Homecoming 1988—Music to the Ears

By Virginia Collins '77

Craig A. Cook '78, an attorney from Anchorage, Alaska, unofficially claimed the greatest-distance record when he traveled to Williamsburg for his tenth reunion during Homecoming weekend Nov. 3-6. Amidst raindrops, sunshine, fall colors and balmy temperatures, Cook and thousands of other alumni participated in events planned around the theme, "Music to Your Ears."

Milestones were observed by alumni of all ages. The Class of 1963 shared a memorable 25th reunion, which got under way Thursday evening with dinner and a group sing. On Friday morning, class members returned briefly to academic life when they attended a specially arranged seminar offering viewpoints from faculty, administrators and students.

Rolfe E. Kennard '24, a youthful octogenarian, returned to campus for his 65th consecutive Homecoming. As this year's Homecoming game marshal, Kennard proudly flipped the coin to begin Saturday afternoon's football game. Earlier in the day, he rode in the Homecoming parade with other honored alumni, including Roy Charles '32 of Norfolk, grand marshal of the parade.

Termed the "best in recent memory" by many spectators, the parade brought the traditional array of colorful floats, talented bands and special honorees. In the float competition, the Black Student Organization took top laurels, receiving the Lambert Cup and $350, for their "Motown Melody" entry. Other winners were Psi Upsilon, second place for "Ding Dong, the Itch is Dead"; Off-Campus Student Council, third place for "Our House is Music to Our Ears"; Delta Delta Delta/Lambda Chi Alpha, fourth place for "Rock Around the Clock"; and Delta Gamma, fifth place for "They Ain't Nothing but Pound Dogs." Winning bands were Menchville High School, Newport News; Plaza Junior High, Virginia Beach; and James Blair Intermediate, Williamsburg.

Although on-and-off rain plagued some of Saturday's events, the parade, football game and post-game Tentgater were spared. Halftime activities included the crowning of Homecoming Queen Deborah Ann Tice, a senior from Vienna, Va., and Homecoming King Jay Austin, a senior from Bethel Park, Pa. Other members of the court were junior representatives Jennifer-Ashley Lane of Dallastown, Pa., and Thomas F. Duetsch of Morristown, N.J.; sophomore representatives Alicia June Foltz of Johnstown, Pa., and Ethan Matyi of Wayland, Mass.; and freshmen representatives Amy Lorraine Smithers of Alexandria and David R. Swain of Concord, Mass.

Following William and Mary's 30-14 victory over Wofford College, hundreds of alumni headed to the Alumni House south lawn for the first-ever Tentgater, a festive gathering of alumni, family members and friends. In lieu of going to individual tailgate parties, this all-alumni event gave individuals a unique opportunity to catch up with friends from different class years.

The Alumni Society's annual dinner and dance on Friday evening honored alumni and members of the College community receiving awards from the Society. The Alumni Medallion, the Society's highest award, went to Hunter B. Andrews '42 of Hampton; James W. McGlothlin '62 and '64 B.C.L. of Bristol, Va.; Anna Belle Koenig Nimmo '45 of Golden, Colo.; Robert Edward Bruce Stewart Jr. '27 of Portsmouth; and Raymond T. Waller '40 of Richmond.

Alumni Fellow Awards, which carry a $500 honorarium from the Society in recognition of younger faculty members' contributions to the academic life of William and Mary, went to Joanne M. Braxton, associate professor of English; Dale Cockrell, associate professor of music; Virginia Kerns '70, associate professor of anthropology; Talbot J. Taylor, associate professor of English; and Godwin Thomas White '72 and '77 M.B.A., assistant professor of business administration.

The Society also inducted retiring members of the faculty and administration as associate members. They included Elisabeth E. Backhaus, retired professor of modern languages and literatures; Alvin Z. Freeman, retired professor of history; Dudley M. Jensen, retired professor of physical education; Frances Martens, an information officer employed with the Society of the Alumni for 15 years; Leroy W. Smith, retired professor of English; and Floyd E. Whitaker, who worked as the College's comptroller for the majority of his 33-year career.

Named 1988 Outstanding Alumni Chapter was the Metropolitan D.C. chapter whose president, Joanna Ashworth '84, was on hand to accept the award. Honorable mention awards went to the Los Angeles chapter and the Richmond chapter whose president, Sandy Fuller Spicknall '77, accepted the award.

Annual Giving Awards for 1988 included: Class of 1955, recipient of the Class of 1925 Trophy for most outstanding increase in giving; Class of 1942, the Class of 1954 Trophy for best class percentage participation; John Garland Pollard Jr. '23, the Baltimore/Annapolis Trophy for outstanding individual efforts with the Annual Fund. The Board of Directors' Cup for best all-around support of the Annual Fund went to David Wakefield '52 and Carolyn (Lee) Bradley Wakefield '53, who served as co-chairs of the alumni division of the 1987-88 Annual Fund.

Also receiving awards at the alumni dinner were winners of the golf and tennis tournaments held earlier in the day on Friday. Tennis champions were Susan Howard '80 and Fred Steele. Runners-up were Marilyn Entwisle '44 and Lynn Llewellyn '57. Golf winners were Walter Grizzard '59, men's low net; Ed Downum Jr. '73, men's low gross; Sarah Grizzard, women's low net; and Alice (Bebe) Arbuckle '53, women's low net.

Alumni Chapter, who accepted the 1988 Outstanding Chapter Award at annual Society of the Alumni dinner, rides in parade with Ray Warner '63, vice president of the chapter.

Ringing Far And Near

Getting to the Roots of the Matter

By Barry Adams

For the many alumni and friends who enjoy the Alumni Educational Tours sponsored by the Society of the Alumni, I can only echo what one alumna explained when she read the itinerary of our June travel program — "its value could also be weighed on how it binds our attachment to the College with an appreciation of its birthright." From June 10 through June 23 a group of alumni will retrace, revisit and rekindle the historical spirit that eventually led to the founding of the College of William and Mary. It will be a custom-made tour, designed exclusively for the Society of the Alumni in cooperation with both the Dutch and British Glorious Revolution Celebration Commissions.

The tour begins with a week in residence at Oxford University and concludes with a six-day stay at the Pulitzer Hotel in Amsterdam. Both of these locations will include lectures, field trips, private visits to stately homes and castles, and festive meals for tour participants.

Working in cooperation with the Oxford University Department for External Studies, the Society has developed a program that thoughtfully explores the late 17th century through its history, politics, architecture and decorative arts. The seminar will be directed by Lawrence Goldman, tutor in history and politics. Other noted history faculty members also will present lectures.

Alumni who join the tour will find their Oxford location a convenient base from which to explore the heritage that shaped the College. Among the field trips are visits to Blenheim, home of the first Duke of Marlborough, and Winslow Hall, the only Wren house which has been left completely unchanged. During a London sojourn, participants will visit Wren's famous St. Paul's Cathedral and tour the Banqueting Hall in Whitehall, where William officially accepted the Bill of Rights before becoming king. Kensington Palace, which William and Mary bought and remodeled for themselves, and the Hampton Court Palace and Gardens are on the itinerary. Also scheduled is a dinner in Stratford-upon-Avon and a performance at the Royal Shakespeare Theatre.

One of the highlights of the tour will undoubtedly be a special reception with her Royal Highness Princess Margriet, but the Netherlands portion of the tour offers an equally compelling reason to go along. Visits to The Hague, the Royal Palace Het Loo and the Rijksmuseum are planned as well as a canal ride and a concert by the world-famous Concertgebouw of Amsterdam.

This unique Alumni Educational Travel Program is indeed an extension of Alumni College. Although we plan to offer a number of exciting tours as the birthday approaches for the nation's second oldest institution of higher learning, this tour promises to be among the grandest and most memorable ever offered to alumni and friends of the College of William and Mary.

I invite you and your family or friends to celebrate a rich history by joining others in an exploration of our past.

(To ensure that you receive a brochure for this tour send a postcard to Todd Larkin, Director of Alumni Services, P.O. Box GO, Williamsburg, VA 23187.)

Five Elected to Society's Board

Entwisle

Simpson

Ellis

Lambert

Montgomery

The Society of the Alumni has elected five individuals to its board of directors following the annual election held this fall. They include John S. Entwisle '44, Anne Nenzel Lambert '35 and Joseph W. Montgomery '74, all of Williamsburg; Ann-Meade Baskervill Simpson '65 of Virginia Beach; and Joseph J. Ellis '65 of South Hadley, Mass.

Entwisle and Simpson were re-elected to a second three-year term, which will begin in February 1989 when the alumni board inducts all five members at its semi-annual meeting. At the same time, three current members of the board will retire. They are William A. Armbruster '57 of Blackstone, Va.; S. Warne Robinson '37 of Williamsburg; and Dr. Lesley A. Ward '63 of New York.

A resident of Blue Bell, Pa., as well as Williamsburg, Entwisle is president of Harry Miller Corp. in Philadelphia, which develops, manufactures and distributes specialty chemicals to the metalworking industries internationally. A member of the Society's board since 1986, he currently serves as chairman of the Alumni House expansion committee. He is a former trustee of the College's Endowment Association, and served with his wife Marilyn '44 as co-chairman of the 1980-81 William and Mary Annual Fund. A veteran of World War II, Entwisle served for four years in the Army Medical Corps.

A member of the Society's board since 1986, Mrs. Simpson is a sales associate with William E. Wood and Associates, Realtors, in Virginia Beach. She previously taught in the Henrico County and Newport News public school systems. Long interested in educating schoolchildren in the judicial branch of the government and working toward crime prevention in that age group, she helped organize and for six years was the director of the Virginia Beach Court Docent Program. Active in civic affairs, she has served as president and secretary/treasurer of the King's Daughters and is a member of the Junior League of Norfolk-Virginia Beach where she has served on the board of managers. She and her husband Robert '63 and '68 J.D. have four children, including Ann-Darby '87.

Mrs. Lambert has been actively involved in the life of the College and the Williamsburg community for more than 50 years. A frequent participant in Olde Guard activities, she is former secretary of the Olde Guard Council and was a member of the Class of 1935 reunion committee. She has been an active adviser to Kappa Kappa Gamma social sorority for more than 45 years and currently serves as treasurer of the sorority's local alumnae group. As the wife of the late J. Wilfred Lambert, former vice president for student affairs, she carried out numerous duties as a faculty wife and supported the College extensively with both her volunteer efforts and presence at events.

A senior vice president/investment officer with Wheat, First Securities Inc. in Williamsburg, Montgomery is a former president of the College's Athletic Educational Foundation. Since 1985, he has been a director of Williamsburg Landing Inc., a non-profit retirement community. In 1984, he was named one of 20 outstanding brokers in the United States and Canada by Registered Representative magazine. He has received a number of professional awards from his firm, including most recently the Wheat Mission Award. As an undergraduate, Montgomery played varsity football and was named Outstanding College Athlete in 1973 and 1974. In 1986, he was inducted into William and Mary's Athletic Hall of Fame.

Ellis is dean of the faculty at Mount Holyoke College in South Hadley, Mass., where he has taught history since 1972. He received an M.A., M.Phil. and Ph.D. from Yale University where he held Woodrow Wilson and Yale fellowships. During the 1983-84 school year, he served as chief executive officer during the eight-month absence of Mount Holyoke's president. He has written four books in addition to numerous articles and reviews published in leading journals and newspapers. Ellis is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and was the 1965 recipient of the James Frederick Carr Memorial Cup for scholarship, leadership and character.

New Public Policy Program Studies Contemporary Issues

David Finifter presides at Parents Day forum sponsored by the Public Policy Program, which included Sarah J. Brady '64, vice chairman, Handgun Control Inc., and Robert M. Gates '65, deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

By Ray Betzner

David Finifter is director of the College's Public Policy Program, but a much more accurate title would be the Man in the Center of a Whirlwind. Since its beginnings in 1987, the Public Policy Program has been swirling around the College. It can now call on the services of more than 80 faculty members from five departments and four schools to become the broadest interdisciplinary program at the College.

"Our goal is to recognize the interest and expertise of the current faculty in public policy and enhance it. At the same time, we want to bring in new faculty and link them up with the directions in which we are headed. All of this has the purpose of creating new and exciting academic programs for our students," said Finifter, who is also an economics professor at the College.

Public policy is difficult to define due to its broad scope, but it has long been part of the College's undergraduate offerings, since many students concentrating in economics, government, history, psychology, and sociology focus on public policy in their coursework.

In addition, the study of public policy has been common in Schools of Business Administration, Education, Law and Marine Science. Finifter, along with Robert Archibald of the Department of Economics and William Morrow of the Department of Government, recognized the curricular importance of public policy and started the push for the new multidisciplinary effort called the Public Policy Program. As a result of the support and encouragement by President Paul Verkuil and the interest and enthusiasm of the faculty, the new program has developed at a fast pace. Verkuil, who is also a member of the Public Policy Faculty Steering Committee, recently praised the program's ability to cross disciplinary boundaries.

"(The Public Policy Program) is one of the very intriguing possibilities for our students, who are here to become more aware of and sensitive to the needs of government and the importance of government service," Verkuil said. "Ultimately we must communicate the excitement of being part of government services. Certainly, it is clear that whatever way we serve, we are making a contribution for a better life for all.

A redesigned undergraduate interdisciplinary concentration in public policy is one of the new opportunities for undergraduates. Plans include new courses in budget policy, ethics and public policy, and a team-taught interdisciplinary senior seminar on public policy. At the same time, the groundwork has been laid for a new graduate program in public policy analysis. This program will be unique in Virginia and will join a small number of programs at distinguished universities such as Harvard, Princeton, Michigan, Berkeley and Duke.

Thus far, two new faculty positions have been linked with the program. The search started in November for individuals to fill the recently created Pamela Harriman Chair of Government and Public Policy and the CSX Chair of Economics and Public Policy. Both positions should be filled for the beginning of the 1989 academic year.

But the Public Policy Program also goes beyond the classroom. The 13-year-old Washington Program, a series of two-day trips to the nation's capital to meet government officials, lobbyists and the press, has been placed under the program's umbrella. Over the years, the program has given students and faculty an opportunity to hear from policymakers like the late Senator Hubert Humphrey, then-President Gerald Ford, and New York Times correspondent James Reston. Now, under the direction of Julius J. Mastro, a faculty member in the College's Department of Government, the scope of the Washington Program has been broadened. In a recent seminar, four faculty members and 24 students traveled to Washington to discuss with policymakers the role of government in financial markets.

During the month of the first anniversary of the stock market crash of 1987, students met with several experts including Secretary of the Treasury Nicholas Brady; Manuel Johnson, vice chairman of the Federal Reserve Board; Chairman Wendy Gramm of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, and John Curley, vice chairman of Legg Mason.

Students returned to Williamsburg with better insight of the federal public policy process and a new enthusiasm for their academic studies. Along with Professor Mastro, Larry Evans, another faculty member in the Department of Government, will run one of two seminars next semester on the agenda of the 101st Congress. The other will be on the topic of U.S. trade policy and economic relations with Japan and Korea.

An ambitious conference component of the Public Policy can already boast two successes: In 1987, a conference coordinated by Finifter and Leonard Schifrin, Chancellor Professor of Economics, examined the revolution in health care policy. In 1988, a conference, co-sponsored with the Virginia Council of Higher Education and the higher education program of the College's School of Education, discussed the future of public policy and higher education in relation to quality, costs and financing, and access.

Besides drawing to the campus around 20 experts in the field, the conferences have attracted major political figures and policymakers such as New Jersey Governor Thomas Kean and Paul Simon, U.S. Senator and former presidential candidate. Thirty undergraduate students enrolled in a short seminar course based on the 1988 conference. Students' participation in the conference and subsequent discussion sessions and papers produced a unique learning experience. Two Department of Government faculty members, John McGlennon and Ronald Rapoport, are already busily planning the 1989 conference which will ask the question: "Is this any way to pick a president?"

The Public Policy Program is also involved in encouraging research by College faculty and students. The program plans to create a clearinghouse for faculty members interested in public policy research. It will work with the Grants Office and the Office of University Advancement to identify government agencies, corporations and charitable foundations that might provide support for public policy research at the College. In addition, the program will seek endowment funds to finance research on public policy.

The research, like all aspects of the Public Policy Program, is geared toward "understanding how government influences society and the economy, and understanding how the public sector functions," said Finifter. "What does government do? What should government do? How do we know when the public sector is performing well and how can its performance be improved? What is the appropriate relationship between the public and private sectors?"

Public policy is difficult to define due to its broad scope, but it has long been part of the College's undergraduate offerings, since many students concentrating in economics, government, history, psychology, and sociology focus on public policy in their coursework.

Burgesses Day Honors Service of State Officials

Burgesses Day is the College's opportunity to recognize the support and service of the Virginia General Assembly. And in his remarks at the 1988 event held at William and Mary in October, Governor Gerald L. Baliles echoed the theme.

"In a day and time when it appears fashionable to overlook the essential roles state legislatures play in the effective governance of this nation, it is more important than ever to reflect, as we do today, on their many contributions," said the Governor.

More than 250 guests, including members of state government and the General Assembly, attended Burgesses Day, which is sponsored by the Society of the Alumni.

The College honored four retiring members of the General Assembly with special plaques. They were Richard Bagley, Ted Morrison, Ken Calvert and Steve Gordy, whom the Governor lauded as members of a governmental body with immense importance to "our Commonwealth's progress."

The ceremonies also paid tribute to members of the General Assembly who have died during the past year: Claude W. Anderson, Peter K. Babalas, Everett H. Hogge and Kenneth B. Rollins. In addition, the College honored W. C. (Dan) Daniel, a member of Congress who passed away recently.

President Verkuil noted the long-standing relationship between the College and the legislature which dates to Colonial days when the House of Burgesses met for four years in the Wren Building—a symbol, said the President, of the strong ties between the College and the Commonwealth.

J. Edward Grimsley '51, president of the Society of the Alumni, presented the Governor with a football and suggested in jest that he "not fumble the ball" in the remaining months of his administration. The Governor retorted that he knew Mr. Grimsley's fine institution would give him "able advice." Grimsley is editor of the editorial page of the Richmond Times-Dispatch.

In his remarks, Governor Baliles said, "In Virginia we have been most fortunate because our legislators are committed to the welfare of this Commonwealth.

"We have had many good, intelligent and principled men and women willing to sacrifice both their time and financial well-being in order to serve in the oldest sitting legislative body in the Western Hemisphere: the Virginia General Assembly.

"And, should anyone doubt how important that is, remember that automobile that swung down New York's Park Avenue one December evening in 1931 and flattened one rather stout British legislator, who had unfortunately been looking the wrong way while crossing the street.

"Had that man—whose name was Winston Churchill—not recovered, who is to say what state the world would be in today."

Using this anecdote as an introduction, Governor Baliles singled out the retiring legislators for their contributions.

"And, while I would not compare Dick Bagley with Winston Churchill—although there is some resemblance—I would still argue that this Commonwealth is much better off because he served it so long and so well.

"And the same goes for Ted Morrison. It may be a lot more restful around the Capitol since he retired, but because he was willing to raise the serious questions, Virginia found better legislative answers during his tenure.

"Ken Calvert and Steve Gordy did likewise ably serve in the tradition of Virginia's citizen legislator. They helped chart Virginia's course at a time of seemingly unending change.

"I am afraid, as a former member of the General Assembly, that I am hardly objective when I judge how important this body has been to our Commonwealth's progress.

"It is bi-cameral, bi-partisan, strong-willed and, on occasion, not terribly impressed with me or my predecessors. Perhaps that is precisely why it works so well.

"Indeed, I am glad that an institution that has given Virginia so many leaders—the College of William and Mary—offers us this opportunity to say nice things about the Virginia legislature and the people who have served in it.

"So, to those who are with us today, I salute them.

"And, to those now deceased, we will remember with fondness, affection and appreciation, their service and their commitment."

Now a biennial event, Burgesses Day has given the College an opportunity to honor the governors, legislators and public servants who have contributed to the Commonwealth and the College throughout the years. In 1984, William and Mary honored five living former governors. In 1986, the day included a memorial tribute to former governors Lindsay Almond Jr. and John N. Dalton '53 and state Senator Edward E. Willey.

In his address at Burgesses Day, Governor Baliles lauded the "the essential roles state legislators play in the effective governance of this nation."

Lynn Norenberg '81 Participates in Summer Olympics

By George Watson '69

"I really love William and Mary and have lots of very fond memories," says Norenberg. "My years there taught me how to balance things and budget my time between academics and sports. That has really helped in the business world."

Once a star Tribe athlete, Lynn Norenberg '81 is now assistant executive director of the Amateur Basketball Association of the USA. In the photo above, she is with her parents at the Olympics in Seoul last summer where she served as the head of the USA's gold medal-winning women's basketball delegation.

How many of us Walter Mittys have dreamed of standing on the raised Olympic stand with gold medals around our necks as our national anthem was played? Millions have dreamed, but only a few have experienced the thrill.

For Lynn Norenberg '81, the experience was just as she envisioned it.

"I always thought that when they raised the flag I would get goose bumps and I sure did," she explains. "It was one of the neatest experiences of my life."

Actually, Norenberg was not on the gold medal platform (only players get medals), but as the head of the USA's gold medal-winning women's basketball delegation this summer in Seoul, she felt very much a part of the ceremonies.

Norenberg is the assistant executive director of the Amateur Basketball Association (ABA) of the USA, a position she has held for three years. In this post, she is the director of all amateur women's programs throughout the country.

The ABA is the governing body for all amateur basketball in the U.S., and itself is a member of the International Federation of Basketball. The ABA is the umbrella organization for such groups as the NCAA, NAIA, and AAU.

"Our office is responsible for fielding teams in various international competitions, such as the Pan-Am games and the Olympics," explains Norenberg. "Any time a team representing the U.S. goes out of the country to take part in international competition, it is organized through this office."

And any time a women's team carries the U.S. banner abroad, Norenberg goes with it as head of the delegation. She has been to the Soviet Union twice, Brazil, Poland, Yugoslavia, Holland, Finland, and, of course, Korea. Spain and Taiwan are two destinations already on next summer's agenda.

The Florida native's office is in Colorado Springs, site of the Olympic training center. She is a member of the Women's Olympic Basketball Committee.

The Olympic Committee is composed of 16 coaches selected from the different regions of the country by the organizations under the ABA, such as the NCAA and NAIA.

"I am responsible for organizing the committee," notes Norenberg. "They are responsible for picking a coach of the team and players. I set up the trials for the players, a training camp and a schedule of exhibition games. There is a lot of organizational work."

"I also travel with the team as head of the delegation," she adds. In that capacity, Norenberg spent four days in Korea prior to the Olympics and then 25 days during the Games.

"It was everything I expected and more," she says of her Olympic experience. "The fun came in working so closely with the team. They were a great bunch of girls."

"Plus it was a chance to see all of my friends from different countries," she says, alluding to her international travel. "We all brought our tennis rackets and had a great time."

Although the Olympics are over for four more years, Norenberg thinks "next summer I will be ten times as busy. The off years from the Olympics have more programs. I will have a Junior National Team, a USA Select Team, two National Teams and four Olympic Festival teams to organize."

Norenberg's rise to such a prestigious position was quite rapid.

After graduation from William and Mary, where she was an outstanding athlete, she spent two years earning her master's degree in athletic administration from the University of Kentucky, where she also served as a graduate assistant basketball coach.

Upon leaving the Bluegrass state, she took a job with the NCAA at its headquarters in Shawnee Mission, Kan. She was the only woman on the NCAA's 10-person staff of enforcement representatives, the field investigators who gather information when a school is accused of breaking NCAA rules.

Although she was responsible for investigating violations by any women's athletic programs, she spent most of her time with infractions in men's football and basketball.

"That was a good first job," states Norenberg. "I enjoyed working for such a prestigious organization as the NCAA. It was a good growing and learning experience plus I met a lot of great people."

"But," she adds, "it exposed me to the negative side of athletics. Since I have always been a positive person, I decided investigating was not my thing."

Thus, she didn't hesitate when the ABA asked her to apply for her current position.

"I guess it was kind of a shock to the basketball world initially," notes the 29-year-old of her acceptance of the job. "They were used to having older people in charge, but I think I have earned respect."

Norenberg is not new to earning respect. She had an outstanding basketball career at the College. She still holds 15 Tribe records, including eight career marks, and is the all-time leading scorer for W&M women's basketball.

She was also state champion in the discus for the track team and was crowned Homecoming queen her senior year. With all of her diversions, she still managed to graduate Phi Beta Kappa.

"I really love William and Mary and have lots of very fond memories," says Norenberg. "My years there taught me how to balance things and budget my time between academics and sports. That has really helped in the business world."

She returned to campus for Homecoming this fall and expects to be back more often since her brother Kris is a freshman and a pole vaulter on the track team.

But it is basketball around which Lynn Norenberg has built her life, even her social life.

For the past two and a half year years she has been dating Rick Barry, the former NBA scoring great and current NBA broadcaster for WTBS in Atlanta. They met during the Goodwill Games in Moscow in 1986.

"I really love basketball," says Norenberg. "This job is just perfect because I get to work on a national and international level."

"It makes coming to work not like coming to work at all."

Attention Parents . . .

The Alumni/Student Liaison Council of the Society of the Alumni is piloting a Student Host Program (SHP) for children of alumni. If your son or daughter is a high school junior or senior interested in attending William and Mary, the SHP is a great opportunity to get an "insider's view" of the College and campus life. Participants in the SHP will spend one day and one night at the College, going to classes, taking tours and otherwise experiencing college life with members of the Alumni/Student Liaison Council. If you are interested in this program and would like more information, please return the below form.

The Buzzsaw of Tribe Wrestling

Buzz Wincheski

By Marty Benson

Russell "Buzz" Wincheski's nickname isn't short for buzzsaw, but you'd have a hard time convincing his wrestling opponents of that.

Take one of his opponents at the 1987 Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association (EIWA) Championships at Princeton University, as a for instance. Buzz, who red-shirted last year to retain a year of eligibility, was pitted against Navy's Scott Manning, who had handed the Tribe wrestler a rare defeat two weeks before. A bit more rode on the outcome of this bout.

It was a typical Wincheski match — extremely physical. In the third and final period, the bout was tied at four when both grapplers shot for a takedown simultaneously, exchanging unintentional head butts in the process. The contact stopped Manning cold, but Buzz drove through with the move. Blood trickled to the mat, forcing a timeout so the referee could determine if the bout could continue — a wounded wrestler who can't stop bleeding must throw in the towel.

All the blood belonged to Buzz.

Steve Cole, the Tribe's director of sports medicine, was able to tie Wincheski's hair together to close the gash and the match was allowed to resume. After the match he received seven stitches, but chances are he didn't mind. His come-from-behind 8-4 triumph had earned him a trip to the NCAA Championships.

Buzz didn't waste any time displaying his determination in going against the nation's elite. In his first match at the NCAA tournament, he was pitted against Army's Darrell Nerode, the tournament's seventh seed, who had earned All-America honors the year before. Buzz trailed 5-1 after two periods, but battled back for an 8-7 win. Although he lost his next two matches, Wincheski finished the season with a 29-14 mark and a team-leading six pins.

"It sounds like a cliché, but the more important the match, the greater the odds against him, the tougher Buzz gets," says Head Wrestling Coach Bill Pincus.

Though he red-shirted last year, Buzz was able to compete in open meets. He posted a 10-2 record. Six of his opponents weren't able to compete in their next match.

"He's not dirty," Pincus is quick to point out, "but he is so physical that it has gotten to the point where no one even wants to wrestle him in practice."

If it hadn't been for a strange twist of fate, W&M wrestlers would never have had the chance.

A native of Oswego, Ill., a suburb about an hour away from Chicago, Buzz wanted to get away from home to go to college. He chose the University of Tennessee because of its quality engineering program and top-20 wrestling team. The 142-pounder went to Knoxville without a scholarship, but by the end of his first semester, he had earned one.

Wincheski finished his freshman year quite content with his situation, and who wouldn't be? He had posted a 20-10 wrestling record and a perfect 4.0 in the classroom.

Then Tennessee dropped its wrestling program.

"It's hard to describe the way I felt," Buzz says. "I was doing pretty well and had made a lot of friends there, but I wanted to wrestle."

Wincheski had never heard of William and Mary, but one of his teammates, Rob Larmore, a Virginia Beach native, had. After the two visited the College, they chose to study and wrestle in Williamsburg. Coincidentally, Damon Whitehead, a former high-school teammate of Buzz's, also transferred to William and Mary from Hampton University the same year, a move Wincheski didn't hear about until later that summer.

"It (William and Mary) fit what I wanted well," Buzz says. "The school looked good, I liked the coach, and he seemed to be building a good program."

In addition to his personal mat exploits, Buzz helped the Tribe post a respectable 13-11 dual-match record in Wincheski's sophomore year. Academically, he still had a perfect 4.0, this time as a physics major. Life was good again.

Then news about the athletic department's tiering of sports broke. The sports would be divided into three tiers, with tier one receiving the most financial support. Wrestling was tier three. Rumors, albeit false, circulated that the program was going to be cut. 'Here we go again,' Buzz thought. Wrestling, however, is staying, and prospering, and so is Wincheski.

The grapplers won the state championship last year and sent two wrestlers to the NCAA's while Buzz watched from the sidelines. This year, his next-to-last of eligibility, Wincheski is back in a Tribe uniform. He has his sights set on a state championship of his own, and All-America honors. After earning Outstanding Wrestler honors at the 1988 Pembroke Invitational, Buzz appears to be well on his way.

"He's as good as any 142-pounder in the country," the Pincus says. "Two years ago, he lost to last year's national champion (Sean O'Day of Edinboro, Pa.) by just two points."

As successful as Buzz has been on the mat, he's been even more impressive in the classroom. A physics major, he still has a 4.0 average. His academic success was instrumental in NASA's decision to award him a grant to work with them for the past two summers, but though it would fit conveniently, Wincheski's nickname didn't come from astronaut Buzz Aldrin either.

It actually came from his older brother, who, when he tried to say "Russ," said "bus."

"My mother didn't like me being called an automobile, so she told him to just call me Buzz," he says. "Now the only people who ever call me Russ are my teachers on the first couple days of classes."

A likely story. Good luck convincing Buzz's opponents of it.

Buzz helped the Tribe post a respectable 13-11 dual-match record in Wincheski's sophomore year. Academically, he still had a perfect 4.0, this time as a physics major. Life was good again.

Tribe Women Win Two CC Titles

The women's cross country team pulled off double championships this fall, winning the Colonial Athletic Association (for the second straight year) and the Virginia Intercollegiate League titles. In addition to the Tribe's success in an invitational format, the harriers were 3-0 in dual-meet competition.

"Depth was our main strength," said Pat Van Rossum, who was named CAA Coach of the Year for the second consecutive season. "We didn't have one great runner, but a lot of good runners."

The VIL, which was run on Oct. 15 at William and Mary, was an excellent example, although one runner, sophomore Cathy Stanmeyer, did set a school record. The transfer from Duke completed the 3.1-mile course in 17:46, easily beating the old mark of 18:12.3. Overall, however, Stanmeyer finished only fourth; what enabled William and Mary to score just 47 points to edge second-place George Mason (52 points) was the fact that the Tribe had two more runners in the top ten and seven in the second 15 finishers.

Junior Kristi LaCourse placed fourth overall with a time of 17:59, the second-fastest Tribe time for the home course and 12 seconds better than the old record. Classmate Katie McCullough finished ninth with a time of 18:26, the fifth fastest Tribe time in history. In the second 10 were 14th-place junior Amy Devereaux (18:47), 15th-place junior Janice Voorhies (18:49), and 18th-place Karen Laslo, who also is one of the swimming team's top athletes, with a freshman school-record time of 18:54. Junior Stephanie Finelli placed 21st with a time of 19:10, freshman Maureen McNulty was 22nd (19:12), and senior Eleanor Carroll (19:17) was 24th.

Three weeks later at the CAA Championship, depth was clearly the deciding factor again as the Tribe edged second-place George Mason 29-36. LaCourse was still feeling the effects of a stress fracture and wasn't 100 percent and Stanmeyer ran less than her best. So what happened? McCullough took over the number-one spot, finishing second overall with a time of 18:20. Stanmeyer was 15 seconds behind her in third place. Voorhies finished fifth (19:05), and Laslo was eighth (19:24).

Five of the next six places also belonged to the Tribe, with Devereaux finishing 11th, Carroll in 12th, sophomore Megan Holden in 14th, and freshman Maureen McNulty in 16th. LaCourse hobbled to a 27th place finish.

"Going into the season, I expected the state meet to be the tougher of the two, but as it turned out the CAA was tougher because of Kristi's injury," Van Rossum said.

A look down the Tribe coach's roster indicates that W&M could be tough in both the CAA and VIL for years to come. The team's top five finishers in the CAA were underclassmen, as were five of the next six, which gives Van Rossum legitimate high hopes for next year.

The CAA and VIL titles are obvious goals for next year, but the Tribe coach wants to go beyond that. W&M finished 13th of 30 teams in the tough Region III qualifier for the NCAA Championships (the top two qualify) this year. The College is currently petitioning for a move north to Region II, which would place William and Mary in competition with more similar institutions. Van Rossum said that if the move is made his team would have "a halfway decent shot" at making the NCAA next year.

Exceptional depth helped the women's cross country team win the CAA and Virginia Intercollegiate League titles this fall.

defense, gambling to create turnovers that lead to increased scoring opportunities for our team," he said.

Pride also gets the green light offensively in the open court. "In situations where he's one on one, or even one on two or three, if Curtis thinks he beat them in the open court, we let him go. We give that freedom within our offense, more so than any other player in our program," said Swenson.

"Much of our aggressiveness and competitiveness as a team stems from Curtis's personality," Swenson said.

A hearing deficiency can still be a liability on the court sometimes, especially when players switch defensive assignments and shout instructions when Pride's back is turned. Swenson minimizes the difficulties by using a series of hand signals whenever possible and by trusting Pride's court sense. "It's a credit to Curtis that he is able to react so quickly, but his vision and awareness are more acute," he said.

Pride faces similar problems when attending class, but he makes amends through extra dedication and by maintaining a sense of humor. "I can read lips, but it gets tough when the professor starts walking around or turns his back to point at something on the blackboard," Pride said.

A marketing major, Pride hopes to eventually find employment in the field of finance. But his primary goal after getting his degree will be continuing his employment in the New York Mets organization.

The Kingsport Mets play in the Appalachian League, which is at the rookie level, the lowest on the totem pole in the minors. But after three seasons Pride is still one of the youngest players on the team. And, as Pride points out, "I've never even been to spring training yet."

He's improved each year and last season was by far his best. Pride batted .285 with eight home runs, 27 runs batted in, and 23 stolen bases. He was named to the Appalachian League All-Star team and was tagged as one of the league's top ten prospects. Better yet, from Pride's point of view, Kingsport won the league championship.

Herman Lewis, administrative assistant to the Scouting Director for the Mets, said the parent club is impressed with Pride's progress. "He's got good speed, and this year he showed some power, plus his outfield play is improving," Melvin said.

Lewis, who once played alongside a deaf outfielder in the Blue Jay system, downplayed Pride's handicap. "When it comes to the major leagues and playing in front of 50,000 screaming people, we're all deaf in that situation," he said.

Despite the club's eagerness to place him in winter instructional league, Pride plans to hold off until 1991 before taking up baseball full-time. But his eyes get big when he tells about a confrontation at the plate last summer.

"I faced a pitcher named Steve Avery, who was the second player chosen in the draft. He was a left-hander with a good curve ball and I bat left-handed. But I got a hit and scored a run, and we won 1-0," said Pride.

Move over Daryl. You've heard of the Pride of the Yankees, make way for the Pride of the Tribe.

Pride has been giving his fans plenty to cheer about since his schoolboy days at Kennedy High in Silver Spring, Md. In the fall he dominated the soccer field, scoring an incredible 68 goals in 40-odd games. Selected to the USA under-16 team he drilled the winning goal against Bolivia in front of 90,000 fans in Peking, China. Pride was one of 15 named to the All-World team for his age group.

Not many 19-year-old college students get fan mail. But then there aren't too many like Curtis Pride.

A point guard on William and Mary's basketball team during the school year and a starting leftfielder for the New York Mets rookie league franchise in Kingsport, Tenn., in the summer vacation, Pride already has chalked up enough athletic achievements to inspire devotion. But he competes in a tougher arena every single day.

Pride was born with a 95 percent hearing disability. Each college lecture he attends and each conversation he initiates requires powers of concentration beyond the ken of people with normal hearing. Relying on lip reading and a hearing aid, Pride has to listen with his eyes. Yet instead of shirking the challenge, Pride uses it as a motivating force, for himself and for all those people he doesn't know.

"You wouldn't believe the mail I get from people all over the country who've heard of me. They ask me how can they go on, and how do I do it?" Pride said.

"I want to set an example to handicapped people to show that you can do anything you really want to," he said. "I want to be able to motivate others by my example," said Pride.

Selected to the USA under-16 team he drilled the winning goal against Bolivia in front of 90,000 fans in Peking, China. Pride was one of 15 named to the All-World team for his age group.

On the hardwood Pride averaged over 20 points a game during his senior year, along with five assists and three steals a contest. His 1,183 career points established a school standard.

And in the spring and summer he excelled on the baseball diamond, batting a cool .509 with five home runs in his final season. That performance grabbed the attention of the New York Mets who drafted him in the 10th round in 1986. At the same time Pride was being recruited by some 200 colleges.

A unique situation called for a unique solution. Between the Mets and the NCAA an agreement was reached. Each summer after school for the past three years, Pride has signed with the Mets and played until mid-August when he is released, thus insuring his eligibility to compete in collegiate basketball as an amateur.

At William and Mary Pride has energized both fans and teammates with his ballhawking defense and lightning quick drives to the basket. As a freshman he led the team in steals and was named to the CAA-All Frosh team. Last year Pride thrived under new coach Chuck Swenson's emphasis on an up tempo offense and man-to-man defense, more than doubling his scoring average from 3.7 to 8.2 and earning Colonial All-Defensive team honors.

Swenson, who believes the best offense is a good defense, counts on Pride to spark the Tribe. "We want Curtis to play aggressively on

(and prior years)

We have not been overwhelmed with news items regarding you alumni, which leads me to suspect my present location is not conducive toward picking up those tidbits of information about you that I should have. And yet, some of you show up in far-off places.

Elizabeth Palmer Thompson '26 hailed us from Waco, Texas. She had just returned from her high school class reunion in Independence, Mo. It must have been a grand affair. Elizabeth returned to Waco riding a cloud and immediately started packing for a trip on the Delta Queen, New Orleans to Natchez. We have not heard how she fared on this trip. Because of the drought, there was little water in the Mississippi when she was due to sail. We admire her "get up and go."

"Caddo" Kelly Brewster '24 wrote from Florida where she now resides, that she too was restless, was planning a visit to Wilmington, Del., to visit her children and friends. Caroline lived in Wilmington many years and was instrumental in organizing and maintaining a William and Mary alumni chapter there.

Not to be outdone by our friends, my wife, Wilhemina Swann Goetz '26 and I pulled ourselves together in June and headed for the Alumni College in Williamsburg. Others have reported on this in some detail and we will not add to that, except to say that it was great, and, if repeated, you owe it to yourselves to attend.

We were party to a fling at Cedar Creek Lake over Labor Day weekend. The lake is about 75 miles southwest of Dallas. Participants were all good friends from Dallas and, as luck would have it, one was an alumna of William and Mary, Jane Palmer Herriott '59. Jane is married and has two daughters, one a high school senior and the other in college. Jane is developing a following as a tax accountant.

There is good news and bad news this time.

The good news is that we can have three letters each year henceforth: December, March and June. The Society's board of directors has reconsidered an earlier decision to publish Olde Guard letters only twice a year in the William and Mary Magazine. That makes things easier for this reporter, but I'll need your help in contributing. Please write to me by Jan. 1 for the March Gazette. We have deadlines, you know.

And now the bad (sad) news. Remember, I wrote in the summer magazine of receiving a postcard from James W. (Jim) Stone, mailed from Russia. He was enjoying life.

Imagine my shock to receive a note from his cousin, Mrs. Hugh T. (Theodosia) Gish, on Aug. 15 telling me of Jim's death Aug. 1 in Richmond. He was ill upon return home. The diagnosis was cancer of the liver and he lived only a matter of days. The joy was that he had realized an ambition going back to Navy days. I know you all share my personal sense of loss.

Bill Hogan wrote from England while still busy with his summer guide work at the Roman Palace, Chichester, near Sussex, that he had just been "up to London" to see the two interesting exhibits dated 1588 (the Spanish Armada) and 1688 (the Glorious Revolution, which brought William and Mary to the throne).

The 1688, he reported, "was very well-done and expensively laid out even if there is no mention of THE COLLEGE. My English friends are more interested in 1588 and enjoy telling me what Virginia was like in 1588.

"The newspaper accounts do not altogether agree with Dr. (J.A.C.) Chandler's stories of early Virginia history. The Lord Chancellor claimed that 'Virginia had based its own Bill of Rights on ours.' This view, of course, would make Madison and Jefferson mere followers!

"Several times a week a New England visitor will volunteer to me the information that he is a product of Harvard. This gives me opportunity to mention that William and Mary goes back to the proposed college (Henrico University) which Indians broke up in 1622, well before Harvard!"

Hogan already is planning to be at the College in 1993. Doubting he'll still have a driver's permit then, he tells me he's already lined up a chauffeur. He also wants to attend North Carolina's 200th anniversary the same year.

Not long ago I had a delightful surprise when my telephone rang. The caller was Margaret Holman McCoy. Busy packing furniture and other belongings for her move to Westminster-Canterbury in Richmond, she ran across some Gazettes containing my class letter and decided instantly to call me. I hope you're comfortably and happily settled in by now, Margaret.

An interesting clipping from the Greenfield, Mass., "Recorder" came from old friend Bill Morrow. Believe it or not, he's finally retired (again). It's headlined: "57 Years at NMH (Northfield Mount Hermon School) Author, Librarian William Morrow, 82, finally Graduated."

Of course, Bill had many other tasks in that half century — teacher, secretary to the faculty and what have you?

"I've finally done it," he exults. "Have a great apartment and the country boy is enjoying the city!" Happy "Early Retirement," Bill, you deserve it.

One of my columns earlier this year mentioned word from Mary Ann Bradshaw, prompting Frank Hopkins to reminisce about their participation in Althea Hunt's first William and Mary dramatic production, "The Goose Hangs High." I want to tell you more of that so will tantalize you by saving it for next letter. (I have to have some reserve, you know!)

Leonard Born, who seems to do more traveling than most of us, reports being in London recently, so he must have missed Hogan in that town.

Returning to the U.S. on the maiden voyage of the New Crown Odyssey, Born found the famed actress, Helen Hays, who told him that he was too young for her to dance with on the S.S. Leviathan in 1925.

For the record, I remember seeing the Leviathan interned in Newport News harbor in 1917-18. She was the German liner Prince Eitel Frederick when we entered World War I.

Is My Face Red Dept: In writing our letter for the summer William and Mary Magazine, I neglected to mention that my Mary was among the class wives attending Olde Guard Day activities. She was there definitely.

By the time you are reading this, Homecoming will have come and gone and many of you, I hope, will have joined in the fun. Maybe in next letter I can let you know names of those attending.

Meanwhile, a Happy, Holy and Joyous Christmas to one and all!

An interesting letter from Doris Nelms Towers contained some important happenings in her life since her William and Mary days. After attending business school in Norfolk, she worked awhile before meeting Harold Damron, a dental student at MCV. They married in 1934 and lived in Rainelle, W.Va., until he went on active duty as a member of the Army Reserve. They moved a number of times before Harold was sent overseas, and Doris, with their 10-year-old daughter, went to live in Elizabethtown, Tenn. Upon her husband's return, he set up practice in ophthalmology and otolaryngology, but he did not live long. After his death, she decided to get her degree in elementary education and enrolled in East Tennessee State College. However, two years later she married Dan Towers, a construction superintendent for TVA. After moving several times, they settled in south Pittsburgh. "Between us," wrote Doris, "we have seven children including in-laws, 15 grandchildren and four greats. With our big family, there's never a dull moment!"

When Dan retired they "did a lot of traveling, but have slowed down" now. Doris likes to cook, read, knit, play the piano and is involved in garden club, woman's club and church activities. She has held a number of offices on the local and district level in the United Methodist Women's organization. She is thankful for the good health she and Dan enjoy, which we hope they will continue to enjoy.

In a July issue of Your Neighbors, a Hampton, Va., newspaper, there is an account of the reunions held twice a year by Hampton High School's Class of 1923. Our classmate, Marion Hanger, was a member of that class, and from the article I learned the following information about her. After college she was employed as a clerk for the state. She has had an active life caring for her aging parents, working with youth groups, being involved with community activities and helping with reunion plans.

As I write this, Homecoming is not far away. Hope to see many of you there.

Classmates, please write! We want to know what you are doing.

1929 + 60 = 1989, which is coming up next year. We need to have all '29ers at Olde Guard Day next spring and at Homecoming next fall. Let's all try to make them.

And while you're thinking about our 60th reunion, please think of some news to send me. I didn't have any this time because you good people didn't send me any.

We are sorry to report that we have heard from only one classmate since the last Gazette. Frances Griffin Waters writes that in spite of the summer's heat she had two delightful weeks at Nag's Head with one of her sons and his family. This fall she went to Maryland with another son to visit her sister, Liz Griffin Conklin '31. Frances and Liz plan to attend Homecoming.

We were distressed to learn that our classmate, Sarah Ann Everett Woolford, who passed away in Richmond in September. Sarah Ann was one of the two representatives for our class on the Olde Guard Council when it was first organized. She continued her interest until her death. We offer our sympathy to her husband, Sam, and her family.

We were also saddened by the death of Eleanor Williamson James in July and send our sympathy to Joe and the family. As class reporter, Eleanor kept us in touch with each other from graduation until 1980. She and her husband, Joe '29, were regular attendants at Homecoming and Olde Guard activities. She and Sarah were members of the committee that planned our 50th reunion. We also regret to report the death of Harvey Trevilian's wife, Iva, who passed away this summer.

Katherine Lam, a perennial all-consensus upbeat '31 class member, spent part of her summer at Stowe, Vt., staying at Von Trapp Lodge, then at Montreal and finally at Atlantic Beach, N.C.

Katherine learned from Martha Barrow Hatcher that she has two grandchildren, Ashby and Jay. Both are recent graduates of the University of Virginia, and Jay works at Central Fidelity Bank in Richmond.

Bartlett "Bart" Roper Burgwyn writes from Jackson, N.C., to say his only business activity is chairman of Northampton County ABC Board, now that he has sold his business, but his avocations — gardening, boating and trying to stay ahead of the Grim Reaper — are enough to keep him busy.

Clare Gardner Gayle is much occupied perfecting the restoration of Tazewell House in Norfolk. Playing golf keeps her fit and limber. She even carries her golf clubs unless the temperature is over 90 degrees. Your energy is commendable, Clare. Keep it up!

Hazel Wilhelm writes that after 40 years of a busy and delightful life in pediatrics and adolescent medicine, she retired from private practice in November 1987. She is now devoting all

MARSHALL PAPERS RECEIVE GRANT

The Virginia Law Foundation, a non-profit corporation organized for law-related charitable activities, has given $15,000 to The Papers of John Marshall, which are being edited at William and Mary under the direction of Charles F. Hobson. Hobson said the grant will be used to complete Volume Six of the Marshall papers and to begin Volume Seven. Volume Six covers the first years that Marshall sat as Chief Justice of the United States — from Nov. 1, 1800, to March 31, 1807. Publication is anticipated for late 1989 or early 1990. Volume Seven will include details of Marshall's law career from 1807 to 1815. Marshall was an alumnus of William and Mary.

GRAYSON, STEPHENSON HONORED

George Grayson, Class of 1938 Professor of Government, and John Stephenson '59, president of Berea College, were honored by Alpha of Virginia of Phi Beta Kappa at William and Mary in December. Grayson, a scholar, teacher and member of the Virginia General Assembly since 1974, was selected as a faculty initiate. Stephenson, a sociologist who was selected as president of Berea College in Kentucky in 1984, was named an alumni initiate. In addition to Grayson and Stephenson, 34 William and Mary undergraduates were initiated into Phi Beta Kappa at a ceremony on Dec. 5.

James G. Harvell worked as a chemist for what is now known as Allied-Signal from shortly after graduation until 1972. He served tours of duty with the company from Manhattan to Omaha. However, he also became involved in government as town councilman for 10 years and member of the zoning board. He is now planning to join the snowbirds who migrate South each winter.

Elena Lois Burr Tuthill has three children: Mary Ellen Jacobs, first flutist in the Hartford Symphony Orchestra; Nancy Maclean, who has directed a summer camp, and William L. Tuthill, administrator of the state jails in Connecticut. She has six grandchildren.

In July in Williamsburg Mildred Milton attended a beautiful wedding held in the Wren Chapel with a reception at the Alumni House. En route, she stopped for a luncheon-cruise on the James River in Richmond aboard the Annabel Lee, operated by her son-in-law, Thomas her working hours to the Falmouth, Mass., public school system where she is the school physician, covering seven schools from kindergarten through grade 12 as well as special classes for the handicapped. She finds it challenging and says she is busy as ever. She and her husband enjoy golf, and she is active in her church and the Falmouth Garden Club.

We were happy to hear from Loula Connelly who now resides at Westminster-Canterbury in Richmond. It seems this lovely place is chosen by many of our alumni in their retirement. Let's hear from more of them so we can keep in touch. Our best wishes, Loula!

Barton Pattie, outstanding member of '31, retired 18 years ago from his Associated Press position where most of his working career was spent writing and editing for that illustrious medium. He is living with his wife, Augusta, in the Shenandoah Valley near Staunton, Va. They were married 56 years ago (I'm told that diamonds are for the 75th. Our best wishes!)

Harold B. Lewis of Salem, Conn., has celebrated his 80th birthday and his 50th wedding anniversary. Nice round numbers. Congratulations! We look forward to seeing you again on campus.

Leigh Trotter wrote a nice, newsy letter about his most recent travels to the West Coast. He and Louise visited San Francisco, Yosemite National Park, Los Angeles and Hollywood.

After a long, hot summer in Virginia, we have enjoyed a beautiful fall.

Our Southside Alumni Chapter met at Armbruster's to plan our trip to the William and Mary-Richmond football game. We are looking forward to an exciting year. Bob Henkel '71 is our chairman.

The Richmond Times-Dispatch tells of another honor for Brooks George. The Virginia region of National Conference of Christians and Jews will honor Brooks with a citation at the 20th annual meeting in Richmond for his leadership in the city. Brooks has been the chairman and president of Larus and Bros. Co. He has served as president of Channel 23 and the Metropolitan Richmond Chamber of Commerce. Brooks is also honorary chairman with Roy Charles '32 of the William and Mary pre-campaign steering committee.

Many happy memories of the Class of '32. Please write.

Helyn L. Janson wrote about her interest in our class, but she regretted not being able to travel or participate in Olde Guard activities.

Lillian Carmine Sterling has been visiting historic places — St. Augustine, Monticello, Harper's Ferry, Independence Hall, New England. She added a P.S. that said she will sadly miss H. Westcott Cunningham and John Phillips, former members of the Alumni staff.

Frances S. Harris wrote a beautiful letter expressing gratitude to the College for our last Olde Guard Homecoming. How wonderful to see old friends and the college staff. She too expressed her fondness for John Phillips. She said, "Best wishes and we love you."

Myron Aronovitz wrote in September that he was playing golf almost every day. He pointed out an error in the last Class Notes column in which an editorial mistake turned him into a "she." He has received an apology for the erroneous sex change.

Congratulations to Bruce Kent and his wife on their 50th wedding anniversary celebrated June 8, 1988. Their family treated them to a "grand" dinner at a popular Washington restaurant. In May, they traveled from Florida to Los Angeles via the Panama Canal. Coming home, they stopped in Tucson, Ariz., to visit Bruce's brother.

Mary Roberts Agay writes that she and her husband are doing well after surgery. They have sold their home in the North and are planning their future.

Mason and Hazel Sizemore had a trip to Seattle to visit Mason Jr. '63 and his family. They also took a cruise along the Alaskan coast, stopping in Juneau and Glacial Bay. Hazel's sister, Charlotte Abel '38, and Mason Jr. and his wife will be with the Sizemores at Homecoming. Mason Jr. will be celebrating his 25th anniversary.

Albert Nurnberger's sister, Mrs. Marion Hurdle, wrote a letter of appreciation for the book given to Swem Library by the Society of the Alumni in memory of Al, who died about a year ago. She also expressed her thanks for the memorial regarding Al that appeared in the Alumni Gazette. Classmates, if you knew Al, please write a note of remembrance of Al's fine personality to Mrs. Hurdle. Her address is 4637 12th Ave., North, St. Petersburg, FL 33713.

Margaret Snead Nuckols works with me in the Alpha Delta Kappa fraternity, International Honorary Teachers Association. She did a fine job as president of the local chapter, Delta Gamma. Margaret spent much time gardening in the summer.

John Mapp attended a recent luncheon of the Richmond-Henrico Area Retired Teachers Association.

Anne Nenzel Lambert, Pauline Stanley Ogden, Helen Addis Taylor and her husband as well as Ernest Goodrich and Hazel and Mason Sizemore were at Olde Guard Day. I talked with all and they seem to be doing fine.

Thanks to all who wrote to the Gazette or to me.

As I promised in the last letter, I'm including, in somewhat shortened form, the biography of Carl Buffington, which was inadvertently omitted from the Colonial Re-Echo.

"After graduation from William and Mary, Carl was awarded a graduate fellowship in the department of fine arts and worked with Althea Hunt in the theater department. During the war years 1941-1946, Captain Buffington served in the U.S. Army. From 1946 until 1955, he was manager of personnel for Vicks Chemical Co. in New York City. For the next 10 years he was vice president of television for Morse International Advertising Agency, and from 1965 until 1980 was director of communications for Richardson-Vicks, Inc. In 1968 he co-authored The William and Mary Theatre — A Chronicle.

NEVILLE NAMED TERCENTENARY DIRECTOR

John D. Neville, former executive director of America's Four Hundredth Anniversary Committee, has been named the director of the Commission on the Tercentenary Observances of the College of William and Mary. As executive director of America's Four Hundredth Anniversary Committee, a section of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources, Neville was responsible for planning and directing the commemoration of the quadricentennial of Sir Walter Raleigh's colonies on the coast of what is now North Carolina but was then part of Virginia. In his new position, Neville will serve as the administrative officer of the College's Commission on the Tercentenary Observances, established in 1987 to plan and oversee two phases of ceremonial events surrounding the College's 300th anniversary celebration—the international celebrations of the tercentenary of the "Glorious Revolution" of 1688-89, commemorating the accession of William III and Mary II to the throne of England, and the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the College, which was founded by William and Mary on Feb. 8, 1693. Neville received his A.B. and M.A. degrees from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and his Ph.D. degree from Vanderbilt University.

FUNIGIELLO PUBLISHES BOOK

Philip Funigiello, professor of history at William and Mary, is author of a new book titled American-Soviet Trade in the Cold War, published by the University of North Carolina Press. The book explores the impact of Cold War politics on American-Soviet trade policy over the past 40 years and documents the ineffectiveness of a policy maintained from the end of World War II to the present, not for economic, military or strategic reasons, but for political ones.

After retirement, Carl did public relations works for Greens Farms Academy in Westport, Conn., and has worked actively for the Episcopal Church. He and his wife, Patsy, live in Fairfield, Conn., and both of their children, Patricia Hiller and Rev. Carl Jr., are graduates of the College. He enjoys gardening and their five grandchildren."

Also missing from the Re-Echo was Bill Reynolds' biography:

"After William and Mary, Bill went on to earn an M.A. from New York University in 1940 and a Ph.D. from Columbia in 1967. For 26 years he was economist and treasurer for American Carpet Institute and later was professor and chairman of the economics department at Windham College in Vermont for 15 years. In addition to numerous articles published in professional journals, he wrote Innovation Carpet Industry — 1947-1963. He now enjoys playing bridge and golf, reading, writing and keeping healthy at his summer home in Vermont and during winters in Venice, Fla., with his wife, Nancy. He is president of the Dorset, Vt., library and treasurer of Dorset United Church."

In spite of cataract surgery and other health problems, Mildred Albee Babb was able to locate and send these biographies to me. She apologized for some of the typos and errors in the Colonial Re-Echo, but we think she deserves bouquets for her work in editing all those sketches.

Are there others who sent biographical material before the reunion that did not appear in the Colonial Re-Echo? I'll try to include it in a later column if you will alert me.

Eldridge Blanton wrote that his and Marty Ann's granddaughter spent the summer in France. They are hoping she may decide to apply to the College, for, in Eldridge's words: "One of our sons graduated from VMI and the other from UVA. I think it is time for one of the family to attend William and Mary." I wish I could reproduce for you pictures he sent of their country home in Tamworth, Va., west of Richmond, and of the 1753 flour mill, now a national historical landmark, which he operated until 1964.

Quite by accident, I discovered the best way to get news from classmates — simply take several vacations and particularly, leave the country for a month. Suddenly the mail pours in and brings double joy. First, it provides news for the class letter. Furthermore, it's a great relief from the junk mail and bills which accumulate.

One of the first letters I opened on return from England in early October was from Claude Hartog, postmarked Paris on Sept. 29. I was in Paris Sept. 18-22 and could have called him, had I known that he and Marcelle had moved there from Marseilles. He extended an invitation to all his classmates to call him when in Paris. Next time I will do that.

Claude writes that shipping was his job and, except for a few yearly board meetings, he retired in 1985. He still has a "part-time professional activity as maritime arbitrator" which, I believe, would be the same as consultant in our business terms. Right, Claude? He and Marcelle expect to be back for our 50th. Surely, they will get the "longest distance" prize — or will they? Do I hear others over there voicing a mild protest? But more about the Hartogs. They live in an old family home 12 miles out of Paris. They decided to settle there because one of their two sons and a year-old grandson live in the area. Their address is 25, Rue de la Marne, 78600 Le Mesnil Le Roi.

Mary Mackey Sainsbury of Seal Beach, Calif., wrote a wonderful long letter about her "doings" since her transfer from the College in her senior year to the University of Texas. Since she had wanted to become a social worker, she went on to the University of Chicago's School of Social Service Administration, specializing in child welfare. There, she met and married Chuck Sainsbury. Eventually, they moved to Southern California, where their son, Pat, and daughter, Mary Mahala, grew up and went on to higher education, Pat to Stanford, Mary Mahala to City College and Cal Berkeley. Mary's work in child welfare started with Los Angeles County but moved into teaching and school social work in the early fifties, during which time she got her master's in education. Before her retirement in 1978, she spent 21 years as a guidance counselor with the Long Beach Unified School District. She has remained active in Pi Phi, serving as president of both the Pasadena Junior and Long Beach Alumnae Clubs. If space permitted, we would include a picture of Mary displaying a Brazilian Indian turtle-shell mask she collected during her travels in South America. It's from the Orange County Register, which describes her as one of the county's interesting personalities whose travels have taken her to six continents. Come back to Williamsburg in May 1989, Mary, and fill in the details I've omitted. Thanks very much for your good letter.

Jordan Sizemore also responded to my appeal for news. He retired in 1977, but after several years went back into real estate. He also sells cedar log home kits. He and Jeanne, who will retire from her teaching career in elementary school music next year, attended the Lions Club International Convention in July at Denver. Then they traveled to San Diego to visit an old Army buddy of Jordan's. They also had a good visit with Walt '37 and Betty '40 Zable. Jordan advises that Frank L. Thompson retired several years ago as principal of Lexington, Va. High School. His college roommate, T. Edgar Omohundro, is a retired merchant and farmer. See you next May, Jordan.

Gwen Evans Wood wrote in June. She was enthusiastic about our 1988 Alumni College. There were about 36 in the group, varying in classes from 1926 to 1979. Gwen continues her support of elderhostel programs, her latest being Sorrento in April. Sounds wonderful — Pompeii, Naples, San Carlos (opera) and more. On the domestic front, she and Bill were in D.C. for meetings. In July, she and Jean Clarahan Bratton '40 were going to Saratoga, N.Y., for a ballet weekend. Gwen, we will see you in May, won't we?

Dot Hosford Smith's letter of August came from eastern Pennsylvania where she and Herb were visiting his sister. Next was New Jersey to see her relatives (only 20 at this small reunion). Earlier in the summer the Smiths took a course in Shakespeare at a local college. Yes, they had to take exams and write four papers, which they admitted added to their enjoyment of the Bard's plays they saw during the classes and later on. The Smiths are planning to be with us for the 50th and are thinking about Amtrak for their cross-country trek.

Alma Van Blarom Walker and Lorimer are old faithfuls in keeping us updated on their activities. They continue their many interests in the community and traveling. They have a house in Maine, which is rented, so when there, they camp on the property. They celebrated their 48th wedding anniversary in June. Their children are scattered all over Texas, Maryland and Minnesota.

A news clipping from the Alumni Office tells us that Mary Musick, daughter of Mary Allen Kearney Mitkiewicz and the late Leo Mitkiewicz, graduated summa cum laude from National University, Irvine, Calif., in June. She attended William and Mary before going to California.

My travels during the summer and early fall were a combination of seashore, mountains, Bermuda, Spain, France, Monaco, England and Scotland. But don't get me started. Please write. Best wishes to all of you for joyous holidays.

Were it not for our faithful Al Alley, I'd have nothing to report except stuff from the home front.

Al appreciated notes sent by classmates about the 45th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. His son was able to get there from Germany where he's still singing with the Hegen Opera Theatre. Al hopes to get back for our 50th reunion.

Frank and I had a fun dinner and evening with Patty Nixon Arms '43, who was in Irvington for a wedding the weekend of Oct. 22. Patty, a widow of two years, lives on Swackhammer Road in Turin, N.Y. 13473. We hadn't seen each other in at least 25 years, so it was quite a reunion.

Last month Frank and I had a delightful trip to the beautiful Canadian Rockies and California. We took a Tauck Tour out of Calgary to Banff, Lake Louise, Vancouver, Victoria and left the tour in Seattle. After a couple of days there we flew to Santa Barbara and visited my niece at Arroya Grande and friends in Morro Bay. Our scenery, weather and traveling companions were all just great. Now we're looking forward to Thanksgiving, which we'll spend in Keene, N.H., visiting our son and his family.

Frank had a phone conversation with Tim Hanson '39 this week. Both he and Jane (Harden) '42 have had recent surgery and a rough time. We hope they'll be recovering soon.

Lucy Jones Murphy '48, who serves on the Alumni Society's board of directors and lives in the county, is getting an alumni chapter organized here in the Lower Northern Neck. We had a kick-off luncheon at the Tides Inn and we hope this smaller area will have a successful organization going soon.

Congratulations, Class of '42: Annette Warren Sirmon writes that our class had the highest class participation in the 1988 William and Mary Annual Fund campaign and was recognized at the Annual Meeting at Homecoming in November.

Annette recently recovered from a broken right wrist, but she forwarded to me a newsletter from Emalee Ewing Durbin about the trip that she and her husband, Sol, made earlier this year. They left Corvallis, Ore., at mid-February and returned in April. I wish there was space to relate all of their adventures traveling through Mexico by way of Corpus Christi and Padre Island. Their new Wilderness Yukon 18.5 fifth-wheel trailer encountered narrow roads, cobblestones, tunnels, switchback roads minus guardrails, burros and other animals. But, Emalee and Sol, adventurous and persistent, were rewarded with gorgeous sights in Mexico City, Cuernavaca, Monterrey, San Luis Potosa, Acapulco and Mazatlan. I wish we could all learn more about this wonderful vacation, but I'm sure that a letter to Emalee would bring you a copy of her newsletter. Later in April they traveled to Phoenix by way of Milwaukee, Las Vegas, Sacramento, Lake Tahoe and Reno. They should write a book. I'm sure there are not many roads that they haven't been on!

In the last class newsletter I asked for a

He received his undergraduate, master's and Ph. D. degrees from Florida State University. He has published more than 20 articles in professional journals and is co-author of one book. During the 1985-86 academic year, he was a Fulbright Senior Lecturer at Wuhan University in the People's Republic of China.

classmate who would be willing to take charge of fund raising for our class gift at our 50th reunion. A volunteer would still be appreciated.

In 10 days Mike and I are off for two weeks in sunny Spain. In the meantime, remember your class secretary when you are making resolutions for the new year and keep those cards and letters coming.

Adios until next time.

W&M has been recently distinguished in the national news in various ways. I hope you saw some or all of this material: 1) We are contributing some of our quality to improve the Ivy League — the last provost of Harvard, the new one for Yale, and the president of Smith are all W&M alumni! 2) The early fall N.Y. Times supplement on education focused on the nationwide scene in successful higher education of minorities and featured W&M and two other institutions (Brooklyn and Wesleyan).

It saddens one to hear of the deaths of Julie Rowan Murray and Vic Raschi (entered in the class of 1943, but did not graduate until 1950). Years back, I saw Julie at a nice dinner in Houston, and Iran into Vic once in Geneseo, N.Y. The 1942 yearbook says, "Never before had a team been carried by one player the way Vic Raschi carried the W&M baseball team to the crown." We all rejoiced at his World Series triumphs for the Yankees. Offer your prayers for them both.

Our class president Dave MacNamara reports on summer travels in New England, and the great, loving satisfactions of his wife's grown children.

Fran Pendleton Elliot continues in Winchester, Mass. Her husband teaches at MIT and travels worldwide as a metallurgist. She has a daughter in Corning, N.Y., a son in Princeton, N.J., and four grandsons. Last summer, the Elliots vacationed on Hawaii Island. She says she knows she owes a letter to Lucille Pfizer Gooch.

Bill Morris, law professor at W.Va. University, continues his globe-trotting. During the past year, he has lectured on dental law in Europe, Asia, Australia and the U.S.

Jim and Ann Edwards Harnsberger sent me news and a fine clipping announcing that Judge Nixon Foster retired on Sept. 1 after 21 years of service in the Circuit Court of Virginia, 15th District. The article quotes many of his observations about his work on the bench. He concludes it all with thanks to his wife, Nancy Norris — "She's the most wonderful person in the world. She'll worry about everyone but herself. Our marriage has been an extremely happy one." Before ascending the bench, Nixon was in law partnership with Garland (Buddy) Clark.

Fran Elliot says she will definitely be coming to our 45th reunion in the fall of next year. Plan ahead! We should all be present.

Crank up the pens and write to me among your Christmas messages.

There may have been a course offering entitled "How to Write a Newsletter — Sans News," but somehow I must have missed it! I really want to keep you up to date on news of fellow '46ers, but without input from you I am lost. I have many William and Mary friends from other classes who tell me they faithfully read my column — sorry to disappoint you this time!

Homecoming is just a short time away, so I look forward to some news then and a better report next time. My plea remains the same, please put pen to paper and drop me a line to share.

Our own Tom Mikula again figures in the news — this time via his wife Elva Waltrip Mikula. She has just become the first woman in the 175-year history of Kimball Union Academy in Meriden, N.H., to receive its highest honor, the Kimball Union Medal. Perhaps because her family ties in Williamsburg span four generations, Tom and Elva have purchased a home in Williamsburg where they will live after retirement in June 1989.

Jim Bray, recently interviewed on U.N.C.-Center for Public TV's North Carolina People, was honored for his 23 years as director of North Carolina's Governor's School, a summer program for gifted and talented high school students. The North Carolina program is the oldest summer program of its kind in the nation.

Something called William and Mary fever is in the air — and I've caught it! Nancy Foster '44 and I have taken a notion that the Northern Neck Chapter of the Alumni Society, which has been dormant for more than six years, should be revived. Some of the great alumni from our class living here in Lancaster and Northumberland counties are Knox Ramsey and his wife, Betty Lu Brann Ramsey '49, Jackson Simons, Harold Porter Eubank, and — soon, I hope — Bill Murphy. Also here are Dick and Audrey Hutchison Saunders. Right behind us in the class of '49 and living here are Kathleen Pinkard Haynie, Charles H. Meeks and Charlotte Selden Bucher and her husband, Dave '44.

Soon to be married and living near Ditchley are Carol Achenbach Taylor and Mel Wright. Their arrival on the Northern Neck is set for April 1989, Mel from California and Carol from Connecticut.

Exciting things are in the air for all of us with the Tricentennial coming up and Homecoming celebrating our FORTIETH REUNION this year. Catch that William and Mary fever.

Larry Carter has written such a wonderful letter (which he says is "a final resolution to do the impossible") from South Bend, Ind., that I am going to quote it almost in its entirety:

"I was recalled to the Navy Hospital Corps in June 1950, days after graduation, for another 18 months in Korea (over four years in WWII). Then with the government in Norfolk and D.C., where I was awarded practically all the Superior Accomplishment awards they had. How I enjoyed being auditor-in-charge! I came to the University of Notre Dame as a brother candidate in the Congregation of Holy Cross, made it through the novitiate, combined student loans and scholarships into a single office of financial aid, left the community, went back to D.C. for lay life, again as an auditor. Returned to N.D., married my secretary, a rich rewarding life. She died in 1984 of a totally debilitating blood disease. Retired as senior accountant in the comptroller's office in January 1988. Et voila! So much for the last 38 years!"

We are rich in having not one but two letters for this issue. Here are excerpts from the one from Phyllis Reardon Morrison in Bakersfield, Calif.:

"We moved to Argentina in 1980 and spent four fantastic years in Mendoza and Buenos Aires. From there we went to Quito, Ecuador. We were there slightly over two years and we have been back here in Bakersfield for two years. I get back to Virginia (Alexandria) a couple of times a year to visit my mom and I try to get together with Nancy Kurtz Falck, Nicky Dillard Dewing and Skippy Beecher Scrymgeour. When I was there back in January I also went to Connecticut to visit my married daughter who lives there. I called Liz Daniel Shuman and Bob who are living in Cape Elizabeth, Maine. Since it was snowy we didn't get together so just talked on the phone. They were or are remodeling an old house to retire and live by the sea.

I worked before when we were in Bakersfield, but I don't now because when Bob travels I like to be able to go with him. We have been to Quito twice this year and Argentina once. Hope to get back to Argentina before the end of the year."

According to the July 26, 1988 issue of Daily News-Record of Harrisonburg, Va.: "Edward E. Brickell, the one-time head of the state's second-largest school district, was named acting head of the Eastern Virginia Medical School, a post he said he will not seek permanently. He expects to hold the job for about a year. Board chairman Dr. Charles Fletcher said Brickell brings to the job extensive contacts in state government, experience as assistant to the president of the College of William and Mary, and a reputation as a high-profile educator he earned during his 20 years as head of the Virginia Beach system. 'He gets to the heart of things and he's an administrator of the first order,' Fletcher said."

My thanks to Phyllis and Larry for writing — it was great to hear from you! I hope someone else will tackle "the impossible" and write for the next issue. Remember those Christmas cards!

Sorry about the blank column last time, but there wasn't enough news to make a paragraph. So I'll combine what I have and hope for some real scoops for the next one!

Sara Hardin writes that she attended the 1987 Homecoming and particularly enjoyed the parade and the luncheon in the Sunken Garden tent. Guess this sounds like old news, but don't forget to fill me in on our 1988 Homecoming.

Jim Anthony sends a very interesting note pertaining to the Order of the White Jacket. Seems the Order had just received the first proceeds, amounting to $22,000, of a death benefit under a life insurance policy on a member. The Order was named half beneficiary. I'm not sure how this works exactly, but I know the members of this illustrious group will understand. Jim has his own agency in Williamsburg.

Bill Hickey reports that he is still working on behalf of Roisin Dabh and is presently writing a column on Irish history which is published in the National Hibernian Digest. Bill lives in Norfolk and is also involved in a local production, a play titled "Cathleen ni Houlihan." Sounds like a lot of dedication!

I received a most interesting newspaper article on Bob Hackler who retired from Delco Remy and is working for a travel agency. This allows him to indulge his love of travel and medieval history and architecture in a most unusual way. He has returned to Great Britain 13 times since first visiting Europe in 1970 and has explored many of the fine castles, churches and cathedrals in England. Sounds as if Bob has the best of both worlds! He and his wife, Peggy Blair, live in Anderson, Ind., which is in my neck of the woods.

DR. GRAVES NAMED PRESIDENT EMERITUS

Thomas A. Graves Jr., the 24th president of William and Mary, has been named to the honorary position of president emeritus of the College by the Board of Visitors. Now the director of the Winterthur Museum in Delaware, Dr. Graves served as president of the College from 1971 to 1984. In a resolution, the Board of Visitors noted that Dr. Graves "brought high academic and professional values worthy of (William and Mary), a steady administrative style, a firm will when needed, and the patience and good nature that made the exercise of that will infrequently necessary." In the accompanying photo, President and Mrs. Graves are shown with President Verkuil and Henry T. Tucker '72, vice rector of the College. Davis Y. Paschall '32, the 23rd president, had previously been accorded president emeritus status.

PROFESSOR STANLEY PASSES

Marvin Miles Stanley, Chessie Professor of Business Administration Emeritus and former associate dean of graduate studies in the business school, died Oct. 6. Dr. Stanley taught in the School of Business Administration from 1968 to 1987 and served as associate dean from 1971 to 1974. A retired Air Force colonel and expert on aviation, he served on the Governor's Board of Advisory Economics, the Board of Directors of First Virginia Bank-Commonwealth, the Virginia Development Commission and the Advisory Board of the Peninsula Ballet. He was a longtime consultant to CSX Corporation, the Coca-Cola Company and other major corporations.

As for me, it's been a busy year — two trips to Florida to visit daughter Kimberly. The second trip in July was for her wedding and in spite of traveling in 95-degree heat, it was a wonderful occasion. Granddaughter Lindsey was in the wedding and performed admirably, in spite of our fears of her running down the aisle! I will be returning later this winter and am still considering a move to that area.

Daughter Kathryn and Kelly and son Steve are still in Cincinnati — both Steve and Kelly working here and Kathryn in her second year of paralegal studies at the University of Cincinnati.

I hope everyone who can make it to Homecoming has the best time ever. Do keep the news coming, as without it, I'm out of a job!

Had not my sorority sister, Peggy Orr Boggs, taken a vacation north last summer, I would have nothing for this column! Peggy, with husband, Jim, traveled up the East Coast, from their Coral Springs, Fla., home, and visited several of our Alpha Chi friends. She reported to me during a stopover visit in Greensboro when returning home in July.

In Connecticut they visited with Grace Stone Marrion and lawyer-husband, Bob. Grace is coordinator for Project Learn, a program providing services for children with special needs from birth to age 3. She is also working on her dissertation to complete requirements for her doctorate in educational psychology by the end of the year. Marion and Bob have five grown children — two lawyers, a social worker, a veterinarian, and one who works in admissions at Harvard University. Sounds like Grace has kept busy!

In Bernardsville, N.J., the Boggsses visited with Shirley Haabestad Hollen and husband, Gene, whom I have mentioned previously. Their two sons are both living in California, and daughter, Debbie '87, is working in Washington. Shirley sells industrial products, and Gene is in advertising.

Only a few minutes away from the Hollens live Sarah Deane Spangler Link and husband, Gordon Link. Sarah Deane is director of the library in Brookside, N.J., and Gordon has retired from Bell Laboratories. They have a son who is studying for a doctorate in physics at the University of Illinois. I was so delighted to get all this firsthand information that I encourage you all to stop and see Phil and me in Greensboro, as you travel I-85! And if you don't travel this way, please drop me a note.

I hesitate to mention this last bit of news, but I do it solely with the intent of perhaps helping someone else. A week ago I left Duke Medical Center where I had surgery for breast cancer. My prognosis is excellent since the tumor was found in a very early stage. I cannot emphasize enough that self-examination and regular checkups are important. Good health to you all!

Louis (Bud) Fisher has published his sixth book: Constitutional Dialogues: Interpretation as Political Process (Princeton University Press, 1988). He explains that constitutional law is not merely the product of the judiciary, but also of Congress, the executive branch, the states and the public. In June, he presented a paper on executive-legislative relations in foreign policy at a conference in Mexico City.

Bob and Anne Clark turned up at the Tides Inn dock one day this past August. They looked tan and wonderful.

Via a circuitous grapevine, word comes that John Marsteller is a busy architect, hanging his hat in Roanoke. Let's hear more about you, John.

There's much activity here in the Northern Neck of Virginia to re-establish an alumni chapter. Perhaps it will generate more news from the class of '56. Let's hope so.

I just got back from a very nice Williamsburg weekend with some other Gamma Phis. Judi and Ken Lownes came from North Carolina; Carole and Jerry '59 Welborn and I came from the D.C. area; and from Philadelphia way, Peggy and Barry Haines, and Janet and Mike Elling arrived. We spent a lot of the weekend gorging ourselves at the local restaurants. But we did manage to see an exciting win over New Hampshire! It was especially nice for the Welborns, Haines, and Mike Elling, who had endured the heartbreaking loss the week before at Delaware.

DALTON, SHOWALTER

Republican state senator Edwina P. "Eddy" Dalton of Richmond has been named to the Board of Directors of the School of Business Administration Sponsors Inc. at William and Mary, while Joan F. Nicholas J. St. George '60, J.D. Dick Guthrie writes that he is now chairman of the department of modern and classical languages and literatures at Christopher Newport College in Newport News. Dick received his Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill along with Joan Buhlmann. Dick has acted as interpreter for the vice president of French Guinea and the minister of defense of Senegal on their respective visits to the Coast Guard station in Yorktown and to Colonial Williamsburg. He has been an interpreter for a theatrical group invited to perform at the International Congress on the Medieval Theater at the University of Perpignan in southern France. He also is a volunteer sign language interpreter for the deaf.

News comes that Dennis Thompson is a professor at Harvard University. His book, Political Ethics and Public Office, has been named "the best political science publication in the field of U.S. national policy" by the American Political Science Association (APSA). Dennis is the Alfred North Whitehead professor of political philosophy in the John F. Kennedy School of Government and Harvard's department of government. Vee Jones Davis and Bill Corley has agreed to chair our 25th reunion, which is slated for the weekend of Nov. 3-5, 1989. Mark your calendars and plan to come. You have a year to achieve that prosperous "you haven't changed a bit" look coupled with content with one's lot in life after 25 years! The best part of any reunion is seeing the people who enriched your life long ago and whose shared experiences have been with you for all these years.

"What is past is prologue" is fitting for an experience Jim Roy had in 1984. He took his son William to his freshman dorm to check into the College and found that two doors down was lodged Timothy Lesniak, son of Mike, Jim's former roommate. Downstairs in the dorm was the freshmen's R.A., Chip Puskar, son of Jim's fraternity big brother, Chuck Puskar '63.

It was great to hear from Jim, who is a partner in his own law firm, Roy, Forehand, Laine & Larsen, P.C. in Chesapeake, Va. Jim and his wife, Carol (Wieland) '64, have a daughter, 16, in high school, and their son graduated from the College last May.

I was happy to hear from my college roommate, Marcia Ballard Scott, this past summer. Marcia and her son David are living in Richmond. They had spent a weekend at the beach home of Bobbie Mulcahey Frazier and Bill in Nag's Head. Marcia is working in the public affairs department of A.H. Robins Pharmaceutical Co.

Back to our 25th reunion — the committee will be contacting you during the next year to help with the logistics and to help support our gift to the College.

Drop me a line if you are planning to come. Your presence may be a real stimulus to someone who would come to see you. I will try to publish who's coming in the column and to let you know the details of the weekend as they develop.

If some of you have never written, you should consider checking in. We're happy to accept 25 words or less.

A few things have changed around our house. Our second child was born in June, so we're adjusting to being a foursome. I have decided to stay home rather than work outside, and I have a lot of admiration for mothers who do this successfully. I'm enjoying it and have to say that it's an interesting challenge.

I received a nice letter from Jack Mitchell, who is now a U.S. Senate investigator for Sen. Carl Levin of Michigan. He spent most of his first year there working on the Wedtech scandal. Jack lives in Silver Spring, Md., and formerly worked at Cable News Network until his unit was disbanded in late 1986.

Two of our classmates Jack hears from occasionally are living abroad. Doug Hartwick and his wife, Regina, are in the U.S. Embassy in New Delhi. certification. All this happened after Joanne taught elementary school for 13 years and earned her master's degree in school administration from Virginia Commonwealth University. She and John have no children and love company, so they invite friends to get in touch when they plan to be in Richmond at (804) 233-8579.

Dave Hinder now hails from New York where he is senior vice president for personnel and labor relations for Macy's department stores. As that covers 16,000 employees, he's busy but loves it. Moreover, he says he gets good seats for the Thanksgiving Day Parade and Fourth of July fireworks. Dave left Williamsburg in 1975 with an MBA and worked in a variety of positions with Macy's before reaching his current spot. He has done some recruiting in Williamsburg, and it brought back memories of friends he'd love to hear from, including Stefen Crane and Lou Petraglia '72, Bob Jendron and wife Janet '69, Dave Whimar '71 and Dave Oelbey and Sheldon Karasik '73. If any of you out there read this, you can reach Dave by calling Macy's in Herald Square and simply asking for him by name.

Bill Giermak is now the president and chief executive officer of Louise Obici Memorial Hospital in Suffolk, Va. Previously, Bill was the administrator at Regional Hospital at Terre Haute, Ind.

Susan Reichard Taylor earned a doctorate in educational administration from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro this past May.

I had a phone call from Maggie Miles Schoenherr who lives just minutes away from me in Centreville with her husband, Bill. She works at Atlantic Research as assistant production manager of their four-color publications, a position she has held for eight years. She has spent an additional seven years in the printing and graphics business as a customer service representative and production coordinator for other printers.

Maggie said she saw Sharon Hall DeFur and Pete at a high school reunion. Pete had been a professor at George Mason University in Fairfax, Va., but had accepted a teaching position in Louisiana. Sharon was working on her Ph.D. and they have several children.

On an annual basis, Maggie and several classmates have their own reunion in Richmond. Margie Whitcomb Hucks and her husband live in Hilton Head, S.C. She teaches high school and junior high. Naturally enough, she and her husband enjoy sailing and golf. Janice Walthall Nimmo lives in Richmond, is a homemaker and works part-time in an area school. Susan Hume-McIntosh and her husband both work for the Federal Reserve in Washington. They have two sons and live in McLean, Va. Gail Martens Guilleadeu recently had her second child, a son. She has a day care in her home in Vienna, Va. And the last of the group is Kathy Oberg Di Stasio who got married about three years ago and lives in a Boston suburb. She worked at the Pentagon for a number of years and took a sabbatical, during which she met her husband in Italy.

Anne Timpano is still director of the Columbus Museum in Georgia and is very involved with a construction project to expand the facility. The museum has recently been awarded a grant for more than $350,000 from the National Endowment for the Humanities — quite an honor. Anne returned to Williamsburg after 11 years to discuss museum careers at Career Exploration Day at the College in January. She found out the Hilton was no longer on Richmond Road when she drove up expecting to claim her room!

Mary Woodward Clark, founder and innkeeper of Mary's Country Inn, a bed and breakfast establishment in Edinburg, Va., has done very well over the past five years. She has met a lot of interesting people, the most important being her husband (since July 1987), Jim Clark, whom she describes as a superb innkeeper. They have opened a small antique shop and art gallery at the Inn so that keeps them busy. If any William and Mary graduates find themselves on Route 81 in Edinburg, stop by and take advantage of the 10 percent discount you'll get.

One last word from Ron Myers, who sent his change of address to the Alumni Office. He and wife, Linda '73, recently moved from Brockway,

Pa. to the Toledo, Ohio area where he took a position with the Owens Brockway Glass Co. He comments that with two children, ages 5 and 1, and five large Newfoundland dogs, it should be an interesting move.

Finally, after 14 years, Dan Stebbins wrote to the Alumni-Gazette with his news since graduation. Congratulations, Dan, and congratulations also on your new consulting business. Dan took a leave of absence from his wheelwright job at Colonial Williamsburg in 1986 to get a master's in history museum studies from Utah State University in Logan, with a beautiful mountain campus. He returned to CW for a year, but decided to leave this past August to devote his full time to consulting with museums all over the country. Dan specializes in historic trades and technology, interpretive planning and program evaluation but spends some time writing as well. Dan's wife, Mary Ellen '75 (another former CW person) recently passed her CPA exam and works with Coopers & Lybrand as a senior accountant. Dan and Mary Ellen live in Williamsburg.

Dr. Kathryn McMullan and husband Dr. Michael Lahey finally found time after all those years of medical school to have a baby. Andrew Michael Lahey was born last July. The Laheys live in Brighton, Colo., where both have thriving medical practices.

John Sherwood, a biology major from our class, received a master's in plant pathology from the University of Maryland and his Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin. He joined the faculty of Oklahoma State University in 1981 where he is an associate professor of plant pathology.

Scott Yancy has been promoted to vice president of finance and administration at Cable & Wireless Communications Inc. in Vienna, Va. He will serve as the chief financial and administrative officer at the company.

Watch the New York Times Best Seller list closely! Christopher Bram just published his first novel, Surprising Myself. Actually it was published in hardcover last year and was just released in paperback this summer. While the author claims it is not at all autobiographical, he does include a few glimpses of Williamsburg circa 1972 that might amuse some classmates. His second novel, Hold Tight, came out this summer. Chris has lived in New York for 10 years now and enjoys it, crowds, noise and all. Only in the spring do his thoughts turn wistfully toward Virginia . . .

Chris reports that another classmate, Scott Wilcox, also has a book out. British Watercolors was published in conjunction with the show he organized at the British Art Center, which later traveled to the Virginia Museum in 1986. Scott and his wife, Carolyn '73, are the parents of a daughter, Emma.

Well, gang, this is not a lot of news. Let's pick things up now and write to me directly or to the Alumni Gazette office. Put me on your Christmas card list; send me one of those long "Dear Friends" Christmas letters you mail out to your constituency. If you have no new job, new baby, new degree, or new house, rat on your classmates who do. But do write.

Greetings, classmates. Hope you survived the long, hot summer. As usual, we had our share of heat and humidity in the D.C. area and now, as the election approaches at the time of this writing, there is still plenty of hot air around town.

Molly Hoffman is a senior producer at public radio station KUNI in Cedar Falls, Iowa.

Our last item relates to David Syrett, who was recently featured in an article in the Virginian-Pilot. Dave, who is a consulting actuary, has the easiest, most stress-free, least physically demanding, most secure, pleasant, highest paying job there is — at least according to The Jobs Rated Almanac. According to the Almanac, Dave's job is everything that a migrant farm worker's job is not. Dave is a Fellow of the Society of Actuaries and is president of his own consulting firm, Penact Associates, Inc., in the Tidewater area. I happen to be in the same profession as Dave, and I have taken a lot of heat on the home front about why I have to spend so many Nashville was the postmark on the letter I received from Jack Miller. Seems he got his master's in university administration, but has now changed careers to take a job in design and sales. He loves his new work with Duplex Products. Jack invites any W&M alums in the area to look him up and give him a call.

Best wishes to Susan Philipp, who tied the knot with Carter Piche. The newlyweds are currently living in the 'Burg, where Susan is in retail.

And Chris Meily Foreman to the list of newlyweds. She graduated in May with a master's in social work from Chapel Hill, and was married in June to longtime beau David. If you thought everyone in the class of '86 had become engaged or wed, well, you're not all that wrong. Congrats are in order for Mike Lewis, who will marry Shannon Pastorino '87 next June. Also announcing their engagement recently were Mark Whitehurst and Lucinda Schneider. Mark is pursuing his MBA at the University of Richmond, while Lucinda is here in D.C. enjoying her work as a children's librarian.

I saw Alice Bengston of Chicago in Richmond in the summer. She and Chip Brewer have announced their engagement.

Saw a picture of Laurel Strawn in the Pepperdine Law School admissions brochure. How's California treating you?

As for me, well, I'm busy, busy, busy in my job as a legal assistant in the criminal litigation section here at Heron, Burchette in Georgetown, and I LOVE IT! (If any of you are indicted for fraud, perjury, insider trading or the like, do give me a call.) The people here are really nice, and I'm learning a great deal. Once again, I'm gearing up to apply to law school and am currently swimming in applications. Someone please write and give me advice on where to apply.

As always, I so enjoy the mail I get from all of you, so do keep up those correspondence skills. It's a real treat to hear what the W&M gang is up to! Hope those who made it to Homecoming had a blast. It was such fun (as always) to see everyone and catch up on the latest gossip. Now, however, it's time to get back to those applications, so until next issue, take care, be good and enjoy the winter months. And don't forget to keep those letters coming. (Please note my change of address.)

CORRECTION

A line on the vignette by Ed Grimsley '51 in the feature on the Saint Helena Extension of William and Mary in the October issue of the Alumni Gazette was inadvertently omitted. The last sentence should have read, "I have constructed my own monument to that unique institution in my memory." The Gazette regrets the omission.
