the Wren Building. And remember how as freshmen we gals had to use the center walk on front campus and dip our "duc" caps to him? We all know it's better for him inside the library, but I still miss seeing him in his accustomed place.

A Happy New Year to you all. My last deadline was Sept. 3, and I've received some nice letters since then that I haven't reported. Incidentally, my next deadline is Feb. 23, so bear it in mind if you have some news for the April issue. I also have numerous Christmas notes which are so welcomed and one message from the Alumni Office.

Mary Holmes Hall wrote me in September to say she and Bud wouldn't make Homecoming because their youngest son, Chuck, was getting married. In March, their second granddaughter was born, so now they have five grandchildren — all in the Rochester area.

The Halls had a wonderful trip to Alaska last summer. They flew to Anchorage and took an inland trip via train, motor coach and canal boat up to Juneau, where they boarded the Nieuw Amsterdam-Holland American line and then cruised Glacier Bay to Vancouver. It was such a beautiful trip — gorgeous scenery and flowers. "Certainly recommend it!"

On her Christmas card Mary wrote that they are now planning to go to Naples, Fla., again for February and March. Billie will be there part of the time, too. She and her family were with them for the wedding and Thanksgiving. Mary's daughter, Debbie '70, is a reference librarian at the local college.

I was distressed to read a letter from Len Owen telling me of the problems that Alice has been having; knee replacement surgery was successful but medications created other problems. She had a second operation and was found to have adhesions of her intestines. A hospital stay of over 30 days is no fun, but by late October, she was doing nicely and hoped to be home soon. Len gave me some joyful news: a granddaughter graduated from Elizabethtown (Pa.) College this year with a B.S. in occupational therapy. A grandson is a freshman in the honors program at the University of Delaware, majoring in mechanical engineering. I do hope '88 will be a healthy year for you all, Len.

Louise Mallory Becker writes, "I was sorry to miss Homecoming activities again this year, but my being 10 years older than classmates is beginning to tell on me. . . . My three R.N. daughters and families and six grandchildren are a joy, and belonging to the class of 1940 pleases me very much." And we are delighted that you are a member of the class, Louise, and proud of your "80-plus years old."

Louise Eppinger Nuernberger told me at Homecoming that she and her husband were spending a month in Costa Rica and two weeks in Mexico. I know it must've been great, Louise.

I'm always delighted to get "Cookie and Casey's" Christmas letter for Cookie can always come up with something amusing, which is never the case when I write anything. Anyway, she reported that they didn't get to the Virgin Islands to recharge her batteries this summer and she finds as a result that she's a little touchy and her fuse is short! She's sure that this accounts for her lack of alertness when her purse was stolen — "the one with the bottomless pit that had two pair of cataract glasses, checkbooks for two accounts, all my credit cards, military I.D., driver's license, my wallet. . . . I was left with nothing to prove I was me — a helpless feeling." Do hope all is resolved by now, Cookie!

Hope Hunt White said that they were looking forward to having Geoff and John and Dona all together for the holidays for the first time since John and Dona's wedding two years ago. They had a super trip to D.C. for my sister's 85th birthday in September and then to San Francisco for the 40th reunion of the 6th Armored Division, Gene's WWII outfit. That was her first trip to San Francisco and it was great. They stayed a couple of weeks visiting relatives and sightseeing. So glad to learn that there is a small but active and interesting alumni group in St. Pete, Hope.

A card from Jean Clarahan Bratton says that her daughter Chris and Chris' husband will be with her for Christmas. Jean's saving a trip to her other daughter in Nebraska for spring.

Bobbie Milligan Molyneux plans to go to Florida for February and March this year. She says the weather is fine in New York state through the holidays and then it chills her. She's been going to Genesee, a college town, for duplicate bridge. The retired professors seem to enjoy it, and it's a challenge to play against them.

Ginny Allen's poetry this Christmas was titled Learning Things To Do at 52 or At 68 IT'S NOT TOO LATE. She enclosed a fine picture taken at son Jeff's wedding with the whole family present. I was amazed at the bald pates of groom and son-in-law. Scrib has far more hair than the younger generation! Congratulations!

Al Alley and Margaret write, "Whoever said that retirement years are great because retirees have much time to relax, travel, read, write, etc., was talking through his hat! Over the past 17 years, we have become so busy that we usually have only the evenings to ourselves, and that's when we read." For my part let's say it's great to be able to do all these things and "go while the going's good." Agreed?!

Rosa Ellis Long is back on the Girl Scout Council's nominating committee and is taking geology classes at the Buffalo Museum of Science.

Appreciated hearing from Dinny Wetter, who kept her Homecoming promise to write. "We're planning a quiet time during the holidays to celebrate my mother's 90th birthday. My two daughters, Kenyon '68 and Barbara '70, are coming home with their families. My son, David Pate, and his family live here. Because of the death of my brother, Larry Forwood '45, last February, we'll have just a small family party on Jan. 2. Nevertheless, there will be five grandchildren and six great-grandchildren here to honor mother. On Jan. 7 Ed and I will accompany mother to Miami to her winter home."

Frank and I are trying to get organized since our return from New Hampshire where we spent the Christmas holidays with our son and family in Keene. It was a white Christmas and we had a wonderful time, but we're thankful to be home again safe and sound.

Our 45th class reunion was a grand and glorious affair and I hope — just looking ahead — that the entire class of '42 will plan to attend the 50th! Co-chairmen Margaret Dunham and Marion Pate Macon and their committee deserve a round of applause for all their efforts that made every part of the reunion so special.

Margaret tells me that she and Marion and Eleanor Nottingham Dudley and Terry Teal Crutchfield made the big class banner by hand. Hugh Watson and Tom Crane carried it in the parade. Others on the committee were: Don Griffin, Dot Hogshire Harper, Foster Jennings, Vince Laszara, Connie Curtis Laws and Regina Williams.

There were so many people at the Saturday night banquet! I was taking notes like mad, but may have missed out on someone's news. If so, please jog my memory by sending it to me.

At the banquet we were treated to a reprise of the Backdrop Club show "Take a Deep Breath" and Virginia Doepke Myers, Kay Cotterman Hoskins, Evelyn Cosby King '43 and Louise Wallace Richards sang their songs again.

Class President Malcolm Sullivan reported that he is now retired and lives in Boynton Beach, Fla. He invited anyone to call him if they come that way. Malcolm, who presided at the banquet, had each of us come to the podium and state our news

TRIBE PLAYERS NAMED TO ALL-STATE TEAM

Six William and Mary football players have been awarded all-state honors. Junior flanker Harry Mehre was chosen for the Virginia Sports Information Directors (VASID) and the Roanoke Times and World News teams. In addition, the Roanoke newspaper selected offensive tackle John Menke and linebacker Kerry Gray for the all-state team, while picking quarterback John Brosnahan, offensive guard Rick Muller and placekicker-punter Steve Christie for honorable mention. Claiming Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference honors were Christie (first team) and Menke (second team).

CARRIE COLE LANE GEDDY DIES

Carrie Cole Lane Geddy, a former member of the Board of Visitors at William and Mary and a lifelong community leader in Williamsburg, Va., died Dec. 10 at the age of 88. A graduate of Chatham Hall and a special student at the William and Mary fine arts department during 1937-40, Mrs. Geddy served on the Board of Visitors from 1966 to 1970. She was also a member of the Friends of the College and an emeritus member of the Endowment Association of the College of William and Mary.

ALUMNA RECEIVES $20,000 RESEARCH GRANT

Patricia Carlson '68, professor of American literature at Ross-Hulman Institute of Technology in Terre Haute, Ind., has received a $20,000 Research Initiation Grant from the Air Force Office of Scientific Research. She will study how military personnel can use a new computerized text-handling method, hypertext, to help them retrieve and manage information contained in Air Force maintenance manuals. For the next three months, Ms. Carlson will be working at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Dayton, Ohio.

in 30 seconds or less!

Jane Fegusson Perkins lived in New England for 35 years, but is now living in Colorado. Chet Baker and his wife, Helen, were celebrating their 45th wedding anniversary on Oct. 24.

Natalie Rogers Mabry and her husband, now retired, live in Fairport, N.Y. Harlie Masters is retired and is living in Pennsylvania; our 25th reunion was the last time he was in Williamsburg.

Hugh Watson was back for the first time in 40 years. Patty Curcuru has a son who graduated from the College; she works for H&R Block and is going back to school to bone up on the new tax laws.

Ed Fisher remarried seven years ago, lives in Richmond, Va., and works with Health and Medical Care. Tom Crane didn't get back to a Homecoming for 27 years, but has been back for the last 17 years.

Virginia Boardman Detwiler lives in Seattle. Terry Teal Crutchfield lived overseas for 25 years. Dot Hogshire Harper lives in Norfolk, close enough to do volunteer work at the information desk at Colonial Williamsburg.

Lucille Jennings is in real estate in Kingsport, Tenn. Bill Way — remember his cartoons in The Royalist? — is fortunate to have his son continuing the office products business that he is retired from.

Foster Jennings, a retired C.P.A., lives in Richmond. Annette Warren Sirmon has retired after 42 years in social work; she has been working hard for the W&M fund.

Tabb Taylor May lived in Yorkshire, England, for four years, but now does a lot of volunteer work in Howard Court, Md., where she now lives.

Edith Rathbun Bell gets to travel a lot visiting children and grandchildren. Montie Meeks is happy in retirement in Virginia Beach.

Bill Brown is a C.P.A. on the road to retirement, which will give him more time for golf. Gerry Rose runs a tiny television station and has another College graduate in the family.

Louise Wallace Richards came from California, where she had been a teacher for 18 years. Bette Elliott is a newspaper columnist and an advocate for social services.

Kay Cotterman Hoskins told me that she and 17 of her family members were interned in a Philippine prison camp for three years during WWII. When the American Army liberated them one of the first soldiers she saw was Sheriff Blake; later the two of them went to celebrate in a local night club and ran into Dave Quinlan. Kay now lives in Sacramento, enjoys singing at Trinity Episcopal Cathedral and is active with a Hispanic ministry.

Also at the banquet were Virginia Welch Phillips, Art and Ginny Keeney, George Blanford, Jane Harden Hanson, Sheriff Blake and Connie Curtis Laws.

I was thrilled to receive a long letter from Gerry Koteen Koretz who lives in Chicago (Winnetka). As you remember, Gerry participated in theatre productions and in doing art work for The Royalist. She wrote many of the lyrics and music for "Take a Deep Breath," which were enjoyed at the reunion banquet. Wish she could have been there. Gerry keeps busy with volunteer activities, and she and her husband travel a lot, particularly to England and to Colorado and California where their children and families live.

Mary Thedieck Ewald sent a copy of a review of her newest book of poems, Weapons Against Chaos, with a preface by the new poet laureate of the United States. The reviewer compares her writing with that of Frost, Yeats and I. A. Richards and calls her a "formidably intelligent and learned poet, adventurous in her themes" and who can "startle us with the power of her emotion." The reviewer continues by calling a 13-line poem, "Enchantment," "one of the great love poems of the 20th century." The book is published by Devin-Adair. Congratulations, Mary, for succeeding in a very difficult form of writing.

Stanley A. Thompson writes that he is still living in Indian River, but spends winters at Myrtle Beach. He is enjoying his retirement by trying to break the magic number of "80" on the golf course.

Frances Poarche Langston reports that she has been doing some traveling in Canada and the United States during the past three years and is enjoying her church work, club activities and volunteer work at the local hospital. Both her children and grandchildren live in Virginia.

Florence Yachnin Liebman is managing a travel agency in Brentwood, Calif.

The Alumni Office sends the information that Hunter B. Andrews is serving on the Governor's Commission on the Tercentenary Observances of the College of William and Mary, which will be celebrated in five years.

My next deadline for news will be late May. Please write to give me your news. Obviously, I didn't connect with all 39 classmates who were at Homecoming; the time was just too short. Don't feel neglected, just write to me at the address given at the top of this column. I love hearing from you all.

Joan and I continue the settling-in phase of our new life as retired people. We are in the midst of an extensive construction/remodeling/renovation of our house, including a new wing. Living at the edge of the campus of the University of the South is culturally stimulating, and we like the beauty of the place. Come to see us; the welcome mat is out.

Jim and Ann Harnsberger report that they have just returned from St. Petersburg Beach, Fla., to visit the grave of Jim's parents. They found it all changed; even Webb City went bankrupt and has been replaced by parking lots! Since retirement last September, Jim has gotten to the point that he doesn't feel he has to go to the office on Monday mornings. Though they were not able to attend all of Homecoming, they did get to the OWJ banquet. Jim reports that his brother Hugh '43 and his wife, Doris Miller '43, expect to go to China this spring.

Bill Morris continues as professor of law at the University of West Virginia. Last July he gave lectures on forensic medicine at the University of Singapore. He has written three books in the field of dental law. In September, he gave addresses in Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, on "Refusal of Medical Attention to Children Because of Parents' Religious Beliefs." He reports that he has lectured on medico-legal problems in 39 states, Europe, Africa and Asia.

Nancy and Dixon Foster continue their hospitality and broad contact with their W&M contemporaries from their home in Irvington. They attended Homecoming and have helped me by giving news of a number of others.

Harvey Pope was there; he has been president of Hancock Peanuts in Courtland, Va., for many years. Lois Spratley Donald and her husband, a retired Exxon executive, have recently moved to a home on Jamestown Road.

At least two of our classmates now have homes in Kingsmill. Wilhelmina Davison Cantlay and her retired lieutenant general husband, Gordon, have settled there, as have Sunny Trumbo Williams and Ralph.

Buddy and Jo Cornell Clarke '45 have taken a very active part in the restoration work at Christ Church, Irvington, as well as in the larger affairs of the parent church, Grace Church, Kilmarnock.

Make your plans now to come to our 45th!

I have addresses in my book for Fran Pendleton Elliot in Winchester, Mass.; Ann Scarlett Pettigrew Stainton in Lancaster, Pa.; and Dave McNamara, our intrepid class president, in Averill Park, N.Y.

Send me letters. I need news . . . and do plan to visit us at this lovely campus on our beautiful plateau.

Your scribe for this issue returned to Williamsburg five years ago and enjoys an early retirement amidst the endless attractions of the College and the community. Those of us who were here in Nov. 1986 enjoyed a marvelous 40th reunion organized by class president Nancy Grube Williams. We were disappointed that so many of you missed it.

Those of you who haven't returned in recent years owe yourselves a visit. The area's growth is frenetic — most of it tasteful — but in danger of being overdone, some think. Williamsburg is now the nation's third largest tourist attraction behind the two Disneys and probably the leading retirement community outside of the sunbelt. The Inn and the Lodge remain focal points of activity but now have some 80 hotels and motels and 160 restaurants for competition. The town's burgeoning environs contrast with the timeless constancy of the restoration. Beyond the environs remain the limiting boundaries of Camp Peary, Fort Eustis and Yorktown Mine Depot — now the "Naval Weapons Station."

We are currently enjoying the Williamsburg Christmas season, a time of pageantry, beauty and activity which began with the "Grand Illumination" on Dec. 13, followed by a potpourri of yuletide for the remainder of the holiday season. Each year the crowds visiting Williamsburg for Christmas grow larger.

The College dwarfs the campus we knew, but happily the expansion has occurred largely on contiguous acreage without disturbing "our" school at all. Not a brick is out of place on the familiar walkways. Sorority Court and its residents exhibit no passage of time and Cary Field is still the most beautiful little stadium ever. Only Lord Botetourt's absence from his commanding pedestal in the College Yard hints at the passage of time. Lord Botetourt retired to the protection of an indoor site in Swem Library.

Our College has grown even more in stature than in size, and it is reasonable to wonder how many of us would have gained admittance had today's demanding standards applied in 1942. William and Mary is now led by one of its own. President Paul Verkuil '61 was but a toddler when we entered the school. That is a sobering reality that should hasten the return of those of you too long away.

The class of '46, as the first to enter college with the country at war, was destined to be scattered. It is a wonder indeed that as much unity and alumni participation exists as has been maintained. The credit, at least in recent years, belongs largely to four relatively local class members — President Nancy Grube Williams, Barbara Nycum Moore, Cecy Waddill Cunningham and Fred Frechette.

In spite of their best efforts, addresses for a large portion of the class are unknown. Some of you must have knowledge of many of our missing classmates. All would be grateful for any addresses.

A long, newsy letter from Everett Baker arrived in December. Early retirement followed 30 years in the corporate research division of Wheeling Steel. Everett and his wife, Norma, now reside in Texarkana, Ark., where Everett is manager of research and development for Piconia Industries. Both of their children graduated from W&M — Gary '76 and Nela '78.

Margie Knowlton Barrett has a busy career running a nursery school in Salem, N.H., and a busy social schedule with her three children and three grandchildren who are close by.

A recent press release from AARP tells us that Jean Adams Trueheart has served for 10 years as a volunteer tax instructor in AARP's tax-aide program in Ellicott City, Md.

How exciting to be your newly elected member of the board of directors of the Alumni Society! I deeply appreciate this honor as well as the opportunity to be of service to the College now that I am actually retired. I shall work hard to do a good job.

Beginning today, Jan 1, I am officially unemployed for the first time in many years, and I look forward to doing something worthwhile and constructive with my time. Although Bill decided not to retire for a while yet, I have taken the big step and will be living here in Lancaster County most of the time. I believe we will enjoy our proximity to Williamsburg, which is only 50 miles away. My being so close will enable me to attend alumni board meetings easily.

Classmates Helen Thomson Stafford presently a member of the alumni board, has been appointed to the prestigious Tercentenary Commission. This 34-member Commission on the Tercentenary Observances of the College was established by Governor Baliles, by Executive Order No. 50, to insure that the 300th anniversary of the founding of the second oldest college in America is appropriately commemorated. Members of the commission include former governors of Virginia and outstanding individuals from the arts, business and international affairs as well as representatives of the alumni, parents and student body of the College.

In other news, Helen J. Sanders McCoy writes that she and her husband, Keith, are 3-1/2 years into retirement, with Keith working part time as a computer programmer. Helen cares for her elderly mother at home, and they visit their three children and four grandchildren as often as they can.

Virginia Parthenis Elmendorf '49 recently sent a clipping from the Pittsburgh Press about Jack Hoey. Jack, who is president of Peoples Natural Gas Company, was named marketing executive of the year by the American Gas Association at its 69th annual meeting in October. Jack joined Peoples Natural Gas in 1949 and held several executive positions before being named president in 1977. He is also chairman of the board of directors. His civic activities include serving as chairman of the board of trustees of Westminster College and director of the Pennsylvania Chamber of Commerce. He is a member of the regional Industrial Development Corporation of Southwestern Pennsylvania and an elder of Northgate Baptist Church.

MINORITY ENROLLMENT GROWS AT COLLEGE

Minority enrollment at William and Mary is on a steady climb, according to figures recently provided to the State Council of Higher Education. For the first time, black students comprise over 5 percent of the undergraduate student body, and total minority enrollment is 8.9 percent. One reason for the increase is a succession of programs to bring black high school students on campus and give them first-hand exposure to faculty, administrators and students. Applications from black students are up again this year, according to the Office of Admission, which held an on-campus program in late January for black students who had applied for admission.

Ginnie goes on to say that Jack and his wife, Mary Jane, have six outstanding children, including one set of twins, all of whom have various gifts and talents. Thank you, Ginnie, for an interesting and informative letter.

Jean Cutler continued his education after William and Mary by getting his master's degree and doctorate in theatre at the University of Illinois. He was featured in a September "Getting to Know You" column in the Wilmington, N.C. Star. Jean has united his four areas of expertise — theatre, film, education and business — by starting a business called Metropolitan Lectures, Inc. Besides offering seminars in finance, producing recordings in literature and building townhouses, Jean hopes to organize an international film festival and market in Wilmington, similar to those held in Cannes, Venice, Los Angeles and Montreal.

Mary Jane "Patsy" Keen Williams writes that she is not, as was reported, among the "lost members" of the class of '48! Since 1984 Patsy has been living "right here" in Williamsburg with her daughter Carol '73 and her son-in-law Bob Mathews. In 1979 Patsy had an attack of multiple sclerosis that left her in a wheel chair. Four years later, her husband, Andy Williams, died from a stroke. Shortly thereafter, Patsy moved to First Colony on the James River with her daughter's family. She especially enjoys her granddaughter Melody.

In October Patsy and the Mathews had an enjoyable trip to the Hawaiian Islands. In her last note, Patsy was looking forward to a happy Christmas and New Year with visits from alumni vacationing in Williamsburg. Her address is 103 Argall Town Lane, Williamsburg, VA 23185. We are so glad to have "found" you again, Patsy! I certainly plan to come over to see you!

A Christmas card from Angel Fire, N.M., brought news of Buddy and Jean Myers Boudreau. Buddy retired in August and they enjoyed a trip east to Williamsburg. Recently their new home was completed and now they are living in that mountainous region (elevation 8,500 feet) where they enjoy skiing and golf.

Among the many William and Mary graduates in the field of journalism, there are two from our class: Frances Robb, coordinator for the Visiting Scholars program for the National Office of Phi Beta Kappa, and Edward Griffin, copy editor for the Richmond Times Dispatch. Have you given up on our correspondence, Ed?

I would love to hear from more of you! Now that I am a retired person, I should do a better job of keeping in touch.

A welcome letter from Ralph Chinn reports a trip to Budapest, Hungary, to attend the World Congress of Neuroscience, which gave him a chance to visit a number of good friends in Europe. He goes on to say, "Unfortunately, Atlanta's traffic has become like that of California. . . . I never go into downtown Atlanta by car if I can avoid it. DEMOCRATS TO DEBATE
IN PHI BETA KAPPA HALL

Democratic candidates in the 1988 Presidential race will debate in Phi Beta Kappa Hall at William and Mary on Monday, Feb. 29. The candidates will debate economic issues in Phi Beta Kappa Hall, which was also the site of a Presidential race debate between President Ford and Jimmy Carter in 1976.

invitation to give a lecture and visit the University of Porto's Faculty of Medicine in Porto, Portugal. . . . All in all, I visited in Great Britain, Holland, Germany, Austria, Spain and Hungary. I went into Hungary by train and came back up the Danube by hydrofoil. . . . If you ever get in the area of Mildenhall, England, environs of Canterbury, etc., please try the Pear Tree Inn, a bed and breakfast run by a delightful English couple and one of the best, typical English breakfasts you will ever eat."

Excerpts from a letter from Gloria and Blair MacKenzie: "We have had much to do to our house and yard this year — cleaning, building, wiring, painting, planting, digging and raking — most of all weeding! And a lot of time unpacking household shipments and finding places to put it all. It has been wonderful to have everything under one roof. It may not be out of the box yet, but it is here. Blair has completely restored a 1962 TR3B from the chassis up and put it back together with only a few parts left over. It is really a beauty."

Henry Wilson Ashton is still teaching and coaching at Essex High School in Tappahannock, Va. In summer '87, he received a 30-year career award for varsity baseball from the Virginia High School Coaches Association.

Louis '49 and Jeannette Keimling Bailey '50 are in New York City, where Lou is practicing law and Jeannette is still teaching at Grace Church School. They have organized a company called Davenport Press, Ltd., and their first publication was a reprint of a 1936 novel written by George Milburn.

I received only two letters in response to my plea to be put on your Christmas card lists. There must be a couple of hundred of you who read the Alumni Gazette. All who send printed letters, please send me one. How much trouble is that?

Happy New Year, one and all!

Lo and behold, I've received such a bundle of news from all of you faithful people that it may fill the entire Gazette! I'll try to edit and condense as much as possible, and, please, no hurt feelings if I've omitted any correspondence. I can't include everything in its entirety.

Toni Gilman Reynolds '51 wrote for the first time in ages. It was great to hear from her, and I had totally lost track. She's still in Huntsville, Ala., and has visited Ann Buckles Orteig '51 in Williamsburg recently. Her children are all scattered, and she's a grandmother several times over. Toni's sister Katherine Gilman Wilkey '53, owns a travel agency in Rancho Santa Fe. Libby Ferebee Brown and Toni have remained good friends, both living in Huntsville.

Claudia Richmond Harman, of Arlington, wrote that she missed Homecoming with a very ill-timed case of the flu, which attacked the night before the big event. Jerry and Liz Beard Patterson visited beforehand. Claudia is working at Columbia Hospital for Women in Washington, D.C., in the health care field. Her daughters, son and granddaughters all live nearby. Daughter Ann recently passed the Virginia Bar. Wow!

Charles Sexton retired from the Hampton school system after 32-1/2 years. He's busily pursuing hobbies, including fishing, gardening and woodworking and enjoying his two grandchildren.

I had the loveliest note from Katie Byers Hoffman, St. Pete, Fla., which coincidentally is the home of my daughter Kim and granddaughter Lindsey. Katie has two children living in the area and graciously invited me to visit. Katie, I might be heading that way in March, so look out! Thanks so much.

I reported this several issues back, but once again, Charles E. Monaghan, of Portsmouth, Va., has changed his name legally to Walford Davies.

Now, for the real challenge! Little did I realize that all my classmates who attended the class of '52 Homecoming dinner would contribute a "humongous" amount of news, thanks to Rusty Davis Schumacher who compiled and forwarded all the news. Bless you all and believe me, I wish I could have been there. Sounds like a great reunion!

Here I go: Jeanne Vester Olsen and husband, Ray, who is chief of safety for Exxon Chemicals, are still happily living in Houston.

Gene Gurlitz, W. Nyack, N.Y., and wife, Judy, were in attendance. Gene is an art director in film, and Judy is an official in women's field hockey and lacrosse. Quite a combo!

Bernie Wittcamp is in private practice in internal medicine and rheumatology in Richmond and has three of his own graduates (offspring) from William and Mary. That could be a record!

Bob Hux, Teesburg, Fla., is a surgeon and reports that he recently married and is the proud papa of a 3-year-old and a 1-1/2-year-old. In his own words, he flies a "Baron" and loves life. Sounds pretty good to me.

Audrey Doll Bates wrote that her son Carl is a 1987 W&M law school graduate.

George Emerson retired from Owens Illinois in Dec. 1985 and is now with Calphalon — still in Perrysburg, Ohio. All his children have flown the coop, and he and wife, Peg (Ives), are looking for a place in the sun.

Jan Dickerson Sanford, Indialantic, Fla., and her husband, Dennis, are still enjoying the toy business. Jan is trying to graduate from Weight Watchers — maybe by now, she's earned her degree! Their children live in Atlanta.

Jim Stone is presently at Temple University, where he's been chairman of the civil engineering department for the past 10 years.

Edith Moser Buzzell wrote that her first granddaughter was born in Aug. 1987.

Greetings to Anna Holiday Wallace. I do agree that you should receive the prize for longest distance traveled — some jaunt from La Jolla, Calif.! Her husband, Bill, is still practicing law.

Nancy Bradley McCready was extremely happy that her W&M roommate, Nancy Gibney Parsons, made it to Homecoming for the first time in 35 years.

Elaine Diehm Guilfoyle is still living on Long Island and husband, Joe, has retired. She announced that she's ready to move and is open for suggestions!

Cora Jane "C.J." Hodgdon Ryan, husband, Tom, and older son reside in Houston. Younger son, John, has his own business as an Arabian horse trainer in Georgia.

Ruby Hanrahan Hennessy and Larry are living in a "normal" house after selling their guest home in Avon-by-the-Sea. One son Bob, is in graduate school in Williamsburg. Another son lives with them, and their third son is located in Fairfax, Va. Ruby and Larry plan to retire in Williamsburg.

Bob and Peg Blair Hackler are in my neck of the woods — Anderson, Ind. Bob has retired from General Motors and is entering the travel business. Seems I'm hearing of more and more retirees. Could it be we're getting older?

MASTER PLAN COMMITTEE

The Student Association at William and Mary has formed a committee to work as a liaison between the administration and the College community regarding the master plan, a plan projecting the physical and environmental growth of the campus into the future. They should be sent to Jeff Kelly at the Student Association, College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va. 23185.

Tom Rienerth and his wife, Carol, return each year for Homecoming. Lucky! Tom lives on Virginia's Eastern Shore and teaches high school math. He mentioned health as one's greatest asset for all of us young folks. Amen!

Joyce Miller Tipton has a partnership in a yarn shop in Waynesboro, Va. Three daughters are married and one son is living at home. Phil Tipton (V.P.I. '52) chose William and Mary's Homecoming over V.P.I.'s — good choice!

Bob Landen and wife, Tricia, spent Homecoming weekend trying to locate their four children, all of whom are W&M graduates or students and managed to catch a glimpse of their youngest on her sorority float!

Burton and Charlotte Walker Hill have a daughter in her junior year at William and Mary. Burt is pursuing a second career as general manager and treasurer of the Newport News Shipbuilding Employees' Credit Union. Quite a prestigious title!

Two alumnae won prizes in the tennis tournament. Anna Holiday and Hilda Beckh Sherman.

Walt Raymond '50 and Vi visited the Soviet Union in August where Walt opened an exhibit for the U.S. — Information U.S.A.

Hilda Sherman is enjoying Razor's '50 retirement from dentistry and all the free time it allows them to visit their sons and families. She also loves having him as a golf partner.

Rusty Davis Schumacher and her husband, Hazen, made it back for the first time since '77. She teaches seventh- and eighth-graders in Ann Arbor, Mich., and was named one of 12 outstanding Michigan social studies teachers in '86. Congrats, Rusty!

Chuck '51 and Bobbie Lamont Redding "doubled" on the Homecoming visit. Chuck is another retiree, and they both are involved in church and community volunteer work. Also, travel, golf and tennis rate high on their agenda.

This, my friends, has turned into a novel — if so, it'll be my first published work! Hand and eyes are tired so I'll wish you all the very best in '88 and don't forget to write!

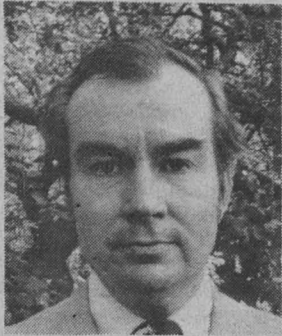

I'm planning on a move this year — more on that later. Son Steve is still in Cincy — all those years of guitar picking are paying off as his band has started to receive bookings. Daughters Kelly and Kathryn live here. Kath is enrolled at U.C., and Kel is a member of the working class. Kimberly, the oldest, and granddaughter, Lindsey, are still in St. Pete, where I hope to visit in the near future.

P.S. Anything I haven't covered I'll try to carry over. Thanks again.

As some of you may have noticed, I did not get to Homecoming as promised; neither did I get a message to Marge Huff Brown (our reporter for 30 years) to "cover" in my absence. However, word from Marge indicates that she had her hands full that weekend since they now have a place in Kingsmill (Williamsburg) as well as in Springfield. Marge says, "We would like to invite class members who have occasion to be in Williamsburg to stop in to see us; we're here most every weekend, and I've been staying during the week a good bit." Vinson H. Sutlive Jr., professor of anthropology at William and Mary, has been commissioned to write a series of political biographies on the Iban people of the Malaysian island of Borneo. Sutlive spent last summer in Borneo researching the first of the biographies, a chronicle of Tun Temenggong Jugah anak Barieng, a chief of the Iban. The series is commissioned by the Sarawak Literary Society, a government-sponsored agency within the Federation of Malaysia. The Iban are the largest native tribe on Borneo, concentrated in the East Malaysian state of Sarawak.

It turns out that Betty Ann Wallace is Marge's Williamsburg neighbor! Marge also writes that on July 4, a television play that she wrote and directed aired through Northern Virginia Community College. It was in commemoration of the Bicentennial of the Constitution, and her students at Westminster School made up the cast.

David B. Dunkle, M.D., has recently been promoted to medical director, Hershey Chocolate Company, and his duties include setting medical standards and policy for all the company's locations. Before joining Hershey in 1981, David was in family practice in Feasterville. After graduating from William and Mary, he earned his medical degree at Temple University, interned at Polyclinic Medical Center in Harrisburg and completed his residency at Lower Bucks Hospital in Bristol. David is a member of the Pennsylvania Medical Society, the American Academy of Family Physicians, the American Occupational Medical Association and a director of the Hershey Rotary Club. He and his wife, Janet, reside in Hummelstown.

I was so pleased to hear from Alan Canfield, whose work with the Arthritis Foundation is probably written up with a picture as a "header" in this issue. Alan writes that he and his wife, Jeanne, live on a five-acre ranch in Sherwood, Ore., 30 minutes from downtown Portland, where he works as director of training for Standard Insurance Company. He has been in the insurance business for over 32 years and has two grandchildren, Doug, 28, and CJ, 24. The Canfields hope to visit Williamsburg in June '88 when an eastern trip is planned. Thank you, Alan, for your kind words. Writing about our classmates is a pleasure!

Noted in the William and Mary News was Mary Maples Dunn's appointment by Governor Gerald Baliles to serve on the Commission on the Tercentenary Observances of the College of William and Mary in Virginia. This 34-member commission is headed by retired U.S. Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, who is also Chancellor of the College.

Noted in the Virginia Gazette is Carol DeSamper's retirement as executive director of the United Way of Greater Williamsburg after 17 years of service.

Eleanor Kanter recently had a poem published in a children's magazine, Clubhouse. She is "otherwise busy working on a novel and the other duties known as distractions!"

Please keep news coming! We want to hear the whereabouts and activities of class members from whom we have had no word in some time. If you don't wish to report about yourself and family, could you contribute information about classmates with whom you are in contact? My last column produced a quick address request from a fellow student who had not heard from someone in 15 years. Note: The Alumni Office stays as up-to-date with addresses as we let it, so do make those changes.

I have just returned from spending several days over New Year's in Williamsburg. The tourists are still there, the weather still dampish and our College still stands as an enduring reminder of the first-class education we all received. Good health to all in 1988!

A long letter from Ginny Breitenfeld Ferre includes the news that she is involved in interviewing W&M applicants. She and Dave hit the road during the year to visit the Florida Keys and the Everglades, then to Georgia to see Paul Their Andrew is in Norway as an exchange student, a program that included a quick junket to Leningrad.

Milton and Alice Glover Glasser weren't exactly your typical couch potatoes, either. They cruised around Greece during the summer. Young Miltie wrapped up graduate school and Laurie enjoyed being "mama" to the "world's greatest grandson."

Anne Pope Kitchen returned to work with the General Assembly in Richmond.

Margaret Bunting Jenkins can rightfully brag about her two sons. Sydney is curator of the Virginia Beach Art Center, and Terry is a draftsman and a beginning consultant conducting seminars and workshops locally.

After 30 years with the U.S. Information Agency, Carolyn Mitchell has retired. Her last 10 years were with the agency's foreign service, which meant trips all over the world. Carolyn now plans to settle in Bethesda, Md.

D. Thomas Reel has been named to the standing committee, Substance Abuse in the Workshop, by the Lancaster (Pa.) Chamber of Commerce and Industry. Tom is responsible for the promotion and implementation of drug abuse screening programs for business and industry throughout central Pennsylvania.

Chris and Bob Schlatter '57 seem to be perking right along. They managed a quick stop in the Burg, with stops in Richmond and Portsmouth.

Lance and Jan Trusty are now thinking in terms of a California tour in 1988. That's fine, as long as they go via the Northern Neck of Virginia.

Home is where you go to pack before hitting the travel circuit again for Dottie Guthrie Wilson. Since her last note, Dottie has toured Southeast Asia, with a stopover in Hawaii. Greece is her next target. She did manage a visit with Pat Ewell Johnson somewhere along the line.

Bob and Bobby Jo Peters Zahn are in the throes of marrying off their youngsters. With six, that's quite a cheerful challenge.

Oxford University Press, in collaboration with the Schomburg Library, is publishing 30 volumes of work by writers who founded and nurtured the black literary tradition with introductions by scholars and writers who have themselves added to the black literary tradition. Among these volumes, The Work of the Afro-American Woman (1894) by Mrs. N. F. Mossell, is a monograph-length introduction by Joanne Braxton, associate professor of English at William and Mary. Mrs. Mossell's book represents an early attempt to articulate a black and feminist viewpoint, "which takes race, not sex, as its point of departure," states Braxton in her introduction. "It was, for the black woman of the 1890's, the equivalent of social historian Paula Giddings' work of the 1980s — in sum, a powerful and progressive statement."

The 25th reunion was one you should not have missed. All of us who were there can attest to the fact that it was the biggest reunion celebration ever! There were over 100 of our classmates present.

Williamsburg had the most perfect fall weather for Homecoming Weekend. The leaves were at their peak, and the temperatures were very mild even at night.

Ann Fox Harrison and Pat Bayliss Owens with their committee of Anne Haynes Barr, Lacey Compton, Bill George and Suzanne Tyler Mastracco did an excellent job of organizing our events. We all seemed to gather together wherever we saw one another. It took many events and places for us to catch up on 25 years of activities in each other's lives. We gathered at the Royce for the hospitality room, in the lobby, in each others' rooms, in the Royce Lounge, at the Alumni luncheon in a tent right out of the Middle Ages resting in the Sunken Garden, at the Homecoming Parade, at the Reunion Dinner and at the dance in Trinkle Hall (you remember our cafeteria?).

At our Reunion Dinner, President Verkuil '61 spoke to us about the College and its future. Our class gift exceeded our goal of $250,000. The gift will establish a professorship in the faculty of arts and sciences. Also we are planning to establish a student aid fund, which will benefit students in need of financial assistance.

The following people were seen or talked to during the weekend: Dr. Don Duvall, orthodontist; Elena Ruddy Coleman lives in Fremont, Calif., and had her son with her from James Madison University.

Julie Guinane Hinchey lives in Richmond, Va., and only came for Saturday. With Julie was Val Pingree Follett, who came to the reunion via a train from Wakefield, R.I.

Barbara Aubry Walsh lives in Oakton, Va., and her eldest attends Longwood College. That leaves her other six still at home.

Pat Wade Temple flew in from Washington State as did Linda Lester Hagen with her husband and 12-year-old daughter, Katie. They planned to visit family, sightsee and to be at the reunion.

APPLICATIONS REACH ANOTHER RECORD

More than 9,700 applications for admission to the freshman class of 1992 have been received by the Office of Admission. This represents nearly 400 more than last year's all-time record. Offers of admission will be mailed to approximately 1,900 candidates on April 1.

ANHEUSER-BUSCH PLEDGES $600,000 TOWARD FACILITY

The Anheuser-Busch Foundation has pledged $600,000 toward the construction of a new multipurpose athletic facility at William and Mary. In the accompanying photo Jerry E. Ritter, vice president and group executive, Anheuser-Busch Companies, delivers the first installment of $200,000 to President Verkuil. The gift will be used for the construction of an outdoor multipurpose facility with artificial turf, lights and seating for 2,500. It will serve as the home of the intercollegiate soccer teams and as additional playing and practice space for other varsity sports and will support an expanded recreational sports program for all students during the evening hours. "We are grateful to the Anheuser-Busch Foundation for assisting us as we seek to enhance the quality of our facilities and programs," said President Verkuil. "Our friends at Anheuser-Busch have always been good corporate neighbors, so we are pleased that the name of the new facility will recognize this important contribution." The new facility will be built behind William and Mary Hall next to the Anheuser-Busch Tennis Courts and in proximity to the new physical education/recreational facility now under construction.

Joyce Hill Stoner's talents and interests are many. She is a nationally known art conservator working at Winterthur Museum. She is a University of Delaware faculty member and president of its Phi Beta Kappa chapter. She is also working toward a doctorate in art history at the university. In addition to her interest in art, she is a composer of musicals. Last January both the university and Winterthur staged workshop productions of her "Mrs. Jack" musical, staged around late 19th-century art connoisseur Bernard Berenson's introducing Boston matron Isabella Stewart Gardner to Italian art appreciation. Joyce is working on a musical about portraitist Charles Willson Peale done in the style of audience-participatory 18th-century theater. Joyce is collaborating on a musical revue with the working title "The Wallet." By the time this column appears, Joyce will probably have added other musicals to her credit. She continues to write specialty material for revues and club acts. Joyce and her husband have two daughters, 10 and 5.

Gregory F. Jennings has joined A. G. Van Metre Jr. Companies as president of the corporation. The corporation supplies construction support services through the largest dump truck fleet in the Washington, D.C., area. Greg was formerly with the tax accounting firm of Seidman & Seidman, where he was partner-in-charge of the Washington, D.C., office. He received a master's degree in taxation from American University. Greg lives in Alexandria where he is active in numerous business and civic organizations. He has served as a director of the Greater Washington Board of Trade and as president of the Downtown Jaycees of D.C. He is chairman of the Alexandria Industrial Development Authority and an officer of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce.

Robert A. Johnson is regional sales manager in Washington, D.C., for the Broadmoor Hotel in Colorado Springs. He is a former vice president of Society and Association Services Corporation.

Fredric W. Slight, director for corporate relations in the College's Office of University Advancement, is the former executive director of development of the School of Business Administration at the University of Southern California, where he was responsible for all fund-raising activities.

Joyce Johnson Timberlake is a C.P.A. and a supervisor for Lucas, Boatwright and Associates in Roanoke, Va. Her husband, Otis, teaches and coaches at James River High School. Their daughter, Kristin, 15, attends the same school.

Paul M. Dainer recently moved to Greenville, N.C., where he is assistant professor of medicine in the hematology/oncology section. He is a captain in the Naval Reserve Medical Corps.

David R. White is finishing a one-year tour with the Army's combined command in Korea. He will be reassigned to Ft. Lee in April. This will be his last assignment before retiring from the service. His wife, Rosemarie Benedict, is mid-way through a master's degree in religious education. She spends her "spare time" being a temporarily single parent to their busy 16-year-old daughter, Robbin.

Marilyn Giorgio Puchalski lives in Southampton, Pa., with her husband, Walt, and two teenage children, David and Diane. Marilyn is an associate professor of computer science at Bucks County Community College in Newtown, Pa. She saw Mary Clare Fitzgerald in Washington, D.C., and they are trying to organize a Gamma Phi Beta get-together. She asks that you write to her if you are interested.

Pat Milliren is still operating a bed-and-breakfast inn in Maple Falls, Wash., near Mt. Baker. Last summer she had a temporary botany job participating in a vegetation survey related to spotted owls. Pat says she worked in incredible old forests, but she is getting too old for that type of scrambling.

Olivia Boggs Boon is preparing to leave Ithaca, N.Y., when her daughter Tili graduates from high school next year. She will join her husband who will be teaching at Princeton.

Robin Wood Mann writes that after living in Okinawa for a year, her family speaks a little Japanese and bows without thinking. Robin teaches English one day a week at a Japanese junior high school. She is taking Ikebana and a Japanese language course. Robin, Sheldon and their children have traveled to Japan, the Philippines and Korea. Christopher plays on his high school basketball team. Eric loves second grade and plays soccer. Melissa is in Montessori kindergarten and takes gymnastics.

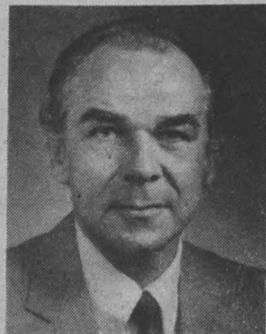

This year is a special one for our class. Why not make plans now to attend our 30th reunion?

Happy New Year to all! I will begin with my notes that missed being printed in the October Gazette.

The Alumni Office sent me two articles (The Virginia Gazette, June 17, 1987, and The Daily Press, July 15, 1987) on Sandy Fagan, director of Bacon Street substance abuse center since 1976. She received the 1987 Virginia Association of Drug and Alcohol Programs Distinguished Service Award. This annual award is given to an individual who "exemplifies the goals of the association through service to the citizens of Virginia." The association noted Sandy's leadership over the past four years in establishing a statewide training institute for substance abuse service providers. Under Sandy's direction, the institute has grown into one of the top events of its kind in the nation. The articles stated that Sandy was also cited for his 16 years of service with Bacon Street and his eight years as a member of the V.A.D.A. P. Bacon Street provides early intervention and treatment services for youth and operates the Williamsburg Hotline. Sandy also serves as chairman of the admission and release committee of Crossroads Community Youth Home and Family-Oriented Group Homes and on the substance abuse task force of the College of William and Mary. Sandy and wife, Lena, reside in James City County with daughter Madison.

(Mary) Cynara Stites wrote from New Haven, Conn., where she returned after receiving her M.S.W. from the University of Wisconsin in 1972. She worked as a primary therapist on an inpatient psychiatric unit at Yale-New Haven Hospital. Since 1975, she has been a psychiatric social worker at the University of Connecticut's Student Mental Health Service on the main campus in Storrs. She has also returned to graduate school at the University to earn a Ph.D. in higher education administration while she continues to work. On Aug. 8, 1982, her daughter, Jessica, was born and she expresses how her daughter has been everything a parent could wish for in a child. Last July she married Bill Localio, a guidance counselor, and is in the process of having Bill become her daughter's adopted father. There was one classmate at her wedding, Marti Hunt, who teaches

Bruce Dallas began a new job with the American Petroleum Institute after serving as press secretary with Pennsylvania's Department of Environmental Resources and a career with the Associated Press. Bruce's wife, Sylvia, a Dennison College (Ohio) graduate, is active in the Junior League's guest speakers program. Daughter, Corinne, 6, is in first grade, and son, Adam, is wild and crazy at 3.

Last fall, I had a nice letter from Betsy Ewing Tebow. Betsy finished her Ph.D. in art history last August. Her daughter Kristy entered East Carolina University in Greenville last fall. Son Josh started high school, and the youngest, Robbie, is 2 years old. Betsy added that she lunched with Linda Beerbower Burke at the National Gallery last March as Linda was in town for a tax lawyers' convention for which she is an officer. In April '86, Betsy ran into Ginya Kerns as they were both delivering papers at the Virginia Humanities Conference at William and Mary. Ginny is a professor of anthropology at the College.

Davenport & Company of Virginia, Inc., of Richmond, Va. (member of the New York Stock Exchange and American Stock Exchange), announced last fall that Phil Rohrbach joined its firm as an account executive. Prior to this, Phil was with Central Fidelity Bank, serving for the last six years as executive vice president in charge of the retail branch system in central Virginia. Phil also serves as a panel chairman of the allocations committee for the United Way and is on the executive board of the Richmond Symphony.

Christian, Barton, Epps, Brent & Chapell announced on Oct. 15, 1987, that Carol Crute Raper had joined their Richmond, Va., law firm.

At Wheeling College in West Virginia, Leslie Wild Frankovitch is an administrator and a faculty member.

In charge of the human resources department, Bernie Gomez Grobe is still with the Dallas Independent School System. Husband, Bob, who develops achievement tests and does some work with micro-computers, is with the same school system. In February, they will vacation on Margarita Island, off the Venezuela coast, in celebration of Bernie's March birthday.

Last December, Barbara Pate Glacel spent two weeks in South Korea checking out Bob's home for the next 18 months. Bob is the commander of the 1st Battalion, 4th Field Artillery, at the northernmost artillery battalion in South Korea. Barbara had a successful first year as director of executive development programs for HAY Systems, Inc. Oct. 1 she was named as general manager of their management programs division. Barbara is also an appointee to the Army Science Board, a group of 100 educators, consultants and scientists who advise the Secretary of the Army on research, development and acquisition. Barbara advises on Army family research and issues as well as competition in contracting within the Department of the Army. The Glacels' three girls — Jennifer, Sarah and Ashley, are all doing quite well in school. They all take piano lessons, ballet/jazz or gymnastics, and all are Girl Scouts.

Since last April, Barbara Burket has been working on a contract for Delco, part of General Motors, doing software for the C-17 cargo carrier for the Air Force. Living in Santa Barbara, Calif., Barbara had her usual traveling adventures last year — the highlight being a five-day sea kayaking trip from Orcas Island through the San Juan Islands of Washington State. Barbara has earned her securities and insurance licenses for a "possible career" in financial security.

Tom and I, three children, dog and cat managed to survive a four-month major renovation that turned into a six-month ordeal due to changing the "kitchen man" in mid-stream. Summer heat, bugs of all shapes and colors and no kitchen (no appliances or running water in the kitchen area from July to early December!) were the outstanding highlights of the project. I am sure we could write our own movie, "Money Pit," or add at least 10 chapters to an Erma Bombeck book! But all is close to normal again . . . and Christmas breakfast in our new kitchen with its renovations was a delight and good reason to celebrate!

I hope you all will be enjoying the remainder of the winter. If you get snowed in, take pen in hand and send me your news. If you're sunning on the beach, do the same thing!

Homecoming Weekend in Williamsburg was absolutely beautiful. The weather was perfect for returning to the campus and renewing acquaintances. I have to admit that I wasn't quite as good this time about writing down information about everyone as I was five years ago, but I'd love to hear from all of you so I can get the facts straight.

I met Linda Heck Blanton and her husband, Hugh. They recently moved from Texas to Johnson City, Tenn. Linda was formerly a librarian, and her husband is a teacher.

Peggy Drake came from Baltimore where she is a transportation planner for the city of Baltimore and is busy in church and other volunteer work.

Nancy Sturgeon Luzar and Rex '73 live in Williamsburg. Nancy is busy with three children, the youngest of which is a toddler who will keep her going for some time to come. Rex is a vice president of a company that installs insulation for commercial businesses.

Bob and Jackie Sivertsen Wooldridge live in Northern Virginia, where Jackie is busy at home with three children and Bob is an attorney.

Janice Baskin lives in Northern Virginia and works for the Internal Revenue Service. Vickie Volk Holpe and husband, Mark, live in Roanoke and have three sons.

Lindy Almond Emory and husband, Bob, live in New Bern, N.C., and have two daughters. Lindy works part time in accounting and is involved in church and school activities.

I understand that Jack Hurley was down from Vermont where he is putting his outgoing personality to work as an entrepreneur of several restaurants and an inn.

Steve and Barbara Bledsoe Keller, Northern Virginia residents, came for Homecoming. Steve is a pediatric intensive care specialist at Fairfax Hospital, and they are expecting a child this winter.

I saw Liz Baltes and Judy Martin Bowman. Liz was recently married — congratulations!

Kathy Graf Merlo has lived in Miami since 1974. She got her M.B.A. from Florida International University and got married there so it's home now. She is a consultant for Cullinet Software, specializing in its manufacturing MRPII system. Formerly she was manager of manufacturing systems at Racal-Milgo in Miami.

Jack Russell is a management consultant for the National Electrical Contractors Association with responsibility for all management services in a 15-southern-state region. When he wrote, he and his wife, Lee Chichester '79, planned to move from Houston to Raleigh by the end of 1987.

Sally Sims has been named librarian for the National Trust of Historic Preservation Library at the University of Maryland, College Park. The library was recently dedicated at the School of Architecture. Sally holds an M.A. in American studies from George Washington University and a master's degree in library science from the College of Library Science of Clarion University. From 1979 to 1981 she was coordinator of the historic resources survey of Clarion County, Pa., and from 1983 to 1987 was user education librarian in the Ohio State University libraries.

Tomeka Watkinson Gipson works at Pitt Memorial Hospital in Greenville, N.C., where she is system manager for the laboratory computer system. She is very involved with U.S. Power Squadrons, an organization dedicated to boating education and safety, and enjoys her three afghan hounds.

Mike and Jean Henry Stakias were at Homecoming, traveling from Haverton, Pa. Mike is a partner in the Philadelphia law firm of Blank, Rome, Comisky & McCauley and has been elected to the firm's management committee or governing body. His areas of concentration include securities, corporate and partnership law. From 1977 to 1980 he was a senior attorney for the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington. Mike received his law degree from Thomas M. Cooley Law School in 1976 and his master's of law degree from New York University School of Law in 1977 while attending as a securities regulation fellow.

Harriett Stanley is serving as treasurer of the Society of the Alumni and serving her second term on the board of directors of the Society. She writes that while she was wandering around at an auction in Wicomico Church (on the Northern Neck), she ran into Ken Hontz '75 and his wife. Ken owns Ken Hontz Chevrolet in Gloucester, and they found themselves bidding against each other on several antique items. They worked together on the 1972 Colonial Echo.

Larry Bennett is co-author of a recently published book, Chicago: Race, Class, and the Response to Urban Decline. Larry is associate professor and chair of the political science department at DePaul University. The book is published by Temple University Press and is the first in a new series on comparative American cities. The book discusses the social and economic forces that have shaped Chicago and continue to influence it.

Barbara Brant Dent is the foreign language department chairperson at the Thomas Jefferson High School for Science and Technology in Annandale, Va. She will participate in a three-week tour of Japan this summer, touring science and technology facilities that will assist in implementing further training to students in the math and sciences areas.

Robin Chambers Hart and her husband, Terry, live near Atlanta in Gainesville, Ga. She is back in school at Emory University working on a Ph.D. in experimental pathology. Her research involves investigating the mechanisms of Accutane-induced birth defects and is funded fully by the March of Dimes. The family has one dog, no children and half an airplane.

If you're keeping track of Andy Tisinger, he's now living in Clifotn, Va. Mary Anne Maher has moved from Silver Spring, Md., to Shreveport, La.

I'm typed out for now. I should be up to date on all the notes you've sent to me. Keep them coming.

Not a great turnout at Homecoming this year, but that isn't unexpected for a 13th reunion. We're already starting to look ahead to our next "biggie," the 15th reunion in 1989. I did see a couple of classmates, however, and picked up a few scoops.

Tom Reid and his wife, Kathy, are living in downtown Norfolk where Tom has a solo practice in criminal law. They have two children — Connor, 5, and Lindsay, 4 — and a third is on the way. Tom sees Bill Carmines on occasion. Bill and wife, Teresa, live in Virginia Beach with their 2-year-old son, Matthew. Bill works for the Norfolk newspaper, The Virginian-Pilot.

Classmates are moving up in the business world. Sometimes people write about a recent promotion, but I also receive business news from various newspapers and press releases. Did you know that the Alumni Society receives newspaper clippings from a clipping service? Often I'll get photocopies of articles in newspapers I have never heard of, forwarded by the College. Other times, a bank or large corporation will put out a press release and send a copy to the person's university for alumni newsletters like ours.

So, promotions: Michael D. Wesson (a

Previously he was associated with BDM Corporation in McLean, Va., as assistant controller and with the Washington, D.C., offices of Price Waterhouse. He lives in Oakton, Va., with his wife, Sandy '75, and their two daughters.

Another banking executive, Barbara Rambo, lives with her family in New York. Unlike most of our classmates who have skipped around from job to job since graduation, Barb has spent her entire career with Bank of America in New York, where she has progressed from section manager to senior account manager to account officer to international banking lending officer. Last November she was named senior vice president, one of three in the bank's Northeast/Southeast Institutional Group. Somewhere along the way, she managed to get an M.B.A. in finance from New York University as well. Congratulations, Barb!

Katherine Todd Wilke has been promoted to assistant director of development at the National Center for State Courts in Williamsburg, giving her complete responsibility for the center's corporate-giving program as well as its Distinguished Service Award program. Kathy joined the National Center in 1982 as a development staff associate. She came to the Center from Colonial Williamsburg, where she served for two years as coordinator of research and writing in the development office. Kathy lives in Williamsburg with her husband, Tom '75, and daughter, Mary Katherine, 4.

The new assistant head, acquisition services, Virginia Commonwealth University Libraries, is Steven H. Murden.

Jeffrey Donald Cronin is the director of historic districts for the city of Boston.

Mike and Bonnie Thacher Guari had their second child last October. Their new daughter, Carolyn Elizabeth, joins her brother, John, and parents in their Edina, Minn., home.

Kathryn Lynn McMullan was married last May to fellow physician, Michael D. Lahey, Dr. Kathy and husband moved to Brighton, Colo., where she opened her practice as an ENT specialist. (I probably didn't say that correctly, it's ear-nose-and-throat.)

Hampton's New American Theatre has received lots of good press since it was purchased and rehabilitated two years ago by Cabot Wade and partner, Dick Smith. The theater shows movies and live entertainment (even, on occasion, the Smith & Wade band) to the audience, which sits in comfortable seats and is served drinks and snacks on little round marble tables the duo rescued from the old Buckroe Beach amusement park. Looks like an "experience."

Jim and I saw Wendy and Tom Watkins over the Christmas holidays when they were in Richmond visiting Tom's parents. They came by for dinner with their two daughters, Catherine, 5, and Caroline, 3. Tom changed jobs not long ago and works for Abbott Labs in Chicago. He and his family recently moved to the suburbs, Lake Forest, after having lived downtown for several years and say they like the change. They have a house on the lake in Michigan that they visit whenever they can "get away."

I saw an article in the Richmond newspaper about Bill Gaines who suffers from incurable neurofibromatosis, sometimes called Elephant Man's disease. Although Bill was given only six months to live back in 1985, he beat the odds. He is confined to a wheelchair and lives with his parents in an apartment in the Fan district. Bill spends his time reading and watching television and pursuing his main hobby, politics. His address is 1814-A Hanover Ave., nue, Richmond, VA 23220 if any friends would like to write.

Now don't rely on that clipping service I mentioned to send me all my news! Do your part and drop me a note now and then.

Greetings all! Hope your new year and phase two of tax reform are off to a smooth start. We've had the usual slow but steady trickle of news items this time so let's get to it, shall we?

Mark Riley is an insurance agent with New York Life in the Williamsburg area and he recently qualified for the CLU designation. He is a member of the Million Dollar Round Table and was named agent of the year for his area.

Pryor Baird has had a most accomplished career since graduation. He obtained a Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina and then practiced psychology in New York for two years. In 1982 he joined the staff of the University of Virginia Counseling Center and in 1983 was accepted to medical school at the university, where he is now a senior. During that time he has continued to see as many as 15 psychiatric patients a week. He and a partner are forming a support group called "Obstacles" for people with handicaps or chronic illnesses to encourage these people to discuss their afflictions and to show them their personal obstacles can be overcome. Those of you who know Pryor can imagine the personal obstacles he himself has overcome.

As usual, there is some news from classmates pursuing the legal profession. John Burke works for McGuire, Woods, Battle & Boothe in Richmond while his wife, Cathy Collins Burke teaches math at a middle school in Bowling Green. They and their three children recently moved to an old farmhouse in Caroline County.

Madaline Herlong is an attorney for a firm in New Orleans. She obtained a master's degree in English from the University of Virginia in 1981 and her law degree from the same institution in 1984. Her husband, Don Haycraft '77 is also an attorney in New Orleans.

I got a long letter from Clarke Franke that brought me up to date on his whereabouts and goings on. It was long because he has accomplished so much. His first

PHILIPPINE NEWS PUBLISHER DELIVERS AQUINO LECTURE

Alejandro Esclamado, an attorney and editor/publisher of the Philippine News, the largest Filipino-American newspaper in the United States and Canada, delivered the third annual Benigno Aquino Memorial Lecture at William and Mary on Jan. 28. Sponsored by the Department of Anthropology and the Asia and Africa Society, the lecture is given annually by a member of the Filipino community and honors the slain political leader, Benigno Aquino. Esclamado is a leading spokesperson for the Filipino-American national unity movement and a vocal opponent of the Marcos regime.

eight years after graduation were spent teaching and coaching in Williamsburg. He taught English at Lafayette High School and was assistant lacrosse coach at W&M during 1977-78 and head coach from 1979 to 84. He obtained a master's degree in teaching English from W&M in 1979 and was named Outstanding Young Educator in Williamsburg in 1981. After the 1984 season, when lacrosse at W&M was about to be demoted from a varsity intercollegiate sport to a club sport, Clarke finally answered his father's persistent call to join the family business in his hometown of Baltimore.

He is now a sales representative for heating and ventilation equipment for commercial and industrial applications and is also secretary of the company. He coaches two young lacrosse teams and will be taking a group of kids to England for two weeks next summer. On top of all that, Clarke is getting married in September — I hope he left space on the docket for a honeymoon.

Well, that's the news for now. It is still too cold for all your outdoor chores, why not take a few minutes to drop me a line? Thanks.

Best wishes to all of you as we move into the new year. This year will be our 10th reunion. If you have changed your address within the last year, please write to me or to the Alumni Office so that we will have your correct address on file. I hope many of you will be able to attend Homecoming this year.

Richmond has become a popular location for filming movies and television miniseries. Steve Culp was in Richmond through mid-December filming the miniseries, "Lincoln." He portrayed John Hay, Lincoln's secretary. Watch for the results on NBC. When he is not on location, Steve resides in New York City.

Jane Tucker and Philip Russo (M-W '84) were married in May. They are living in Virginia Beach and working in Norfolk. Jane is an associate with the law firm of Vandeventer, Black, Meredith and Martin. Philip is with the Jonathan Corporation.

Ellen Terry Whitlow is living in Silver Spring, Md. She will be starting medical school in the fall.

Lynn Whitlock is living in Pittsburgh where she is studying for a master's degree in public and international affairs at the University of Pittsburgh.

John Stephan is associate director of computing activities at Columbia University's Graduate School of Business. He started working on a Ph.D. in business last fall.

Anne Schmutz is a research librarian with Time, Inc., working for all of its publications — Time, Life and Sports Illustrated.

Farley Shiner is working as the controller for the Clifton Forge-Waynesboro Telephone Company in Staunton. He serves as a general department manager in charge of the company's accounting department.

Pam Maybury Scholtz and her husband, John, welcomed their third family addition, Nicholas John, in August. Pam continues to work full time as a senior project manager at Mass Mutual, and John is a mailman. They hope to attend Homecoming.

Sandy Smith, his wife, Judy, and their children, Adam and Jake, live outside Philadelphia. Both Sandy and Judy are lawyers with the U.S. Department of Justice.

Ralph Pene will be spending the next two or three years as a staff pediatrician at the Naval Hospital in Guam. He has traveled to Hong Kong and plans to vacation in Bali and Singapore in the spring.

Robert Scott Reddersen married Cynthia Hadley in Oct. '86. He is associate producer with WETA-TV26 in Washington, D.C.

Mary Grayson Segars and her husband, Al, are living in Hartsville, S.C. Mary stays at home with their son, Luke, and pursues her interest in art. She teaches lessons in drawing and does private commissions. Al is a veterinarian.

Lawrence Kochard is vice president in the capital markets department of Goldman Sach & Company in New York. He married Jennifer L. Johnson in September.

Stephen Scott Christenson now lives in a restored 100-year-old farmhouse in Peshtigo, Wis. Since graduation, he has been busy with a number of undertakings, including earning a diploma from the Institute of Children's Literature, completing water safety instruction and earning a skipper's certificate from the Ephraim Yacht Club in Ephraim, Wis., where he is a summer resident. In 1986, he became the director of the Ephraim Village Players. He directed two plays, the second of which he wrote.

He then became a reporter for the Peshtigo Times and also worked for his father's accounting business. He again wrote and directed plays during the summer of '87. He served as reporter for the Door County Advocate, covering all of the Ephraim Yacht Club activities.

Stephen won the U.S. Yacht Racing Union sportsmanship award. He also started Sirock Brighton Artists and gave his first film seminar at the Ephraim Village Hall. This summer he plans to do two children's plays. He also plans to seek the publication of a novel he has been working on since '84, Crimon's Island. It will be dedicated to William and Mary and W. Samuel Sadler.

Forrest Gander's book of poems, Rush to the Lake, is due soon from Alice James Books in Cambridge, Mass. He read his work for the Academy of American Poets at the Donnell Library in New York on Dec. 8. Mark Craver's book of poems, The Problems of Grace, published by Lost Roads Publishers, continues to sell well. Henri Cole's first book of poems, The Marble Queen, Atheneum, received encomium from the New York Times "Book Review."

Another poet, Mike Perrow, is reportedly "living in an old Ford Galaxy a half block from the ocean in Virginia Beach." Mike recently won an award for a pantoum. Thank you, Forrest, for these contributions!

Skip Sacks is a partner with the firm of Scanelli & Shapiro in Norfolk. He specializes in commercial real estate finance and litigation. During the last four years he has spent a lot of time renewing his high school love, surfing.

Plan ahead for Homecoming this fall. I hope to see you there!

Happy New Year! I hope your holidays were enjoyable and relaxing. Right now, I'm writing to you from the Pacific Northwest, specifically from the Seattle area. I have spent more than the last two months here as a result of the relocation of our corporate offices from Darien, Conn., to

The Northern Virginia alumni chapter enjoyed its annual fall cocktail party and alumni gathering on Nov. 12 at the Torpedo Factory Art Center in Alexandria. Pictured serving from the famous Hard Times Cafe are (l-r) Kevin McGahren '83; Steve McDaniel '82; Joanna Ashworth '84, chapter president; Ed Walinsky '76; and Karen Malecki '78. The Northern Virginia alumni chapter continues to enjoy a calendar of varied events under the leadership of Joanna Ashworth.

Bellevue, Wash. I must say that this area has some spectacular scenery — we're boarded on the east by the Cascades and on the west by the Olympics. From certain offices on our floor, on a clear day, I can see Mt. Rainier.

However, as you may have guessed, there aren't too many clear days! I remember the television show, "Here Comes the Brides," the theme song of which had a line stating that "the bluest skies you've ever seen are in Seattle," and I have to wonder where they came up with that one! In all fairness, I'm told that winter is the worst time to experience the area.

Once I return to the northeast, I'll be taking a job as director of accounting for a private investment firm in the Big Apple! I'm looking forward to the experience and am getting anxious to be home once again.

I have quite a few news briefs from across the country and even around the world in a few cases. Please excuse the brevity of some of the following announcements — however, much better to have a short note than no news at all!

Eileen Cleary McGraw is working for USF & G in Baltimore. Eileen was recently designated an associate of the Society of Actuaries.

This past spring, Marine Capt. Evan English participated in "Team Spirit '87," an intensive exercise that was held in the Republic of Korea. Members of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps from the U.S. and Korea were involved in the program, the goal of which was to improve understanding and cooperation between the attending groups and to improve the military's defensive training with the Korean Marines. More recently, Evan participated in an exercise in California. One really can see the world with the armed forces!

Julie Kelley starred this past summer in the Brockport (N.Y.) Summer Arts Festival production of "Anything Goes." Julie has been very active in the area's theatrical productions, including "West Side Story" and "The Fantasticks." She has also participated for the last three years in the GeVa Theater's Plays-in-Progress program. In her "spare" time, Julie spends time with her husband, Daniel Izzo, and works at St. Mary's Hospital in Rochester.

Celia Davoli graduated from Georgetown University Medical School in May and was slated to begin her residency in pediatrics at the University of Virginia Hospital.

For the past two years, Jakarta, Indonesia, has been home for Susan Butler Niblock and her husband, Tom. However, in July, Tom's tour of duty in Asia came to an end, and they returned to the D.C. area. Susan was an accountant in the Budget and Fiscal Office in Jakarta, and Tom was a political officer in the embassy there.

Greg Terman received his medical degree from the University of Miami Medical School in May and was scheduled to begin his internship and residency in anesthesiology at the University of Washington right here in Seattle. Besides having completed his M.D., Greg also received his Ph.D. in physiological psychology from UCLA in 1985.

Susan Piedmont is teaching design studio at the School of Architecture at the University of Maryland as well as putting in a full day's work at the architectural firm of RTKL in D.C. Last winter, one of Susan's articles was published in the Journal of Architectural Education.

Bruce Patterson writes from Atlanta to say that he has recently been promoted to advisory instructor in the IBM National Marketing Education program.

Capt. David Puster and his wife, Becky, moved their family, consisting of son, Matt, into a new home in Hampton this fall. David is still working hard for the Army and recently took another position at Fort Monroe.

Susan Rappe Sullivan wrote with the news that Keith accepted a new position with Coherent Medical and will be selling medical laser equipment. Susan and Keith just built a new home to accommodate their young family, Sarah, 3, and Susan Daly, 1. Home for the Sullivans is now in Vienna.

If you live in the Chicago area, you are probably quite familiar with the name of Karen Przypyszny; Karen has enjoyed her work with the Chicago area alumni group. She has been busy with her job as housing development officer with the Illinois Housing Development Authority.

Karen had news of a couple of other alumni. Celia Anderson is at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, in her second year of business school. Evalyn Gates Pelands is finishing her Ph.D. in physics at Case Western Reserve.

Susan Meachum Stonesifer and her husband, John, are happy to be back in the D.C. area after spending time in Florida. John is rector of two Episcopal churches, one of which, St. Andrews, was founded a year earlier than W&M. More exciting news is the announcement of the arrival of Sarah Anne, a Christmas 1986 baby. Susan is already talking of reserving a spot for Sarah in the class of 2008! Congratulations.

Congratulations are also due to Rick Weitz and his wife, Kathy, who have two reasons to celebrate. This summer, Rick and Kathy became the proud parents of twin sons, Joshua Dean and Caleb William. Although the arrival of twins may mean twice the work, it also means double the fun and joy. I'm sure the Weitz household in Sterling always has something going on! Rick was recently promoted to territory manager for Alcon Labs.

I received an informative letter from Tom Morris. The big news is that Tom was married this fall to Maxine Pollack, a UCLA graduate. They traveled to southern Spain for their honeymoon and are now looking for a house in the L.A. area. Tom is still working for Mars, Inc., at Kal Kan Foods, and Maxine is financial planning manager for Denny's Restaurants.

Fortunately, quite a few Indians were able to make the trip to L.A. to be with Tom and Maxine on their big day. Bill Grayson and Steve Waltrich '81 traveled from Northern Virginia; Bill is working for British Aerospace, and Steve works for AT&T. Paul Carrazzone came from Denver, where he works for Cable Investments, Inc.

Joel Stromberg came from San Francisco, where he is working for Wells Fargo and completing his Ph.D. Susan Cockrell works in Atlanta for Avery Label, and John Ranks is practicing law in Houston. Sheila Muir '83 and Kimball Call '83 traveled down the road from Santa Monica.

Rachel Witmer has been extremely busy. She worked two years for Intelsat, the world satellite organization, and then decided to go to law school at the University of Virginia. Rachel graduated in 1986 and worked for Reid & Priest, a New York firm in its D.C. office. This past fall, Rachel accepted a position with the Securites and Exchange Commission in the General Counsel's office. She will be working on a team that will help revise the federal securities laws. Among all her other interests, Rachel has had the chance to travel throughout Europe, Japan and California.

Another newsy letter arrived in the mails from Jeff Sluyter. After spending some time in Saudi Arabia, Jeff returned to Columbia University to pursue his master's in international affairs. He continued his studies in Geneva after graduation; his research was centered on Central America and particularly on the Nicaraguan revolution.

In Sept. 1986, Jeff took a job teaching in Managua and had the chance to experience life in Central America first-hand. This summer, Jeff taught three courses on Latin America history in a Boston-area "Upward Bound" program and, this fall, began doctoral studies at the University of Texas at Austin. An added plus that came from time spent in Nicaragua is Jeff's engagement to a woman he met.

Jeff keeps up with Bill Childs and mentioned that Bill is considering branching out into another career. Bill wrote a song for his girlfriend and decided to send it to Lionel Ritchie on the chance that it would be recorded by Lionel. It just so happens that the song, "Barb's Wild Lovin'," — may be appearing on Lionel's next album, so keep an eye out for the song! In case his music career may not be entirely successful, Bill continues climbing the ladder at Hallmark in Kansas City.

A couple other classmates have appeared in the media. Interestingly enough, the topic of both articles was a dream-come-true. Karri Fritz was the subject of a lengthy news article in The Milwaukee Journal. The article dealt with Karri's boutique, the "Executive Gallery," which specializes in clothes for the high-profile businesswoman, and her private law practice. The boutique has been highly successful since Karri and her sister opened it in 1984. Additionally, Karri's law practice, primarily domestic law, has done very well. Besides the day-to-day activities of both careers, Karri manages to spend time traveling to New York and Chicago for buying trips and participating in numerous professional groups. One more thing that was occupying Karri's time was the planning of her wedding to Thomas Klaus, which was scheduled for this past fall.

Becky Riddle was the subject of an article in the Roanoke Times & World News. The article chronicled her rise through the ranks to become the most-watched female anchor in the Roanoke/Lynchburg viewing area. Becky's career in broadcasting began while a student at W&M. She interned at WSLV-TV in the summer of our junior year. After graduation, Becky started out on the radio and, a year later, moved to television with WDBJ-TV, channel 7, as a weekday reporter and assistant to the weekend anchor. Becky soon became the anchor for the 11 p.m. news, a position that she held for five years. This fall, however, Becky gave her final broadcast with WDBJ-TV; and moved to Boston to live with her husband, Zachary Stewart Whitlow, is a resident at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Brighton, Mass. Although married since 1985, their respective careers have kept them in separate cities. If you live in the Boston area, don't be surprised if you see a familiar face on the local news since it may be Becky!

That's about all I have for now. I hope you enjoy reading this as much as I have enjoyed writing it! Until the next column, be sure to keep me informed as to what you've been doing. Take care and don't work too hard.

INSTITUTE BOOK WINS DUNNING PRIZE

A book published by the Institute of Early American History and Culture at William and Mary has won the John H. Dunning Prize for outstanding writing in United States history. Presented by the American Historical Association, the honor went to Tobacco and Slaves: The Development of Southern Cultures in the Chesapeake, 1690-1800, written by Allan Kulikoff. The prize, which carries a cash award of $1,000, is offered annually to a young scholar for an outstanding monograph judged on its research accuracy, originality and literary merit.

an exciting addition to my household — we are expecting our second child in April!

Congratulations to all the 1987 newlyweds! Edie Longenbach, a lawyer in Philadelphia, married Christopher Churchill; in attendance were Lai Lee-Birman, Margaret Lockhart, Steve Brown and Glenn Shine.

Eleanor Ferguson attended the garden wedding of Tami Olenich and Bill Savage in Wyckoff, N.J., held at Tami's parents' home. The rain graciously held off until after the festivities, and the newlyweds celebrated in New York City then honeymooned in Canada. Bill is a lawyer, and Tami is a medical illustrator for an area V.A. hospital. Eleanor continues running and some racing. She recently volunteered to participate in a study of women runners testing aspects of strength and endurance and was put through some unusual paces with a cybex dynamometer!

Karri Fritz '81 married Thomas Klaus in Milwaukee under the watchful eye of the local press who was detailing "the perfect wedding." I'd expect nothing less from Karri, who has a private law practice, manages a dress shop, teaches paralegal classes at Mount Mary College and is involved in numerous community groups!

An Oct. 31 wedding in Wren Chapel uniting James Green III and Catherine Walker suitably ended with the wedding party making their entrance at the Royce Hotel (formerly the Hospitality House) reception wearing Hollownew masks. The couple made a cute Betty Boop and Frankenstein pair, and onlookers were understandably astonished!

I had the pleasure of attending a wedding at the Wren Chapel where Douglas Cook '81 and June Mei Mason were married by Rev. Danny McCoig '81. A host of W&M friends were present, including Doug Ackerson '80, Clay Perfall '80, Lenden Eakin '80 (an attorney in Roanoke), Pat Mulligan '80 (a hydrogeologist living near Ithaca, N.Y., with wife, Gretchen, and son, Seagh, almost a year old), Hal White '81, Bill Camp '81 (a curator with Nassau Company's Air & Space Museum in Long Island, N.Y.), Dave Roberts (a banker in Grafton), Glen Harding and wife, Kathy Hopkins '83, Mike Mulligan '84 and wife, Debbie Lipuma '84, Beth Scott '81, Dave Back '81, Heather Quinn (finishing up her geology master's thesis and weighing job offers) and Lisa Tipton McCoig.

Danny and Lisa live in Sharps, Va., where Danny is the pastor of Milden Presbyterian Church; Lisa recently earned her C.P.A. license, but presently her main job is tracking their spunky toddler, Molly.

Mike and Debbie are in Northern Virginia, where Mike deals in corporate investments and Debbie attends law school.

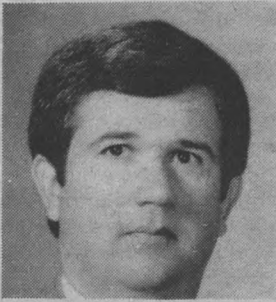

Glen and Kathy live in Manteo, N.C., where Glen has his fishing boat; Kathy's teaching is temporarily on hold while she battles North Carolina's certification red tape, but 2-year-old Mallory keeps her busy! So much for my recollections; if I had a memory lapse, forgive me, but isn't that typical in pregnancy?

A March wedding is planned for Connie Still and Steve Varnechy, a '79 graduate of Virginia Tech. Connie currently works for Wang Labs in Bethesda, Md., as a marketing consultant.

Paula Miente received her M.B.A. in May '86 from the University of Richmond and married Dennis Tarrant that fall.

Pursuing her M.B.A. is Sarah Armbrister, who was awarded a fellowship this school year at Virginia Tech. Heidi Ames is engaged in graduate studies at American University, but soon plans to head to Barcelona, Spain, with Ralston-Purina.

GARRETT BOOK LOOKS AT LAND USE

Since the early 1960s, land use issues have become increasingly important in American society. Often suburban communities have found themselves in the path of urban growth or have felt rapid growth pressure. How policy can be developed to cope with mounting land use problems and the role that regulation has in this policy is the topic of a new book, Land Use Regulation: The Impacts of Alternative Land Use Rights, by Martin A. Garrett, Jr., professor of economics at William and Mary.

Dec. '86 and is now stationed in Hawaii. She sent some great pictures, and I marveled at seeing her in flight gear with her own big plane! She loves the beauty of Hawaii and says she has a terrific squadron and a great time flying!

In related fields: Thomas Kusterer works for John Hopkins University's applied physics lab, primarily doing flight analysis and insists "physic-ing" is fun stuff!

Clayton Cromley is on the board of directors of an aviation software firm in St. Louis, Mo. He moonlights on weekends as a classical radio music announcer, keeps his voice in shape with voice lessons and sings with his church choir and with the St. Louis Symphony Chorus. He has enjoyed visits with Dr. Randy Binzer, now studying orthodontics at the University of Iowa prior to setting up practice in D.C., and Randy's wife, Anna Mortola who holds an MBA from Penn State and "conquers organizational charts at IBM" in Clay's word.

Clay was looking forward to the Nov. wedding of Dr. Rob Schellenberg who is finishing up his residency in Greenville, N.C., and hoping to touch base on that North Carolina visit with Rev. David Etheridge and wife Darlene Pastore. David tends the Presbyterian flock in Snow Hill, N.C. and Darlene is taking time off from her accounting career to be with new baby, Calvin.

Another alumni recently in St. Louis is Dave Haden, who attended medical school there at Washington University. He is currently in D.C. for his residency in internal medicine at Washington Hospital Center and would like to locate some alumni in the area. His address is 320 Taylor St., N.W., Apt. N41, Washington, DC 20011.

Anne Marie Huschle Tylar was the subject of a New York Times write-up for winning an essay contest on "What Makes the Perfect Waiter." She works in a Mahattan restaurant and is an aspiring actress. Her prize? A coast-to-coast culinary tour for two. Enjoy!

Also in New York is Rose Gonzales, who manages a sales territory for a marketing group that distributes medical lab products. She hopes to go on to graduate school this year.

Richard Saunders lives in Toronto, N.J., and works as an associate with the Newark law firm of Sellan, Richardson, Stuart & Chisholm.

Mark David Feitelson moved to Spotswood, N.J., and to become a father in December. Boy or girl?

In D.C., Beth Comstock Manderfield has been appointed manager of corporate relations with NBC Washington. Also in the metro area is Beverly Carson, a medical account executive with Bausch & Lomb.

James Fish has been promoted to vice president with Central Fidelity Bank in Richmond. Also in Richmond, working for Ukrop's Supermarkets, Inc., is Konrad Spicer, who owns a new home in Midlothian.

Kevin Doyle writes from Charlottesville where his wife, Jacquie LeTende studies for her M.B.A. in Wahoo-land while Kevin is on the road quite a bit working for the Addiction Treatment Program at Arlington Hospital in Northern Virginia.

He and Jon Huddleston have organized a successful softball team that plays in Northern Virginia's Fairfax County league and sports more than a slight W&M twist with players including: Clay Warner '81, Steve McDaniel, Mike Holleran '83, Joe Claytor '83, Kevin McGahren '83, Billy Grossman '83, J.D. Neary '84, Jim Hoffman J.D. '86 and Herbie Hecht J.D. '86. Scorekeeper is Christy Belt Grossman '83.

Michelle Coster Quinn married her high school sweetheart, and they now live in Louisville, Ky., with daughter Kelly Nicole. Michelle works with a private foundation, and her husband is with the FBI.

The only out-of-country alumna I heard about is Sheila Flynn, who is a foreign service officer in the economic section at the American Embassy in Beijing. She says that she has finally mastered Chinese!

Keep in touch — my next deadline is Feb. 23; so, write soon!

Happy 1988 to all of you. This year will be an exciting one for me as we work on the November elections.

To help ring in the new year, I spent the afternoon on New Year's Eve in New York with Amy Marcos, Martin Lopez '81, Brad Angevine and Alison Hawley. What fun!

Martin has a great new apartment just around the corner from the Waldorf with views of Saks and the river! Martin graduated from the University of Chicago with an M.B.A. in May and spent the summer exploring Vancouver and British Columbia. In August, he started on Wall Street in oil and gas mergers and acquisitions, which included flying between Houston and New York City twice a week — boy, do those frequent flyer points add up! He has planned several trips, thanks to that insane traveling, including Hawaii in January, Rio in February for Carnival and Sydney in April. Martin caught me up on several W&M buddies.

Steve Correll '81 finished his B.F.A. degree at the Art Institute of Chicago, where he's lived for the past 3-1/2 years. This Christmas he moved out to San Francisco to continue his career in sculpture. For now, he is staying with Steve Avery and Mark Mays.

Bill Davis '83 is now in the divinity program at the University of Chicago after completing postgraduate work at Yale.

Payne and Marilyn Midgette '75 are celebrating a year of changes in Chicago — a new house in Inverness and a beautiful new baby boy, Payne IV. What class will he be in at W&M, 2009?

Mark Kulish earned an M.B.A. from the University of Chicago and now works in financial management for Marriott Corporation in Bethesda.

Martin recently spent a day in D.C. with Ryan Monroe '81, who has returned from nearly three years with the Peace Corps in Honduras. Armed with a master's in bilingual education from the University of Maryland, he works in D.C. developing language programs for recent immigrants.

Beth Sala '83 continues her meteoric rise on Wall Street, becoming a vice president at Shearson last year and making all her friends proud.

Amy Marcos has a new position with Marincos, marine electrical products, in San Francisco. I spent a few days with her in her gorgeous apartment in the city by the bay when I was on the West Coast for Sue Hammerland's '82 wedding. Sue married David DeSmith on Oct. 24 in Carmel, Calif.

Sue and David planned a full weekend of fun activities. All of the W&Mers stayed at the Mission Ranch, which is owned by none other than Clint Eastwood, a Republican mayor, I might add! Friday included a beach picnic (inside due to rain), and the rehearsal dinner was at the La Playa, a beautiful, old hotel in Carmel. Afterwards, we all ended up at a bonfire on the beach.

I had a chance to visit with Rob Swann '82, who is studying architecture at Harvard. Barbara Walsh '82 is as fun as ever and really enjoyed her first trip to the West Coast. She is working for the Department of Labor in D.C.

I rode down to Carmel with Beth Dodge '83 in a jeep along the coast, including the 17-mile drive — what country! Beth is continuing to work for Maryland Bank in Wilmington, Del., as a sales coordinator in its credit card division.

Beth and Eric Harder '82 made the trip out from Maryland are expecting their first child in May.

Monique Valenti Brannon '82 and Shaun came down from San Francisco for the weekend. Monique is an assistant vice president for the Bank of America. Monique and Shaun are enjoying married life and are having fun decorating their new house!

Back to Sue and David — the wedding was lovely and the reception was held at Sue's parents' home in Carmel. Sue's mom, Mary Jane Hammerland '58, gathered all of the W&M graduates together for a memorable wedding picture. After the wedding, Sue and David journeyed down the coast for a restful honeymoon before returning to the bitter weather in Minneapolis.

David attended Johns Hopkins for his undergraduate work and the University of Colorado at Boulder for a graduate program in creative writing. He is currently a writer for Campbell-Mithun Advertising. Sue continues to work for Art Paper and is busy with her own art as well! She had her first art showing at the Warm Gallery in Minneapolis from Aug. 28 through Sept. 26.

I spent the following weekend, Halloween, in New York, and, boy, was it wild. Where else could you see two people dressed up as the world trade towers and another dressed up as a camel? Sarah Williamson and I saw some amazing sights that night! Sarah has recently been promoted to marketing consultant for ISOTel, a telecommunications firm. During one of her business trips to the backwaters of New Jersey, I, too, happened to be in the Garden State working on campaigns, and we met in beautiful Secaucus for dinner.

On Halloween we saw Jerry Begley '85, who is in his last year at the University of Pennsylvania's School of Architecture.

Michelle Albert and Scott Vachris write that they were married on Oct. 3 in Alexandria, Va. Michelle's maid of honor was Claire Brooks, who will also be getting married in Richmond this spring. Bridesmaids included Lauren Onkey '85, who is now a graduate student at the University of Illinois; Marilyn Compton '85, who works in New York City; and Mary Dwyer Royce '83, who is working for the American Security Bank in Washington, D.C.

Craig Oliver '85, who is working for Pfizer, was a reader at the ceremony, and Catherine Dehoney '83 was the stellar vocalist. Many Tribesters were in attendance at the wedding reception, including the DJ, Carroll Howard '68 (a.k.a. Pee Wee).

Other alumni from the D.C. area included Brian Bates '83, Sheila McDonnell Bates, Ron Andrews, Lily Armistead Andrews, Ed Perez, Tracy Baynard '83, Kim Crace '83, William Musto, Julia Powell, George Smolik, Matthew Brady '83, Tim Kruse, Lori Buckius, Margee Mulhall, Luann Spruill, Joe Claytor '83, John Fithian, Nanette Davis Fithian '83 and Lisa Viar '85.

From the Big Apple came Tom Cullen, Martha Phillips and Ann Richter '83. Scott Gehsmann was a late scratch due to an accounting assignment in Peru.

The southern contingent included Jay Minnick '83, Kevin Hade, Neil McFarlane, Amy Arnold '82, Bill and Karen Prosser, Steve Tuttle '83 and Diane Hoekstra. Steve and Diane are planning a December wedding at the Wren Chapel.

A wacky time was had by all at the reception, which was followed by a keg party at stately Chesterbrook Manor. The newlyweds somehow survived the day and honeymooned in Bermuda. Scott and Michelle now reside in Arlington, Va.

I heard from Julia Mae-Shen Farr '84, J.D. '87. She told me all about her delightful wedding to Evan Farr J.D. '87 on May 23, 1987, at the Fairfax United Methodist Church. A traditional Chinese dinner banquet immediately followed the ceremony.

Several W&M alumni were among the wedding party and guests. Meg VanKirk '86 served as maid of honor. Meg is currently a statistical analyst for Royal Insurance Company in Charlotte, N.C. Bridesmaids included Kelly McDaniel Whitney, Sonia Sessoms and Betsy Fulcher '86. Sonia (pianist) and Betsy (soprano), two of Julia's Delta Omicron (music) little sisters, also shared their musical talents in the ceremony.

John Carbone served as the best man. Evan is eternally grateful to John, his high school buddy, for introducing him to Julia. John is finishing his final year at the University of Virginia's medical school.

Other W&M alumni in attendance were Marty Keck, Lisa Long '82, Heidi Ingram, Shally Musick, Pam Persigehl, Bob Seal, Wendy Rudolph '85, Steve Scott and Susan Bowe Scott '85, Jimmy Whitney '85 and Layne Russell J.D. '87 and his wife, Cathy.

Kelly and Jim Whitney are living in Roanoke. When Julia and Evan took the Virginia Bar Exam in Roanoke at the end of July, the Whitneys extended their warm hospitality by housing and feeding them as well as giving their all-around support.

After taking the bar exam, Julia and Evan flew to Hawaii for their long-awaited honeymoon on the islands of Oahu, Kauai and Maui. Now back on the mainland, Julia is working for the Interstate Commerce Commission, Office of Proceedings, in Washington, D.C. Evan, equipped with an undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania and a law degree from Marshall-Wythe, is working for the law firm of Kidwell, Kent & Sullivan in its Fairfax office. Julia and Evan are residing in Fairfax.

Carol Walyko married Dave Klinger. Carol is on a graduate study fellowship with TRW.

Steve Burns is living in D.C. as well and sent me some exciting tidbits about many of his W&M friends, some even too wild to print — you be sure to ask him about his tales when you see him.

Dave Ramey and I had a delightful lunch today. He and Jenny are enjoying married life in Bethesda. He reports that Phyllis and Josh Slocum are expecting their first offspring in April. Josh is a stockbroker for A.G. Edwards, and Phyllis is doing well as a senior underwriter for Prudential. They are living in Scottsdale, Ariz.

Tim Wilson has recently published The Report on IBM.

Outside of the D.C. area, Robert Love was designated a Naval aviator and was presented with the "Wings of Gold," which marked the culmination of 18 months of flight training.

In Colorado, Laurie Thornton writes that she is in her third year of vet school, which includes clinical work. K. Page Larson continues in her position as curator/registrar at the Mary Ball Washington Museum in Lancaster, Va.

WAYNE LORGUS '75
PROMOTED BY CAMPBELL

Campbell Soup Company has announced the appointment of Wayne R. Lorgus '75 to the position of general manager-breakfast business unit of the newly reorganized convenience meals group of Campbell U.S.A. Lorgus moved to his new appointment from the position of assistant to the president, Campbell U.S.A., which he held since last June. He joined Campbell in 1982.

ALUMNUS NAMED TO TREASURY POSITION

John K. Meagher '63 has been named assistant secretary for legislative affairs for the Department of the Treasury. A 1965 graduate of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, Meagher formerly served as minority counsel for the U. S. House of Representatives. His wife, Laura Y. Youngblood Meagher, is a 1965 graduate of the College.

DISCOVERY PROGRAM
SET FOR JUNE 26-JULY 16

The Discovery Program, sponsored by the Office of Admission at William and Mary, will be held this year from June 26 to July 16 on campus. Designed for rising high school seniors, the week-long program offers valuable courses on planning for admission to college. More than 277 students from 28 states and Austria and Egypt attended the program last year. For more information call or write Dean Gary Ripple, Office of Admission, College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, VA 23185 (Telephone: 804-253-4223, 4224).

Mark Johnson Hall is now living in New York City. After graduation, Mark joined Electronic Data Systems in Rochester, N.Y. He moved to New York City this past spring to work with Citicorp.

Erin Sheehy has joined the Richmond law firm of Christian, Barton, Epps, Brent and Chappell as an associate attorney. Her work will substantially be devoted to tax and estate planning. Erin graduated from the Marshall-Wythe School of Law in 1987.

Sharon Bomgardner is also a recent law school graduate. Sharon graduated cum laude from the Dickinson School of Law in 1987. She was a member of the Wool-sack Society, which includes only the top 15 percent of the graduating class and also received the Edward N. Polisher Federal Income Taxation Award for her exemplary performance in taxation courses. Sharon was recognized for her outstanding performance as personnel coordinator of the Trial Moot Court Board.

Speaking of the law and income taxation (or lack thereof), I recently returned from Las Vegas where I won $50 at the blackjack tables! I came back just in time to see many W&M friends at our annual Christmas affair. Laurie and Chris Benson, Alison and Greg Miller and Linda and Kord Basnight all exchanged stories about married life. Many Northern Virginia W&Mers came by and a great time was had by all, including dancing to my new oldies party tapes, thanks to Carl Adkin's amazing collection!

Now I want to hear about all of your '88 festivities. Please drop me a line!

Spring is almost here, and we've been alumni of the College of Knowledge for nearly two full years! Don't you feel old? By this time I hope all of you have settled into postgraduate life and are enjoying what I hope will be a pleasant winter.

Seems like everyone is getting married these days. Lisa O'Brien and Mike Kelly celebrated their nuptials this past November in a beautiful ceremony on Long Island. Lisa looked simply beautiful.

Her wedding party included college roomie, Meg Williams. The Tri Delt contingent was represented in full force and included Lina Lukens (her job in the magazine world recently took her to South America), Margaret Eklind (quite the wedding-goer, she was also seen at Kitty Kennedy's wedding and was Donna Korff's maid of honor), Jeannie Cherundolo (who's been promoted to an assistant buyer position at Macy's), Mike Kalaris (ask him about his Girl Scout socks), Donna Korff, Regina Femminella, Colleen McKee (who's enjoying her job in banking down in Charlotte) and me.

The weekend was such fun (even if the temperature did hit -20 degrees with the wind chill)! The wedding was stupendous. After a honeymoon of fun in the sun in Cancun, the happy couple returned to Long Island where they'll live. Congrats to both of you!

While we are on the subject of weddings Julie Wallace is engaged! She and fiance, Tom Dunn '87, plan to tie the knot next June. I'm in the wedding and can't wait!

Donna Korff and Erik Gilbert were married in January here in Falls Church. What a beautiful wedding. Mark Hurley (doing graduate work in philosophy here at Catholic University) and I provided the song for the occasion. Thanks for the honor, Donna! Guests included best man, Tom Reyerson and maid of honor, Margaret Eklind. Following a honeymoon in the Central American country of Belize, Donna and Erik will be living in snow country up in Norwich, Vt. Congratulations!

Kitty Penney is engaged to fellow W&M alumnus Dan Philips and caught the bouquet at Donna's wedding! Kitty and Dan will be married next August.

Over Christmas, I spent some time in New York with Tom Noble and family — thanks for dinner! (It was great seeing all of you!) Tom was enjoying a break before his final semester at W&M; he'll receive his M.B.A. in May. Tom is still running and helping out (I did not say coaching, OK?) Tribe runners at school.

Wendy Messer is working for Habitat, a non-profit housing ministry in Americus, Ga. Habitat's goal is to help less fortunate people build and own houses of their own.

Rumor has it that Steve Richards (alias "Cupcake") has gone to Wall Street to seek fame and fortune.

Robin Freedman, having lost a great deal of money in the October stock market crash (six figures?) based on some highly questionable stock tips given to her by a certain unnamed source in Rockville, continues to live in harmony with broker/roomie Ellen Thompson. (Ellen is now paying rent.) Did any of you Washingtonians see Robin in the Jan. 3 "Sunday Magazine" section of the Post? Check out the last page!

Stuart Schiffman dropped me a line to let me know he's just completed his master's in computer engineering at Boston University. Bet you'll have no trouble finding a job, Stuart! He tells me that he ran into Susan Meyer (she's at Harvard's law school) and heard from Jeff Snyder, who's working for General Research here in D.C.

Vince Harquardt is at Virginia Tech getting his master's in architecture. Stuart saw former Yates roommates Gabby McDonald and Jill-Taylor Hubbard over brunch in Boston. He reports that they are doing well.

Dave Varner continues in his duties as an assistant executive secretary for Sigma Chi National. What are you other Sigma Chis doing?

Stephen Dennis recently completed Aviation Officer Candidates School and was commissioned a Navy ensign. Congratulations!

Mike Lewis returned from two months in Europe, having seen every country under the sun with Shannon Pastorino '87. While there, he spent a few days with Alex Cochran in Germany. Alex was back in the States for Christmas; he and I had a great lunch here in town. Alex loves Germany — he gives rave reviews to the skiing, food and beer! He looks great and is really enjoying Army life!

Ray Thomas wrote to fill us all in on the doings of a number of '86ers. Ray is working for First American Bank with Charlie Sisson and lives here in Alexandria. He reports that Andy Kahl is in his second year of law school at New York University. Joe Song is working for a computer firm here in D.C.; Steve Kern received his master's degree in international relations from the University of Virginia and is enjoying life in D.C.

Kraig Melville is enjoying a unique opportunity overseas. He was one of three Americans selected to participate in a medical science course at the University of St. Andrew in Scotland. Sponsored by MCV, he'll spend two or three years studying various think-tank topics related to the medical profession. Impressive!

Life in Alexandria's Newport Village continues to be fun. I see a lot of Janet Lawson (still working in insurance), Patty Hansen '87 and J. D. Neary '85. J. D. continues to be a legal mogul at the prestigious D.C. law firm of Akin, Gump, Strauss, Hauer & Feld. Our newest neighbor is transplanted New Jersey native Christine Ferguson, who's working for AT&T in Silver Spring. Christine is living with that fun threesome, Heidi Reihansperger, Pam Tiffany and Debbie McDaniels. (Pam is still "molding young minds." Debbie is hacking away at the computer at AMS, and Heidi invites all of you to invest with her at Merrill Lynch, where she's a broker!) The four of them threw quite a bash over the holidays, complete with many W&Mers in attendance!

Though the information is a bit dated, Suzanne Robinson did get married back in September to Vince Trollan. Heidi, Pam and Debbie were there as were Liz Tobin, Suzi Witmer, Chip Brewer, Amy Campbell, Jeanne Kelly, Leslie McCormick '88, Courtney French and Ian Williams.

Angela Cody wrote to say that Kristine Scharf and Jeff Fuller have tied the knot and are living in Williamsburg. As for Angela, she's enjoying a new job at Blue Cross here in D.C.; Veronica Mance works there as well!

Doug Neil and roommates threw a fun New Year's Eve bash. Ringing in the new year were Susan Doyle, Pat Nef, Frank Striegel, Heidi Reihansperger, John Fielding (still working hard on Capitol Hill for Senator Conrad), Rhanna Kidwell, Maureen Dubus (working for a defense contractor) and a significant number of PiKAs (what did you expect?).

Throwing another great party were roommates Micah Yarbrough, Aynsley Calhoun and Helga Shea. Toasting to 1988 were Ellen Thompson, Doug Brinkley, Kevin War and Lori Pepple, to name just a few.

Former Yates 3rd South resident Gian-Carlo Carattini wrote to say he is working for Coopers & Lybrand in Richmond, where he reports seeing lots of other W&M grads! Gian Carlo's former roommate, Steve Servidio, works for Aronson in Bethesda.

Recently spotted in Richmond were Renee Wade (who is married) and Terry Lancaster (also married — yikes!). Gian-Carlo reports that Brian Kane is heading back to the world of academia to get an M.S. in physics, while Dwayne Thierrault is doing Ph.D. studies in history at Yale after spending a year in China. Not bad!

I ran into Henry Plaster '85 awhile back at The Willard here in D.C. Henry was working a reception for the Annenberg research center as part of his Capitol Hill job. Ask him about his after-hours career as a Solid Gold dancer.

Speaking of the class of '85, my Newport Village neighbors Alison Sellin and Mary Kach had a lovely Christmas cocktail party. Enjoying eggnog and a yummy spread of edibles were class of '85ers Scott Ukrop, J.D. Neary, Susan Davis, Steve Shundich and Tracy Sinnott, to name just a few. Also among the party-goers were Debbie Zanfagna, Patty Hansen '87, Chip Puskar and sister Kathy '89, Susan Zanetti and Jeanine O'Grody '87.

Early December found me having dinner with Betsy '84 and Alice Bengston. Both are currently working in Richmond, although by the time you read this, Alice will, in all likelihood, have moved to Chicago. Betsy is looking into going to medical school.

Our illustrious class president, Elizabeth Flamm, works for the United Way in Richmond. Elizabeth played hostess at a fantastic Christmas party last December. Among the guests were Jim "Dr. Nobel" Wright, who's studying at MCV, and Dave "Yes, I'm still alive" Maxwell. Dave is in Charlottesville working for GE.

Susan Coumes is assistant director of Renaissance de Chateau in Ohio, an organization that restores France's historical monuments. She organizes archaeological and castle restoration programs and recently led a dig in the French Alps.

Notorious "Skum" band member Hart Baur continues to lead a wild life, and a wild band, down in Florida. Hart teaches at Columbus High School, is still playing in his infamous band (which has undergone slight alterations) and is reportedly having a great time.

Tracy Edler works at the Guest Quarters in Tampa. She's also doing freelance copy editing for Harcourt Brace Jovanovich and has taken up figure skating again. Add Tracy to the list of people who are biting the dust — she's engaged to be married next October!

Joining the ranks of alumni in graduate school is Rick Larrick, who's working toward a Ph.D. at the University of Michigan. He was one of 28 students awarded a National Science Foundation Graduate Fellowship.

By the time you receive this, Matt Pavlides will be well into his fourth semester at University of Florida's law school. Last time I saw Matt, he was packing for two weeks of much needed R&R in Cancun, Mexico. Rough life!

I saw Rob Weissman over the holidays; he's working in New York and trading for an Australian bank.

Sabrina Brinkley works for Continental Airlines as an international flight attendant (where she is the French speaker) and is traveling the world!

My former Yates hallmate Ravay Snow wrote a long letter (too much information to fit in one issue of the Gazette!). Some of the high points: Ravay is managing an art gallery here in Old Town and says her job is wonderful.

Ravay tells me that another of our Yates buddies, John Chamberlayne, is one of the head forest rangers at Sky Meadows National Park in the Blue Ridge Mountains! John is married and adjusting to rural life.

Ravay's college roommate, Marion Li, works in Greenwich, Conn., as a computer programmer.

Doyle Hull is pursuing a master's in sociology at W&M and is playing in a band at school.

Enough for now — As for me, I had a wonderful (but much too short) Christmas at home with mom and dad. (What happened to those 3-1/2-week-long vacations?) I am now ready to jump into 1988.

I'm happy as ever at Vinson & Elkins and will soon be making plans to head off to law school come fall. The applications are in and, if y'all cross your fingers, maybe I'll get into a school or two!

So, until next time, please keep those newsy letters coming. I so enjoy reading each and every one! Hope you are all doing well! Enjoy the winter!

SAN DIEGO CHAPTER MEETS

The San Diego Alumni Chapter held its annual Christmas Victorian Tea and Champagne Reception at the Hotel del Coronado on Dec. 20. At the event a number of donated William and Mary memorabilia items were auctioned to benefit student financial aid. Randy '50 and Betty Mallory proudly display the needlepoint W&M coat of arms they purchased.

to traveling with his wife later this year when he retires from his position as superintendent of Loudoun County Schools, one of Virginia's top 10 school systems. Before coming to Loudoun County in 1969, Butt served as superintendent of schools in Fredericksburg and Orange County.

After 27 years in education, Richard Sternberg '76 Ed.D. began a second career in the importation and manufacture of toys and novelties. In his new vocation, Sternberg travels all over the U.S. and the Orient.

Closer to home, Mark Tyree '84 Ed.D. has been selected to be Distinguished Visiting Professor of Business at Shenandoah College, and Dorothy Powell '83 Ed.D. has been named dean of the School of Nursing at Howard University in Washington, D.C. In addition, Carol Hughes '86 Ed.D. was promoted to associate professor of psychology at Randolph-Macon College.

It seems that alumni have been very active in the Virginia Community College System (VCCS). Ann Cosby Williams '84 Ed.D. was named acting president of Lord Fairfax Community College in Northern Virginia, taking leave from her position as assistant to the chancellor.

Deborah Dicroce '74 Ed.D., provost of Tidewater Community College's Portsmouth Campus, is the first woman member of the Hampton Roads Rotary and second woman member of the Rotary of Virginia. Dicroce maintains her ties to W&M by teaching a summer graduate seminar on the community college.

While many of us enjoyed visiting Colonial Williamsburg (CW) while we were here, Lauralyn Sessoms '83 B.A. and Bill Tramosch '86 Ed.D. currently work for CW. Lauralyn is a historic trades interpreter at the James Geddy House, and Bill is director of interpretive education. Bill returned from his Fulbright Lectureship in Museum Studies in New Zealand and has been invited to return later this year by the New Zealand-United States Education Foundation. In addition, Bill will spend three weeks in Russia as part of a museum professional-sponsored exchange.

Laura Townsend '79 M.Ed. has been a licensed professional counselor in Virginia since 1981. She is currently with Bacon Street, a local, non-profit adolescent substance abuse center.

STUDENTS NOMINATED FOR RYAN SCHOLARSHIP

Laura Carson '88 of Atlanta, Ga., and Sherry Adams '89 of Burke, Va., have been nominated for the Irene Ryan Acting Scholarship, a national award for excellence in undergraduate and graduate acting. The theatre majors hope to match the accomplishments of Don Reilly '85 who won the award for his work in "The Elephant Man" in 1983. Both actresses were nominated on the basis of their work in "Crimes of the Heart," which opened this season's theatre program.

Barry Morris '82 Ed.S. is director of student housing at Clarion University in Pennsylvania and is working on his doctorate at the University of Pittsburgh.

Marsha Krotseng '87 Ed.D. is now rooting for "Ole Miss." She is institutional research and planning associate and assistant professor of higher education at the University of Mississippi.

Finally, Elmira College in New York has a new president and first lady who have ties to W&M. Best wishes to Thomas Meier, who taught English literature at the College, and to his wife, Mila Hillard Meier '64 M.Ed.

Let us know what 1988 has in store for you!

OBITUARIES

MALCOLM DEWEY FOSTER '21 B.S. of Charlottesville, Va., died Dec. 21, 1986. As a student, he belonged to the Monogram Club, the Rappahannock Club, the Cotillion Club, the American Legion and the Taliaferro Club.
