Medallion Recipients: Commitment Through Action

By Virginia Collins '77

In describing one of this year's Alumni Medallion recipients, longtime friend James Brinkley '59 recalls a favorite saying: "I can't hear what you're saying because I see what you're doing." He mentions this to illustrate the positive example that William A. Armbruster '57 consistently sets through his actions.

The same thought applies equally well to R. Bradshaw Pulley '39 and L. Eldon James '34, who along with Armbruster will be honored at this year's Homecoming as recipients of the highest award given by the Society of the Alumni. The Alumni Medallion presentations will take place at the Society's Annual Dinner on Friday, Nov. 3.

A 26-year veteran of the Navy, Armbruster retired as a captain in 1984 with a distinguished record that included two Legion of Merit awards and a Bronze Star with Combat V for command of a unit in Vietnam. During his military service, he earned a master's degree in international affairs from George Washington University in Washington, D.C.

Following his retirement, Armbruster and wife Betty '58, who, he affectionately says, is one of the best things William and Mary did for him, moved to Blackstone, Va. There they operated a successful restaurant, Armbrusters at Blackstone, and simultaneously became leading lights in the revitalization of this small town south of Richmond.

As founder and chairman of Blackstone Renaissance, a purely volunteer organization, Armbruster attracted new industry to the area and led a successful fund-raising effort supporting the project.

The Armbrusters have now sold the restaurant—the new owners have retained the name due to its well-established reputation—and moved to nearby Emporia where he has taken on even greater challenges.

As the first director of economic revitalization for Emporia, one of 15 Virginia cities selected to be part of the Main Street revitalization program, Armbruster hopes to create a success story similar to Blackstone's.

Despite frequent moves during his military career, the Armbrusters always sought ways to stay in touch with William and Mary.

In Baltimore, where he and Jim Brinkley became friends, the two founded and served terms as president of the Baltimore/Annapolis chapter, which continues to be one of the Society's largest and most active chapters. Later, Armbruster founded the Southside Virginia chapter and continues to serve on the board of directors.

Armbruster's ties to the College became even stronger in the early '80s when he was elected to the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni. Elected to two terms and asked to fill an unexpired one, Armbruster's service spans most of this decade. He served as president in 1986, leading the Society during a pivotal period when its mission was being redefined and strengthened.

Armbruster has been active in other ways at the College, including membership in the Order of the White Jacket (waiting tables at King's Arms Tavern spurred his interest in someday owning a restaurant), the Athletic Educational Foundation and service as a class agent. One of the Armbrusters' three children, Rod, graduated from William and Mary in 1981.

"Bill's passion for his alma mater is matched by his determination to always do the right thing," says Brinkley. "He has no hidden agendas. He is a man of vision with a dedication to excellence in whatever he undertakes."

Friends say similar things about R. Bradshaw Pulley of Virginia Beach. Pulley's track record as a successful businessman, civic leader and alumni leader is difficult to summarize in a few words.

Associated with Equitable Financial Services as an agent for most of his career, Pulley has received numerous corporate awards, including memberships in Equitable's National Leaders Corps and Hall of Fame. He continues to put in a full work week, although many of those hours are devoted civic affairs.

Pulley needs no introduction in the Virginia Beach area where virtually every major organization—from the Chamber of Commerce and Rotary Club to the hospital and symphony—has benefited from his leadership, support and well-known talent for raising funds.

"He has always been very giving of his time and resources," says son Lawrence, who teaches in the business school at William and Mary and is an alumnus, as are his brother and sister. "He always set a good example for the three of us through his integrity, honesty, leadership abilities and commitment to whatever he was doing."

One of Pulley's latest goals is to establish a permanent home for the area Boys and Girls Club, which provides supervised programs for children ages 10 and under. Many believe it's a formidable project, but Pulley remains optimistic about its outcome.

"I always take on things that don't seem possible," he says. "I just don't listen to the negatives. I've always been an optimistic person."

What brings the widest smile to Pulley's face is talking about "the best class William and Mary ever produced." A 1939 Phi Beta Kappa graduate and recipient of the James Frederick Carr Memorial Cup, Pulley has been a leader among his peers for a long time.

Twenty years ago when the class celebrated its 30th reunion, Pulley suggested annual reunions at Homecoming. That tradition continues today, reflecting the closeness and loyalty that classmates feel toward each other and the College.

Members of this youthfully spirited class won the hearts of many when they returned to campus this spring for their 50th reunion celebration. Led by Pulley, who served as chairman of the reunion committee, the class presented the largest-ever 50th reunion gift to the College. With less than 300 members, the class raised more than $305,000 to endow the first Visiting Artist-in-Residence program at the College.

Pulley has also served the College as a member of the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni and former trustee of the Athletic Educational Foundation. A member of the Order of the White Jacket, he has been nominated this year for a position on OWJ's board of directors.

Classmate Jeanne Kinnamon describes Pulley as "absolutely tireless" in his dedication to their class and the College. "He has demonstrated inspiring leadership, always in control and always the gentleman."

Pulley reiterates his pride in the Class of 1939: "The Alumni Medallion is not just for me. It's a recognition of what our class has done."

Also a strong civic leader, Eldon James has held important posts not only in his community of Hampton, Va., but also nationally, as commander of the American Legion in the mid-'60s. Representing nearly 3 million American veterans, James led the American Legion during the early days of the difficult Vietnam war period.

He traveled to 50 states and 17 foreign countries, including Vietnam, and often consulted with President Johnson and other national leaders. Several years later he toured Israel and met personally with Prime Minister Golda Meir and Foreign Minister Abba Eban.

After graduating from William and Mary, James continued his education by earning a law degree from George Washington University in 1937. He worked for the federal government in Washington, D.C., and served in the U.S. Naval Reserve before returning to Hampton in 1950. Since then he has been senior partner in the law firm of James, Richardson Andrews & Griffin.

In 1971, he became a founder of First Peninsula Bank and Trust Co., which later became First American Bank of Virginia.

L. Eldon James '34

He served as chairman of the board from 1972 until 1982.

After serving as national commander of the American Legion, he continued to be active in veterans affairs as well as other civic causes. Among other positions, he served as president of the Hampton Lions Club, president of the Hampton Bar Association, chairman of the Hampton Democratic Committee and trustee for the National Cystic Fibrosis Research Foundation.

A number of organizations have presented him with awards, including the American Legion's Distinguished Service Award, the Distinguished Citizen Award from the city of Hampton and the Alumni Achievement Award from George Washington University.

James' association with William and Mary began in 1896 when his father, Leonard W. James, was a student at the College. Included among 12 of his alumni relatives are two uncles, a brother, two daughters and a granddaughter.

Among his memories as a student, James fondly recalls the cold winter mornings spent before classes grubbing stumps to help clear the way for what we now enjoy as the Sunken Garden.

Ernest Goodrich '35, a former rector of the College and lifelong friend of James, recalls an incident from the late '30s demonstrating James' deep commitment to the College.

"Due to economic reasons, the Virginia legislature wanted to close the law school at William and Mary. Of all the law schools in the state, they felt William and Mary's was the weakest. El did some work behind the scenes and fortunately rescued the program, ensuring the success the school enjoys today."

James served on the committee to plan the 50th reunion of his class and has continued to be involved in the class gift program, which includes donations of books to Swem Library.

Classmate Emil Johnson, who serves as chairman of that committee, holds James in high regard. "In particular, I've always been impressed by the balance he has achieved in his life between his professional work, community activities, College activities and church involvement."

Indeed, actions do speak louder than words and this year's recipients of the Alumni Medallion readily prove the point.

A THOUSAND POINTS OF LIGHT; FIRST REVISED EDITION

By Barry Adams

As of late, politicians have been proposing legislation that provides incentives for public service — a new twist in the recruitment of volunteers. The reasons behind this surge extend beyond the desire to establish a propinquity to the bandwagon. Most legislators are honestly concerned that the new generations of Americans may not be as active in the thousands of organizations that survive on volunteer commitment — a troubling vision when one reviews the many accomplishments of volunteers in the United States.

In a recent article in Association Management Alan Beals, executive director of the National League of Cities, stated that "government officials will make volunteer coordination a priority because important values are at stake. ... We must teach the concept of giving something back. But we've become too fragmented. There are pressures which pull people away."

Changing demographics certainly play a part. Volunteer resources are becoming more difficult to identify and cultivate. Today, many variables influence potential volunteers. Career expectations, modern lifestyles, new family commitments and competition among the thousands of groups seeking support are among the most readily apparent modifiers of volunteerism.

The legislation being proposed doesn't address the needs as perceived by the volunteers as much as the incentives perceived by our lawmakers. Proposals range from a controversial Nunn/McCurdy proposal (S. 3, H.R. 660), which would make public service a requirement for federal student aid, to President Bush's Youth Entering Services, which hopes to attract more volunteers by focusing on a national call to action and waving civic obligation as the motivational tool. Honorable intentions and certainly appropriate when considering solutions.

Alumni associations, like the Society of the Alumni, applaud the encouragement. Many (if not most) of our alumni volunteers also have been highly committed to community and public service organizations. But even alumni, who normally arrive on the scene with a predisposition toward the value of supporting alma mater, already are being affected by changes in expectations and availability. In response, many of the strategic plans now being developed by alumni associations react to emerging new profiles of our graduates.

There is also a need to address issues which may impact on the attractiveness of voluntary alumni leadership. These include:

1. The change in the student base will result in a shifting of the profile to a younger, more professionally, culturally, ethnically and racially diverse alumni population. Statistics already reveal that a majority of William and Mary alumni have graduated since 1972.

2. Although a majority of alumni will continue to live in the Commonwealth of Virginia, the percentage of alumni living out of state will increase significantly.

3. Alumni will demand fewer social and more "value added" programs — such as the funding of local scholarships, involvement in legislative relations, advocacy of the College in communities, and the sponsorship of educational programs.

4. There will be fewer examples of alumni who are committed to long-term volunteer participation. Project-based volunteering will become commonly accepted by alumni associations.

5. There will be many new non-profit organizations that emerge in the 1990s — increasing the competition for volunteers and adding weight to the need for highly professional volunteer management.

6. Nearly two-thirds of all women will be in the labor force. (According to a Gallup Poll women working outside the home volunteer more often but normally can give fewer hours.)

7. Although the alumni data base is shifting to a younger profile, more alumni will elect to retire early. With lengthened (and healthier) lifestyles they will provide an enlarged pool of potential alumni volunteers rich in talent and time but demanding challenging volunteer assignments.

8. With a tendency for the new labor force to work flexible hours alumni associations will need to develop flexibility in programs and services.

9. Professional couples will seek opportunities to spend their volunteer hours together. This means alumni associations should strive to present these opportunities. Family volunteering opportunities may become components of alumni organizations.

10. Volunteers will have a greater need for orientation, training and development. Management of volunteer activities will be increasingly demanding and complex.

A revised edition of volunteer service. With understanding and preparation, however, the new corps of volunteers will have more opportunities and obtain more satisfaction from their commitments than ever before.

Alumni Board Proposes Revised Set of Bylaws

The Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni held its semiannual meeting Sept. 7-8 in Williamsburg. Among items of business discussed were the proposed revision of the Society's bylaws and the publication of a comprehensive alumni directory in 1992.

The new set of bylaws includes primarily legal and stylistic changes, representing the first proposed revision to the bylaws in six years. The complete revision is published on the final two pages of this issue of the Alumni Gazette. Alumni will vote on the bylaws at the Annual Meeting of the Society of the Alumni on Friday, Nov. 3, at 5:45 p.m. in the Williamsburg Lodge Auditorium.

The revision process began more than a year ago with discussion by the full board at the September 1988 meeting. Marshall Acuff, president of the Society of the Alumni, subsequently appointed a bylaws committee under the leadership of co-chairmen Ann-Meade Baskerville Simpson '65 and Jerry Van Voorhis '63. Serving with them were Joseph Ellis '65, Edward Grimsley '51, Anne Nenzel Lambert '35 and Harriet L. Stanley '72.

As part of the process, the committee was assisted over the months by Lacey Compton '62, '65 B.C.L. of Compton and Duling in Woodbridge, Va. Compton serves as legal counsel for the Society, is a trustee of the College's Endowment Association and a member of the Law School Foundation Board.

The committee also consulted a number of other alumni associations, such as those at Duke, Michigan, Stanford and Princeton, in order to draw comparisons and ensure institutional standards. In addition, the National Association of Governing Boards was consulted extensively along with the Council for Advancement and Support of Education.

"A number of alumni have devoted many hours to this project," noted Acuff. "It was the intent from the beginning to strengthen the Society's bylaws, both from a legal and stylistic standpoint. The final revision accomplishes both of these goals and significantly improves the ability of the Society to work effectively and efficiently."

Bylaws committee co-chairman Jerry Van Voorhis expressed similar thoughts: "I am confident that these revised bylaws will be held up as a model for other alumni associations to emulate. Amending our bylaws has been discussed for several years, and the revision has taken into account the needs of alumni and the board, which ultimately must govern the Society."

In other business, the board accepted a proposal presented by Harris Publishing Co. Inc. of White Plains, N.Y., to produce a comprehensive directory of William and Mary's alumni body. Publication of the directory will coincide with the Society's 150th anniversary in 1992. The directory will consist of five sections, including background information on the College and listings of alumni by name, class year, location and occupation. Both hardbound and softbound versions will be available.

Several new policies were adopted by the board, including one that alters the schedule for the selection of Alumni Medallion recipients. Beginning with the next board meeting, the board will make selections in February, allowing more lead time prior to recipients being honored at Homecoming. With the exception of this year, alumni will be asked to submit nominations no later than Oct. 1 each year.

The board discussed and clarified several other policies, including the selection of the Homecoming grand marshal, the admission of students and the Society's support for children and relatives of alumni, the use of the Society's endowment fund, the use of earned interest, and guidelines for access and privacy relating to Society information and alumni records.

A resolution was passed by the board recognizing the contributions of Elizabeth W. "Tish" Paschall '64, former director of annual support. Ms. Paschall, who also served at one time as director of alumni chapters, recently left the College to become director of the Women's Resource Center in Richmond.

Among special events the board attended were a tour of the College's new recreational sports center and a luncheon at the Williamsburg Winery. Winery President Patrick Duffeler led a tour of his facility and brought board members up to date on the production of Sir Christopher Wren White, an exclusive offering being prepared for the Society of the Alumni. The Williamsburg Winery recently made news when its 1988 Chardonnay won this year's Governor's Cup as the best wine produced in Virginia.

The next meeting of the Society's Board of Directors is scheduled for Friday, Feb. 2, in Williamsburg.

Members of the alumni board were joined by campus leaders and members of the administration at a reception in the new Reves Center for International Studies on Sept. 7. From left to right are Marshall Acuff, Society president; Sam Sadler, vice president for student affairs; Elizabeth Forrester, Honor Council chair; and Lisa Stewart, senior class president.

Scammon!

In the Limelight Again

In November, Howard Scammon '34, director emeritus of the William and Mary Theatre, will take center stage as grand marshal of William and Mary's Homecoming Parade. He'll also be "roasted" by returning theatre alumni at a gala buffet held Homecoming weekend at Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

By Lisa Heuvel '74

In the cast of thousands who make up William and Mary's history, there have always been standouts.

One of them is known simply as "Howard" to his students, friends and colleagues. To everyone else, he's Howard M. Scammon Jr., professor emeritus of theatre and speech.

In November, he will take center stage as grand marshal of William and Mary's Homecoming Parade. He'll also be "roasted" by returning theatre alumni at a gala buffet held Homecoming weekend at Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

With assistance from the Office of Development, the event's coordinators are aiming to raise funds for the Althea Hunt — Howard Scammon Chair of Theatre and Speech.

This new professorship also honors the late Althea Hunt by Scammon's request. On the English department faculty, she initiated a play production course in 1926. Over the next 30 years of teaching and directing, she made educational theatre a hallmark of excellence at the College.

Howard Scammon first met Althea Hunt as a freshman in 1929. A native of Gloucester, Mass., he became familiar with the College after his family moved to Newport News and his older brother, Charles '30, was admitted to William and Mary. Their sister, Sarah '36, also continued the family tradition.

Walking by Phi Beta Kappa Hall one day (the original building, which burned down in 1954), Scammon heard laughter. Going inside, he saw a stage, an audience and a play going on. That was the beginning.

Later, due to graduate in 1933, Scammon had to heed Dr. J.A.C. Chandler's dictum that "if you can't pay your bills, you don't graduate." Times were hard, and so he worked, earned the money, paid the bills and continued his studies in English and education. Graduation came in 1934, making him the happy member of two classes.

Thanks to the G.I. Bill of Rights, he attended Northwestern University from 1946 to 1948, earning a master's degree in theatre. It was a glamorous time: Cloris Leachman, Paul Lynde and Charlotte Rae were there. Patricia Neal and Charlton Heston had just graduated.

By invitation of Miss Hunt, he returned to William and Mary in 1948 as a faculty member and associate director of William and Mary Theatre.

In addition to teaching and directing William and Mary Theatre until his retirement in 1976, Scammon has directed plays for the Williamsburg Players and Christopher Newport College. From 1949 until 1976, he directed 18th century plays for the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, also directing an off-Broadway 18th century show. He directed Paul Green's "The Founders" and is widely remembered as director of Green's "The Common Glory," another outdoor drama which was produced each summer from 1951 until 1976 in Williamsburg.

Although enjoying his retirement, Scammon was persuaded two years ago to return to part-time teaching. He vows that this academic year will be his last teaching assignment. What does the future hold in store? More directing, traveling and "doing whatever I want to do."

In September, Scammon took time to share his views on theatre, teaching and William and Mary with the Alumni Gazette.

Q. What is the most over-rated part of getting an academic education in theatre? Is there one?

A. Yes, I think the students want to take all of the courses in the theatre department and that's the mistake. Why don't they take anthropology? Why don't they take economics? history? psychology? An actor can make use of everything. What's the purpose of a liberal arts education? Okay, students can get a degree in theatre, but they're just at the threshold. They should go to graduate school and take one, two or three years concentrating on their theatre specialty — design, acting, directing, technical work.

Q. Do you think it takes a professor or instructor to guide students in seeing potential they may not give themselves credit for?

A. Yes. It always seemed to me that that was a challenge I would take on. For a long time, when I was directing, I would look at some of the freshmen coming in to audition and say, "Okay, I'll give you a part, but remember I want you for four years." And I would make the rehearsal schedule so they could rehearse and then go to the dorm or library and study. After the freshman year — "You'll get a bigger part; spend more time on it — but, don't forget to do your class work."

Q. What is the difference between teaching a class in theatre and directing a production in terms of the energy you have to put out?

A. I think as far as teaching goes, there's an intensity there. You hope that you're explaining things in a way that people understand and that you're putting across the point. I get just as much of a kick out of going to class and seeing people develop there as I do out of a theatre production.

With theatre people, once you work in a play you get to know them. They knew me, and they knew that if I yelled at them, it was because I was angry at myself for not being able to get them to understand what I wanted from them. I wanted them to do better. I don't think I ever yelled at a student in a classroom. (I might be wrong.)

Q. Why did you choose the plays you did?

A. Plays were chosen that offered a challenge to the students. That was established by Althea Hunt; she would select a certain number of plays and she, Roger Sherman, Al Haak and I would discuss them. When all aspects of production had been debated, a decision was made and the plays announced.

The general idea was to give these students (and audiences) for four years an experience in various plays. Of course, you're going to get a new group every year, but nevertheless, it was always thinking in terms of the students, their own development and the challenges that could be given to them during their college years. That was the basis for the selection of plays.

For many years the first production for the academic year would be a play with a large cast. This would allow the staff to use a lot of people, including freshmen who were interested in theatre.

I remember Althea coming up to me after a performance, commenting on one of the actors (who shall remain nameless). She asked, "Where did you get that iceberg?"

She was right!

Perhaps this wasn't the greatest cast but unless you give the newer students an opportunity to perform, the educational value of the theatre is for naught. A college theatre cannot be made up of only the seniors, you have to start working with the freshmen.

Q. If you'd gone into another field, what would it have been?

A. It might well have been music.

Q. Did you ever have a feeling that because you had put so much out to students all of your life that there was a time when you had to pull back and recoup a little? Did you ever have to recharge your batteries?

A. I charge them quite frequently right now, but at that time, I think the greatest satisfaction was in seeing a person develop.

Q. It seems that there's a lot to be said for putting the student first.

A. That's the only way I have ever operated. Why do I teach?

Q. What has kept you from taking yourself too seriously?

A. I don't know — I think perhaps it's my warped sense of humor.

Q. If you could give any advice to theatre teachers starting out, what would it be?

A. Don't be afraid to be yourself and to express your emotions. Tell your students not to be afraid to be themselves, either. As I've been quoted as saying, "Just go out there and do it."

Q. What made you write The William and Mary Theatre: Fifty Years?

A. I could see that Althea had done a 30-year chronicle, and the 50th anniversary was coming up. I didn't think I would be around for the 75th, and I didn't think anyone else in the department was going to be around for the 100th. I wanted, through production, pictures, theatre at the College, to acknowledge the contribution made by each individual who had established and maintained the high reputation of the William and Mary theatre.

One thing I regret, I should have, as each new faculty member came into the theatre department, sat down and talked with him about the history and purpose of The William and Mary Theatre. I wrote about that in the last pages of Fifty Years. Unfortunately, people just look at the pictures; maybe they might read the last section I hope.

Q. If you could say one thing about the history of The William and Mary Theatre, what would it be?

A. That it was all for love.

Scammon is widely remembered as director of Paul Green's "The Common Glory," an outdoor drama which was produced each summer from 1951 until 1976 in Williamsburg.

Don't be afraid to be yourself and to express your emotions. Tell your students not to be afraid to be themselves, either. As I've been quoted as saying, "Just go out there and do it."

Former Duke Dean Guides William and Mary Admissions

By S. Dean Olson

Jean Scott

The entering freshman class this fall bears Scott out. Described as a "very special class" by President Verkuil because members will graduate during William and Mary's 300th anniversary year, 1993, the class's mean Scholastic Aptitude Test scores are 1,250, 340 points higher than the national average and the highest in the university's history.

Jean A. Scott, William and Mary's new dean of admission, graduated Phi Beta Kappa from the University of Richmond and went on to receive her master's and Ph.D. degrees from Harvard University. Specializing in 17th century British history, she wrote a 715-page dissertation on the British government's censorship of the press and its attempt to propagandize society. She then joined the faculty as an assistant professor of history at Duke University where she taught for six years.

So, what's a nice scholar like Ms. Scott doing in the field like admissions?

"I love to teach," says Scott, who succeeded Gary Ripple as dean on July 1, "but I frankly was not as interested in spending my life in research as I needed to be."

Scott began her career in admissions at Duke nine years ago. As a faculty member of the admissions and financial aid committee, she had some knowledge of admissions and decided to apply when the position of director of admission became vacant in 1980. Since one goal of the university was to decrease friction between the faculty and the admissions office, Scott, as a faculty member, won out over some more experienced candidates in the field.

Over the next five years, Scott not only achieved the goal of improving communication with the faculty but saw both the number and quality of applications increase. She brought additional faculty onto the admission committee and used more faculty to travel and recruit students. "We tried to be sure the lines of information were open and remove what the faculty saw as irritants," she says. In the process, the improvement in the applicant pool occurred, bringing to Duke the kind of students faculty had indicated they wanted.

After an administration change, Scott in 1985 left Duke to become dean of admission at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland where she found an entirely different kind of challenge. The day she arrived, the president published a proposal to merge the two undergraduate colleges which composed the university—Western Reserve College and Case Institute of Technology—and battle lines were drawn at a school where the image of the university was not clearly defined.

"This led to a year and one-half long political battle," she says. "It meant a lot of hostility on a campus for a school that was already having a problem generating an applicant pool. It meant that the university really didn't know what it was or what kind of image it wanted to project. Consequently, it was very difficult to recruit students."

Her three and one-half years at Case Western, however, provided Scott with some valuable experience. She learned a lot about marketing and recruiting, elements that were not key components of her job at Duke, and she refined her approach to politics and administration, developing the capacity for consensus building. In addition, she adds, she became a devoted Browns and Indians fan.

A native Virginian and an acquaintance of Ripple, she jumped at the chance to apply for the opening at William and Mary when Ripple announced he was leaving to become headmaster at University Liggett School in Grosse Point, Mich.

"I felt it would take five years more at Case Western to see the kind of progress we wanted," says Scott, who adds, "William and Mary seemed too special an opportunity to pass up."

In a sense, Scott felt she had come home when she arrived at William and Mary because of its similarity to Duke.

"The applicant pool tends to come to the institution, which is very well known and desirable," she says. "Consequently, you can spend time in recruiting the mix of students you want. At both places, you are not worried about numbers but about quality."

Scott says that during the interview process she found students were happy at William and Mary and liked the university. "It makes it easier to attract other students and makes you feel good about recruiting them to William and Mary," she says. In addition, she says that there is a broad sense of cooperation and willingness to help. While not everyone agrees at William and Mary, "people work together toward mutual goals."

The entering freshman class this fall bears Scott out. Described as a "very special class" by President Verkuil because members will graduate during William and Mary's 300th anniversary year, 1993, the class's mean Scholastic Aptitude Test scores are 1250, 340 points higher than the national average and the highest in the university's history. Of the 1,264 entering freshmen, 75 percent were in the top 10 percent of their class. A total of 113 students, or about 10 percent, were valedictorians or salutatorians. Eighty-four freshmen have been designated Presidential Scholars, with SAT scores of over 1400.

A number of the freshmen also have a strong grounding in the sciences, with a large number of them coming from the Thomas Jefferson High School of Science and Technology in Northern Virginia. Of the school's first graduating class, 64 of the students, or 20 percent of the class, enrolled at William and Mary.

In addition, the class is more racially diverse than past classes, with nearly 16 percent either black, Hispanic or Asian. The 114 black students compose 8.9 percent of the class.

With things going so well, what challenges does Scott find in her new job?

"Coming in when things are going well brings its own pressure," she says. "It would seem to be easier to keep them going well but that's not always true. We had a small decline in numbers last year, and we do not want to see this become a trend. In addition, we want to compete more successfully for the very top students in the applicant pool."

William and Mary's own popularity poses another challenge for the university and for Scott. The university, in fact, was recently named by a USA Today survey as the most selective public college in the nation this year. With more than 9,400 applicants this year, only one in four could be offered admission, and this has led to increased political pressure within the state to admit more students from within the Commonwealth.

With a 67 percent in-state, 33 percent out-of-state ratio, however, Scott feels the College has the right balance. "One of the elements that attracts students is the national and international stature of William and Mary," she says. "If you change the mix, we might lose those out-of-state students completely because they would feel that there is no chance at all of gaining admission. If that happened, the College would cease to be as attractive to the best Virginia students who are now drawn by the fact that this is a state school that has the national stature of the best private schools."

Rupert Named Artist-in-Residence

Tony Award-winning actor Michael Rupert has been named the first visiting professional guest artist at William and Mary in a new program established by members of the class of 1939 in honor of their 50th reunion.

Rupert, who has been designated the Janet Billet Kennedy Class of 1939 Artist in Residence by the Board of Visitors, is directing and performing in a play titled "Becoming Memories" for the William and Mary Theatre this fall. The production will replace the previously announced "A Lie of the Mind," scheduled Nov. 16-19.

While in residence, Rupert will also conduct a performance workshop course for theatre students, be available for individual student conferences, and lead several meetings open to students and members of the community. Rupert will be on campus through Wednesday, Nov. 29.

Members of the class of 1939 have contributed more than $305,000 toward the Visiting Artist-in-Residence Endowment Fund, representing the largest gift of any 50th reunion class in William and Mary's history. The first position has been named in honor of Janet Billet Kennedy of Richmond in accordance with a shared naming of the program among class members who contributed at a leadership level.

As an actor in both dramas and musicals, Rupert has amassed extensive credits on Broadway, in regional theatre, and in over 100 television programs and four movies. He began acting as a youngster, appearing at the Pasadena Playhouse in Jean Kerr's "King of Hearts" with Hugh Marlowe, and in J.M. Barrie's "Peter Pan" with Janet Blair and Vincent Price.

As a teenager, Rupert guest-starred in TV shows such as "Marcus Welby, M.D.," "Hawaii 5-0," "The Waltons," "Gunsmoke" and "Mission: Impossible." At 16, he made his Broadway debut and earned a Tony nomination for his performance in the Gower Champion musical, "The Happy Time," starring Robert Goulet and David Wayne.

Although he went back to Los Angeles to finish high school and enroll at the University of Southern California, Rupert's college career was cut short by an invitation to return to professional theatre at the Mark Taper Forum. While there, he appeared in Leonard Bernstein's "The Mass," and two Brecht one-acts, "The Mahagonny Songplay" and "The Measures Taken."

Rupert then returned to New York in the title role of "Pippin," directed by Bob Fosse and starring Ben Vereen and Betty Buckley. He played the role for two years on Broadway and with the touring company. His performance playing opposite Debbie Allen in the Fosse-directed revival of "Sweet Charity" won him both the 1986 Tony Award and the 1986 Drama Desk Award.

A composer and writer, Rupert and his partner Jerry Colker wrote the 1985 off-Broadway musical, "3 Guys Naked From the Waist Down," the story of the rise and fall of three stand-up comics. The production enjoyed a long New York run and earned a Drama Desk nomination for best score of the year. Last season Rupert composed the score for and starred in the Broadway musical "Mail," which opened in New York after successful engagements in Los Angeles and Washington, D.C.

Rupert is currently writing his first screenplay, "Straight Talk," which will star Bette Midler.

Choir To Continue European Tour Next Summer

By Barbara Ball

The William and Mary choir will undertake a five-and-a-half-week journey next summer, singing its way through France, Switzerland, Germany and England on its fifth European tour.

Under the direction of Frank T. Lendrim, more than 60 singers will leave the day after commencement and return June 20.

Each tour has had its highlights, and this one will be no exception. A visit to Stuttgart, West Germany on May 22, where the choir will be greeted by the Lord Mayor of the city, Manfred Rommel, will be incorporated into the German-American Friendship Week celebration sponsored by the Federation of German-American Clubs. On June 4 the choir will be the guest of Lady Salisbury at her home, Hatfield House, once the residence of the young Queen Elizabeth I. The choir will give an evening concert in the Marble Hall of the House for the benefit of the Museum of Garden History in London and a concert at the Museum of Garden History at St. Mary-at-Lambeth on the banks of the Thames river.

For the first time, the choir will visit the Royal Naval College in Greenwich outside London. Students will get a tour of the college and will close out their day with an evening concert in the chapel there.

Because of the College's many ties with the Netherlands, the choir will visit Holland and tour the Palace at Het Loo.

A weekend visit in Geneva, a return visit to the charming Germany city of Detmold, an outdoor concert at Stourhead Gardens and Leeds castle will also be part of the tour.

The choir has made friends on each visit and has been invited back for encore concerts. Even though an invitation to Westminster Abbey is getting hard to come by, the choir will give a concert there Sunday afternoon May 27.

Many stops on the tour have been planned by Lendrim to take advantages of the numerous educational opportunities and the many William and Mary and Virginia connections on the choir route.

"With the connections the College has, I feel it is important that students see and sing in a church that Sir Christopher Wren designed," said Lendrim. The Botetourt Singers of the choir will give a noon concert at St. Mary-le-Bow church before departing for the Church of the Holy Sepulchre in London to visit the burial spot of Captain John Smith of Jamestown fame.

While in London the choir will be entertained by the Drapers' Company, an ancient guild which dates back to the Middle Ages and maintains a student exchange with William and Mary.

Students will leave flowers and hold a short commemorative service at the tombs of the College's patrons, King William III and Mary II, in Westminster Abbey.

The hospitality of the residents of the village of Bruton has brought the choir back each tour. Students will give a concert in St. Mary's Church, which has a picture of Bruton Parish Church on Duke of Gloucester Street hanging on the church wall. Lendrim will also take his singers to visit Hampton Court Palace where the College charter was signed in 1693.

He has arranged for each choir group to visit the offices of the Royal College of Heraldry to see the original copy of the College coat-of-arms. Each student returns with his or her own special memory. Many choir members keep daily journals detailing their travels. Although the schedule of concerts is vigorous, there is blending into the tour time for relaxation and on-your-own sightseeing.

Each choir member will pay approximately $2,800 for the tour, a bargain by today's travel prices. In many areas students stay in private homes or schools cutting down the cost of lodging. Many meals are also provided. Student work parties are currently packaging up the 100,000 Christmas cards and notecards that the choir has ordered in anticipation of brisk holiday sales.

After a flight to Paris, choir members spend a couple of days in the City of Lights before heading for Switzerland. A week in London includes many performances but also an opportunity to visit museums, theatres or just stroll through this exciting city.

The concert programs for campus concerts this year will form the basis of the tour repertoire so only a few special rehearsals are required before the tour. The choir has two basic programs overseas, one all sacred music and one half sacred and half secular music depending on the occasion.

Tour plans begin a year and a half before the group leaves with a canvass of choir members; are they interested in a tour? There is never any doubt about the outcome. Political candidates would relish such a positive margin. Then there is the first of several letters to parents keeping them apprised of travel plans as they develop. Some students take advantage of being in Europe to extend their stay and travel on their own after the tour.

The incoming and outgoing presidents of the choir serve as spokespersons on tour introducing the choir before or during each concert and explaining briefly what the College of William and Mary is like. Choir members share the burden of keeping track of robes; assignments are made so everyone has a turn.

It is expected that the 1990 tour choir will continue the tradition of singing to fellow passengers enroute across the Atlantic and on the airline back and will again leave a trail of superlatives behind. No choir has yet had a bad review. The compliments students receive on their singing and their role as young American ambassadors have been coming steadily since the first tour in '78.

The choir tours are financed solely by the choir members, and one of the fund-raising projects they undertake is the sale of notecards and Christmas cards (see accompanying order form). They are on sale in the bookstore and will be available at the holiday and spring concerts.

Busch Field, a brand new lighted astroturf mini-stadium designed specifically for soccer, has opened a new era for Tribe soccer.

New Mini-Stadium Boosts Soccer Program

By Bob Jeffrey '74

If any aggregation deserved a home for consistently outstanding play, it's been Albert's booters. For the last 14 years they have racked up winning records, including NCAA berths in 1980, 1983 and 1987. Over 18 seasons, Albert has compiled an enviable 202-88-32 ledger.

There's no place like home. Especially after years of playing second fiddle at Cary Field, or performing in obscurity on Dillard Field. This fall the William and Mary men's soccer team is stepping into the limelight on its own center stage. Busch Field, a brand new lighted astroturf mini-stadium designed specifically for soccer, has opened a new era for Tribe soccer.

"It's been the best thing to happen to our program in a long time," said coach Al Albert '69. "I would go out on a limb and say that it's the best artificial surface field for soccer in the country right now," he said.

Financed with the help of a donation from the Anheuser-Busch Corporation, the mini-stadium complex includes an irrigated grass field next to the artificial turf, fixed seating for 2,700 and a computerized lighting system that has made possible the first night games played on campus since the heyday of old Cary field in the 1920s.

Nominated as one of the nation's top-10 designs in Athletic Business Magazine, the facility has benefited from the latest innovations in astroturf technology. While most astroturf has an unforgiving asphalt base, Busch Field contains a rubber subsurface on top of crushed stone, which produces a softer, more natural feel.

In addition the carpet is not glued or cemented to the surface, but is merely tacked at the edges, allowing the rug itself to move slightly as players run. The resulting "loose lay" design eliminates some of the ankle and knee injuries that can occur when cleats stick in the carpet.

These unique features have made Busch a prototype field in the United States. "Only because of the purchase of Monsanto by a German company, Balsam, was the technology of the rubber pad and the astroturf carpet combined," said Albert. "Previously it had never been done in North America."

The playing surface measures 125 by 75 yards, the maximum size for college soccer and a far cry from the narrower confines of Cary Field. The increased width should suit the Tribe's style of play, according to Albert. "We play a technical game. We need space to work," he said.

The field, being completely flat, also allows for truer bounces of the ball and drains well, an advantage during the often monsoon-line fall weather in Williamsburg.

If any aggregation deserved a home for consistently outstanding play, it's been Albert's booters. For the last 14 years they have racked up winning records, including NCAA berths in 1980, 1983 and 1987. Over 18 seasons, Albert has compiled an enviable 202-88-32 ledger, and his activities on the local scene as director of the Tidewater Soccer Camp, Williamsburg Soccer Club and the Williamsburg Summer Soccer League have contributed greatly to the popularity and growth of the sport in the area.

The Anheuser Busch gift was also a product of Albert's community service. Since 1977 Albert and Tribe women's coach John Daly have cooperated with Busch officials in organizing and presenting the William and Mary-Anheuser-Busch Youth Soccer Tournament, which features many of the nation's finest teams in the under-19, under-16 and under-14 age groups. It was no accident that when the new facility opened its gates for the first time this July, the event was the W&M-Busch Youth Tournament.

This year's edition of W&M soccer has responded well to the new setting. In the Tribe Soccer Classic, a four-team tournament that introduced Busch Field to the College community, W&M rallied from 1-0 deficits on consecutive nights to defeat Davidson and Hartford 2-1. Partisan crowds of 2,057 on Friday and 1,616 on Saturday provided the novel experience of a real home field advantage.

"The crowd was incredible," said senior forward Jason Katner. "In the past whenever we played in front of a crowd that big, they've been rooting against us," he said.

Home attendance over the first half of the season averaged almost 1,000 per game, by far the most in Tribe soccer history. Two hundred season tickets have been sold, also a new high. With more Friday and Saturday night games on the horizon, Busch Field should be the place to go for students and local soccer fans.

After a shaky beginning, W&M has moved out to a 6-4-1 mark and is ranked in the top ten of the Mid-Eastern region. Following road losses at top-twenty ranked Akron (0-1) and Cleveland State (0-1), the Tribe rebounded by blasting Colonial Athletic Association rival Richmond (4-0) and Virginia Tech (4-1), nipping Mount St. Mary's (1-0) and Penn State (1-0) and tying Army (1-1).

The season's most disappointing result was a 3-0 loss to arch-rival Old Dominion. "That really wasn't a 3-0 game," said Albert. "We gave up two goals at the end of the game when everyone was pushing forward trying to tie the score, and we just left ourselves open."

On the other hand, a heartbreaking 1-0 overtime loss to last year's national runner-up Howard had a bracing effect on the players. "If anything, that just proved that we have the tools to play with anybody," said Katner.

Albert has been pleased with the improvement of team's offense. "We don't have what I call a 'goal-getter,' a guy who's a threat to score every game, but we do have four or five guys who are looking to score," Albert said.

Sophomore Jim Hauschild, a midfielder, leads the parade with three goals and four assists, including the game winner against Davidson. Hauschild was named CAA player of the week for his clutch performance in the Met Life Classic in Norfolk.

Maurice Smith, Mike Cummings, Bruce Ensley and Katner have each tallied two goals apiece.

The defensive effort, keyed by senior back Steve Kokulis and senior goalkeeper Larry Valentine, has been typically stingy. Three consecutive whitewashes (Mt. St. Mary's, Richmond, and Penn State) set the tone. "When Army finally scored, that was almost four full games of shutout soccer," Albert said.

The focus for the booters now shifts to the remainder of the CAA schedule with the hope of earning an automatic NCAA bid as league champion. Despite the preponderance of solid teams in the Conference, Albert rates the Tribe's chances as good.

"Navy, George Mason, Madison, and we are all in the top ten in the region. It's really anybody's championship this year," said Albert.

Some players are even more confident. "Right now we've got six conference games left," said sophomore midfielder Dave Viscovich. "If we play well, we can win them all."

If that turns out to be the case, Tribe soccer fans may get to witness their first home NCAA game since 1980s classic national quarterfinal matchup with Alabama A&M. That contest was played in Cary Field. Future games will surely take place on the green, green turf of home.

Call For Hall of Fame Nominations

Nominations are now being accepted for the William and Mary Athletic Hall of Fame. Induction of new members will be in conjunction with the East Carolina basketball game on Feb. 17, 1990. John Randolph, athletic director, has provided the following criteria for membership in the Hall of Fame:

1. It shall be open to persons who have made a significant contribution to the College through intercollegiate athletics as a competitor, coach or administrator.
2. Consideration will also be given to continued contributions to society through community activities, through performance in chosen field of endeavor and through avocations, on such a level as to bring credit and distinction to the College.
3. In order that proper assessment may be made of the nominee, a time period of at least 10 years must have elapsed since graduation for a competitor and at least 5 years for a coach or administrator.
4. No more than 8 persons and no more than one team will be inducted annually.

Alumni who wish to make a nomination should fill out the ballot below and return it to: Athletic Hall of Fame Committee, Box 399, Williamsburg, 23187 no later than Nov. 27, 1989.

All-around Athlete Linda Tait: Another Season, Another Sport

By Marty Benson

"She has the ability to look at any situation and laugh," Megel says. "There is a fine line between being serious and losing perspective. She never crossed that line, and she seems to have that attitude in other sports. She is very dedicated, but she knows when to laugh at herself, and that's an important quality for anyone to have."

She knows field hockey. She knows lacrosse. She knows basketball. If William and Mary started its own line of cross-training shoes, she'd be their pitch-person. She's the Tribe's answer to Bo Jackson: senior Linda Tait.

After playing field hockey and lacrosse during her first two years on campus, the 6-1 native of Danboro, Pa., tackled a task only Bo, or maybe Deion Sanders, might think of — Division I basketball. Another day, another hobby, as Bo would say.

Ironically, basketball, which was merely a passing college fancy, was her first love growing up in suburban Philadelphia. She took to the court for the first time in 5th grade, which was a natural step, considering that even back then she was bigger and stronger than most of the girls her age. The fact that her brother Bob, who would eventually go on to play hoops (and football) for the University of Michigan (he graduated in 1988), had more than a passing interest in the game didn't hurt either.

Field hockey came next, in 7th grade, "just because I was looking for something to do and I thought it would be fun," she says. Hoops and hockey, with a dash of softball, held her interest until her junior year, when she tried lacrosse, a seemingly inevitable move considering two pieces of family tree trivia: one, her mother founded the program at the University of Vermont, and two, her father was a former All-America for the University of Delaware in the sport.

Her family didn't force her to do it, though. Linda played lacrosse for the same reason she does everything else: "I thought it would be fun."

That year at Central Bucks High School, she had so much fun she garnered All-Bux Mont League honorable mention in hockey, basketball and lacrosse, and learned enough lacrosse during the season to be named that team's most improved player.

After her junior year, the idea of coming to William and Mary came about by happenstance. During a drive through Virginia, the family Tait stopped in Williamsburg. Linda, who says she knew nothing about the College before her trip, visited the campus and talked with then-head field hockey coach Jean Stettler. Tait liked what she saw and heard, but Stettler had already used up her scholarship money. Head lacrosse coach Feffie Barnhill heard about Tait through Stettler. From what she saw on a videotape of the aspiring collegiate athlete, she knew her team could use her, and offered Tait a chance, sweetened with a few bucks for tuition.

Bo Jackson has nothing on William and Mary's Linda Tait who excels not only in field hockey but also in lacrosse and basketball for the Tribe.

stance. During a drive through Virginia, the family Tait stopped in Williamsburg. Linda, who says she knew nothing about the College before her trip, visited the campus and talked with then-head field hockey coach Jean Stettler. Tait liked what she saw and heard, but Stettler had already used up her scholarship money. Head lacrosse coach Feffie Barnhill heard about Tait through Stettler. From what she saw on a videotape of the aspiring collegiate athlete, she knew her team could use her, and offered Tait a chance, sweetened with a few bucks for tuition.

"She had played only one year of lacrosse, but I was very impressed with her ability to defend," says Barnhill, who served as assistant coach for the champion United States entry at the World Cup lacrosse games in Australia in early September. "She had limited stickwork, but I knew I could teach her that. What she had was innate defensive talent, which is something you can't teach."

Coming off an outstanding high-school athletic career during which she was captain and MVP of all three sports, led basketball and field hockey to Bux-Mont League championships, and was named to numerous all-star teams in all three sports, Tait was ready to play when she got to Williamsburg.

Though she had come to the school primarily for lacrosse, Linda, like many others, also played field hockey in the fall for the Tribe. Much of her duty on that team, however, consisted of using her voice, which could be the loudest in the South Atlantic states, to scream encouragement to her teammates from the bench, mostly as "Let's go Triiiiiibe."

In lacrosse, however, she played an ever-increasing role. By the third game of her freshman season, a battle with perennial national contender Penn State, Tait was a key. She played the entire second half of what ended as a 9-8 victory for the Tribe in what she still describes as her proudest moment at W&M.

"I played and contributed (to the win), probably something very menial, though," she jokes.

Barnhill says that Tait improved with every game, and had plenty of room to do so.

"She could knock the ball down on the defensive end consistently, but she wasn't to cross midfield," she says. "With the ball (back then), she was a turnover waiting to happen."

As a sophomore, Tait continued to "cheerlead" for the field hockey team and to improve as a key defender on one of the nation's emerging lacrosse powers. Thanks mainly to a stingy defense, the Tribe finished the regular season 11-1 and earned its first NCAA bid. Tait was an imposing force during that year, in games... and in practice.

"The kids on the team started calling her 'the stick from hell,' because she could reach almost any pass and knock it down or intercept it," Barnhill says.

During her junior year, Linda blossomed athletically. She started for the field hockey team as a sweeper, helping lead that team to a 13-7 record. It was during that season that the basketball bug bit her. She says that when she was at Central Bucks East, she always thought she would eventually play college basketball, and time was running out. During her first two years, her academic demands didn't permit it, but as the sociology major developed her college study habits she thought she could handle it. When Barnhill asked her if she had thought about playing basketball that year, all she could say was "Why not?" In other words, it sounded like fun.

Of course, she still needed to clear the small hurdle of making the team, but that turned out to be no problem, since Head Coach Pat

13-year-old Woos Wightman Fans

By Marty Benson

During BASF Wightman Cup's "Royal Tradition" weekend (Sept. 14-16), thousands were wooed by a 13-year-old girl. No, the city jail isn't overflowing with Jerry Lee Lewis types, but chances are anyone who viewed the international tournament, once called the "Most Elegant Competition in Women's Tennis," carried away a special appreciation for Jennifer Capriati.

The teenage wunderkind, though not yet old enough to play professionally (one must be 14 years old), was granted special permission by the USTA to play in the 61st renewal of the competition between the United States and Great Britain.

Having already claimed the U.S. Hard Court Nationals in the 18-and-under group as a 12-year-old and the French, U.S. Open and Wimbledon junior titles, "the next Chris Evert," carried impressive credentials with her into the Colonial Capital. From the moment she strolled into Williamsburg with her 55-year-old former stunt-man father and mentor Stefano until her triumphant exit, it was apparent that the tennis ruling body knew what it was doing. Not only did the 5-6, 125-pound bright-eyed brunette demolish her singles foe, 30-year-old Claire Wood (6-0, 6-0), then combine with the legendary Billie Jean King for an exhibition doubles win (7-6) over Megel's team listed only one six-footer on the roster. She made the team as a backup for starting center Tiffany Stone. Just as in lacrosse, Tait wasn't much of an offensive threat, but Megel wasn't looking for that. Instead, he got what he expected — defensive talent and a positive influence.

Those same two factors combined to make Tait into an outstanding lacrosse player that year, even though she missed much of pre-season practice because of basketball.

"At first, she could only swat the ball down, then as sophomore, she could catch about half of them, as a junior she got a much higher percentage," Barnhill says. "She has now developed her left hand and wants to go down the field and score goals, but I'm not sure we're ready for that."

Tait's talents helped the Tribe laxers to another outstanding season last year, as W&M finished 12-3, winning a second consecutive South Atlantic Conference title and the ECAC tournament. Her development was also noticed outside of William and Mary when she tried out for, and made, the United States Squad, which consists of 50 top players who train for the opportunity to become a member of the U.S. Team, which plays in the World Cup.

"(Being selected) was one of the most dumbfounded feelings of my life," Tait says. "When I came here, I didn't even know what it was, but now there is a goal for the future. It's just amazing that I could represent my country. It's a neat feeling."

As a senior, Tait will play just field hockey and lacrosse. The student-athlete had had her best two academic semesters during her busy junior year, so school wasn't the reason for giving up basketball, but since Megel now had his share of six-footers, Tait didn't figure she would be much help. She now concentrates her athletic talents on her original two collegiate sports, and, of course, having fun, which is her motivation, whatever the sport.

"I've found that I play best when I'm relaxed," says the 1990 lacrosse co-captain. "I love to play — that's why I play. At this level it's hard to find people who just want to have fun, but don't get me wrong, I still love to win."

Everyone loves to win but, it's the way that Linda goes about it that makes her special. Her coaches agree that no one works harder. Then there is that sense of humor...

"She has the ability to look at any situation and laugh," Megel says. "There is a fine line between being serious and losing perspective. She never crossed that line, and she seems to have that attitude in other sports. She is very dedicated, but she knows when to laugh at herself, and that's an important quality for anyone to have."

A more important quality is that of caring about people.

"She is kind of the mother of the team," says head field hockey and assistant lacrosse coach Peel Hawthorne. "She likes to organize and take care of little details. She is the first to pick up if someone on the team is unusually quiet."

Brit legend Virginia Wade and the American Patty Fendick, she also was largely responsible for the second-largest attendance (three-day total over 8,000) since the Cup came to William and Mary Hall in 1983. As impressive as her on-court talents were, it's safe to say that her charisma, accentuated by her toothpaste commercial smile, was even more captivating.

The U.S. swept the five-singles, two-doubles competition for the second straight year and the seventh time in the last 13. The Americans have now won 11 straight Wightman Cups and are 51-10 overall. Clearly, something needs to change.

"It can't survive without a format change," tournament director Millie West says. "This way, it's just too hard to make it successful."

West, as the College's associate athletic director, has good reason for wanting the Cup to continue, as do the other tournament benefactors. The women's athletic program, Riverside Cancer Services, Williamsburg Community Hospital and Central Virginia Food Bank will split proceeds of $140,000 from the tournament, which was run almost entirely by volunteers.

"It's a plum for us to have it," West says. It's important to the College in so many ways. It has been instrumental in the improvement of our tennis programs (the women earned their first NCAA bid last year) and in getting the ITCA to approve having the Hall of Fame for women's college tennis here."

Using a video monitor, Professor Moliterno goes over a point in the new Legal Skills program which requires all students to emerge from the classroom to learn the most difficult lesson of all: how to deal with human clients and the conflicting demands of real practice.

Law School Begins Legal Skills Program

By Elaine Justice '75

Forget "The Paper Chase." Think "L.A. Law." Forget the image of a Professor Kingsfield pontificating brilliantly on a convoluted legal concept, surrounded by eager would-be lawyers, their faces filled with terror and admiration.

Students at the College of William and Mary's Marshall-Wythe School of Law still have plenty of classes, but they no longer spend all their waking hours listening to faculty lectures or turning out voluminous writing and research assignments that satisfy nothing but their course requirements. A new program at the law school requires all students to emerge from the classroom to learn the most difficult lesson of all: how to deal with human clients and the conflicting demands of real practice.

The program, called simply "Legal Skills," represents a kind of curricular revolution in legal education. For their first two years of law school students at Marshall-Wythe must play the role of associates in simulated law firms, learning everything from professional ethics to legal writing in an atmosphere that compels students to "practice" the practice of law.

The students even counsel "clients," who are portrayed mostly by fellow students, faculty, staff and community volunteers. But this role-play is not treated lightly; students must prove themselves in their lawyering roles. Professional competence is expected of every student in the program.

All of the first- and second-year students at Marshall-Wythe are enrolled in the now-required nine-credit Legal Skills program. Many separate courses have been combined to create the rigorous regimen. Students get first-hand training in: professional ethics; the history and structure of the legal profession; legal research, drafting and writing; interviewing; counseling; negotiation; alternative dispute resolution; introduction to trial practice; and introduction to appellate practice.

"At most law schools, these topics are treated in a varied mix of separate and unrelated courses," says James Moliterno, one of the founders of the program. "At William and Mary they are unified in a realistic setting that helps students master essential lawyering skills and ethical concepts."

The program begins in the fall when entering first-year students get an intensive week of instruction on both the study of law and the legal system. Following the introductory week, students plunge into their legal education on two separate but equally important levels: classroom instruction and the Legal Skills program. "These two tracks are designed to provide both academic instruction in skills and ethics and the actual use of those skills in realistic settings that require resolution of tough ethical issues," says Moliterno.

The central organizational unit of the Legal Skills program is the law office. Each first-year student becomes one of a group of approximately 15 associates in an "office" and remains a part of that office for his or her first two years. A faculty member and selected third-year student function as "partners" of the firm and provide guidance to the new associates. To ensure realism, every office is hypothetically located in and uses the law of an actual jurisdiction, currently Virginia, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois or California.

During the program's two-year life, students must perform the whole range of required lawyering skills: interviewing and counseling, negotiating, researching and writing memoranda, drafting documents, opinion letters, or briefs, and arguing cases at trial or on appeal. All of these skills are learned through firsthand experience representing simulated clients.

The simulated cases students handle have been prepared meticulously by faculty members and teaching assistants, and students are expected to take the process from first client meeting to final appeal or settlement. Over the two-year life of the program, students will represent five major clients, each one progressively more challenging and realistic than the last.

"Students begin working with a new 'client' at a logical beginning point. They proceed to work on the client's problem until they can arrive at some sensible resolution of it," says Moliterno. Resolution comes after students either draft a settlement agreement as a result of their negotiation, or finish trying the case and taking the appeal forward as a result of the trial.

"What distinguishes this skills program from what other schools are doing is that instilling ethics is an integral goal," says Moliterno. "Simulations without expressed ethical objectives become mere games. Ours are not, because students are being taught not only to be skillful but to be ethical, to recognize that there are goals other than winning that are important to both lawyers and their clients."

Almost all other law schools have an ethics course, explains Moliterno, who has taught courses titled "professional responsibility" at three other universities. "Usually you have a group of 50 to 150 students and you get out there and lecture them, have a discussion and even carry on a Socratic dialogue. But the way you teach ethics should be very different from the way you teach contracts," he says. "In an ethics course, many of the topics have no clear-cut answers; there aren't any rules to cite in these situations.

"Teaching it the way we do now gives so much more texture to ethical issues discussions," says Moliterno. "Most of our students learn about an ethical issue by seeing it arise and having to do something about it. They learn the ethics of negotiation by negotiating rather than reading about it in a book. They learn the ethics of fees by talking with their clients."

Many legal topics lend themselves to the simulated practice, so students learn many different skills in conjunction with one another. And because the problem materials are comprehensive, students learn the relationship that one skill has to another. "Sometimes students proceed on less than the whole set of facts," says Moliterno. "They discover firsthand how better interview techniques could have helped them resolve a case."

The curricular revolution at Marshall-Wythe began with an off-hand remark at a faculty meeting. Many faculty admitted that they and their students had been dissatisfied for some time with the traditional methods used for teaching research and writing. "For years, 'law school' meant law graduates who were filled to the brim with theoretical ethics and skilled at writing academic papers but all too often unready to deal with human clients and the conflicting demands of real practice," says Prof. Fred I. Lederer. Prof. John Levy suggested they try a new approach, and collaborating with Moliterno and Lederer, a concept was born.

The revolution has not been accomplished without a lot of dedicated effort by the faculty. Twelve of the school's faculty members, many of whom are residential faculty, participate in the program as "senior partners," meaning that they must manage groups of student associates. Faculty in the program tend to log more student contact hours than those in the regular classroom. "It does take an extraordinary amount of time and commitment to students to take this on," says Moliterno.

Second- and third-year students ease the faculty workload as teaching assistants, supervising the students' work and helping develop case materials. Their role as "junior partners" in the firms is essential, says Moliterno, adding, "We couldn't do the program without them."

The new work-style also fosters a different kind of give-and-take between students and faculty. "There is a collegial relationship between the two partners; they handle the supervision and maintenance of the 'firm' as they see fit," Moliterno explains. "The challenge is to make the students' experiences as even as possible without limiting the creativity of the people involved."

Levy suggests that the Legal Skills approach "provides a partial antidote to what is sometimes viewed, despite our general efforts, as a competitive, alienating institutional atmosphere."

Goodbye, Kingsfield. The Legal Skills Program is getting enthusiastic endorsement from students, who say they learn more this way. "I can't imagine learning this quantity of quality material in a regular course setting," said one student in evaluating the program. "Legal Skills will give us the background, confidence and edge needed to do well and get a job after graduation."

A second-year student who clerked in a law office last summer returned this fall saying other law students had asked for more information about the Marshall-Wythe program. "I was able to function in the professional environment with much more confidence than my peers," he said.

Faculty, whether or not they teach Legal Skills, are seeing results of the program, saying it reinforces student performance in traditional academic courses. "I noticed that the general level of analytical sophistication reached a higher level at an earlier point in the year than I've seen previously in 11 years of teaching first-year classes," said Professor Paul LeBel.

Moliterno, while committed to the current program, wants to take skills training beyond the law firm model to other forms of legal practice, including corporate counsel, poverty law, or local, state and federal government. Another dream not yet realized is to extend the program into the third year so that students could deal with real clients.

"We've had other law schools call who've heard about what we're doing here," says Moliterno. "The reaction is amazement and interest in its results. That's what we're hoping the skills program can generate—results."

Anglo-American Legal Exchange Comes to William and Mary

Members of the highest courts in the United States and Great Britain came to William and Mary's Marshall-Wythe School of Law in September for a moot courtroom exchange, an event described as surpassing "what any other law school in the country" is doing this year.

The participants included Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and Anthony Kennedy of the Supreme Court of the United States and Lord Nigel Bridge and Lord Hugh Griffiths of Britain's highest court, the House of Lords, as well as President Paul Verkuil '61 of William and Mary.

Hosted by the Institute for Bill of Rights Law, the Marshall-Wythe session was part of the 1989 Anglo-American Exchange in which leading experts from both countries examined each country's legal system in discussions in the United States and England.

At William and Mary the members of the exchange sat as a 16-member "moot court" to hear oral arguments on a hypothetical case involving a conflict between national security and freedom of speech. The case, which consisted of efforts by the American and British governments to suppress publication of a book written by two former American and British spies, was argued twice, once under American law and once under British law. All of the members of the exchange, both British and American, first sat as the United States Supreme Court and then as the House of Lords.

In the argument for the American government, Rodney Smolla, Cutler Professor of Law at William and Mary and director of the Institute of Bill of Rights Law, acting as Solicitor General of the United States, argued to suppress publication of classified material. Renowned First Amendment attorney Floyd Abrams, a member of the New York law firm of Cahill, Gordon and Reindel, spoke against suppression while hypothetically representing a book publisher, newspaper and the two authors.

During the British arguments, Anthony Davis of the New York office of the London firm Berwin Leighton, acted as attorney general, seeking to suppress publication under the Official Secrets Act. Graham Zellick, Drapers'

Professor and head of the Department of Law at Queen Mary and Westfield College, University of London, argued the opposite side while representing the publishers and authors.

In judging the arguments, the British court, headed by Lord Bridge of Harwich and Lord Griffiths, decided to prohibit publication of the book because of national security. But the U.S. court, headed by O'Connor and Kennedy, allowed publication, noting that evidence did not support the government's own test that the information to be divulged was a "clear and present" threat to national security.

Besides O'Connor, Kennedy and Verkuil, the U.S. delegation included U.S. Court of Appeals Judge Clifford Wallace, U.S. Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit, San Diego, Calif.; Chief Justice Ellen Peters of the Connecticut Supreme Court; M. Bernard Aidinoff of the New York firm of Sullivan and Cromwell; Morris Harrell of the Dallas, Texas, firm of Locke, Purnell, Rain and Harrell; and Phillip Tone of the Chicago law firm of Jenner and Block.

The British delegation included Sir Peter Webster, judge of the High Court of Justices, Queen's Bench Division, London; Sir Gordon Slynn, judge of the Court of Justice of the European Communities, Luxembourg; Michael Hawthorne, registrar, Kingston on Thames County Court; George Staple, solicitor, Clifford Chance, London; Nigel Wilkinson, barrister at law, London, and Thomas Legg, permanent secretary and clerk to the Crown, the Lord Chancellor's Department, London.

The decision in the case was probably less important than what the session meant to William and Mary, according to Smolla, who described it as "a very extraordinary event in the history of the College."

"For this year," said Smolla, "this matches and surpasses what any other law school in the country is doing."

Held at approximately four-year intervals, the Anglo-American Exchange has been going on for 25 years. Earlier this year, an American contingent, including O'Connor, Kennedy and Verkuil, visited England as part of the exchange.

"For this year," said Rodney Smolla, (left) director of the Institute for Bill of Rights Law which hosted the legal exchange, "this matches and surpasses what any other law school in the country is doing."

Atlanta, Here We Come!

By Melissa Gill '82

"Georgia on My Mind" has become the theme song around William and Mary as the College sets its sights on Atlanta for the first of as many as 35 area campaign celebrations to be held between Fall 1989 and Spring 1993 — celebrations which will take The Campaign for the Fourth Century to William and Mary alumni and friends across the country.

Barrett H. Carson '75 MAEd., director of development, says the College looked at prototypes for regional campaigns at other institutions, including the University of Pennsylvania, the University of Virginia, Georgetown University, Williams College and the University of Florida, and devised a program that addresses William and Mary's particular goals and needs.

William and Mary's area campaigns will differ from those at other colleges and universities in several significant respects. "Our objective is broader than raising money," stated Carson. "We want to inform alumni, parents and friends of the plans and programmatic directions of the College as it prepares to enter its fourth century. We want to strengthen alumni chapter programs and enlist the next generation volunteer leadership for William and Mary. We want to create national visibility and momentum for the campaign, and we want to provide a geographic context within which solicitations can be focused."

As the first step in planning the regional campaign programs, areas with high concentrations of William and Mary alumni were identified. The Atlanta area, which has over 600 active alumni, was selected as the inaugural site for the campaigns. "We chose Atlanta for a variety of reasons," explained Lee G. Walsh '75, associate director of development. "One, we have a large number of alumni in the area. Two, many of those alumni are already actively involved with the College. And three, we knew that the weather would be more hospitable in Atlanta in the winter than in more northerly regions."

The weather might seem like a frivolous factor in planning such an event, but it is indicative of the importance placed on every detail to ensure a large turnout for the area campaign activities. Where most college fundraising campaigns concentrate on the few who can afford to give large amounts, William and Mary wants to reach all alumni, parents and friends. This egalitarian approach, as well as William and Mary's plan to conclude its regional efforts with culminating events rather than the usual kick-off celebrations, makes the College's regional campaigns unique.

"Two months after we begin the campaign in Atlanta, we plan to invite everyone throughout Georgia to celebrate what we hope will be the successful conclusion of the effort," says Walsh. "The Atlanta celebration, which will be held in the Atlanta Botanical Gardens on Thursday, Dec. 7, promises to be the largest William and Mary event ever held in the state of Georgia."

Michael D. Alembik '58, B.C.L. '61, has agreed to serve as the chairman of the regional campaign in Atlanta. Alembik is a senior partner in the Atlanta firm of Alembik, Fine, and Callner, P.A. After earning his undergraduate and law degrees from William and Mary, he studied at the University of Exeter in England, and received a Master of Law degree from Harvard University in 1962.

Alembik has served as a fund agent and recruiter for the law school, and participated in the Atlanta National Resources Program.

As chairman for the Atlanta campaign, Alembik will lead the effort to identify and involve volunteer leaders and potential donors in the Atlanta area.

President Paul Verkuil '61 and campaign chairman Mark McCormack '51 will be in attendance at the celebration to discuss campaign plans and progress to date. A special audiovisual production will also be presented. The program will conclude with the announcement of the collective gifts and commitments made by Atlanta area alumni and friends since the beginning of the campaign.

In the meantime, back in Williamsburg, Georgia is truly on everyone's mind as William and Mary looks forward to the campaign in Atlanta.

Andy Lark '79 Heads 1989-90 Annual Fund

By Melissa Gill '82

"Returning to Williamsburg is like a vacation to me," says Andy Lark '79, chairman of the 1989-90 Annual Fund. "One reason that I like working on behalf of William and Mary is that it gives me an excuse to visit the campus." Given the extent of Lark's involvement with the College, he will never lack for reasons to visit.

Lark is based in New York, where he is a partner in the law firm of Lark & Sullivan. He is also a co-trustee of the Frances L. and Edwin L. Cummings Memorial Trust, and is on the Board of Trustees of the Boys' Clubs of America. And Andy Lark is a dedicated volunteer in William and Mary's fund-raising efforts.

He is a Class of 1979 Class Agent, a senior fellow in the President's Council, board chairman of the Friends of the Library, board member of the New York City Chapter of the Society of the Alumni, member of the Development Committee of the Endowment Association, member of the Pre-Campaign Steering Committee, chairman of the Student Advancement Association, a member of the Class of 1979 10th Year Reunion Committee, and a member of the William and Mary New York Auction Weekend Committee. And this year, Lark took on yet another role: Chairman of the William and Mary Annual Fund.

"Soon after graduation, I became involved with the Cummings Trust," said Lark. "Working with the Trust gave me a charitable perspective, and I began to see that I could make a difference at William and Mary." In 1986, the Cummings Fund made a gift of $200,000 to William and Mary, establishing the College's first permanently endowed professorship for distinguished minority teacher-scholars in the arts and sciences. In 1989, the Cummings Trust made an additional gift of $300,000, which will also be used to benefit minorities at the College.

"One of the hallmarks of a great institution is diversity in both the faculty and the student body," says Lark. "Exposure to different perspectives leads to a more well-rounded and therefore complete education. The Cummings grants will help William and Mary achieve this diversity."

As chairman of the Annual Fund, Lark is responsible for assisting in approaching potential donors to the William and Mary Annual Fund. "Like most people, I feel a special link to my undergraduate school," he says. "I had a great time at William and Mary, and I like to think I'm giving a little back to the institution that gave so much to me. And the importance of the Annual Fund to the daily operation of the College cannot be overstated.

The Annual Fund provides funds for current operating expenses at William and Mary. As Lark puts it: "We're raising the money that the College lives by." And the Annual Fund does more than just raise money for William and Mary. Few institutions can flourish without a substantial number of advocates. Such a constituency helps stimulate enrollment, promotes a strong national reputation, and identifies leadership donors. Without a broad base of support, institutions have difficulty convincing major philanthropists and corporate, foundation and political leaders that they are worthy of support. The Annual Fund provides such a base.

"It's very rewarding to be involved with William and Mary at this point in the College's history," says Lark. "It's nationally lauded for academic excellence at the undergraduate level, and it's at a turning point in a move toward becoming an outstanding graduate institution as well. Everyone says that William and Mary is going places. I think they're right."

Andy Lark '79

Highlights of the seminar on Latin America included the keynote address by Diego Asencio (above), former U.S. ambassador to Colombia and a panel discussion (left) by three former U.S. ambassadors: Edwin Corr, former ambassador to Peru, Bolivia and El Salvador; Frank Ortiz, former ambassador to Peru and Argentina; and Robert Sayre, former ambassador to Panama, Brazil and Uruguay. Panel moderator was Meredith L. Strohm, special assistant to Governor Baliles.

Latin Seminar Draws Wide Participation

By Barbara Ball and Ray Betzner

A graduate of the School of Education, Mary Bicouvaris of Hampton and her son Gregg were among those enjoying the opening day of the Latin American Seminar. Named National Teacher of the Year, Mrs. Bicouvaris attended last year's seminar as a volunteer.

"No nation can isolate itself from events elsewhere on the globe. Nor can any one nation dominate all others in the new international economy," said Baliles. "Rather, nations must lead by example and by persuasion."

Latin America, its history, culture, economy and politics came under the scrutiny of an earnest group of Virginia students, teachers and business leaders at the Commonwealth of Virginia Seminar on Latin America this summer.

More than 40 career foreign service officers and Latin American scholars from a number of universities came to campus to speak during the seminar, held July 24 to Aug. 3.

Gov. Gerald L. Baliles, who has made international education and trade one of the hallmarks of his administration, opened the conference on July 24. Baliles praised the effort, and the seminar last year on East Asia. Both were co-sponsored by the Commonwealth and the College.

"No nation can isolate itself from events elsewhere on the globe. Nor can any one nation dominate all others in the new international economy," said Baliles. "Rather, nations must lead by example and by persuasion."

Virginia, noted Baliles, has become an example for other states by choosing to "undertake the educational task of developing our international skills." By helping Virginians to learn more about Latin America, the conference participants will encourage the economic and cultural trade between the two regions, he said.

Hays T. Watkins, chairman and chief executive officer of the CSX Corp. and rector of the College, offered greetings to conference participants on behalf of William and Mary. Noting the dedication earlier this year of the Wendy and Emery Reves Center for International Studies, the rector said that the seminar was another example of how the College was responding to the educational challenges of a global society.

The keynote speaker for the opening day was Diego Asencio, former U.S. ambassador to Brazil and Colombia and author of Our Man Is Inside, based on his experiences as a political hostage in Colombia.

Asencio introduced a theme which ran through the seminar: Most Americans think in East-West terms when it comes to international issues and know little about Latin America and its people.

"We, in a sense, don't have a foreign policy for Latin America," said Asencio citing lack of consistent reasoning and support for the needs of the people in Latin America.

The drug situation was a good example, said Asencio. The war against drugs, much of which is grown in Latin America, is a prime example, he said, noting that the budget for narcotics eradication, interdiction and education is about the same as the budget of the Birmingham, Ala., police department.

At the same time, said Asencio, many people in Latin America have little understanding for those in the United States. "I don't think they know us any better than we understand them," he said.

The drug dilemma came up again during the Washington phase of the seminar, when the group heard a debate of U.S.-Latin American drug policy featuring Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass.; Ethan Nadelmann, professor of politics and public affairs at Princeton University; and Javier Trevino-Cantu, a counselor for drug affairs with the Mexican government.

Kerry told the group that while the United States has declared a "war on drugs" for several years, comparatively little money is being spent on the "war." By contrast, the Mexican government is spending large sums of money and manpower in an eradication program that also encourages farmers to switch to legal crops, said Trevino-Cantu. Meanwhile, Nadelmann encouraged the group to consider a major shift in drug policy: eliminating the "war" effort by legalizing and taxing drugs.

The Latin American financial situation also came under study. Ambassador Robert Sayre said that a decade of growth had been lost in Latin America and said that the debt problems there were costing the United States and Virginia billions in lost markets.

Calling for President Bush to be a leader among equals, Sayre urged increased support by the United States for the Organization of American States. On a number of fronts, including debt strategy, the war against drugs, and environmental issues, the OAS can make a coordinated contribution toward progress, he said. "Put gasoline in the engine," he said in urging financial support of the OAS.

Sayre was a member of an ambassadorial panel on U.S.-Latin American relations which included Edwin Corr, former U.S. Ambassador to Peru, Bolivia and El Salvador and currently Ambassador-in-Residence at the University of Oklahoma; and Frank Ortiz, former U.S. ambassador to Peru and Argentina, now at the U.S. Department of State. Sayre is currently assistant secretary for management at the Organization of American States.

Seminar participants were grouped in teams of three: a student, teacher and business leader, representing 21 school districts across the state. Represented were the county schools of Arlington, Botetourt, Campbell, Chesterfield, Essex, Henrico, Prince Edward, Smyth, Williamsburg-James City and York, and the city schools of Chesapeake, Colonial Heights, Franklin, Hampton, Hopewell, Lynchburg, Norfolk, Petersburg, Richmond and Roanoke.

Participants signed on to a demanding schedule which began at 7 a.m. with language instruction at breakfast. From there, the day-long activities routinely included presentations by educators, government officials, writers, and journalists on everything from the history and geography of the region to discussions of the political stability of various governments. After dinner, participants came back for evening programs and films on the arts, including one session of instruction on Latin American dances.

One highlight of the seminar was a two-day visit to Washington for briefings on Capitol Hill and by desk officers at the State Department. The group also visited the embassies of Mexico, Nicaragua and Brazil, sampled traditional foods from the region and viewed a Caribbean Festival of Arts exhibit at the S. Dillon Ripley Center of the Smithsonian Institution.

Although the pace of the seminar was demanding, there were times for camaraderie and fun. Participants sang in Spanish to Professor Judith Ewell and presented her with a cake at lunch on her birthday, July 26. T-shirts were designed for the seminar. And an unscheduled takeover or "junta" by the participants gave them the chance to jokingly thank those who had organized the sessions.

John M. Nagle, dean of the School of Education, served as seminar director. Judith Ewell, Newton Professor of History; George Grayson, Class of 1938 Professor of Government; and Ronald Wheeler, associate professor of education, coordinated the lecturers and helped participants plan their outreach projects for their home communities.

At the opening session Dean Nagle welcomed Mary Bicouvaris, National Teacher of the Year and a graduate of the School of Education, who attended last year's seminar as a volunteer without school sponsorship.

In closing remarks Dean Nagle paid tribute to the participants and staff. He noted that both seminars had been highly successful. Meredith L. Strohm, special assistant to Gov. Baliles who was moderator for the final session on Thursday, said that news of the conference had been sent far afield. Copies of the seminar program had been handed out to all participants at the recent National Governors' Conference, she said.

Upcoming Chapter Events

The Chicago chapter hosted a reception for current students and incoming freshmen on June 25 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Przypyszny. Front row, from left: Kristen Faust '93, Nancy Bushy '92, Amanda Lenz '93. Back row, from left: Josh Mahoney '93, Roger Tatum '91, Cary Kelly '91, Ed Vesely '93.

Following William and Mary's football game against Princeton on Sept. 23, the New Jersey chapter hosted a reception at the Princeton Hyatt Regency. Chapter officers who coordinated the event are Virginia (Ginny) Ferre '56, treasurer; Kevin Barnes '76, president; and Patricia Giermak Millea '77, secretary.

The Los Angeles chapter, which has been named 1989 Chapter of the year, is one of several chapters that has initiated scholarship awards for current students at the College. During a recent visit to Williamsburg, Peter Bradley '64, vice president of the chapter, presented freshman Robert Penland with a check for $500 to be applied toward the purchase of textbooks. Bradley noted that Penland had been accepted at three top-ranked institutions on the West Coast, but opted for William and Mary.

Alumni Medallion Nominations Invited

Alumni and friends are invited to submit nominations for Alumni Medallion recipients to be honored during Homecoming 1990. In accordance with a new policy, the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni will select medallion winners at its February meeting instead of in September.

Presented annually to as many as five individuals, the Society's highest award recognizes outstanding alumni for exemplary accomplishments in their professional lives, service to the community, state or nation, and loyalty and commitment to the College of William and Mary. The award reflects the honor and credit that recipients bring to the university through their actions and contributions.

Qualified nominees must be members of a class that graduated at least 10 years prior to the awarding.

Information regarding each nominee and supporting statements must be submitted on a nomination form, which is available by writing or calling Alumni Medallion Nominations, Society of the Alumni, P. O. Box 60, Williamsburg, VA 23187, (804) 221-1165.

Please note: Nominations submitted earlier this year for 1989 automatically will be considered for 1990.

Deadline for Nominations: Dec. 1.

Mark your calendar for one of the most exciting events of 1990!

Join us as William and Mary goes to New York City!

Attention Parents . . .

The Student Alumni Liaison Council of the Society of the Alumni is hosting its second annual Student Host Program (SHP) for children of alumni. If your son or daughter is a high school junior or senior interested in attending William and Mary, the SHP is a great opportunity to get an "insider's view" of the College and campus life. Participants in the SHP will spend one day and one night at the College during spring semester, going to classes, taking tours and otherwise experiencing college life with members of the Student Alumni Liaison Council. If you are interested in this program and would like more information, please return the form below.

News of 1927 and all prior years

Now that this letter is scheduled to include news not only of 1927 but also of prior classes, perhaps we shall have a greater variety of information. At least we will if you old grads will resolve to help your reporter with timely contributions.

Dr. Janet Kimbrough, first woman to enroll when the College turned coed in 1918, was destined to make a name for herself in the medical world. As a result many honors have come her way over the 70 years since.

The Williamsburg-James City County Medical Society and its auxiliary paid her special tribute on Doctors' Day last April 4. She was one of the first women to attend the University of Virginia medical school. She spent most of her professional career in civil service medicine.

In Dr. Kimbrough's honor, the Williamsburg-James City Medical Society has planted a pear tree on the grounds of the Williamsburg Community Hospital. Her picture appeared in the Virginia Gazette with those of Dr. Martin Thiel, society president, and Mrs. Gail Taylor, head of the auxiliary.

George Todd '25 of Henrico, U.S. Navy veteran and a retired boat salesman, was the subject of a most interesting interview in the Richmond Times-Dispatch on July 2. The article concerned a cross-country automobile ride Todd and his friend, Tommy Jordan, took in the summer of 1923.

The jaunt from Williamsburg to the University of California at Berkeley in Jordan's brand new (at the start) Model T Ford took 28 days! The reason: there were precious few paved highways 65 years ago. They made it to Richmond in one day!

The longest stretch of paved road was the then-famed two-lane Lincoln Highway from Washington, D.C., to St. Louis, Mo.

Driving over mountains, through swamps, on long roads, they stopped wherever they could find lodging, food or, most important, gas and spare parts.

Their most serious accident occurred in St. Louis when Jordan drove into a telephone pole while trying to avoid a streetcar.

Perhaps the funniest (now) incidents were when they encountered "toll pirates" who dug holes in dirt roads, filled them with water and then charged big money to pull cars out with mules or horses.

The by-then "old" Ford refused to get to the top of the Sierra Nevada mountains, so they turned around and backed their way to the crest.

In California, Todd picked fruit for a living and managed to get back to Virginia by railroad via Mexico, New Orleans and Jacksonville, Fla.

Todd's interview was inspired by the Great American Race of pre-1940 autos from Norfolk to Anaheim, Calif., which took only 12 days on super-highways!

Correction: In the March issue of the Gazette, I proudly stated that R. E. Bruce Stewart set a record when he became the eighth member of the Class of 1927 to receive the Alumni Medallion. Well, it seems I spoke too soon. William H. Gravely Jr. '25 of College Park, Md., a special friend, writes that as long ago as 1978 the Class of '24 set a record of eight and the Class of '25 broke that mark in 1975 when Jim and Dot Campbell ran it to nine.

So, there you have it: don't claim your medals until you check the record. Even a retired editor can learn.

Bill and wife Elizabeth watched their eldest granddaughter, Terri, graduate from Virginia Tech in May and so missed Olde Guard Day. Terri's reward: a three-week trip to Italy.

Hugh Hancock '24 of Richmond proudly shared a photo of three generations of William and Mary graduates. Hugh is shown at grandson Todd Martin's graduation in May. Todd's mother, Sandra Hancock Martin, is a 1962 alumna. His father, David, earned a master's degree in physics in 1963 from the College. The Martins live in Montvale, N.J.

Thomas A. Hart '30 of Seattle, noting my story about Dr. John Garland Pollard in the June Gazette, adds this charming note:

"When he was elected governor, we of the 1930 Class had a pajama party and went over to Dr. Pollard's House to sing and yell: 'Dr. Pollard, you're not old!' He came out, thanked us and added that everyone in his Virginia government-politics class would receive an 'A.' It was a delightful time. He came from King and Queen County, my father's birthplace."

Everyone of my class and associated classes will remember Bill Lawrence, the blind student who played the guitar and was friend to everybody, especially the girls. Tom tells this interesting story about Bill:

"His blindness was no handicap. I tutored him in botany. One time he told me he hated two things: bicycles lying on the ground and trees. He must have run afoul of both. So, I took him to a small tree and had him put his arms around it. He said it was the first good encounter he'd had with a "round" tree—that he thought all trees were flat."

A personal note about Lawrence. As editor of the Flat Hat, I persuaded Bill to write a weekly gossip column, which we titled "Lord Botetourt Says" since his Lordship's statue undoubtedly overheard conversations of all passers-by. Girls especially liked to give tips on some of the dormitory goings-on.

By the way, I think I've persuaded Tom Hart to join the Order of the White Jacket. He surely qualifies.

According to an Alumni House check, 25 members of classes from 1927 and before attended Olde Guard Day. As usual, Ralph James '16 of Hampton led the list.

Faithful Frank Hopkins, a valued correspondent, wrote me a full report of the activities, mentioning names too numerous to repeat here. You doubtless read many of the details in the May Gazette.

Margaret Holman McCoy now resides at the Westminster-Canterbury retirement home in Richmond. I'm sure she would welcome a call from any of you who pass through the capital city.

If and when you see the videotape produced by the College for the Fourth Century Campaign, don't be too surprised to see yours truly in full uniform (OWJ) at Homecoming last year. When the tape was shown at the Roanoke chapter's spring meeting I was startled. Nobody had warned me.

Speaking of Homecoming, I hope to see many of you fellow oldtimers during the weekend of Nov. 2-5. Let's hope we get Homecoming back to October in our lifetime.

Finally, how about some news from you? Don't plead that there is none due to advancing age. Remember what George Burns says: he looks in the obituaries every morning and if his name isn't there, he shaves! (Make that powders for ladies.)

This year — 1989 — makes 60 years since we graduated in 1929. See, I can still count. Thanks to all who came to Olde Guard Day on April 12. They were: Dr. William M. Bickers and Annie, Ernestine Renn Boyce, Margaret Shreeves Bozarth, Mary Bridges, Robert L. Covington, Truly Cralle Hardy and Helen, Elizabeth J.

Hines, Joseph N. James, E. Raymond Lewis, Phyllis Logan Smoot, Gladys Prause Strickler and Harvey, Mrs. Milton C. Tennis and her son, William, William E. Warren and Lois, Agnes Brittingham Willard and her guest, Arthur W. Phelps.

There were 20 in all. Let's do better than that for Homecoming. A special thanks to Billy Bickers for writing such a nice letter inviting everyone to celebrate our 60th anniversary at Olde Guard Day.

31 Dr. Milton Salasky
7342 Milbrook Road
Norfolk, VA 23505

Orrin Levin wrote reminiscing that his "life really had its greatest start at Williamsburg." Medical school, service, a very happy marriage, two fine boys, a satisfying medical experience, and now a very busy retirement following the earlier attempts — once in 1975 and again in 1981 — have all followed his happy years at the College. Orrin feels his cup is full, and reminds us that now is the perfect time to recall and relive "the happenings of so long ago." He still tries to follow events in Williamsburg and is happy to see articles in the Gazette which show that the enthusiasm for serious scholarship that he felt while at the College still pervades the atmosphere there. I hope to see Orrin and catch up at Homecoming.

An endowment has been founded in memory of my late wife, Shirley G. Salasky. The use of the money has not yet been decided, but it will probably fund an annual scholarship for a William and Mary student.

Your class reporter reminds you, two years in advance, that we will celebrate our 60th reunion in 1991. Two years later we will meet again for the triumphant celebration of the College Tercentenary. Mark your calendars!

33 John V. Holberton
10130 Chapel Road
Potomac, MD 20854

Start thinking now about making a big effort to attend our '60th reunion in 1993 when the College will celebrate its 300th anniversary. Ours will be the oldest reunion class and we should have a good chance of significant representation.

Lota Spence and John J. Reid are enjoying retirement at Williamsburg Landing. They recommend it as a great place to be. The College lends support by sending professors to conduct classes and a bus to take members of the community to football games.

Betty Chambers George is spending the summer at their vacation home on the Potomac in Kinsale, Va. She expects to attend the wedding of one of her granddaughters in October.

John Vaughan Holberton attended an Elderhostel program at Emory and Henry College in Emory, Va., in June. Emory and Henry had an interesting program and has an attractive campus.

I was delighted that 40 class members attended the Olde Guard luncheon in April and disappointed that I only talked to 11 of you. Our class really does get around!

John Mapp has been elected president of the Olde Guard Council, Ernest Goodrich has been elected treasurer and Marguerite Stribling Vermilion has been appointed member-at-large. Congratulations!

Here's some information I didn't get in time for the last issue: Polly Cornett Brown and her husband took a Bible course cruise to the Bahamas and claim it is definitely the way to go. They thoroughly enjoyed the music and other entertainment and also had fun visiting Disney's Epcot Center. Their granddaughter, Elizabeth Kim Brown '87 married Greg De Gennaro '85 in June.

Marguerite S. Vermilion had an enjoyable luncheon with Sue Stickel Beagler in Phoenix, Ariz., earlier this year. Marguerite writes that Sue has been traveling the world and the visit was enjoyable.

Leona Yoder Sangster wrote describing her experiences in escorting Mrs. Roosevelt in 1935. There were two other escorts, but neither she nor I can remember who they were. At one time, Leona had the job of conducting tours for people from Middle America to Washington and Williamsburg. She also worked with an economist from the Brookings Institution, and they were providing information to President Roosevelt. When the job was over, the group was invited to a staff reception given by the president. Leona reminded Mrs. Roosevelt of the experience and said the "Indians," not the "Chiefs," in the White House were overwhelmed. Now who were the other two girls who were escorts? If you know, please write me. Thank you, Leona, for your interesting letter.

Be sure to attend the Olde Guard luncheon on Nov. 3 during Homecoming. Come with a list of your activities and I will include your news in the next issue. I hope to see you there.

Many of our classmates attended the Olde Guard Luncheon in April. Among those present were: Marion Rose Abbitt, Thomas (Ted) and Janet Baines, Carol and Elizabeth Hunter Beveridge, Elliott Bloxom, Jane Sunderland Broudy, Dellie and Elizabeth Tate Cotton, Ellen Latane Gouldman, Harold Gouldman, Louise Acree Hall, Connie Land Hardenbergh, Frances Maddrey Healey, Julien and Carolyn Mason, Marguerite McMenamin, Cary and Carolyn Richardson McMurrin, William Savage, Martha Savage, Joe Dudley and Sally Morse Snyder, Anne Reynolds Wood and Bertie Courtney Suger.

James (Jimmy) and Fay Bryant Savedge celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at a lovely party at the Alumni House in June. Classmates sharing in the festivities were Andrew (Andy) and Marion Rose Abbitt, Jewell Grove and her husband, and I.

The Harold Gouldmans proudly announce the birth of a fifth grandson. David Alexander arrived Aug. 21, weighing in at 9 pounds, 2 ounces. He is the son of John and Jane Tyler Gouldman Coates. I am sure many of you remember meeting Jane Tyler at the hospitality suite several years ago.

I talked to Richard (Dick) and Kay Hall recently. Kay (with whom I taught school in 1938) has had a stroke but is recuperating nicely. She is still on a walker but hopes to be free of it by January. Their 5-year-old grandson visited with them the last week in August. They have six grandchildren — two girls and four boys — ranging in age from 1 to 15 years.

The Hospitality Suite at Homecoming will include the classes of 1936, 1937 and 1938. Hope we will have many of you with us. Those planning to attend thus far are: Jane Sunderland Broudy, Ellen Gouldman Latane, Bertie Courtney Zuger, Doris Campbell Desmond and Kitty and George Mason. Until Homecoming — Cheers!

BICKERS MAKE $600,000 GIFT

A gift of $600,000 from Dr. William Bickers '29, former chairman of the obstetrics/gynecology department of American University of Beirut, and Mrs. Bickers will establish the Dr. William and Annie Bickers Professorship in Middle Eastern Studies at William and Mary. During his years in Beirut, Dr. Bickers delivered three children of King Hussein of Jordan and two of the late Anwar Sadat's children. He is the author of two books, a medical textbook and "Harem Surgeon," his autobiography. An appointment to the Bickers Professorship is expected in the fall of 1990. Income from the endowment will qualify for matching funds under the Commonwealth of Virginia's Eminent Scholars Program.

THREE GENERATIONS

What better time to do this post-50-year reunion report than on Bastille Day in honor of our French classmate, Claude Hartog, who very much wanted to attend our big celebration. When he wrote that his wife, Marcelle, was not well enough to take a long trip to the States in May 1989, he asked to be remembered to everyone at the reunion. Claude and I will see each other in Paris in August. Of course, I will take along snapshots and memories of the memorable weekend to share with the Hartogs.

It was a grand occasion which got off to a good start with a festive reception at Jeanne Kinnamon's elegant home on Bayberry Lane (off Jamestown Road). The night turned chilly but we were surrounded by warmth of old friends. We were "carried" by bus to the home of our hostess. From that moment on it was one special event after another, during which we were catered to every moment and "carried" from place to place; royal treatment for this NEW Olde Guard group. Only the best!

Did we dance? Of course, what else! And we looked good. Some partied 'til the "last dog" and showed up for all the next day's activities. Let's face it, we are a sturdy group.

Eighty-one classmates (plus spouses and guests) gathered for the well-planned weekend. Yes, the sun came out for two days of mild, pleasant Williamsburg weather.

After 20-some reunions, the most visible class from the College of William and Mary led the May 1989 commencement procession (and later glowed from the applause received from the College community and guests). Among our firsts is something President Verkuil noted in his address at the luncheon. Did you know that the Class of 1939 was the first selective one at the College (before that time, open admissions was the policy). Another first is our class gift, which now totals more than $305,000, the largest class gift ever.

Some interesting statistics on our class: We had a total of 510 class members. Of that number, 262 of us are considered active (living, with known addresses) and 248 are non-active (dead, addresses unknown or removed from the College's mailing list by request).

Letters are coming in from classmates, all praising the 50th and giving us news. How sweet it is!

Elaine Woody Walker enjoyed the reunion more than she expected (a sentiment probably expressed by others). She said, "The whole affair was beautifully planned and everyone was so nice, it would be hard not to enjoy it." Dot Hosford Smith said that she liked the reunion and would not have changed anything about it. I'm sure that all of us feel much the same way. So much for testimonials (space limitations).

Ed Shifman had promised that he would write about their "upcoming trip (not about grandchildren)," and so he did in June. Marge and he will fly to London in the fall for a pre-cruise five day theatre binge, then fly to Genoa to board the Ocean Princess for a cruise that stops at 12 ports, allowing enough time to go ashore and do some looking around. From Genoa they will cruise through the Mediterranean across the South Atlantic, visiting three continents along the way. Barcelona, Malaga, Lisbon, Madeira, Dakar, Montevideo and Buenos Aires, where they will have four post-cruise days at the Alvear Palace, are included in their itinerary. Bon Voyage, Marge and Ed!

Art Brennison sent a snapshot of me in academic regalia (more comfortable than the heavy gowns of 1939) and said that he and Sally would see us at the 75th reunion of the Olde Guard. Hey, Art, do you think that we should plan for the 55th? He wrote, "Our 50th reunion was absolutely wonderful! It was great re-creating acquaintances after 50 years."

Following their trip to Williamsburg from Pomona, Calif., Herb and Dot Hosford Smith traveled East to see relatives and later took off for Switzerland where they spent three weeks in an idyllic setting. Their chalet was in a small village on the side of a hill, overlooking the town, a high church spire, the lake, a waterfall across the valley and mountains on the far side (picture book material). From their home away from home, they took excursions by rail, bus and steamer, preferring the countryside to the cities. They had it all — from summertime profusion of wild flowers of all colors to a beautiful snowstorm.

Good news from Mary Willis O'Farrell in that she is recuperating nicely from recent quadruple by-pass heart surgery. Her love of reading is a help in her healing period which requires a lot of rest. Mary Willis is settled in a lovely retirement center which offers a number of activities. She would enjoy hearing from classmates. Her address is: Beaufont Towers, 7015 Carnation St. #115, Richmond, VA 23225.

Jim Bailey is having a busy summer in Petersburg, Va., where he works three days a week for the museums division of Petersburg's department of tourism. Several times a day he conducts tours of two attractions, namely the Trapezium House (an architectural oddity) and the Farmers Bank (one of the oldest bank buildings in the U.S., it served as a bank from 1817 to 1865). He enjoys meeting people from all over the world who visit Petersburg.

Before he retired in 1986 Jim was curator of collections at Petersburg Museums. Several months ago as a columnist, Dr. Bailey wrote an interesting article, "Inauguration Brings Back Memories." Space doesn't provide for it, but I would like to quote a paragraph which concluded his account of attending the first inauguration of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1933 (his aunt and he went to Washington by train, complete with old-fashioned dining car): "As to the parade itself, I believe what stands out most in my memory is that Tom Mix, the popular cowboy movie star, happened to stop in front of the section where my aunt and I sat, and causing his horse to rear on its hind legs, waved his hat in the air."

Upon reading a news clipping about our gracious 50th reunion hostess Jeanne Kinnamon's activities, I wonder where she found the time to plan and host the lovely Friday night welcoming party.

Jeanne recently received an award given by Soroptimist International to Women of Distinction. The Williamsburg chapter made the award to Jeanne, who has also won the 1988 National Community Service Award from AARP. Jeanne has received the Martin Luther King Jr. Award and has been lauded by the College of William and Mary for furthering the goals of King. In addition to her generous personal and financial support of the College, as well as being recipient of the Alumni Medallion, our classmate is active in March of Dimes, Child Development Resources, S.P.C.A. (she has a great dog), 20th Century Gallery, American Legion Auxiliary, King's Daughters and Exchangettes. Perhaps one of her proudest achievements is her contribution of 15 gallons of blood to the Red Cross. Congratulations on your most recent award, Jeanne.

Prudence Searle Hultzen has come out of the woodwork with a wonderful account of her activities since 1939 and said that she wishes she could have been with us in May for the big 50. Now I learn that Prue is in Naples, Fla., where I spent some time in February. She and her husband retired there in 1962 and are glad that they made the decision. After two tours of duty in Germany, three at Ft. Belvoir and others in Italy and Okinawa, Florida looked good.

Along the way Prue taught school, winding up her teaching career working with the gifted, which she loved. She's done her bit with Boy Scouts and as a volunteer for various fund raisers, etc. Now she devotes her energies to "spoiling the grandchildren and her husband." The Hultzens have a daughter who's a counselor with the Los Angeles School System and mother of two children. They also have a son who's a neurologist in D.C., who has one son and another child on the way. She noted that her four years at William and Mary were a great part of her life, which has been and is a good one. Thanks, Prue, for a newsy letter.

Attention Jean Warren Stewart: I have not forgotten about your search for the "early" book about the College by Jack Morpurgo. A friend who will be at Oxford in August will look it up in Blackwell's. I'll let you know if she's successful in finding it.

Now, do I go from riches to rags or will this wonderful flow of news continue? More, more! Remember that our class was the first to have a class reporter. We have a reputation to maintain.

Best wishes to all of you for the forthcoming holidays. Please write!

41 John H. Prince 202 W. Cheadle Loop Road Seaford, VA 23696

It is with restrained rapture that I remind you that in two years (count them — two years) we will be joining the OLDE Guard. This was brought abruptly to my attention when I was invited to join a steering committee, I think that's ad hoc, to make plans for 1991.

The more important folks on the committee are Al Chestnut, Ella Dickinson Hurt and Austin Roberts. I am going to make a suggestion. Let's make an all-out effort to be around then. Incidentally, I have concluded that the main requirement for being on the committee is that you live in the neighborhood. I'll do my best to keep you apprised of the progress. Coincidentally, my grandson, Christien Murawski will be graduating with the class of '91. I just spoke with Ella and she advised me that Kay Hoover and Herb Young are probably on the committee, too. Note that Ella's new address is 216 Archer's Mead, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

Ella and George will be observing (not necessarily "celebrating") their 50th wedding anniversary in 1991. How about that? How many of you out there in never-never land were wed in 1941? Any suggestions about how we can celebrate this double anniversary?

Davey Jones wrote that with the acceptance of his granddaughter, Kimberly Ann Lucas, all of their last three generations will have attended W&M. Another granddaughter, Honor Lea Johnson, won the Florida spelling bee for the second year, and came in 33rd in the national contest. I think that's "spelling." It could be "yelling." Davey's script is like mine — beautiful but illegible.

Peggy Ford made a three and a half hour visit to Williamsburg, the first since her graduation. She taught at Auburndale and has retired to her parents' home on Bailey Island, Maine.

Herb and Jane Young went to Spain and Greece. They do get around, don't they?

Austin and Barb Roberts caught the last rickshaw out of Beijing. They were both out of breath.

While Charlotte and I were on the McKinley Explorer, a beautiful vista dome train going to Dinali National Park in Alaska, we met a young lady, Mary Sue Busser '81. Note how smoothly I mentioned our trip. To you West-coasters that's not a big deal, but it is to us who live in the cradle of democracy. Every inch of that trip was wonderful.

It would be so nice to hear from you.

43 Virginia C. Patterson 109 Northpoint Drive Williamsburg, VA 23185

Greetings from the Gentle City. We have had a hot and wet summer here in Williamsburg. This included the 100-year flood. Can you imagine the tunnel on the Colonial Parkway filled with water necessitating the rescue of passengers from two cars caught there? It happened. Visitors got more than they expected in the realm of excitement.

Jean Norris Daniels traveled with her daughter-in-law and two granddaughters through much of Europe this past June. They were happy touring London, Amsterdam, Heidelberg, Venice, Rome, Pisa, Florence, Nice, Monte Carlo, Paris and then returned home from London. That must have been a great trip. Thanks for the card, Jean.

Stay tuned for programs and events coming up celebrating the Tercentenary. Keep in touch.

45 Martha Macklin Smith 3609 Sea Pines Road Virginia Beach, VA 23451

My time as your correspondent is beginning to run down. Only one more year. I will write the report of our 45th reunion. ... That will be my swan song.

I received a very interesting letter from John W. (Bill) Spillane. This is his first correspondence with his alma mater since graduation. Bill started with us, but served in the Army from 1942 to June 1946. He then returned to W&M and went straight through until graduation in January 1948. He married Ruth Sharon McCloskey '46. They had three children. Unfortunately, Sharon died of hepatitis in March 1961. Bill remarried in 1963. His children are: Michael, a programmer in Manhattan; Carol, a lawyer in Ohio, who has two sons, ages 5 and 1; and Barbara, who is also a computer whiz in Philadelphia.

Bill has been involved with recruiting aerospace and aircraft engineers for most of the major manufacturing and defense contractors. He works on a national basis and finds it fascinating. In June, he and his wife went to Europe on a TWA Get-away Tour — six countries in 17 days. (I did that too in '85, Bill. It was wonderful, but I came home totally exhausted.) They will both retire in December of this year and "just have one hell of a good time." He says "hello" to all.

Next, a letter from "ole faithful," Dale Myers. His daughter, Amanda, graduated from Tampa College in May with a degree in art. He is still working on his book. Hopes to have it printed before year's end.

Jack Carter '44 shared the following information on one of our classmates:

Nancy Carnegie Merrill has written Exeter, New Hampshire 1888-1988, a 567-page history of her community, published by the Exeter Historical Society. Also of note, she served as chairman of the building committee that saw the completion of a new $3 million Exeter Public Library. After graduation from W&M, Nancy attended the School of Nursing at Western Reserve University. Later she earned a master's degree in library science from the University of Rhode Island. Presently, she is the new reference librarian for the Exeter Public Library. She also serves as a trustee of the New Hampshire Historical Society.

Jeanne Preston and Page had a marvelous trip to Montana and Wyoming. Page did a lot of fishing. They found the Tetons to be absolutely gorgeous. I agree with that.

Audrey and Buck Thompson made a trip to Alaska. Audrey was at the beach briefly in July. She and Jeanne had a fling in Williamsburg. That's all, folks. No more news.

Carcant Press, Manchester, England, has announced plans to publish early next year Master of None, an autobiography by J.E. Morpurgo '38. Jack Morpurgo was the College's first British graduate since the Revolution and the first British member of the founding chapter of Phi Beta Kappa. His first book, American Excursion, dealt in part with life at the College, but even more information is promised in Master of None. Morpurgo was director of the William and Mary Historical Project and wrote Their Majesties' Royall Colledge: William and Mary in the 17th and 18th Centuries. A recipient of the Alumni Medallion for service and loyalty, he holds an honorary doctorate from William and Mary as well as three from other American colleges. In World War II he served as regimental and staff officer in 26 countries, two major campaigns and three "little wars" and was senior staff officer of the Allied Forces in Piraeus during the Greek Civil War. After the war he was one of the small band of young editors who fostered the post-war success of Penguin Books. He later served as assistant director of Britain's largest foundation, and before returning to the academic world as professor of American studies at the Universities of Geneva and Leeds, he was director general of Britain's central book organization. He has written more than 20 books and was for many years a leading broadcaster. Most recently he has been the prime influence in reviving the works of his friend Margery Allingham, the mystery writer, and it was Morpurgo who arranged to bring them to television both in Britain and the United States.

Livingston, NJ 07039

Henry Rosovsky, now a professor at Harvard, delivered the commencement address this spring at St. Mary's College of Maryland and also received an honorary degree from that college. He joined Harvard in 1965 as a professor of economics and served as the department chairman for three years. He was dean of the faculty of arts and sciences from 1973-1984. He served in 1971 as a consultant to the President's Commission on International Trade and Foreign Investments.

In April Harrison Tyler attended the celebration at Federal Hall in New York marking the 200th anniversary of our nation's first presidential inauguration. As the grandson of President John Tyler, he was invited to the ceremony, along with other descendants of ex-presidents.

Lou Creekmur was inducted into the Virginia Sports Hall of Fame on April 28. After playing football at William and Mary, Lou played in the National Football League for the Detroit Lions for 10 years. During that time, he was on three world championship teams. He now lives in Plantation, Fla.

Diane Stathas Karzas is now president of Bold Ideas Inc. in Chicago, where she is a consultant and specialist in event planning.

Bob Galloway is an attorney and managing partner of a law firm in Greenville, S.C.

Walter Oden is actively involved in the Foster Parents Plan, an international charity organization. He has five foster children in Guatemala, Indonesia and the Philippines.

Lou Hostetter Winder and Gus enjoyed exploring the Chesapeake Bay with the Alumni College this spring.

Ken Scott is a professor of law at Stanford University.

Anne Cook Sager is principal of a public school in Warren County, Va.

Bernard Swann lives in Richmond, where he is president of Progressive Engineering Co., a manufacturing firm.

Jim Macken attended a tennis reunion at the College in the spring.

Woody Wayland is enjoying being general manager of FMC Gold Co. in Hawthorne, Nev., and has no thoughts of retiring yet.

Anderson Smith lives in Williamsburg and is a U.S. magistrate in United States District Court.

Audrey Allein Hoitsma and Lou '48 are planning to move to Williamsburg this fall.

Carol Achenbach Wright and Mel '47, who were recently married in Williamsburg, are settling in to their new home in Kilmarnock, Va., and are looking forward to being closer to College activities.

Jane Uhlendorf Kempzell and Howard are planning to move from their home in New Jersey, where she has been active in community and school activities, to Gloucester, Va.

Nancy Adams Berge has retired from her job as library director of the Westwood, N.J., public library and is living in an old modernized farmhouse in Vermont.

Jim Putnam has also retired and is enjoying his twin grandchildren and his home in sight of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

Since his retirement from administrative duties at the College, Dennis Cogle and wife Jean Harrup Cogle, who is a free-lance conference consultant-assistant, have been spending a lot of their time traveling abroad.

Chet Mackiewicz has retired from his job as teacher and coach in Rockford, Ill., and is now enjoying golf, fishing and travel. Also enjoying his retirement is Roy Shelor, who now has time for golf and working with special groups such as the Shriners.

I hope to see many of you at Homecoming in November for our 40th reunion year.

James W. Baker
510 Spring Trace
Williamsburg, VA 23185

Bob "Bullet" Lawson, a star athlete who earned 12 varsity letters in cross-country and track and field at William and Mary, has announced his retirement from coaching at the Peddie School, a college prep school in Hightstown, N.J.

Bullet, veteran cross-country and track coach at the New Jersey school for 33 years, served as head coach of both boys' and girls' teams over the years. Bullet's track career began while he was serving in the Marine Corps. Following military service, he enrolled at William and Mary where he earned his 12 varsity letters. He received a master's degree from W&M in 1954.

While at Peddie, Bullet founded the nationally known Peddie Relays, now in its 22nd year, ran the first statewide all girls indoor track and field championships, helped organize the first indoor national master's track and field meet held at Peddie in the early 1970s, and served for many years as a track official for Princeton University. While serving as head coach at Peddie, Bullet had over 600 career wins in cross-country and numerous state championship teams.

The former W&M athlete was recently inducted into the first Peddie School sports hall of fame and in 1989 received several awards for outstanding service. Bullet and his wife hope to retire in or near Williamsburg within a year or so.

Ann Giesen Fowlkes, formerly of California, has returned home to Radford, Va., after 35 years of absence. She wrote that she is "very contented to have settled or resettled 'back home' — as a widow — but also as a happy grandmother of four who still enjoys being a part-time realtor."

Stanley J. Garrison, who lives a mile from the ocean at Virginia Beach, retired from a 28-year sales career a few years ago. He stays busy these days swimming in the pool and the ocean, writing letters, eating out, traveling, watching sports on TV, collecting stamps, planting in the spring and playing tennis. The most important thing in his life right now? "Trying to get the most out of each day," he wrote.

Peery "Bitsy" Lewis, who retired as senior vice president of Life Investors Inc. of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, has started a new business, Flexsystems Inc. He serves as president. Bitsy, who lives in Palm City, Fla., is married and has two children. His hobbies are bridge, golf and refinishing antiques. His main activities these days are playing golf and "trying to make my business successful."

Nancy Coyle Davis reports from her home in Mount Laurel, N.J., that her husband Don '49, is retired from Ortho where he was in agricultural research. Nan enjoys doing volunteer work in the township library and she and Don usually manage a trip each year, often out west. They recently traveled to Pennsylvania to visit a buggy museum and a lumber museum.

Paul Carey, who lives in Camp Hill, Pa., has worked for the past 20 years as an attorney for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, holding a number of positions including deputy attorney general and chief counsel to the Departments of State and Public Welfare. His wife, Nancy, a registered nurse, also works for the state. Paul and Nancy have two children and one granddaughter and are interested in golf, hiking and horseback riding. Paul reported that he sees Bernie Nolan from time to time and recently had lunch with Dave Wakefield '52, who was in Harrisonburg on business. Paul plans to retire in a couple of years.

That's the Class of '51 news for this issue. Homecoming is just around the corner. I hope to see many of you there. For those of you who don't make it to Homecoming this year, how about resolving right now to drop me a line at Christmas so I can include an item about you in an upcoming issue of the Alumni Gazette.

Ruth Hasemeyer Young called this summer from Fort Washington, Pa. She has been with Merck, Sharp and Dome for 15 years computerizing research data and traveling extensively for her company and living in Paris, Brussels and the U.S. Ruth has three children, one who graduated from the College, and four grandchildren. She was the Savoy Company's first woman president and was active with the singing group for 20 years; she now is on their alumni board. There still is free time to play in the hand bell choir at Abington Presbyterian Church.

Our fifth child, John, was married Aug. 5 in western Pennsylvania. We welcome Laurie into our fold.

Robert Burns, "To a mouse"

Success depends on planning. But the future is unpredictable. Even the most carefully made plans can be upset by the unexpected.

Insurance was developed to help safeguard an individual's plans for the future and help provide the funds needed to realize their dreams and goals.

Due to the demand expressed by our alumni, The Society of the Alumni of the College of William and Mary sponsors several quality programs of group insurance...especially for our alumni and their families. A number of William and Mary alumni have already responded to this benefit offer. Last year the Society was among leading Alumni Associations such as Duke, Navy, and the University of Michigan in terms of response to our insurance programs.

Group Term Life Insurance can provide protection for you and your family. This program, underwritten by The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York and offered to you through the N.E.A. Trust, a select group of Alumni Associations founded in 1972, enables you to apply for valuable coverage at economical group rates.

If you need Life Insurance, this plan can provide up to $100,000 in group term protection. It also offers you additional savings through non-smoking and extra protection premium discounts.

TempoCare is a short-term major medical insurance product ideal for new graduates or those temporarily without medical coverage. This plan helps you to maintain your peace of mind and can provide medical coverage while you are between jobs or otherwise not covered.

Major Medical Insurance, with up to $1,000,000 in lifetime benefits, your choice of deductible, and family coverage options can help provide basic and comprehensive medical coverage at competitive rates. Even if you're already covered under another plan, you may wish to compare coverage and rates with this N.E.A. Trust sponsored product.

Catastrophic Coverage, with up to $1,000,000 in lifetime benefits for eligible medical expenses, can help answer your need for protection against large, long-term hospital and medical bills. And because this plan is designed to supplement employer-provided benefit programs, the cost is truly economical.

Both the Group Term Life Insurance Plan and the Catastrophic Coverage Plan are underwritten by The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York (MONEY).

Sigma-Tau Pharmaceuticals Inc., the U.S. subsidiary of Italy's largest healthcare company, has appointed Edward D. Helton '69 M.A., director, research and regulatory affairs. The appointment is one of several announced by Sigma-Tau as the company expands its marketing and research efforts and moves its U.S. operations to the Washington, D.C., area. Before joining Sigma-Tau, Helton spent five years as director, Division of Human Toxicology at St. Francis Memorial Hospital, San Francisco. Helton received his Ph.D. from the University of California at Santa Barbara. He completed postdoctoral studies in steroid biochemistry at the Worcester Foundation for Experimental Biology, Shrewsbury, Mass. As director, research and regulatory affairs, Helton will be responsible for clinical research design and implementation and conducting ongoing Carnitor (L-carnitine) clinical trials. L-carnitine is the only drug cleared by the Federal Food and Drug Administration for treating carnitine deficiency, a potentially fatal disorder affecting muscle tissue. Sigma-Tau Pharmaceuticals, in conjunction with the National Institute on Aging, is also studying acetyl-L-carnitine for the treatment of Alzheimer's disease.

Ken Goff '77 M.B.A. has been promoted to director of marketing operations for the Maybelline division of Schering-Plough Consumer Operations. Formerly associate director of marketing administration, he joined the company in 1980. Goff is responsible for setting and implementing marketing strategies for returns, promotions and planogramming. Schering-Plough Consumer Operations manufactures, markets and distributes Maybelline cosmetics, Coppertone sunscreen products, Scholl footwear products, Correctol laxatives, St. Joseph children's products and Paas holiday products.

I tried to phone Elsa Stromberg Bandi and learned that she and Fred were in Germany. Then I phoned Marge Willard Duer and found that she and Jack were in Ocean City. Since I seem to be among the few enjoying a simply gorgeous day at home, I'll close by wishing everyone a festive fall and hope that I see or hear from you soon.

A lovely long letter from Linda Thompson Yates, who is now in New Mexico, was a delight. After graduating from W&M, Linda went back to school for a degree in mathematics and now works in a bank managing New Mexico's cash position and heading a public fund unit. Linda asked for the whereabouts of Carolyn Thackston Snyder, so I called the "last known address" and Carolyn answered the phone! She is in Lawrenceville, N.J., has had a busy summer arranging the wedding of her older daughter and getting her other daughter ready to return to Colorado for college.

David Roller has been a professor of history at Bowling Green University in Ohio for the past 26 years, after obtaining his Ph.D. at Duke. During the 1989-90 academic year, David will be teaching in China — what an experience!

Dick Shirey and his wife, Sandra Berg Shirey '58, have been living in Ashland, Va., a short commute to his insurance office in Richmond. They are active in the Episcopal Church there and enjoy traveling.

Dorothy Bird Wilson and George '59 are in Springfield, Va., where Dorothy has been the director of the Mother's Day Out Program for the past 17 years. George is the athletic director at Washington Lee High School. Children are definitely in their lives!

Eva Green McClintock is married to Robert McClintock '58. Their eldest, Robert Jr., graduated from W&M in '82. They also have two daughters, Elizabeth and Katharine. Since Bob works as a radiation safety expert, he travels a great deal. Eva says her bags are always packed so she can go along. There are benefits to being older and having the children grown!

The next column will be after reunion, so please write and let me know who you saw and what they are doing — along, of course, with your own news.

Summer has ended and cool fall air is invading Virginia. Football season and homecoming time are approaching. As you encounter classmates and friends from William and Mary, drop me a note about what everyone is doing.

Robert Miles Parker is writing his fourth book which, with his drawings, will document what is left of Broadway. He's also selling drawings to help his preservationist cause. Anyone interested in this project should contact Miles in New York City.

Bill and I spent 10 days in England in August. We drove 800 miles and were enthralled with the Lake District, Shakespeare's turf, and the general freshness of the countryside. It was a delightful way to celebrate "that special birthday" most of us have experienced this year.

The Alumni Office sent me a wonderful newspaper article about Micki Leef Stout's business in Richmond called Cut It Out. The store features quality natural fabrics and also employs 10 dressmakers. Micki and her partner have been running the shop for six years while also taking an active role in various community service projects. Micki and Pete '64 have a daughter attending the College.

Mary Liz Smith Sadler and Sam '64 remain ever-busy in Williamsburg. Mary Liz coordinates a tutoring program; Sam, as you read in recent William and Mary publications, has been named vice president in charge of student affairs at the College. During the past year I have had the opportunity to speak with students on the campus. They all express great respect and affection for the Sadler family. The Sadlers deserve a special thank you for their many contributions to our alma mater.

The postman hasn't been beating down my door with bundles of letters and I'm hoping the brevity of this column will prompt some (more!) of you to send news my way so that our classmates will have a longer column to enjoy in the next issue.

I spoke briefly with Gary Reese's wife, Carol, who is busily involved with Gary's campaign for the Virginia House of Delegates seat from the 36th District. Gary is a trial attorney and partner in the Fairfax law firm of Patterson and Reese. He and Carol have two children, Alan, 14, and Shelley, 9, and live in Fox Mill outside Herndon.

I look forward to seeing some of you at Homecoming. It is always a pleasure to return to Williamsburg and an even greater pleasure to receive news to include in the column. Please drop me a line!

First a big thank-you to Mary Chris Williams for 10 years of good reporting and good service! She and Donnie Chancellor Wintermute will be a hard act to follow.

I hope you noted that two members of our class have been nominated for the board of directors of the Alumni Society: Donnie Wintermute and Mike Lubeley. Be sure to consider them when you vote.

Jack Driscoll was featured in an article this spring in Richmond Style Magazine as one of the city's "Top Gun" prosecutors. Jack graduated from the T. C. Williams School of Law and has been in the commonwealth attorney's office ever since. He is now an assistant commonwealth's attorney and specializes in white collar crimes.

Tim Marvin called months ago to catch up. He went to law school at the University of Oklahoma and practiced for a time in the Chicago area. He is now in Houston as senior principal and manager of King Chapman & Broussard — an out-placement service that specializes in placing former oil company executives. He has done consulting in management, training, marketing and communications.

Susie Smith Stewart and Ron '70 are now in Fayetteville, N.C., where Ron is a lieutenant colonel in command of an airborne engineer battalion at Fort Jackson. Susie is teaching in the North Carolina school system. They have a son Andy and daughter Megan (4th and 7th grades) who are busy in all the school and sports events — especially soccer.

Barbara Johnson is in New York City, where she has her own marketing consulting business. Barb worked for LanChile Airlines in Boston and New York after graduation. Later she joined Gulf Air and traveled in northern South America, Latin America, and even the Middle East. She visited Iran and other mid-East countries while still peaceful. She now enjoys the challenge and terror of owning her own business.

The Alumni Office sent me all the Reunion Surveys they had received by Aug. 1, so here's the information you have sent in.

Missy Galloway Parker and her husband Andy (Law '69) are planning to come to Homecoming from Dallas, where Missy is a child development specialist and writes textbooks on learning disabilities. Andy is vice president of Southern Methodist University. Hope you read the nice article about him this winter in the William and Mary Magazine. They have two daughters, Beth and Lara, who is attending college this fall.

Robert (Bob) Day is now in Austin, Texas, having completed an M.Ed. from Georgia State and a Ph.D. from Florida State in 1976. He is currently the program director for community colleges for the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board. In spare time he is involved in genealogy research, travel and excursions in Texas and Mexico.

William (Billy) Dunn and his wife Susanna are currently in Saxonwold, Republic of South Africa, where he has his own management consulting company. Billy completed his M.B.A. at the Wharton School in 1972. Susanna is a media buyer and they have two children, Evan and Brett. They would like to come to Homecoming, but "it depends on the exchange rate!"

Scott and Bobbie King Hart are here in Richmond, where Scott is a partner in Mays & Valentine law firm. Bobbie completed her M.S.W. at Virginia Commonwealth in 1981, and Scott completed his J.D. at Marshall-Wythe in 1976. They have two children, Anna and Michael.

Ann Nelms McDowell and her husband Steven are in Newport Beach, Calif., where she is a real estate broker with Grubb & Ellis Co. Steve is vice president of acquisitions with TCW Realty Advisors. Their hobbies include skiing, scuba diving, tennis, sailing and travel.

Mary K. Thompson Pruiett is in White Plains, N.Y., where she is financial plan manager for IBM. She received an

M.B.A. from Stanford in 1980 and previously was manager of Non-Tariff Barrier Trade Negotiations, U.S. Department of Commerce. Her husband Ralph is an engineer with Unisys Corp., and they have two sons, Timothy and Daniel.

John Quaintance is president of Rocking Horse Child Care Centers of America Inc. in Cherry Hill, N.J. He has an M.A. in education administration from VPI and is active in the National Association of Corporate Directors, and the Union League of Philadelphia.

Doug Volz and his wife Susan are in Winston-Salem, N.C., where he is with Sara Lee Knit Products. (The Alumni Office did not forward your attachment, Doug, so I don't have the details!) Susan was formerly with AT&T marketing, but is now raising sons Matthew and Nicholas.

Linda Wyrick Winkle is a teacher for the gifted in Cobb County, Ga., having completed her M.Ed. at Duke and her Ph.D. in curriculum at the University of Mississippi. She has two sons, Johnny and Jason, and plans to be at the reunion.

Demaris Eaton (Dwe) Yearick lives in Virginia Beach with husband William, and children Emily and William. She is active in the Back Bay Civic League, Bay Colony Garden Club and the PTA.

Kathy Jordon Jebo is now assistant director of the Career Planning and Placement Center at Radford College, having completed her M.S. in 1982. She has two daughters, Emily and Jennifer, and is involved with the Virginia Main Street Program for economic revitalization of small towns.

Lynn Andrew Lawrence is a TV writer with Cosgrove-Meurer Productions Inc. in Los Angeles. She has two children, Ruth and Micah Ellenson, and married Tony Lawrence last year.

Pat Rayne Kerns is a first grade teacher in Newport News, where she is married to Rick '72, the assistant commonwealth's attorney. She completed both her M.Ed. and C.A.S. at the College as well.

Jackie Mitchell Harris is in Atlanta where she teaches in Fulton County. She has two daughters, Heather and Melanie, and is married to Albert Harris, a professor at Appalachian State University.

Patricia Chausse Conrad now lives in Oil City, Pa., with her two daughters, Alison and Laura, and husband Conrad '68, who is a vice president of Quaker State Corp.

David Rohr now teaches geology at Sul Ross State University in Texas, having completed his Ph.D. in 1977. He is a fellow of the Geological Society of America.

Linda Clark Stout is here in Richmond where she is assistant manager of ISO Commercial Risk Services Inc. She is active in the Richmond chapter of American Field Service.

Larry Whiting is an operation research analyst with the U.S. Army in Bel Air, Md. He and Mary Martha have two daughters, Joy and Laura.

John Lehigh is a family physician in Union Bridge, Md., having received his M.D. from Hershey Medical Center at Penn State. He and Doreas have two children, Dara and Ryan.

Patricia Zepul Lamb is currently a community volunteer and mother to Kerry and Courtney. Her husband David is president of Intervest Resources. They live in Newport Beach, Calif.

Carolyn Vaiden Armstrong moved in August to Grosse Pointe, Mich., where her husband Kenneth is a pathologist. Their children are Alison and James. Cai was very active with community groups in Richmond before their move.

Carolyn Scott Jones is in Billings, Mont., where she is an education specialist with the Montana Power Co. She and Robert have two children, Eric and Carrie.

Charles Schwartzman is a lieutenant colonel currently at the U.S. Army War College in Carlisle, Pa.

F. James Seaman '70 has been elected a partner of the international public accounting and consulting firm of KPMG Peat Marwick. Seaman joined the Hartford, Conn., office of KPMG Peat Marwick in 1986. He holds a bachelor's degree with honors in psychology from William and Mary. He also earned a master of arts and Ph.D. degrees in industrial and organizational psychology with an applied minor in program evaluation from the State University of New York at Buffalo, where he was a Herbert H. Lehman Fellow. He pursued postdoctoral studies as an NIMH Fellow at the Social and Demographic Research Institute of the University of Massachusetts. He is a Certified Employee Assistance Professional (CEAP) and specializes in helping organizations establish drug-free workplaces. He is also a member of the economics committee of the Greater Hartford Chamber of Commerce. Seaman was among 142 men and women elected to the partnership this year. He currently resides in North Branford, Conn., with his wife and two children.

Sharon have two children, Brad and Ann.

Jim and Tricia Hooker Newman are in Williamsburg, where she is an eligibility worker for Social Services and he is an attorney and real estate developer. They have a son, Austin, who is going to college this fall in South Carolina.

Art Miller is a division manager with State Farm Insurance in Murfreesboro, Tenn. He and Brenda have two children, Jennifer and Arthur. He is active in the International Association of Arson Investigators.

Ann Marshall Miller is a high school guidance counselor in Williamsburg, where her husband Gary '67 teaches chemistry. They have three children, Mary Katherine, Sarah and Ruth.

Drs. James (Buzz) and Linda Townsend May are here in Richmond, where he is a physician with Hematology Oncology Associates of Virginia and is medical director of Johnston-Willis Hospice and Cancer Program. They have two children, Jamie and Andrew.

David and Phyllis Kline Appler are in Hudson, N.H., where she is a biology teacher and he is an optometrist. They have two children, Vivian and Douglas, and enjoy a biology "field trip" to St. John, Virgin Islands, every other spring.

Royce (Woody) Lookabill is circuit court clerk of Pulaski County, Va., after having practiced law for 15 years. He and Jane have three children, Kimberly, Joshua and William. Woody also teaches a community Bible study class.

Bettijoyce Breen Lide is a chemist with the National Institute of Standards and Technology in Gaithersburg, Md. Her husband is also a chemist and they have two children, Van and Neil.

Ron Hudson is a supervisor with Social Security Administration here in Richmond. He and Beverly have three children, Jennifer, Jackie and Julie.

Linda Freeman Holmes is assistant prosecuting attorney for Wood County, Ohio, having completed her J.D. at Bowling Green University. She has two daughters, Wesley and Ashley.

Jim Hiatt is the district judge, Eighth Judicial District, in Fort Collins, Colo. His wife Dana is director of the office of equal employment at Colorado State

A new exhibit in the Zollinger Museum of Swem Library focuses on the role of the College and its people throughout the history of U.S. wars and conflicts, from the French and Indian War to the recent activities in Vietnam. During both the American Revolution and the Civil War classes were suspended as College buildings were used, first by the French Army and then by Union troops, as hospitals, lodging and offices. In addition, William and Mary faculty and students have often been called upon in time of war. Companies of College men were formed to participate in several wars, and College people have frequently distinguished themselves during wars and military careers. The exhibit draws heavily on materials from the University Archives and the Manuscripts and Rare Books Department of Swem Library to illustrate this aspect of the College's history. Several items of personal memorabilia from the Korean Conflict were also loaned or given to the archives by alumni for this exhibit. The materials will remain on display through Dec. 2, 1989, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturdays.

University.

Nancy Hottel Fleischman and her husband Robert have their own insurance agency in Crozet, Va. They have two children, Andrew and Paul.

Lynn Zehmer Dowell is a lecturer in German at Duke University, where her husband Earl is dean of the School of Engineering. They have one child, Cary.

John Bennett is director of the division of healthful living for the State of North Carolina, Department of Public Instruction. He and Claudia have two children, Zachariah and Rebecca, and are involved in church and school activities.

Al Albert has been the soccer coach at William and Mary for 19 years now. His wife Gale is a graduate student at the College and they have two children, Graham and Allison.

Joe and Linda Kalen Trice are in Goochland, Va., where Linda teaches high school, and Joe is a territory manager for Sampson Coatings. Their daughter, Shannon, is a freshman at the College this fall and Jennifer is in high school.

Donald Harrell is a teacher in Greensville County, Va., and his wife Connie teaches in Sussex County. They have a son Matthew. They are active in their church.

Jane Morrissey Pratt, who was listed as "missing," is actually alive and well in Canterbury, N.H. She transferred after her first year and graduated from the New Hampshire College, married John Pratt in 1969 and has three children, Kelly, Becky and Ben. She is now teaching school and John owns his own business. They visited us last spring on their first trip to Virginia since 1970.

Rena Dowdy Rozelle and I literally bumped into each other recently at the Department of Medical Assistance Services — where Rena is a "computer person."

Cathy Calvert and her husband Alastair Findlay-Shirras are in New York, where she is senior editor of Town and Country Magazine and he's an investment banker. Cathy probably summed up the past 20 years as well as anyone: "I never thought I'd be a part of that life that has its outlines sketched by country weekends, children's schools, hard work and gritty city streets. We've had hard times, bumpy jobs, and a lot of good ones, too. We read, we travel, we're up to our ears in Legos and Barbies."

My husband, Milton Cloud, and I have closed down our carving business, although we hope to return to it when we retire. He is now budget coordinator for the Virginia Department of Medical Assistance Services, and I am recruiting coordinator for a law firm. Our spare time is spent "rehabing" our 65-year-old house (they stripped all my wallpaper yesterday and now the entire house looks like a Civil War hospital), and enjoying our garden. Please write when you can, and if you can possibly do it... come to Homecoming. You only get one chance at the 20th!

R. Craig Windham
P.O. Box 9506
Washington, DC 20016

The place: a fashionable bistro on Le Rue Chat-qui-Peche; the group: exiled bon vivants from the Class of '71; the occasion: the first meeting of "Le William & Mary Club de Paris," an informal dining society that intends to sample the best morsels the City of Light has to offer. But it will be hard to top that first repast.

The evening began in a beautiful manicured garden decorated with cement elves (les petite Schtrumpfs) that looked like they had been freshly cast at the Pottery in Toano. Here, appetites were whetted with plates of steaming croissants and goblets of vin ordinaire.

Then it was on to the dining room where a platoon of waiters ladled up the piece de resistance: Mulligatawny Stew Gratinee, redolent with the same aromas that used to have us lining up for seconds at Trinkle Hall. Even les chiens outside the window of the restaurant stopped their barking as if in respect for the culinary achievement.

Tom McDonald sparked conversation with selections from his yellowed Flat Hat clipping file. Tim and Betsy McAlister Groves led the group in an after-dinner chanson. And then it was on to the waterfront for a moonlight cruise

Windham's Hectic Career Keeps Him Running

By Cathy Stanmeyer '91

Do some of the faces in this photo look familiar? (Hint: not the guys carrying walkie-talkies.) No, your eyes are not deceiving you. Front and center is President Bush, and to the left, none other than class reporter Craig Windham '71 (the sweatshirt gives him away). Does Windham regularly enjoy jogs with the president? Not every day, but his work as national correspondent for Unistar Radio Network (formerly RKO) does provide some unusual opportunities.

This past summer, Windham covered one of the first family's vacations in Kennebunkport, Maine. He explained that each time the president leaves the family compound a media pool tails him: "I was on pool duty one morning when we were summoned (at 5:30 a.m.) to watch the president jog. I came prepared, and sure enough, he invited a few of us to join him. The other two men in the photo are Secret Service agents (don't they look thrilled?). We ran about two miles, and I got to chat a bit along the way. That was just the beginning of a day that included swimming, boating and 18 holes of golf."

The presidential retreat is just one of many important stories Windham has covered. In fact, earlier this year he won two awards for journalistic excellence at the International Radio Festival in New York. Windham received the Best News Anchor/Reporter gold medal for an entry that included his coverage of Hurricane Gilbert and the 1988 presidential campaign. His achievement is particularly impressive because anchors and correspondents competed head to head for honors this year. Windham also was commended for his contributions to

"Election 88," which won a silver medal for Best Coverage of an Ongoing News Story.

Windham's career has taken him from Kennebunkport to Prince William Sound, with many other stops in between. Despite the hectic lifestyle of deadlines and airlines, his assignments do bring a few unusual perks—after all, who would complain about the chance to chat with the president informally while jogging—even if it was at an ungodly hour of the morning?

LAUGHLIN RETIRES FROM AT&T

John D. Laughlin '54 has retired as sales vice president for AT&T. He was responsible for AT&T's major markets business sales in Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Washington, D.C. After graduating from William and Mary, Laughlin joined the Bell System in 1954 as a traffic assistant for C&P of Virginia in Richmond. He left C&P in 1955 to serve in the U.S. Navy until 1958. He then returned to C&P and held various positions in traffic, commercial and marketing departments throughout Virginia and Washington, D.C., before moving to AT&T in 1983. During his career, Laughlin was frequently recognized by C&P and AT&T for his sales leadership, which ranked in the top 3 percent in 1980, 1981, 1983 and 1984. He was presented the AT&T Information Systems Globe Award for outstanding sales achievement in 1983, 1984 and 1985.

DACKO NAMED ORION PRESIDENT

Ted M. Dacko '76 M.A. has been appointed president and CEO of Orion Systems, developer of the PYRAMID 2000 Consolidation Accounting System. Before joining Orion, Dacko was vice president, sales and marketing, with Corporate Class Software where he increased sales by more than six million dollars annually. Dacko previously was vice president, sales and marketing, with Fame Software Corp. He also worked with Interactive Data Corp. as a consultant and regional sales manager and with General Electric Capital Corp. as systems analyst and manager of financial reporting.

aboard a "bateau mouches" piloted by Dr. Richard Mohs, who has taken a brief sabbatical from his psychology practice to "reconnect with l'amour de vie." His latest affectations: a pencil-thin moustache and a beret. Vive la difference!

A postcard signed only "Festa's Follies Lives" provides us with some rare insight into the recent activities of the elusive Brian Festa. He was "taking a quick weekend in Missouri" before returning to the high school math classes he teaches in New Haven, Conn. Talk about roots, Festa is a deacon in his church, a member of the Rotary Club and an elected town politician! His campaign was modeled after his junior class upset: signs, flyers and bumper stickers with cryptic slogans ("When better Festas are built, Festa will build them.") But lest you think Brian has now gone mainstream, I recently received another postcard from him inscribed only with American Indian pictographs and other hieroglyphics.

Smoked out by "Where are They Now?": Carol Ware Gates who is a single parent of three and now living in Pennsylvania, where she "wears many different hats." She's a nurse and advisor to the University of Pennsylvania Nursing school. She also serves on the boards of two natural gas/propane distribution companies and runs a small realty management company. Carol has been invited to a nursing and mental health conference in the Soviet Union this month.

Navy Cmdr. James Hardway recently took part in the rescue of survivors from a Philippine cargo ship that capsized in a typhoon. He was on a tour of duty that took him from Subic Bay to Okinawa.

As librarian at Eastern State Hospital, Blanton McLean is in charge not only of the books and references used by the staff, but also of the hospital's unparalleled patients' library, oldest of its kind in the country.

Martha Stebbins is director of community services for the Massachusetts Dept. of Mental Retardation. She writes "from the shores of Yorktown to my current service area near Lexington and Concord, I can't seem to escape those tricorne hats!"

Soap opera fans may have noticed a familiar face recently on "Guiding Light"; Detective Tague is none other than Ralph Byers.

Steve Puryear is still in cybernetics but has moved out of personal and business computer work to the field of industrial instrumentation.

Someone who's concerned about "the issue of privacy in the age of computers and AIDS" is Kent Willis, who now heads the 4,500-member Virginia Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union. One of Kent's first goals is to beef up the ACLU's legislative effort in Richmond.

Lynne Shackelford has been promoted to associate professor of English at Furman University in South Carolina.

Do you know who will be the last member of our class to turn 40? Send in your answers or guesses, and/or your own experiences upon passing that overblown milestone. Take it easy, and have a colorful, intriguing fall.

Greetings. Well we survived the 20th anniversary of Woodstock — how about you? In this year of reunion/recognition tours, it is hard to figure out if we've been missing anything or is it all a dream and Mike Tyson is really a Rhodes Scholar, married to Mary Poppins? Anyway, I've got some correspondence that our classmates had the gumption to write, so on with the news.

Willie Sordell the vagabond minstrel is now playing his musical skills in Cambridge, Mass. (38 Joy St., 02139), going on 11 years. A short but sweet career as an educator in North Dakota and Indiana was chucked for life as a musician, songwriter, recording artist and record producer. Willie focuses on folk and ethnic (Spanish particularly) music for the Folkway and Flying Fish labels. Willie's significant other, Danielle, is an actress and it's a wonder that they ever see each other what with Willie as a member of the group "Flor De Cana," performing with Ruben Blades and Tito Puente.

Other classmates Willie has touched base with include Dick Freiberger, an ex-grappler from New Jersey (Roselle, if I recall correctly) where he lives with his wife and two children. Dick, heard anything from Andy Mashey lately? Willie also was contacted by Bob Millious, a fellow ex-gymnast, who is languishing in Ann Arbor, Mich., allegedly managing a Holiday Inn.

The unique note award goes to Bernie Herman, who through the use of four postcards updated me on the whereabouts of seven alumni, as follows:

Rick Clark allegedly is in Woodbury, N.J. (no doubt practicing his fastball and slider for a stint with the Yankees); Ed Chappell '72 is director of architectural research for Colonial Williamsburg and also a research fellow at Winterthur Museum. Jimmy Smith is director of the Renfrew Museum in Waynesboro, Pa. In his travels from his base at the University of Delaware, the finger-snapping Bernie also happened upon Alice Guerrant '72, who is state archaeologist for Delaware.

While in New England, Bernie checked in with Mary Beaudry in Newburyport, Mass., where she is working at Boston University as an archaeologist.

In Charleston, S.C., Dave Shields and wife, Luci are awaiting publication of Dave's most recent work. Laurie Anderson is also in the Carolinas pursuing her artist's career.

Back to Bernie who met all those folks while doing research on comparative early American urban household environments. Recently promoted associate professor, Herman and Becky have not let any grass grow under their feet. One final note on the saga of wandering Bernie: Dateline — London, England, Glenn Bowman who did the town with our young Lochinvar, is thinking of taking up "alien" resident status in the British Isles.

Kudos to Robert W. North for his heroism at the Jersey Shore where he helped rescue a 12-year-old Swedish visitor and prevented a drowning in the ocean.

Finally, in the land where students riot on Labor Day, property owners wonder if it's all worth the effort, and the "police do not use fatal force" (a.k.a. Virginia Beach), John S. Norris Jr. writes of his law practice with the firm of Anderson, Lee & Norris. John won the longest jury trial in the history of the Beach (three and a half months). While all this justice was being meted out, John and his wife Amy had a son, John Stevens Norris III, in February 1989. John is also involved in a couple of local civil organizations.

Kathryn (Stafford) Duffee and pilot/husband Mike with their four children — Trey, 14, Emily, 13, Mathew, 3, and Kristopher, 1, are on their way to San Antonio, Texas, after a three-year stint in England — R. A. F. Lakenheath. Kathy just finished her work on a master's in education from Michigan State and hopes to resume teaching when the boys start school in a few years.

Finally, Mike Pollack has moved to Mechanicsville, Va., (P.O. Box 493, 23111-0493). After his master's work at Georgetown, as we know Mike has taken up genealogy and formed Lineage Search Assoc. Inc. His search for roots even brings him into my neck of the woods in Western Maryland. Mike is anticipating the publication of two new books within the next year as well as a speaking tour out West.

In his other role as founding member of the Alumni Band Organization, Mike is seeking the whereabouts of ex-horns and drums, who, if you are out there, should identify yourselves to A.B.O., P.O. Box 3061, Williamsburg, VA 23187. There is also a Charles R. Varner Scholarship Fund being assembled as part of the W&M Annual Fund campaign with a goal of $10,000.

OK, you folks have been spared the pleading and "where are they now ploy for at least another three months unless I don't hear from any "new" faces by our next deadline of Jan. 15, 1990. Have a great fall, get up for the next decade and Keep the Faith.

Hi, everyone! I assume I'm not the only one breathing a sigh of relief with the beginning of the school year. Surely our mothers felt this way, too. And for the rest of you over-achiever working types, I hope you managed a summer vacation or two and feel renewed in your commitment to make news for the class letter. Now the hard part. Write it down, and send it in.

Tykie Tobin Dicterow was moved to tears by my last emotional plea for news and promptly wrote. She's still working for J. P. Morgan in N.Y.C. as a vice president in the insurance and mutual fund department, which translates that she manages the account relationships for Morgan's insurance company and mutual fund clients. Daughter Whitney is now 7, and they are in the process of enlarging their brownstone to include another floor, creating lots more room for W&M alums visiting New York.

James Marino was married on July 1 to Sandra Sefanco. They are living in Mansfield, N.J., where he teaches American history and a Vietnam war course at Hopatcong High School. He's also in his fourth year as head football coach. Sandra is a drama director.

Bruce Brown was recently named assistant to the director of the Leopold Center for Sustainable Agriculture at Iowa State University. He is involved with administrative and outreach activities of the center, which has the mission to develop farming systems that combine responsible stewardship of natural resources with farm profitability.

Diane Cale Stewart became a Golden Apple Recipient, an honor given to six outstanding teachers from Lee County, Fla., each year. She was selected from 995 nominated teachers. Diane has been teaching for 14 years, the last 10 at Cape Coral High School in the areas of television production, drama and musical theater. She sponsors her school's Thespian Troupe, an honor society for drama students and leads the 30 members and 50 apprentices to produce six plays each year and raise all the funds necessary for travel and competition entry. Diane also has a daily live television news show, "Hawk News," viewed by the entire school. She is devoted to the importance of the arts in school curriculum and believes the ability to use voice and body as effective communication tools are critical to human progress.

Dr. Lynne Shackelford has been promoted to associate professor of English at Furman University. She joined the Furman faculty in 1982 and has an M.A. and Ph.D. from University of North Carolina.

Robert Mullin is an assistant professor of religion at North Carolina State and has written the introduction for and edited a newly discovered text. Moneygripe's Apprentice, The Personal Narrative of Samuel Seabury III, is the narrative of an apprentice cabinetmaker's coming of age in early 19th-century America. The book is published by Yale University Press.

Paige Auer Winck is alive and well in Knoxville with husband Mike and sons Adam and Ryder. We spent a fun weekend together boating on a harmless Tennessee lake that became The Deep when Mike decided to teach Dave to roll his kayak. Fortunately, he survived and bids you all hello.

Our next deadline is Jan. 15. Just remember, I love Christmas cards. Put me on your lists, and have a great Fall.

Hope everyone had a good summer! Mark's diligence in the garden earlier this summer has been paying big dividends recently — we have had a bumper crop of cucumbers and tomatoes!

Make sure you check out the Vital Statistics column of this issue — half of the class must have had babies over the last year or so! Carolyn Testa Rye provided me with much of the information and also wrote to say that several members of our class are active in the New Jersey Alumni Chapter. Pat Giermak Millea is the new chapter secretary, and Carolyn and Debbie Allison conducted student interviews this spring as members of the Alumni Admissions Network.

Ward Richardson is currently director of guidance and counseling at Powhatan High School, just west of Richmond. He and his wife, Karen Saucier-Richardson, and year-old daughter Ginny are living along the James River in Goochland County. Ward and Karen are in the midst of designing their dream home dated for completion in mid-1991. Ward attended a Virginia Counselors Association meeting held on the College grounds in May and used that opportunity to give Ginny a tour of the campus. Let's see, she'll be in the Class of 2010, right? Ward said he'd like to hear news about Alice Burlington, Drexel George and Lilly Lampman. Has anybody heard from or about these folks recently?

Sara Lewis Flanary wrote from Williamsburg to report on the arrival of her second child, Lewis. She'll return to her position as product manager in Colonial Williamsburg's product division in the fall after spending the summer at home with Lewis and his two-year-old sister, Elizabeth. Sarah's husband Steve and a partner have recently opened their own office, Toano Financial Group.

Malfourd "Bo" Trumbo is challenging the incumbent 18th District representative for his Virginia House of Delegates seat. After earning his law degree from Marshall-Wythe School of Law in 1983, Bo worked with the Botetourt County law firm of Roe, Emick and Moore for four years and had a practice by himself for two years. He opened his own firm, Trumbo and Tucker, with Paul Tucker this year. Bo also serves as town attorney for Buchanan and Troutville and is past president and current secretary/treasurer of the Botetourt County Bar Association.

The Age of Washington: George Washington's Presidency 1789-1797, written by George Nordham, was recently published. The book is a review and analysis of Washington as both a man and the first president of our country.

Doug Pearson was recently named marketing manager for the Baltimore office of IBM. He and his wife Sharon and daughter Stephanie are living in Laurel, Md.

Diane Hull Gansauer started a new job as a director in the development office at the National Wildlife Federation in April, one week after the Alaska oil spill. Needless to say, she had a whirlwind orientation to the job! Diane runs the direct mail and telemarketing program at NWF. She is looking forward to the fall and getting involved once again with her favorite hobby, birding.

The Tribal Dancers are one of the newer attractions at William and Mary sporting events. Now in their third year, the dance group entertains crowds during halftime shows and brings added excitement to College athletics. The talented squad ranked 34th in national competition and brought home a first-place trophy from a dance camp held this summer at Rutgers University. Members participate in community services such as the Wightman Cup Tennis Tournament, high school dance/cheerleading clinics, advertisement solicitation and various other activities to gain visibility and finance their organization. Enthusiasm and spirit are high among squad members — enjoy their halftime performance the next time you come out to support the Tribe.

Denny Taylor Kelly '66, vice president and partner of Bowvier Kelly Inc., an advertising, marketing and public relations firm in Greensboro, N.C., has been included in the first edition of Marquis Who's Who in Advertising. Only individuals who are of current national reference interest because of meritorious achievement or position are included in the edition, which is to be released in December. Kelly has held the positions of president of Piedmont Triad Advertising Foundation (PTAF), North Carolina governor for the American Advertising Federation, Piedmont executive liaison, Chamber of Commerce small business council chair, PTA president and Muscular Dystrophy Association Humanitarian board of directors. In 1984 she was named PTAF's Ad Person of the Year and in 1986 was awarded its silver medal for career achievements.

Mark and I made two trips this summer, one to Northern Virginia and another to Massachusetts.

While in Virginia, we stayed with Lael Lyons '76 and had the opportunity to get together with Pam Walker, Marnie Montgomery '75 and with the spouses and families of Karen Claussen Shields and Sarah Tolson Glassco '74. Karen is expecting her second child later this year.

While in Massachusetts, we had a chance to visit with Terri Shelton and her husband Arthur Anastopoulos and their son, Tyler. Terri and Arthur moved into their house at about the same time that Mark and I moved into ours last fall, but they have accomplished a lot more than we have!

I left my tenure-track position in the department of pharmacy practice/pharmacy administration at the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy of Science in June. I am now the clinical pharmacy coordinator at Fitzgerald Mercy Hospital in Darby, Pa. I will continue as a part-time clinical faculty member at PCPS, but most of my teaching duties will be as a preceptor of pharmacy students on clinical rotations at the hospital. I will also be doing some teaching of the residents, interns and medical students in the areas of rational and cost-effective therapy and clinical pharmacokinetics. The position is a newly created one, so I am enjoying the flexibility that I have in making up my job as I go along. Although I miss some aspects of "the ivory tower" already, life in "the real world" is quite satisfying and challenging.

That's all for this edition. Please keep those cards and letters coming!

With the approach of our 10-year reunion, the Alumni Office sent me copies of the reunion surveys they had received. I received a ton of them and will be using them for the next few columns — otherwise I would have to ask for a complete issue of the Alumni Gazette just for the Class of 1979!

Emily E. Guy and husband Kim moved from Ashland, Ky., to Signal Mountain, Tenn., in December 1988. Emily is conducting independent consulting work and is employed by the Tennessee Occupational Safety and Health Administration as an industrial hygienist. Kim is the assistant administrator of Renaissance Hospital.

Diana Henderson is an English teacher at Middlebury College in Vermont. She is finishing her doctorate in literature at Columbia University, where she received her master's.

Larry Tyndall received his doctorate in counseling psychology from the University of Kansas in May 1989. He is employed in the counseling and consultation service at Ohio State University and living in Columbus.

Trent Tschirgi and wife Anne are living in Columbia, Md., where Trent is working as a pharmacist at a local community pharmacy and also with the Drug Abuse Information Center at the University of Maryland at Baltimore.

Julie Crooks Hellman and husband John are living in Plano, Texas, where John is director of marketing for Princeton Packaging Inc. Julie is a "full-time mommy" to son Sean and active in the Dallas Phi Mu Alumni Group, where she sees classmate Cindy Flournoy Mann.

Barb Bailey Martino and husband Tom are still in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where Barb is in her fifth year as account manager with Enter Computer Center. Barb attended the December wedding of Susan Warren in Annapolis. The nuptials were held at the Naval Academy Chapel, complete with arch of swords. Sharon King Lyon was also there.

Gerald Brown and wife Tami have relocated to Stephens City, Va. Gerald has a dental practice in Winchester. The Browns recently welcomed Heather Ashleigh to their family and are eagerly anticipating our class reunion.

Nora Bentley Dziuban and husband Bob live in Alexandria, Va., with their two sons: Michael, and recent addition, Daniel. Bob is working for the National Petroleum Refiners Association as director of convention services. He travels about six times a year, mostly to resort areas, joined by Nora and their children whenever possible.

Kathe Kelley is currently employed at the Presbyterian Hospital of Dallas as a rehabilitation specialist with duties in the cardiac, pulmonary, arthritic, MS, and back populations. Kathe has her graduate degree in exercise physiology from the University of North Texas. She has continued her athletic training over the years and competes in triathlons, local road running races, and open water swims. Kathe is currently living in the North Dallas suburb of Carrollton and hopes to attend the reunion this fall.

Sharon Dodson tied the knot with Michael Dunn on April Fool's Day. Sharon's attendants included Debbie Dahl Caldwell and Ellen Cassanos. Sharon is a senior social worker with Louisa County. Michael is employed in the Dunn family business, a nursery-greenhouse in Mineral, Va.

Juanita Leisch is currently working on a section of a photographic history of the Civil War to be published by Guidon Press. She is already a published author, with the book, The Family Album, Ladies' Wear Daily, 1860-65, already in a second, revised printing. Juanita has been busy helping to organize the seminars, speakers and special events for the reenactment of the battles of Antietam and Gettysburg.

Paul Flora is with the Pittsburgh National Bank working as a regional economist. He is also pursuing a doctorate degree in economics at the University of Pittsburgh.

Ken Cloud has been promoted to plant manager with Ball Corp. at the metal container plant in Findlay, Ohio. Ken was previously assistant plant manager at Findlay and production manager at Ball's metal container plant in Fairfield, Calif.

Margaret Nelson has taken the position of assistant commonwealth's attorney in Campbell County, Va.

Hope everyone has a great time at Homecoming. Please send news, and those of you who responded to the Reunion Survey, look for your news in the March issue. (My deadline is Jan. 15!)

81 Pamela Pritchard Padgett 10552 Montpelier Circle Orlando, FL 32821

Lee Rhinehart Charlton and her husband Duncan M.Ed. '81 are living in Manor, Texas, a small community east of Austin. Duncan is a firefighter in Austin and Lee enjoys motherhood full-time with children Rian, 8, Casey, 6, and Benjamin, 4. Lee says her W&M biology degree comes in handy every day while managing the ranch — goats, rabbits, chickens, cats, a dog and three llamas! As of June, Duncan and Lee were almost finished with the home they have been building for the last 2 1/2 years. Lee encourages anyone from Jefferson first floor to write.

Gail Clifton Domaleski and husband Gary M.S. '82 are still living in Dahlgren, Va. Gail is "retired" from the teaching force and is full-time mother to Gregory, 4, and Gretchen Louise, born Jan. 20, 1989. Gary and Gail own a very successful network marketing business, and Gail is also a certified color analyst and cosmetics consultant. Gail attended the April 1988 wedding of Lisa Boudreau Patten and Chris Patten '82. The couple will live in California where Chris is a Navy pilot and Lisa works for a magazine and is a new mother to Charles Boudreau Patten, born Mar. 14.

Sandy Seidel married Thomas J. Harrington on June 10. Tom is a graduate student in chemical engineering at the University of Virginia working toward his Ph.D. The two met at U.Va. in February 1986, and were engaged at Christmas 1987. Sandy graduated from U.Va. on May 21 with a Ph.D. in biomedical engineering. Sandy plans to work in Charlottesville for another year in a research lab at U.Va. Hope you enjoyed your New Hampshire honeymoon. Thanks for writing.

Bonnie Newton married Bill Rosello on May 13, 1989. Leisa Charlton and Sandra Horton McCluskey were in the wedding. Best wishes!

Kira Rathjen, Evy Lowenstern Severino and I were bridesmaids in Beth Scott's June 24 wedding to Andy Bednarek. The wedding was in Annandale, and the bride looked stunning. At the reception in McLean we found that her "something new" was Keds that she wore under her gown! The reception included champagne, hors d'oeuvres, a traditional pool dunking of the couple, a honeymoon toast with screamers invented by Kira Rathjen, and of course, a sweet-heart serenade to Beth by the Sigma Chi present. These included Jimmy Ervine '85, Doug Ackerson '80, Bill Pomerani '80 and wife Kaye, Liz Anne and Robert Jones '82, Clay Perfall '80 and Betty, Pat McGibbon '80 and Diane, Vic MacCagnan '83 and Debbie, Hal Hicks and Nancy, Jeff Campbell '83 and Jenny, and Lou Paladeau and Linda. Lou works at the Crystal Gateway Marriott, Jeff at E-Systems, and Clay at Arthur Anderson, and everyone else . . . sorry, but I can't remember! Lisa Bets Morton and Beth Forbes Lutz enjoyed the weekend too. After a honeymoon in Captiva Island, Fla., Beth is back at work at Advanced Office Systems, and Andy is back with his accounting at Primark Corp.

Andy was so involved with work in "season" that Beth flew to Orlando to see me in August. Beth Forbes Lutz came also and I took them to the "off-the-Disney-path" attractions — Church Street Station, Rosie O'Grady's, the Elvis Presley museum and every outlet and T-shirt shop in the city. We had a great time and they were once again calling my husband "Saint Larry" for putting up with us!

Last summer news: Jeff and Jenny Campbell '83, Bob and Page Skelly '83 and Debbie and Vic MacCagnan '83 vacationed in Nags Head. Dave Roberts '82 works for the Tidewater Bank. Evan English '79 and his wife Dawn live in Atlanta where Evan is in training at Pan Am to fly commercial jets. Hal White '80 had what I heard was a fun barbecue. Robert Jones '82 and wife Liz Anne had a baby in July.

That's all for now — see you at Homecoming! By the way, where are Mayer Marks, Dave Kelley and Mark Gardiner?

It has been a while since the last article, so there is a bit of news. First, congrats to Ron and Annette Blackman Harlow on the birth of their daughter Melissa on May 14, 1989. Quite a Mother's Day present. Annette keeps in touch with Sue Winstead who married Fred Melnick last fall. Sue transferred with IBM to the Tidewater area and she and her husband recently purchased a house in Virginia Beach.

Ellen Lewis is also living in Virginia Beach where she works for WHRO.

Jill Sanner has moved to Ecuador to work in the embassy.

Sue Kren Cook and her husband Ed also have a new baby, Colleen Frances, born Jan. 17, 1989. Sue is still working for the federal government in D.C.

Maria Zwick and John Schisa had a little girl, Michelle, born on Jan. 14, 1989. The Schisas completed their MBAs at W&M in December.

Lynne Jackson Angevine has traveled to Guam and San Francisco and may be heading to the U.S.S.R. with her job for the Close-Up Foundation. She and her husband Dirk are living in Annandale.

Laura Cushman is still in Boston, although her latest idea is to buy a 22-foot sailboat and move to the Massachusetts coast!

Susan Scharpf, or Dr. Scharpf, rather, has been graduated from the Medical College of Virginia and is doing her residency in family practice at Overlook Hospital in Summit, N.J. She is looking forward to seeing her freshman roommate, Nancy Van Loan Wood and husband Mike, who live in Budd Lake, N.J. Sue spent four months doing rotations, including a month in Long Beach, Calif., while she lived with her brother in Redondo Beach, Calif. Her interviews took her to Southern California, New Jersey and scenic Fairfax! Sue spent Christmas with Laurie Thornton '84 who came East for an externship at a veterinary hospital in Wheaton, Md.

After Christmas, Sue headed for Kenya where she worked at Tumutumu Hospital, a small missionary hospital out in the Central Highlands Region. Although she worked hard and lived rather primitively for 10 weeks, the worst was the seven days without water when the pipe between the mountain and Tumutumu sprang a leak. Her travels took her to the brilliant white beaches of Mombasa on the Indian Ocean and on a four-day camping-safari to Masai Mara where she saw many lions, giraffes, elephants, gazelles, ostriches, etc. Feeling the need for a challenge, Sue climbed over 15,000 feet up Mount Kenya.

Sue Scharpf visited Mike Hobbs '84 and Colleen Hogan '86 in D.C. in the spring during the Cherry Blossom Festival. She also saw Kay Gross who is in France for two months as an extern (she's in veterinary school at Ohio State) in Limoges and Paris. Kay will have an internship in 1990 in New Haven, Conn.

Mark DeCoster received his Ph.D. this summer and is at Walter Reed Army Hospital in D.C. to continue research.

In party news, Kellie Larsen, Kelly Jackson and their northern Virginia roommates had a St. Patrick's Day party on March 17. Guests included Mark Lionel '84, Mario Schafer '84, Margaret Harned '86, Rodney Lawrence '86, Dave Griffin '86, Mike Oleson '86, Karen Griffith '86, Mike Bracken '86, Kris Fedewa, Lee and Virginia Glenn and Eric Pickens. The Glens are the proud owners of two new puppies, Boomer and Abby, golden and black lab retrievers.

Capitol Hill staffers Theresa Jacoby '86, Henry Plaster, Chip Mann '78, and Kris Fedewa were panelists at a seminar in Williamsburg with Career Planning Services for W&M seniors interested in working for Congress. Kris continues to write for the Almanac of the Unelected, a book on Hill staff with Jeff Trammel '72 and others.

Mary Mitchell worked in Hong Kong last spring with Ogilvy and Mather.

Ginger Baskett, still teaching, vacationed in France this summer.

Jane Knott and Michael Powell were married in Washington on Oct. 1, 1988. Jane's sister Kate Knott Welch '87 was matron of honor and Mike's sisters Anne Marie '93 and Linda '87 were bridesmaids. Paul Libassi came from California to be Mike's best man. Other ushers were Howie Horowitz '84 and Tyler Leinbach '83. Tons of W&M people were on hand for the nuptials, and the class of '85 was certainly well represented by Mary Kay Kach, Tracy Sinnott, Alison Sellin, Demetra Yeapanis, Jeffrey McQuilkin, Tom Brooks, a well-dressed Jim Chappell, Jim Lovegren, Dr. Zwick L. Bauer and Billy Garvey. And certainly Anthony Jones wouldn't miss such an exciting Theta Delt function.

The Marshall-Wythe School of Law will award three $2,000 fellowships to students who will work during the summer of 1990 for public interest employers in Virginia. The fellowships are being funded for five Virginia law schools by the Virginia Law Foundation's Interest on Lawyer Trust Accounts (IOLTA) program. The foundation awards grants "to provide financial assistance to programs and organizations that are expected to improve the administration of justice and further public understanding of the law in the Commonwealth of Virginia." Officials hope the fellowships will provide sorely needed human resources to public interest employers as well as sensitize law students during their formative years to the importance of assisting the disadvantaged and working directly to promote public interest. Eligible employers include legal aid and legal services organizations, private nonprofit advocacy groups, government agencies employing attorneys, commonwealth's attorneys, and city, county and town attorneys. Interested employers should contact Robert E. Kaplan, Associate Dean for Career Planning, Marshall-Wythe School of Law, Room 234, College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

On Oct. 15, 1988 Betsy Powell and Tom Mullen tied the knot in Newport News and had a lovely reception at the Cascades in Williamsburg. Julee Warren '87 was Betsy's maid of honor. Diane Limm Warren and Susan Davis Garvey were bridesmaids.

Billy Garvey and Susan Davis were married at the cathedral in Richmond by Father Ron Seguin on Dec. 3, 1988. Alison Sellin was maid of honor and Julie Wallace Dunn '86, Valerie Stiffler Suessmith '84, Mary Hallahan, Diane Limm Warren and Betsy Powell Mullen were bridesmaids. The ushers were Zwick, Tom Simpson, John Boyd, J.D. Neary, Rob Haislip '84 and Scott Ukrop. Jen Cox came from Louisville, Ky., for the wedding. Gregg Crump came down from Philadelphia where he has just bought a new home. Tracy Sinnott, Anne Sorensen, Mary Mitchell, Mary Kach, Amy Boyd, Ginger Baskett, Jim Chappell, Jeff McQuilkin, Tom Brooks and Jim Lovegren were also able to make it.

Mary Hallahan and Jeff Kushan were married in Georgetown on Dec. 17, 1988. Susan Davis Garvey was the matron of honor and David Warren was the best man. The other W&M bridesmaids were Alison Sellin and Cheryl Allen; Tracy Sinnott did a reading. The groomsmen were Alan Nabors '84, Stuart Nabors '86 and Jim Brady. The reception was held at the Capitol Hill Club.

Susan Davis Garvey and a bunch of friends went up to New York City for New Year's and had a great time listening to the "ball drop" in Times Square while they were at an exclusive Manhattan Club on the Upper East Side. Gregg Crump continued his tradition of wearing one of his duck sweaters at special W&M festivities. At the club they ran into Ginger Baskett who was in town visiting Mary Mitchell and Ann Searle. Henry Plaster, Christi Bruns, the newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Kushan, Tracy Sinnott, Alison Sellin, Billy and Susan went on a walking tour of Manhattan the next day including going to the top of the Empire State Building.

Demetra Yeapanis and Chris Kontos '84 brought in the New Year by celebrating their nuptials at the Greek Orthodox Church in Newport News. Kim Eckert Failon and Alison Sellin were among the bridesmaids and Dr. Mike Kontos '83 was his brother's best man. Howie Horowitz, Will Gimpel, Fraser Hudgins and Charlie Kendrick were ushers.

John and Amy Boyd have purchased a new house in Charlottesville. Tom Simpson also bought a house outside of Philadelphia and has done a great job of decorating the place.

Anne Sorensen married Dave Shaver this fall. Mary Kach is working at Don Beyer Volvo in Falls Church, and since Don Beyer is running for lieutenant governor of Virginia, she has been spending a lot of time with the campaign. Tracy Sinnott is working at Aetna in government relations and has been socializing a lot trying to meet the three people in Washington she does not know.

Bill and Susan Davis Garvey are living in the same apartment complex in Charlotte, N.C., as Julie and Tom Dunn. Bill is working in sales at Caskie Paper and Susan is in sales for Chicklets. They have a new puppy named Carrington.

Mike Zwickbauer graduated from medical school in Albany in May.

J. D. Neary has been promoted to king of legal assistants at Akin, Gump, Strauss, Hauer and Feld in Washington. He has even had a chance to mingle with the justices of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Tracy Sinnott reports that Katie Hoffmann was wed on April 1 in Richmond. And Kelly Huffman and Danny Chen '81 were married in September in Wilmington, Del. Kelly and Dane Swensen are living in Minnesota and have a baby, Britt.

Doug Massey is entering his second year in the MBA program in the Graduate School of Business at Boston College. He has been elected vice president of the Business School Student Council and will be the student liaison to the dean.

Steve '84 and Debbie Glasgow Gross are living in Tucson, Ariz. Steve is entering his second year of residency in family practice at the University of Arizona Medical Center. Debbie has put archaeology on hold for a while and is working for a travel agency as a sales consultant. Debbie would like to get in touch with Colleen Crawley and Jennifer Brock.

Martha Feathers wrote in April to say that she had been traveling and singing with a contemporary Christian group called Mainstream. It's a full-time nationwide traveling group based in Greenville, S.C. This fall Martha started law school at the University of Richmond.

Liz Radday was married to Richard Spencer Starr on Feb. 4 at the Blessed Sacrament Church in Washington. The maid of honor was Gabriela Martin. Richard and Liz honeymooned for two weeks in Malta before returning home to Arlington, Va. On Jan. 22, Liz was given a wedding shower by Margaret Berry Edwards and Gabriela; in attendance were Janet Grubber, Anne Marie Karch, Tracy Gruis and Liz Hutcheson. Richard is the assistant managing editor/news at Insight Magazine in D.C. The couple met in January 1988 and Liz began working at Insight Magazine as executive assistant to the managing editor.

In June the powerful William and Mary softball team from northern Virginia played U.Va. and Virginia Tech to win the first place trophy. I led the overwhelming number of fans in cheers.

Margaret Bickley Wohler and her husband Brett moved to Thailand for a year. Margaret will be teaching while Brett practices Third World medicine. After their adventure abroad the couple will be moving back to Alexandria.

In September 1988 Teresa Russo married Gary Starr whom she met in grad school. Janice Harrup Tauney was matron of honor and Meg Lanchantin was also in the wedding party. Attending the wedding were Anita Straupeniks, Kendra Morgan, Danny Usher, Eddy Gibbons, Mary Ellen Woglom, Daphne McMurrer, John Van Der Hyde, Mehu Shah, Steve '83 and Susan Scott, Bart Brown, Susi Schaeffer, David Butler, Bridget Kealey, Jill Longmire, Tom Long, Patty Canonico '83, Terry Burruss, Teiss Briedenbach, Rich '83 and Donna Miller, Joanne Schuller and Marian Eller '83. Bob Torney '86 was responsible for the couple meeting. Teresa and Gary are living in Ann Arbor, Mich., where Gary is doing a residency in the dental school in orthodontics. This past June Teresa completed an administrative fellowship with Mercy Health Services, and in July she started working in administration at a hospital in Ann Arbor.

Teiss Briedenbach and Terry Burruss were married June 2 in Oxon Hill, Md.

Susan Bouce Scott had a baby in May.

In Teresa's other news: Doug and Mary Ellen Walsh Berger had a baby this summer. Meg Lanchantin is the new aquatics director at UNC. And Eddy

Gibbons finished Notre Dame Law School and is working in Chicago. Marlon Mattis, if you are out there, Teresa would like to get in touch with you.

Katherine Hoffman Doman has been elected to the position of personal banker with the Abingdon office of Sovran Bank. Katherine was previously the manager of a Sovran office in Virginia Beach.

Scott Ukrop received an M.B.A. from the Darden School at the University of Virginia. He is now working at Ukrop's Super Markets in Richmond — surprise!

Aileen Aderton and Todd Armstrong vacationed in Seattle and Victoria, B.C. It reminded them of London, they had a wonderful time!

Dave Butler is now working in Riverside Hospital, Newport News, before he moves on to Louisville.

Chris Walker has finished his first year of law school.

Agnis Chakravorty and Tom Copenhaver have been graduated from the University of Richmond Law School. Tom is now a Navy attorney.

Lori Pearson is studying at the University of Pennsylvania for her master's in French literature. Congrats to Ann Schwartz '86 and Chris Thorne '86 on the birth of their daughter Chelsea on Aug. 15.

That's it for the news. After a wonderful trip to Denmark and Sweden with Dwight Davis '83 this summer, it is back to night school for me at George Mason in pursuit of my M.B.A. It was good to hear from so many of you. Please try to time your letters so that the news can be more timely. My next deadline is Jan. 15.

The Jimmy Buffett concert in July was a great weekend and the party started the night before at Paul's Deli. It was a great chance to catch up with friends and hear about other classmates.

At the time, Chun Rhee was living at home and looking for a job. He asked me if I had heard from Anson Christian. It just so happened that Anson had written a few days earlier. He is completing an internship for Newport News Shipbuilding and gave an update on a few friends:

Jim Smith and Niels Christensen are both studying banking in Northern Virginia. They have an apartment (swinging bachelors' pad) in Arlington.

Jennifer Bidlake and Mike Coper married on Aug. 5 in Northern Virginia. Congrats!

John Fedewa had his annual summer bash on July 29.

Beth Johnson has moved to New York and is working for a public relations firm.

Lori Kogut and Christiana Choate are living in a New Jersey suburb and having a blast!

Shaun Fenlon is at UNC-Chapel Hill for law school. His fiancée, Karen Kozora, is attending Wake Forest University law school, as are Rita Sampson, Caryn Chittenden and Aimee Richardson.

Erin Magee is attending Marshall-Wythe law school.

Anne Humphries is a traveling chapter consultant for Kappa Alpha Theta.

Erin Henderson was married to George Heitman in May and is working for Deloitte, Haskins and Sells in Richmond.

Brian Newman is attending U.Va. med school.

The Muscarelle Museum of Art is organizing the American Drawing Biennial II, a national competitive juried exhibition to be shown April 14-June 3, 1990, at the museum. Contemporary American artists are invited to submit their best drawings in competition for more than $3,000 in cash and purchase awards. To receive the museum's required entry form, send a No. 10 SASE to: Muscarelle Museum of Art, College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, VA 23185. The deadline for entries is Jan. 10, 1990.

hometown, San Diego.

Todd Martin is working with Boy Scouts Management in the Richmond area. There was a great article about him in the July 19 Hopewell News.

Mike Ward, Kirk Eggleston and Lisa Londino are all living in Northern Virginia.

Anson concluded his letter by saying that Jay Austin and Jeff Kelly were Governor's fellows this past summer.

Margie Vaughan was also in town for Buffett. She is living in Richmond and working for Deluxe Checks. She told me that Kerry VerStrete and Anne Walecki were living together in Richmond and enjoying it.

Becky Pike is working for Woodies in Fairfax and spent the summer with Suzanne Hartley, Sally Wellons and Mary Jo Lawrence. Suzanne is a marketing assistant with Jaf Ford. Sally is working in the admissions office of Marymount College. Mary Jo is attending graduate school at Bryn Mawr College in Pennsylvania.

After the delis closed, Eleanor Carroll, Tracie Mertz and Colleen Finnell crashed at Kristen Jesulaitis' '91. El is working for IBM in NYC and has been tasting the daiquiris at the Seaport quite often. Tracie was going crazy from spending the summer in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., and was planning a trip to Europe for the fall. They told me about the following people:

Joel Lewin spent his summer in Richmond and is trying to decide whether to join the Peace Corps.

Alethea Zeto is working for Blue Cross and Blue Shield in Maryland, and her old roomie, Laurie Ellis, is working for the firm in Roanoke.

Keith Marino was traveling in Europe.

Margy Exton spent the summer as a counselor at a music camp and is taking a year off before she goes to grad school.

Kim McGinnis is working for I.M.G. Suzanne Lime is working for Wheat-First Securities in Richmond.

Brandon Black is also in Richmond, working for Signet Bank.

A few people stayed and partied in Williamsburg for the summer. Among those were Laura Absalom, Laurie Soltman, Ducie Miller and Joey Sekula who was accompanied by Jessica, his dog.

Laurie Pearce is working in the admissions office of Mount Vernon Women's College. She is living with Ruth Philipp and Lisa Simpson. Ruth is working for Price Waterhouse Consulting and Lisa spent her summer in New Hampshire at Camp Wedico, as did Samantha Krumpe.

A lot of people are continuing their education this fall:

Jodi Vaughn is preparing to go to M.C.V. in Richmond.

John Tuttle is attending Harvard Law School.

Lynn Dreylinger is at J.M.U. and is the assistant gymnastics coach.

Phil "Bear" Davis is living in Winston-Salem, N.C., and going to school at Wake Forest. He spent a summer traveling and England was the highlight.

Alex Tracey and Kevin White are attending W&M grad school.

Jim Bitner is at the University of Richmond law school.

Christian Lewis is attending Tulane Law School.

Grant Phelan is going to law school in Pennsylvania.

Carol Lampe is at George Mason Law School.

I ran into Lori Corporan and Matt Williams at Tysons Corner. Lori is attending Georgetown Law and Matt is working for an advertising firm in Pennsylvania. Lori said that Sue Morrison has moved to Falls Church. Sue is working for Mobil Oil and is sharing a townhome with Lisa Applegate.

Many graduates are taking advantage of some unique opportunities: Paula

SCHREIBER RECEIVES SCHOLARSHIP

Christopher C. Schreiber '93 of Niantic, Conn., has been awarded the $5,000 Admiral William J. Crowe Jr. Scholarship by the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The scholarship, sponsored by the Retired Officers Association, is a special one-time grant in Admiral Crowe's name. It was offered earlier this year to students who are military service dependents for the 1989-1990 school year. In high school Schreiber achieved a 4.0 grade point average, was junior class president, editor-in-chief of the yearbook and student council president. He also was active in community service and worked with the Special Olympics, the Best Friends program and many other causes.

EWALD NAMED POET OF THE YEAR

Mary Ewald '42 of Greenwich, Conn., has been chosen 1989 Poet of the Year by the Hingham Poetry Society of Massachusetts, one of the most prestigious poetry societies in the United States. Previous recipients of the award include Robert Lowell, Adrienne Rich, W.S. Merwin and Richard Eberhardt. The Hingham Poetry Society has been in operation for 40 years and is one of the oldest and most active as well as one of the most serious groups devoted to the study of poetry in America. Members meet every two weeks from September through May to discuss authors of verse. Once a year a contemporary poet is invited to read at an outside session. The society invited Mrs. Ewald to be Poet of the Year after she read to the group two years ago. Mrs. Ewald's book, Weapons Against Chaos, has been published by Devin-Adair of Greenwich. Its preface is by Richard Wilbur, the former poet laureate.

Murphy is in Mississippi for Officer's Training. Freddy Wood is working for his parents' feed store in Arkansas and is getting his exercise by chasing stray cows down Main Street. Kristin Zimmermann is living in France as an au-paire. Harry Mehre has been practicing with the Redskins. Tim Torma, Chris Duncan and Glen Peake spent a summer in Nags Head. While John Windt and Dave Parmelees are living in Ocean City and working at Phillip's. Susan Riley is working for an international firm in Reston doing public relations work. Linda Hartevelde is working for Gold's Gym in Northern Virginia.

Congrats to Laurie Gabig! She biked across America for the National Cancer Society.

Tim Dragelin and Vince Howell are working for Coopers & Lybrand. Tim Tantillo and Doug Williams are working for Peat Marwick. Tim in New Jersey and Doug in Northern Virginia. Karen Benson and Debbie Queeney are working for Arthur Andersen.

Jen Douglas is working for Macy's in N.Y.C.

A friend of mine ran into John Norman at a bar in Richmond and said that John was planning on going to Wyoming to be a cowboy. Is it true, John? Was it the data projects that drove you away?

Jonathan Harris has been hanging out in Chicago, going to bars and acting crazy. He has promised to show Colleen Finnell the town when she goes there for training for Peterson & Co. Consulting. Jack Calandra and Leah Barker are also working for Peterson. Leah is in Pittsburgh and Jack in New York.

Diane Wright has a crazy schedule working for First Investors. She is doing great and said that Mike Jennings is happy at his job with Contel.

Samantha Wessel is living in Colonial Heights, Va., and loves her job as buyer for Peebles. She is planning on taking a trip to D.C. so she can visit her old roommate!

Mary Ann James spent her summer sunning herself by the pool in Richmond. . . Some other Chi O's came to Richmond to work. Charlotte Webb moved to Richmond after spending her summer teaching sailing in Newport News. Char is living with Maureen Flaherty and Constanza Mardones. Moe is painting school emblems on gym floors.

Melissa Sutton is teaching elementary school in Virginia Beach.

Christine Laufen and Mary Beth Rathert are working for Price Waterhouse. Mary Beth is training in Tampa, Fla.

Jen Murphy sent the Alumni House a very innovative update on her whereabouts. It is a copy editor for The Courier-Tribune, Asheboro's fine daily newspaper. Because Asheboro is about as exciting as Lightfoot, she is living in Greensboro.

As for me, I am living with Laura Simonds '88 in Falls Church. I see quite a lot of Maggie Margiotta '88, Mollie McNeil '88 and Anne Newlon '88. Maggie is doing great and loves her job at Mount Vernon College. Anne is working for Johnson & Lambert and still likes it. Mollie and Louis Dudney work for Peterson & Co. and took me to lunch before I started working. Louis told me that Beth Vogul is working for the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, and he is very familiar with the Williamsburg/D.C. commute.

That's all for now! Please write and let me know what you are up to so I can include it in the next issue.

Capt. Alexander Gaylord Monroe '69 M.A. was presented the Navy Commendation Medal for services set forth in the following citation: "For meritorious achievement while serving as Executive Officer of NR Naval History VTU 0615, Naval and Marine Corps Reserve Center, Washington, D.C. from 1 July 1987 to 31 July 1988. Being dedicated and aggressive, Captain Monroe immediately began work on the archival processing of the ZB collections, a large, priceless collection of pre-World War II documents in an advancing state of deterioration that had never been processed for lack of sufficient staff. Through his extraordinary dedication and skill, he made steady progress in the area, thus realizing considerable fiscal savings to the Navy, in a project beyond the capacity of the command to complete. Concurrently, he carried on the work of Executive Officer with consummate zeal and personally recruited a Master Chief Yeoman, a difficult achievement in a non-pay environment. Captain Monroe's exceptional professional ability, initiative and loyal dedication to duty reflected great credit upon himself and were in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

Michael Puglisi '82 M.A., '87 Ph.D., assistant professor of history at Emory and Henry College, was elected president of the Southwest Virginia Council for the Social Studies. An expert on U.S. history, Puglisi did his doctoral dissertation on the Massachusetts Bay Colony in early America. He has been associate professor of history at the Virginia Military Institute in addition to being a teaching fellow and teaching assistant at William and Mary.

Neal Willems '71 M.B.A. is a visiting faculty member at the University of South Florida's Mental Health Institute. Last issue I promised some response on the survey. Here it is: 40 percent of the alumni responded. 87 percent are presently employed in a field related to graduate training at VIMS. 96 percent are presently or were previously employed in a marine science field. 23 percent are employed by the federal government, 19 percent by state government, 40 percent in universities or research institutes, and 12.5 percent in private enterprise. 46 percent are primarily in research, 10 percent education, 10 percent advisory services and 19 percent administration. 69 percent of respondents said VIMS prepared them very well and 28.5 percent said adequately for their initial employment. For those going on to other graduate or professional programs, the VIMS preparation was 50 percent very well and 44.4 percent adequate.

The ranking of the most important part of VIMS training was "hands-on

SKELLY AND WAYLAND HONORED BY PRESIDENT

Thomas Skelly '74 (left), director of the budget systems division in the U.S. Department of Education's Office of Planning, Budget and Evaluation, and Susan H. Wayland '68 (right), deputy director of the Office of Pesticide Programs of the Environmental Protection Agency, were honored by President Bush as recipients of the 1989 Meritorious Presidential Rank Award. The "Meritorious Executive" rank is bestowed on a handful of executives in the Senior Executive Service for sustained exceptional performance in government. The honor carries a $10,000 award. Skelly, who lives in Arlington, Va., directed a major overhaul and automation of his department's funds control system, which saved the government millions of dollars. Ms. Wayland has 17 years experience in environmental management and has received the EPA's highest honor award. She and her husband, also a member of the Senior Executive Service, reside in McLean, Va.

MIKE D'ORSO WINS AWARD

"Beyond Bull Durham," an account of a minor league baseball team written by Mike D'Orso '75, was selected for Best Sports Stories 1989, an annual sportswriting anthology published by The Sporting News. This is D'Orso's third appearance in the book, which has been published each year since 1944.

A sensor developed by David E. Kranbuehl, a chemistry professor at William and Mary, has been picked as one of the 100 most significant technical products of the year by Research & Development magazine.

The sensor can be used in a variety of objects, since composite materials are now being used in everything from jet engines to tennis rackets.

Kranbuehl began work on the device in the early 1980s after the National Aeronautics and Space Administration asked for help in measuring the physical states of the composites used in building space equipment. NASA needed a sensitive in situ probe which could examine the properties of composite resins as they change with temperature and time while the composite is being made.

In addition, the space agency wanted an efficient method of determining a structure's strength, toughness and point of failure after the structure has been exposed to extreme temperatures, atomic oxygen, ultraviolet rays and radiation.

Working under a NASA Langley grant, and later with grants from the Air Force Astronautics Laboratory and a variety of private and government agencies, Kranbuehl developed a sensor that can be imbedded into a composite structure during the early stage of production. The sensor is small, only 1 inch long by 1/2-inch wide and wafer thin.

By hooking a monitor to the leads from the sensor, analysts can keep track of the structure's condition during construction, under test results or, potentially, while the structure is in use, said Kranbuehl.

The U.S. Air Force, the Virginia Center for Innovative Technology, Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., ICI of Hopewell, E.I. duPont de Nemours & Co., Aristech Corp., Phillips Petroleum Co., the Convair Division of General Dynamics Corp., Lockheed Corp., McDonnell Douglas Corp. and General Electric played a part in funding research at William and Mary involving the sensor.

Professor Kranbuehl, whose sensor was cited as one of the 100 most significant technical products of the year, is congratulated by Sidney Paul '58, associate director of NASA-Langley, which helped fund the research leading to the development of the sensor.

Robert W. Squatriglia '60 of Conway, S.C., was honored with a resolution by the South Carolina House of Representatives for his "outstanding and exemplary efforts" as District Governor for Rotary International District 777. He is the first governor to be so recognized. Squatriglia also was awarded Rotary International's Presidential Citation; he is one of approximately 10 percent of all governors to receive this honor. Under Squatriglia's leadership District 777 sponsored several programs to increase international understanding, improve the quality of life in South Carolina and raise money for critical programs in the Third World. Squatriglia received bachelor's and master's degrees from William and Mary and earned his Ph.D. from the University of South Carolina. He served as assistant dean of men at William and Mary from 1963-67. Squatriglia presently serves as associate chancellor for student affairs at UCS Coastal Carolina College. He has four children.

Mrs. Helen Ridgely Kennedy '35 of Kingsmill on the James, widow of the late William Munsey Kennedy Jr., has made a bequest of $500,000 to the College. This bequest will establish an endowment, the income from which will provide scholarships for William and Mary students for undergraduate and graduate degrees in the Wendy and Emery Reves Center for International Studies. Preference will be given to students with special interest in the area of international relations. This is among the first endowed scholarship funds created specifically to support international education experiences for students at the College. The Reves Center for International Studies is currently seeking $2 million for international scholarships as part of the College's Campaign for the Fourth Century. Mrs. Kennedy has also made bequest provisions in memory of her late husband, William Munsey Kennedy Jr., for a distinguished faculty and scholarship fund in Landscape Architecture at the School of Environmental Science and Forestry at Syracuse University and an endowed scholarship fund in memory of her late husband at the School of Architecture, Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C.

W&M Appoints Four to Named Professorships

Four distinguished scholar-teachers have been appointed to professorships in geographic education, physics, Judaic studies and public policy at William and Mary.

They are Brian W. Blouet, Fred Huby Professor of Geography and Geographic Education; Nathan Isgur, Governor's Distinguished CEBAF Professor and professor of physics; Marc Lee Raphael, Sophia and Nathan S. Gumenick Professor of Judaic Studies; and Paul F. Whiteley, Pamela C. Harriman Professor of Government and Public Policy.

Blouet will hold tenured appointments in the the School of Education, and on the faculty of arts and sciences in the department of government. He will lead a university-wide effort to design and implement a major initiative in geography and geographic education, says John M. Nagle, dean of the School of Education. His work to enhance geographic education at all levels will include designing courses, conducting research, developing curricular materials, teaching courses in both government and education, obtaining outside funding and working with both graduate and undergraduate students.

Formerly professor and head of the department of geography at Texas A&M University since 1983, Blouet specializes in the teaching and study of human geography and world regional geography.

Prior to joining the faculty at Texas A&M, Blouet served from 1979-83 as director of the Center for Great Plains Studies at the University of Nebraska, where he was also chairman of the Department of Geography from 1976-81.

Blouet is the first person named to the Fred Huby Professorship, which was established with a gift from Layton and Jody Smith of Ponte Vedre Beach, Fla.

Raphael, who teaches courses in modern Jewish history with a research specialty in the American Jewish experience, is the editor of the quarterly journal, American Jewish History. He will teach courses on Judaism in America, the history of Jewish thought, the Holocaust, and encounters between Judaism and modernity.

Raphael was formerly professor of history at Ohio State University and from 1984-88 served as director of the Melton Center for Jewish Studies at OSU. The Gumenick Professorship was established in 1983 with a gift from Sophia and Nathan S. Gumenick of Miami Beach and Richmond.

Whiteley, currently professor of political science at the University of Arizona, Tucson, is known for his work in public policy analysis, British and U.S. politics, comparative politics, quantitative analysis, and modern political economy.

A native of Great Britain, Whiteley served from 1978-89 on the faculty of the University of Bristol, England. From 1985-87, he was a visiting professor in the Department of Political Science at Virginia Tech.

The Harriman Professorship of Government and Public Policy was established this year with a gift from Pamela C. Harriman of Middleburg, a member of the Board of Visitors since 1986.

Isgur, currently professor of physics at the University of Toronto, specializes in elementary particle and nuclear physics. He will be leader of the Theory Group in the Physics Division of the Continuous Electron Beam Accelerator Facility (CEBAF) in Newport News.

College Installs $4 million Phone System

By Ray Betzner

When the College's new $4 million telecommunications system was switched on in mid-October, it brought dramatic changes to campus, opening up a variety of choices for students, faculty and staff.

"It's like the difference between riding a horse and buggy to flying in a spaceship," said Ken Holder '82, an account executive with Bell Atlantic Systems Inc., the company that installed the new system. The old system of rotary dial telephones was replaced with a sophisticated computerized network that provides touch-tone dialing, data communications capability for sending and receiving computer information, voice mail for leaving and distributing messages by telephone and much more.

For students, the new system means a telephone in every dormitory room. "Ten years ago there were only hall phones and pay phones," said Holder. "Eight years ago the College wired its new dormitories for room phones, but you still had to call Chesapeake and Potomac to come and hook up the service." Plans called for the new digital telephones to be installed in dorm rooms as students arrived this fall. While the convenience will be an immediate change, Holder said that for today's students, the ability to link their telephones up with their own computers will mean being able to access a widening field of information.

And, as the College's communications systems grow more sophisticated, the realm of capabilities will also grow. Students will one day be able to call Swem Library through their computers and conduct a book search, place volumes on hold and research government documents stored in data files, said Holder. "You could almost do a whole term paper and never need to visit the library," he said.

Faculty and staff will also find their lives changed as a result of the new system.

A digital recording system called voice mail is available as an option at many locations across campus. Recorded messages can be placed in the "mail boxes." A flashing light on telephone units tells users that a message is waiting for them. In addition, voice mail allows one person to send the same message to a variety of "mail boxes" on campus at the same time. "If used properly a lot of the message-taking that occupies secretaries and staff would be unnecessary. Rather than pink slips or yellow slips on desks, there should be messages in voice boxes," said Franklin E. "Bud" Robeson, acting vice provost for information technology. Students might also be able to purchase voice "mail boxes" for their dormitory phones.

Installing the system on the campus has taken much of the summer. A major portion of the systems "brains" was recently placed in Blow Gymnasium, which is undergoing a major renovation. Holder said there was a special consideration given to preserving the existing physical beauty of the campus. Telephone lines were laid underground, often using existing conduits. When digging needed to be done, a radio controlled device was used to create underground tunnels without digging up the surface. The device shoots a powerful stream of water that "digs" pipe-sized holes for the new telecommunications cables.

President Verkuil drew a crowd when he trained for the new phone system installed at William and Mary. All employees were required to take a two-hour training session.

The following revised set of bylaws has been developed by the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni. These bylaws will be voted upon at the Society's Annual Meeting on Nov. 3 at 5:45 p.m. in the Williamsburg Lodge Auditorium.

Bylaws of The Society of the Alumni of The College of William and Mary in Virginia and the Board of Directors

ARTICLE I NAME

The name of the Society, which was incorporated by an Act of the General Assembly approved February 21, 1923, under the name of "The Alumni Association of the College of William and Mary in Virginia," as of June 10, 1938, was changed to and remains "The Society of the Alumni of The College of William and Mary."

ARTICLE II PRINCIPAL OFFICE

The principal office of the Society of the Alumni is in the City of Williamsburg in the Commonwealth of Virginia.

ARTICLE III PURPOSES OF THE SOCIETY

The Articles of Incorporation of the Society state that "the purposes for which the Society is formed are to aid, strengthen, and expand in every proper and useful way the College of William and Mary in Virginia and its work, and to develop, strengthen, and utilize the bonds of interest, sympathy, and affection existing between the College and its alumni/ae, and among the alumni themselves."

ARTICLE IV MEMBERSHIP IN THE SOCIETY

SECTION I. The exclusive ultimate control of the affairs of the Society shall be vested in its active members and shall be exercised, subject to their control, by a Board of Directors.

A. Membership. The Society of the Alumni endorses the non-discrimination policies as established by the College of William and Mary. The Society has three classifications of membership:

- (1) "Alumnus" or "Alumna": any former student of the College's program for credit during the regular academic session in Williamsburg who (a) has received an earned degree from the College of William and Mary, (b) has been enrolled for at least one (1) term and has received honorable dismissal from the College;
- (2) Honorary Member: holders of honorary degrees from the College; retired members of the faculty of the College; all members and former members of the Board of Visitors and Endowment Association of the College; and those elected to honorary membership by three-fourths (3/4) of the Board of Directors prior to the Annual Meeting of the Society of the Alumni. Honorary Members shall have the same rights and privileges as Alumni members of the Society.
- (3) Associate Member: a person not otherwise eligible for membership in the Society who may be designated an Associate Member by the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors from among the faculty, students, parents, and friends of the College. Associate Members shall have all rights and privileges with the exception of voting or holding office; and

B. Active Member.

- (1) An active member must be a member in good standing and shall be an alumnus/alumna or honorary member who has contributed to any recognized or accredited William and Mary fund in the last fiscal year, a Life Member of the Society, or an Honorary Lifetime Member of The President's Council. A member in good standing of the Society shall have paid such annual or lifetime dues as may be prescribed from time to time by the Board of Directors.
- (2) Active members shall have voting privileges as prescribed by these Bylaws and such other privileges as the Board of Directors may confer.
- (3) Only active members who are alumni shall be eligible to serve in the elective positions of the Society.

C. All members of the Society at the time of adoption of these provisions shall be entitled to retain their membership, notwithstanding their ineligibility under the foregoing requirements.

SECTION II. The Annual Meeting of the Society shall be held in Williamsburg, Virginia, at a time and date the Board designates in the fall of each year.

SECTION III. Special meetings of the Society may be held on call of the Board of Directors or on petition of not less than one percent (1%) of the total membership. All names on a petition for a special meeting must be verifiable.

SECTION IV. Notice of all meetings of the Society, whether annual or special, shall be given by the Secretary of the Society of the Alumni by publication in THE ALUMNI GAZETTE not less than twenty-one (21) days prior to the date of the meeting. Notice of any special meetings shall state the purposes of the meetings. No business shall be transacted at a special meeting that does not relate to the purposes stated in the notice.

SECTION V. A quorum of any meeting of the Society shall consist of the greater of (a) one hundred fifty (150) active members or (b) two percent (2%) of all active alumni members. Matters requiring decision shall be determined by a majority of a quorum.

ARTICLE V POWERS AND PURPOSES OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS

SECTION I. The Board of Directors has and exercises the powers resident to the incorporation of the Society (formerly Association) and prescribed by law. It operates in accordance with the power and authority vested in it by law, subject to any limitation set forth in the Articles of Incorporation of the Society, and shall exercise such power and authority pursuant to these Bylaws and the resolutions it adopts.

The primary functions of the Board are policymaking and responsibility for sound resource management of the Society. The Board determines the general and financial policies of The Society of the Alumni and has the power to carry out other functions that are permitted by these Bylaws or by the Articles of Incorporation, except as limited by law.

SECTION II.

A. The general powers of the Board are:

- (1) establish policies for the Society;
- (2) promote the financial welfare of the Society through historic acquisition of endowment as well as the College through blended fund-raising efforts;
- (3) secure and support its chief executive officer;

B. The specific powers of the Board include but are not limited to the following:

- (1) determine and periodically review the purposes and the mission of the Society and its relationship to the College;
- (2) establish, review, and approve changes in the programs of the Society, consistent with the mission of the Society and Board authority;
- (3) appoint the Executive Vice President, who shall be the Chief Executive Officer of the Society;
- (4) remove the Executive Vice President for just cause;
- (5) approve and authorize all earned degree, associate, and honorary alumni;

(6) oversee and approve the budget of the Society, and establish policy guidelines for the endowment of the Society and all other investments and fund raising it may undertake from time to time;

(7) authorize the purchase, management, and sale of all land, buildings or major equipment for use of the Society;

(8) authorize the construction of new buildings and major renovations of existing buildings;

(9) authorize the incurring of debts by the Society and securing thereof by mortgage and pledge of real or personal property, tangible and intangible;

(10) authorize any establishment of and changes in any dues program;

(11) authorize chapter format, organization, standards, amendment process, and dissolution;

(12) authorize officers or agents of the Society to accept gifts or bequests on behalf of the College;

(13) approve the use of the Society's name; and

(14) actively promote the general welfare of the Society's membership and its disposition toward generosity to the Society and the College of William and Mary.

ARTICLE VI MEMBERSHIP OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS

The Board of Directors is composed of not less than fifteen (15), one third (1/3) of whom are elected annually. Members are elected for terms of three (3) years. No member can serve more than two (2) consecutive terms. This excludes partial terms. A member may be re-elected to the Board after one (1) year has elapsed following the expiration of the second term. The Board fills any vacancies on the Board or in the offices of the Society arising from unexpired terms, and the President of the Society appoints a Board Nominations Committee to nominate candidates for election to the Board in accordance with provisions in these Bylaws (see Article VII). No Board member may receive compensation for services rendered.

ARTICLE VII ELECTION OF DIRECTORS

SECTION I. The method of election of members of the Board of Directors shall be as follows:

A. The President of the Society shall appoint a Board Nominations Committee consisting of five (5) active members of the Society, of whom one (1) is currently a member of the Board who shall be designated by the President as chairperson and one (1) who shall have served on the committee the previous year. The President shall appoint this committee in time for the names and addresses of the committee to be published in the March issue of THE ALUMNI GAZETTE together with an announcement that Committee members will receive suggestions for nominations to the Board of Directors from members of the Society.

B. The Committee on Nominations shall confer and consider all names which have been suggested and shall nominate two (2) persons for each vacancy which shall occur on the Board of Directors and shall certify the nominees to the editor of THE ALUMNI GAZETTE in sufficient time for publication in the June issue of THE ALUMNI GAZETTE.

C. The names of all persons accepted for nomination upon their consent shall be placed on a printed ballot by the Executive Vice President. A ballot shall be mailed on or before September 1 to every active member, as defined in Article IV, Section I, Paragraph (b) above, as of the preceding fiscal year of the Society.

D. Each ballot must be signed on its envelope by the member casting the vote to permit validation by tellers. Ballots shall be returned to the Executive Vice President not later than seven (7) days preceding the date for the Annual Meeting of the Society.

E. The Executive Vice President of the Society shall appoint tellers who are not members of the Board to validate and count the ballots.

F. A plurality of votes cast shall elect the new members, subject to such qualifications as may be stipulated in Article VI pertaining to the composition of the Board of Directors.

G. The results of the election shall be reported to the Annual Meeting of the Society. The Executive Vice President shall retain custody of the ballots for forty-eight (48) hours following the annual meeting and then, unless otherwise directed by the President of the Society, shall cause them to be destroyed.

SECTION II. Members of the Board of Directors and officers of the Society shall take office in the following manner.

A. At the last meeting of the Board of Directors preceding election of new members of the Board, the President of the Society shall appoint a Committee composed of members of the Board to nominate a President, Vice President, Secretary, and Treasurer of the Society.

B. At the first meeting of the Board of Directors following the Annual Meeting of the Society, the newly elected members shall attend said meeting, without vote, until completion of all agenda matters of the meeting.

C. As the final agenda matter of the meeting, the President shall call for a report of the committee appointed to nominate a President, Vice President, Secretary, and Treasurer of the Society, and the members of the Board shall vote to fill such offices.

D. Upon completion of the election of officers, the terms of outgoing members of the Board of Directors shall end, and the terms of incoming members of the Board of Directors shall begin.

ARTICLE VIII BOARD MEETINGS

SECTION I. The regular semiannual meetings of the Board of Directors shall be held at any place in the Commonwealth of Virginia at a time and place determined by the President of the Society. A portion of each regular meeting may be reserved for the Board to meet in Executive Session.

SECTION II. Special meetings may be called at any place in the Commonwealth by:

- A. any two (2) members of the Executive Committee; or
- B. upon the request of one-third (1/3) of the Directors.

The objectives of the meeting must be set forth in both the call for and the notice of the meeting. No business is transacted at a special meeting that does not relate to the purposes for which it was convened.

SECTION III. A quorum at any meeting of the Board of Directors shall consist of a majority of the membership of the Board. A majority of a quorum shall have power to decide any questions which may properly come before the meeting, unless a greater number shall be required by statute, these Bylaws, or the Articles of Incorporation. Attendance at any meeting by a Director is conclusively deemed a waiver of notice unless objection is made at the outset. Meetings may be conducted through telecommunications equipment, provided all Directors participating can hear each other simultaneously. Participation through the use of this equipment constitutes presence at the meeting. A written consent setting forth the actions taken and signed by all members of the Board or of a committee, as the case may be, is filed with the minutes of proceedings.

SECTION IV. Any member of the Board who is absent from two (2) consecutive regular meetings of the Board, except for reasons accepted as sufficient by the Board, ceases to be a member of the Board, and the Board elects a member to the vacancy for the unexpired term.

ARTICLE IX OFFICERS

SECTION I. The officers of the Society shall be President, Vice President, Secretary, and Treasurer, who shall be elected by the Board of Directors from its membership for a term of one (1) year, unless otherwise provided here, and shall hold office until their successors are elected and have qualified. Election of officers shall be conducted as set forth in Article VII, Section II. Officers shall not be eligible for election for more than two (2) consecutive terms.

SECTION II. Officers, Duties. The officers and their respective duties shall be as follows:

- A. The President is elected by the Board to serve for a term of one (1) year. The President may be re-elected to serve a second one (1) year term, but may serve no more than two (2) consecutive years. The President exercises a general executive control of the affairs of the Society; presides at all meetings of the Society, the Board, and the Executive Committee; appoints members of committees; serves as an ex-officio member of all committees; exercises the usual powers and performs the usual duties incident to the office of the President, and such other powers and duties as may from time to time be delegated to the President by the Board.
- B. The Vice President is elected by the Board to serve for a term of one (1) year. The Vice President may be re-elected to a second one (1) year term, but may serve no more than two (2) consecutive years. In the absence or disability of the President, the Vice President shall perform the duties of the President. He or she shall have such other normal duties as the Board may from time to time prescribe.
- C. The Secretary is elected by the Board to serve for a term of one (1) year. The Secretary may be re-elected to a second one-year term, but may serve no more than two (2) consecutive terms. The Secretary has custody of the seal of the Society and attests to and affixes the seal to documents that pertain to the business of the Society, including but not limited to deeds, bonds, mortgages, agreements, contracts, certificates, resolutions, minutes, and bylaws issued under the authority of the Society. The Secretary gives proper notice of all meetings of the Board and keeps a record of the appointment of all committees of the Board. Furthermore, the Secretary keeps or causes to be kept a record of the minutes of all meetings of the Board and each of its committees. Any of the duties or powers of the Secretary may be performed by an Assistant Secretary, who shall be responsible to the Secretary and holds office at the discretion of the Board.
- D. The Treasurer is elected by the Board to serve for a term of one (1) year. The Treasurer may be re-elected to a second one (1) year term, but may serve no more than two (2) consecutive years. The Treasurer supervises the accounts and financial resources of the Society, including but not limited to cash, securities, stocks, bonds and all other property, personal or real, tangible or intangible, owned by the Society. The Treasurer ensures the books are kept accurately and furnishes to the Board each year a financial statement audited by an independent certified accountant. The Treasurer may be required, by the Board or by statute, to furnish a bond for the faithful performance of his duties, and is the Chairperson of the Finance and Operations Committee.

ARTICLE X EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT

SECTION I. The Executive Vice President, appointed by the Board of Directors, is the Chief Executive Officer of the Society and the official advisor to and executive agent of the Board and its Executive Committee.

SECTION II. The duties of the Executive Vice President are:

- (1) exercise a general superintendence over the activities of the Society and bring those matters that are appropriate for Board consideration, review, and policy guidance;
- (2) carry out the policies and instructions of the Board;
- (3) serve as ex-officio member, without vote, of all committees of the Board;
- (4) attend all regular meetings of the Board without vote.

SECTION III. The Executive Vice President shall be bonded for such amount as the Board of Directors may determine.

ARTICLE XI COMMITTEES

SECTION I. There are an Executive Committee and three standing committees of the Board: Alumni Service, College Relations, and Finance and Operations. The Board may create and, in turn, abolish special or ad hoc committees it may establish for the discharge of particular duties, as necessary for the best conduct of its business. The President and the Executive Vice President are ex-officio members of all committees. Each standing committee includes at least three Directors. Additional members who are not on the Board may be appointed unless otherwise provided in the Bylaws, but the chair of each committee and a majority of its members must be current members of the Board. The chair of any committee, with the consent of the President, may request the Executive Vice President to appoint an officer of the College or member of the administrative staff to serve as a liaison between the Board and the College. The Executive Vice President designates this person, who will assist the committee in carrying out its duties. All standing committees meet at least twice annually.

SECTION II. Executive Committee. There shall be an Executive Committee of the Board of Directors to be composed of the President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer, Executive Vice President and at least one (1) member at large, selected by the President. The Executive Committee has general supervision of the affairs of the Society and Board between meetings of the Board. Unless specifically empowered, it may not take action inconsistent with a prior act of the Board of Directors, alter Bylaws or legal instruments, remove or appoint the Executive Vice President, or take any action which otherwise has been reserved for the Board. The Executive Committee reviews the organization and personnel of the Society, and annually reviews and adjusts the Executive Vice President's compensation. The Executive Committee meets at least three (3) times each year, and minutes are taken and distributed to each member of the Board following any meeting or are reported at the next semi-annual Board meeting. Special meetings may be called by the Secretary with the written consent of the President or at least three (3) of the members. The Executive Committee may act on behalf of the Board as necessary in a situation requiring immediate action.

SECTION III. Standing Committees. The President of the Society shall assign each member of the Board of Directors to one of three major committees. These committees shall meet at least twice annually. The President shall designate a member of each of these three committees as chairperson and may further designate other members as co-chairpersons. The three major committees of the Board of Directors and their functions shall be as follows:

- A. Alumni Service Committee. This committee shall be concerned with the Alumni House, Alumni Chapters, Communications, Homecoming, Alumni Medallion and other forms of recognition of alumni, and with such other matters as may from time to time be assigned to it by the President.

B. College Relations Committee. This committee shall be concerned with the Society's relationships with the College Administration, Board of Visitors, Faculty and Students, and with such other matters as may from time to time be assigned to it by the President.

C. Finance and Operations Committee. This committee shall be concerned with matters pertaining to the budget, with the endowment of the Society, with financial planning, with revenue-generation, and with such other matters as may from time to time be assigned to it by the President.

ARTICLE XII ALUMNI CHAPTERS

SECTION I. An Alumni Chapter, in order to be recognized by the College of William and Mary and the Society of the Alumni of said College, must be chartered by the Society of the Alumni through its Board of Directors.

SECTION II. The President of the Society is, by the authority of the Board of Directors, authorized to issue a chapter charter.

SECTION III. The objectives of the alumni chapters shall be to preserve the memories of College life and to organize the alumni of the College into effective units in order that efforts shall serve greatly in promoting the welfare of the College, the Society, and its alumni.

SECTION IV. Any group of twenty-five (25) or more active members desiring to form a chapter may petition the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni, giving the names of charter members and the names of its President, Vice President, Secretary, and Treasurer, other officers so designated, and the name of the new chapter.

SECTION V. No charter shall be granted to any group where there already exists a chapter in that region, which in the opinion of the Board of Directors is adequate to serve the interest of the Society of the Alumni.

SECTION VI. In order to secure a charter, petitioning groups must agree to the following regulations:

- A. The chapter shall hold at least one (1) meeting a year, the minutes of which shall be certified to the Executive Vice President of the Society of the Alumni.
- B. The chapter shall inform the Executive Vice President of the Society of the Alumni by October 1 of each year the names of the current officers. After thirty (30) days, if such report has not been made, the Executive Vice President shall write the last known Secretary of the chapter for such information which must be received within sixty (60) days.
- C. The chapter must annually file with the Board of Directors of the Society a Statement of Account at the close of each fiscal year. The statement shall provide financial disclosure of all assets and liabilities and summarize expenditures for the preceding year. The statement must be signed by at least two (2) officers and notarized.
- D. The chapter must comply with policies concerning the management and affairs of chapters as determined by the Board of Directors.
- E. Failure to comply with the above regulations may revoke the charter of the chapter.

ARTICLE XIII DISSOLUTION

The assets of the Society of the Alumni are at all times dedicated to the purposes of the Society. If for any reason it becomes necessary to dissolve or liquidate the Society, the remaining assets, after payment of debts and compliance with all other obligations of the law, may be distributed, transferred or conveyed to one (1) or more corporations, organizations or institutions organized and operated exclusively for scientific, educational, and charitable purposes that qualify for tax exemption under Section 501(C)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as amended, that the Board selects and/or is directed by a court of competent jurisdiction. If more than one (1) beneficiary is named, the Board determines the proportion of the distributions.

ARTICLE XIV ORDER OF BUSINESS

SECTION I. The Executive Committee shall establish the agenda and order of business for meetings of the Board.

SECTION II. Robert's Rules of Order govern in all cases unless otherwise provided for by the Bylaws.

ARTICLE XV POLICY AND PROCEDURES MANUAL

The Board of Directors has a policy and procedures manual that addresses three (3) general policy areas: Board policies, approved by the Board; personnel policies, approved by the Executive Committee; and management policies, installed internally by the Executive Vice President of the Society, subject to review and approval by the Executive Committee.

ARTICLE XVI INDEMNIFICATION

Every member of the Board of Directors is indemnified against all expenses actually and necessarily incurred by a member in connection with the defense of any action, suit or proceeding to which the member is a party by reason of being or having been a member of the Board of Directors of the Society; provided, however, that there shall be no indemnification in relation to such matters to which the member is adjudicated in an action, suit or proceeding to be liable for gross negligence or willful misconduct in the performance of duty as a member of the Board of Directors of the Society.

ARTICLE XVII CONFLICTS OF INTEREST

SECTION I. A member of the Board is considered to have a conflict of interest if:

- (1) the member has existing or potential financial or other interests in a matter before the Board which might reasonably appear to impair the member's independent, unbiased judgment in the discharge of the member's responsibilities to the Society; or
- (2) the member is aware that a family member in the same household, or any organization of which the member is an officer, director, employee, member, partner, trustee or controlling stockholder, has existing or potential financial or other interests in such matter before the Board.

SECTION II. No Director may vote on any matter in which the member has a conflict of interest. Further, the minutes are to reflect that a disclosure was made that the member having a conflict of interest abstained from voting.

SECTION III. A Director who is uncertain of a conflict of interest may request the Board or Executive Committee to resolve the question by majority vote.

ARTICLE XVIII SEAL

The corporate seal of the Society shall consist of two concentric circles, between which shall be the words, "The Society of the Alumni of the College of William and Mary," and in the center shall be inscribed, "In Virginia; seal, 1923."

ARTICLE XIX AMENDMENT

Unless otherwise provided by statute or the Articles of Incorporation of the Society, these Bylaws may be amended, by a majority of any quorum at any regular or special meeting of the Society, provided that due notice of the meeting and such proposed action shall have been given in accordance with the Bylaws and the proposed amendment stated. Such action shall become effective immediately unless otherwise specified.
