Record Crowds Celebrate "The Best of Times"

Chi Omega and Phi Kappa Tau teamed up for a first-place entry in the parade.

By Virginia Collins '77

Superlatives frequently sprinkled conversations during Homecoming weekend as some of the most beautiful fall weather greeted one of the largest-ever crowds for the "Best of Times." The Class of 1964 broke all previous records for a 25th reunion celebration. More than 200 class members and guests registered for events that began Thursday evening and continued until Sunday afternoon.

The classes of 1949 and 1959 celebrated their 30th and 40th reunions in grand style with large percentages of their total class members present for the weekend. Especially strong turnouts also were recorded for the Young Guard party on Saturday afternoon and for the 10th- and 5th-year reunions hosted by the classes of 1979 and 1984.

The theatre reunion played to a full crowd on Saturday evening in Phi Beta Kappa Hall. Close to 300 alumni and friends gathered to honor Howard Scammon '34, professor emeritus of theatre and speech, and to recall their rewarding associations with the William and Mary Theatre and "The Common Glory" outdoor drama.

More than 40 events were held during the long weekend, which was festively launched on Thursday evening with the Order of the White Jacket's annual banquet in Trinkle Hall. Highlights included the presentation of 10 student scholarships, each for $1,500. David Lucas, restaurant manager for Kingsmill Resort and Conference Center, was named Patron of the Year for his leadership in establishing Patrons OWJ within the community. Beth Mills '82 was presented with honorary membership in OWJ for her outstanding service as administrative assistant to the group.

Both new and traditional events offered an entertaining mix of activities on Friday. The golf tournament, held this year at the Golden Horseshoe Golf Course, was a sell-out, as it has been for several years. Winners were Elliott Schaubach '59 and Elaine Kappel '55 for men's and women's low gross, Donald Gibson '84 and Mary Galloway for low net, Ronald Holmes '81 and Mary Galloway for closest to pin, and Michael McFadden '79 and Elaine Kappel for longest drive.

Across town at Adair tennis courts, winners were declared in the 12th Annual Sandy Kelly '77 Tennis Tournament. Doubles winners were Beth Berryman, the wife of Doug Berryman '64, and Sid Broocks '41. Runners-up were Ann Davis Strum '54 and David Puster '80.

A number of events rounded out Friday's daytime agenda: the Olde Guard luncheon, concerts by the William and Mary Choir, Band and Orchestra, campus tours (both on foot and by bus) and the dedication of the new student recreation center. As dusk fell, alumni and friends paused in the Wren Courtyard for the annual Sunset Ceremony, remembering classmates and friends who had died during the past year. Marshall Acuff '62 and Carolyn Todd Schaubach '59, president and secretary respectively of the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni, participated in the program along with the Rev. Thomas Law '59, the William and Mary Choir, Queen's Guard and student trumpeters.

At the Williamsburg Lodge on Friday evening, alumni from all class years gathered for a cocktail party prior to the annual dinner and dance of the Society of the Alumni. Following dinner, a number of special awards were presented, including the Alumni Medallion to William A. Armbruster '57, L. Eldon James '34 and R. Bradshaw Pulley '39. The medallion is the highest award given to alumni by the Society.

Faculty members named Alumni Fellows were James W. Beers, professor of reading and language arts in the School of Education; Martha M. Houle, professor of French, modern languages and literatures; Eric R. Jensen, associate professor of economics; R. Heather Macdonald, associate professor of geology; and Keith W. Miller, associate professor of computer science. The Alumni Fellow awards are given annually by the Society of the Alumni to younger faculty members and carry a $500 honorarium.

Retired members of the College's faculty and administrative staff were named associate members of the Society: Donald L. Ball, Paul N. Clem, L. Thomas Conner Jr. (awarded posthumously), Charles E. Davidson, Armand J. Galfó, Robert Maidment and Harriet E. Reid.

The Los Angeles Alumni Chapter was named Outstanding Chapter of the Year. Roy Shelor '49, chapter president, and his wife Olive-Ann '46, who serves as chapter secretary, accepted the award. Honorable mention awards went to the Atlanta, Chicago and Triangle (North Carolina) chapters.

Four Annual Giving Awards were presented. The Class of 1925 Trophy for the most outstanding increase in giving was awarded to the Class of 1932. The Class of 1940 received the 1954 Trophy for best class percentage participation. The Baltimore/Annapolis Trophy, awarded to an outstanding individual with efforts or money for the Annual Fund, went to Roy R. Charles '32, '75 L.L.D. The Board of Directors' Cup for best all-around in support of the Annual Fund was awarded to J. William Harrison Jr. '60 and his wife, Ann '62.

A picture-perfect day greeted crowds on Saturday for the parade, luncheon on the Alumni House lawn and the football game, which resulted in a 34-28 victory for the Tribe over East Tennessee State.

In the parade float competition, Phi Kappa Tau fraternity and Chi Omega sorority took first place, winning the Lambert Cup and $350 for "The Thyme of Your Life: Tribe Salad of the Day." Second place and $200 went to the Black Student Organization for "1920s Harlem Renaissance." Psi Upsilon fraternity won third place and $150 for "The Best of Thyms: The Great Parrot Roast." Fourth and fifth places carrying prizes of $100 and $50 went respectively to the Off-Campus Student Council and Alpha Chi Omega sorority.

In the band competition, Poquoson High School won first place and $175. Second place and $125 went to Manor High School in Portsmouth, and Bruton High School in York County won third place and $75.

For many returning alumni, class dinners and parties on Saturday evening were the crowning touch to a perfect day filled with laughter and memories. Pete Stout '64 reported a "super weekend" with classmates packing the dance floor until 1 a.m. as they partied to the music of the Rhondells.

In addition to reunion activities and other events sponsored by the Society of the Alumni, several special interest groups gathered at different times during the weekend. They included the Alumni Band, William and Mary GALA and the Black Alumni Steering Committee. Graduate alumni groups also held special events.

As festivities wound down on Sunday with class hospitality suites and a champagne brunch, the weekend was destined to become yet another chapter in "The Best of Times" for William and Mary alumni.

Above, grand marshal Howard Scammon '34 prepares to flip the game coin with help from Sharon Wible, a member of the Student Alumni Liaison Council. Below, Alumni Medallion recipient Bill Armbruster '57 (r) gets a bear hug from fraternity brother Tom Eley '57.

President and Mrs. Verkuil congratulate Bill Corley '64 for the 25th reunion class gift of $150,000 to endow a faculty fellowship in the arts and sciences.

Ringing Far and Near

Dollars and Sense

By Barry Adams

Post. Lean closer to the page. I've got a hot-breaking news tip for you.

"The cost of obtaining a college education will continue to rise substantially."

It's like crying wolf. Americans have been in on this discussion for most of the last four decades. No reason to panic. It presents a fact of life as expected and unavoidable as Monday mornings. Most people have been exposed to the graphs and charts depicting the dramatic escalation of the cost of attending college. So why bother to redistribute everyone's inner peace by bringing it up here?

Certainly access to higher education is at stake. An article entitled "Growing Old Frugally" in a recent special edition of Newsweek explains that "the modern American family has redefined the ties that bind...children gain an advantage not from the certainty of an inheritance but from the excellence of their education." Writes Jane Bryant Quinn, the author of the article, "the enormous cost of securing that education — both in local taxes and in college tuition — is the modern equivalent of passing on the farm."

Depending on which reference one cites, in 15 years a four-year degree at a public college or university will cost anywhere from $80,000 to $90,000! "Either figure," said one television commentator, "means a whole lot of money."

A large segment of William and Mary alumni will be faced with the soaring costs associated with earning a degree. Fifty percent of the total alumni body is represented by graduates who are 42 or younger. Unlike their parents, the Baby Boom Generation faces the challenge at a different pace. Says Quinn, "Marrying later, they're bearing children in their middle thirties and even into their early forties. Tuition bills will dog their steps right up to the threshold of retirement." The strain, Quinn adds, will bring on the "middle age of discontent."

Perhaps not. The drama has repercussions far beyond Peoria, and colleges, organizations, states, financial institutions and the federal government are all voicing concern. The National Task Force on Higher Education has even stated that of the several issues which tend to polarize viewpoints about higher education the one "of the greatest concern to the public and educators alike" is the rising price of attaining a degree.

Two U.S. Senate bills recently introduced attempted to address the hurdle through the encouragement of family savings. Both bills, unfortunately, were killed before reaching the floor for a vote, but they signal an awakening on the part of our legislative branch that the affordability of higher education is likely to develop into a major issue among their constituencies.

The Bentsen Super IRA Bill (S.1682) and the Packwood-Roth IRA Plus Bill (S.1771) offered incentives for families desiring to save for college. The Bentsen Super IRA Bill died early in the legislative process but the progress made by the Packwood-Roth Bill holds promise for future legislation.

In each, provisions were included for penalty-free withdrawals of all or part of individual IRA funds to pay for college. The Bentsen Bill would have offered parents the opportunity to withdraw 100 percent of the funds without penalty. Less magnanimous, the Packwood-Roth Bill limited penalty-free withdrawals for college costs to only 25 percent of the total balance held.

Among the arguments which may have led to the demise of the Packwood-Roth Bill was that it favored wealthy savers. There were many supporters, however, who favored amending the percentage to reflect the 100 percent level. A number of alumni associations spoke on behalf of its intent.

The value of saving for a college education is essentially unchallenged. As we begin to settle our nation's role in a highly competitive world the strength of an educated populace becomes more focused. Productivity, entrepreneurship and leadership are critical derivatives. Access, through financial incentives, will likely be of increasing concern to more of us in the 1990s.

Funding for education and providing opportunities for access reaches far beyond a simple dollars and cents issue. It may be the only issue that our future is balanced upon, however precariously.

Society Elects Five to Board of Directors

Alumni who attended the Annual Meeting of the Society of the Alumni on Nov. 3 during Homecoming weekend heard an update on the Society's activities of the past year and received the results of this fall's election for the Society's Board of Directors.

The meeting included a discussion of proposed revisions to the Society's bylaws. Due to the absence of a quorum, a vote on the bylaws was tabled until a future date.

Helen T. Stafford '48, chairman of the nominating committee, announced the election results.

Carolyn Todd Schaubach '59 of Norfolk has been re-elected to a second three-year term on the Society's Board of Directors.

Newly elected board members are Sarah Kemp Brady '64, Arlington, Va.; H. Mason Sizemore '63, Seattle; Rebecca Beach Smith '71, '79 J.D., Norfolk; and Henry T. Tucker Jr. '72, Richmond. They will begin their terms at the close of the Society's semiannual meeting on Feb. 2 in Williamsburg.

Schaubach is secretary and treasurer of Todd Industries Inc., a marine/industrial company. A member of the Society's board since 1987, she currently serves as secretary of the board, chairman of the Fourth Century Committee and is a member of the committees on the Alumni House Expansion and Finance and Operations. She and her husband, Elliott '59, are active in a number of alumni activities.

Brady is chairman of Handgun Control Inc. and served for a number of years in various positions with the Republican Party. She is a member of the board of the Greater Metropolitan Washington, D.C. Alumni Chapter and serves on the boards of Easter Seals, New Life Inc. and the National Association of Critical Care.

A former editor of the Flat Hat, Sizemore is president and chief operating officer of the Seattle Times. He is active in the Seattle Alumni Chapter as well as a number of community and professional organizations. The recipient of several awards, he has been selected for the past four years by Encyclopedia Britannica to serve as a judge for its Young Achiever of the Year competition. He holds an M.B.A. from the University of Washington. His wife, Connie, is a member of the class of 1962.

Smith was recently confirmed by the U. S. Senate to serve as U.S. District Judge, Eastern District of Virginia, making her the first woman in Virginia to hold a federal judgeship. She received a master's degree from the University of Virginia and later earned her law degree from Marshall-Wythe School of Law where she ranked first in her class. A member of Phi Beta Kappa, she has held leadership positions in numerous civic and professional organizations.

A senior vice president with Crestar Bank, Tucker was a member of the College's Board of Visitors from 1978 to 1989 and served as vice rector during the final two years of his term. He currently serves on the board of directors of the School of Business Administration Sponsors Inc. Active in his community, Tucker is vice chairman of the Virginia Lottery Board. He holds a law degree from the University of Virginia.

Stafford reported that 3,687 ballots were cast from an eligible active member list of approximately 11,000 alumni, representing an increase of more than 300 votes from last year.

"It is interesting to report," noted Stafford, "that 50 percent of the total vote came from outside the state of Virginia. The breakdown of voting by decade also reveals that 24 percent of the total vote was cast by members of classes from 1970 to 1979. The second largest block was from the 1980s with 21 percent and the third largest from the 1960s with 19 percent. Only 10 percent of the total vote was cast by alumni who graduated prior to 1940."

Marshall Acuff '62, president of the Society, reported on the Society's accomplishments of the past year. In the area of alumni chapters, he mentioned the growth of the chapter network with eight new chapters being established around the country.

Alumni programs, noted Acuff, have also shown tremendous strides with this year's Alumni College, "Exploring the Chesapeake Bay," attracting the largest attendance to date.

Acuff included in his report updates on the Society's progress in other programs, such as the upcoming New York Auction Weekend; the class reunion program; enhancements to the Alumni Gazette and William and Mary Magazine; and new services being offered alumni such as insurance programs, the William and Mary credit card and an alumni directory to be published in 1991.

Also mentioned was the Society's leadership role in the Campaign for the Fourth Century with the identification of alumni volunteers and the development of plans for regional campaign celebrations nationwide. The campaign includes a planned expansion of the Alumni House to serve growing program needs and meet related space requirements for meetings and receptions for alumni and members of the College community.

In conclusion, Acuff stated: "Administratively the Society has never been in better shape to accept its leadership role on the campus and among the nearly 50,000 alumni. We are proud of the achievements to date but recognize that as we head into the 1990s the expectations of our alumni, the College and the board will be greater. I feel we are prepared to meet that challenge."

Following the adjournment of the Annual Meeting, alumni and friends enjoyed a festive evening at the Williamsburg Lodge where the all-alumni cocktail party preceded the Annual Dinner and Dance. In addition to other awards, the Alumni Medallion was presented to William A. Armbruster '57, R. Bradshaw Pulley '39 and L. Eldon James '34.

Sports Complex Honors Alan Miller, Anheuser-Busch

By Bob Jeffrey '74

It may be the busiest place on campus. The new student recreational sports complex behind William and Mary Hall has been open for business since September and most W&M students have gleefully plunged into its pool, shot hoops on the basketball court, or hoisted some barbells in the weight room.

The three-story brick edifice encompasses some 50,867 square feet of usable space, including three basketball courts, an eight-lane Olympic size swimming pool, six racquetball courts, two squash courts, and machine and free weight rooms stocked with $90,000 of state-of-the-art equipment. The center also contains offices for the recreational sports staff, locker rooms, showers, and storage areas. The price tag was $4.8 million and construction took two years.

According to Denny Byrne, director of recreational sports, between 800 and 1000 students are using the building every day. "The whole place is being heavily used, from the ping-pong tables in the lobby to the racquetball courts to the weight rooms," Byrne said.

Both the size and flexibility make the complex a godsend for the highly patronized student recreation program (formerly called intramurals). "The multiplicity of use is the key," said Byrne. "We can have two intramural basketball games going on, and still have another court available for open use. It allows us to serve more students at one time," he said.

In addition to recreational sports, the center houses physical education classes each morning and early afternoon. The thriving club sports program, which now includes some 21 separate activities, is administered from the recreation center.

The Student Recreation Center, as it is being called, was dedicated Friday, Nov. 3, as part of the Homecoming activities. The Alan B. Miller Gymnasium in the Center was also dedicated. The gymnasium was named in recognition of the contributions of Alan Miller '58 to the Campaign for the Fourth Century.

Miller is chairman and CEO of Universal Health Services Inc., an international hospital management company which owns 40 hospitals. He is also chairman and chief executive officer of Universal Health Realty Income Trust, a real estate investment trust.

As a student, Miller played varsity basketball and baseball. He received an M.B.A. from Wharton Graduate School of the University of Pennsylvania in 1960. Miller has lectured at the Harvard Business School and has served on the Advisory Board at the Temple University School of Business.

An active alumnus, he was a member of the Pre-Campaign Steering Committee for the Campaign for the Fourth Century. He currently serves on the executive and development committees of the College's Endowment Association.

Miller's continuing interest in student-athletics is reflected in his establishment of the Manuel Miller Memorial Endowment for scholarship assistance to basketball players and the Mary Miller Humanities Scholarship for scholarship assistance to students concentrating in the humanities. The scholarships are named for Miller's parents.

President Paul Verkuil, hosting the dedication ceremonies, said, "This beautiful building represents a major step forward in our commitment to a broad-based program in physical education and recreational opportunities for all William and Mary students.

The building is symbolic of the W&M pursuit of excellence in every area, whether in the classroom, or on the basketball courts or swimming laps after class. The ability to meet physical as well as mental challenges, whether they come from being a part of an intramural team or from individual initiatives, is every bit as important to the well-being and self-knowledge of our students as the pursuit of an undergraduate or graduate degree."

The student recreation center replaced George Preston President Verkuil reads from the dedication program at ceremonies for the new Anheuser-Busch field, which were held on Nov. 1. Pictured (l-r) are Dennis Silvis, plant manager, Owens Brockway; David Otey, Anheuser-Busch representative; Bill Martin, assistant plant manager, Williamsburg Brewery, Anheuser-Busch; Mel Bilbo, general manager, Busch Gardens; Harry Knight, vice president and general manager, Kingsmill Properties; Robert S. Blow Gymnasium, a physical education and athletic facility that had been in service since 1927. Blow is currently being renovated for multi-purpose classroom and office space.

On Nov. 1, the new Anheuser-Busch outdoor soccer stadium was formally dedicated prior to a contest between W&M and East Carolina. Located behind W&M Hall and adjacent to the Student Recreation Center and the tennis courts, the lighted astroturf mini-stadium has been recognized as one of the nation's 10 finest designs, according to Athletic Business Magazine.

Built with the help of contributions from the Anheuser-Busch Corporation and Owens-Illinois, the unique facility is the only stadium in the state designed specifically for soccer. The mini-stadium complex also includes an irrigated grass field next to the astroturf field, fixed seating for 2,700, and a computerized lighting system that makes night games possible.

President Verkuil recognized representatives from Anheuser-Busch and Owens-Illinois. "Together we have succeeded in creating one of the most advanced facilities of its kind in the country for varsity soccer. This complex is testimony to William and Mary's commitment to the student-athlete at all levels of competition, and to Anheuser-Busch and Owens-Illinois for their commitment to educational ideals of their Williamsburg neighbor."

Anheuser-Busch has been a generous supporter of William and Mary since beginning its operations in Williamsburg in 1971. Gifts to the College of William and Mary total over $1 million, and have supported many different areas of the university. Anheuser-Busch has funded College-directed archaeological and geological studies along the James River. It has provided support for faculty research fellowships. Gifts from the company funded the School of Business Administration's professional resource Center as well as a lecture series at the School.

Anheuser-Busch has also been a generous supporter of William and Mary's athletic program. Kingsmill-on-the-James, site of the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic, serves as the home course for the William and Mary golf team. Anheuser-Busch also provided funding for eight tennis courts on campus.

Like Anheuser-Busch, Owens-Illinois and its subsidiary, Owens-Brockway Glass Containers Inc., have been loyal supporters of the College since the corporation first opened its plant in the Williamsburg area in 1980. Its generosity has enabled the College to obtain a Celestron 14 telescope for the Department of Physics. The company also has given unrestricted funds annually to assist William and Mary in meeting its most pressing needs.

The athletic department has benefited from Owens-Illinois' generosity as well. The company is a sponsor of the basketball program, sponsor of the Tribe Coach's shows, a patron of the Tribe Golf Classic, and patron of the William and Mary Pro-Am.

Enjoying the roast is Howard Scammon '34 (center) with Mrs. Julia Haak, widow of Al Haak of the theatre department, and the roast planner, John H. Brooks '67.

The Scammon Roast— Tears and Laughter

"Glory, glory what a summer, He hath smiled and bravely swallowed when the bugs flew down his throat," sang the alumni chorus as part of the new lyrics for "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," composed especially for the roast and in memory of "The Common Glory." Behind the singers is a bouquet of balloons, sent by Linda Lavin '59.

"Howard goes back, way, way back," said Anna Belle Koenig Nimmo '45, one of the roasters, who ribbed Scammon about the longevity of his career in theatre.

And how did it feel to be roasted? With a touch of the legendary Scammon wit he replied "I love being well done."

By Barbara Ball

How many cooks does it take to roast a Scammon?

There were lots of "toasters" and "roasters" on hand for the job on Nov. 4 in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall, home of the William and Mary Theatre.

Former students from as far away as Washington state came back for a special roast of Howard Scammon '34, professor of theatre emeritus, who was also grand marshal of the 1989 Homecoming Parade. Among those in the audience was Phyllis Logan Smoot '29 who appeared in "The Goose Hangs High," presented by the first theatre director, the late Althea Hunt. Throughout the evening laughter rang out as former students recalled the trials and triumphs of Scammon's career in theatre and his flamboyant style and sharp wit.

For many years Scammon was director of Paul Green's outdoor drama "The Common Glory," 18th century plays, and the modern "Showtimers" who performed in Williamsburg, so there were many memories of events outside the classroom as well as those within the curriculum to recall.

The festivities began at 7 p.m. with a champagne reception in the Dodge Room. The party overflowed into the front lobby of the theatre. The refreshments played second fiddle to the conversations and reunions that were just the beginning of a special homecoming for theatre students.

For Scammon it was a night to remember. Sitting on the front row, dressed in the familiar turtleneck and plaid pants, he good naturedly took the barbs as well as the bouquets. By the end of the evening, he was so moved he fought back his emotions to respond as roasters imitated a chorus line fanfare to bring him onto the stage. Any thought of getting out prepared notes was lost in the excitement of the moment, he said later.

And how did it feel to be roasted? With a touch of the legendary Scammon wit he replied "I love being well done." He chuckled too at the irony of someone who had only seen one football game throughout his entire college career being asked as grand marshal to flip the coin at the beginning of the football game.

Patty Hartleben Granville '66 (now with Dinner Theatre Inc., in Dallas) served as mistress of ceremonies for the evening. The roasters showed no mercy. It wasn't just a once over lightly. "But I couldn't refute anything," said Scammon. "I ducked my head when Frank Hankey '75 and Christopher Leeper '75 got up there," he admitted. They re-enacted a particular tense moment in class when Scammon's patience left him while trying vainly to impress a student with the need to bring emotion and vitality to his role.

Anna Belle Koenig Nimmo '45 recalled Howard's early years with "The Common Glory" and described how he sat "with his slouched hat and curled up shoulders looking intensely brilliant with that clipboard he had, writing, writing, writing—most people said it was really his laundry list.

"When he put it down, rolled back his eyes and walked off among the pine cones everyone, even Paul Green, knew it was back to the drawing boards," she said.

"Howard goes on just as Althea Hunt did, teaching us about that beautiful healing temple of dreams we call the theatre. We thank you. We are the lucky ones to have been in your circle," said Nimmo.

Bill Brooke '68 (Metropolitan Opera Company, New York) led an alumni choir in a special rendition of the Battle Hymn of the Republic in tribute to the "The Common Glory days" when actors put up with summer heat and "mosquitoes as big as vampire bats."

Mamie Ruth Hitchins '69, John Reese '62, (who now heads the drama department at Deerfield Academy, Mass.) and Peter Derks (William and Mary psychology professor) recreated their roles in the Glory. Reese remembered when Howard gave up his 1956 maroon and black Dodge for a stunning 1966 yellow Cadillac convertible with a black top, and Goldie Hawn was in "The Glory."

Peter Neufeld '58 (New York producer) told of an incident about 12 years ago when he was auditioning actors in New York. When Ralph Byers '71 stepped on stage he had a message for Neufeld from Scammon. "He wants you to remember," said Byers, "how nervous you were when you auditioned at William and Mary and to be kind to me today." In his "premeditated, outrageous" style, said Neufeld, "Howard was sending a message to me, not to take our work or ourselves too seriously, to be disciplined, to be grounded, to be open and accessible to anyone you run into throughout your career. I think you have done that and I thank you for it." Neufeld announced that over $100,000 has been raised for the Althea Hunt-Howard Scammon Endowment Fund. Proceeds from the roast were donated to this fund.

Pat Stoner '69 (who has a TV interview show on PBS) and Joyce Hill Stoner '68 (University of Delaware and Winterthur Museum) recalled the 1960s. Both helped produce the student musical, "Stop 13: The College of William and Mary." They sang a duet with special lyrics to the music of "Thanks for the Memories." Stoner had the audience laughing with a story about how he tried, without success, to finesse being five minutes late for a rehearsal. He ended on a more serious note recalling that Scammon had advised him: "Your job, as you go through life, is to notice things, to notice things about other people and notice things about yourself. If you ever go on stage you will draw on all of that and you'll be good. Even if you never use it, you'll be a better person."

"And we are all better people here tonight," added Stoner.

The era of the 1960s was represented with a dance interlude "Bach Study and Lunge Study" by Myra Kinch, Common Glory choreographer. The dancers were Heidi Robitshek, Maggie Collins and Karen Selby.

Jeffrey West '75, a New York actor who has just moved to Raleigh, N.C., recalled the theatre of the 70s.

"You coached the best out of every cast," sang Patty Hartleben to the strains of the theme song from "Mame." And then came Scammon's turn on stage. His former students had given him a hard act to follow.

Scammon recalled the kindnesses of many people throughout his career, including members of the theatre department he had worked with such as the late Al Haak who was well known for his masterful stage carpentry and his red hat.

He chose to express his sentiments with a quote from Emily's last speech in the play "Our Town."

"... Oh earth, too wonderful for anyone to realize. Do any human beings realize life while they live it?"

He closed with what became his traditional intermission plea for funds at performances of Shakespeare on Sunday evenings during the run of "The Common Glory."

"We're all fools and we are all endanger of destroying the world but the surest way to utter calm is to give. . . And that takes a little money. Money I've always felt, is like manure. It is not worth anything unless it is spread about encouraging young things to grow."

Last act on the program was an on-stage buffet to which the audience was invited. Scammon left for home just before 2 a.m. after helping to clean up.

Peter Derks (l), John Reese '62 (center) and Mamie Ruth Hitchins recall a comical scene from "The Common Glory" with Reese and Hitchins re-creating their original roles.

Tribe Season Looks to Youth

By Bob Jeffrey '74

There's good news and bad news. The good news is that William and Mary has some exciting young basketball players. The bad news is that you may have to keep a program handy until you learn the new names.

The Tribe's youth movement that started last season just got younger. After a second straight banner recruiting year, head coach Chuck Swenson is starting two freshmen and two sophomores, along with senior Curtis Pride.

After suffering through a 5-23 record last year, the Tribe mentor made a decision to go with the youngsters.

"This year we'll have more strength, more quickness and more talent," said Swenson. "We'll also be very young, so we're going to make some mistakes."

In the first week of the season at least, the youth movement looks like a step in the right directions. The Tribe struggled in its opener against NAIA foe St. Andrews, but rallied for a 66-59 win. Against Davidson, W&M trailed until the final two minutes but again triumphed, 80-79.

Constant, steady improvement has been the major theme for Swenson, now in his third season at William and Mary. "We're taking it one day at a time. Our focus is on improvement," said Swenson.

"Last year we shot only 42 percent from the floor, and we were outrebounded by three rebounds per game. This season we set a goal of shooting 50 percent and outrebounding our opponents. If we can show team improvement in these areas and in defensive transition, then the wins will come."

The clearest area of improvement has been in personnel. In each of the past two recruiting seasons Swenson has netted some excellent talent. These freshmen and sophomores form the bulk of this team's starting lineup.

Leading the way are exciting freshmen Thomas Roberts and Derrick Peters. Roberts, a 6'6", 205-pound forward, may be the team's most versatile players, according to Swenson.

"He can play inside or outside; he can defend a guard or a bigger guy," says Swenson. "He's going to be a good player in our league."

Roberts has already shown an impressive sampling of his skills. In the Davidson game, he poured in 23 points, including the game winning 12-footer with seven seconds remaining. Roberts canned 14 points in the opener against St. Andrews.

"We may be rushing his development a little, because we're in a situation where we need him," says Swenson, "but in the long run he's going to be a better player for it."

Peters, a 6'2", 280 pound guard, will also please Tribe fans. He can play at the point or shooting guard slots, and he brings quickness and athletic ability that will help in offensive and defensive transition. Peters high-jumped 6'8" to win the high school state championship.

Two of last season's phenoms return, a year older and wiser. Schot Smith, a 6'8", 235 pound center, made the Colonial Athletic Association All-Freshman team, averaging 10.4 points per game and shooting a team-leading 50.3 percent from the floor. After missing a month last year due to mononucleosis, Smith has regained 20 pounds and the ability to dominate on the inside.

Smith played one of his best games to date against Davidson, striking for 20 points, mostly from around the lane, and pulling down nine rebounds.

Sophomore forward Ben Blocker, at 6'6", 215, has the size and leaping ability to contribute at both ends of the floor. As a freshman he started 18 games and averaged 5.8 points and 5.1 rebounds. Against St. Andrews he scored six of his 14 points to lead a second-half rally that put the game out of reach.

Adding experience to all this youth, senior guard Curtis Pride is back at point guard. Named to the all-defensive CAA team in '88 and '89, Pride can also provide clutch offensive punch. Last season he nailed a last-second jumper to nip Navy and later sent another game against the Middies into overtime with a similar shot.

Pride's nemesis has been injuries. Sprained ankles and arthroscopic surgery on his right knee kept Pride out of all but 13 games for the Tribe last season. A healthy Pride will mean a happy Tribe this year.

But more than five players will see action. Swenson has vowed to get as many as 10 or 11 into the rotation. "We don't have enough talent to just show up and outscore anybody," he said. "It's going to take 10 players to beat some teams that have a more talented five. We'll try to make up for it by using our depth and defensive intensity."

First off the bench will be Jimmy Apple, a 6'2", 175 pound junior guard, who ignites the Tribe faithful with his long range sharpshooting. Apple is the leading returning scorer for W&M, at 13.3 points per game. He tossed in 41 three-pointers last season and his 86.2 percent from the free throw line led the CAA.

Apple is off to another good start this year, connecting for 19 in the St. Andrews game and 12 against Davidson.

"Jimmy's probably one of our five top players, but we start our best defensive five," says Swenson. "But Jimmy will be in there pretty quickly."

Key roles will be played also by junior center John Leone, junior forward Casey Potts, freshman point guard Brendan Connor and senior guard Matt O'Reilly.

"I've stressed that it doesn't matter who starts," said Swenson. "Those people who aren't starting know they have a vital role on our team."

Upperclassmen like O'Reilly, the team captain and last year's CAA leader in assists, know their roles are different on this team. "I may not get as many minutes as last year, but I'm trying to think about what's best for the team," said O'Reilly. "I'm trying to be a leader, helping out the younger players at practice, especially the guards."

That type of attitude personifies the improvement Swenson is seeking. "The kids have put in some hard work that will eventually come to fruition," said Swenson. "They stayed in shape over the summer, lifted weights to make themselves stronger, and they've practiced very hard. It's an indication of their commitment to improving themselves individually and collectively."

Tribe fans will enjoy the beefed-up home schedule, which includes games against Duke, Virginia Tech and CAA title contenders James Madison, George Mason, American and Richmond. After playing in the Music City Invitational tournament in late December, the Tribe has home games against Loyola (Jan. 3), American (Jan. 6), James Madison (Jan. 10), George Mason (Jan. 17), Duke (Jan. 22), UNC-Wilmington (Jan. 24), Richmond (Jan. 27), VMI (Feb. 5), Navy (Feb. 10) and East Carolina (Feb. 17). Away games include Navy (Jan. 13), East Carolina (Jan. 20), James Madison (Jan. 13), American (Feb. 3), Wake Forest (Feb. 13), George Mason (Feb. 15), UNC-Wilmington (Feb. 21) and Richmond (Feb. 24). The CAA tournament will be held in Richmond March 3-5.

Swenson

"This year we'll have more strength, more quickness and more talent," said Swenson.

Gridders Enjoy Banner Year

By Bob Jeffrey '74

It's been a year to remember for the William and Mary football team. Beginning in January with a 73-3 shelling of the Japanese All-Stars at the Japan Bowl in Osaka, the squad carried the momentum through an outstanding fall, then capped off the season with an appearance in the I-AA gridiron playoffs.

As a reward for its 8-2-1 regular season record and a number 10 national ranking, W&M drew an assignment against last season's national I-AA champion Furman at the Paladins' home field in Greenville, S.C. Furman, ranked number two nationally, lost only to Clemson, 30-0 in its season opener.

"It's a big challenge, and a big opportunity, getting to play the defending national champions," said head coach Jimmie Laycock '71.

The challenge proved a little too much, as the Paladins jumped out to a 17-0 lead in the first half. W&M fought back to cut the margin to 17-10 in the third quarter, but Furman prevailed, 24-10.

"Furman is obviously a very good team," Laycock said. "We had a chance to win the game, but we couldn't come up with the big play when we needed it."

Despite the loss, Laycock expressed pride in his players. "This doesn't detract at all from what we've accomplished this year," he said. "This is a team of overachievers, a team that just doesn't give up."

One thing the team didn't give up on was getting a shot at the I-AA playoffs. Before the 1988 season started, the players had opted to go to Japan for the special game, making them ineligible for I-AA post-season play that year. Ten months after the triumph in the Orient, the Tribe earned the berth in the "Sweet Sixteen" of I-AA's elite.

"Going to Japan was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity," said senior quarterback Craig Argo. "But this year going to the playoffs is a great experience."

"The team had an opportunity to represent the College in Japan, and then come back to have a very successful season," said Laycock. "It should give them a great sense of satisfaction," he said.

The Tribe finished the regular season in fine style, sweeping its final four contests and knocking off arch-rival Richmond, 22-10, to clinch the playoff spot. The only blemishes on the Tribe's ledger came on the road, at Citrus-Bowl bound Virginia, 23-12, at Villanova, another I-AA playoff contender, 20-17, and at Ivy League co-champ Princeton, 31-31.

W&M's 8-3-1 mark was the best since 1986, when the Tribe went 9-3 and earned its first visit the playoffs, losing 51-17 to Delaware.

Some might have been surprised at the first visit to the postseason, but this year the Tribe felt like it belonged. "In practice we were pointing to the playoffs," said Laycock.

Laycock recognized this year's senior class for the success. "The leadership of the seniors was crucial all season," he said.

"We always try to stress the opportunity to be a part of a winning tradition," Laycock said. "This group has helped contribute to that tradition."

The seniors on this year's team have fashioned a 29-16-2 record starting in 1986, the best four-year total since the legendary Rube McCray teams of 1945-48 racked up a 30-9-2 mark.

The 1989 edition of the Tribe is one of only seven in the long history of W&M football (since 1893) to win eight or more games in a season. Only the squads of 1986, 1947 (9-2) and 1942 (9-1-1) won more.

W&M displayed character throughout the season, coming from behind to notch six of eight victories. From the season opener against Colgate, when senior defensive tackle Vince Edwards' last minute quarterback sack ensured a 17-13 margin, the pattern was set.

The season had it all — hairbreath escapes, goal-line stands, chills and last minute thrills. Record-setting place kicker Steve Christie blasted a 53-yard field goal in the waning moments to nip Delaware, 27-24. Senior rover back Greg Kimball drove East Tennessee State running back Tony Searcy back from the five to the 14-yard-line to preserve a 34-28 win. And in perhaps the finest team effort of the season, offense and defense combined to turn a 21-10 halftime deficit against James Madison into a 23-21 victory.

This Tribe team overcame adversity and turned potentially devastating injuries into opportunities for new players to shine. When starting linebackers Brad Uhl and Kevin Forester did not recover from off-season knee operations in time, Mark Hughes and Jeff Nielsen stepped in to become the team's leading defensive stoppers. Quarterback Argo was lost for several games in mid-season and backup Chris Hakel came through, gaining valuable experience and successfully piloting the Tribe until Argo's return.

The continued success of Tribe football is in large measure a tribute to the firm hand of Laycock. Now in his 10th season at the helm, the former Tribe quarterback has coached W&M to winning records in six of the past seven years.

Laycock

"We always try to stress the opportunity to be a part of a winning tradition," Laycock said. "This group has helped contribute to that tradition."

On Saturday night, 250 theatre ticket-holders will be treated to a private reception in the Model Room at the New York Yacht Club hosted by Friends of the Library, followed by a performance of "Annie 2: Miss Hannigan's Revenge," produced by Peter Neufeld '58. William and Mary guests will be offered orchestra seating for only $55. The play is currently scheduled to open on March 1.

Proceeds from the sale of all auction items will go toward a fund established by the New York Alumni Chapter in 1984 and supplemented with revenue from two subsequent auctions. The gift officially will be presented to the College during its tercentenary celebration in 1993.

Those who cannot attend the events in New York City will have the option of purchasing the Auction catalog in advance for $4 and bidding for individual items by mail.

A few days after mailing the last report of the class of '28, I received a nice letter from Robert Randolph Jones of the Richmond law firm of Jones and Jones. He and his wife, Flo, had recently taken a lovely trip to the Panama Canal. They left Fort Lauderdale, stopped at a few islands and, after passing through the canal, went to Acapulco, then flew home. It was a trip he will remember with pleasure. He planned to be at Homecoming.

A much appreciated note from Mathilda Crawford Whitehouse '25 included interesting news of her sister and our classmate, Evelyn Crawford Cheney. They are living together in the Old Ordinary, a beautiful house owned by the Hingham (Mass.) Historical Society. Evelyn enjoys the American China (not the country) Students' Association. Mathilda's hobby is the Hingham Public Library where she works as a volunteer.

As this is being written before Homecoming, please look in the next report for a list of those present at the Olde Guarde luncheon. George Whitley regretted that he and his wife, Edna, would not be with us for the occasion. They were attending the 50th wedding anniversary of Edna's sister. They were missed as they are faithful in attending Olde Guarde functions.

It was sad to learn of the death of our classmates, Stewart Jones and Billie Shelton Harrison.

I urgently plead with each of you to send me some news.

Last April 12th's Olde Guarde Day was very well attended. The male members of our class in attendance were Harold Ashby, T.S.T. Dalton, Sam Hurley, Bill Savage and Ed Trice. Each was accompanied by his spouse. It was the first time Harold Ashby had been back to the College since graduation day. Now retired, he and his wife, Frances, live in Jacksonville, Fla. He and Bill Savage, both from the great Eastern Shore of Virginia, had a delightful time reminiscing.

Richard J. "Dick" Jones was planning to attend, but his wife, Ruth, fell and broke her right knee a few days before. We missed the two of you.

Recently, I talked by telephone to Fay "Pete" LeCompte and John Slaughter and both of them have been "under the weather." They are now recuperating.

In August at a Drewryville High School class reunion, I saw Thomas Pope, a member of our class who has been retired for a few years after a long career as a physician in Petersburg. He was quite sick in the early part of the year, but now is much improved. Thomas hopes to attend our 60th reunion on Olde Guarde Day next April. I might also mention that Thomas was the first person I ever knew from Drewryville, where I have resided since 1943.

Helen Nance Joyner has been ill recently, but is now feeling better. I see her about four times a year when we attend the retired teachers meeting in Franklin, Va. Helen was the first girl I met when I entered the College.

We extend our sympathy to the family of Swain Wu Wool, who died recently in New York City. The only Chinese member of our class, he was an easy-going, kind gentleman as well as a good student.

Classmates, take care of yourselves and begin making plans for attending our 60th reunion next spring. We will be given special recognition.

Brooks George reports that the Class of 1932 won the Class of 1925 trophy for the most outstanding increase in annual giving. The award was announced at the Society of the Alumni annual dinner-dance Homecoming weekend. This is a prestigious honor, and I know all of us are proud of our accomplishments and will continue to work for our College and support it in any way we can.

The Southside Alumni Chapter held its annual picnic in August, and we were delighted with the attendance. Anna K. Weatherford was there. We were glad to have Harriett Pittard Beale '34 as a new member. We had a great time talking about college days.

Something new has been added to the curriculum at the College. I heard from my grandson, Timothy Bradshaw, a sophomore, that he has been on a rock-climbing trip to Luray, Va. He is taking a course in rock climbing and is most excited about it.

Please send any news. I would like to hear from all of you.

Our class met its goal and presented a special gift to Earl Gregg Swem Library during the Olde Guarde luncheon on Friday of Homecoming weekend. We donated the 900th anniversary facsimile of the Domesday Book, a gift that we approved at our 50th reunion. The remaining money went into the endowment fund bringing the total book value to $55,000. We salute Emil O. Johnson for the success of this accomplishment.

Lillian Carmine Sterling has been touring the New England states with her daughter and family. She enjoyed Olde Guarde Day and our 55th reunion.

Many of you have not written about your retirement and family activities. Share the news, please! I am specially requesting the following to cooperate: Jim Warner, Lit Upshur, Dr. John Watson, Harry Spack, Anne Spratley, Ruth Sharrett, Ernest Horton and Winifred Hall.

On your next visit to the College, go by the alumni office and meet Virginia C.

Collins '77, director of alumni communications, Lee Foster, director of alumni affairs, and W. Barry Adams, executive vice president. They are devoted and doing an excellent job.

Do you still have your Colonial Re-Echo from our 50th reunion? Navy Cmdr. Wilbur Morton wants us to make some changes in his biography. Wilbur comments on what a superb job Mildred Albee Babb did in compiling all those facts for our bios, but he feels that in several places his record should be set straight. These are the changes: His graduation from U.S. Naval Postgraduate School was in 1948. He was an assistant planning officer of SACLAN. As assistant professor at East Tennessee University, he taught economics and money and banking. He is a life member of the Military Order of the World Wars and a member of Delta Sigma Pi. Wilbur has recently been busy with computer courses. He writes: "I haven't conquered the computer, but I can make use of it to balance my checkbook, make permanent records and write letters." He hoped to take a course this fall at Brevard Community College in Word Perfect, involving letter writing and other forms of communication.

Doris Johnson Hocott reports from California that she has sent a copy of The Great American Poetry Anthology, in which she has had a poem published, to Swem Library. When last I heard she was planning to attend the World of Poetry convention in Washington, at which she was to receive a 1989 Silver Poet Award.

Nancy Adams Hegeman is the only person I know who actually answers birthday cards! She comments that she has "not only step-great-grandchildren but step-step-grandchildren — figure that one out!" This past summer she attended her 55th high school class reunion in Dover, Del. A favorite teacher explained that he had assigned The Return of the Native by Thomas Hardy to her English class in order to make them think. "After I returned home, he sent me a theme I had written on that book that he had come across in a back file two days after Lawrence C. Becker, former professor of philosophy at Hollins College in Virginia, has been named professor of philosophy and William R. Kenan Jr. Professor of Humanities at William and Mary. Dr. Becker, who taught at Hollins from 1965 to 1989 and will remain an Honorary Fellow of Hollins, is editor-in-chief of Garland Publishing's forthcoming Encyclopedia of Ethics and an associate editor of the journal Ethics. He received his doctorate from the University of Chicago and is author of several books on ethics. Becker said what drew him to William and Mary was the long tradition of a strong program in philosophy.

T.C. Browne '66, has been appointed vice president and general manager of a newly formed Video Conferencing and Satellite Systems Division of Sony Corporation of America. Browne previously served as director of marketing and sales support for Private Satellite Network Inc. He also helped found US Sprint's video conferencing network. Earlier he held sales and management positions in the computer and data communications industries. Prior to his business career, Browne served as an aviator in the U.S. Navy for 10 years.

Members of the Class of 1940 are reminded of a special weekend—their 50th reunion celebration—being planned for May 12-14, 1990. The weekend promises to be a perfect time to remember the past and enjoy the present. Highlights include a welcome cocktail party, special campus tours, presentations of the class gift, a candlelight dinner/dance, induction into the Olde Guard and attending commencement exercises as a group, along with plenty of time throughout the weekend to visit with friends. Class members will receive further details from the class reunion committee after the first of the year.

the reunion. My son Daniel can't believe I could have written such an 'erudite' theme as that in high school, and to tell the truth I find it hard to believe, too!"

Did you realize that a classmate of ours, William Ralph VanBuren, is the donor of the VanBuren Band/Orchestra Room in the new Ewell Hall? What a splendid gift!

Bert Capps Sheeran called in October with some tidbits of news. Husband Bob has had a cornea transplant and is doing well. Their son is broadcasting all the College football games.

George Bunch's health is much improved, and he and Dede were expecting to be at Homecoming.

Bert quoted these words of wisdom for us: "Age is a state of mind. When you leave your dreams behind, then you're old." True! Thank you, Bert, for that and for being such a good representative of our class on campus. Bert plays tennis with gals much younger than her children and gives them tips. Way to go, Bert!

Virginia Wilson Halliday writes: "When we were in England this spring, John and I had the pleasure of visiting in Exeter Wendy Burrage, who spends each spring there and has a wonderful place to indulge her hobby of walking. It was great to be shown around by an expert." Thank you, Virginia.

Shortly after the last Gazette came out I received a delightful phone call from John Wavle from Cortland, N.Y. He was calling in response to the request of Jo Burpeau Reichel '39 for information concerning Charles Baltimore '39. John remembered him well and said he read of Charlie's death two years ago in the Gazette. Jo, I'm sorry to have this sad news to pass along to you. Forgive me for mislaying your address and replying to you via this column.

Anyway, I had a great conversation with John. He has four children—said he had a late start as he was in his 30s when he married. He hasn't gotten back for Homecoming, but hopes he can make our 50th reunion in May.

This is probably the last column before that big event, which is scheduled the weekend of May 11-13, 1990. (My next deadline is March 6 for the May issue and that's too late to plug this BIG occasion!) Dinny Wetter, whom Jack Garrett has asked to head the social committee, called a planning meeting Nov. 3 during Homecoming weekend, so the ball has started to roll. We'll all be hearing details from the Alumni Office, but right now mark your calendars for next May and start making plans to attend. The time is NOW—do not put off till tomorrow what you should do today! And we have to GO while the going is good!

In a welcome letter, Paul Kratzig of Goliad, Texas, says he went to Homecoming in 1986 and didn't see anyone he knew. I'm sorry you didn't get to our class hospitality room, Paul, for no doubt you would have seen several who knew you, including me.

Paul wanted to write me because he had recently learned that he was listed in the Episcopal Clerical Directory for 1988-89 as having "died on July 29, 1988." He goes on to say: "While it came somewhat of a shock to me, not knowing whether I was in heaven or hell, I pinched myself and found out that I responded to physical stimuli. Then I figured that if it is true, I should report another resurrection. While some may rejoice over the obituary, a few may be happy to know that I am very much alive and still fighting the good fight. At least my church pension fund continued with monthly regularity and my Social Security has not terminated. Unfortunately, my son cannot collect on my insurance based on this news. (We could have split!) He needs a certified death certificate. Sorry. Couldn't accommodate! If this is too long a communique from the resurrected, then I would like my college classmates, a number of whom may have gone into the Episcopal Church ministry, such as Alfred Alley, to know that I am very much alive and well."

That is indeed GOOD news, Paul! Do try and return for our 50th and I can promise you we'll have a ball.

The alumni chapter in Lancaster and Northumberland counties held a dinner meeting at Rappahannock Westminster-Canterbury on Oct. 23. I have the dubious honor of being vice president and was asked to organize the dinner. We had 88 reservations, the largest number for this, our third meeting. It was a happy occasion complete with a musical program from the College.

So, until May 11-13, 1990, all best wishes and let's have a record turnout!

With the coming of fall I have a little shower of news for you. Our well-traveled classmate Emalee Ewing Durbin writes of her June trip up the California coast with her husband. They stopped at Mecca, Calif., on their way to the Bay area where he used to work in a defense office. A warm and loving couple, they always manage to be on hand for celebrations of family and friends. Since June they've been enjoying special happenings around Corvallis. Sorry my space is limited and I can't share all of Emalee's wonderful adventures, which are truly amazing.

A surprise phone call from Tony Manzi a month or so ago brought news of yet another career change for him. Having been stage manager for many Broadway plays, such as "George M," "Hello, Dolly," and "I Love My Wife," he will appear in the spring as an actor in a revival that he has helped to update. So, if you are in New York City in May, look for Tony's name in lights!

Bette Smith Elliott has recently moved into a condo in Raleigh, a city where she's lived for many years.

Gerald S. Ostrow's accomplishments over the years have been given a full page in the JWB Circle. He settled in Pittsburgh in 1945 after having served as bomber pilot during World War II in England. He is past president of the Jewish Community Center of Pittsburgh and presently active in the campaign for a new building. Also he is chairman of the Liaison Committee of United Jewish Federation of Pittsburgh. He is active in the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, American Jewish Committee, Zionist Organization of America and B'nai B'rith. Gerald is another classmate who has given generously of his time to further the success of community organizations. A salute to all like him!

Since you will be receiving this issue of the Alumni Gazette around Christmas time, please give a thought to sending me some news in this season of remembering friends and earlier times. Happy Holidays!

To meet my deadline, this must be written just before our 45th Reunion. I'll give as much of a play-by-play account as possible in my next installment. Meanwhile, I have lots of news garnered through those reunion survey forms sent to all of us.

First of all, it was saddening to hear of the death of Buck Bradford '43, reported in a recent OWJ newsletter. He had many friends among us. May he rest in peace, and may light perpetual shine upon him. Remember his family in your prayers.

Marilyn Mill and John Entwisle both worked hard on all the preparations for Homecoming—many, many hours of committee work, negotiations, telephone calls and correspondence. All of us are in their debt.

Marian Ross Karrick, Arlington, Va., reports that she and her retired Marine Corps colonel husband, Samuel, are busy with trips to see three daughters and five grandchildren, camping and lots of church work. One of the families has recently returned from Norway, and so there have been good trips to Iceland and Oslo.

Sunny Trumbo Williams and Rolf divide their time between homes in Norfolk (when business calls), Sandbridge (summer), and Kingsmill, where so many others of our class now live. She continues to play winning tennis and to work for the Junior League. She and Rolf have just returned from a cruise to Italy and Yugoslavia on the sailing yacht Wind Spirit.

Dorothy Agurk Edmunds, Bellair, Fla., also works with the Junior League (in nearby Clearwater). She is active in the Pinellas County Historical Society, and was director of the Florida West Coast Art Center. With her contractor-realtor-insurer husband David, she has traveled to Japan, New Guinea, China and Australia. This fall, they will be in England and Scotland.

Mary Dilts Dixon, Olmstead Township, Ohio, and her husband, Robert, who enjoy travel, bridge, gardening and two granddaughters, have recently moved to a retirement community near Cleveland. With a golf course at the back door, they are taking golf lessons.

M. Louise Leath Kerch, Reisterstown, Md., has retired after serving for 33 years as a branch manager for the Enoch Pratt Free Library, Baltimore. Her husband Elmer is also retired.

Sally Snyder Vermilye, Alexandria, Va., has spent many years in the advertising business. Her daughter, Elizabeth Vermilye Miller, graduated from the College in 1974.

Art Reifeld, Roslyn Harbor, N.Y., has concentrated his charity interests on children and youth, serving as Little League commissioner and as benefactor and advocate for the Ronald McDonald House of Long Island. His interests are golf and travel.

After being on the "Missing Alumni" list, Margaret Brookes Woodward McNeil has come out of hiding to announce that she lives in Richmond. Daughter Brenda graduated from VCU (formerly the W&M Norfolk Division), and daughter Rheta Woodward Daniel came to W&M for both undergraduate and law degrees ('73 & '77). In turn, her son, L. Russell Daniel Jr., and daughter-in-law, Cindy Budinger Daniel, received W&M degrees in 1986. A three-generation College family!

Emma Anne Smith Goldston is a physician specializing in pediatrics and public health at the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn. She and her husband Edgar, a consultant-internist at Mayo, spend summer vacations at their second home in Virginia Beach, where they will retire in one or two years.

Prickett Carter Sanders and James, her Monsanto Co. chemist husband, have retired to Pensacola, Fla., after many years in St. Louis. And... they are getting ready to build in Williamsburg. In Pensacola, she's busy with YMCA, church, symphony, the Art Center, etc.

Marjorie Retzke and Wayne Gibbs report from Fort Myers, Fla., that they have been much involved in explorations by travel-trailer both in the U.S. (all 50 states) and overseas (New Zealand, Australia, Fiji, Japan, Hong Kong, Scandinavia, Germany, Netherlands, Finland and the United Kingdom).

Peggy Horn Booth, Kensington, Conn., and her husband, Warren, have seven grandchildren whom they visit as often as possible. She is active in her church both in leadership/administration and also in charitable work. She works with the American

CUMMINGS FUND GIVES COLLEGE $300,000

The Frances L. and Edwin L. Cummings Memorial Fund of New York City has made a grant of $300,000 to William and Mary, including $200,000 that will be added to the Frances L. and Edwin L. Cummings Professorship Endowment, which was established by the Cummings Fund in 1986. Income from this endowment is used to attract and retain distinguished minority scholar-teachers in the arts and sciences. Currently, Joanne M. Braxton, professor of English, and John H. Stanfield, professor of American studies and sociology, hold Cummings Professorships at William and Mary. The remaining $100,000 will be used to establish the Frances L. and Edwin L. Cummings Minority Undergraduate Research Support Fund in the Sciences. The fund will support summer stipends, equipment, materials and associated expenses for one or more minority students in the sciences.

ENGLISH PROFESSORS PUBLISH BOOKS

Two members of the English department faculty have published books recently. Esther Lanigan Stineman, assistant professor of English, is author of a biography, Mary Austin: Song of a Maverick, published by the Yale University Press. Joanne M. Braxton, Francis L. and Edwin L. Cummings Professor of American Studies and associate professor of English, is the author of Black Women Writing Autobiography: A Tradition Within a Tradition, published by Temple University Press. She is also co-editor with Andree Nicola McLaughlin of Wild Women in the Whirlwind: Afro-American Culture and the Contemporary Literary Renaissance, published by Rutgers University Press.

Association of University Women and has served for many years as treasurer of the AAUW stock club.

Ann "Tex" May, Amherst, Mass., whose husband George served as treasurer for Amherst Historical Society, owns Bouquets By Ann May, a small business in dried flower arrangements. She and her husband have enjoyed traveling with Amherst Alumni trips. The last was a cruise down the Danube.

Ellie Dumper Singer and her husband William, a retired textile executive, live in Garden City, N.Y., where she has worked with the Long Island Panhellenic Society, the Garden City Community Church, and has been the co-chairperson of Senior Citizens for the last seven years.

Becky Koehler Hilbert and her husband Bertram, live in Allentown, Pa., where they have been active in their Presbyterian Church choir. She was an elementary school classroom teacher for more than 20 years. She has served the Parkland Community Library, the AAUW, and takes a special interest in the food bank and other efforts to feed the hungry. At vacation periods they travel — Alaska, Caribbean and the U.S.

Keep those letters and postcards coming.

As we go to press for this newsletter, I have been reminded by the Alumni Office that this will be the last communique of this decade — doesn't that sound ominous?

A most interesting and informative letter from Sue Claypool Vukich tells of her recent retirement as national president of her professional society at the American Hospital Association. However, she says she shows no signs of withdrawal as she is serving on one national committee this year and has been invited to be a member of a national health systems delegation that was slated to go to the People's Republic of China this fall. Because of the developments there, that plan had to be scuttled and the group expected to go to Russia instead.

It is the first time that a director of volunteer services has been asked to be a part of such a team, which is part of a people-to-people citizen ambassador program. Although Sue plans to "retire" in 1991, we have our doubts. The good news is that both she and her husband are looking forward to being with us for our 45th!

A note from Cecy Waddell Cunningham brings news of her 4-month-old grandson and of their many travels to visit children and friends. She and Scotty drive to Florida frequently to spend time in their condo where she says it is cooler than Gloucester in the summertime. She had a card from Monie Price, who is still in Richmond and very active in Alpha Chi alumni affairs.

Roy and Ann Singer Baner came east on a two-month vacation and visited all their old haunts in Waukegan, Chicago, New York. They ultimately reached Stamford, Conn., where they visited their son Dick and family, who recently moved there from the west. While Ann didn't get to Williamsburg on this trip, she promises that she and Roy will be on hand for our next reunion.

Just after submitting my last column in which I had a short note on Pam Pauly Chinnis (gleaned from Grubie Williams), I had a nice long letter from Pam in which she told of her interesting and active life in the work of the Episcopal Church.

Since it is so fascinating I would like to share parts of it with you: Pam is the lay delegate from the Episcopal Church in the U.S. to the Anglican Consultative Council, which is a body of representatives from all the churches in the Anglican Communion under the Presidency of the Archbishop of Canterbury. There is a nine-member executive committee of this group on which Pam serves and which met in Cyprus with the Primates, or heads of each of the 27 autonomous churches, in the spring. Pam played an active role and also enjoyed seeing the environs of Cyprus.

"Church polity is quite complicated," Pam writes, "but my involvement with the Worldwide Anglican Communion as well as with the national Episcopal church has taken me to exciting places, including South Africa to testify for Archbishop Desmond Tutu, Tokyo, Singapore, Guatemala, and the Lambeth Conference in Canterbury last summer."

Pam has been twice elected vice president of the House of Deputies of the Episcopal Church in America and as such is the highest ranking lay person in the Church in America! Recently she preached the sermon at the Washington National Cathedral as a lay person to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the United Thank Offering of the Women. Pam has spearheaded the recognition of women in the church.

Grubie writes that she was present to hear Pam preach and was moved to tears as Pam proceeded down the aisle and delivered her memorable sermon.

Pam's children are nearby — her son Cabell is a tax lawyer in Washington and her daughter Ann is an emergency room doctor in Rappahannock General Hospital in Kilmarnock, Va. She and her mother recently spent the summer with her cousin Ann Vineyard Roach in Memphis and with Ann's mother, who will celebrate her 100th birthday in January.

Grubie writes that she is involved with wedding plans for her daughter, Nancy, who will be married in November in Chevy Chase. With her three sons already married, this is the last of the bunch and she hopes then to find some new pursuits for herself.

Have a wonderful holiday season and how about sending a little news on a Christmas card to help me get the next decade off to a good start?

48 Lucy Jones Murphy P.O. Box 58 Merry Point, VA 22513

Our '48 newsletter inadvertently failed to appear in the last "even year" Alumni Gazette, and this has left me in a state of confusion that is even greater than usual. Word came before the printing of this previous Gazette that some of us thought to be dead or missing are actually alive and well in places like Georgia and Canada. After my letter did not appear last time, two people phoned to see if I were dead! Then, too, I have wondered and wondered what I said — or intended to say — about Howie Hyle and God and Coca-Cola. Three thoughts emerge: Keep a photocopy. This letter is going to be longer than usual. And I am sorry!

Several big events have taken place since my last communication. First and foremost, a letter, dated May 11, from Jay McQuat Hyle, who wrote that, like Mark Twain, reports of her death are highly exaggerated. Jay has lived in Stone Mountain, GA 30083 (1055 Mariner's Court) for the past nine years and leads a busy life there near her daughter, son-in-law and two grandsons. She is involved in Little League, choir, Welcome Wagon and lots of bridge.

Jay was disappointed to have missed our 40th reunion last fall. She has written to the Alumni Office requesting a retraction of the report of her death. I cannot tell you, Jay, how happy we all are to know that you are alive and well in Georgia and hope that you were able to attend Homecoming this year. It should be a special one just for you!

Jay also wrote that her brother-in-law, Howie Hyle, has retired from Coca-Cola but still works as a consultant, traveling four to six weeks at a time.

Notes from both Ed Griffin and Fritz

Zepht confirm that Libby (Gilliam) and Bren Macken are no longer among the missing. They live at 85 Carrington Drive, Richmond Hill, Ontario L7C7Y1. Fritz lives at 19950 Frazier Drive, Rocky River, OH 44116.

Other members of our class who are unlocated are: Bob DeForest, Carolyn Beach, Mary (Clary) Wood, Patty (Planck) Price, Sara (Fowkles) Oliver, Charlie Sokol, Barbara Latta, Pris Leggett, Leroy Balderson Jr., Edward Buxton, William J. Council and Bob Piefke. If anyone knows where any of these classmates are, please let me know.

After Jay's letter, a second big event was a William and Mary weekend at the Boar's Head Inn in Charlottesville for the William and Mary-Virginia football game Sept. 30. Prepared by Mary Babb Savage of International Travel in Norfolk, the weekend package included our accommodations, a cocktail party, golf at Farmington and Wintergreen, and the game Saturday night. Of the 30 in our group, those from our class were Henry and Shu (Struse) Shook, Knox and Betty (Brann) Ramsey, Mel and Carole (Achenbach) Wright, and Bill and me. There were many "old grads" at the

SHRIVER APPOINTED GEORGIA OPTIMIST GOVERNOR

The Georgia District of Optimist International has installed Mark O. Shriver IV '71 as governor. In this position, Shriver will oversee the operation and growth of 122 Optimist clubs charged with serving the youth of their communities. A member of the Canton Optimist Club since 1981, he served as president during 1983-84 and was the zone's lieutenant governor for 1984-85. A partner in the law firm of Shriver and Earl, Shriver holds law and business degrees from Emory University. During his years in Atlanta he has served as president of the Georgia Alumni Chapter, coordinator for the Alumni Admissions Network and vice president of the Atlanta chapter of the Athletic Educational Foundation. Shriver is married to Dr. Patricia S. McKay; they have five children.

DAVIS RECEIVES S.G. SMITH MEMORIAL MEDAL

Hawthorne A. Davis '59, a research associate in the fibers department of the Du Pont Co. in Wilmington, Del., received the S.G. Smith Memorial Medal from the Council of the Textile Institute in Nottingham, U.K. The award recognizes Davis for his outstanding contributions and devotion to the advancement of scientific knowledge concerning the physical and structural properties of fibers. Davis joined the Du Pont Company in 1962. After graduating from the College in 1959, he earned his M.S. and Ph.D. in physics from the University of Virginia. He and his wife, Norma, reside in Hockessin, Del., and have four children.

Boar's Head with just a sprinkling of "You-vey" spouses and friends, and the whole weekend was lots of fun. Even though we lost the game by 12 points, the Indians played well against a superior force, and it was exciting all the way.

A third big event took place on Oct. 23 when the newly organized Lower Northern Neck Alumni Chapter held a dinner meeting. We have many alumni here, and our class is well represented by the Ramseys, the Wrights, the Buddy Clarkes and others. Carole and Mel Wright have attracted many visits of classmates, especially for their wedding reception last May — including the Jack Clouds, the Buddy Lexes, the Joe Giordanos, to mention a few. Jo (Wattles) Spencer and her husband visited here in late October.

In the more recent news category, Shirley (Sprague) Thompson writes that in June they will be leaving Phillips Academy, where they have been for the past 39 years, for Season's Trace in Williamsburg. They will be in Williamsburg for six months each year and in New Hampshire six months (June to November).

Just today a news clipping came to me announcing that Frederick '48 and Lucy S. Herman '47, longtime benefactors of the Muscarelle Museum of Art at the College, will give an important collection of artwork to the museum. The collection of native American art consists primarily of Inuit drawings, but will also include drawings by Aleuts (American Eskimos), Inuit carvings, Northwest Coast Indian drawings and carvings, as well as other material from Central America.

Many of you will be interested in news of a member of our class renowned in the tennis world. A many-time champion, Tut Bartzan, men's varsity tennis coach since 1974 and director of tennis since 1976 at Texas Christian University, is one of the best known and most respected men in the world of tennis. At William and Mary, he was undefeated in 50 consecutive singles matches before he graduated, and twice led the Indians to NCAA titles.

In 1953 he broke into the Top Ten of the nation's singles players and remained there nine straight years until turning pro. In 1961 Tut won the men's National Clay Court title for the fourth time, a feat equaled only by Bill Tilden and Frank Parker. He represented the U.S. in 15 Davis Cup matches, never losing. He received the 1959 Johnston Award, given annually at the U.S. Open for the greatest contribution to the development of tennis and good sportsmanship. He has twice been Pro of the Year in Texas.

In 1977 the Bartzans were named Texas Tennis Family of the Year. In 1982 Tut was named I.T.C.A.-Wilson College Coach of the Year. In 1981, he was named Dallas All-Sports Coach of the Year. The Bartzans have four children, three boys and a girl, all of whom play great tennis, as you may have guessed!

The foregoing information came from the Mary Potishman Lard Tennis Center, Texas Christian University, Fort Worth.

Jeanne Payne Lewis writes that she has lived in Columbia, Mo., since 1952. She married Ray Lewis, who is a lawyer there, and has three children, all of whom returned to Virginia for college, one to William and Mary, two to U.Va. Jeanne taught school for a few years, but her chief career has been homemaking, with lots of volunteer work for the schools.

From the Richmond News Leader of Aug. 7, 1989: "Dr. Edward E. Brickell, after a year on the job at Eastern Virginia Medical School, is receiving high marks and little sniping in an academic setting that often produces cynicism and disaffection. Dr. Brickell took over as interim president of the Medical College of Hampton Roads, which oversees the medical school, on Aug. 1, 1988." It adds that he went into a situation of shaky finances, low faculty morale, and an administration in flux. Some other glowing words from the article. . . "open, accessible and active. . . has brought respect and accountability to the president's office. . . when he sees excellence he rewards excellence. . . has faculty lunches every three weeks, has made the rounds with some physicians and has visited the basic scientists. . . has done a good job reorganizing and streamlining the administrative structure."

We are still struggling through grief, of course. Adding to it, my mother died March 21, 17 weeks after our daughter Betsy. Jamie, Betsy's identical twin, by May had recovered well physically from the car accident they experienced in November 1988. She is at Phillips University in Enid, Okla., managing very well with her studies.

I'm glad to do this class reporter job for you folks, but it is discouraging to receive no information for the column. Could you please make some efforts to write me? Perhaps each area alumni group could have a person appointed to gather news at meetings and send it to me?

As I write this column, the leaves have turned (though not as brilliantly as usual) the temperature has dropped and Homecoming is two weeks away. How exciting it is to think of seeing so many of you at our 35th reunion!

No notes have come from any of you for the past several months, so I hope you were well stocked with news at Homecoming.

The Alumni Office asks that I let you all know that Jack Place is alive, well and living in Roanoke, in spite of an "unconfirmed deceased" notation in the June Gazette! Jack wrote a humorous letter, part of which was printed in the August issue of the Gazette. It was too good to waste so I will give you another excerpt:

"To those recipients of the Gazette who are prone to read its 'obits' and might have momentarily mourned or even remembered me, I really do appreciate all the kind thoughts, however fleeting. Hopefully, however, you can understand my reticence in offering to extend to the Gazette the extreme degree of cooperation which would be required to make its June 1989 obituaries totally accurate."

Thank you, classmates, who took time to complete your reunion survey forms. I have pulled three individuals at random to give you an update:

David Bergesen is an Episcopal priest, serving as a missionary in Quito, Ecuador. His wife, Victoria, also a missionary, serves as director of congregational education. They have two sons, Alf Robert and David John, ages 15 and 13.

Cary Greene has been a special education teacher in Chesterfield County schools for 25 years. Her husband, Frank, is a research chemist with Philip Morris Inc. and they have three grown children, Kevin, Lori and Terri.

Ronald Eisner is a physician specializing in anesthesiology at the Kaiser Foundation Hospital in Oakland, Calif. He is single and lists "history" as his hobby.

Our youngest daughter, Ann Morgan, was married in June. How good to have tuitions and weddings in the past! Travel is next on our agenda.

Let me hear from you.

56 Mary W. Warren R.D. 1, Box 945 White Stone, VA 22578

The day after my last report went into the mail, a cheerful note came from Pat Best Rainey. She'd just gotten home following Richard's graduation from M.I.T. and his wedding, five days later. After that, she and Russ seemed to ricochet from place to place, making stops in Washington and Annapolis, home to Marco Beach and back to D.C. On the latter trip to Washington, she represented her Florida area at the American Association of University Women convention. Hope your summer calmed down, at least a bit.

Jo Ann McLearn Smith sailed through this part of the world in June, along with her handsome son-in-law. It was just a glimpse, but certainly a pleasure.

Anne Pope Kitchen scooted through the Tides Inn lobby in early September. She's just as bubbly as ever.

News of George A. McDaniel's appointment as community affairs officer for the Virginia Department of Transportation's Salem district came in July. He'll serve as liaison with the news media, elected officials, civic and community leaders in the 12-county, five-city area of the district. They got a good man for the job.

Judge William L. Person's proud mom visited the inn somewhere along the line. It was fun sharing her enthusiasm over "Billy's" splendid career.

John V. Bowyer, M.D., has been selected to appear in the 19th Edition of Who's Who In California. He is currently a senior cardiologist and associate in the Regional Cardiac Catheterization Lab of the Southern California Permanente Medical Group. John was recognized for "outstanding professional achievement, superior leadership and exceptional service."

58 Peter Neufeld 410 W. 53rd St., Apt. 132 New York, NY 10019

A lot of news from brand new grandmother Melissa Smith Fitzgerald. (Grandchild or not, as far as I'm concerned she's still Melissa.) Her youngest is living with her in Reston, Va., since his graduation from VMI. She has a matched set of those sons. Four to be exact. Plus one daughter.

Paula Heslin flew in from Oregon to drive with Melissa to Wise, Va., to see Carol Sue Williams and husband Sam. Those Wise residents (no pun intended — honest) are very much involved dealing with environmental issues — recycling, landfill, etc. On her way home Melissa stopped off to see Bev Wilson Palmer, who is finishing up a book on Charles Sumner's letters. (No, the other one.) She recently went to an alumni wine and cheese tasting event at the Folger Shakespeare Library in D.C. with Bud Mooney and ran into Joann Abbott '56 and Bobbie Ramsey there.

Muffie Funk recently was married in Geneva, Switzerland, to Dick Scully. Back home she had a gourmet evening. Among the guests? Melissa! Lady gets around.

Diana Jacobs Kalman '59, just took a course in Florentine cooking. Gave the details of it over an Italian lunch to one of our classmates. Initials — MSF.

Speaking of Paula Heslin Nelson, I got a great letter from her. One quote from her letter talking about the pleasure of our 30th Homecoming last year — "I guess we're at that certain age when seeing others who 'knew us when' becomes pretty significant." I couldn't agree more. I've said to many of you I know that I figure I did my dumbest stuff when we were all together. There is a

MAHONEY NAMED DIRECTOR OF EMPLOYEE BENEFITS

Irene J. Mahoney '82 M.B.A. has been named director of employee benefits by Reynolds Metals Co. in Richmond. Ms. Mahoney joined Reynolds in 1986 as a manager of pensions, life and savings plans. Previously, she was a pensions savings plan administrator for BASF Corp. and was senior compensation analyst for Newport News Shipbuilding. Ms. Mahoney earned an undergraduate degree in mathematics from the State University of New York. She holds the Associate designation in the Society of Actuaries.

STAGE PROMOTED TO VICE PRESIDENT

Brian C. Stage '74 has been promoted to vice president, director of sales and marketing for Inn America Management Corp. in Braintree, Mass. Stage joined Inn America in February 1987 as an operations manager, was promoted to area director of operations in August 1987, and a year later was named corporate director of sales and marketing. Inn America currently manages nearly 4,000 rooms at 18 hotels and resorts in eight states. Stage was previously general manager of Sheraton Boston Hotel and Towers. He lives in Weymouth, Mass., with his wife, Debra, and son David.

comfort having people in your life for 30 or more years who have seen you at what you consider your worst and still elect to be a part of it.

Friend was doing a tour of "King & I" which I wanted to see him in. I looked at the tour schedule and saw they were playing Memphis. I decided to go there so I could see Ann Walker Elliott and husband Rod '57. We had dinner and went to show together. Drinks beforehand in a terrific restored hotel — the Peabody. Rod wanted me to see a parade of six ducks which are marched into the center fountain at 11 a.m. and marched out again at 4 p.m. People come from miles. Initially I went to their home. A great reason for living far from New York. Ask Rod yourself about his framed pictures of John Wayne. I'm not going into it.

Got a call from Roland Harris, who with his wife Betty Campbell has spent the last 30 years living contentedly in Glen Allen, Va. Their son was to get married five days after our talk, but Roland seemed fairly calm. Their daughter, who is currently teaching dance in Brooklyn, graduated from Radford College and continued her education at LaBonne Center in London before settling — for now — in New York. Roland also mentioned that William Raymond Hicks is living and teaching in Alexandria.

Had a party in NYC in September. The W&Mers there were Harry Cornell and wife Janet, Bob Thomas and Lynda McCray Thomas '60, David Little and wife Susan, Walt Leyland and wife Shirley, Linda Lavin '59 and husband Kip Niven. Also, Tony Wilson, who had the great sense to marry Elaine. Tom Lightner was in a foreign country and Del Wilson '59 had to cancel out at last minute.

Rumor has it that Del Wilson's fraternity brother Rick Asals '59 has written a biography of Flannery O'Connor. Rick, is this true?

I can't figure out if Ginny Fleshman Gada and Preston only travel, or if they've taken two vacations. In July I told you they were in Vienna. Well, in September Ginny told me they were on a photographic safari of Zimbabwe and Botswana. They were going to spend the last few days of their vacation in Cape Town and then ride the Blue Train. Don't we want to know how many days in total? My count is 142.

Bill Mitchell is a graduate of both W&M and Monroe Third. (It's debatable which degree is the harder to get.) I had a good talk with him on the phone. Has lived in West Chester, Pa., since 1970. He married Leslie McKenney '65, and has two boys, 14 and 16. He was at the Villanova-W&M game this fall and has a message for a past roommate — and I quote — "I want to ask Tom, sorry, General Lightner, if he can find a soft berth for my sons in the military."

Ellie House Pemberton has been going through Prague, Vienna, Budapest, Belgrade and Dubrovnik. When she's home in Atlanta she works at the Atlanta-Fulton Public Library.

Had a talk with Clare Vincent, who is associate curator of European art at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in NYC.

I was really disappointed when I walked into my office the other day and found a note waiting there from John Pforr '60 who had dropped in. I didn't get to see him, but he said he'd be at Homecoming.

I think we need different things to write in about. Have you noticed how much of the information is never about us? It's about the children, the trips, the jobs — and the children. How about sharing how our ideas are changing, or new interests and goals developing in our lives. Pretend it's sophomore year, midnight in a corner room in Monroe or Chandler. Melissa is talking to Paula, Bob to Neil. Take that thought. Pretend you're writing to just one of those people you grew up with — and send it in. So it's dangerous. So what.

Two of you responded to my request last time. The rest of you I still expect to hear from, but this time I'm asking for letters or calls from Bill Althans, Frank Elliott, Betty and Sid Pauls, Patsy Clark, Rusty Dietrich and Don Dew. Come on now.

There's a saying in the theatre that only your worst enemy should be sent out of town with a pre-Broadway musical. Well, I'll be at the Kennedy Center in D.C. most of December and January with "Annie 2 — Miss Hannigan's Revenge." If you see anyone staggering around the bars in Georgetown at midnight — yes, it's me. Pray.

William Piotrowski has been awarded NASA's Exceptional Performance Award for his work on the development and launch of the Magellan Venus Radar Mapping Satellite Program. Bill lives in Annandale, Va., with his wife, Carolyn. In his free time he enjoys woodworking, growing English boxwoods, and watching college basketball.

Nick St. George is president of Oakwood Homes in Greensboro, N.C.

The South Carolina House of Representatives honored Robert W. Squatriglia in June with a resolution for his work as district governor for Rotary International. His wife, Betty, is a real estate sales associate with Coldwell Banker — J. E. Burroughs Realty in Conway, S.C.

On the weekend of Oct. 7, some Gamma Phi got together for their annual trip to Williamsburg! Judi Lownes and Ken, Peggy Haines and Barry, Janet Elling and Mike, Carole and Jerry '59 Welborn and I enjoyed another close W&M win over Delaware. We have already made reservations to stay at Market Square Tavern next year for Homecoming. So if anyone would like to join us, please make your reservations. It would be great to fill up the tavern with alums!

"The Best of Times" proved to be a prophetic slogan for our 25th Reunion Homecoming Weekend. There was an enormous turnout, the weather was beautiful, the football team won, the dinner/dance was successful, the band was great, and everyone agreed that the class committee had done an excellent job in organizing all the events.

To begin: the nametags had our senior yearbook pictures on them, which while demoralizing, was very helpful and fun. I began my weekend in the class hospitality suite which was packed all weekend and superbly run by Bruce Titus and Kay Bonner Drews (who rose at 5:30 a.m. to get the breakfast fare ready!) Bruce is a partner in the litigation department of the McLean, Va., office of Venable, Baetger and Howard. He is on the board of directors of the Law School Association at the College. He was there with his wife and daughter, a high school sophomore.

Kay Bonner Drew is an attorney for the comptroller of the Navy at the Pentagon. She and Ken live in McLean, Va., and have a son Devon, 21, and a daughter Dana, 19.

It was fun to see Janet Fohs Lynn who was reunited with her roommate, Marcia Eaton. Marcia had flown to Roanoke, Va., from her home in Kattskill Bay, N.Y., and they had driven to Williamsburg together. Janet teaches special education in junior high school and Wally works for Wang. Janet and Wally have two children, Trey, a freshman at East Carolina and Sharon, a junior in high school. Marcia made a career change from teaching to social work. She has also done volunteer work for years with a hospice and with literacy and also works with a skating club and dance theatre.

I recognized Margaret (Maggie) Overman in the elevator. She lives in Poquoson, Va., is manager of the Physician Outpatient Department in the Williamsburg Community Hospital and is a cyto-technologist. Maggie married G. Curtis Overman '63, and they have two children, Curt III, who graduated from the College in 1989, and Bryan, 17, a senior at Poquoson High School.

Bob Joynt and his wife were there, but had to leave on Saturday to attend the reunion dance and celebration of the 50th anniversary of Granby High School in Norfolk. Many of the Norfolk William and Mary students of the 60s were Granby graduates.

Dick Kern and Sharon (Cosminsky) '66 came from Greensboro, N.C. In July Dick was made president of Central Carolinas Warehouses Inc. Their sons are Scott, 20, and Michael, 16.

The Kerns were chatting with Bruce Taggart who lives in Reston, Va. Bruce has really put his physics major to use. He is a manager in the advanced technology division of BDM International, a division of Ford Aerospace. This year he is on loan to the National Science Foundation and also teaches at the University of Maryland. He is presently single.

Jerry Gimmel is married and has three children, his oldest daughter being a senior at the College. Jerry lives in Gaithersburg, Md., and is a managing partner in the 12-attorney law firm, Gimmel, Weiman & Savitz in Gaithersburg and Potomac, Md.

Betty Smith Krikorian lives in Belmont, Mass. She is associate director of the Morin Center for Banking Law Studies at the Boston University School of Law. She has just published a book on fiduciary standards. Betty is married and has two boys, one a freshman at Boston University; the other is 9.

Greg Presnell was reliving old times with Dick Thomasson. Greg lives in Orlando, Fla., and is chairman of the Litigation Department of Akerman, Senterfitt & Edison, specializing in commercial litigation. He has three sons and his second wife Cecelia is also an attorney.

Dick Thomasson now lives in San Diego, Calif., and runs the Abbey Restaurant, which is in a historical restored church. Dick lived in Atlanta for many years, practicing law, and developing real estate. He has three children, Scott, 13; Katie, 11 and Brad, 9. He was divorced in 1984.

Blake Newton and his wife Belle were there from New York City. Blake is a lawyer with Hall, McNicol, Hamilton and Clark, specializing in corporate, securities and general commercial law. Blake and Belle have a 2-year-old son.

Dick Goodwin is divorced and has two boys, 16 and 14. He lives in Annapolis and is self-employed in a private law practice. Dick is very active in many community activities and worked on our reunion committee.

I saw Dick Carling and Charlie Weaver from across the room. Dick is in Roanoke with Dominion Bankshares Corp. Charlie is in Frenchtown, N.J., at the Delaware Valley Regional High School. I also saw Jim Bjorkhom who is with the Central Adjustment Bureau in Nashville.

Steve Mosier is director of research administration at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. He and his wife, Priscilla, have been married for 25 years and have two children who are in college.

Peggy Brown McMaster and Leonard were celebrating their 27th wedding anniversary! They live in Williamsburg, and Peg is principal of Waller Hill School, an elementary school in York County. Len is a Walter T. Anicka of Williamsburg and Naples, Fla., has given two life income trust funds valued at $595,000 to William and Mary to support need-based scholarships. A life income trust is held in trust by the College, with the donor receiving income from the trust during his or her lifetime. As part of the $150 million Campaign for the Fourth Century, William and Mary is seeking a total of $10 million for need-based scholarships. "We would like to be able to enroll all qualified students, regardless of their financial resources. To do this, we must rely increasingly on private funds," said Edward P. Irish, director of financial aid at the college. "The Anicka Scholarships will provide an important measure of support for students at William and Mary." Anicka, a retired architect, has provided William and Mary students with financial assistance since 1977, when he established the Walter T. Anicka Endowment Fund to support needy and deserving students.

scientist with NASA in Hampton. They have two sons, David, who is in the business of building glass additions, and Doug, a senior at James Madison University.

Dick Lutringer had written to me this summer and was back for Homecoming for the first time since 1964. Dick is a partner in the firm of Whitman & Ransom in New York City, practicing corporate law, primarily for European clients. Dick was re-elected for a second term as president of the American Foreign Law Association, an organization of more than 400 lawyers involved in foreign and comparative law. Dick is married to Clarinda Higgins and has two children, Emily, 7, and Eric, 4. They live in Westport, Conn.

Tom Meadows is in Roanoke and has been married for 21 years. He has two children and is a sole practitioner in his law firm, which was established by his father, who passed away following a long illness.

On to the Friday evening '64 Theta dinner, which was held at an elegant French restaurant near Kingsmill, but fortunately in a private room for the less-than-elegant raucous laughter that pervaded the evening. The dinner had been arranged by Gretchen Scherer Israel, who came from Eden, N.C., with her husband Fielder and 15-year-old son Andrew. Fielder is an Episcopal priest, and Gretchen teaches French at Rockingham Community College. They also have a 7-year-old son, Stuart.

Gretchen's son Andrew spent time with Bobbie Mulcahey Frazier's son Kip, also 15. Bobbie and Bill came from Leesburg, Va. Bill will soon have been with IBM 25 years, and Bobbie teaches French at the secondary level. Bill and Al Volkman remembered old times as Bobbie and Ginnie Peirce Volkman had lived together in Alexandria after we graduated. Ginnie did a superb job on our reunion yearbook and was busy with reunion committee work all weekend. For the dinner she had brought along a scrapbook filled with candid photos of life in the Theta house in 1963-64.

Ginnie and Al live in Alexandria. Al is director of International Contracting for the Department of Defense. They have three children, Kate, a junior in high school; Max, a sixth-grader, and Fritz, a fifth-grader. Ginnie is active in a numerous school and community organizations.

Sue Trice Feiglein and Mike came from Galveston. Sue's son Hank graduated from Haverford College in 1989. The family survived the Galveston hurricane and then drove their daughter, Ashley, to Stanford University, where she endured the San Francisco earthquake shortly after arrival. Their son Alex, 13, is in eighth grade. Sue started the computer science program in the Galveston schools three years ago.

Judy Davis Johnson had a double reunion, that of our class and of the William and Mary Theatre's tribute to Howard Scammon. Judy had leading roles throughout our four years at the College. Judy is contracting officer, Asia-Near East Bureau, Agency for International Development, and lives in Arlington with her children, Ted, 15, and Katherine, 12. She is active in many of their school activities and on boards of various community associations. She is separated from her husband.

Ann Lyon and Tom Ackiss came from Virginia Beach. They have two daughters and Ann teaches school. When we saw Claudy Tucker Barnes the next day, she was chastising Ann for not spending time on the beach in the summer, so we know she's busy. Ann and Tom had to leave on Saturday because Tom was going to a railroad auction and show, which has become a hobby for him. Claudy has two children, Hazel, 24, living in Hawaii; Katy, 20, an art major at Virginia Commonwealth University; Guy, 17, a high school senior, and Beth, 11. Claudy married her high school sweetheart.

Nancy Ratz Viets and Mark came from Fairway, Kan., and brought friends who had attended East Tennessee State, our football opponent. So Nancy acted as a tour guide as well as reunion participant during the weekend. Her husband Mark is an architect and they have a son Aaron, 18, who is a freshman at Claremont in California and a daughter, Alexa, 14. Someone had resurrected an old very serious picture of Nancy in robes as president of Mortar Board, which we all enjoyed. She characterizes herself as a confirmed dabbler in many activities. She and Mark have done a lot of travel and have made frequent stops in Williamsburg over the years.

Saturday morning was the parade, where it seemed the sorority floats were much less ambitious than they had been in our era — they were combined with the fraternity floats. Someone remarked that the reason might be whereas we would take a week off to work on the float, today's students are studying during that week! The high school bands were impressive and the William & Mary band now wear green sweatshirts as their "uniform." Many went to sorority house receptions before our class picture. We were too many for the bleachers at the picture taking! Class tents were set up for the luncheon on the Alumni House lawn. At the picture, lunch and game there were a sea of '64 faces.

Laidler Freeman Campbell is a school psychologist in the Fairfax County Public Schools. Her husband, Peter, a psychiatrist, works for Kaiser. Her daughter Robin is a freshman at Virginia Tech. She has three other daughters: Amanda, Lauren and Leslie.

Charlotte Elder Marriott came from Virginia Beach. Her husband Hank works in the trust department of First American Bank. Her daughter Jan is a sophomore at Peace College in Raleigh, N.C., and her son Evan is at Hargrave Military Academy. Charlotte paints sweatshirts and dresses for fun.

Polly Mayhew Owens and Al were up from Norfolk.

Rosemary Wilbur is married to Wayne Coddington '65 and they have two daughters, Nadean, an aspiring model who works for a mortgage company, and Dawn, who is working on her M.A. in special education at the University of Oregon. Rosemary dabbles in cottage industry catering and manages their ski rental property.

Ron (Jeep) Bryant is a senior engineer with Hoechst-Celanese in Charlotte, N.C. Jeep's attractive wife introduced herself as his "final" wife. He has two children and several stepchildren, and his photo hobby which he began at William and Mary has blossomed into a part-time business.

Many people were torn between our class dinner/dance and the simultaneous dinner held to honor Howard Scammon, and to mark the endowment of a chair to honor him and Althea Hunt. I went to the reception at Phi Beta Kappa Hall and the turnout was enormous. Photos of the W&M

Deborah M. DiCroce '84 Ed.D. was formally installed as president of Piedmont Virginia Community College in Charlottesville, Oct. 6. President DiCroce was formerly provost of Tidewater Community College, Portsmouth campus, for nearly four years. She has had more than 13 years of experience in diverse teaching and administrative roles in higher education. Her community college experience began in 1976 when she was engaged as an adjunct faculty member to teach English composition and literature at the Virginia Beach Campus of Tidewater Community College.

Theatre productions over the years graced the walls and the Class of '64 was in full force.

Denny Bing lives in Hastings on Hudson, N.Y., and is a charter tour manager with Go Voyages in New York City, a job which entails frequent jetting to Paris. Denny directs shows in NYC, sings in the Brick Church Choir and is involved with the New York Auction Weekend event scheduled for March 2-4, 1990.

Terry Kester lives in New York City and is a theatrical director, having directed, managed and produced nearly 200 shows. He and his wife Jan, happily married, have one son. For the past three summers Terry has directed at the Edinburgh Fringe Festival in Scotland.

Bob Mullis is assistant to the minister at the Unity Center of Practical Christianity in New York City. Bob had worked primarily in the theatre as a dance/actor before his recent career shift. His daughter Jenna will finish high school at George School in Newton, Pa., this year. Bob is now single.

Denny Bing is in touch with Carol Jones Smith Hershey who lives in Santa Barbara, Calif., working for Norelco Business Machines. He also keeps in touch with Tom Ward whom we were all sorry could not come at the last minute. Tom has retired from the Fairfax County School District and has served as president of the Washington D.C. Arts Club. He is now president of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association. Tom and his wife Mary were married in 1976.

It was delightful to see Susan Stitt who came from Eastville, Va. Susan has had a fine career in museum work, most recently serving for 14 years as director of The Museums at Stony Brook, N.Y., on Long Island. Susan has been vice president of the American Association of Museums and of the Mid-Atlantic Association of Museums and was president of the New York State Association of Museums. She has spent this past year self-employed as a consultant and director.

Susan was staying with Cam Walker who is a professor of history at the College. Cam is teaching women's studies this year among other classes and the honors program. She recently purchased a home which will be her new project.

At the class dinner/dance a letter from Dr. and Mrs. Paschall was read. Our class gift was announced — $150,000 — and President Verkuil thanked everyone and brought us up to date on the College. Bill Corley was recognized for his great fundraising efforts. Bill spent hours on the phone while functioning as president and CEO of the Community Hospitals of Indiana. He and his wife have two children and live in Carmel, Ind.

Vee Jones Davis recognized her activities committee members who helped her do such a superb job of organizing and running the reunion. Vee and Guy live in Richmond and have two children, Gary, 22, a student at Virginia Commonwealth University, and Carla, 19, a sophomore at the College. Vee is a substitute teacher in the Henrico County Public Schools and Guy is a high school teacher, athletic director and boys' basketball coach. Vee has also been very active in community affairs.

At the dance the Phi Taus were gathered. Back were Reg (Mac) McLemore, Mike Kirby, Bill Hutchinson, Bob Kunkle, Tom Haley, Phil Van Kirk and Roger Hardy.

Mike Kirby founded Georgetown Holdings Ltd. in 1967. The company owns and operates restaurants and manages real estate. Mike sold the company to key employees in 1987 and remains as a consultant. He is now working on developing facility and training programs for the homeless and their housing and feeding. Mike and his wife were married in 1969 and have six children.

Bob Kunkle, who came from Charlotte, N.C., has been with IBM since graduation. He and his wife Pamela have been married Success depends on planning. But the future is unpredictable. Even the most carefully made plans can be upset by the unexpected.

Insurance was developed to help safeguard an individual's plans for the future and help provide the funds needed to realize their dreams and goals.

Due to the demand expressed by our alumni, The Society of the Alumni of the College of William and Mary sponsors several quality programs of group insurance...especially for our alumni and their families. A number of William and Mary alumni have already responded to this benefit offer. Last year the Society was among leading Alumni Associations such as Duke, Navy, and the University of Michigan in terms of response to our insurance programs.

PROFESSORSHIP NAMED FOR ARTHUR B. HANSON '39

The Marshall-Wythe School of Law has received a gift of approximately $400,000 from the Alfred Wilson Lee and Mary I. W. Lee Memorial Trust Fund to establish an endowed professorship honoring the late Arthur B. Hanson '39 of Potomac, Md. The Hanson Professorship in Law is being established under the auspices of the Institute of Bill of Rights Law at Marshall-Wythe, which Hanson helped found. Law school Dean Timothy J. Sullivan '64 called the professorship "a perfect tribute to a remarkable man who was the founding genius of the institute and one of the best friends William and Mary ever had." Hanson, who received his B.C.L. degree from the college in 1940, was a Washington lawyer and retired major general in the Marine Corps reserves. An authority on First Amendment law, he served as general counsel to the American Newspaper Publishers Association from 1962 to 1981 and the National Geographic Society from 1963 to 1978. He was a member of the board of directors of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law Foundation and a member of the advisory board of the Institute of Bill of Rights Law. He died in July of this year. Income from the Hanson endowment will qualify for matching funds under the Commonwealth of Virginia's Eminent Scholars Program.

Redlands. Molly and Roger are divorced.

Cathy Carr Cloud was there from Annandale, Va.

I know that I am leaving out more people that I can put in this, my final column, and for that I apologize. Just glancing around the dance floor I kept seeing familiar faces whom I hadn't had a chance to talk with during the weekend. Those who could not come were missed — in each group there were conversations about the missing friends. But for those present, and for me and Philip it was a wonderful weekend, a warm and permanent memory. See you at the 30th.

Beginning with our next column, Ginnie Peirce Volkman will become our new class reporter. Please send your news to her at 2400 Daphne Lane, Alexandria, VA 22306.

Linda Arey was named acting chairman of the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission by President George Bush last May. She was first appointed to this three-member review commission a year ago by then-President Ronald Reagan. This commission is a separate agency from the Occupational Safety and Health Agency and acts as a court in disputed OSHA inspections. Linda lives in Alexandria with her husband, Barney Skladany, a corporate attorney and lobbyist.

In August, Cam Buchanan pedaled across the finish line in the mountain town of St. Johann, Austria, and won the Veteran World Cycling Cup in the Women's Masters age group (45 and over). Just a few days before this victory, Cam also won at the U.S. Cycling Federation Masters National Competition in New York. Definitely, with these wins, Cam is presently the best woman cyclist in the world age 45 and over! Back in Williamsburg, Cam stays busy juggling her hectic schedule to include her OB-GYN medical practice and training (as much as four hours a day, six days a week) for competitive racing.

Robert Clapp was promoted this summer to vice president and loan servicing manager of the retail banking division of American Security Bank in Washington. Robert is responsible for coordinating activities of consumer credit operations collection and recovery departments. He has been with American Security since 1973 and he and his wife, Jenny, live in Laurel, Md.

In October, I attended the ninth Net-WorkShop at the College for the Alumni

Admissions Network. This network consists of alumni in 20 committees around the state of Virginia and 10 out-of-state areas who help the Admissions Office by participating at college fairs and conducting personal interviews with applicants during the process of early decision and regular admission.

I talked to Judy Hein Harrell at the workshop. She teaches English at Tucker High School in Richmond. Her husband, Allen '67 works for General Medical Corp., and their two daughters are both students at the College this year, one a junior and the other a freshman. Judy had a call from Carol Boysen after Hurricane Hugo, concerning efforts for relief for Courtney Eley's '68 home on Sullivan's Island, S.C. Carol later called and canceled this relief fund, since Courtney's home did not suffer major damage. Carol lives in Denver and works for United Airlines.

Judy also related that Bob Willey has made a job move to the Eastern Shore. His wife, Lib Rawlings '65, and children will join him later from North Dakota. Other class members in the Alumni Admissions Network are Betty Moyer Boggs of Virginia Beach, Tom Daugherty of Winchester, Va., Roger Burbage of Atlanta, and Peter Nance of the Westchester, N.Y./Conn. area.

I talked to Dave and Linda King Olson '68 and they mentioned several classmates whose children are freshmen at the College this year. Ted Hanson's daughter Corey is a roommate with Bill Humphrey's daughter Debbie, quite accidentally. Also, Burt and Betsy Cherry Queen '68 have a daughter Laura who is a freshman.

Have a nice holiday season and send me a Christmas card with any news — or with no news — just to say hi and where you are living now.

I received a letter from Dennis M. Howard who lives in Chantilly, Va., with his wife Paula and daughter Amanda, age 12. Dennis is a pilot with United Airlines flying out of Dulles. If you fly the friendly skies on the East Coast, Dennis might be your pilot.

In September, Dennis heard Arnold Reed's band play some classic rock music. He said he had a delightful sense of deja vu because the band sounded just as good as the Strangers, which featured Arnold, Andy Reeve, Harvey Bryant and the late Wayne Jones. Arnold is a manager with AT&T in Vienna, Va., that is, Dennis says, until a lucrative recording contract comes along. Dennis would like to hear from any of his long-lost radical hippie friends. He's curious to find how many have become either decadent capitalists or petty bureaucrats. His phone number is 703-378-1527. His address is 13543 Tabscott Drive, Chantilly, VA 22021.

The earthquake in California and the hurricane in South Carolina, I am sure, have touched many of us. I hope our many classmates in both of these areas have survived without injury or hardship.

For eight years, Alice Derr Peters was an associate professor of special education at Clemson University. For the 1988-89 school year, Alice took a leave of absence to return to public school teaching of "learning disabled" children and she loved it! March 25 this year, Alice and Chris Leigh Peters were married. Chris teaches at Clemson in the College of Education. Alice has resigned from Clemson, but continues to teach at the public school with great enthusiasm. Alice wrote that her most exciting news is that she and Chris expect their baby at the end of January!

Thank you, Alice, for an update on Yvonne Crosier, an executive with Kelly Services, who is now in Detroit.

In June, Richard Cook, a project leader for the Financial Management Service of the U.S. Treasury Department for the past three years, was a candidate for the James Madison District seat on the King George County School Board. In the past, Richard has worked for NASA, the White House Consumer Affairs Council and the Food and Drug Administration.

Lynda Lotz Brown, director of the office of staff personnel, was named acting director of affirmative action for Washington State University. Lynda began her personnel position at WSU in 1987, having been chief executive officer of the Treasure State Independent Physicians' Organization in Missoula, Mont., before then.

From 1977-78, Lynda served as director of the Equal Employee Opportunity and Personnel Service for the University of Montana. After William and Mary, Lynda earned a degree at the University of Oklahoma and a doctorate in higher education administration from Florida State University.

Vice President of Special Equity with the National Bank of Detroit, Peter Zuger is a chartered financial analyst and a member of the Financial Analysts Society of Detroit. Peter earned an M.S. in business

ALUMNUS FUNDS BASKETBALL SCHOLARSHIP

James R. Kaplan '57 of Wayne, N.J., has made a commitment of $200,000 to fund a full basketball scholarship at the College. As part of its Campaign for the Fourth Century, William and Mary is seeking to raise a total of $6 million for athletic grants-in-aid. "Athletic scholarships like the Kaplan Scholarship will help the College continue recruiting outstanding student athletes who can contribute to the national stature of William and Mary and assume leadership roles in the future," said John Randolph '64, director of athletics at the College. Kaplan was a basketball and track star in College and was inducted into William and Mary's Athletic Hall of Fame in 1987. He is owner and president of Cornell-Dubilier Electronics Inc., a multi-million dollar electronics supplier headquartered in Wayne, N.J.

DAILY PRESS RECEIVES PRENTIS AWARD

The Daily Press Inc. is the recipient of the 1988-89 Prentis Award from William and Mary. The award honors outstanding individuals and institutions best exemplifying high standards of business practice, community service and support of the college. The Prentis Award is named for the family who owned the Prentis Store in 18th-century Williamsburg. The store was widely known for its high standards of commerce, and members of the family were noted for their services to the town and the College. In making the presentation, President Paul R. Verkuil said: "Serving the community through responsible journalism is the main priority of the Daily Press. Responding to the myriad needs of a dynamic area like the Peninsula is not an easy task, but it is one that the Daily Press has done well for almost a century." Joseph D. Cantrell, president and publisher of the Daily Press and The Times-Herald newspapers, accepted the award at a reception held on campus.

from Virginia Commonwealth University, 1972-74. Peter and wife, Susan Estes '69, have two sons, Albert, 10, and James, 5 1/2. They live in Grosse Pointe, Mich.

For the fall 1989 term, associate professor Virginia Kerns is in residence at the Virginia Center for the Humanities, Charlottesville, having been awarded a fellowship by the Virginia Foundation for the Humanities and Public Policy. Ginny's research centers on anthropologist Julian H. Steward and his work in cultural ecology.

Please send along any '89 Homecoming news, holiday and New Year's news, and classmate inquiries for 20th reunion plans, etc., by my next deadline of March 3 for the May issue. There's news from several classmates, but my mailbox still has plenty of room for more. Why not put me on your Christmas card list?

Pete Malpass brings us up to date on his activities. He has been married to Dee Stewart since 1979 and they have two boys, Jordan, 4, and Carter, 2. He received his Ph.D. in statistics from the University of Kentucky in 1983, but continued working as a systems engineer for a computer company in the Washington, D.C., area, a job he has held since 1979. His roomie, "Geep" Howell, is still in Lynchburg and doing well at banking. He married and has two teen-age daughters. Pete is also an adjunct professor for Virginia Tech in Falls Church and for George Mason University.

Harry Cross was honored as Outstanding Young Man of 1988 by the Suffolk Jaycees. An article in the Suffolk News-Herald expounded on his many community activities. He has served as president of the Suffolk Youth Athletic Association since 1983 and has been involved in the Suffolk Tennis Association.

Harry has kept his tennis game in good shape, evidenced by an invitation to play as a pro in the Cystic Fibrosis Pro-Am Tennis Tournament last February. He has been on the board of directors of the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce-Suffolk, is active in fund raising for the United Way and involved in a host of other activities. Harry is married and has three children. He has been a real estate broker in a family company, Cross Realty Inc., since 1973.

If you need advice on business law, Laura Quigley would be happy to hear from you. She has concentrated on taxation in corporate, partnership and business law cases. Formerly with DeWolf, Ward & Morris, she has now become a partner in the Orlando office of Baker & Hostetler. She received her J.D. from the Marshall-Wythe School of Law in 1975 and a master of laws in taxation from Georgetown University in 1981.

Carolyn White Heyer lives in Arlington with husband, John, and 5-year-old Amanda and 7-month-old Charles. She is a branch manager with the Fairfax County Public Library and, from the content of her letter, obviously enjoys the theatre. She would particularly like to hear from former Sinfonicon, Backdrop Club and theatre department members in the D.C. area. She keeps in touch with a few theatre department graduates — like Calvin Remsberg, who is currently with the Los Angeles production of "Phantom of the Opera" and Matthew Spady, who is singing professionally in New York City. Carolyn attended graduate school at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and received a master's in library science in 1974. Then she worked as a librarian for three years before moving to Northern Virginia to work in the Fairfax County public library system. She now heads the Richard Byrd branch in Springfield. Local classmates, stop in and meet the head librarian.

By the time you read this, Bobby Brush will have weathered the November election for the Nelson County supervisor's seat. He is assistant superintendent at the Blue Ridge Stone Co. plant in Piney River and holds the position of chairman of the county planning commission. He and his wife, Claudia, have three children.

In August, Doug Bing became assistant regional manager for American Appraisal Associates, a firm specializing in business valuations. In his former job he was assistant vice president of United Virginia Bank. Doug graduated from the School of Banking of the South at Louisiana State University. He and his family live in Marietta, Ga.

I stopped working just over a year ago when our second son was born and now we are expecting a third child in March. I'll do my best to write coherently after that. That's it for now.

I received great mail this past month, starting with a letter from Eve Earley, who wrote from Indianapolis. After living in San Francisco, Vermont, Virginia and Pittsburgh, doing what she calls "odd jobs," being a potter, picking up some graduate courses and working as a research biologist at Carnegie-Mellon University, Eve decided to return to school at the advanced age of 30. (Gee, that sounds so young!) She graduated from Northwestern College of Chiropractic in 1986 and is now a doctor of chiropractic with a private practice in Indianapolis. Somewhere along the line, she found time to marry a fine art photographer and graphic artist (one person, not two) named David Kedlee. Together they bought a lovely old renovated farmhouse about a half hour north of Indianapolis where Eve plays farmer in an organic garden and enjoys their dog and two kittens. She would very much like to hear from, or about, Bev Powell, Robin Kinsey, Mike Wren, Denise Kirwin, Lyn Kroeger, Cornell Christiansen and Pam Iraneta. All of you, please write me at my address above or Eve at her office address: 652 East 54th St., Indianapolis, IN 46220.

Also got a long letter from Tom Karow who wrote about his activities since graduation. He lived in Florida and Virginia for a few years working in various sales jobs. For a while he taught fencing part-time at Christopher Newport College — a propitious circumstance, since he met his future wife, Nena, in one of his classes. After a whirlwind romance, he proposed (what could she say, with an epee at her throat?). After 10 years of marriage and two children, Tom can confidently state that Nena was after more than just a good grade in fencing class. They are living in Gloucester, Va., now with their sons, Patrick, 8, and Justin, 5. Tom has worked for Anheuser-Busch in Williamsburg for the last nine years and claims that he is partly responsible for keeping his classmates' throats wet. Tom was a general contractor in the Gloucester area for a few years before joining Busch, and he used what skills he learned in that job when he and Nena built their own "perfect" home on the scenic North River on Mob Jack Bay.

Tom writes that Mark Young and his wife Sabrina are living in Hollywood, Calif. He believes they had their first child, a son, recently, but was hazy on details. Of course, Tom planned to attend Homecoming this year (and every year), since he's so close. By the time this appears, Homecoming will be over; so any news I collect that day will not appear until the next run of our class news. By the way, Tom would especially like to hear from Tom Langhorne and Bob Snead, fencing buddies from the olden days. He can be reached at Route 3, Box 737, Gloucester, VA 23061.

And by great coincidence, the third long letter I received was from Tom Langhorne, writing from Endicott, N.Y., so you get your wish on this one right away, Karow. After graduation he went to the State University of New York at Binghamton for an M.A. in anthropology, which he received in 1976. There he met Deborah Croyle, a doctoral student in history, whom he married in

ALUMNA COMMITS $200,000 FOR MUSIC, THEATRE, RELIGION

Anna Belle Koenig Nimmo '45 of Golden, Colo., has made gifts and commitments totaling $200,000 to the Campaign for the Fourth Century. Part of her gift will support the most pressing needs of the music department, including scholarship support and instrument purchase and repair. Mrs. Nimmo has made additional commitments to support the departments of theatre and religion at the College. The main lobby of the newly renovated Ewell Hall will be named in recognition of Mrs. Nimmo's generosity. Mrs. Nimmo was a member of the College's drama and music clubs. She has continued her interest in acting and the theatre. In the 1960s, she and her husband built a vintage Western town for use as a movie/television set. They also run a buggy rental business as an outgrowth of their hobby of collecting horse-drawn vehicles. Mrs. Nimmo is an avid gem collector and has lectured widely on the subject.

November 1976. After a year of working at the Institute of Archaeology at the University of South Carolina, he continued his education as a Ph.D. student at Michigan State University where they lived for five and a half years. Due to the poor economic climate in the region, they reluctantly decided to move when Tom's coursework was finished. Back to Binghamton for jobs and dissertation completion they went; Tom was awarded his Ph.D. in anthropology in 1988. During these years he worked as the pre-health professions advisor and has recently begun teaching in the anthro department part-time. In their spare time, Tom and Debby work on their house: fixing, improving and landscaping. They have two dogs and don't play golf as often as they would like.

Tom sent news of Bob Snead who lives in Colorado with his family where he works as a computer consultant. Tom wanted news of Tom Karow (boy, do I feel like a matchmaker on this one!), Sue Billingsley, Cindy Stern, Laura Bechtel and Dave Hess. He can be reached at 6 Tudor Drive, Endicott, NY 13760.

Tom Spivey wrote that he is currently in New York working as a guest artist/visiting faculty member at Cornell University in the department of theatre arts. Cornell is inaugurating its new $23 million performing arts complex with a full season of drama, dance and music and hosting many troupes through 1989-90. He can be reached through the theatre department at Cornell, Ithaca, NY 14850.

Martha Moon went on to get her master's degree in nursing from Virginia Commonwealth University after graduating from W&M. She worked at MCV in Richmond and at a hospital in Blacksburg before moving to Boston where she is presently the clinical director at the Fenway Community Health Center. In this capacity she supervises 12 nurses and staff members who are doing drug research and innovative, life-saving treatments in connection with AIDS. She has published many articles for both professional and general audiences on AIDS research. Earlier this year she was given the recognition award from the Boston AIDS Action Committee for her continuing contribution to the field of AIDS research and patient care.

News is sparse again. Those of you who write those long letters summarizing the family's activities for the year, which you then enclose with your Christmas cards, why don't you add your friendly class reporter to your mailing list so we'll have some news for next time? If you do that for me, I promise to stop begging people to write.

I did get a series of letters from Ron Bianchi, even a current photograph of Ron, which revealed a bit more of Ron's forehead than I remember (Ron, I sent it to the Gazette but they didn't have space). In the Beginning (i.e., after graduation) Ron worked at the Pentagon in systems/management analysis. While working full time, he got his law degree from Catholic University in 1983 and had two children, both girls, now ages 10 and 8. (He didn't say so, but I presume he got married somewhere in there, too.) After law school, he went to work for the Department of Justice and then as an attorney/management consultant with Advanced Technology Inc. in Reston, Va.

In March 1987, Ron decided he could live without Northern Virginia, so the family moved to Winston-Salem, N.C., where he became manager, litigation support for RJ Reynolds Tobacco. Recently he was named associate counsel for the company and so far his job has not been a victim of the world's largest corporate buy-out. He is responsible for coordinating and complying with all defensive discovery in smoking and health litigation, as well as all other litigation support activities (sounds like a very busy job to me). Ron claims that his reduced commuting time is the equivalent of six extra weeks of vacation. If you live in the area, or even if you are just passing through, give Ron a call. Thanks for your letters, Ron.

Happy Holidays to all.

I am writing to you "from the road" in this issue. My job has become that of regional human resource manager. I cover our can manufacturing plant in Middletown, N.Y., in addition to the locations I have handled in Richmond for the past five years. I feel as though I know the entire USAir fleet!

The best part of my New York trips comes when I am able to stop off in Cherry Hill, N.J., and spend a few days with Robin Markwith Sleeth and her family. Her children, Will and Jackie, are now both in school, which has given Robin the opportunity to begin a part-time position as an inside sales representative for a local manufacturer. She has very much enjoyed her past few years at home with her children which she would not trade for any other position. In many ways our lives have been so different yet we both seem to enjoy just talking about what it would be like to "trade places." And while I know we will never trade places, I know we will always have a very deep satisfaction in being friends and sharing our experiences for many years to come.

I received a delightful card from Kay Upchurch Brooks. Even though Kay transferred to UNC-Chapel Hill as a junior, we still claim her as our own from our Dupont, Jefferson and Monroe Hall days. Kay has recently taken an indefinite leave from her corporate law practice to be with her 22-month-old daughter, Meegan, and her 7-month-old identical twins, Skylar and Tess. They expect to move from Los Angeles to northern California sometime in the spring after her husband sells his medical practice. She sends greetings to all her William and Mary friends. If anyone has any news they would like to send Kay, let me know and I will send it to her. Kay follows our column, so it will be a great way to keep each other up to date!

Debby Gordon Drissi sends news from Woodbridge, Va., where she and her husband are raising their three children, Sam, Anissa and new baby, Leila. After graduation, Debby studied at George Washington University and then worked three years at the International Monetary Fund. She and her husband then moved overseas to Algeria for three very interesting years. After returning, she joined an international development-oriented private volunteer organization. She is now staying home with the children and loving every minute.

Jean M. Kelly recently became county attorney for Caroline County in Virginia. After graduation, she studied public administration at Virginia Commonwealth University and later received her law degree from Cumberland School of Law in Alabama. She has practiced law in Bowling Green and Fredericksburg, Va.

A good source of news about our fellow classmates is the newspaper. The following news comes from a clipping from the Virginian Review, Covington. Farley C. Shiner was promoted to the office of vice president - finance and treasurer by CFW Telephone Co. Farley and his wife, Sheran, have two daughters, Sarah and Susannah, and reside in Waynesboro. If you see news of a fellow classmate in your local paper, please take a minute to clip it and send it to me. If you have another minute, include some information about yourself. Everyone I do hear from says how much they enjoy reading about fellow classmates!

Our president, Chris Kelley, and his wife, Nancy, send news of the birth of their first child, Pierce Conner. Their son joined the world on Sept. 23. Chris' career achievements include being named to Who's Who in American Law and Who's Who in the East for 1988 and 1989.

Ben Kellam, director of administration and records for the Society of the Alumni, served on the faculty for the Summer Institute on Advancement in Information Management sponsored by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education in Boulder, Colo. In addition to participating in several panel discussions, Ben made six presentations on five topics, which included ethics and research, developing a request for proposal, evaluating vendors, PC-based events tracking using dBase and micro applications.

Patience D. Stevenson was awarded the master of arts degree in pastoral counseling by the Moravian Theological Seminary earlier this year. She serves a regional office of the Wiley House activity.

Diane Andaas Topping has moved back to Virginia from northern California. She and her husband, Robb '77 M.B.A., now live in Clifton, Va., with their four daughters.

I am closing with my favorite letter from Sue Hopkins Lindsay. She writes that 1988 was a trying year for her. She underwent major surgery, which resulted in a less serious diagnosis than originally expected. After many months of recovery she says she feels "like her old energetic self" again. She remains very active in the church vestry as treasurer of several groups and is on the ladies auxiliary for the local fire department. In addition, she is full-time mom to two very active boys.

She and her husband, Opie Lindsay '79 M.B.A., are also undertaking a major house addition, which has brought many noisy and surprising events to their normally peaceful pine forest home in Rock Hill, S.C. They enjoyed several trips this summer to Virginia, Texas and Kansas City. Opie continues bookkeeping and enjoys golf, white-water rafting, camping and chess. He placed second in the Land of Sky Chess Open in Asheville, N.C., this year.

Sue closed with the following: "This has been about it — otherwise I've led a sheltered housewife existence. Being a kept woman isn't all watching soaps and eating bonbons you know! I must admit to still be hunting for those mythical bonbons." Thanks for a great letter, Sue!

George S. Butts Jr. '78, assistant vice president/controller of Modesto Banking Co., has been named to the planning committee of the California Society of CPAs' Annual Banking Industry Conference. George is one of seven CPAs on the committee, which is responsible for the format and content of the conference. The 1989 conference will be held in Los Angeles on Sept. 27 and in San Francisco on Sept. 28.

I hope more of you will write. This is the first year that I will miss Homecoming, so your letters are even more important. If any of you were able to attend, we would all love to know who attended and any news that they shared. I will need news by March 1 for our next issue. Happy Holidays!

Theodore R. Reinhart, professor of anthropology at William and Mary, has been named by the Archaeological Society of Virginia as the Anthropologist of the Year. Reinhart, who was cited for his many contributions to anthropology and his speciality, archaeology, joined the William and Mary faculty in 1968 from the University of New Mexico, where he received his doctorate degree. A specialist in North American archaeology and ethnology, Reinhart has undertaken extensive field work both in the southwestern United States and in Virginia. He was director of Summer Field School in Prehistoric and Historic Archaeology from 1978-80 and from 1983-86. He served as editor of the Quarterly Bulletin of the Archaeological Society of Virginia from 1978-80, and was president of the society in 1987 and 1988. He has published widely on a variety of archaeological topics and has received several fellowships and awards for his work. In 1983 he received the Virginia Social Science Association Scholar Award. He has been an Alumni Fellow at the College 1972-73 and 1973-74, an award given to recognize outstanding teaching. In 1968 while still concentrating on southwestern archaeology, he was awarded the John F. Kennedy Memorial Fellowship for a notable contribution to Southwest history.

Swem Library has acquired the 900th anniversary facsimile of the Domesday Book, the gift of the Class of 1934. The original is in the Public Records Office in London. The manuscript folios in Latin bring into focus the entire length and breadth of England from 1066 to 1086 when William the Conqueror made a survey of his medieval kingdom. David Hume (1711-76) called the Domesday Book, "the most valuable piece of antiquity possessed by any nation." Smithsonian Magazine said of the book: "England's most important single historical treasure ... it stands alongside the Bible and the Koran as one of the world's three most famous books."

As we prepare for the start of a new decade — does it seem possible? — I'd like to extend my sincerest wishes to all that the future holds only the best of everything. This decade began on a very promising note for all of us, for it was the year in which we graduated and began a new and exciting future. I hope that through everything that has been thrown our way, we have been able to see the bright side and to laugh. If I remember correctly, that was one of the wishes that Art Buchwald had for us in May 1980.

Come 1990 we will be looking forward to our 10th reunion! We'll be celebrating during Homecoming weekend Nov. 1-4. Here's hoping that we have a great turnout for that weekend!

I have to admit that I had a great deal of assistance writing this column. One group had a lodge reunion and submitted the following article. It sounds like they had a lot of fun doing the "research" for the column! Class of 1980 Lodge 14 (Roommates and Families) Reunion in Mountain Cabin near Front Royal, Va., July 1-4, 1989. Activities included hiking, swimming, Pictionary tournaments, babysitting and of course much reminiscing. Dan McEachran and wife, Debbie (Meek) '81, were our hosts for the weekend. In attendance were their two young sons, Christopher, 3, and newborn Andrew. The McEachrans reside in Mt. Holly, N.J., where Debbie is a minister for the Presbyterian Church. Dan has a law degree from the University of Richmond and has recently passed the New Jersey bar.

Paul Hershey, Cheryl (1981 University of Richmond graduate) and family live in Manassas, Va. They are the proud parents of two energetic young boys, Peter and Stephen. Paul works for IBM as an electrical engineer while Cheryl is full-time "guardian angel" to the kids.

George Stukenbroeker, "the boy" of Lodge 14, and his wife, Susan (Maag) '81, brought their 10-month-old son, Tyler. They live in Somerdale, N.J., and George works in the Philly area with the FBI. Susan is now a work-at-home mom, previously having been employed as a computer programmer.

Mark Dennett, wife Mary and newborn daughter Rachel, came for one day. Mark is a lawyer for the U.S. Postal Service, and Mary is a portrait painter when Rachel isn't requiring her undivided attention! The Dennetts live in Alexandria.

Dave Couture is a Boston-based flight attendant for Northwest Airlines, living in Portsmouth, N.H. . . . alone! Dave exemplified extreme courage by attending said reunion despite the knowledge that six of the expected guests were under the age of three. He acquired the distinguished title of storyteller, swimming instructor and "Uncle Dave" or, as noted by the author, "that weird man!"

Unable to attend were David Brown and his wife, Elizabeth (Tufts), and Honorary Lodgemate, Don Pfanz. David and Liz live in the Pittsburgh area with their daughter, Anne. Dave is medical consultant for a law firm and Liz works in a museum. Don lives near Charleston, S.C., and is a supervisor for the U.S. Park Service. Fourth of July tourists were the reason that Don could not get away. The one question that remains unanswered to this day is: Bryan Coughlan . . . where are you?

I received a few announcements of some employment-related appointments. Don Havener was recently appointed vice president and partner with The Abbott Group Inc. in D.C. The Abbott Group is an executive search firm specializing in high technology and manufacturing companies. Before this appointment, Don was an associate with Kors Marlar Savage & Assoc., a European-based firm also in D.C. When not spending the innumerable hours required in research, Don attends the young manager program at U.Va.'s Colgate Darden School of Business and donates many hours to D.C. area community and business affairs.

After graduation, Elizabeth McClanahan went to the University of Dayton Law School. Upon completion of law school, Elizabeth practiced law in Kingsport, Tenn., as a partner with the firm of Counts and McClanahan. This summer, she joined the firm of Penn, Stuart, Eskridge & Jones in Bristol, Va., and was appointed to its board of directors. Elizabeth's specialty is in mineral law, primarily in the oil, gas and coal industries.

Bob Patterson returned to the Baltimore-D.C. area after spending a couple of chilly winters in Chicago. Bob accepted a position as senior associate with the Baltimore firm of Gebhardt & Smith, where he is thoroughly engrossed in a Chapter 11 reorganization of Cardinal Industries. His prior experience, first as a clerk with a federal judge in D.C. and then with Kirkland and Ellis in Chicago, prepared him well for his new position.

A bit of news from the West Coast! Susan Kauzlarich was married to Peter Klavins in the spring of 1988 and settled in Davis, Calif., where Susan has been teaching since 1987. Susan and Peter bought a house and have experienced the joys of homeownership firsthand. To back up a little. . . after W&M, Susan went to Michigan State for a Ph.D. in chemistry, and then completed postdoctoral work at Iowa State in the field of solid state chemistry. She then moved to California where she obtained an assistant professorship at University of California-Davis. Susan recently received National Science Foundation funding for a proposal on the synthesis and characterization of new high temperature superconductors. Some of her recent work on new materials has been published in the Journal of American Chemical Society.

On another note, husband and wife Kerwin Dobbs and Kathy Lloyd stopped in to visit some time ago while they were in the area for a conference. The only thing was that the visit was too short!

Gary Ellis wrote from Toronto where he was preparing for a new job with Deloitte Haskins & Sells. After spending a brief period in San Francisco after graduation, Gary moved to Toronto to accept a position in the distribution department of Procter & Gamble. Seven years later, he decided to pursue his M.B.A. at York University, which led him to DH&S. In Canada, Gary has to pass three sets of exams to become a chartered accountant, rather than the one set in the U.S. A much deserved holiday was spent in England after two of the three exams this summer. Gary wanted to pass along his greetings to, among others, Craig and Linda Bernick, Radi and Sue Adzemovic, Trent Tschigi and Tim Wilson. If you're in Toronto, be sure to look him up!

Enjoy the holidays and best wishes for the New Year! As a resolution, be sure to remember to drop me a line to let us know what you have been doing these past 10 years. Also, don't forget Homecoming next year!

ED: PHONE HOME Tales from the Earthquake Zone

By JEANNE LULL HOPKE '80

My brother Ed '83, San Francisco alumni chapter president, and I have grown closer in the nine years that have passed since I graduated from William and Mary, in great part because of our mutual passion for the telephone. It's just so much easier to call than write, although since his move to San Francisco with his wife, Lynn Rosenberry Lull '83 I've put pen to paper more than ever before. Ed hasn't missed calling on my birthday a single time in my adult life. He was one of the first I called when I found out I was expecting a baby — both times. As my children have grown, his answering machine has greeted him when he's returned home from work with everything from the baby's first words, to "this couldn't wait another second" news, to "I just wanted to say hello" calls.

On Oct. 17 our lifeline was cut by the largest earthquake to hit San Francisco since 1906.

I was returning home from the store when a news broadcaster announced that the World Series game had been postponed due to an earthquake. What I saw and heard when I turned on my television at home was more than I was prepared for. Ed lives in the Marina District, and over the next several hours I watched fire burning in an area that I knew couldn't be far from his home. Finally, the first call came. Ed was prepared. He was able to make one phone call and then vacated the area. His call was to my brother Jim, who Ed delegated the task of notifying the rest of our family and Lynn's. They were together and unhurt, although their area had sustained major damage. He would try to call again when they had reached a friend's home outside the immediate disaster area.

Ed and Lynn had been lucky. Both were returning early from work. Ed was walking down the sidewalk just a few blocks from his home and Lynn had just boarded a bus home from the financial district. It was a tense 30 minutes before they found each other amidst the confusion and destruction of their neighborhood.

Hearing the urgent shouts to evacuate and seeing the flames of the fire two blocks away, Ed and Lynn ran through their third story apartment, grabbing what seemed most important to them — sneakers, their earthquake survival kits and as many photos as they could carry. They headed for the Presidio Army base to the home of Randy '84 and Alyssa (Van Winkle) Perkins '83 where for the rest of the night they would take turns shining a flashlight on the phone while the other dialed trying to get a line out to spread the news that they were safe.

It's hard to describe the feeling of utter helplessness which I experienced over the next several hours waiting for the call letting us know they had arrived safely. My children are too young to be away from me and on their own, but perhaps I glimpsed several years into my future and finally understood how difficult it is for a parent to let grown children live their own lives. My heart ached to hear from them and know they were okay. After roughly three hours of pacing, watching the same footage on tele-

Greetings to you all, and best wishes for the upcoming holidays! Am rather slim on news this issue, so please quit thinking about writing, and go ahead and get out your pens!

We welcomed a son, Timothy Lewis, into our family on Aug. 22, and he's being mothered and smothered by his two sisters! I am once again awed by the miracle of new life.

Received a nice letter from Nancy Conlon Herzog, who was married in March. She and her husband, Frank, live in Ridgefield, Conn. In the same town are Carol (Doub) '83 and husband Brent Kelly '83. Nancy received her master's degree in communications from Fairfield University after four years of night classes! She and Frank both work in Greenwich — Nancy with UPS as a project manager in the advertising department, and Frank as a risk insurance manager for the Pittston Co.

"What a small world" — Steve Monaghan works with Nancy and would like to pass on a friendly hello and congratulations on the new baby to old friends Lisa Zanetti and Rob Kravitz!

In the banking business, Dave Roberts has been promoted to assistant branch officer at Commerce Bank's Coliseum office in Hampton. Tricia Wilson, branch manager/loan officer with Central Fidelity Bank in Newport News, completed Virginia Bankers' Management study at U.Va., and was also named vice president of the National Association of Bank Women for the Virginia Peninsula Group for the 1989-90 term.

Along medical lines, Lisa Alty, assistant professor of chemistry at Washington and Lee, received a research fellowship from the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges. Julie Maley received a fellowship for postdoctoral research at Baylor vision over and over and cleaning a house that didn't need it, my mom called to say she had heard from Ed and that they were fine.

Over the next few days, Ed would contact my mom and brother several times, but would be unable to get a call through to the Williamsburg area. It helped having his updates relayed, but I needed to hear directly from him. I attempted calling him several times, with no luck.

Ed and Lynn were living in limbo. Their building was declared unsafe for the first six days, but a closer examination by engineers rendered it safe to occupy and the clean up process began. Automatic pilot kicked in. Days were spent salvaging what wasn't damaged and satisfying basic needs with the help of the Red Cross. Nights were spent phoning home . . . or wherever the phone lines would connect them.

Saturday, Oct. 21, was the day I received my first call from them from a hotel room outside the immediate San Francisco area. Lynn, Ed and I spoke for nearly an hour, reliving the last few days and bridging the miles between the coasts. Despite a major earthquake, Ed had continued his streak. This call was on my birthday, an I believe it's the greatest gift I've ever received.

Nov. 1. The healing process has begun. Ed and Lynn are back in their Marina apartment, still without gas and hot water, but with new priorities, a renewed sense of community . . . and a very large phone bill!

By the way, Ed, Mom said she'll pay the bill!

Terence S. Abbott '89 M.S., a senior research engineer in the Flight Management Division of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Langley Research Center, has designed a cockpit display system to reduce pilot workload and increase situational awareness. The cockpit has been selected by Research and Development Magazine as one of the 100 most significant new technical products of 1989. Abbott received an M.S. degree in computer science. His advisor is Professor William Bynum.

An exhibit of photographs by internationally acclaimed photographer Yousuf Karsh, organized by the Muscarelle Museum of Art at William and Mary, is on tour across the country until the end of March 1992. The exhibit, drawn from Karsh's private collection, encompasses over 80 photographs including well-known studies of Winston Churchill, Pablo Casals, Ernest Hemingway, Pablo Picasso, Georgia O'Keeffe and George Bernard Shaw. One of the major events at the Muscarelle Museum in 1987, the Karsh exhibit is the first organized by the Muscarelle Museum to go on a national tour. Scheduled to open at the Madison Art Center in Madison, Wis., in early December, the exhibit is scheduled for visits to the Museum of the Southwest, Midland, Texas; the Gallery of Fine Arts, Fort Myers, Fla.; the Mississippi Museum of Art in Jackson; the Muscatine, Iowa Art Center; the Albuquerque Museum of Art; and the Sangre de Cristo Arts and Conference Center, Pueblo, Colo.

Earl K. Straight announces the formation of a law firm partnership in Houston, Shreves & Straight. Congratulations on all the honors, new jobs and promotions!!

Peter John Shea was married to Linda Anne Sullivan on Oct. 21 at Holy Trinity Catholic Church in Washington. Among the ushers was Matthew Lohr. The newlyweds both work in D.C. — Linda as a freelance writer employed by Hr Productions Inc., and Peter as a staff attorney with the division of enforcement of the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. Peter received his law degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where he was an article editor for the Journal of International Business Law. Much happiness to you both!

Charlotte, NC 28202

Greetings from the hub of the new south, Charlotte, N.C.! Hugo struck us pretty hard and we are still cleaning up the debris as I write to you! A hurricane is certainly a once-in-a-lifetime event, we hope!

Although it was tough for a while, Hugo did not get us Charlotteans down. October 15 marked an exciting event. Tom and Dana Hearn '82 served my fiancée and me (yes, I just became engaged — more on that later) dinner at the Celebrity Waiter a la Heart, a fund-raiser for the Carolinas Heart Institute, of which Tom is the executive director. The dinner was held at the Palomino Club, a hoppin' western type spot in Charlotte. Everyone was decked out in their cowboy hats and boots, even Paul and Amy Solotario '81, who had their first child in September, and Susan and Bill Garvey '85, who have settled in Charlotte. Susan was just elected to secretary of the Charlotte alumni chapter and Dana was elected treasurer. Dana and Tom vacationed in Florida recently with Bill and Meg Scott and word is that Meg and Bill are expecting a baby!

Plenty of W&M alumni have settled in the Carolinas. I met a fellow W&M alum who works here in Charlotte for First Union, too — Rob Rusevlyan '80. I heard from Lori Etkin Small the other night. She and her husband are living in Thomasville, N.C., where they are both in school.

Beth Archer Miller called recently; she and her husband are in Greensboro. They have two children, one 3 years old and one born on Sept. 4, 1989, Margaret Ryan. Beth was just promoted to comptroller at NC Trust.

Tom Logan '82 is in nearby Winston-Salem. I spoke with him earlier this week. He completed U.Va. medical school and has just finished his residency. He and his wife have one child.

Lawson Cox '83 has been to visit me several times in the past two months on her way to visit her grandmother in Highlands, N.C., so I think she qualifies as a temporary North Carolina resident!

David and Jeanie Gushee write that they have made Raleigh their home. Jeanie is a maternal-infant care nurse at Wake Medical Center and David is a Ph.D. student in Christian Ethics at Union Theological Seminary in New York. David travels to New York when necessary for exams and consultation. Their first child, Holly Genevieve Gushee, was born on Jan. 17, 1988.

I ran into Todd Lindsley '85, another New Yorker who has decided to make his home in the Carolinas, at a UNC law school alumni reception at First Union (the bank where I work). He and his wife Heather are relocating to Chapel Hill from the Big Apple. Todd has accepted a position as assistant dean of development for UNC law school. Heather is a personnel assistant.

Alison Hawley is also living in Chapel Hill. She has her hands full with business school at UNC.

Ben and Suzie Musciano Lowe are still enjoying life in the Carolinas. They live in Alamance, N.C., and their first child, Alexandra Elizabeth Lowe, was born on June 10, 1989. Suzie is a senior financial analyst at Kayser-Roth Hosiery and Ben is studying dentistry at UNC Chapel Hill.

Carl Adkins has made the big move from North Carolina to New Jersey, where he has joined the ranks of the MBA graduates. He has just completed the Duke MBA program and took a trip out West before beginning his job in administration at Thomas Jefferson University Hospital in Philadelphia. On his trip, he hit San Francisco, drove down the Pacific Coast, and stayed with Sue Newman '83 in San Ramon, Calif. Back in Philadelphia, Carl is busy at the Holiday Spa and on a volunteer note, Carl serves as a big brother!

Carl and I visited at Brad Angevine's wedding on August 27 in Glen Cove, N.Y. Brad married Sandra Deutsch, a fellow classmate from the Fuqua School of Business at Duke. Sandy and Brad looked so happy on their big day! The wedding was just perfect, at a beautiful estate on Long Island, and the ceremony was outdoors, under a gorgeous blue sky. Greg Hundley served as a groomsman. He and his wife, Kim, traveled from Dallas, where Greg is completing his residency and Kim is a speech pathologist. I visited with many old buddies at the wedding, including Diane Hawley, Jeff and Betsy Bishop, Henry Plaster '85, Bobby and Judy Harris, Anne and Scott St. Clair Woron, and Dan and J.J. Head. Dan and J.J. are living in Charlottesville, Va., where J.J. is a teacher and Dan is in business school at Darden. Brad and Sandy's reception was great fun, and they escaped to the islands for a honeymoon before returning to New York, where Sandy is an investment banker and Brad is working for Cadbury Schweppes in Stamford, Conn.

I was a busy beaver that weekend, because the day before Brad and Sandy's wedding, I had the honor to attend the wedding of Karen Kokecki '83 to Bill Browning. Karen and Bill joined hands in marriage on August 26, in Cherry Hill, N.J. Anne Golwen Brand '83, Patty Schmitz '83 and Linda Cottle '83 served as bridesmaids. Guests included Ann Quinn Ritko

'83, Becky Rogers '83, who was busy planning her own October 28 wedding in Washington, Greg Park '83, David Brand, Bob "Booty" and Beth Laverty '83 and Howard Golwen '86.

Karen's dress was exquisite — an original! After a rowdy reception at the Cherry Hill Inn, she and Bill took off for their honeymoon in Greece. Boy, did they have fun — I saw the pictures! Be sure to ask them about the little red convertible and the blink, blink. They returned to a new house in Falls Church. Karen is an accountant at Fairfax Hospital and Bill works for the American Bankers Association.

On October 14, Jill Bobbin '85 and I zipped up to Richmond for the wedding of Tanya Hranowsky '85 to Randy King '85. Tanya was certainly the blushing bride in her mother's beautiful wedding gown. W&M alumni were in abundance at the Greek Orthodox ceremony. Lisa George '85 served as a bridesmaid. She is in Washington, working for Congressman Bob Walker, a Republican from Pennsylvania. Kevin Byers '85 and John Quagliano '85 served as groomsmen. At the reception, Kevin gave one of the nicest, not to mention touching, toasts that I have ever heard. Kevin is at the University of Virginia, working on his degree in urban planning, and John has just graduated from dental school.

Guests included Pam Howard '86, who is living in Williamsburg and looking forward to graduate school; Sally Astruc '85, Julie Baroody '85, who is engaged to a Frenchman that she met in Montpelier; Jeff Hughes '85; Beth Henry and Kevin Jones '85, who arrived in a snappy navy blue BMW convertible; Teddy Kelleher '85; Ann Galuesian '86 and her husband, Pete McAteer '86; Lauren Cunningham '85, who is a social worker for the homeless in Richmond and is busy planning her upcoming wedding in May; Jeff "Zeke" Brockman '85; Tracy Brownlee '85, who is doing well at Price Waterhouse in Washington, and Tom and Jenny Adams Gallo '85. Tom and Jenny's son was the ringbearer — what a cutie! Tom is working for Central Fidelity Bank in Richmond. I spent some time visiting with Brooks and Heather Carr '85, who traveled from the Big Apple.

Heather and Brooks are Wall Street tycoons and have a cute apartment in Brooklyn Heights. Heather is going to art school at night and is enjoying the challenge. We all went to Chowings for Gambols the Friday night before the wedding — I'd forgotten how much fun that was. After a reception at the Willow Oaks Country Club, Tanya and Randy whisked off to Bermuda for a honeymoon. They returned to Richmond, where Tanya is completing an internship at Ernst & Young and Randy is a dentist.

Well, I have one wild wedding to report! Kim Rabenberg, in traditional Rabenberg style, planned her wedding in only 10 days, and was married to Scott Barnes on Sept. 23, in Marbella, Spain. They said their vows on a hillside overlooking the Mediterranean, and were then married legally in Gibraltar. Since just a couple of her close friends from St. Louis were able to attend, Kim's family will be throwing a party for her in November.

Scott and Kim will be settling in St. Louis, where he is a computer software designer and Kim is busy with entrepreneurial ventures in marketing. You may wonder where I heard this exciting news — from Amy Marcos, who is busy planning her own April wedding to John "Jay" Barnes, a graduate of the Florida Institute of Technology. Jay is a manufacturer's representative for H.S. Gartner & Associates in Pompano Beach. Amy has recently moved to Lighthouse Point, Fla., just above Miami.

April weddings must be in style, because I was out in the City by the Bay on April 22, 1989, to serve as a bridesmaid in Beth Dodge '83 and Thad Weaver's wedding. The rehearsal dinner was at Trader Vic's — many mai tais for all! Thad and Beth took off for the reception in an antique Rolls Royce. Sue Hammerland DeSmith '83, Monique Valenti Brannon '83, Beth and I gathered for a W&M picture at the reception, held at the Claremont Country Club. Beth and Thad honeymooned up the California coast and returned to Wilmington, Del., one week later. Beth is a vice president for Maryland National Bank, and Thad just passed the bar and is practicing law.

A bit up north from Wilmington, David Erikson Hart and Deborah Brock took their nuptial vows in Pittsburgh on July 29. David's sister, Rebecca Hart '81, served as a bridesmaid and also read a prayer at the ceremony. Rebecca is living in London, working for Chase Manhattan.

Larry Gunter served as a groomsman and kindly sent me this report on the big event! Larry is living in Fredericksburg

THOMAS, ROST NAMED TO DEVELOPMENT POSITIONS

Joan Potter Thomas has been named director for annual support, and William Haven Rost has been named associate director for capital support. In her new position, Thomas serves as director of the William and Mary Annual Fund, responsible for planning, organizing and implementing programs designed to increase levels of current operating support from alumni, parents and friends. She will also direct an integrated mail and telephone program for $150 million in support of The Campaign for the Fourth Century, which will culminate with the tercentenary of the College in 1993. A member of the University Advancement staff since 1987, Thomas was coordinator for constituent relations from 1987 to 1989, becoming associate director for annual support in February. She is a graduate of the University of Michigan and is working toward a master's degree in English at William and Mary. Rost is responsible for directing William and Mary's Regional Campaign Program, a series of fund-raising campaigns being conducted in specific geographic areas throughout the nation in support of The Campaign for the Fourth Century. Rost, who was formerly a campaign associate from 1985-1989 for The Campaign for Indiana at Indiana University, received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Indiana University and served as an associate instructor and assistant soccer coach there.

and works for the Computer Sciences Corporation on the U.S. Navy's AEGIS project. David's father served as the best man. W&M guests included Kevin Corning, who is working for Kraft in Chicago. He just left the Army after five years of service. He and his wife, Casey Sponski '87, are enjoying life in the Windy City. Dave just returned from Germany, where he was stationed in the Army as a helicopter pilot. Dave and Deborah will live in Boston and Dave will be attending Harvard Business School this fall.

Diane Little reports of her wedding on Oct. 1, 1988, to Jim Ray. Both Diane and Jim are attorneys at the same law firm, although Jim works in the Minneapolis office and Diane works in St. Paul. Diane has taken on a new role of mother, due to the birth of their first child, Lauren Elizabeth, on July 13, 1989. Diane plans to return to work after the holidays. She also writes that Jo-anne Barakos Brokaw is working as a teacher in Coral Gables, Fla. Jo-anne and her husband, Tim, are expecting their first child in March.

Also down south is Cynthia Browning, who writes that she has just finished her first novel, and is managing a retail store called Crystals, in the French Quarter of New Orleans. Crystals specializes in metaphysical books, jewelry and minerals. Unfortunately, she won't be able to make Homecoming, but invites you '84 grads down for Mardi Gras!

Not far away in Tennessee, David Collins received his Ph.D. in biochemistry from the University of Tennessee in Knoxville on May 12. He has accepted a postdoctorate position at Washington University in St. Louis, where he will be working in immunology.

Two of our fellow classmates have made it big in the Burg and both were written up in the Virginia Gazette. Lance Harrington is truly a nuts-and-bolts kind of guy and has returned to Williamsburg, where he purchased the Williamsburg Hardware and recently celebrated the grand opening of his own store in August. Glenn Gormley, after completing the W&M MBA program, decided to purchase the Green Leaf Cafe. He rose from short order cook six years ago to sole proprietor today. So . . . next time you're in the Burg, be sure to nail down a bargain at the Williamsburg Hardware and sip a beer at the Leaf! Support those '84 grads!

Cindy and Bill Wagner recently left Williamsburg and relocated in Richmond. In May, Bill finished his William and Mary MBA. He began law school this summer at T.C. Williams at the University of Richmond and plans to earn his J.D. in two and a half years. Bill says that after so many years in the Tribe, it will seem strange to be a Richmond Spider! Cindy and Bill are enjoying watching their son, Dylan Patrick, grow — he was 1 year old in October!

Jamie Barnes is up in D.C., and is the marketing coordinator for Gershman, Brickner & Bratton, a marketing consulting firm.

Mark Edgren is busy in the Army and has received the Army Commendation Medal twice. He and his wife, Elizabeth Prisley Edgren, are enjoying traveling in Europe and learning German. Elizabeth received her certificate to teach English as a second language from George Mason in May '84 and is now employed as a secretary.

Linda and Kord Basnight are busy brushing up on their German as well, since they left in October for a three-year stay in Germany. Kord will be a prosecuting attorney for the Army. Linda just completed the masters (M.Ed.) program at U.Va. They will be living in a German town, and Kord's office is in a 16th-century castle!

Odette Mary Fadoul-Maroun writes from overseas, too. She and her husband, Antoine, are living in Paris. They were married in August 1988 and had their first child, Pierre Georges, on July 20, 1989. Odette is employed as a dentist and Antoine is a vice president with Citibank.

Although I haven't been overseas, my traveling hasn't stopped! This summer, I was in Los Angeles, Chicago, New York, Denver, Charleston and of course, D.C. David and I also made a trip down to see Alison and Greg Miller, in their snazzy new home in Gainesville, Fla. They have decorated it with much pizzazz and distinctive Thomas McNight prints. Ali continues her work with CSX Realty, which takes her across the state of Florida, and Greg is an OB/GYN intern at Shands Hospital at the University of Florida.

I will be doing a good bit of traveling over the next year — back home to Pennsylvania, to plan my October 1990 wedding! David Walls and I became engaged Sept. 30 on the steps of the Jefferson Memorial (with a little advance planning and help from Anne and David Brand!) David was an undergraduate at Davidson and then attended Harvard Law School. He is a bankruptcy attorney with Moore & Van Allen, a large law firm here in Charlotte — now you know the real secret of why I moved from the Capital City to the Queen City!

If you didn't make it to our fifth-year reunion, be sure to drop me a line. I promise the next column will be filled with the five-year updates from your classmates!

86 Kristen M. White 3492 Martha Custis Drive Alexandria, VA 22302

Hello to everyone! Do hope you're all are doing well and gearing up for the '90s! It's hard to believe that we've just had our fourth Homecoming.

This fall has been chock-full of weddings, beginning with the nuptials of Tricia Banks '87 and Scott Russell in late September. The ceremony and reception were held at the lovely home of the bride on the York River near Gloucester, Va. More than 400 well-wishers gathered for the occasion, including Julie Anderson '87, John Kammeier, Tom Johnson '85, Rusty Andrews '87, Adam Hogge, Chantal Emerson (Adam and Chantal have revised their nuptial plans and are now getting married in 1990), T.J. Holland, Chris Lindsay and myself.

The wedding party included bridesmaids Julie Lopp Andrews '87 and Karen Colmie Heckelman '87. Tricia and Scott honeymooned in Bermuda (narrowly missing Hurricane Hugo) and are now settled in their new home in Frederick, Md., where Tricia works for ADP and Scott is in sales at Ferguson Enterprises. All the best to both of you!

Cathy Creekmore and Ted Decker '85 said their vows in the Wren Chapel in mid-October. What a beautiful wedding and such a pretty bride! We couldn't have asked for better weather! The wedding party included Lynn Hale; Craig Hillegas '84, who lives in California, and J. P. Ottaway '84 who is still in advertising at J. Walter Thompson.

I sang "The Wedding Song" for the occasion, and admit to being nervous about singing in front of all those people! Guests at the ceremony and elegant Alumni House reception included Liz Somers Ottaway '84, who is now living in Grosse Pointe, Mich., with husband J.P. where she's in banking, Liese Cochran '87, Jeff Mosher '85, Tom Lang '85 and Jimmy Ervin '85. After a honeymoon in the Fiji Islands, Cathy and Ted will be living in Sydney, Australia, where Ted is an international banker for Pittsburgh National Bank.

Next to tie the proverbial knot were Lynn Hale and Billy Riggs, who were married in Richmond's Third Presbyterian Church. Lynn wore her mother's gown and looked simply radiant! Bridesmaids included Cathy Creekmore, Margaret Ekling (she's at Columbia in New York getting her M.B.A. and loves it there), myself and a number of Lynn's high school friends, Jane Butler, Mike Shuler, Liese Cochran '87, Ellen and Doug Brinkley, Elizabeth Flamm and Sharon Myers '87 were on hand for this special occasion.

Following a reception at the Bull and Bear Club (what a view!), the happy couple left for a honeymoon in the Bahamas (you weren't expecting that locale, were you, Lynn! Mr. and Mrs. William Riggs III are now living in Richmond, where Billy is an architect and Lynn is a librarian in the Henrico County Public Library System (working with Lucinda Snyder Whitehurst, no less). Congrats to a wonderful couple!

Jenny Thompson wrote this summer from the great Southwest where she was attending Military Intelligence Officer's Basic Course at Fort Huachuca in Arizona. Any other W&Mers in Arizona?

Elizabeth Molnar sent a picturesque postcard from Indonesia, where she'd been working on a computer software package at an Indonesian bank for Arthur Andersen. Talk about a job with travel potential! Betty has also been to Bali, Sydney and Hong Kong, and is now heading for New Zealand on business. She reports that she loves the traveling and is doing well.

Congratulations are in order for my freshman roomie, Marsha Domzalski. She and Christopher Hope took the plunge in late June. Her bridal party included Darby Drew, Deb Hollen, Terry Boyle and Ann Shufflebarger. Looks like Yates 3rd Center was well represented, Marsha! After a honeymoon in the lovely Caribbean island of Aruba, the happy couple returned to their home in Centreville, Va. Best wishes to you both!

Jennifer Finn wrote to say that she is now Jennifer Finn Duffy, having married Neil Duffy (USNA '84). Guests at the nuptials included Colleen Seauquist, Sharon Callahan, Susan Doyle, Kelly Doyle, Pat McParland, Pam Bitto and Laurie White. Jen and Neil are enjoying married life in Virginia Beach.

Kudos to Ed Grissom, who has passed the Virginia Bar on the first try and is now practicing in Chesapeake, Va.

Clem Chang and Jack Langan wrote to tell me about their Memorial Day bash attended by tons of W&M grads (the list is too numerous to mention here). Sounds like it was quite a party. Clem and Jack invite any of you passing through the social mecca of Hoekessin, Del., to look them up.

Jenifer Borum dropped me a line to say she's finished her master's in art history at SUNY Stony Brook in New York and is now thinking about getting a Ph.D. in art history. In the meantime, Jenifer has been doing free-lance writing for art journals and will be moving to the Big Apple shortly.

Susie Brinkley and John Means will be married by the time this column reaches you. I'll fill you in on the details in the next issue.

Speaking of weddings, belated good wishes are in order for Sharon Winn '85 who was married this past August here in Virginia.

Alex Cochran is still with the Army in Germany. He'll be coming back to the states next May, where he will undoubtedly find himself homesick for the Alps and German beer.

I ran into Mike Powell '85 at the Pentagon where he works. Mike tells me that baby Jeffrey is doing well, as is wife Jane '85. Hope you two are finally getting some rest.

Speaking of babies, Terry Lancaster Dolson delivered a bouncing baby boy in early October. Connor Douglas Dolson weighed in at 9 pounds, 3 ounces. He is an adorable, happy and healthy baby! Terry and husband Drew '87 J.D. are living in Richmond, where Drew is practicing law at the venerable firm of Christian, Barton, Epps, Brent and Chappell. Impressive. Are any of you sleeping through the night yet?

Terry also tells me that Maria Hanahoe is getting married shortly (congrats, Ria!) and that Bill Shonk '84 and Carrie are happily married and still living in Dallas.

Steve Richards is still working in Chicago and leading a far from dull life. In less than a month's time his scooter was stolen, his car was broken into and he was hit by a car. Yikes! Yes, he's OK, but is spending a lot of time talking to doctors and insurance men. Look on the bright side, Steve — at least the market didn't crash.

Julie Wallace Dunn and husband Tom '87 are happily settled in their brand new townhouse in Durham, N.C. Tom is at law school in Chapel Hill and reportedly doing quite well there (I don't expect any less from you!). Julie is still with Procter and Gamble and working hard for them.

A huge bouquet of best wishes goes to Joanna Ashworth '84, who dropped me a line to say she got engaged on the steps of the Jefferson Memorial recently! Joanna is living in Charlotte, N.C., where she is with First Union National Bank. I'm so happy for you, Joanna!

Dave Maxwell is at Duke Law School, where he is undoubtedly working hard. How's academia treating you, Max?

Talked to Laurie White recently and she tells me that she's getting married next spring. All good wishes!

When last heard from, Sutton Stephens was still in Tunisia working for the Peace Corps. Lynn Hale and Jane Butler have heard from her, and she is reportedly doing quite well over there.

Finally, hello to Mike and Shannon Lewis '87, who made it through October's earthquake in California (they live in Santa Cruz). So glad to hear that you two are safe and sound!

Last but not least, I'm still here at Heron, Burchette, Ruckert & Rothwell. The Pete Rose investigation is over (finally) but the workload never seems to decrease. Thank goodness I enjoy my job.

After much thought and serious consideration, I have decided to put off law school for now and am rethinking my life! Perhaps I should become a professional bridesmaid! (I certainly have enough dresses!) At any rate, all is well in Washington and I'm staying out of trouble. Sure hope that life is treating each and every one of you nicely. Keep those letters coming!

Leeann Crocker and Charles Rogers were to be married on Dec. 4. Little brother Wayne Rotella was to be the best man.

Bill Hertz tells me that he and Tricia Ritenour are engaged. They are planning a July 1990 wedding.

Bill also told me that John Morgan and Molly McNeil plan a September 1990 wedding.

Erik Gustafson, who is still at Georgetown Law School, recently saw Godfrey Simmons in D.C. Godfrey seems to be doing well in his acting career. Look forward to seeing him on an upcoming episode of television's Unexplained Mysteries.

Julian McKinney is living in D.C. and working in the computer division for the Department of Justice.

Dave Gleason has moved back to D.C. from Baltimore and is still working for Arthur Andersen.

Frederick '48 and Lucy '47 Herman of Norfolk have announced their intention to donate their collection of Native American Art to the Muscarelle Museum of Art at William and Mary. The collection consists primarily of Inuit drawings but also includes drawings by American Eskimos, Inuit carvings, Northwest Coast Indian drawings and carvings, American Indian drawings and carvings as well as material from Central America. Longtime benefactors of the museum, the Hermans founded the Marian Herman Lania Collection at the Muscarelle which has grown to include approximately 60 contemporary German prints. In addition, the Herman Foundation has committed to the future placement of a distinguished and large Old Master drawing collection at the Muscarelle Museum of Art.

Hello to Wayne Rotella, who is working as a teller in a bank in the Burg and hopes to go back to school to earn a degree in education.

Jenny Whitaker and Jim McCreedy wrote from a beach house in Duck, N.C., where they and Monica Taylor, Denise Brogan, Lynn Kerr, Nancy Hill '89 and Frank LaRuffa had gathered to take a break before the fall began. In addition to watching Denise consume an entire box of Whitman Sampler chocolates, fun was had by all.

An update on the group: Denise is still an accountant at Price Waterhouse in North Jersey. Lynn is a second-year law student at Indiana University Law School; Jenny is in her second year of master's study in clinical exercise physiology at Indiana University and hopes to graduate in May 1990. And finally, I am still at Syracuse with a year and a half to go. I just closed a three-week run of Cynthia Heimerl's A Girl's Guide to Chaos, which I am glad to say was well-received. I am extremely busy taking classes, performing, working as the graduate intern for the business office at Syracuse Stage, and teaching classes for the Metropolitan School for the Arts in Syracuse and for the Syracuse Civic Center's Youth Theatre program.

If you are in the area please stop by. I'd love to see you! And WRITE! My mailbox is in a perpetual state of emptiness!

Charles Harmon Schepmoes, secretary of the Class of 1913 and William and Mary's oldest surviving alumnus, died Sept. 28, 1989, in Roanoke, Va., where he had been a resident of the United Methodist Home since his retirement in 1970.

The son of Ada Tudor and Harmon Schepmoes, he was born on a farm at Dendron near Williamsburg, June 7, 1891. He graduated from high school in 1909 and entered William and Mary as a student under the "Seven Wise Men" faculty, headed by Dr. Lyon G. Tyler, who served William and Mary as president from 1888 to 1919.

Chemistry Professor Dr. Van F. Garrett inspired him to pursue a career in chemistry. Elected to Phi Beta Kappa, Schepmoes served briefly as an instructor at the College after graduating in a class of 14 men. He earned both bachelor's and master's degrees from the College.

Known to his friends as "Skep" or "Skip" due to the pronunciation of his Holland Dutch name, Schepmoes went on to attend Northwestern University. He graduated in 1917 with a master of science degree and was honored with membership in the Sigma Xi fraternity.

At Northwestern he also studied law and later received his bachelor of law degree from Hamilton College of Law in Chicago, but never practiced.

After moving to Wilmington, Del., he was placed in charge of ammunition production for the U. S. armed forces by the Du Pont Co. The firm intervened to block his induction into the Army, thereby preventing him from service during World War I.

Following the war, Schepmoes became involved in the production of dyes based on formulae acquired by Du Pont from famed German patents. By 1927 he had moved from New York state to Reading, Pa., where he became associated with the Althouse Chemical Co. and later with Sholler Chemical Co.

As a consulting chemical engineer, he traveled widely through Southern states, dealing especially with companies specializing in hosiery, cotton products and rapidly developing synthetics.

Shortly after his retirement, Schepmoes and his wife, Ethel Gerrick, decided to move southward. The apartment they retained in the United Methodist Home in Roanoke fronted on the Roanoke Country Club golf course where he spent considerable time at his favorite sport. Playing until age 96, he was Roanoke's oldest active golfer.

A lifelong member of tiny Dendron United Methodist Church, which he supported faithfully, "Skep" clung to his Virginia roots with a special love for William and Mary.

"Skep was a handsome fellow, delightful in conversation and full of good humor," recalls longtime friend Carl Andrews '27 of Roanoke. "We who knew him here will miss him greatly."

Similar sentiments were echoed by Dirk Burruss '90 of Richmond. Burruss and his wife met the Schepmoes more than six years ago through their grandparents, who were next-door neighbors of the Schepmoes.

Burruss remembers Schepmoes as someone with strong values and penetrating insights. "He never took from life," says Burruss. "He was always looking for ways to contribute. And he was a true scientist, never looking for the obvious. He stayed mentally active in a number of ways — he watched cable news religiously."

It was Schepmoes' love of William and Mary that largely influenced Burruss to come here. "He thought a lot of the people he had known here. William and Mary, he said, had provided him with a strong foundation early in life."

Schepmoes is survived by his wife, Ethel, and two cousins, Alice Tudor and Louise Briggs, both residents of Williamsburg.

Carter O. Lowance—the Penultimate Public Servant

Carter O. Lowance, an honorary alumnus and former executive vice president of the College of William and Mary, died Nov. 18 at the age of 78 in Williamsburg.

Described by friends and admirers as "The Little Governor," "The Little Giant," and "The greatest man Virginia produced since Thomas Jefferson," Lowance had served as an executive assistant to six governors and as assistant president of the Medical College of Virginia before he came to William and Mary in 1970 under President Davis Y. Paschall '32. He left in 1974 to rejoin Governor Mills E. Godwin '36 in his second administration.

Dr. Paschall said that Lowance "exemplified the finest personal and professional qualities so widely known from his service to the governors of Virginia."

"Carter possessed a broad understanding of the problems of publicly supported institutions of higher learning in Virginia," said Dr. Paschall, who added that "The College was fortunate to have him."

After Dr. Paschall retired in 1971, Lowance remained at William and Mary for the first three years of the Thomas A. Graves Jr. administration. Dr. Graves lauded Lowance's service to him as "absolutely invaluable. He was my right hand man when I arrived at William and Mary, and his contacts across the Commonwealth made all the difference in the world in introducing me to the College and state government." Dr. Graves said that over the years "Carter and I became very good friends. I have never known a finer gentleman than Carter Lowance."

James S. Kelly '51, who served both Paschall and Graves in high administrative capacities and now is assistant to President Verkuil, said that "From the time I met him, he was really a role model both personally and professionally. He put Virginia first."

It was a measure of Lowance's stature in Virginia that two past governors, the current governor and the future governor of the Commonwealth were all present at memorial service for Lowance in Williamsburg's Bruton Parish Church on Nov. 20. Former governors Godwin, Albertis S. Harrison and Governor Gerald L. Baliles and Governor-elect Douglas Wilder sat together at the service.

Lowance's nephew, Dr. Mason Lowance, described his uncle at the service as "a great man. . . Small of physical stature, Carter Lowance . . . stood tall in the midst of us, and provided the kind of leadership that only great men can provide." Noting that Lowance's professional biography was familiar to most Virginians, he said that less well-known was "the effectiveness of his quiet power, his ability to gain consensus through LISTENING rather than aggressively talking; his genuine belief in the value of other people and his ability to lead them by convincing each one, QUIETLY.

"Carter was a 'GENTLE MAN, in the literal sense, and a 'Gentleman' in the Virginia sense. . . Carter Lowance gave a new meaning to the phrase 'Virginia Gentleman' and ironically, it was his self-effacing gentle modesty and genuine concern for other people that gave him immense power—the power of their respect and their willingness to follow."

Dr. Lowance said that his uncle was so modest and self-effacing that few knew that he was a front line soldier in World War II as a member of the 82nd Airborne and was part of the invasion force that crash-landed in gliders one day after the Normandy invasion. Lowance was already at St. Mere Eglise when the second wave landed at Omaha Beach, sending reports of German troop movements by radio.

After a stint in journalism, Lowance began his career in government as executive assistant to William Tuck '19 in 1947. He subsequently served as a confidant and advisor to Governors Battle, Stanley, Almond, Harrison and Godwin, who described Lowance as not only a valued advisor but a dear friend and father figure as well.

Press praise of Lowance was widespread. "Democrats and Republicans alike respected Mr. Lowance as a man of eminent fairness and unquestioned integrity," said the Richmond Times-Dispatch in a typical comment. "Virginia is a better state because he chose to devote so many of his years and so much of his ability and energy to efforts to make it so."

William and Mary expressed its gratitude to Lowance when it conferred an honorary doctor of laws degree on him at Charter Day in 1977.

"We of this College community have prospered exceedingly from the strength of character and richness of mind which have been your gifts to those with whom you have associated through 30 years of public service in government and higher education," read the citation. "Your unbending integrity, grace, courtesy and good humor are the attributes of that legendary person, the true Virginian. . . Known for a generation as the 'Little Governor,' you symbolize the stability and durability of this Commonwealth's government."
