William and Mary Inaugurates "The Right One"

By S. Dean Olson

On a sun-bathed morning in the rear of the Wren Building on Friday, Oct. 16, 1992, Timothy J. Sullivan '66 was inaugurated as the 25th president of the College of William and Mary.

Although the inauguration incorporated the appropriate pomp and circumstance and elevated rhetoric of an academic ceremony, James Dyke, the Virginia Secretary of Education, best summed up the feeling among the audience when he quoted singer Ray Charles in reference to the new president: "You Got The Right One, Baby!"

Beginning with the ringing of the Wren Bell at 10:38 a.m. and ending just before noon, the inaugural, which attracted delegates representing universities from England to California, featured greetings from Chancellor Warren Burger, former Chief Justice of the United States, and five other speakers: Secretary Dyke on behalf of the Commonwealth of Virginia, President John T. Casteen III of the University of Virginia, on behalf of the Virginia Institutions of Higher Learning; Judith Ewell, Newton Professor of History, on behalf of the faculty of the College; Joseph R. Price '93, president of the Student Association, on behalf of the students; and Joseph W. Montgomery '74, president of the Society of the Alumni, on behalf of the alumni.

After he was inaugurated by Harry L. Carrico, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Virginia, Sullivan stepped to the podium and outlined his vision for William and Mary in an address titled "The Future of Our Past."

Drawing heavily on his personal experience from nearly 30 years of association with William and Mary, as a student, teacher, administrator and alumnus, Sullivan revealed his love for the College by quoting a visitor to Williamsburg in 1804 who had written: "As I was yesterday walking in the College garden in company with Bishop Madison, [I was] brought your letter. The pleasing manner of this place would, I believe, cause me to stay for some little time, but the advantages of the College, Sir, I should think will keep me here forever."

Sullivan then told the audience: "Well, I will tell you that another young man was likewise smitten in more recent years. You're looking at him."

The new president said it was 30 years ago in September 1962 that he left Ohio for the long journey to Williamsburg to enter William and Mary as a freshman. Passing through "the gentle majesty of the Blue Ridge...the land flattened out into the Tidewater, and I was visited by Williamsburg's most dubious gift: its humidity. The heat laid upon this then unseasoned northern boy like a great weight from which no escape was possible. But, I survived, and found like so many before me that the heat doesn't last, but the beauty, graciousness and charm of this community endure."

Since that first encounter with William and Mary, Sullivan received his degree as a Phi Beta Kappa graduate, earned a law degree from Harvard, served in Vietnam as a decorated Army officer, returned to the College as a law professor and later as dean and was named president of his alma mater in April.

"Standing here today, as William and Mary's 25th President," said Sullivan, "kindles emotions too complex to capture with any words at my command."

"A palpable joy is part of what I felt—and my desire to share with each of you something of that joy is my excuse for this piece of personal reminiscence."

After the sentiment came the vision, for, as the new president said, "...sentiment never built a future." An academic institution requires much more, he said, comparing it to American democracy, which was once described as "a good horse."

"Where," asked Sullivan, "would I have us ride?"

On the brink of its 300th anniversary, Sullivan described William and Mary as "a university of special quality." He said undergraduate education continues to hold "primacy of place," but it is no longer the only program upon which "our national and international reputation depends." While the College honors its past by retaining proudly its historic name, "we shall better serve the future if we embrace honestly the incontestable fact that we have become a university" where graduate and professional students now constitute nearly a third of the College's enrollment. Sullivan then enumerated some of the things he believes William and Mary should do:

- Offer the finest public program of undergraduate education in the nation;
 - Build graduate and professional programs of equal eminence;
 - Find the means to create a library worthy of a great university in the technological age;
 - Match William and Mary's high standards of faculty performance with a faculty support and development program of equal quality;
 - Review the quality of student life with the clear goal of offering students a rounded and unique experience that bears the distinctive stamp of William and Mary's history and values;
 - Expand initiatives in international studies and foreign languages to assure that each student is comfortable not only in the role of citizen of America but citizen of the world;
 - Protect the beauty of the William and Mary campus and guard its glory as "a precious inheritance that we must bequeath undamaged to those who come after us."
- Sullivan invited others to share with him their ideas. But he told them that after 30 years, he has more ideas that he hasn't tried. "Let us work together to see what we can make of the dream we share."
- "More than two hundred years ago, our College helped define and lead the struggle for American independence," he said in closing. "More than two hundred years later, and on the eve of our Fourth Century, may we now, today, with affection and resolve, commit to making William and Mary a leading force in America's renewal."

"Tim Sullivan brings to the College an extraordinary background. He is both a child of this institution and a shaper of it. Tim, we applaud your thoughtfulness, your wisdom, your good wit, your practical sense of what matters to the Commonwealth and the College."—John T. Casteen, III, president of the University of Virginia

"It is especially fitting that the President who will lead us into our fourth century has experienced this institution as a student, a faculty member, and an administrator."—Judith Ewell, Newton Professor of History

"Thirty years ago, Tim Sullivan came to William and Mary as a student. And although over the past thirty years his responsibilities have grown and his wisdom increased, he remains a student. It is and was his willingness and readiness to forever pursue knowledge in its many forms that endeared him to us. It is this same love that makes him unequally matched to lead us in our pursuit of knowledge."—Joe Price, president of the Student Association

"I can hardly think of anyone of my acquaintance who would be a better choice for the presidency than the man who has been selected—Timothy J. Sullivan."—Chancellor Warren Burger

"Thanks to the wisdom of your Board of Visitors, as one of Tim's favorites, Ray Charles, would say, 'You Got The Right One, Baby!'"—James Dyke, Secretary of Education for the Commonwealth of Virginia

"We take great pride in your selection. For it was from among us who revel in the spirit of this College that you were chosen."—Joe Montgomery, president of the Society of the Alumni

RINGING FAR AND NEAR

Family Values

By Barry Adams

Forgotten somewhere amid the discarded magazines, newspapers and journals that diligently reported every aspect of the recent election are paragraphs and substantial articles about family values. The procurement of this two-word phrase to be bantered about, perceived by one candidate and interpreted by another apparently caused some uneasiness among the electorate. Not necessarily because values have changed but because families, and the definition of families, have indeed changed. Some sociologists would caution that much of the core curriculum of family values remain intact. The mistake may have been translating a new diversity among families into a value system gone totally askew.

While listening and watching and enjoying the Homecoming inauguration of William and Mary's 25th president it seemed apparent that institutions also have family values. And just as the family has become more inclusive it has also become more diverse.

We should not repeat the perception that diversity of family leads to the neglect of basic values. Rather, our extended family can help strengthen the values of William and Mary we cherish.

President Sullivan's inauguration speech reminded many of us of what the College has become. "... A very special kind of university," he stated. "Our place is not among those who seek to be all things to all people. We have no wish to become an academic supermarket. We must muster the courage to say no ... no to new programs that we cannot do well ... no to significant enrollment increases that will destroy forever our special scale and ... no to those who argue that growth is a legitimate measure of educational quality."

The thunderous applause from students, faculty, staff, friends and alumni that day confirmed that President Sullivan had reconfirmed some basic but important family values.

Moments earlier he had inspired the audience of several thousand with a desire for the College to work toward a destination of greatness. "A greatness worthy of our past." He challenged our family to become dedicated to "a relentless search and a tireless commitment to become a leading and affirming force in contemporary American life. Together we must make this College an ally to the future of our people."

Commentaries surfacing recently among higher education apologists and critics alike seem to look longingly at the type of educational institutions William and Mary represents. In a November edition of The Chronicle of Higher Education, UCLA Professor Alexander W. Astin, is quoted from his book What Matters in College: Four Critical Years Revisited where he attributes some of the dilemmas of higher education to post-World War II policies. According to Professor Astin, they shifted guidance of higher education to one more associated with "Economic than educational considerations." Professor Astin writes that "... the problems with strengthening and reforming American higher education are fundamentally problems of values." He goes on to state how "Values are fundamental ... whom we admit and on what basis, what we teach them and how we teach it, what rules and requirements will govern our students' conduct, how to test and certify our students, whom to hire and the criteria for hiring, tenuring and promoting them, the manner in which we treat others as professional colleagues, the topics we choose for our research, and how we faculty use our discretionary time."

These values are intrinsic among the William and Mary family — past, present and, no doubt, the future members. Because we recognize and frequently are compelled to reiterate our obligation to them, I have little doubt that the College will continue to build, as President Sullivan described it, "An education which trains intellect and builds character, which provides the tools for personal success and yet creates an ethos that impels every one of our graduates to see that part of their life's duty is to serve and to lead ... to make a difference great and small...in the life of their time and the condition of mankind."

These pronouncements certainly aren't intended to summarize or conceptualize our William and Mary family values into compact covenants. They simply awaken us to the reality of having a continuity and consistency among family.

Five Members Elected to Society of the Alumni Board

Five members have been chosen in the annual election for the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni. Two new members will join the board, and three will retain their seats as incumbents. Prince to Visit at Charter Day

By Ray Betzner

His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, will be the keynote speaker at the Feb. 13 Charter Day Convocation, marking the 300th anniversary of the College of William and Mary.

Charter Day will be a highlight of the yearlong Tercentenary of the College, which was chartered in 1693 by the British monarchs King William III and Queen Mary II. The participation of Prince Charles in the Charter Day event recalls the link to the College's beginnings.

"I know I speak for everyone involved with the plans for this celebration when I say that we are thrilled and honored to have Prince Charles as our keynote speaker," said Rector Hays T. Watkins during a news conference in the College's Sir Christopher Wren Building.

The Charter Day convocation will begin at 10:30 a.m. in William and Mary Hall and is open to the public, although tickets will be required. During the convocation, the College will award several honorary degrees, receive greetings from universities around the world, and hear sections from the royal charter.

Alumni who wish to attend the convocation may reserve up to two tickets by returning the form on page seven of this Gazette.

After the convocation, Prince Charles will attend a luncheon in Trinkle Hall before leaving William and Mary.

Watkins noted that this is the second visit to the College for Prince Charles. While at William and Mary on May 2, 1981, the prince became the first person to receive an honorary fellowship, the highest honor that a college of royal charter can confer.

The only other person to receive an honorary fellowship from William and Mary is Princess Margriet of the Netherlands. She accepted the honor in 1989 during the 300th anniversary of the Glorious Revolution, the event which brought King William and Queen Mary to the throne.

Prince Charles

The Charter Day convocation will be the climax of Historic Charter Week, which begins Feb. 8 with a campus ceremony at noon in front of the Wren Building. The U.S. Postal Service will unveil a postcard featuring the Wren during the ceremony.

Also during Historic Charter Week, the College will open a historical exhibit at Earl Gregg Swem Library featuring items from the College archives, and hold a one-day symposium on the future of liberal arts education. The symposium will conclude with a debate in William and Mary Hall moderated by television journalist Roger Mudd. A multi-image presentation on the history of the College will also be premiered.

Additional events are scheduled throughout the year, with special attention given to an expanded Homecoming schedule. Homecoming will be the College's birthday party, with its traditional parade down historic Duke of Gloucester Street in Williamsburg, a football game against Villanova and outdoor receptions. The weekend will culminate with a community-wide birthday celebration at Busch Gardens on Saturday, Oct. 23.

Prince Visited College in 1981

This will be the second visit of the Prince of Wales to the College of William and Mary. His initial visit to the College came on May 2, 1981, to receive an honorary fellowship, the first person to receive the college's highest honor.

The Prince of Wales' four-hour visit to campus started with a helicopter landing at Barksdale field, adjacent to Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall on Jamestown Road, where a crowd awaited his arrival. He was taken for a quick tour of the President's House, home to then-President Thomas Graves and his wife, Zoë.

From there, the Prince was escorted to the Great Hall of the Sir Christopher Wren Building for a lunch with 74 guests. Students dressed in period costumes on loan from the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation served the meal.

After receiving a pen and ink sketch of the Wren Building—drawn by John F. Morton '58—the Prince went to Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall, where more than 800 people waited for the convocation to begin.

The Honorary Fellowship given to the Prince of Wales is the highest honor that a college of royal charter can confer on persons of great personal and familial distinction. The award makes the person a member of the College for life.

In conferring the honorary fellowship, the College followed the custom of the institutions in England comparable to William and Mary—the ancient colleges of royal foundation in Oxford and Cambridge. It was the first fellowship ever conferred by an American college upon a member of the royal family.

In addition, the Prince of Wales received a silver pendant in the form of the College coat of arms to wear around his neck during the convocation.

In return, the prince dedicated an 1870 book now part of the collection at Earl Gregg Swem Library. The book—"Windsor Castle, Picturesque and Descriptive"—was commissioned by Queen Victoria and donated to the College by Malvern H. Omohundro '28.

During his speech, the Prince discussed the need to focus on the needs of individuals.

"We need to rediscover the importance of the small and vulnerable as opposed to the materially vast and physically great," he told the capacity audience.

"We have to learn that the modern way of growing great is through growing small again: so that men can operate in small units where everyone is recognizable as an individual and can contribute as an individual."

After the convocation, Prince Charles once again was warmly greeted by a large crowd as he was escorted to a limousine. After a brief trip to Duke of Gloucester Street, he left Williamsburg.

John H. Garrett Jr. '40, as president of the Society of the Alumni, presented Prince Charles with a gift during his 1981 visit to the College.

Alumni Service is "All in The Family"

Four dedicated William and Mary alumni currently share the responsibilities as alumni chapter presidents. But what makes these four different from other chapter presidents is that they also share a familial bond. Pat King Sell '58, who has served as president of the San Diego Alumni Chapter for many years, has recently been joined by her daughter, Sherri Sell Phillips '83, who has presided over the Los Angeles Alumni Chapter for the past year.

Cementing the William and Mary East-West coast connection is another related team — brother and sister Edward Lull '83, president of the San Francisco Alumni Chapter, and Jeanne Lull Hopke '80, president of the Williamsburg Alumni Chapter. "Both Ed and I share an enthusiasm for the College," said Jeanne. "The thing that ties us together is that we both felt like giving something back to the College," she said. Ed has served as president of the San Francisco chapter for a number of years, while Jeanne is in her second year as president. Together, Pat, Sherri and Ed are responsible for alumni affairs for the entire state of California.

The Young and the Ambitious

On Aug. 24, 1984, a group of alumni gathered at the Alumni House to discuss a growing segment of William and Mary's alumni population—young alumni. Their goal was to develop a program focusing on the talent of the young, ambitious, energetic and transitory members of the past five graduating classes. Thus was born the Young Guard Council, the planning body for the Young Guard.

Since its inception, the Young Guard Council has been successful in connecting young alumni to the College and training future leaders of the Society of the Alumni. Two of the eight founding members currently serve as alumni chapter presidents, Rick Ramsey '81 of Roanoke, and Lee Ann Beam '80, who leads Virginia's Shenandoah Valley Alumni Club. The other founders are Sue Newman '81, Randy Rowlett '84, Angela Taylor '83, Laura Brewer Freeman '82, Patty Whitmer '83 and Bobby Harris '84.

Today the council consists of 48 alumni from the classes of 1988-1992. They remain active in the life of the College and the Society through regional alumni chapters, the Alumni Admissions Network and career-related activities.

In an effort to develop further Young Guard alumni leadership, current leaders are encouraging broader participation. "I hope 1992-93 becomes the year that alumni from the classes of 1988-92 realize that they belong to the Young Guard and that they can play a pivotal role in shaping the College's future," says Jeanie DeBolt Thomas '90, chair of the 1992-93 council.

W. Barry Adams, executive vice president of the Society, echoes Thomas' sentiments, "Graduates of the past five years do not have to wait until their fifth reunion to make an impact on the College; the Young Guard exists to get people involved immediately."

Thomas has other aspirations for 1992-93. She hopes that the council will build upon the success of last year, while mobilizing young alumni in the Tercentenary year. In 1991, the council boasted the highest participation of Young Guard members in the Alumni Admissions Network, established a lower required donation level for Young Guard alumni wishing to become President's Council members, and increased the number of Alumni Career Advisory Surveys (ACAS) in the Office of Career Services.

Last year the Young Guard Council participated in the Society's 150th anniversary, published the first edition of the Young Guard Newsletter, and held a successful post-game party at Homecoming.

Members became more visible through presentations to the Society's Board of Directors, a breakfast with campus administrators and the service of Maggie Margiotta '88 on the presidential search committee. Margiotta was 1991-92 council chair.

"Since young alumni move frequently, we want to emphasize the importance of keeping the Alumni Society informed of address changes," says Thomas. Her hope is that exciting programs and events like the Homecoming party will be incentives to young alumni to keep their addresses current. The 1993 gathering will be a hot dog and beer party at the Alumni House prior to the football game.

If you are a young and ambitious alumna and you wish to become involved in the Young Guard in any way, you are encouraged to contact Jon Lever, assistant director of alumni affairs, at 804/221-1173. If you are not able to volunteer, stay in touch by attending planned functions and keeping your address current.

Society Introduces START[®] Program

A new service - START - soon will be available to alumni through the Society of Alumni. The Society's Board of Directors endorsed the program at its fall meeting. START, which stands for Save Today and Retire Tomorrow, has received positive recognition in the business press for its innovative approach in enabling younger adults to save for the future. Derrick Mashore, vice president of sales for START's Central Region, answered the following questions about the program.

WHAT IS THE START PROGRAM?

START is a patented consumer savings service which allows you to accumulate significant retirement savings as you purchase day-to-day consumer products and services. No direct contributions are ever required.

HOW CAN START BENEFIT ME?

START allows you to add substantially to your future nest egg without directly contributing any money of your own. You will be saving while spending on everyday purchases. That's how START members make every dollar count twice.

HOW DOES START WORK?

By purchasing from START participating companies, a percentage of what you spend on things like long distance telephone calls, travel, household furnishings, airline tickets and clothing, is contributed to an escrow account on your behalf. If you elect to invest this money in a STARTPlus Annuity, you will earn tax-deferred interest that is compounded daily. The annuity is offered and guaranteed by Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York, N.Y. (MetLife).

WHAT PERCENTAGE OF MY PURCHASES WITH START PARTICIPATING COMPANIES WILL BE CREDITED BACK TO ME?

The actual percentage contributed on your behalf is based on your total annual spending with START participating companies less taxes, shipping and handling costs:

- $1 to $1,000 - 1 percent contribution
- $1,001 to $2,000 - 3 percent contribution
- More than $2,000 - 6 percent contribution

WHAT HAPPENS NEXT?

Each quarter, based on your membership date, when the amount in escrow reaches $100, (1) your funds will automatically be deposited into a STARTPlus Annuity earning tax-deferred, compound interest which over time will grow into a substantial nest egg, or (2) you may elect to receive your contributions in cash.

HOW MUCH DOES IT COST TO JOIN AND REMAIN A MEMBER OF START?

Right now, for a limited time, we are offering a charter lifetime membership for $25. No fees, no dues - ever!

THERE MUST BE A CATCH. ARE THERE RISKS IN BECOMING A MEMBER OF START?

No, your membership comes with an unconditional guarantee. If you ever want your $25 back, just ask. Period. In addition to refunding your fee, we will also give you a check for all of your savings currently in escrow. If you have a MetLife STARTPlus Annuity, it will remain in effect.

HOW BROAD IS THE RANGE OF START PARTICIPATING COMPANIES?

You can save 1 to 6 percent of all the money you spend on long distance calls, clothing, airline tickets, household furnishings, car rentals, electronics, food gifts, vacations, sporting goods, employment assistance and more. The ever-growing list includes MCI, Spiegel, GE Capital, Small Fleet, Eddie Bauer, Figi's, Hertz, Club Med and many others.

HOW DO THE PARTICIPATING COMPANIES BENEFIT?

In today's marketplace the battle for loyal customers is more intense than ever. START selects only one company per industry as a participating company. Therefore, the START program provides participating companies with significant savings by encouraging customer loyalty.

HOW WILL I KEEP TRACK OF MY START ACTIVITY?

START will send you regular personal statements. When you open your STARTPlus Annuity, MetLife will also send you a quarterly statement. You can also call our Customer Satisfaction Center to find out your escrow account balance.

HOW CAN I BECOME A START MEMBER?

In the next few weeks, you will receive a START brochure that will enable you to enroll in the START program.

Attention, Parents of High School Children . . .

The Student Alumni Liaison Council of the Society of the Alumni is hosting the fifth annual Student Host Program for children of alumni on March 25-26, 1993. If your son or daughter is a high school junior or senior interested in attending William and Mary, the program is a great opportunity to gain an "insider's view" of the College and campus life. Participants will have the opportunity to spend one day and one night at the College during spring semester, going to classes, taking tours and otherwise experiencing college life with members of the Student Alumni Liaison Council. If you are interested in this program and would like more information, call 804/221-1174 or write Student Host Program, Society of the Alumni, P. O. Box 2100, Williamsburg, VA 23187-2100. Participants will be selected on a first-come, first-served basis.

Nominations Are Invited for 1993 Alumni Board Election

All alumni are encouraged to submit names in consideration for next year's election for the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni. Information and supporting materials regarding each nominee should be submitted on a nomination form, available by writing Alumni Board of Directors, P. O. Box 2100, Williamsburg, VA 23187-2100, or by calling 804/221-1165.

Nominations must be received by March 1, 1993. Although this is the final deadline, early nominations are encouraged in order to allow ample time for contacting each nominee and compiling background information for the Nominating Committee.

The Nominating Committee will meet in early spring to review suggested nominees. Members of the committee include Alvin Anderson '70, '72 J.D. of Williamsburg, chair; Thomas Smith '77, Glen Allen, Va.; Bill Smith '48, Richmond; Virginia McLaughlin '71, Williamsburg; and Jeanne Lull Hopke '80, Williamsburg.

The committee will nominate two individuals for each of the five board vacancies that will occur in 1994. The slate will be published in the June issue of the Alumni Gazette, and the election will be held next fall. All alumni who contribute to a recognized fund of the College will be eligible to vote.

Alumni and Friends Bask in Homecoming Glow

On the eve of the College's 300th anniversary, a warm glow spread across campus as thousands of alumni returned to celebrate Homecoming weekend Oct. 15-18. The inauguration of Timothy J. Sullivan '66 on Friday morning in the Wren Yard began the weekend for many alumni. Under a brilliant sun, alumni from 1916 to 1992 witnessed the historic ceremony alongside faculty, students, staff and friends of the College.

Larry White of Great Falls, Va., who returned for his 25th reunion, later commented, "I was very moved by the inauguration - the music of the Choir, the speakers, the setting." Several of White's classmates made similar comments when they gathered for the Class of 1967 "Big Chill Colloquy" on Friday afternoon. Ironically, many class members who never knew one another as undergraduates became unbelievably close in the course of the two-hour discussion that touched on Vietnam, race relations, the feminist movement and other issues that revolutionized their young adult lives.

Adding to the warmth of "A Class Act," the theme of this year's festivities, were record-setting crowds, particularly for Saturday's Luncheon on the Lawn at the Alumni House. More than 1,300 picnic lunches were served while old friends visited and got ready for the Tribe's 43-15 victory over Towson State. Group photos brought together masses of alumni celebrating reunions for the classes of 1947, 1952, 1957, 1962, 1967, 1972, 1977, 1982 and 1987.

Two class reunions broke all previous attendance records. The Class of 1982 topped the previous 10-year reunion record with 217 members registered for events. Numbers for the Class of 1972 also went over the 200 mark, with 214 alumni registering for 20th-reunion activities.

The weekend marked two special anniversaries. The Society of the Alumni, which observed its 150th anniversary this year, hosted an even grander annual alumni dinner and dance on Friday evening in Trinkle Hall. The previous evening in Trinkle, Homecoming weekend was launched with the 20th anniversary banquet of the Order of the White Jacket. A champagne toast, birthday cake and music for dancing by the Ed D'Alfonso Trio added to the festivities. The after-dinner program included the awarding of $1,500 student scholarships to Lisa M. Cheung '93, Richmond; Tracy M. Humphrey '93 J.D., Richmond; Craig S. Krimball '93, Burnsville, Minn.; Christina L. Lucas '94, Virginia Beach, Va.; David E. Milstein '93, Arlington; Kasasira E. Mwine '95, Wheaton, Md.; Eileen T. O'Brien '94, Williamsburg; Walter H. Of the total gift, $100,000 will support Swem Library and $25,000 will go toward the proposed expansion of the Alumni Center in which the Class of 1967 Office will recognize classmates who served or died in Vietnam. The balance of the gift will fund a scholarship for students who experience a significant change in their financial situations while in school.

Swem's Special Collections : Books of All Time

by Peggy Shaw

The late 19th-century British critic John Ruskin once wrote, "All books are divisible into two classes: the books of the hour and the books of all time." In Swem Library's Special Collections Division, staff assemble the books and manuscripts of all time.

The 30,000 rare books, one million manuscripts and thousands of items in archives that compose Special Collections reflect particularly strong holdings in American history and Virginia. University Archives also documents the history and activities of the College from 1693 to the present with official records of daily operations, publications written by or about William and Mary associates, newspaper clippings, scrapbooks and artifacts.

But as substantial as the College's collection is, it needs continual enhancement and nurturing, according to University Librarian Nancy H. Marshall.

Through the Campaign for the Fourth Century, the College is seeking to raise a total of $12.5 million to support conservation, preservation and acquisitions. To Special Collections, the money would mean the development of a solid endowment fund, on which the rich collection could rely in perpetuity.

Special Collections funds are needed, for example, not only to procure rare books and manuscripts but also to preserve them. Although steps are taken to protect the collection through temperature and humidity controls and strict rules of usage, tending to the needs of rare books and documents is an ongoing activity. And because state support for the library has decreased in recent years, private funds have become increasingly important.

Many of the irreplaceable books, manuscripts and archival materials owned by Swem Library, for example, suffer from what librarians lament as the "brittle book" problem, aggravated by aging and acidic paper. Some items need protective containers, and older photos often need to be retol.

"The significance of endowment in building a great university library cannot be overstated," said Marshall. "It would enable the College to salvage deteriorating materials. Thousands of research items will be lost unless preservation and conservation steps are taken."

According to Sally Kellam, director of library and museum development, endowment money would also give Special Collections the flexibility to purchase items that come on the market unexpectedly — books such as the College's early edition of Edmund Spenser's Faerie Queene (1596) and its first edition of John Locke's Some Thoughts Concerning Education (1693), or prized manuscripts like the 1782 "Frenchman's Map" of Williamsburg (the blueprint for the restoration of Colonial Williamsburg), all of which reside in Special Collections today.

Other gems of the College collection include a printed journal kept by George Washington when he was 21, Paul Revere's engraving of the Boston Massacre (1770), and an extremely rare copy of the first cookbook ever published in the Virginia colony, The Compleat Housewife; or Accomplish'd Gentlewoman's Companion, printed in Williamsburg in 1742. The handwritten copy of William and Mary's charter, believed to have been sent to Governor Andros in Virginia in 1693, three letters from William III setting up funding for the new College, and a photograph of William and Mary's 1897 Annual Dinner are also unique parts of Special Collections.

Books considered for Special Collections are those printed in America before 1830, books printed in England or on the continent before 1775, Virginia before 1876, seminal works, certain illustrated books, miniature books and books with fore edge painting (watercolor paintings on the outer edges of the pages). The collection particularly supports the College's well respected master's and doctoral programs in American history and American studies, as well as research conducted by the Institute of Early American History and Culture.

Two of the rare collections in Swem Library are Paul Revere's engraving of the Boston Massacre (top) and an illustration of a knight from Edmund Spenser's The Faerie Queene (above).

"We have an incredibly fine collection of books and important manuscripts used by scholars from all over the world," Kellam said.

"It's a hallmark of this university and makes us a known entity.

"But if a fabulous document or a book that relates to William and Mary comes on the market and we don't have the money to buy it, it doesn't do us any good. We need funds to build and to catalogue the collections — to buy rare books and manuscripts and to protect them."

Margaret C. Cook, curator of manuscripts and rare books, said the College particularly needs resources to preserve post-Civil War materials. A cataloger is needed for the College's Horowitz Collection of dog books (the largest collection of canine books outside of the American Kennel Club), and microfilms must be made of modern political papers donated by such distinguished William and Mary alumni as John Dalton, Richard J. Davis and Herbert Bateman.

Additional rare books—considered special because of their author, binding, printing, origin or simply their importance in the history of ideas — are also needed by the library.

"One book we need is by Nicholas Trott, called The Laws of the British Plantations in America, Relating to the Church and Clergy, Religion and Learning (London, 1721)," said Cook. "It's an early book that contains the first printing of the William and Mary charter. We can't find it, and if an alumnus out there could get it for us, that would be wonderful."

Although the College buys a limited number of rare books and archival materials, such purchases are usually costly. "Last year we spent thousands of dollars purchasing a couple of items just for archives," explained Kay J. Domine, assistant university librarian for special collections and university archivist. "Things we want for our collection can be very expensive."

Over the years, Swem Library has received gifts from rulers, scholars and members of royalty. King Louis XVI of France, for example, donated materials to William and Mary in the 18th century when it was just a fledging institution, and descendants of the noted lawyer and jurist St. George Tucker donated the Tucker-Coleman Collection, which included one book given to Tucker, William and Mary class of 1772, by the author of the Declaration of Independence himself, Thomas Jefferson, class of 1762.

As of November, the Campaign for the Fourth Century had generated some $2.5 million for Swem Library. These endowment funds will help the university to preserve what Cook describes as the transmission of ideas in their original form.

"The closer one comes to an original edition, the closer one comes to the author's intent," she explained. "There is no beauty in the microfiche of a Shakespeare play or a photocopy of Jefferson's plan for Monticello.

"To collect rare books is to glimpse into the author's soul. In the rare book, there is a oneness between the author and reader."

Special Collections gratefully accepts gifts of materials. Photos, scrapbooks, awards, medals and publications related to William and Mary are most appreciated, as are rare books and manuscripts. Contact Kay Domine at 804/221-3091.

Tribe Seniors: The Last Hurrah

By Bob Jeffrey '74

For William and Mary's four senior basketball players, it seems they just got started and now it's almost time to go. Veterans of the CAA hoop wars, Brendan Connor, Thomas Roberts, Derrick Peters and Todd Cauthorn are gearing up for one last hurrah.

Between them they've suffered through losing seasons, injuries, and occasional frustrations about playing time. "As players we've been through everything from the highs of beating Richmond and Virginia Tech, to the lows of losing to UNC-Greensboro," said point guard Connor.

As friends, they've been through College together, grown up socially, intellectually, even roomed together. "We bonded together as freshmen. That year was tough, winning only six out of 28 games, but it made us closer," Roberts said.

The unity among the group is palpable. They have an easy rapport, sometimes echoing opinions and finishing one another's thoughts. "We're mentally tough," Cauthorn begins. "We've faced adversity," Roberts adds. "Nothing fazes us," Peters chimes in.

"As seniors we are unified. We back each other up. We really want to see each other do well," said Roberts.

Head coach Chuck Swenson hopes this resolve will translate into victories. "In many cases a player will give his best performance as a senior—not just because of experience, but also due to a commitment that he makes. A senior takes a different outlook because he knows it's his last chance in intercollegiate athletics. I think that this group realizes that and they want to go out on a winning note," Swenson said.

Each of the quartet has his own distinct role on the squad. Roberts is the main scorer; Connor the distributor of the ball; Cauthorn the inside strong man; and Peters the defensive stopper. They complement, and compliment, each other.

Roberts has been the big gun offensively since his freshman year, averaging 14 points per game or better every season. A three-time team captain, he has 1,295 career points, ninth on the list of all-time scorers for the Tribe. Barring injury he could move up as high as fifth by season's end.

Versatile and consistent, Roberts is a threat inside or out. He was second on the team in rebounding last season, can shoot the three and is one of the better free throw shooters on the squad with 75 percent.

Roberts will face new challenges this season, playing down low. "Thomas will probably be receiving double coverage or at least lots of defensive attention this year," said Swenson.

"Defensively he's going to have to guard

one of our opponent's inside players," Swenson said.

The prospect doesn't bother Roberts. "Despite losing some size and height on the inside, I think we'll compensate on the boards with quickness to the ball," he said.

Connor may be the most critical member of the quartet, if last season's performance is any indication. With Connor healthy and shooting 56 percent from behind the three-point line last January, the Tribe had won four straight games and seemed headed for a winning mark. Then Connor was lost with a knee injury and the bubble burst for the Tribe. W&M lost 12 of its last 14 contests.

"We're not as dependent on Connor as we were last year, with the development of David Cox and Kurt Small at guard," said Swenson. "But Connor makes a lot of decisions on the floor, and they're usually good ones."

"I've been playing with these guys since I was a freshman," said Connor. "We've developed good chemistry. I know how everyone reacts in game situations, and I try to get the ball to the players who are playing well and just ride the wave."

"To some extent our success is contingent on Connor," Roberts said. "He just makes every one else better."

"We tried to overcompensate for his absence last year. But now we've got four good guards to take up the slack," said Peters.

Cauthorn will have to take the biggest step forward of any of the four. Though he has plenty of experience, averaging close to six points and 3.5 rebounds in each of the last three seasons, Cauthorn has never started regularly in the pivot.

"Knowing he was going to be a starter has helped Todd mentally," said Swenson. "He's always been an intense competitor, fun to watch, and fun to coach. But now he seems to have his competitiveness under control, which should help him stay out of the foul trouble that limited his playing time somewhat."

Cauthorn's work habits are also an inspiration. "He may be the best conditioned player on the team, which is unusual for a big man," said Swenson.

Brendan Connor

"Todd is working so hard, that it's carrying over to the rest of the players," said Roberts.

Peters usually draws the premiere defensive assignment, covering the opponents'

Soccer Teams End Successful Season

By Bob Jeffrey '74

Soccer shone brightly at William and Mary this fall, with both men's and women's teams achieving national top 10 rankings and wins in the NCAA tournament.

Both dream seasons ended in the second round of the NCAA tourney. But neither the men's loss to N.C. State, 3-2, or the women's, 7-0 loss, to eventual champion North Carolina, spoiled the most successful season ever for Tribe soccer.

The men's team recorded the nation's longest unbeaten stretch in midseason. The 14-0-4 skein lifted the booters all the way to a number three national ranking at one point. Scoreless ties with top-ranked Virginia and second-ranked UCLA highlighted the streak. The Tribe won the CAA regular season title for the first time since 1987 and advanced to the finals of the league tourney before dropping a 2-1 decision to James Madison. Overall W&M finished 16-5-4, its best mark ever. In the last poll before the NCAA tournament, the Tribe ranked 12th among Division I-A schools.

Al Albert '69, coach since the sport's inception at the College, was named Coach of the Year for the CAA and the region. He is one of eight nominees for national coaching honors.

During one week in November both men's and women's teams were ranked in the top 10.

The lady booters tied the school record for victories by finishing 16-4. The Tribe knocked off N.C. State, 1-0, in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

Star scorers Rebecca Wakefield and Natalie Neaton were named to the Central Region first team All-America team and Coach John Daly was honored as the region's Coach of the Year.

Defensive line play was also very solid, with Alex Utecht, senior defensive end, being named the Quarterback Club's defensive player of the year. Defensive tackle Craig Staub returned from an injury with an outstanding senior year. He was also named Academic All-District, with a 3.49 GPA.

The culmination of a fine season came in the traditional regular season finale against Richmond. With the Spiders bidding for a I-AA playoff spot while the Tribe had opted for the Japan trip, most prognosticators liked UR's chances.

After a tight first half that ended with W&M leading, 14-13, the Tribe dominated Richmond in the second half to win, going away, 34-19. It marked the ninth victory in the last 11 meetings between the ancient rivals. And, it put the perfect cap on an unexpectedly excellent season, raising expectations for next year's gridiron centennial.

New Stars Lead Tribe to 9-2 Season

By Bob Jeffrey '74

In August Jimmie Laycock '70 was worried about how the Tribe would win points. Losing all-time performers like quarterback Chris Hakel '92 and running back Robert Green '92, both now with the Washington Redskins, left the William and Mary football team without the promise of its usual high scoring offense.

Only three months hence, Laycock and his team have almost completed another season for the books—the record books. New stars developed on offense, and the defense more than held its own. The result was a sparkling 9-2 record and 13th ranking in I-AA. It was the third time in Laycock's tenure that the Tribe notched nine victories.

With a January date in Japan against Nippon University remaining, W&M could reach the 10-win plateau for only the second time in school gridiron history. Only the 1990 squad has managed double figure wins so far.

Surprises abounded for the new-look Tribe. Junior quarterback Shawn Knight entered the season virtually without collegiate experience. Knight now has the stats: 124 of 195 passes completed for 1,890 yards and 11 touchdowns. Equally dangerous on the ground, Knight added 244 rushing yards and six TDs. For his efforts, he was named the Quarterback Club's Offensive Player of the Year.

In his most impressive performance, Knight completed 13 of 16 passes for 232 yards and three TDs in a 44-16 road win over Colgate. He was also the leading rusher with 62 yards in 11 carries for another TD.

An even more unlikely hero emerged in the form of redshirt freshman tailback Derek Fitzgerald. Confined to the scout team in '91, Fitzgerald became the focus of a rejuvenated Tribe rushing attack. Using quickness and elusiveness, Fitzgerald rushed for 835 yards and 11 scores, breaking Green's freshman rushing yardage record and equaling the freshman TD mark set by Jack Cloud in 1946.

Fitzgerald was twice named the ECAC rookie of the week, scored three TDs in leading the Tribe to a 43-15 Homecoming win over Towson State, and had all three TD's in a tight win over Penn, 21-19.

Fitzgerald was only one part of a diversified ground game that saw six players gaining over 100 yards rushing. True freshman Troy Keen picked up 339 yards and six TDs in only eight games, senior James Blocker-Bodley had 328 yards, senior fullback Scott Wingfield ran for 303 yards, and Greg Parker amassed 135 yards.

It was the first time in the Laycock era that the Tribe accumulated more yardage on the ground than through the air. W&M averaged 207 yards rushing and 177 passing. The balanced combination proved difficult to handle.

The defense, often considered a weak link in the past, improved dramatically, becoming a crucial factor in several close wins. After giving up more than 30 points a game

Seven Enter Hall of Fame

Seven William and Mary graduates have been voted into the College's Athletic Hall of Fame. What's the Scoop?

Alumni Communications Spreads the Word to William and Mary Alumni Everywhere

by Sara Piccini

Fourth in a series of articles commemorating the 150th anniversary of the Society of the Alumni

The morning mail has just arrived at the Alumni House and — as is often the case — a large percentage of envelopes are addressed to the Alumni Communications Office.

Let's be nosy and take a quick peek at the Alumni Communications mail. There are a number of class notes submitted by class reporters, a press release about an alumnus being promoted to vice president of his company, a letter from an alumna praising an article in the Alumni Gazette, another letter from an alumnus requesting a copy of an article that appeared several years ago, copies of alumni magazines from U.Va., Washington & Lee and Duke and much, much more.

These pieces of mail provide a clue as to the scope of activities the Alumni Communications office is involved with. In short, the office is responsible for overseeing all Society of the Alumni communications to, for and about William and Mary's alumni, including the publication of the Alumni Gazette and the William and Mary Magazine.

Virginia Carter Collins '77, director of alumni communications, explains that the responsibilities of her office mean ongoing communication with alumni and with other staff members from the Society of the Alumni and the College. "No one really 'owns' communications—there's always a lot of sharing of information and ideas," she says.

Given the many demands of the office, nothing is ever routine—and that's half the fun. "There's no such thing as a typical day," says Stephanie Westdyke, alumni communications executive secretary.

As with all other divisions of the Alumni Society, service to alumni is the foremost mission of the Alumni Communications office. "We're constantly striving to do a better job, so that we're communicating in the best way possible with alumni," says Collins.

REACHING ALL ALUMNI

"The centerpiece of our work is the Alumni Gazette and the William and Mary Magazine," says Collins. "These publications are especially significant because they're sent to all alumni of the College." The Gazette is published six times a year and the magazine twice a year, in July and January. About 66,000 copies are distributed to alumni, parents, friends, faculty and staff.

Collins is quick to point out that the two publications are a joint effort of the Alumni Society and the College, and the result of many hands. The Alumni Society is the publisher, Collins acts as managing editor and S. Dean Olson, director of publications at the College, is editor.

"Everyone involved puts many hours into planning, writing, designing, proofing, and checking for accuracy," says Collins. "All these tasks must be done within the constraints of tight deadlines, which makes life continually interesting," Collins adds with a laugh. "Time is really the driver of all that we do."

In planning the issues of the Gazette and magazine, Collins says, the key word is "balance." The editors strive to be as comprehensive as possible, including news of alumni activities as well as bringing alumni back to campus by providing the latest news on College developments. The magazine provides the opportunity to delve into subjects in more depth. "We'll often include articles by faculty, for example, and an in-depth profile of an alumna or alumnus," Collins says. "We also put a lot of thought into what will go on the cover of the magazine, because we know that it will sit out on people's coffee tables."

When the Gazette arrives in the mailbox, the first section many alumni turn to is the Class Notes. Collins explains that the Gazette is built around the Class Notes, with that section being typeset and laid out first and other articles fitting around it.

"It's unusual for a public university to have such extensive class notes—many universities use staff to write them," Collins says. "But we're very committed to having alumni communicate with other alumni."

Collins is pleased with the strong class reporter network that has been built up in recent years: today there are 70. Collins and Westdyke are in constant contact with class reporters and provide them with continual support: for example, the Alumni Communications office has prepared an extensive Class Reporter Handbook with editorial guidelines and other information.

Both the Gazette and the magazine have received awards for excellence from the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education. But the editors are not content to rest on their laurels. In an effort to further improve the publications, the Alumni Communications office sent out a readership survey in late August. Collins, thanking those who took the time to fill out the surveys, explains that the editors will rely on the feedback in future planning for the publications.

No matter what the project or activity, the goal is to always provide the best communication possible between the College and its alumni.

"P.R. PATROL"

Producing the Gazette and the magazine isn't the only responsibility of the Alumni Communications office (although it might seem like a full-time job in itself!). Another important activity is promoting and publicizing the activities of the Alumni Society, requiring the office to be on constant "P.R. patrol," as Westdyke puts it.

Collins sends out press releases on a continual basis, announcing news such as the naming of new directors of the Alumni Society Board and upcoming events such as the annual Alumni College. "Alumni Society news is of special interest to the Williamsburg community," she notes.

The Alumni Communications office also helps other divisions within the Alumni Society promote their programs by providing expertise and assistance with everything from the 1992 Alumni Directory to the production of chapter newsletters to logo designs for Homecoming. "Within the Society, people see us as a resource. For instance, if someone needs an invitation printed, we'll often write the printing specifications and work with the printer," Westdyke notes.

To make sure there is constant communication between the Alumni Society and the College's university relations office, Collins attends regular staff meetings with the Office of University Relations and also keeps in contact with The Flat Hat and William and Mary News editors.

Very often, in addition to regular duties, the Alumni Communications office will be involved in special projects that prove to be especially rewarding. The book Traditions, Myths and Memories was such a project. Collins solicited all of the alumni memories for the book, helped to select photographs and served as editor; Westdyke proofread the manuscript several times.

"We're really proud of the book and the fact that it involved so many alumni," Collins says. "I took it home one night and reread it, and I was just as proud and moved by what had been written as I was initially—especially because I've gotten to know the alumni who contributed their memories. The book has given me an appreciation of William and Mary through many eyes and many years."

The upcoming Tercentenary will also bring opportunities for new projects and activities. "We're looking for ways to make our existing publications special during the Tercentenary year. We hope that many of the pieces will be keepsakes," Collins says. "We're also discussing the possibility of producing a commemorative book and a second volume of Traditions, Myths & Memories."

Westdyke notes that her job is made special by contact with individual alumni. "An alumna called me asking for a particular photo that had been taken at Olde Guard day. I was able to track it down and send it to her. During Homecoming, she made a special point of thanking me—she'd even written me a special poem!"

No matter what the project or activity, the goal is to always provide the best communication possible between the College and its alumni. "I want to help alumni experience William and Mary in the present. I knew the College in the past as a student, and it's not exactly the same as it was 15 years ago. William and Mary is constantly growing and developing—and we're doing our best to keep pace."

"I want all alumni to know: the Gazette and the magazine are your publications," Collins adds. "We want to hear about your achievements and accomplishments—please keep that mail coming!"

WHO'S WHO IN ALUMNI COMMUNICATIONS

Virginia Carter Collins '77, director of alumni communications, joined the Alumni Society staff in 1988 and was named director in 1989. Collins oversees all of the functions of the Alumni Communications office, including serving as managing editor of the Alumni Gazette and the William and Mary Magazine, directing all public relations activities for the Society and providing editorial expertise to all other divisions within the Society. She has been in the communications field for 12 years and is an active member and former board member of the Richmond chapter of the International Association of Business Communicators.

Stephanie Westdyke, alumni communications executive secretary, serves as editorial assistant for the Alumni Gazette and the William and Mary Magazine, coordinates the printing of Society publications and provides support for the many functions of the Alumni Communications office. She joined the Alumni Society staff in September 1991 in the Alumni Records office, and moved to her current position in April of this year. Westdyke received a bachelor's degree in sociology from Brigham Young University, and is currently pursuing a master's degree in elementary education from the School of Education.

Terese Wilcox '94, alumni communications intern, is a junior at the College majoring in English. She handles writing and editing assignments for both the Alumni Gazette and William and Mary Magazine, and assists with numerous other projects. Wilcox is also an intern at the College's Sports Information Office where she composes articles for Smoke Signals and various athletic brochures along with other assignments. She plans to pursue a career in communications.

Alumni Records And Information Systems

By Sara Piccini

Fifth in a series of articles commemorating the 150th anniversary of the Society of the Alumni.

Wait! Before you read on, stop for a minute and ask yourself how you came to receive this issue of the Alumni Gazette. You know it didn't magically appear in your mailbox. So the answer must be that somewhere a group of people kept track of your address, and produced a mailing label.

That group of people is the staff of the Alumni Records and Information Systems office, a division of the Society of the Alumni. The office is responsible for maintaining a mammoth computer database of names, addresses and other information for nearly 70,000 alumni and friends of the College. So all of the mail that you receive from the Society is ultimately brought to you by Alumni Records and Information Systems.

And that's not all. Alumni Records and Information Systems also maintains and upgrades all computer software and hardware, as well as other equipment at the Alumni House such as the copier and postage machines; generates reports; maintains paper files; and processes all of the Society's incoming and outgoing mail.

"We're always racing to keep up," says Jessica Frank, director of alumni records and information systems. "There's always so much new alumni information coming in, and computer technology is changing all the time."

"THE CENTER OF THE WHEEL"

All of the offices at the Alumni Society depend on the database maintained by Alumni Records and Information Systems: without accurate records, William and Mary's alumni would be nameless and "addressless."

"We're really the center of the wheel," says Queen Jefferson, records maintenance supervisor. Jefferson is responsible for the day-to-day job of keeping the computer records up-to-date. Information comes from a variety of sources: address corrections from post offices, newspaper announcements, phonathon records and alumni themselves. Jefferson estimates that about 30,000 address changes are processed in one year.

The computer system containing all these records is a Digital VAX system with dedicated terminals in the Alumni Society and the College's Office of University Advancement. The system is for the most part quick and efficient—but that wasn't always so.

"When I first came in 1985, we were operating on a system that wasn't much more than a word processor," says Jefferson. "When we got the VAX system in 1987, it was like entering the 21st Century!" Jefferson and other staff members received extensive training on the system, and were assisted in transferring the records from the old to the new system.

Jefferson now trains new staff on how to use the system. Altogether there are 32 different categories of information on file, including spouse's and children's names, student activities and degrees received. This information is very important in maintaining contact with different groups of alumni: for example, being able to constantly update members of the Young Guard and the Olde Guard.

As the newly appointed director of alumni

The office is responsible for maintaining a mammoth computer database of names, addresses and other information for nearly 70,000 alumni and friends of the College. So all of the mail that you receive from the Society is ultimately brought to you by Alumni Records and Information Systems.

records and information systems, Frank is committed to continuing the work of her predecessor, Ben F. Kellam III '78, in maintaining a state-of-the-art computer records system. That task is made more challenging by ever-present budget restrictions.

"There are always things you'd like to do: updating software, changing menus, purchasing new equipment," says Frank. "Eventually we'd like to have an even more powerful system, and a computer on everyone's desk."

Frank is constantly evaluating systems and software to determine what might be a cost-effective upgrade.

THE ALUMNI DIRECTORY

Another valuable service brought to you by Alumni Records and Information Systems is the comprehensive 1992 Alumni Directory, which came out in June of this year. The directory is the product of months of hard work by staff members from Alumni Records and Information Systems, Alumni Communications and the College's Office of Advancement Systems.

"We first sent the information to Harris Publishing Co. in June of '91," says Jay Blossom, records maintenance clerk. "Harris would then call asking us to check information and discrepancies between our records and their research—we needed to do a lot of problem solving to figure out what was right."

The directory contains the names, addresses, telephone numbers and occupations of every William and Mary alumnus. Names are presented alphabetically, by class and school, by geographical area and by occupation. The directory also includes historical overviews of William and Mary and the Society of the Alumni, and complete listings of alumni chapters and clubs, Alumni Medalion recipients, honorary degree recipients and much more.

"I was really amazed to see the final product—it's a beautiful book," says Jefferson.

RUNNING SMOOTHLY

By handling the mail and maintaining equipment, Alumni Records and Information Systems plays a big role in ensuring that all of the functions of the Alumni Society run smoothly.

Diane Simpson, alumni records secretary, plays an integral part in all phases of the offices' activities. The majority of her time is devoted to processing information and correspondence for vital facts—marriages, births and deaths—which are reported in the Alumni Gazette and recorded in the Society's files. In addition, Simpson oversees incoming and outgoing mail. On a typical day, the stack of incoming mail can tower several feet: Simpson makes sure it all gets to the appropriate person. The outgoing mail can be even more overwhelming, especially when one of the Society's divisions is doing a large mailing.

Take the example of an invitation to a regional celebration of the Campaign for the Fourth Century: all of the alumni in that region need to be identified on the computer system, mailing labels must be printed and attached to the invitations, and then the invitations must be stamped and mailed out.

"There's always something different going on. Every day is interesting," says Simpson.

The staff members of Alumni Records and Information Systems are always looking for ways to make their operation run more efficiently, to better serve the rest of the Society, the College community, and the College's alumni. They're looking forward to bringing a new person, George Perry, on board to fill the assistant director position vacated by Frank when she was promoted. Perry will write many of the computer programs that can produce shortcuts and efficiencies on the system.

As to other plans for the future, Alumni Records and Information Systems — like everyone else at the Alumni Society — is looking forward to the projected expansion of the Alumni House, which will be supported through the College's Campaign for the Fourth Century. "Space is critical," says Frank. "We currently have all our staff, student workers, computers and files in one room."

There will also be a continued emphasis on increased automation, to keep up with the growing number of alumni and to add more information to the system. As long as students keep graduating and alumni keep moving, changing jobs and getting married, Alumni Records and Information Systems will have a critical job to do.

And that—in a nutshell—is how your Alumni Gazette is brought to you!

WHO'S WHO IN ALUMNI RECORDS AND INFORMATION SYSTEMS

Jessica Frank, director of alumni records and information systems, joined the Alumni Records and Information Systems staff in 1991 as assistant director. She was promoted in August of this year. Frank, an experienced programmer/analyst, is responsible for overseeing all the operations of Alumni Records and Information Systems, including computer software and hardware maintenance and upgrades, maintenance of the alumni records database and supervision of staff. Frank holds both bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Iowa.

George Perry, newly-appointed assistant director of alumni records and information systems, is responsible for programming, report generation, hardware and software support, and supervision of the data entry staff. A graduate of Elon College in North Carolina, he joined the Society this November after serving as a systems and programmer analyst for Union Camp Corp.

Queen Jefferson, records maintenance supervisor, joined the Alumni Records and Information Systems staff in April 1985. She oversees the maintenance of all alumni records on the computer database. She also trains new staff and student workers to use the computer system, and supervises the student workers in the office.

Jay Blossom, records maintenance clerk, is responsible for making changes to alumni records on the computer database. He is also the key operator for the Society's copy machines and ensures that the equipment is in good order. Blossom joined the Alumni Records and Information Systems staff in October 1991, and is currently completing his master's degree in history at William and Mary.

Diane Simpson, alumni records and information systems secretary, worked for Society Services from 1989 to 1991 and returned to the Society in 1992. "I'm so glad to be back," Simpson says. She oversees the processing of all incoming and outgoing mail, supervises student mail room employees, prepares the vital statistics for the Alumni Gazette, maintains the paper files and performs a variety of other duties to support the Alumni Records and Information Systems office.

Alumnus Honors Alma Mater With Wildlife Sculptures

By Gene Bjerke

David Turner '83 began modeling wildlife when he was 7. That explains, in part, his success as a sculptor at a relatively young age. But he also gives a lot of credit to his studies at William and Mary.

Thus, the upcoming Tercentenary inspired him to create a special piece and offer it to his alma mater as his way of helping the College's mission.

Alma Mater of a Nation is a striking bronze sculpture that depicts an eagle with its wings spread out and downward. It is standing on books dated 1693 and 1993 that are, in turn, atop the W&M logo. Turner explains that the bird is in a protective position, "It's called the 'mantling' position," he says. "They use it to protect young on a nest."

Turner and his father, William Turner, are both sculptors. They operate Turner Sculpture on the Eastern Shore of Virginia. It is the largest private foundry and wildlife gallery in America. They usually work in editions that range in quantities from as few as 10, up to as many as 200. Because of the Tercentenary, they decided to make this sculpture in a large edition of 1,693 pieces. A portion of the sales will support student financial aid. The Society of the Alumni will also receive a percentage to help support its programs.

"What we get just basically covers our cost," says Turner. "I wanted to do something for the College. They didn't approach me about this—it's a concept I came up with. I just went ahead and made a model. I went in and cast it in bronze, so that gave them something to look at. It was a lot of work. I wouldn't have done it for any one else than my alma mater."

David Turner was born at Nassawadox, on the Eastern Shore of Virginia, in 1961. His father was a dentist and part-time sculptor, working in porcelain. He was raised on a farm and enjoyed outdoor pursuits. He has always loved wildlife, birds in particular.

Throughout his childhood, Turner expressed his interest in wildlife with stone-ware sculptures. By the time he took ceramics classes in high school, he had developed a sure hand with the clay.

Turner was more interested in the wildlife than the sculpture. He majored in biology at William and Mary and planned a career in wildlife management or environmental science. "I majored in biology and I took some art courses more for fun," he says. "I ended up taking enough that I had a minor in studio art." He feels that for him, the biology classes were as important as the art classes.

While Turner was at William and Mary, his father decided to change to a more permanent form of sculpture, so he built a foundry on the farm and began pouring bronze. However, the first time David saw bronze being cast was in Professor Carl Roseberg's class.

Between biology and the arts, William and Mary gave him a strong background for his eventual work. But there was something more. "I met my wife, Beverly Anne Crossett '82 of Arlington, Va., there and that's a pretty important thing," he says. "We got engaged on the Crim Dell bridge." They were married after graduation.

When he graduated in 1983, sculpture was far from his mind. Looking for a job in wildlife management, a field he says was "glutted," he ended up as an animal caretaker at the Naval Medical Center in Bethesda, Md. He was not happy there. "It was such a sterile atmosphere — white animals and no windows — certainly not wildlife by any means."

By this time William Turner had given up dentistry to devote himself full time to sculpture. The business had prospered to the point that he needed a foundry manager. David Turner and his wife moved back to the Eastern Shore. Before long, David was creating his own sculpture.

Turner Sculpture uses the 'Lost Wax' method of casting bronzes. This technique starts with a clay model. "The original model is the most important part," claims David.

"Whatever goes in that, you want to go in your final piece. There's a lot of research involved before you even get the clay out."

When it is finished, the clay model will often be cut into pieces. These pieces are covered with rubber to create a mold. As Turner explains, "That little mold takes every bit of detail in the clay model. If you even have a fingerprint in the clay model it will come through in the bronze." At this point, they are through with the clay, and it is generally reused for another piece.

To make a sculpture, the molds are filled with wax. In Alma Mater of a Nation, the two wings, the body, the books and the letters are all separate molds. The next step often consists of joining the wax pieces together. In the case of the William and Mary eagle, the wings are added to the body, and the body attached to the books in this stage.

Now the wax pieces are ready to be encased in silica. They are dipped in a liquid silica and then in sand. After this dries, the process is repeated until a sufficient coat is built up.

When the silica and sand is thick enough, the wax is melted out, leaving a cavity shaped exactly like the original clay model. Once a week, they melt bronze and pour it into the accumulated silica molds. They do several pours in a day. Visitors to the gallery are invited to watch the process.

While pouring the bronze is important, it isn't the end of the process. When the bronze cools, the silica molds are broken away from the metal. The metal is cleaned up, and the component pieces welded together. Welding sculpture is a special skill. Every part must fit just right, and the beads have to be ground and shaped to blend in with the surrounding surface.

Finally, the piece is heated with a blow torch, and chemicals are applied to create a patina. This process can yield six or eight different colors of bronze. The sculptures are not painted—all coloring is chemically incorporated in the surface.

To help with all this work, the Turners have about 20 employees. These are all local people whom they have trained to do the various skilled jobs. This leaves the Turners free to produce new models, about 20-30 a year between them. Besides the pieces that are displayed in their gallery, both father and son get commissions for public works. In addition, David does occasional portrait sculpture.

Another of the Turners' exquisite displays of handiwork appeared on campus during Homecoming week. Hammond Field '57 commissioned them to produce Blue Heron, a statue created by David Turner which was dedicated to the College during Homecoming in October.

If the secret of a successful life is to "follow your bliss," David Turner has certainly found success. He has translated a lifelong love of wildlife into pieces of beauty which grace homes and public places and bring pleasure to all who see them.

David Turner's Alma Mater of a Nation is a striking bronze sculpture that depicts an eagle with its wings spread out and downward. It is standing on books dated 1693 and 1993 that are, in turn, atop the W&M logo.

Received a nice, interesting letter from Alton W. Overton. Soon after leaving William and Mary, he married and had one son, W. S. Overton '57, three grandchildren, two of whom attended W&M, and four great-grandchildren. He began his work experience as a salesman for Gold Dust Corp.; became a district manager of the Pittsburgh area; left the company after 10 years and opened a grocery store in the south Norfolk area of Chesapeake, Va.

In 1943 he became a U.S. Navy volunteer; was commissioned a lieutenant; put in charge of commissary stores in Banana River, Fla.; left the Navy as a lieutenant commander and returned to the grocery business which expanded over the next 40 years to 11 stores throughout the Tidewater area of Virginia. He later closed all except one; opened seventeen coin-operated laundromats; became active in commercial real estate and residential development; purchased the Days Inn Northampton Hotel in Norfolk and developed a shopping center in Hampton. Currently, arising at 3 a.m. to start his work day, he remains active in his business with assistance from his son, grandson, and a grandson-in-law.

In addition to his business career, Alton has served first on the South Norfolk and then the Chesapeake city councils for more than 60 years. He has been active in his church. As a native of Currituck, N.C., he enjoys spending weekends on the Currituck Sound.

A letter from Suzanne Porter Burow contained some extremely interesting information about her father, Dr. Walter Albert Porter. During the last five years of his life, he began the project of cataloging all the 40,000 plus names in the 740 cemeteries in his native Carroll County, Va. Because of the scope of the project and his failing health, the listings had to be completed by Suzanne and her mother. Since her father's death these records have been published in his memory. In order to honor the work Dr. Porter began, a copy of the publication has been sent to the Swem Library. What a wonderful tribute to one of our classmates.

I regret that so few of our class returned for Homecoming and the inauguration of the 25th President of the College. Only five of the class were present. Each of the other four wrote a thought for me to pass on to you. Robert Randolph Jones, "It was great to be at the inauguration of the new President."

Virginia Vaiden Bowen, "It's a wonderful day and nice to see the folks of '28." Bill Thompson, "Here we are at Homecoming again with our wonderful friends. We are going to the U.Va.-W&M game in Charlottesville and to the Richmond game. We still follow our team whenever possible. Best wishes to all."

Malvern Omohundro, "Our 64th now waiting for our 65th."

Yes, 1993 will be our 65th anniversary. Please be present on Olde Garde Day in February so we can have a nice celebration.

In the meantime, write! Your reporter needs news.

I reported on Lucy May Boswell Crymble, in our last column. Here are a few more interesting details of Lucy's life. A resident of Kingsport, Tenn., she has been active in running the Netherland Inn, which was built before 1818. She was the first president of the Netherland Inn Association.

She has a son who has been with IBM for 25 years. Her daughter has a Ph.D. in engineering and works with the National Science Foundation in Washington, D.C. Lucy has six grandchildren, four boys and two girls.

She concludes by saying, "My work is tapering off since I am 83." I know what you mean, Lucy!

The Class of 1930 extends sympathy to Beatrice Driscoll Glascock in the recent death of her husband, Robert Glascock, a member of our class.

Greetings to all of you.

It was a great disappointment to me not to be able to go to Homecoming.

I would like to know how many of you were there — my son Dr. James Leroy Bradshaw '67 was there but was unable to get a list of the Class of '32.

I had a card from Jeannette Kessler Bauer in Carmel, Calif. She said she would not be able to get to Homecoming but she does keep in touch with some of her friends from W&M.

Anna K. Dunlap Weatherford and I had a wonderful day Oct. 21. We went to the Virginia Museum Theatre in Richmond to see the play Harvey. It was a great production.

Please let me hear from you.

We shall be eternally grateful.

Homecoming was fabulous.

My husband (Edward '35) and I went down on Thursday. He was on a crutch; as he had pulled a hamstring in his leg, but he was a good sport and enjoyed everything. That night we attended a banquet for the Order of the White Jacket, of which he is a member.

I was happy to see Dr. Frank A. MacDonald there, as I had not seen him for a long time. He is retired and lives in Williamsburg.

After attending the inauguration of President Sullivan, we went to the Olde Garde luncheon. From our class: W. C. Henderson and Bill Rhodes from Richmond, Bob Bunting from Virginia Beach, Mrs. John (Mae) Hocutt from Delaware and William P. Gove from Concord, N.H.

There was a large crowd, and I knew many old friends who were not in our class. Friday evening, the Alumni Dinner and Dance, Saturday, the parade — always interesting and enjoyable — followed by lunch on the lawn at the Alumni House and the football game.

We were pleased that Bill Rhodes was asked to be an honorary coach. He ate with the players, shaking hands with each one and wishing them the best.

It was a wonderful weekend. I only wish more of you could have been there to enjoy it. Maybe next year! Count on it.

Several of us were present at Homecoming. Members of the Class of '38 who signed up on the registration boards this year include: Anne T. Graves, Joan Hicks, Bunny Wood Walker, Bert Capps Sheeran, Bob Sheeran, Helene Stein Vogt, Charlotte Johnson Abel, Virginia Betts Chapman and Bob Simpson. A wonderful time was had by all!

As I write this letter, Homecoming weekend has just ended, and I missed being at the College for the festivities and for the inauguration of President Sullivan. Nick and I, however, do plan to come for Charter Day and our 55th reunion in February, and we have made reservations at the Williamsburg Lodge. Y'all come!

Now for some very newsy updates:

Dan Edmonson wrote from Dallas: "I really miss not getting back for Homecomings. It has been about four years now, but I do keep up with the College activities as best I can from the Alumni Gazette and when some of the old gang is here or passing through the airport with time to call ... We have lived in Dallas for 17 years since moving from the Chicago area, where I was executive vice president of Kroehler Furniture Co., then the world's largest furniture manufacturer. I am still involved in the furniture industry as a consultant to another fine company and have to go to the High Point, N.C. market every October. Unfortunately, the dates of the market and W&M Homecomings have been the conflict — same weekend for 12 of the last 14 years. ... We are lucky to have our son and daughter in Dallas, with five grandchildren. They both went to SMU and loved it here and stayed on. Johnnie, my wife of 44 years, and I love it here, too. We travel some, play golf and use our pool a lot on the hot summer days. I still stay quite busy in the furniture industry as a board member of the Dallas Market Center and previous chair of the Furniture Board of Governors. It seems that it's time to retire from all these business activities. Maybe next year! We have a small alumni group here with a meeting once or twice a year, so I have met some of the "later than us" from W&M. We need to get the new president here if ever possible. President Graves did a lot for interest on his trips, giving us all the news of the times there. I hear from many of the Old Garde from time to time: Walter Zable '37, Elmo Legg '40, "Squinty" Reynolds. They were great years there!"

From Mineral, Va., Alice Estes Martin sent this note: "I enjoy the theater and have attended productions in New York, at the West End Dinner Theater in Alexandria and at the University of Virginia in recent months. My work as director of the Louisa County Historical Society is most challenging as well as interesting. We celebrated the 250th anniversary of the formation of Louisa County in September. It was a gala event. I have also been busy with the senior council of my church. One of the nicest things that has happened in the past year was getting the opportunity to see my college roommate, Catherine Judy Dobbs and her husband, Glenn. I went to Asheville, N.C., to see the Vanderbilt estate in its Christmas splendor. While visiting Old Salem on my way home, I had lunch with Catherine, who lives in Winston-Salem. The years have been kind to both of them, and Catherine still looks like a fashion model. I am anticipating selling my home in the near future and moving to Westminster-Canterbury in Charlottesville. I will be trading my beautiful view of Lake Anna for a view of the Blue Ridge Mountains. I have mixed emotions about making the change but realize as time goes on (and doesn't it ever!) that my home is too large for me to maintain."

55TH REUNION OLDE GARDE DAY FEBRUARY 11, 1993

Margaret Bret Honn wrote: "I do lead a very busy life, especially lately. After 14 years in the same office in Charlottesville operating Honn Company Realtors, we moved into the lower level of our home in Ruckersville. What a chore! We are both "pack rats" and we had 14 years of accumulating to examine, "toss or keep?" and finally reduce to a reasonable amount of papers and "stuff." It was the worst move I've ever made. But it is done — thank heavens! I've been a realtor for 18 years and have had lots of fun and quite a bit of good luck along the way. We have done four subdivisions with large lots in a beautiful area of Virginia with nice views of the Blue Ridge Mountains. My eldest, a son, has two boys in college; my middle child, also a son, is mildly handicapped and continues to live with us and work part time; and my daughter lives in Lee Hall (seven miles from Williamsburg) with her "vet" husband and their 15- and 10-year-old boys and 13-year-old daughter. What joy they have brought me! Russ has been a terrific stepfather to my children, especially the one who lives with us. He and I manage to do a bit of traveling, and we have a condo in central Florida which we use for a short while in January or February."

A postcard to Tom Forsyth was returned by the post office. Does anyone have a recent address for him?

I'll end with the latest from our class poet, Bert Capps Sheeran:

"Class of '38, participate!

We need you all to answer the call

And strive to be alive for our number 55!"

Several of you have written that you do plan to be in Williamsburg in February. To the rest of you: "Answer her call." I hope to see you then.

Howard P. Anderson, a veteran senator in the Virginia General Assembly, was honored in July at a ceremony in Brookneal, Va., opening a new bridge over the Staunton River which has been named for him. The Howard P. Anderson Bridge will link Halifax and Campbell counties. Carolyn Moses Lusardi, a former Brookneal mayor and town council member, served as master of ceremonies of the special occasion. Howard spent 34 years serving his constituents in Richmond.

Jack and Ann Terrell Garrett enjoyed a super sightseeing trip in England and Scotland on a Tauck Tour this summer. They said it lived up to all their expectations.

Frank and I did not make Homecoming this year as we had another commitment for the weekend. I asked the Garretts to give me a list of those attending, and Jack, bless his heart, Overwhelming voter approval of the $613 million General Obligation Bond Issue in the November election in Virginia will mean William and Mary can proceed on several badly needed construction projects. They include an $8.7 million physical sciences building adjacent to the Sunken Garden, a $5.3 million renovation and modernization of James Blair Hall, a $2.9 million facilities management complex designed to centralize physical plant functions and an $8.5 million toxicology/pathobiology research facility at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science. The $613 million included $472.4 million for capital improvements in public higher education, $45.1 million for mental health programs and $95.3 million for parks and recreation.

wrote the following account which I quote verbatim:

Homecoming 1992: The weather was near perfect. The football game was won. The camaraderie was superb. President Sullivan's inauguration with all the appropriate pomp and circumstance, plus a marvelous address by our new president, was a highlight for the weekend.

The Order of the White Jacket had a festive 20th birthday celebration on Thursday night, where Jack Garrett gave his swan song in anticipation of completing his term as president and member of the board of directors at the end of 1992. The Governor of Virginia recognized the anniversary by issuing a proclamation declaring the date as "Order of the White Jacket Day." At the party were our classmates and their spouses: Jack '41 and Mary Ellen Lokey Geddes '43, Bud and Fran Davis Metheny '39, Florence Mode Smith, Leah and T. Waller, Ed and Dinny Forwood Wetter, and Walt '37 and Betty Carter Zable. Delightful entertainment was provided by the Ed D'Alfonso Trio.

Our class was represented at Friday's Olde Guard Luncheon by: Chester '41 and Helen Jones Baker, Dan Bradley, Nils and Gervais Wallace Brekke, Jack and Mary Ellen Geddes, Carolyn Moses Lusardi with Shirley Waldo, Bud and Fran Metheny, Florence Mode Smith, Leah and T. Waller Ed and Dinny Forwood Wetter, and Walt and Betty Carter Zable. Delightful entertainment was provided by the Botecourt Chamber Singers of the William and Mary Choir.

At the Friday evening Alumni Society Annual Awards Dinner, the Class of 1940 again received the trophy for the class with the best participation in annual giving. This is the sixth time our class has received this recognition since the annual award commenced in 1980.

After Saturday's game, most of the '40 group assembled at Jane and Herb Young's '41 home for cocktails, where several additional Class of '41 friends and others gathered. They were Ralph '37 and Anna Dickerson Baker '37, Fran and Tommy Crane '42, Ella Dickenson Hurt '41, Jean Cox Phillips '41, Charlotte and John Prince '41, Barbara and Austin Roberts '41, and Bobby Taylor '42.

Earlier, Austin and Jack had worked out an impromptu dinner party at the picturesque Whaling Company restaurant. After the Young's party, the group moved to dinner for more visiting, conversation and delicious dining on the restaurant's seafood specialties. At the end were promises to return in 1993 for the 300th anniversary of the founding of William and Mary.

On the home front: Frank had replacement surgery the end of July. He's made a wonderful recovery considering the serious complications he had and looks very fit, having shed about 20 pounds. In early September all of our Richmond family joined us at Capon Springs, W.Va., for a few days vacation and all 10 of us had a grand time.

We deeply regret the death of our friend and business associate, Bob Dew '37, who lost his fight against lung cancer Oct. 9.

A note from Larry Leshan informs me that he has another new book, which is titled The Psychology of War: Comprehending its Mystique and Its Madness. The beginning of this book goes back to remarks made by Dick Henneman in 1942, at the time when he was the entire psychology department that was housed on the third floor of the Wren Building. Weren't we lucky to have had classes in that historic building!

The well-traveled Emalee Ewing Durbin has Emalee and husband Sol have also traveled in their faithful Bounder to Quebec, Montreal, San Francisco and many, many locations between those cities.

With sadness, we note the deaths of two of our classmates. First, Eleanor Haupt Bolen, of Chapel Hill, N.C., who spent many years in charitable work for the American Red Cross, the Girl Scouts of America and Meals on Wheels. Survivors include her husband, Claude, a daughter and two grandchildren. Memorial contributions should be sent to the William and Mary Merit Scholarship Fund. Grace Monroe Peachy Funke died in Tuscumbia, Ala., leaving her husband, Warren, two daughters, a son and five grandchildren. May they go from strength to strength in the life of perfect service, and attended by our enduring affection and thanksgiving for their lives.

From Jane (née Spencer) '48 and our own Bill Smith of "Ya Get Up in the Mornin'" and Ya Head for the John, Brush Ya Teeth" fame, writing from their home in Richmond: "Thought you might enjoy this little bit of international time zone fun we had in our family recently... Our eighth grandchild, Ellen Yates Smith, was born to our son Doug '82 and his wife, Liz Yates '81, at 12:15 a.m. in Melbourne, Australia, where they live, on July 13. That made it Sunday afternoon, July 12, here in Virginia when we received the happy news. As our daughter Susie commented, 'You had your newest granddaughter tomorrow.' Congratulations to Jane and Bill and all the members of this wonderful all-W&M family. Let's hope little Ellen will be enrolling in the Class of 2014.

Tex Warrington has written an inspiring letter from Florida telling of the program which he has led for many years to help troubled youth. It is called VisionQuest.

Tex joined the Marines in World War II, and afterwards transferred to Auburn where he was an All-American center. Then followed professional years with the Brooklyn Dodgers, a now-defunct team that was part of the All-American Football Conference. Later, he was a scout for the Dodgers baseball team. In the '50s he was athletic director and coach at Vero Beach High School in Florida, where he also began to work with troubled youth. Later he moved to Delaware and was the coach of the Wilmington Clippers, a Philadelphia Eagles farm team. He continued his work with juvenile delinquents and became the correctional institution superintendent for the Ferris School for Boys, and then executive director of the Youth Service Commission of Delaware.

VisionQuest was founded in 1973 by Tex's assistant Bob Burton, with Tex as advisor/mentor/consultant/recruiter/etc. The program features both residential and wilderness experience, with strict discipline and accountability under fully trained leaders. More recently, an OceanQuest program has been added to provide sailing experience. Tex and Jackie state, "We don't believe in locking kids up. It hasn't worked, it doesn't work, and it never will work... We believe in not abusing kids, but we do believe in hard work, education and discipline." Through VisionQuest, they have been able to break the terrible cycle of rearrest and reincarceration that has become the hallmark of most of our American juvenile justice system.

The Society of the Alumni is still accepting recipes for a William and Mary Cookbook that it plans to publish during the Tercentenary year. Edited by Jackie Legg '60, the cookbook will include treasured family recipes, tailgate and picnic specialties, College recipe creations, recipes used by William and Mary clubs, organizations, fraternities and sororities, reflections on dining in the Colonial Capital, recipe requests for favorite recipes served at Williamsburg restaurants, inns and taverns, and favorite stories from members of the Order of the White Jacket and others who remember working at Williamsburg food establishments or on campus. If you have a recipe, write to William and Mary Cookbook, Society of the Alumni, College of William and Mary, P.O. Box 2100, Williamsburg, VA 23187-2100.

Homecoming '92 — another memorable occasion! Although we didn't have an official reunion, I found my way across the James to my favorite town to see if any other '46ers may have also found their way there. Priscilla Fuller Downs joined me for the most impressive inauguration ceremonies for Timothy J. Sullivan '66, our 25th president, on Friday morning. I also had with me a young educator from Prince George County, William A. Havard '75 M.Ed., whose son is a senior at the College. The sun shone down in all its splendor upon an estimated crowd of 3,000 for the event, a number in which I was honored to be included.

Lunch at the Alumni House was the only function I attended and several friends from the Class of '47 invited me to join them. I'll not quote names lest I miss some, but it was a treat to renew some old friendships. I found Sally Rue Justise Ranson and Jene Carr Dent and spoke briefly, but Cecy Waddell Cunningham I saw only from a distance.

Before and during the parade-watching time, I had a good visit with Betty Cutshall Allman and her husband, Edward, who reported they have decided to divide their time between New Hampshire and Williamsburg, settling here in Kingsmill. Betty, an active volunteer in her Manchester, N.H., community, was appointed a new member of the board of directors of the Friends of the Library at the College. Betty and Edward have established the Allman Library Endowment.

Just as I was leaving, a cheery call came from Harmon Hoffman '49 and Mary. They always will be considered a part of our class, remembering the important roles they played in our great 45th last year. They told me of their plans to spend the Christmas holidays in Italy this year — a spot high on my agenda for my next trip.

While on the north side of the James, I drove out to First Colony, just off Route 5, a beautiful scenic byway, to see Pat Keen Williams '48, who makes her home with her daughter, Carol Williams Mathews '73. Pat and I have been friends since childhood, so you can imagine we always share a nostalgic visit.

A letter from George R. Brunk II came in early September, answering my constant plea for news of classmates. At 56, George secured his Ph.D. from Union Theological Seminary in Richmond and then served a number of years Goedjen when she and her husband were in Sewanee to visit his sister. Flo was a day student from Yorktown who studied at W&M for two years, 1940-41 and 1941-42, and then went to work for the Restoration. She remembers warmly the day students' lounge in Jefferson. She and her husband, Mark, who was an officer at the Naval Mine Depot at Yorktown, met on a blind date at a W&M football game. She has made only a few trips back to Williamsburg and finds it crowded and confusing outside the central area, "not as nice as it was when we were there." Since their marriage in 1946, she and Mark have lived in Green Bay, Wis., and would welcome friends at 1781 Wedgewood Drive. They go regularly to San Diego to visit their daughter and grandchild.

Mary Wilson Carver Sale wrote to say that she and Graham have been living in Fort Myers, Fla. for the last five years, having come from Pittsburgh. They live in Shell Point Village, a life-care retirement community which they thoroughly enjoy. Being in Fort Myers, they enjoy seeing Wayne and Marjorie Retzke Gibbs. They have four children: a daughter who graduated from W&M and lives in Williamsburg, two daughters in the San Francisco area, and a son in Pittsburgh. There are two grandchildren. Mary Wilson enjoys all news of classmates in the Alumni Gazette.

It's good to see that Robert G. Ruggiero is listed as a new member of the Order of the White Jacket, composed of those who waited tables either in the dining hall or in the various Williamsburg commercial eating establishments — an honorable and distinguished crew!

Elaine McDowell Fuerst writes from her new home in Oldsmar, Fla. (after years in Guam), that she is well settled and is resuming travels, Elderhostel conferences, and more frequent contact with family. She and her husband share my interest in the thought of the Swiss psychoanalyst Carl Gustav Jung. And it turns out that Jo Cornell Clarke '45 and Buddy (W. Garland), of Kilmarnock, Va. also have the same interest in Jung. Buddy is a member of the Board of the Centerpoint Foundation in Nashua, N.H.

My summer was busy with a by-pass at Johns Hopkins at the beginning of July, the necessary period of convalescence afterward, and then a long trip to see five of our six children, and then on to visit friends who have a summer home in Lunenburg, Nova Scotia. I'm making excellent progress, I am glad to say, and I have highest praise for the Hopkins surgeon, cardiologist, specialists and staff at every level.

Keep writing to me!

Nancy Page Hill '89 has been awarded a Fulbright grant to the University of the West Indies in Jamaica. Hill received her bachelor's degree in English and international studies from the College, and went on to complete her master's in international studies at Old Dominion University. While at William and Mary, she attended Christ College, Cambridge University in England on an exchange program. Most recently she co-authored a study on urban development in Jamaica. Her Fulbright grant will be used to further research Jamaica and the Caribbean as well as take classes for her doctoral degree. Established in 1946 under Congressional legislation introduced by former Sen. J. William Fulbright of Arkansas, the program is designed "to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries."

I hope your summer was as pleasant as mine. I always look forward to seeing my children and those seven grandchildren during vacation time.

It's always good to renew acquaintances. Last April during Garden Week, some friends and I toured the lovely old homes and gardens in Gloucester and Mathews counties. At our final stop, who should one of the hostesses be but Barbara Humphrey Roane? She and her husband, "Pete," retired after 35 years in the Navy and moved to the upper part of Mathews County overlooking the Plankatank River. Barbara looks great and is a busy, busy Garden Club person in both Gloucester and Mathews. She and Peter have three children and six grandchildren.

I received a call from Ned Logan Grad '48 the other day saying he has moved from Mathews to Williamsburg. Ned is still teaching at the Rappahannock Community College at Glens; he's traveled extensively, and I understand teaches a great course in world geography. Welcome to the community, Ned, you're going to love living in Williamsburg.

As a matter of fact, recently Jean Harrup Cogle '49, Elaine Campton Baker '49 and I joined Lois Willis Vorhis for lunch, and I think we convinced her that she and her husband, Don, should consider moving here. We had such fun playing the "remember who and when game" that I think our waiter thought we planned to stay for supper. Lois and Don are retired and live in Annandale. They have three children and six grandchildren. Lois says they already have their reservations for Homecoming '93.

A scenic card arrived a few weeks ago from that "man on the go," Ed Griffin. This time he was visiting Yellowstone National Park and enjoying it, but evidently the favorite stop has been Little Big Horn.

And speaking of traveling, Barbara "Becky" Bechtol Garrison and husband Bill '49 are on the road again. They have both retired from careers in education in Virginia Beach, have sold their home, bought an RV and are having a wonderful time traveling. Becky says they may someday settle permanently but right now are enjoying their freedom. They have two children and six grandchildren.

Becky says she hears from Nancy Noyes Safko and Bill, who have just retired from teaching in San Diego, Calif.

James Bray lives in Winston-Salem, N.C., and has recently retired as professor of education at Salem College. He will, however, "continue to be director of Governor's School west on the Salem campus, a job he has held every summer for 27 years, through 1995." Jim says he enjoys this so much it doesn't even seem like work. Writing has been important to Jim throughout his career, but now that he is retired he plans to really produce, perhaps even write, a novel. Some of you may recall that in a previous letter I mentioned Ben Bray, Jim's identical twin, who lives in Williamsburg.

This letter should arrive before Christmas. I wish you would send me a Christmas card. Just a couple of lines telling the important people and times in your life would be just fine. I promise I'll reciprocate with a Valentine!

Virginia H. Holsinger '58 has been awarded a "Distinguished Senior Research Scientist of the Year" for 1992 by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service. This is the highest honor given by ARS for scientific achievement and leadership. In addition to a $7,000 cash award, Holsinger received $40,000 to support her research. As a chemist in Wyndmoor, Pa., Holsinger heads the Milk Components Utilization Research Unit at the ARS Eastern Regional Research Center. Agency officials credit Dr. Holsinger's research in helping to alleviate hunger in undernourished children around the world. Her research also led to new markets for milk and milk products, and enabled many people to drink milk even though some may have a natural intolerance to it. Holsinger holds a Ph.D. in food science and nutrition from Ohio State University, Columbus.

I appreciate the response of two of our class members for my urgent request for news. Please let me hear from many more of you so that we can build on this. It would be great to get a card from you over the coming holidays.

Ruth Barnes Jorgensen and her husband, Gordon, wrote to say that they enjoyed an evening with Anne and Tim Sullivan '66, our new president — "very nice and a very good choice."

Ruth and Gordon cruised the Baltic aboard the Crystal Haraway, particularly enjoying St. Petersburg — a trip they heard about through W&M. They also made the major tennis tournaments — French Open, Wimbledon and U.S. Open. Sounds like it was a great summer!

Also received a note from Richard Canham, who lives in Shawnee, Okla. Dick is retired after 28 years of teaching chemistry at Oklahoma Baptist University and six years at other institutions, including four years at W&M.

During the past summer, Dick and his wife, Shirley, were in Europe for eight weeks. In June they traveled by Eurailpass through Germany, Luxembourg, Belgium, Holland and Austria. From there they went on to Budapest where for six weeks Dick taught English to European students at the International Baptist Lay Academy (they require English in order to take classes at seminars and to listen to guest lecturers from England, the U.S. and some other European countries — English is the common language). What a fun and rewarding experience.

During the past summer, Jana, Laura (our 9-year-old) and I cruised the Mediterranean and Black seas with stops at Athens, Santorini, Yalta, Odessa, Istanbul, Izmir, Rhodes, Crete, Olympus and Venice. Spent a couple of days in Rome after the cruise — all of which was fun and educational.

We particularly liked Istanbul with its famous mosques, the Topkapi Palace and the Grand Bazaar — oh, and yes, the "belly dancers." Istanbul has a population of something like 9 million and is growing at the rate of 400,000 a year. Nothing much going on in the hinterlands, so the people flock to the big city, which is causing serious problems in the city and country.

Again, thanks to Ruthie and Dick for the notes.

You wouldn't believe it, you just wouldn't believe it! The great Class of '52 returned for Homecoming expecting to have an unforgettable week, and we did. I am still receiving phone calls and letters from all over the States, and the words are still echoing in my mind that for those who have been returning every year and those who have returned for the first time... this was the BEST Homecoming reunion we've ever had... better than we ever expected.

First, thanks must go to the hard work of the committee which met last year in Williamsburg traveling from all points of the compass to plan this unforgettable week... yes, many of us arrived Tuesday! Your committee returned for a phonathon only three weeks before Homecoming and spent hours on the phones calling and urging... and many were moved by those calls to return and they have all expressed time and time again how happy they were to have seen so many old friends and acquaintances.

It was exhilaration all the way. Crowds of classmates of '52 gathered regularly in the hospitality suite and renewed old friendships to the sound of clinking and toasting of drinks, and endless chips and dips. The years disappeared as we caught sight of old friends, and strangely enough, those who did not know each other very well in College, quickly found common ground and at this late date became friends with promises to write and stay in touch. We were not only cocktailing it in our suite, but there were three dinner-dances at which you could dream and renew your warmest feelings for this Alma Mater of a Nation: the Order of the White Jacket's 20th Anniversary D-D with a fine band and excellent menu, on Thursday the 150th anniversary of the Alumni Society D-D on Friday and the class of '52 D-D on Saturday evening. We danced and dined with old friends all week.

The inauguration of our 25th president, Timothy Sullivan '66, was rich with W&M tradition, American history and the pageantry of mace, vestments and processions representing America's leading universities paying homage to this citadel of learning. The music, the color and some of the most substantive speeches you will ever hear describing our 300-year old foundation, the pantheon of America's earliest fathers passing through this Wren building, and our ongoing academic/intellectual leadership in America raised the height of alumni and students alike.

There were '52ers everywhere you walked... from the Wren front lawn against the background of punch and our Big Band sound from Dixieland Jazz to Cole Porter to alums dancing and embracing old friends, sweethearts and team mates, coaches and professors; and there was our new president out there in the midst of it all welcoming everyone and receiving our proud congratulations.

All the D-Ds were alive with conversation, great music, but most of all we '52ers will not forget our own Saturday evening party with 97 of us attending. We ate well, drank moderately, danced all evening and concluded with a typical fraternity lodge sing along in a circle at the end of the dance floor. Do you recall those tunes from the background of movies at the Williamsburg Theatre which kept us humming for weeks... yea... we sang these and others like "Love is a many splendored thing," "Beware my Foolish Heart," "Once in Love with Amy," "Dixie," the Alma Mater, The Indian Fight Song, "Abba, Dabba Honeymoon," "Singin' in the Rain," and of course, who could forget "The Wabash Cannonball?"

Section BB in the Walt Zable stadium was reserved for '52ers as we roared our appreciation for W&M's Tribe strong win over Towson State, 43-15. But Saturday alone was worth the trip back with the Homecoming Parade... they aren't as imaginative as we were, folks... but fun just the same with '52ers taking group photographs all over the place. And then, Luncheon on the Lawn at the Alumni House where we caught up with the rest of our great class eating and drinking and getting warmed up for the largest group for a Class photo in years. Order yours and catch the glow and excitement of the best class turnout in '92. We were falling all over each other, the stands were so crowded, with constant delays for the photographer as more and more '52ers broke through the crowds to get into the picture.

What can I say? It was wonderful to be with all of you again, and those of you who were not there, we truly missed you and asked for you and want you to join us in 1993 at the Fort Magruder Inn...see my letter going out to you...already as you read this. We closed our weekend with a celebration of the Holy Eucharist in the Wren Chapel with our prayers for all of you. My thanks to our committee of Bernie Wittcamp, Jim Anthony, Jack Percival, Tom Rienerth, Bill Strum, Mary West, Bob Barlowe, Phil Denman, Gene Gurlitz, Jim Hall, Cadsie Forman Moe, Jackie Jones Myers, Lin "Perk" Perkins. Watch for a letter about W&M's 300th in 1993.

P.S. If you were in a group photo at the class dinner-dance and would like a print, write to me. Jean Mussman Marcus has sent me the negs.

Class of '54 — Where are you? As this issue of the Alumni Gazette goes to press I have come to the profound conclusion that our class did not produce any communicators. To make matters worse, Hugh '51 and I were in England and Scotland during October and missed this year's Homecoming. From all reports our class didn't have a big turnout. I do have a few bits and pieces collected previously that can be shared.

Trina and Jim Duff revisited their many friends and former neighbors in Connecticut last July, and while at dinner in New Haven they had a brief visit with Barbara Crosset Brink and Bill Brink. Jim said they looked great and didn't seem to have had very many birthdays since graduation!

Marguerite Huff Brown and husband Jay had a wonderful three week vacation in Germany this summer, and as Marge put it they saw all that could possibly be seen in that amount of time. They are now enjoying a busy fall as new grandparents, helping daughter Patricia and her husband with the arrival of their first son.

Our own family has had a growth spurt recently. In April we welcomed Melanie, first child of our daughter Stephanie and her husband, William Strange. And, in September we gained a son-in-law, Doug Goldsmith, who married daughter Kimberlee '78.

Start making plans now to be in Williamsburg for Homecoming '93. The college community is teeming with activity gearing up for the 300th anniversary, and it promises to be a celebration we will all want to take part in.

In the meantime please be wonderful and send me a note with your latest news, and be even more wonderful by adding this correspondent to your holiday card list.

First, let's talk about Homecoming 1993. Make your reservations ASAP at the Hospitality House. Send me pictures as discussed in last issue with your name and address on the back of each one. Also, a 150-word maximum "Memory" for our 35th anniversary Colonial Re-Echo.

Now for Homecoming 1992. The tide of

Class of '57 alumni hit the lobby of the Hospitality House on the Richmond Road like the waves hitting the shoreline of Virginia Beach. Bob Hoitsma, Jim Kaplan, Charlie Morrow, Del Wilson, John Mahoney '55 — collectively about 31' 3" of exuberant humanity (we grew basketball players shorter in the '50s) — outshouting, outgrinning each other in the Class of '57 suite. (Flashback: "Yeah, I was good in high school. Best the last season. And tall. But am I good enough and tall enough for this place. Who's that guy out on the floor?")

Faye Jones Burke, Fay Smith Schaefer '56, DeeDee Daniels Mahoney, Letty Sheild Best, Jane Thompson Kaplan — girls, ladies, women — depending upon the decade and the political correctness (Flashback: "What will my roommate be like? Can we wear each other's clothes? Freshman mixer tomorrow. Do we go over to them — or wait for them to come over to us?")

An elevator filled with beaming Brinkleys and Ukrops. Garry Etgen and wife Charlotte '59, Bill Armbruster, Betty Wright Armbruster, Ed Schaefer, Tom Burke — all of the above, and more, reaching out toward each other, dismissing decades and erasing miles with one gesture, one laugh. (Flashback: After flunking Dr. Fowler's first quiz, or not being rushed by the same fraternity or sorority as your roommate — "Well, if it doesn't work out, I can always transfer. Go back home. What! Leave here? Not see DeeDee in September? Or ever again? Or Jim? or Bob? or Betty Wright? Or Fay? or Charlie? or Jane? I'm not about to let that happen. No way!")

A profile by Tom Luthor (now retired from the Navy and living with wife Carol Zimmerman in Hunter, Fla.) of Marty Miler, who was best man in their wedding. "Marty would write very industriously in class, but he drew cartoons, didn't take notes. We'd try to study together, but he'd fall asleep early on and I'd have to wake him up to go to class. He got A's and I got C's. To this day every year he sends me a cartoon of myself."

A great conversation between Tom and Carol, myself, and Del Wilson and wife Sue concerning the state of education for children. I took a tour of the new Sarah Gore Ives Child Care Center during the weekend. It's terrific and I'm planning on moving in.

Wayne Adams and I tried to call Rod Elliott in Memphis, Tenn. No one home. Rod, you're a doctor. You need an answering machine. Come on.

Spent time with Bob Anchell, who everyone can blame for my going to W&M. Also with Jackie Still Brantley. Bob lost his wife a few months ago. And even though Jackie's loss of John was not as recent, the manner in which she spoke of him made you feel he was right across the room talking with Hoitsma. This College of ours. When we want it to be a background for past memories, it becomes that. And when we want it to be a safe harbor in the present, it will become that for us also.

Had a wonderful seafood dinner on Friday night with Anchell, Ron Masnik, his wife, Carol, Barry "Spider" Levy and wife Pam, and the Wilsons. Spider wore specially made buttons on his lapel with pictures of myself, Masnik and Anchell at age 20. This is not a well person.

Snapshots. Ed Schaefer as Elvis on Class of '57 float. Class picture had 67 representatives. John Bain has been with Chubb Insurance I believe his entire working life. So how many people have bought insurance from a guy named Bananas.

Overheard that John Mahoney and wife DeeDee Daniels returned to New York from Texas last April. John has a jewelry firm on 6th and 48th in New York, three blocks from my own office. Terry Slaughter sends his best to Bob Thomas. I give Terry's wife, Barbara Higby '55, a medal for being the sister-in-law of Terry's baby brother, Bill Slaughter '61, which she fully contends she deserves. Spoke with the president of the Alumni Band (Jackie Brantley, I think), concerning the 300th. Quote: "I need 300 players for half-time next year. I don't give a damn if they can play an instrument — just so they can hold it!" Briefly around the bar spoke to the ever collegiate Tom Eley. Phil Coclough commenting on how happy he was to "breathe the same air I breathed 30 odd years ago."

And ending the weekend with the Class of '57 dinner. And ending the dinner with Lavinia Pretz singing and leading the class in singing "May the Good Lord Bless and Keep You." In looking over the lyrics in the twilight of that weekend, one line stood out for me to close with until we meet again: "May our troubles all be small ones."

Thanks to Ann Fox Harrison and the Class of 1962 Reunion Committee, the Homecoming weekend was a great success! Everyone I met and talked with was having a wonderful time. From the Hospitality Suite to the Class Dance, everyone was running into other classmates.

There were many classmates that I wasn't able to talk to directly, so if I don't mention you in this column please write me with your news. I did get to speak to Chris Herr who had come from Millersville, Pa. Linda Lester Hagen flew in from Kent, Wash. Jackie Fleming drove down from Upperville, Va., her family home to which she just recently moved back from Denver. Jackie is a counselor commuting to Manassas and Arlington each day. Emily Davis Londos came from Baltimore where she and her husband own an older restored home. They have two grown daughters. Mary Alice Adams Betts drove up from Winter Park, Fla., where she works for the Girl Scouts. Her two children have graduated from college. Mildred Murray Torian and her husband, Sam, came from Collinsville, Va., where Mildred owns and operates her own early learning school. Their son graduated from Hampton-Sydney and lives in Raleigh, N.C.; their daughter is a junior at U.Va.

Mary Ellen Lytton Draper and David came from Silver Springs, Md. Their two sons have also graduated from college and are back home while working. Charlotte Abdill Nevins and her husband flew from Johnson City, Tenn. Charlotte teaches sixth grade English. Sue Griggs Braman was in from Titusville, Fla.

Barbara Aubry Walsh and her husband were there from Oaktown, Va. Their oldest son graduated from St. Joseph University. They have six children still at home. Barbara hopes one of her daughters will follow in her footsteps and attend the College. It was great seeing B.A. She and I attended the same high school and were roommates for our first two years at the College.

Seen on the dance floor at the Hospitality House were Nancy Carol Taylor Joblin and Warren Joblin '61 from Weston, Conn. H. C. Thaxton from Richmond, Va., Patty Bayliss Owens and Carroll Owens from Alexandria, Va., Bart Partch from New Canaan, Conn., and Stuart Richardson Dopp and Danny Dopp from Alexandria, Va. were also seen having a great time at the dance.

During the class picture Louise Martin Doyle appeared. She lives on her family farm in Raphine, Va. Julie Guinane Hinckey drove up for the day from Mechanicsville, Va. Judy Delbridge Higginson and her husband, Cliff, flew in from Palo Alto, Calif. Judy is working as a travel agent. Their girls are grown. Sue Robertson Sheppard still lives in Virginia Beach, Va. Standing next to me during the photograph was Margaret Bounds Evans from Irving, Texas, whom I had not seen since her wedding 30 years ago. Ann Smith Hughes and her husband, Jim, came from Vienna, Va.

There were many classmates who had registered at the Society of the Alumni tent. The class picture was taken and everyone seemed to disperse for their lunch on the lawn at the Alumni House. The parade was a true highlight. Everyone made a visit to the bookstore to purchase the latest sweatshirts to last for the next five years.

The most asked question of the weekend was—"Can you believe it has been 30 years?"

Oct. 16 was the perfect fall day in Williamsburg, the kind we can all remember, even feel, if we close our eyes and imagine the scene. It wasn't perfect just because of the weather, but because of the inauguration of the 25th President of the College, Timothy J. Sullivan '66, in the Wren courtyard. And, according to Sam Sadler and Tish Paschall, it wasn't just perfect because of the weather and the inauguration and the picturesque setting, but because Timothy Sullivan is the perfect man for the times. On the eve of our Tercentenary, President Sullivan combines our cherished belief in tradition with his insightful vision for the role of the College in the next century. Sam says that the theme of his presidency is one of "community," which was certainly exemplified at this special ceremony attended by many students, faculty, staff, alumni and admirers from the Williamsburg community where he and his wife, Anne Klare Sullivan '66, are well-regarded. Tish says there is "a genuine feeling for both the Sullivans, very positive and natural. They are both strong individuals and there isn't much for them to prove — they can be who they are. The right thing has happened for the College at the right time." They will certainly draw together all facets of the William and Mary community as we move forward into our fourth century.

THEOBALD ELECTED PRESIDENT OF RICHMOND LAW FIRM

James W. Theobald '74 has been elected president of the Richmond-based law firm, Hirschler, Fleischer, Weinberg, Cox & Allen. He has practiced law with the firm since 1980 and specializes in zoning and commercial real estate law. He is one of 11 attorneys with Hirschler, Fleischer, Weinberg, Cox, & Allen who were awarded degrees from William and Mary. After receiving his bachelor's degree in government from the College, Theobald went on to study law and was awarded his J.D. from the Cleveland Marshall College of Law in 1977. Theobald and his wife Mary '74, '80 M.A. reside in Richmond with their two children.

One member of our class who epitomizes success is Jim Holdren, whose career as a coach actually started his junior year at William and Mary when he was a member of the track team as well as an assistant coach to Harry Groves. According to an August article in the Richmond Times Dispatch, Jim is in his 29th year as a teacher and coach at Richmond's Thomas Jefferson High School. He is the head coach of six teams — boys' and girls' cross country, boys' and girls' indoor track, and boys and girls outdoor track. He devotes hours to his athletes and says he still loves it after all these years. "The enthusiasm is still there, and every year it gets revitalized." Jim earned his master's degree in math from the University of Virginia. He was selected as the National High School Track Coach in 1988 and has held numerous positions in the Athletic Congress track and field's governing body. He serves on the executive board of the Virginia High School Coaches Association, as well as the national organization. He is an accomplished public speaker about track and field. He has been on hand for four Olympics, including this summer's games in Barcelona. Jim's teams have held numerous championships over the years — 75 major invitational team titles, 46 district team titles, and 32 regional team titles. But Jim says, "I don't measure success the way other people do. I measure success in the lives I've touched and the people I've helped and turned around."

Another sports enthusiast was recently highlighted in the Indianapolis Business Journal as one of the local professionals who once had dreams of big time sports. Our own Student Association president, William E. Corley, had the opportunity to join the ranks of professional football after playing for the Tribe, but instead chose to forego his childhood dreams of glory and go on to graduate school. He said it was a hard decision not to let his emotions win over. He went on to Duke University where he got a master's degree in hospital administration. Bill is now president of Community Hospitals in Indianapolis.

It was delightful to hear from Dr. Karen Rackley Credeur, deputy head of the Office of External Affairs and head of the Offices of Public Services at NASA. Karen is the only employee of NASA's 11 centers to participate in the 10-month Mid-Career Master of Public Administration program at Harvard this year. She also was selected separately for the Resident Scholar position. She is living in Kirkland House on the Harvard campus and oversees 350 undergraduates and 50 faculty and graduate students. This is a return stint to Harvard for Karen where she earned her Ph.D. in statistics after a master's in math at William and Mary. Karen's husband Leonard is an electrical engineer at NASA Langley Research Center. They reside in Poquoson, Va., when they're not commuting on weekends to see one another.

David A. Barley, owner of Agape Animal Care, sponsored a lecture and reception for the dog exhibit at the Earl Gregg Swem Library at the College in August. The lecturer was Linda Collins Reilly, associate professor of classical studies. It was the opening lecture of the Friends of the Library and the Williamsburg Bibliophiles — for "anyone interested in dogs or books or both."

William P. Weathersbee and his wife celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary May 9 at a dinner held at the Cascades in Williamsburg. It was hosted by their daughters, including Judith Weathersbee Andriulli '65 of Cos Cob, Conn.

I must apologize for the incorrect information in my last column about Laidler Freeman Campbell. Let me correct it here. Laidler is a school psychologist for Fairfax County Public Schools; she works at two elementary schools and one intermediate school. She does have a young child at home, 8 years old.

It was wonderful to have lunch recently with Bobbie Mulcahey Frazier. Bobbie is in her 24th year of teaching French, and has changed schools to Fairfax High School in Fairfax County. She can be credited with starting the GT program in foreign languages years ago. Bobbie's son Kip attends Northern Virginia Community College and is studying television production. They live in Leesburg.

Harriet Nachman Storm, a former president of the Society of the Alumni and a former member of the W&M Board of Visitors, continues to serve the College this academic year as president of the Cypher Society and as a regional president of the W&M Athletic Educational Foundation. Harriet attended the inauguration of Timothy J. Sullivan '66 with her daughter, Laura Elizabeth Storm '93. Laura is also captain of the award-winning varsity cheerleading squad, a member of the Student Alumni Liaison Council and a member of Chi Omega sorority. Harriet's older daughter, Lisa S. Hogge '89, received an M.Ed. in agency counseling from the College in May.

1993, the year of our Tercentenary, will be an exciting time in the history of our alma mater with the many occasions we will have to gather on campus to celebrate our traditions, our memories and our future. I hope you all will plan to join in the festivities throughout this special year. See you there.

In the meantime please include me on your mailing list for holiday news. Thanks and happy holidays.

We were unable to attend Homecoming this year — THE news opportunity of the year. I did ask several people to send me reports, and any other news is more than welcome.

I had a letter from Flossie Bishop Wolin, now Flo, a Jefferson Dormitory buddy. Flo teaches emotionally disturbed teenagers at the Tidewater Detention Home in Chesapeake, Va., and often brings the students she teaches to her home. Her son, Karl, 22, is a student at Virginia Commonwealth University. Flo enjoys painting and writing poetry.

Another Jefferson resident, Rindy Gregory Lionberger, wrote me this summer. Rindy left the College after her freshman year to marry Sam, and they have four sons: Sam III (Virginia Tech graduate), David (U.Va. and Washington and Lee Law School grad), Chuck (James Madison University '93), and Greg (Virginia Tech '96). Rindy and Sam live in Salem, Va., where she now works as director of marketing for Lionberger Construction Co., after 18 years as a full-time mother and volunteer.

Our local newspaper had an announcement that Dr. Frances Cole Arndt has been named interim director of the UNC-Greensboro Residential College for three years. The Residential College is a program for freshman and sophomores that allows students to study and live in a dormitory setting. Fran joined the faculty in 1977 and has taught in the Western civilization, women's studies and honor programs. She earned her master's and Ph.D. degrees at Duke University.

Dr. Joel Zaba, optometrist, is a vision consultant for educators. He has lectured extensively on how vision problems contribute to learning disabilities in children, with an impressive list of television and magazine interviews. Joel has published numerous articles on children's vision problems, served as a faculty member of Old Dominion University's School of Continuing Education, acted as a visual consultant for the Norfolk public school system, and operates two practices in Norfolk and Virginia Beach, Va. He has developed a video series that aims to improve children's vision skills and learning potential.

Congratulations to Pete '66 and Judy Poarch Nance '69 for their successful job as national alumni co-chairs of the W&M Annual Fund. I thoroughly enjoyed reading the Annual Fund Honor Roll: the presentation was well done, and the personal interviews with Pete and Judy readily explain why they were selected for such an important position.

The annual conference recognizes Nationwide's top agents for superior sales and customer service. He and seven other Nationwide agents from throughout the country were inducted into the hall of fame recently in Toronto. During Pierce's 26 years with Nationwide, he has qualified for President's Conference 20 times. 25TH REUNION

70 Randy Pearson Van Dam
215 Myrtle St.
Haworth, NJ 07641

Dale Brubeck came East from Kappa Kappa Gamma Headquarters, Columbus, Ohio, to address our Northern New Jersey Kappa Alumnae Association luncheon in October. The night before, Dale and I made up for too short a visit at Homecoming '90, and had a great visit over dinner with Michele Cayot Abrams from Millington, N.J. and Bobby Henry Todd, '69, from Westfield. Laughing, reminiscing and sharing the past 20 years was wonderful... we enjoyed ourselves so much, we closed the restaurant!

Although they were unable to join us for dinner, Dale and I touched base with Kathy Kearney and Judy Rader. Kathy is a psychologist and works three days a week at Tappan Zee High School, Orangeburg, N.Y., and has a private practice. She and husband, and 3-year-old Jeremy live in Stony Point, N.Y. Judy is a freelance writer in New York City where she lives with daughter Amy, 4, and her husband.

Dale is executive director of Kappa Kappa Gamma and among other responsibilities, she coordinates the volunteer and the paid personnel. She is an avid bird watcher and fly fisherwoman.

Michele, with AT&T continues her Rutgers Executive M.B.A. program and enjoyed her jaunt to Cambridge, England, and Paris last summer with that program.

Bobby Henry Todd '69 and Bob '69 recently moved to another house in Westfield and are in the throes of renovating it... a challenge with the academic and athletic schedules of three children!

It's hard to say how excited I still am about our 20th reunion! It was wonderful to see so many classmates who came back to Williamsburg from as far away as Australia and Alaska as well as from all over the country, and it was great to pick up where we left off a mere 20 years ago. THANK YOU especially to Nancy Sturgeon Luzar, Elaine Blyth Bixiones and Bruce Shatswell (and everyone else I'm not aware of) for all their planning efforts. For any of you who missed it, all I can say is it really was "A Class Act" and you should plan right now to come to the 25th! Now to the news.

In early October, Sam Marcuson wrote with news from a summer mini-reunion. His wife Judy and he arranged at Twin Lakes State Park near Farmville, Va. Sam, first of all, works for Inco Limited as a technical supervisor in the Copper Cliff Smelter, has three children and freezes in the Northern Ontario winters. But on this "hot as blazes" July day, about 30 classmates had a great time talking over old times. Classmates included:

Kathe Fischer, who spends most of her time with her three boys but also works part time with computers at Oak Ridge National Laboratory;

Wayne Smith, a lawyer for the Commonwealth of Virginia, working on the regulation of the cable TV industry;

Barbara Dent, who teaches Spanish in Northern Virginia;

Jane Partin, who works as a supervising chemist for Burroughs in Greenville, N.C.;

Bob Rycroft, a professor of economics at Mary Washington;

Chris Williamson, who runs his own business in electrical supply;

and Wanda Williamson, who works in the fashion industry.

Congratulations to Linda Jones on her pro-from our own Karen Devitt, who is the vocalist for this jazz group. They performed in September at the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, D.C.

Along the line of vocalists, Suzanne Buckingham is a soprano who was featured at a concert at the Crewe Baptist Church in July. She is director of the Amelia Baptist Church choir, assistant director of the Baptist Women's Chorale and an elementary school music teacher in Amelia County. She formerly was an associate professor of music at Paul D. Camp Community College.

After my last deadline, but in the midst of her planning for Homecoming, Elaine Blyth Bixiones sent me a proverbial mountain of information about folks she has heard from as she worked on our reunion, so let me pass it on. Bruce Shatswell our senior class president, is director of medical alumni relations and development for the George Washington University Medical Center. He lives in Reston, Va., with his wife and family and travels extensively to see doctors all over the country for his work. Nancy Sturgeon Luzar and husband Rex '73 live in Williamsburg. They have three children, and Nancy works in the Admissions Office at William and Mary. She is starting to see applications from the children of our classmates. Yes, time marches on.

Bob and Jackie Sivertsen Wooldridge live in Herndon, Va. They have three daughters. Jackie is busy with Girl Scouts, and Bob has been appointed a judge. Michelle Ragone Scherer and Rip '73 now live in Harrisonburg, Va., where Rip is head coach for the James Madi-

Gary, whom she met while in her doctoral program in economics.

Anne Timpano is the curator of the Columbus, Ga., Art Museum, which was recently featured in Southern Living. Sally Wade Gross and family, including two children, live in Boca Raton, Fla., where she and her husband have their own business. Anne Taylor Leitch Moorman is a stockbroker in Richmond. Cheryl Menke teaches high school geography in Annapolis, Md., and is the department head. She has her master's degree in curriculum and is working on her doctorate. In the summer she uses her vacation to rack up those frequent flier miles all over the world. Charlotte Hummel works for ERIC Clearinghouse in Illinois and Debbie Lewis lives in the D.C. area.

Kevin Hennessey is an attorney in Pottstown, Pa. He and wife Donna have two children. He was keeping Brad Boehmler, his wife and daughter company at Homecoming. Brad lives in Oakton, Va., and battles the D.C. rush hour daily to his job with C&P Telephone Co. Bill Uzzell lives in Covington, Va., with his wife and daughter.

John Fletcher is an attorney in Virginia Beach and has two young children. Jeff Jensen and Patty Brooks '73 live in Easton, Conn., where he is a futures trader. He ran his own business for 18 years and has traveled extensively. They have two daughters — one a college sophomore and the other a high school junior.

Harriet Stanley is engrossed in northern politics. She lives in Merrimac, Mass.

Michele Korczowski Peters is back in Williamsburg keeping up with three children and all their activities, especially swim team. Donna Metzger Evans and Chip '71 live in Greensboro, N.C., and have three children. Donna is as busy as ever, especially with select soccer. (We have a bunch of three-children families!)

If you ever stop in at the Rescue Tavern in Belmar, N.J., you'll find Ed Helies running the shop. And Jack Hurley moved his family from the cold of Vermont to the beaches of South Carolina. With the restaurant trade in his blood, he runs the Colony House in Charleston.

I had such a great time talking to so many people, I finally decided I needed to grab a pen and paper (or tiny business card people handed me) to keep names and careers straight. There's no guarantee that it's necessarily straight, but it's better than pure memory work. So, here goes.

Kathy Powell Keough lives in Waldorf, Md., with a 15- and a 12-year-old. She graduated from the Christian Theological Seminary in Minneapolis with an emphasis in music; she teaches music in an elementary school and is her church choir director.

BOOK BY ALUMNUS APPEARS IN NEW EDITION

John D. Weaver '32, an accomplished free-lance writer wrote The Brownsville Raid in 1970 in an effort to tell America the story of how more than 150 black soldiers were punished en masse for a mysterious shooting and murder that happened near Fort Brown, Texas, in 1906 under President Theodore Roosevelt. In 1972, a full 66 years later, the United States Army cleared those 167 men after a copy of Weaver's book spurred action by a Congressman. Now more than two decades since this ordeal, Texas A&M University has reprinted the story of the black battalion with hopes that the new generation of young Americans will learn the truth of the raid. This edition features an introduction covering the possibility that the soldiers had been framed by the residents of Brownsville. Weaver resides in Durham, N.C., with his wife Chica. The Brownsville Raid is available from booksellers or directly from Texas A&M University Press (800/826-8911).

MARK TWAIN IN VIENNA

The little-known story of Mark Twain's sojourn in Vienna in 1897 is detailed in a new book Our Famous Guest: Mark Twain in Vienna by Carl Dolmetsch, professor emeritus of English at William and Mary. Published by the University of Georgia Press, the book is a vivid and vibrant picture of Vienna at the turn of the century and an equally vivid and vibrant portrait of one of Vienna's major curiosities at the time: Mark Twain, according to one reviewer. Although most of Twain's biographers have mentioned his Viennese sojourn (occasioned by his daughter Clara's musical studies), it has remained an unexplored period in his career until now. For the first time, Dolmetsch tells of the 20 months that the aging writer imbibed freely of Vienna's celebrity-mad atmosphere. Dolmetsch, who is author of The Smart Set: A History and Anthology, has written two articles for the William and Mary Magazine—on Twain's relationship with Sigmund Freud and on Amadeus Mozart.

'71 live in Hampton and have three children. Betty Ann is a preschool director and Matt is a kinesiologist. He explained to me that means he works on exercise programs for patients who need rehabilitation.

Marsha Robinson Shelburn lives in Aiken, S.C., with husband Bill and two sons, 11 and 8. She and her husband both teach at the University of South Carolina at Aiken.

The next time you have flounder stuffed with crab meat, it might be Ida Hall who caught those crabs. She is a professional crabber in Kilmarnock, Va., following in the footsteps of several of her family members.

Peggy Oatman Cross lives in Ashland, Va., and manages the Best Western Hanover House. She describes her son of 13 as a future NBA star and her daughter of 13 as a future Olympic gymnast.

Kathy Shriver Sheridan, with husband and three children, live in the small town of Chester, N.Y. She works in sales. Her oldest daughter is a sophomore at Western Maryland.

Mike and Jean Henry Stakias have two children and live in Philadelphia, where Mike practices law. Anne Iarrobino Barter, husband and two children live in Bethesda, Md. She finds herself committed to all kinds of volunteering and said she really enjoyed Homecoming.

I'm down to my last envelope that I covered with notes, so just bear with me. I saw Betsy Stone and husband Mark, who flew down from Springfield, Mass. She has given up shopkeeping to keep up with her three children for the present. And Frankie Holmes came from Houston with her husband of two years. She is a medical doctor and is involved in cancer research at the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center. She passed along the happy news that she is expecting a child in February. Getting in the spirit of old W&M days, she donned her duc cap from freshman year for the day. She would like to get in touch with Patsy Dix, so if you read this issue of the Gazette, Patsy, you can write to Frankie A. Holmes, M.D.; Section of Medical Breast Cancer Center; Box 56; 1515 Holcombe Blvd.; Houston, TX 77030.

The two classmates I talked with who came really long distances were Judy Barrows Bockmon and Barry Kincaid. Judy, her husband and two little ones traveled from Anchorage, Alaska, where, she told me the temperature does get up to the 70s in the summer. She works as an insurance defense attorney. And Barry came from Australia with his wife and two children for a whirlwind trip to the United States Sporting a bit of an Aussie accent, he told me about his job in health planning and administration. He had visited King's Dominion (purported to be the best day in his son's life) and was off to the West Coast before their trip ended.

Laurie Albright Getchell has two children, lives in Eliot, Me., and is a high school biology teacher.

Thanks to Phil Mosser, construction business owner in Virginia Beach, and Charlie Glazener, real estate mogul in Kingsmill in Williamsburg, for representing the Class of '72 in the Homecoming Parade. They weren't recognizable because of motorcycle helmets, but they wore T-shirts that said "72" on them. If anyone would like to head up a float committee for the 25th, the job is open.

David Bates came with his wife from Fort Knox, Ky., where he is an Army chaplain. They have three children.

Jackson Neall, his wife and son live in Ocean City, N.J. They have four children.

Cheryl Clark Pagan lives in Little Rock, Ark., where she is in charge of school curriculum for grades K through 12. Husband John '73 stayed home to campaign for the state senate. He is the incumbent and is raging a tough battle against his opponent. John is a law professor at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock.

Susie Slaton Gibbons and Bill live in Midlothian, Va., and have a 10-month-old son. Susan enjoys being at home with their little guy, and Bill commutes to Richmond where he works for Ernst & Young.

Allen Grant has two children and is working for the EPA in Washington, D.C. He pulled out what must be something of an antique now—a copy of the Green and Gold from our freshman year! It was fun to look back at those fresh young faces. He didn't even have a beard back then.

Doug Green has been writing ever since his W&M days. His current job with the Justice Department is overseeing the publication of a magazine for legal and judicial professionals.

Bob Byrne and wife Sally Breedlove '73 had their three children in tow. They live in Columbia, Md., where Bob works for a commercial development company and Sally is busy with the younger family members.

Dave Yoho is a motivational speaker. His work involves consulting and producing training movies and tapes, and takes him to cities all over the country. He lives in Bethesda, Md.,

still loves to talk and has one child.

I got to catch up with Peggy Jenkins Whitehead and husband Dick who live in Nelson County, Va. They have three children. Dick is a geologist. Peggy works in a health care facility where part of her job is to make health care available to people for whom transportation or literacy is a problem.

Peggy Gordon and her husband, Rick, live in Dumfries, Va. Both work for the military at the Pentagon.

Debbie Dougherty is a business professor for graduate students in Montreal, Quebec, in Canada. Sounds like she loves her job and is enjoying the city of Montreal.

Carolyn Curley works for PACE, a warehouse-type store that sells everything from food to clothes to computers. She hires employees and has other management responsibilities.

Marsha Seidman Gewirtzman and Neal '71 live in New York. I didn't find out what they're doing, but will check it out so that we can have news for the next column.

Vicky Volk Holpe and husband Mark live in Richmond with three (I think) children. A teacher by profession, Vicky is working in a clinic dealing with learning disabled students.

The hour is very late and everyone is probably suffering from eye fatigue by now. There are so many other people I saw in Williamsburg that I didn't even get a chance to talk with. It would be great if some of you who have news about other classmates would write to me—while it's still on your mind. Till next time, have a wonderful holiday season.

Hard to believe that our 18th reunion has come and gone. Because we live so close to Williamsburg, Jim and I always attend Homecoming. Even when it isn't one of our reunion years, we enjoy seeing the few who show up from our class and the friends from adjacent years. We all know that the really big event will be two years from now, at our 20th. But this Homecoming had its own special drawing card, no matter what your graduate date, because the new president, Tim Sullivan '66, was inaugurated at the Wren Building with much pomp and circumstance. Joe Montgomery, in his capacity as president of the Alumni Society this year, gave a short speech, as did former Chief Justice Warren Burger LL.D. '73, Rector Hays Watkins LL.D. '82, and other luminaries. The Alumni Society came through with a pleasant sunny autumn weekend and a football victory.

I saw Bill Wertz, who promised to send me a box of candy from his Pennsylvania factory. Williamsburg residents Kathy Todd Wilke and John and Elizabeth Hollis were there. Linda Aron drove down from Richmond. Linda has recently changed jobs and gone to work with her father, a real estate broker.

Molli Amburn and Donna Follini Reichert came by the Lambda Chi house: both look like a million bucks (it's so nice to note that none of us looked any older—just better!). Donna and Doug brought their daughters along. It's always a treat to see people's children at these events.

Shelton Smith couldn't attend Homecoming. He was busy getting married that day. Shelton married Julie Belle Taylor, a dental hygienist, in Richmond on Oct. 17.

And Richard and Ruth Davis were just too far away to come to play in the Homecoming band this year: they live on Guam. I hope the two recent hurricanes there haven't been too disastrous! Ruth wrote the Alumni Band Organization that she has started playing in the Guam Symphony Orchestra, doubling on the first violin part and the oboe part (on the flute of course) when the sax player (also listed as a flutist) developed a schedule conflict and withdrew. Such is life in small community orchestras!

Other news arrived via the post office, notably: the Rev. Dr. Edo L. Bailey has been admitted to practice hospital chaplaincy at the Shady Grove Adventist Hospital in Rockville, Md. His duties include ministry to patients, staff and visitors at the 243-bed facility. The hospital is a mission ministry of the Seventh Day Adventist Church. He and his wife maintained their homes in Bogota, Colombia, and Spring Grove, Va., (his hometown) and now have a third in Rockville, Md.

I had a postcard from John Finta bemoaning his bad luck when it comes to vacation weather. John took his son on his first train ride to Williamsburg and they ended up visiting Busch Gardens on a 94 degree day. The experience reminded him of their visit to Gettysburg in the pouring rain.

Tom Monday has been appointed vice president, education and research, of the National Association of Convenience Stores, located in Alexandria, Va. For the past two years, he has served as the executive director of the American Trauma Society in Maryland; before that he was with the Building Service Contractors for more than 10 years.

Patricia Gritzan, in the midst of her second year at Rutgers University Law School in Camden, has received a scholarship for outstanding academic ability from the New Jersey State Bar. It has been a big year for awards for Patty: she recently received the 1992 American Jurisprudence Award for Civil Procedure as well.

There was a nice article in the Washington Blade about Christopher Bram, praising his most recent novel, Almost History. Since his W&M days, Chris has worked at the Social Security office in New York and Scribner's Bookstore, also in New York, writing all the while. I am not sure, but the article seemed to imply that Chris was writing full time now. He is currently working on his fifth novel, to be titled The Father of Frankenstein.

Robert B. Dickson got married this past June at the chapel at Georgetown University to Jane Merry Fall, a clinical research nurse coor-

William and Mary has established a new information center in the Sir Christopher Wren Building to welcome visitors during 1993, the tercentenary year. In anticipation of its 300th anniversary, the College has opened the center on the first floor of the Wren Building, the oldest academic building still in use in the United States. Visitors will receive information on events during the 300th celebration and a new walking tour guide called the "Tercentenary Historic Tour of the College of William and Mary in Virginia," which includes a short history, a self-guided map and four-color photos of landmarks on the historic campus. The center is staffed by volunteers from the Christopher Wren Association for Lifelong Learning.

Happy holidays to all. Hope you all made it to your 20th high school reunion during the year. Shirley Macklin Henning wrote about an unusual aspect of her high school reunion in Media, Pa. Four members of her class attended A&M, although only she and Steve Proscino attended the reunion. Steve works in marketing for Anheuser Busch in St. Louis. Shirley is a senior v.p. at Bank One-San Antonio, heading up the commercial banking division. She is the first woman to head a commercial division of a bank in San Antonio. She's trying to learn Spanish but it's a rough road. Good luck and thanks for your letter. The other W&Mers from her high school class are Diane Horn and Sue Eldridge. Anybody know where they are?

According to a summer article from the Virginia Gazette, Sherry Losito is recovering nicely from her bone marrow transplant. She appreciated the outpouring of support from her classmates. Robin Segall changed jobs last year and now works for the EPA in North Carolina developing smokestack emission test methods.

Check this one out. Lynn Allison is the owner of a pool hall in Williamsburg, the Corner Pocket, and the place is packed all the time. Sounds like they serve pretty good food, too. Lynn has an M.B.A. from the University of Texas, and she used every bit of her training researching the numbers before deciding to open her business. Check out the premises next time you're in the Burg.

Send me your holiday newsletter. That way you can bring us all up to date. See ya next time.

I had hoped to attend Homecoming this year but due to back-to-back business trips and family events I was not able to make it. I have heard that we were well represented and that those who did attend had a good time. Please let me know of any news for our next column!

Steve Ross reminisced about our William and Mary days in the Alumni Band Organization newsletter earlier this year. He is living in Pennsylvania. Shari Kelliher also sent news through the Alumni Band that she is living in London.

Congratulations to Bill Ranken and Jane Turman on their wedding this past June. Bill is with Coca-Cola USA and Jane is employed by Snyder Hunt Inc. They are living in Roanoke, Va.

The Wren Chapel was the site for the wedding of Sophie Zoe Ridings and Steven Foster Avert in September. They are living in New Kent, Va.

Robert V. H. Dover is a Ph.D. candidate in folklore at Indiana University. He served as program chair for the symposium "Andean Cosmologies Through Time: Emergence and Persistence." He is also one of the editors of a new book of the same title published in June by the Indiana University Press.

University. For the past 11 years he has developed his talents in many different Virginia hospitals. His specialties are bone, joint and muscle problems. One of his patients was professional football player Bruce Smith of the Buffalo Bills. He treated Bruce during the '90-'91 season; one of Bruce's best years!

Watch for more information on Homecoming '93—our 15th reunion! We will send more details to you in the coming months. Plan to attend!

Happy holidays! I hope this finds you all well... and, getting ready to celebrate William & Mary's Tercentenary with the rest of the alums! I know many events are being planned for the coming year, so be sure that you're included in all the hoopla!

I'll keep this short but sweet, as I really don't have much news to report. While you're writing your holiday greetings, PLEASE drop me a line; it doesn't have to be long, but I want to hear from you! This past Fourth of July, James Ewing had something else to celebrate other than Independence Day. On that day, he married Rhonda Williams. It appears that the two met at Louisiana State University, where Jim received his Ph.D. in chemistry and Rhonda received her bachelor's degree in secondary science education. They are now living in Mt. Pleasant, S.C., where Jim is employed by Westvaco Corp.

Carol Ann Hilton, who I know follows the class news very closely, has recently been appointed director of the annual fund at Mount Vernon College in D.C. Before that, Carol Ann was the director of institutional advancement

The letter must be signed. Letters should be addressed to Office of the University Registrar, College of William and Mary, P.O. Box 8795, Williamsburg, VA 23187-8795. Frank and I have just returned from Homecoming '92 which was absolutely fantastic, as all of you who attended our 10th-year reunion well know. The Class of '82 had an incredible turnout, and everybody seemed to have a wonderful time. We all owe a great deal of thanks to the four class members who made the event so successful: Laura Brewer, Cathy Walker Green, Barbara Cole Thornhill and Matt Thornhill.

What follows are the bits and pieces of news I can recall from the dozens of conversations I had with our fellow classmates. My apologies in advance for any incomplete, incorrect or missing information. If I left you out or got anything wrong, please drop me a line and I will include an update in my next column.

Laura Brewer is associate counsel for Mobil Oil in Palm Beach Gardens, Fla. Laura shared honors with Jan Howarth, also of Florida, for "most changed" members of the class. (Having gone blonde, both looked absolutely gorgeous.) Jan is one of the 90 out of 10,000 Delta pilots who are women. She is engaged to Brian Mathews, a pilot for American whom she met at Navy flight training school. A March '93 wedding is planned. A third classmate who has ing her second child in May, while Barbara Cole Thornhill and husband Matt have likely already welcomed their new bundle of joy. Laurie Karlson Basalyga, who has been on our "missing classmates" list for too long, has a 4-year-old son and baby daughter. Welcome back Laurie! Joanne Fenity Zapicchi and husband Michael recently welcomed their second child, a daughter. Josie attended the reunion with Joanne O'Brien (who took class honors for "still the biggest partier") and Karen Lisi. Meanwhile, Alice Cline and her husband have three kids! But the "most children" award at Saturday night's party went to Laura Mooney Nary and husband Kevin, who now have a family of four.

In the newlywed department, Judy Dorow Conner attended with her husband of seven months, Eric. Judy is in marketing with Johnson & Johnson, while Eric has his own real estate business. Alice Campbell Ireland brought along her new hubby George who, at age 26, netted Alice the prize for "youngest husband." The couple met at a Mardi Gras celebration. The overall award for "youngest spouse" went to Vince Pirri, whose lovely wife Gurry is 22.

Mark Gardner explained to me that technically he is not a Class of '82 alum, having graduated in December 1981. However, everyone was just as glad to see him. In addition to hanging out with the Class of '82, Randolph Beales was able to spend time with some members of his family who live in the area and also attended W&M.

Robert Lee, one of the brave young men who survived freshman year in Tyler, was seen sporting a full beard. Ernest White, also of Tyler, is very busy with a successful career in theater and music. George Graham, another Tyler alum, is working for the government as a technical writer.

at the Seton Keough High School in Baltimore, where she spearheaded a very successful alumni campaign. She has also worked at the Maryland Agricultural Education Foundation, Polytechnic University and Wagner College. Much of Carol Ann's expertise in fund raising was honed while completing her master's in institutional advancement at Vanderbilt.

Chris Wenzel Stenroos writes from sunny Florida, Delray Beach to be exact, which I hope wasn't devastated by Hurricane Andrew. Chris seems to be busy as always, which at the moment, at work, entails changing computer systems, while at home her time is spent with her son, Kai, who was born this past February, and her daughter, Mari, who is now 3. Chris has another question to pose to the general populace... she asks where are the rest of the Deutsches Hausers?

Lastly, but certainly not least, Lisa Jo Sagolla is directing an original revue, "The Sunday Times," in New York which opened in November. The rest of her time is divided between her responsibilities as a teacher of dance at Colummigrated to the Sunshine State, Mike Kneidinger, is with the Bennigan's restaurant chain.

Lisa Zanetti and husband Rob Kravitz announced the birth of their second child; daughter Stephanie Nicole was born in August of 1991. Anne Benton Madden and husband Jim are also new parents. Anne received her M.B.A. from Wharton and is now director of computer services for Circuit City in Richmond, with 70 people reporting to her. Another new mother is Belinda Getler, who recently welcomed her first child with husband, Pascal.

Beth Alford Wolfe and husband Tom have celebrated nine years of marriage. So have Buddy Phillips and his wife, Sherrie Sell Phillips '83, who recently gave birth to their first child, a daughter. Buddy and Sherrie brought their adorable baby to our Saturday night reunion party.

Brenda Bloomer Hargett and her husband made the trip with their two children. Cynthia Vick Choate and husband Rich are also the parents of two. Nancy Sharp Lindsey is expect-

Also in a federal position is Pam Hillery, who is working for the EPA in Montana where she has settled with her husband. The couple is expecting their first child. Pam spent freshman year in Hunt Hall, and attended the reunion with two pals from the third floor: Cathy Valentine Martin is now the mother of two and has put her law career on hold to raise her family, while Kristin McLaughlin was married just three months ago. Pam, Cathy and Kristin were accompanied by Kathy Maxey, who is living and working in New York City. The foursome is interested in the whereabouts of "Big Al" Plumley, a freshman resident of Taliaferro who, I was told, did not graduate. If anyone knows where Big Al is, please let me know.

Matt Hogendobler is practicing dentistry in Virginia Beach. Matt and I would like to send our regards to a mutual friend, Annamarie Smith '81, who entered W&M with the Class of '82 but graduated a year early. Annamarie is pursuing an acting career in Manhattan.

Maria Romeo Dixon and husband Simon made the trip down from Washington, D.C.

The Sir Christopher Wren Building will be one of five American college buildings featured on postal cards to be issued next year by the U.S. Postal Service. The cards are part of a series of seven Historic Preservation cards. The William and Mary card, which will be issued Feb. 8, will be introduced at a special Tercentenary event planned for Charter Week 1993. Other cards will highlight O'Kane Hall, Holy Cross College; Beecher Hall, Illinois College; Old East Building, University of North Carolina; and Walker Art Museum, Bowdoin College. The series will also include cards featuring Fort Recovery in Ohio and the National Cathedral in Washington.

The Trellis Restaurant in Merchants Square in Williamsburg will salute its 50th new menu with a winter preview dinner on Wednesday, Dec. 16 at 7 p.m. to benefit the College of William and Mary's 300th anniversary. The dinner, which is expected to raise $20,000 for William and Mary, is one of a series of tercentenary celebrations for the College. The dinner also previews the Trellis' 50th seasonal menu change since opening in November 1980. "We have always felt a close bond with William and Mary," said Trellis co-owner John Curtis. According to Timothy J. Sullivan, president of the College, "The Trellis Restaurant has always been a firm supporter of William and Mary and a great asset to the community. I am very grateful for this extraordinary statement of support for William and Mary's Tercentenary." The cost of the five-course dinner, including wine and coffee, is $100 per person, with all proceeds going to William and Mary. Reservations can be made on a space-available basis by calling the Trellis at 804/229-8610, Monday-Friday between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. The reservation will be confirmed upon receipt of a check for $100 per person, payable to The College of William and Mary, and sent to The Trellis Restaurant, P.O. Box 287, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

Simon has his own advertising agency, while Maria is working with a dance troupe in addition to pursuing a full-time career. Simon told me that Maria works out every day, and it shows: she looks great! Carrie Solomon and Hinton Sutherland, also both from the D.C. area, attended Saturday's party together; the two have been a couple for over a year now. I was told that Sarah Baird and her longtime boyfriend took a trip around the world a while back, realizing a lifelong dream for both of them.

Judy Cowling has her own business, Painted Ponies, in Newport News doing "custom painted clothing, furniture and stuff." Meanwhile, Marsha Percy is an associate with Russel Reynolds Associates Inc., an executive recruiting firm in D.C.

Those are the "newsy" items I can recall from the reunion. Again, I encourage anyone who has anything to add to write.

Turning now to the letters I've received since my last column, Tom Brooke was married to Kim Cockayne in August. Tom, also a graduate of Marshall-Wythe, is a practicing attorney in the fields of intellectual property and international trade with Mason, Fenwick and Lawrence in Washington, D.C. Tom's bride is an international trade analyst and adviser for Broker Power Inc. A number of Tom's brothers from Theta Delt attended the wedding, including Glenn Gundersen '76, Clark Shuler '80, Dave Duke '81, Roy Dunn, Kevin Doyle, Roger Morse '83, Charlie Kendrick, Bill Goyner '84, and Mark Osler '85. Among those attending pre- and post-wedding festivities were Robert Roman '80, Cynthia Vick Choate and hus-

finished his fellowship in gastroenterology in Tampa over the summer and has moved back to Greenville, N.C., to open a practice. Rob and wife Cindy are expecting their second child this fall.

Bonnie Banks was married in August to David Prado. After W&M, Bonnie completed her graduate degree at Washington University. She is a commercial account manager at Crestar Bank in Newport News, while her husband is a sales consultant at Casey Chevrolet, also of Newport News. The couple honeymooned in Aruba.

Another recent marriage is that of Joy Lawson to Kenneth Woolard last May. Joy's new spouse graduated from VCU. After a wedding trip to Disney World, the couple settled in Richmond.

James Hunter has announced his engagement to Terri Graniewski. After graduation, James received an M.B.A. from W&M and an M.S. from Johns Hopkins University. He and his bride-to-be are both with Bell Atlantic in Silver Spring, Md. A June '93 wedding is planned.

Along career lines, William Barnes, C.F.P., has been promoted to investment officer by Wheat First Securities in Williamsburg. Meanwhile, Michael Mallare, M.D., has joined the staff of the Lewis-Gale Clinic. A pediatrician, Mike graduated from the University of Virginia Medical School.

After attending the reunion, I realize now more than ever that the Class of '82 is truly special. Let's use this column to keep in touch, and keep W&M an important part of our lives. Hope to hear from more of you soon.

that route to/from the Burg to please give them a call. Susan's big news is the birth of their first daughter, Erin Nicole, born on February 27, at just 1 lb, 11 1/2oz. — she was 15 weeks early. Erin came home from the hospital on June 17 at 6 lbs., 13 oz., and she is doing just great!! Susan and Jeff want to thank some very special W&M friends who were very supportive during a stressful time: Glenn and Kimberly Albertson Lapkin, who are finishing the last touches on their dream house in Goochland County. Susan would also like to thank Sandie Baker Thompson and her husband, Steve; Susie Chamlee Holmes, one of Susan's roommates, who has two children of her own; Vic and Robin Marsh Clarke '83; and Valerie Stiffler Suessmith. Valerie and Susan were roommates for two years and they found out, by surprise, that their children were due at the same time in June — what a coincidence! Val's son was born on June 22. Congratulations, Val and Hank!

Susan continues to enjoy her work in corporate loan administration at Central Fidelity Bank in Richmond. She works with other W&Mers Pam Snidow Thaxton '80, Mitzi Smith Reynolds, Tom Gallo '85 and Bobby Fothergill '87. Susan's husband, Jeff, is a senior manager at Ernst & Young in Richmond. He works closely with Venson Wallin '86.

Susan also gave a great update on fellow Tri Deltas! She ran into Khaki Crosswhite '86, who works for a law firm in Richmond. Susan lives in the same subdivision with Anne Reardon Gregory '81, who just had her second child and named her Erin, too, and the brother of Anne-Jarrell Raper LoCasale '86, Thomas.

months pregnant, which was quite a sight to behold! J. J. is teaching seventh-grade English, but took the summer off to enjoy her new son. Susan continues to work for the law firm of Hunton & Williams in Washington, D.C. Susan and her husband, Ron, just had a baby girl, Cady, on June 27. Lori Buckius is manager of publication marketing for Edison Electric, and she got married last September. Luanne works for Mobil Oil Corp. as a financial analyst.

W&M folks were abundant at the wonderful reception following, held at the Cascades. Rob and Lori Selden Haislip are living in Richmond and were showing everyone pictures of their new baby, Clair. George and Lynn Helms Foreman have a little boy. Lynn is a doctor working at Walter Reed Hospital in the D.C. area and George works in medical supplies sales. Jane Ephrussi made the trek from New York where she works in the International Division of Citicorp Bank. Chuck '85 and Tracey Krauthem Murray '85 came from Northern Virginia. They have been having a lot of fun with their son, Spencer. Chuck is clerking for a federal judge. Hope Solomon and Meg Hunter Scott came up from North Carolina and made the trip with Betsy Pendleton. Meg and her husband, Bill Scott, are living in Winston-Salem and have their two sons keeping them busy. Brian '83 and Sheila McDonald Bates also have two children and are living in Northern Virginia. Michelle Albert Vachris received her Ph.D. in economics and is working for the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Her husband, Scott Vachris, just received his law degree from George Mason University. (More news from them later in the column!) Ron and Lilly Armistead Andrews were there too. Lilly is in her last year of law school at American University. Mary Koch Chapin '85 just had a baby girl, and Patty Gleason Logue '83 works for Hunton & Williams in Richmond. Finally, Nancy Passemante '56, Margee's former boss, also attended the festivities. She currently works for the American Physical Society. It was a memorable occasion for all!

Judy Kavjian sends news of a very special wedding as well. The big news of late is the marriage of Lisa West to Mark Alpert, on June 6 in Harbor Springs, Mich. Lisa's parents have a summer home there. It was a beautiful day and the wedding was gorgeous — outside overlooking Little Traverse Bay. Needless to say, there were loads of W&M people there for the party — it was a veritable Pi Phi reunion. Wedding party participants included Judy, as maid of honor, Marge Krebs Haynes '85, who made the trip in from Atlanta with her husband, Greg Haynes '85. Other Pi Phis in attendance included Julie Beringer, in from Chicago, Sandy DeSilvio Witt, in from Detroit, and Julie O'Neill, out from Pittsburgh. There were even a few non-Pi Phi W&M people there — Chi-O Mary Mitchell '85 and Scott Olsen came in from Manhattan for the festivities. In an effort to relive our college days, they all got together to serenade the wedding couple with a lovely rendition of that famous Pi Phi song, screamed at the top of their lungs at about 1 a.m. in the bucolic little downtown of Harbor Springs. Quite an event!

Lisa and Mark honeymooned in Greece and have now settled into their apartment on the Upper West Side of Manhattan, where Lisa does marketing for Bantam Doubleday Dell and Mark writes for Fortune magazine.

Judy's note about the wedding included an update on her life as well! She finished up a clerkship with a federal judge in Philadelphia in September, and then headed for the Hill, where she is currently working for the Joint Committee on Taxation in a staff counsel position. She is really looking forward to catching up with the W&M crowd in D.C.!

Bill Joyner writes from his home in New York. His big news is that this past May, he was named silver medalist in the Seventh Rosa Ponselle Foundation International Competition for the Vocal Arts. About 110 singers from around the world came to New York in May to participate in the well-known competition. Bill survived four rounds of singing over 10 days to place second overall. He said it was especially fun to sing in Lincoln Center's Alice Tully Hall in the finalist's concert. In other opera biz, Bill

One of Tom's wedding guests, Roy Dunn, is a newlywed himself. Last May, Roy was married to Sharon Moore. Roy is with Wheat First Securities, while Sharon is employed in a physicians' office. The couple took a trip to Switzerland before returning home to Danville.

Brad Marrs wrote to announce the birth of his third child, daughter Rachel, who join brothers Eric, 4, and Daniel, nearly 3. Brad's law firm is doing extremely well; they added a fourth attorney in June and are still "bursting at the seams." Brad reports that Richmond is teeming with W&M alums, many of whom are lawyers.

Clay Cromley reports that since 1984 he's been living in St. Louis and working for an aviation software firm called EMI Aerocorp. Clay has been on the board of directors since 1987 and became company president in April. This fall, he began his sixth year of singing with the St. Louis Symphony Chorus. The chorus performs regularly with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, and will appear twice this year at Carnegie Hall. If that isn't enough, Clay is also on the board of trustees of his church, First Unitarian. In answer to your question, Clay, Donna Streeper and I were on the same hall freshman year, Hunt second.

Clay also reports that Robert Schellenberg

Greetings, classmates! This column brings lots of news from around the globe!

Anne '83 and David Brand have settled into their new home in Memphis, Tenn. They bought a home in the late spring, complete with hot tub! They recently trekked down to New Orleans to celebrate Hilliard's birthday!

Very happy news comes from El Paso, Texas! Chris and Laurie Raymond Benson celebrated the birth of their first child, Kimberly Catherine Benson, on July 1. Chris and Laurie are truly enjoying parenthood and have had both of their families visit over the summer to see little Kimberly!

More happy news — Thad and Beth Dodge Weaver '83 welcomed little Robert Hamilton into the world on July 2. The happy family is living in Wilmington, Del.

Susan French Bartlett sent me a truly wonderful letter, full of happy news. Susan is married to Jeff Bartlett, a 1983 U.Va. graduate (and yes, he knows of the Jeff Bartlett who went to W&M, too). Susan and Jeff have been married for three years and live in Mechanicsville, where they built a home two years ago. She says it is right off I-295 and tells anyone who is using Donna Raines Davis is still living it up in Hawaii and has taken up scuba diving on a regular basis. Laurel Heneghan '86 is lawyering in D.C. and lives in Arlington — Susan visits her about once each month. Susan is active in the Tri Delta alum group in Richmond and also serves as adviser to the chapter at the University of Richmond. They are looking for new, enthusiastic members, so anyone interested, please give her a call!

I received a long note from Dan '85 and J. J. Johnson Head, who have recently returned to Washington, D.C., where Dan is working for Arthur Andersen once again. They related great details about Margee Mulhall's wedding. The wedding had a sentimental tone because everyone was all back in historic Williamsburg over Memorial Day weekend. The weather could not have been nicer. The joyous ceremony took place in the Wren Chapel with many W&M grads in attendance. The bridal party included J. J., Susan Frier Wiltsie, Lori Buckius, Luanne Spruill Gutermuth and Margee's sister, Mary Kay. Margee is working for the General Accounting Office in the National Security Division and just received a promotion. Her husband, Pete Pierce, graduated from the University of Virginia Law School in May. He begins a clerkship with a federal judge in September. Susan and J. J. were both eight

ALUMNUS ELECTED TO
VERMONT STATE LEGISLATURE

Alan Bjerke '85 has been elected to the House of Representatives in Vermont. In the November race to gain one of two open seats against four other candidates, Bjerke hoped that he could win the second highest number of votes to take the second seat behind the incumbent. The final results indicated that Bjerke won the highest number of votes (1,600) to take a seat along with the incumbent candidate who won the next largest number (1,100). Bjerke clerked for a legal firm in Vermont and currently resides in Burlington. William and Mary alumni are no strangers to the political arena. Among others, Herb Bateman '49 and Al Mollohan '66 were recently re-elected to Congress.

will be singing the role of Manrico in the Sarasota Opera's 1993 production of Verdi's II Trovatore. He is excited about singing the lead tenor role—a great opportunity for Bill! It will be his third season in Sarasota, which is certainly not a bad place to spend the winter months! Plus, his wife, Jackie, will again be a member of the orchestra, which will give them another (rare) chance to work together. In late fall, Bill travels to Germany for an audition trip, to obtain work for the 1993-94 opera season. If things go well, Bill would live in Germany for the duration of his contract, while Jackie would stay in New York, where her own musical career is based. We'll look forward to an update Bill!

Sarah Williamson lives in the Big Apple as well. She's been heading south for getaways, too—to visit her parents, who live in Aiken, S.C. Her job as director at Isotel Telecommunications Inc. continues to go well. She has been traveling to Charleston and Chicago, and is looking forward to her first trip to New Orleans!

After several years in Germany, Kord '85 and Linda Reynard Basnight and their son, Philip, have moved back to the good ol' U.S.A. to Abingdon, Md. Philip is almost 2 years old and amazes Kord and Linda every day. They enjoyed their time overseas, but are glad to be back. It will be nice to make a long-distance phone call that costs less than $50!

Scott and Michelle Albert Vachris send news from nearby Arlington, Va. They both recently completed graduate degrees from George Mason University. Scott received a law degree, and he is currently studying for the Virginia bar exam. Michelle's degree is a Ph.D. in economics, which she has been working on for the past seven years while working for the Bureau of Labor Statistics. To celebrate the dual graduations, they threw a "42 years of school is enough" party, where they were able to catch up with several W&M alums. Tom Cullen was there with his fiancée Folline. The newlywed Margee Mulhall Pierce was there, as was Lori Buckius. Ed Perez joined in the fun, while taking a much needed break from his singing career on the Karaoke circuit. Tim Kruse stopped by; he is busily helping to clean up the S&L mess working for the Resolution Trust Co. Matt Bradley '83 is currently employed as an attorney for the EEOC. Steve '83 and Dianne Hoekstra Tuttle came to celebrate as well. They have a wonderful dog named Abby.

Notably absent from the festivities were Billy and Julia Powell Musto and Kim Duffy, who were down in Richmond attending the wedding of Erin Sheehy. Best wishes, Erin! On vacation at the time were Brian '83 and Sheila McDonnell Bates. In addition to keeping busy with their two sons, Brian and Ramsey, Sheila makes sure that all of Northern Virginia is well stocked with Tupperware.

In other news, Michelle writes that Claire Brooks Holbrook and her husband, Don, are having a house built in the beautiful Richmond countryside. Lilly Armistead Andrews just finished up her second year of law school at American University, and her husband, Ron, had the duty of calming her down in preparation for the bar exam! Lt. Craig Oliver (USMC) '85 was married to Eileen Cole in March. Craig served with the 2nd Marine division in Operation Desert Storm and will return from a Mediterranean cruise in December. Shelly Meister Piedmont and her husband, Jim recently moved back east from sunny California to the city of Brotherly Love.

Brad Flecke writes to tell his classmates that he is extremely happy being a full-time father and practicing law on a part-time basis. In other words, Brad has primary responsibility for raising their daughter, Rachel, now in her "terrible twos." Brad says it is a very fulfilling experience, and he loves it! He would enjoy hearing from other "Mr. Moms" to share information and support, at his home in University Park, Md.

I am pleased to report of two very happy new parents! Beth Frye Smith sent me the exciting news of the birth of her daughter, Emily, on July 19. Beth and husband Tom are enjoying their new addition to the family. Beth married Tom Smith, a Tech graduate, back in 1987. After going to a few W&M Homecomings, he has confessed that he wishes he were a W&M alum! Beth started a new job just one month before Emily was born—she is working in internal audit at the Virginia State Lottery after spending eight years with Virginia State Auditors office, where she had once even worked on the W&M audit! Beth and Tom bought a new home last year that is just a few houses away from Brian '83 and Kim Failon '85, who are doing just fine with their 4-year-old, Kathryn. Beth saw her old roommate, Debbie Monro Leiss, and her husband, Joe, over Labor Day weekend. The reason?... to celebrate the second birthday of Debbie and Joe's son, Mike. Debbie is still working for the phone company in Maryland.

Beth Duncan '86 opened a wonderful cross-stitch store, Cross-Stitch 'N' Samplers, in March of 1991, right here in Charlotte. It is very close to my work, so I enjoy seeing Beth often!

More Charlotte news—Rob and Patty Erb Coble '85 have returned from London, where they lived for two years. They are living in Charlotte, and have a daughter, Lauren Elizabeth, who is truly beautiful. Rob says that she is one of his best acquisitions from London! Rob continues to enjoy his work with Peat Marwick and was recently promoted to manager. Susan and Bill Garvey '85 have bought a new home (or should I say an older home!) in a beautiful neighborhood here and they are busy with major renovations during the fall.

Pam Howard '85 writes from down the road in Columbia, S.C. Pam just finished her coursework for her master's in International Studies and has been accepted in the Ph.D. program and is deciding whether to continue with her education or pursue a job in Washington. Pam found Jill Landen '86 down there as well, studying toward her Ph.D. in History. Jill recently did a brief study abroad in England. Pam also saw Melissa Muse Sturgis '85 in June. Melissa and her husband, Ken, live in Hampton and have a spectacular garden at their home. Pam also reports that Sherry Schumling Bowden '83 and husband Jim are living in the Chicago suburb of Hinsdale, and Joy Kaulfers Beggs '85 and her husband, Stan, are living in Bon Air, Va. Michael and Lisa Maruca Anderson '87 have made their home outside Cleveland, in University Heights, Ohio, and Randy and Tanya Hranowsky King '85 have bought a home in Midlothian, Va. Pam is sad that she missed Janet Buckner's '85 wedding to Charles Carnes on May 24 in Richmond. Pam hears that Jan is teaching clinical psychology at the university level in Richmond.

The Progress-Index, in Petersburg, Va. reports that Valerie Anne Johnson has become engaged to Daryl Tyson, of Liberty, Pa. They are planning a May 1993 wedding. Valerie and Daryl (a University of Maryland grad) both received their doctor of veterinary medicine degrees from the Virginia-Maryland Regional College of Veterinary Medicine. Valerie is currently in private practice in Springfield, and Daryl is an associate veterinarian in a small animal practice in Wellsboro, Pa. Best wishes to Valerie and Daryl!

In the Suffolk News Herald, I read that Charles Thomas Shotton married Linda Jo Correll on July 18 at The Village at Bennett's Creek and honeymooned in Nova Scotia. They now reside in Houston, where Charles is employed by the University of Texas Health Science Center as assistant director of academic computing. Linda Jo is a graduate of Peru State College and works for SBS Engineering as a software manager.

More news in print—this time from The Virginian-Pilot in Norfolk. Thomas Watts Wagner married Joan Lee Schell on May 16. John Ard served as a groomsman. Joan graduated from Florida State University. Thomas attended Eastern Virginia Medical School and the couple now resides in Virginia Beach.

I read in the Alumni Band Organization newsletter that Laurie Thornton had an interesting veterinary experience lately. Her most amusing case of late was a Vietnamese potbellied pig named "Pickles" who ate one of her owner's anti-anxiety pills off the floor. She was one RELAXED piggy! From Colorado, Laurie sends the message that "Gee, veterinary

'87 ALUMNA OVERSEES PROGRAMS IN AFRICA

Theresa Whelan has been working for the Department of Defense since she graduated from the College in 1987. She was chosen for the position of country officer for African Affairs at the Pentagon. Whelan has traveled to Africa four times during her career for extended visits to serve as a liaison for the embassy and the host country. During her stay, she meets with armed forces leaders, ministers of defense, ambassadors, and other military officials from the United States. Her office monitors U.S. programs operating in Africa, and endeavors to ensure positive relations. According to Whelan, the Department of Defense in Africa does more for Africans than U.S. citizens can imagine. They build humanitarian assistance programs with the supplies received from bases that are closing in Europe, and start civic action programs which enable military engineers to construct and refurbish buildings such as schools and clinics.

medicine's fun!"

Probably the award for the most interesting means of sending Class of '84 information should go to Lynette Shoemaker McCracken, Kim Shanks Payne and Suzy Tierney. Why, you may ask? They sent me the following info, written on two napkins while they were dining at "Red, Hot & Blue" in Manassas. The occasion for these three getting together was because Suzy flew in from San Francisco for the Fourth of July and stayed ... and stayed ... (the letter was written on the 11th!). Suzy has been in San Francisco since July '91 and is having a great time. Weekends have been spent cross-country skiing in Yosemite, hiking, camping, wine-tasting and pinning for a good BBQ sandwich instead of pinenut burgers over tofu and sprouts. Major recent life decisions include contemplating the purchase of a new rug and shooting the old '84 Mitsubishi she drives prior to the purchase of a VW Bug (like everyone else in Marin County drives). Her house is huge, with PLENTY of room for visitors from back east, but BYO BBQ!

The napkin contained all kinds of news, starting with Kim and Don Payne who are living happily in Leesburg, Va., and are contemplating opening their own business. August marked the third year of wedded bliss for them. Kim is still singing with three choirs and (and undoubtedly in the shower). Lynette and Matt McCracken live just around the corner from the Paynes in Leesburg. Lynette runs the drug prevention program for Loudoun County Schools and plans to pursue a private therapy practice in the fall. Lynette and Matt are living in a true-life Home Improvement and delight in spending all their free time painting, mowing, pruning, weeding, etc.

Hot gossip from these three continues with news that Janet Rollins just completed her M.B.A. and is living in Connecticut, where she is active in local theater.

Nearby is Peter Atwater, who is working in N.Y.C. and recently finished rehabilitating an old stone barn in New Jersey that was worthy of a photo spread in House Beautiful! Rebecca Hambright '86 is busy planning her wedding and move to Lancaster, Pa.

Caleen Norrod is working in D.C. for a non-profit and enjoys gourmet cooking and hiking in her spare time. She recently returned from a mountain trek outside Seattle. Sarah Wilson LeCount '83 and husband Chuck, work in Bethlehem, Pa., where both are museum curators. On the side, they have been enjoying participating with re-enactment groups, and Sarah says, "It's really not so bad sleeping in a tent!" Well, that's all from our classmates at Red, Hot & Blue. Thank you for the news, Suzy, Lynette and Kim!

Janet Kirkley has joined the faculty of Knox College in Galesburg, Ill., as an assistant professor of biology and chemistry. Janet received her doctorate in biochemistry and molecular biology at George Washington University in 1992.

I recently attended a most special wedding in the Wren Chapel, that of Jennifer Lear '88 to Todd Cunfer '88. It was a beautiful ceremony, followed by an incredible reception at Evelynton Plantation. I had a chance to catch up with Beth Gallagher '88 and Joy Gibbins '87, who is working for a pharmaceutical firm in Philadelphia. Jennifer and Todd honeymooned in Bermuda and returned to live in Arlington. Congratulations to some very special friends.

Jill Bobbin '85 just returned from a wonderful trip to France.

During a recent visit to Chicago, I enjoyed dinner with Diane Hawley, who is in her second year at the Kellogg School at Northwestern. Diane spent the summer in Washington, working for the Georgetown University Hospital. She is studying toward her master's in management administration with a concentration in health services. After a vacation in Michigan, she returned to Evanston, where she is lovin' life, except for the cold Chicago weather! I was lucky this past weekend to see another member of the Hawley clan, Alison! Al ventured down from Winston-Salem to visit, and we trekked to the Metrolina Expo, in search of antiques for a good price—no luck this time!

In September, Elizabeth Wood '87 came down to visit for the weekend. Elizabeth continues to do well at Smith & Haroff in Alexandria. I visited with Sue Hammerland DeSmith '82 in the Big Apple recently. She and her husband, David, have just purchased a snazzy new condo in Brooklyn, with a great river view, overlooking Manhattan!

One housekeeping note—many of you may wonder what happened to our class gift ... well, the funds will be put toward renovating the Matoaka Amphitheater. The College has just received enough money to begin the project, so progress will begin soon. The remainder will help to renovate the Crim Dell Bridge. With 349 seniors pledging $16,245, a total of only $13,360.17 has been collected ... just in case you were wondering whether to send in those last few dollars!

I received a note from an enthusiastic reader who wondered why her information was not in my previous column. This brought to mind that many readers may not realize the lag time between their letters and when they actually see their information in print. Depending on when I received a particular letter, it could be several months before it is reflected in the column. I mail the column about one-and-a-half months prior to the actual printing of the Gazette. I try to send a personal note to each writer to let him/her know when my column is actually due, so don't despair—just be patient! The classmate also expressed concern with mentioning members of other classes in the '84 column. As many readers know, classmates become friends with members from a variety of other classes. I hope you will take time to read the columns of "neighboring classes—you just might find an '84 class member lurking in another column!"

Thanks to all of the readers who mailed me a note or called. Please drop me a line (it really helps me out if you include the class year and underline the alumni). Thanks and have a good holiday season!

Hello to all! It's hard to believe that 1993 is right around the corner. I was thrilled to receive letters from so many of you this time around, so please read on for news about friends and acquaintances!

Stephanie Wright Denson dropped me a note from Kenilworth, Ill., where she and husband John are living. John works as an Episcopal priest, while Stephanie is coordinator of admissions at Seabury-Western Theological Seminary in Evanston, Ill. Stephanie and John are the proud parents of son Taylor, who is nearly 18 months old. Stephanie tells me that she recently spoke with Beth Clancy, who earned her graduate degree from Yale and is now doing free-lance work as a costume and set designer in New York. Thanks for the update, Stephanie!

Susan Zanetti Harrison and husband Richard have bought their first home in Fredericksburg, Va. Susan tells me that she and Rich had a great summer and even managed to squeeze in a combination business/pleasure trip to San Francisco.

Many thanks to Mark Hurley, who not only wrote me a letter in response to my where-are-you-now query, but called as well! Congratulations are in order for Mark and his new bride, Mia Petree, whom he met while in graduate school at Catholic University here in Washington. Mark's wedding party included best man Kermit Whitfield, Pete Enko (who finished up at U.Va. law and tied the knot in early August—congrats!) and Andy Foster. Mark is a graduate student in philosophy at Catholic U. and is not only working on his thesis (on Kant, no less!), but teaching intro philosophy classes as well, while Mia is working for a software development company here in Rosslyn, where Mark and Mia are enjoying married life. Many thanks for staying in touch, Mark!

Susan Anderson Kopelman wrote from Norfolk, where she is working as a manager in KPMG Peat Marwick's audit department. Susan tells me that Paul DiNardo works there as

TEN NOMINATED FOR RHODES, MARSHALL SCHOLARSHIPS

Ten seniors from William and Mary have been nominated for Rhodes and Marshall scholarships, three of them for both. Their credentials include scholastic honors, athletic achievements and a wide variety of interests that have taken them to many countries both as volunteers in service projects and for overseas study programs. well; he's a manager in the tax department and now has two children! Susan and husband, Jay (he's a University of Miami graduate) they tied the knot in 1990), have a commuter marriage while Jay, a pilot in the Marine Corps, attends Amphibious Warfare School in Quantico.

Susan mentioned that Shelly Ruby Mixson and husband Steve (a U.S. Naval Academy graduate) have moved back to the mainland from Hawaii. Shelley and Steve had to scrap their original wedding plans and settle for an abbreviated ceremony when Steve was called to the Persian Gulf in 1990. Thankfully, he's back here safe and sound, and he and Shelly are currently building a home here in the Washington area.

Susan also tells me that congrats are in order for Kris Roby Dimlow '85, who was married last year. Susan and Lourdes Ramon '85 (enrolled in medical school in Cincinnati) were bridesmaids at the wedding held in Pasadena, Calif. I hear it was great fun! Kris and husband Jimmy have now moved to Amsterdam, Holland, where Kris is a finance manager with the Walt Disney company. Finally, Susan mentioned that Bruce Phillips '84 is married and enjoying life in Atlanta. He recently started his own business, but is still finding time to fit in tennis and golf. Thanks for the letter, Susan.

As for weddings, there were a lot of them during the past year. Robert Barnes and Cecelia Oredsson were married this past August in the bride's hometown of Lund, Sweden. Cecelia and Robert honeymooned in Italy, and have now returned to Washington, D.C., where Robert (who went on to U.Va.'s Darden Business School after graduating from W&M) is working for the United States/Asia Environmental Partnership. Donna Rae Wade '87 and Rich DeLoria tied the knot in late October at Wren Chapel. Rich and Donna both graduated from the School of Law at U.Va. Julie Stefaniv and Mark McLaughlin '88 took their vows in Williamsburg this past June, then honeymooned in Hawaii before returning to Pittsburgh, where Mark is doing his residency in neurosurgery. Liddy Allee and Roderick Crawford took the plunge in May at the Williamsburg Lodge. After a honeymoon in the South Pacific, they are back in Virginia Beach, where Liddy teaches in the Norfolk public school system, and Rod works for NorShipCo. Kristine Andolino (a graduate of Mary Washington College) and David Branch were married this past October in Richmond, while Jack Miller and Sandy Lee tied the knot in May in Tennessee. Jack is an account representative at Duplex Products in Nashville and is now living with his bride in Juliet, Tenn. Mary Hazinski '87 and Chris Hawke (an Amherst graduate) took the proverbial plunge in Colts Neck, N.Y., this past October. Mary just started her new job as an attorney for Anderson, Kill, Olick & Oshinsky in New York. As for those who are planning to tie the knot, Linda Weber (working on her master's in operations research at George Mason University while working at the Mitre Corp. here in McLean, Va.) and Stephen Donohue (a graduate of Columbia College in Missouri) have announced their engagement; Lianne Radell and Jeffrey Forsey have made plans to be married next June. Congrats to all for long and happy lives together!

Chris Meily Foreman wrote from Chesterfield, Va., where she and husband David are enjoying their new home. Chris was promoted last year to director of managed mental health services at St. Mary's Hospital and is also doing some private counseling now that she's a licensed clinical social worker. Chris reports that the pharmacy that she and David opened three years ago is doing very well, and though there is a great deal of work involved, they are enjoying the fruits of their labors. Chris writes that Andria Silver continues her law school studies at Rutgers while working full time at State Farm Insurance. Jenny Thompson is working for a subcontracting company for the FAA here in Washington and continues her Army Reserve commitment as well. Polly Gladding Szablewicz has relocated to her hometown on the Eastern Shore, and is teaching high school biology and physics. Ed Holt continues to work with Macy's here in Washington, while Linda Kirby is working as an actuary in Richmond. Thanks so much for writing, Chris!

Congrats to Kevin Vaughan, an account management coordinator for the Life Insurance Company of Georgia, who earned a fellowship diploma from the Life Management Institute. Kevin earned his M.B.A. in finance from Georgia State University. He is now married to Merrie Anne Child and is a proud father as well.

JAPANESE TEACHERS LEARN ABOUT AMERICAN EDUCATION

For the third consecutive year, Japanese elementary, junior high and senior high teachers visited the School of Education at William and Mary this fall to learn more about the preparation and certification of teachers in Virginia, as well as to learn about the history of the College. The visit on Oct. 28 was organized by Karen L. Wenk from the U.S. Department of Education as part of a two-month exchange program. Prior to their visit, the Japanese teachers spent a month living with families in several Virginia communities and visiting public schools in those areas.

Rick Toma '87 wrote to share some news from his class. Rick and wife Belinda are back in Kansas City after three years in Germany with the U.S. Army. Prior to returning to the States, the Tomas and Anja Bergman '87 (who graduated from Tufts Medical School this year and is a captain in the U.S. Army, doing her ob/gyn residency in Fort Lewis, Wash.) found time to sail the Aegean Sea and explore the classical ruins along the Turkish coast. Sounds wonderful!

Athens, Ga., has been home to Bill Sodeman for the past four years. Bill is in his final year of working toward his Ph.D. in strategic management. He's doing research on socially responsible investing for his dissertation, and hopes to land a job as an assistant professor after graduation. When not working in academia, Bill can be found training for his first marathon, which he plans to run in 1993. Good luck to you! Bill mentioned that his brother, Tom '88, has become a dad! Tom and wife Kelby Lark '87 welcomed a baby boy into their family this past June. Tom is starting his second year of medical school in Toledo, while Kelby is working toward her M.P.A. Thanks for the letter, Bill!

Jen Jones Ackart wrote from Lutz, Fla., where she is busy not only working full time as a manager in Price Waterhouse's audit department, but being a mom, too. She and husband Bob are busy as parents of not one but two little children. Jen writes that Phillip is now 2-1/2 years old, while little Elizabeth was born this past June.

Jen tells me that Cynthia Smith '85 is now practicing law in Raleigh, N.C., having graduated from law school at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Lisa Luxton Lucas '87 and husband Al '85 are busy with their two sons, Jake (who is 2) and Kurt (born this past year) and live in Maryland.

Sue Reilly Grogan and husband Marty built a home in New Jersey, while Sue's sister Lynne Reilly Cox '88 and husband Alan are living in Tallahassee, Fla. Finally, Jen tells me that Elizabeth Keyes Kretsch and husband Steve welcomed twin daughters into the world in late July. Congrats to all!

Rebecca Stack Campbell '85 and husband are busy in their new jobs here in Washington. Rebecca recently started as a first-year associate at the law firm of Covington & Burling, while Todd has just begun a residency in otolaryngology and head and neck surgery. Yikes!

Rebecca tells me that Laurel Heneghan is working here in Washington as an attorney, and recently traveled to Ireland.

Jane Gannon '85 and Jim Greenfield tied the knot last December outside Philadelphia and then honeymooned in Switzerland. Congrats!

Rebecca visited Maryellen Farmer Feeley '85 and husband Ed at their summer home in Massachusetts, and reports that Maryellen is thrilled with motherhood and that baby Caroline is perfect!

John O'Keefe responded to my where-are-you-now query by calling me in early October. John and wife Margie, married this past year, are expecting a baby in December. John continues to work for Bacardi Rum. John tells me that he saw quite a few Lambda Chi buddies at Ken Rogich's wedding this past summer to Karen Riedel (congrats, Ken!), including lodgemates Lara Okeson (still working for Arthur Andersen here in Virginia), Marty Malloy (married and living in Williamsburg), Matt Seu (and wife Lisa Fraim Seu '87), and Jon Siegel (living in New York City). John also mentioned that Bobby Zaccagnino is putting his law degree to good use in White Plains, N.Y., while Trey Harris is the father of a 2-year-old daughter. It was great to talk with you, John!

Mike Lewis continues to work hard toward his doctorate and is a Class A Bio-Nerd (why is it that I find that very difficult to believe?). When not immersed in academia, Mike is finding time to "shoot the curl" (translation: surf) out in Santa Cruz, and reports that he and wife Shannon Pastorino Lewis '87 are thoroughly enjoying all that California has to offer. Shannon has nearly completed her master's degree in bilingual education while also working full time. It was great to hear from you, Mike.

Ken Halla, who earned master's degrees in international relations from both Boston College and Simmons College, recently was selected to attend George Washington University's residential institute on America's role in the post-war world. Ken teaches social studies in Virginia.

As for news of the Brinkley clan, they were all together at the nuptials of Allison Brown '87 and Leif Nissan (an '89 graduate of our own Marshall-Wythe) this past June. Jim ("Happy Feet") Brinkley '59 (don't ask me — I wasn't there!), Dana Brenner Brinkley '60, Ellen Thompson Brinkley and husband Doug, Susie Brinkley Means '88 (who was in the wedding party) and husband John Means '88, joined Scott Flynn, Micah Yarbrough, Doug Boone '87, and a host of others for what I hear was a beautiful wedding. Allison and Leif honeymooned in Bermuda, and are now back home enjoying married life. Congrats to you both!

Congratulations are in order for Anne Jarrell Raper LoCasale and husband Greg '85 who are expecting their own little bundle of joy in January! Mom and Dad-to-be are thrilled and are looking forward to parenthood.

Congrats to all of you who earned graduate degrees this past year. Pam Tolbert Hanback graduated from George Mason University School of Law in May, as did Carolyn Lampe '89 (Carolyn is now clerking for a judge in Lafayette, La.). Also earning a law degree was Kevin Lake, who graduated from the School of Law at Wake Forest. Sterling Ransone graduated from Medical College of Virginia, while M.B.A. degrees were awarded by the Darden School at U.Va. to Rhanna Kidwell (who is now working in Richmond for Signet) and Eric Dean (working for HCl Corp. in Charlottesville). Congratulations to all!

I saw Kevin Ward this past August while he was on home leave from his State Department job at the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi, Kenya. Kevin recently climbed Mt. Kilimanjaro and made it all the way to the top. What a feat! (How many people in our class have done that?) He reports that life is treating him well and that he has seen quite a lot in his job in Nairobi. Keep in touch, Kevin!

I missed Homecoming this year, as graduate school got in the way, but my sources filled me in on some of the news. Sue Bozarth '88 is clerking for a judge in Roanoke, while Linda Habgood continues to work at Chase Manhattan in New York.

Matt Pavlides is living in Maryland and working for the law firm of Miles & Stockbridge.

Mike Zwicklebauer '85 is doing his surgical residency at the University of Massachusetts. Jane Butler Schuler brought pictures of her son, James, and I'm told he is absolutely adorable!

Scott '85 and Lilo Simmons Ukrop enjoyed their last pre-parenthood Homecoming; by the time this issue of the Gazette reaches you, they will have welcomed a new addition into their family. Congratulations in advance! And speaking of cute babies, I hear that Mary Brenner Brinkley, daughter of Trish '80 and Rob '82 is simply beautiful and enjoyed her first Homecoming!

Julie Wallace Dunn and husband Tom '87 managed to fit a post-graduate trip to Europe into their busy schedule this summer. They traveled to Paris, Switzerland and Italy and had a great time! They are now settling into their new apartment on the East Side of Manhattan, where Tom is putting his Duke law degree to use at Cravath, Swaine & Moore. I spent a weekend with them in October (FUN!) and had a great time.

As for the usual update on Tom Noble, I received a postcard from former Coach Roy Chernock, who tells me that Tom has been recuperating from major knee reconstruction after a softball playing accident. I think it would have sounded better if you'd done it while bungee jumping or something, Tom!

As for my where-are-you-now feature, those of you who have not written at all these past six years, please send me an update on your lives? I'd love to hear from you! For those of you who have already sent mail, many thanks, and please

Several units of the College—the Center for Archaeological Research, anthropology department, geology department and the Virginia Institute of Marine Science—and the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation will work together on a comprehensive natural and cultural resource assessment of Jamestown Island with the support of a $1 million research grant from the National Park Service. The study is in preparation for the National Park Service's celebration of the 400th anniversary of the founding of Jamestown in 1607. Cary Carson, vice president for research at Colonial Williamsburg, will be the senior researcher. Archaeological aspects will be under the direction of Marley Brown III, CW's director of archaeological research and an adjunct professor in the anthropology and history departments. Donald W. Linebaugh of the College's Center for Archaeological Research will serve as project manager. Linebaugh and Dennis B. Blanton, co-directors of the Center for Archaeological Research, will head the College's archaeological team. Geological work will be overseen by Carl H. "Woody" Hobbs III, professor of marine science, and Gerald H. Johnson, professor of geology.

Lake Matoaka will be reopened for recreational use to students, faculty and staff next spring, ending a three-year ban on the use of the lake because of environmental problems. College officials said the decision was based on a recommendation of the Landscape, Energy and Environment Committee and will be implemented around March 15. Questions about the lake's water quality combined with mysterious skin infections that appeared on several biology students forced administrators to close the 40-acre lake in October 1989.

Life continues to treat me well. I love graduate school and am looking forward to earning my degree next year. Yes, I'm still singing in weddings (not as many this year, though), tutoring, volunteering at a local hospital and interviewing applicants for our alma mater. Do hope that the holidays find all of you among family and friends. May the new year be a rewarding one, and may happy memories be yours to cherish. In the meantime, please keep in touch! And until the next issue of the Gazette, take care!

For the past two summers Anson clerked in Virginia, the first summer for Newport News Shipbuilding's legal department and most recently for a local litigation firm.

Anson said that he got a call this summer from Sean Sell, who was clerking for a firm on the Eastern Shore. He also says that while in NOVA for a Young Guard Council meeting he stayed at the bachelor "digs" of Fred Federici and Tim McEvoy. Both Fred and Tim are working for Venable, Baetjer, and Howell, a Washington law firm. Fred passed both the Virginia and Maryland bars.

company manager (yes, that still adds up to a seven-day work week!) Right now we are gearing up for the new Stephen Sondheim revue starring Julie Andrews (that's right, Mary Poppins!). I'm also doing some development consulting work for several dance and theatre companies in New York 'cause unfortunately raising money is becoming more and more difficult for them. And in my spare couple of seconds I am working with a group of theatre folks as an actor and director. Even with this schedule I still love visitors. If you find yourself passing through this area and need anything or just want to visit (on or off the record) please give me a call!

Well, that's all folks! Keep those letters, phone calls, faxes, etc. coming! Take care and keep in touch!

Greetings, classmates! Hope all is going well with everyone as we rapidly approach 1993. I can't believe how fast time flies when we have no Christmas or summer breaks (those of you in grad school should consider yourselves lucky).

I was not able to attend Homecoming, but I understand several of you were there. Unfortunately, no juicy stories were related to me before this column was due back in October. If you remember any good anecdotes, drop me a line.

No one responded to my call for birth announcements — several people said they were "thinking about" babies, but no official news yet. As always, I do have many more marriages to report.

Kendrick Goss wrote of his marriage to Theodora Ester Melez on Aug. 15 in Charlottesville. Marc Chenault and Matthew Farrell '88 were in the wedding. Seth Roberts '94 wrote all the music performed in the ceremony. What a wonderful gift! Sean Redmond '88 and CeCe Bell also attended the festivities.

Since graduation Kendrick has managed to become a sous chef, completed biology 101 at W&M, and applied to veterinary school to become a medical artist. Kendrick and Dora are currently in Boston where she is finishing her final year at Harvard Law School.

As for the others in Kendrick's wedding...Marc Chenault is in Norfolk and completing a significant philosophical work which he is hoping to have published. Sean Redmond '88 is now a member of the New York University faculty and is working toward his Ph.D.

Kimberly Limbrick '89 and Thomas Roback were married in Richmond on Aug. 8. The couple went to St. Thomas for their honeymoon and now live in Baltimore. Kimberly is currently at University of Maryland Law School, and Thomas is an accountant with U.S. Gypsum and attending University of Baltimore Graduate School of Business.

Catherine Ryan '91 and David James Logan were also married on Aug. 8. The couple wed in Fredericksburg, Va. David is an assistant in wood preservation for Universal Forest Products in Grand Rapids, Mich., where the couple now live.

Scott Nesbitt and Mary Hamlett were married on June 27 in Lawrenceville, N.J. They are both teaching at the Marvelwood School in Cornwall, Conn. Mary coaches cross-country and Scott leads the boy's varsity basketball team. Hope you both had successful seasons.

Tina Louise Newman married Clifford Greer on July 18 in Hampton. Tina is a lab analyst at Enviropac in Jacksonville, Fla. Her husband is an ICS technician at Orkin. Traci Crotty was the maid of honor.

John Klassa and Cheryl Dyer (a Mary Washington grad) married on May 23 in Hampton. John is in the technical staff department at Alcatel Network systems. The lucky couple went to Kauai before returning home to Raleigh, N.C.

Now for those classmates who are planning weddings. Best of luck to you all. I know how hectic it can be!

Linda Saar and Richard Ambrose were engaged this summer. Linda is currently employed in Mental Retardation Services at the Colonial Services Board. Richard is a Virginia Tech graduate and works at the King's Arms Tavern. They plan to marry in March.

Chris Weesner and Kathy Norton '91 are engaged and planning a Jan. 1 wedding in Alexandria, Va.

Through engagement notices provided by the Alumni Society, I have heard of several weddings that were supposed to occur in October, November and December. If anyone has any details about the ceremonies, please drop me a line.

Lizzie Engelken planned to marry Timothy Paul O'Conner in November at St. Bede's. I'm sure the wedding featured wonderful desserts, as Tim is a pastry chef at the Trellis! Lizzie is working at the Bookpress Ltd.

Jennifer Saunders and Alan Grossnickle announced their engagement this June. They were to be married in November. Jennifer is working at the United States Historical Society. Her husband is a Penn State grad and works at Firestone.

Also heard that Tina Voerman and Bill Gill were married on Oct. 17. I'm sure there are some good stories from their wedding weekend. Tina is working with Landmark Communications, and Bill is employed by Ecolchem Inc.

Alison Radcliffe and Eric Panner '87 were married in November. Melissa Callison married Paul Brooks in September. Unfortunately, I have no other details about Alison, Eric or Melissa.

Now on to letters from dedicated classmates...

Kris Wilson Price dropped me a line. She and husband Jim are living in Christiansburg, Va. Kris is working in the medical records department of a local hospital. While Kris isn't pregnant yet, she was brave enough to mention that they are thinking of having a baby soon!

Kris wrote that Cheryl Weiss is attending physical therapy school in Pennsylvania. Laurie Brunswold is also in the Keystone State attending grad school.

Liz Signorelli is waitressing in Richmond and enjoying her own apartment. Julie Wagner Stewart and husband Tom '89 have a home in North Carolina.

Kris also mentioned that she saw Lora Flattum '91 crowned Miss Virginia on TV this summer. Lora competed in the Miss America pageant in September.

Susan Dominick and Mary Smart Pearson are both in Richmond. Susan is working for Life of Virginia, and Mary is working for Circuit City. Thanks for all the info, Kris!

Dave Futrell wrote me a note on College stationery (Office of Student Financial Aid)! I guess he's allowed since he's serving as a graduate assistant for the office while he's completing his master's in higher education administration. If that isn't enough, Dave's also the W&M cheerleading coach. His blood is green and gold (and a little bit of SAE purple!).

Dave mentioned that John Romano is attending American University for his master's in public policy. He's living with Scott Conner and Doug Levin '91 in Old Town Alexandria. Scott is working with Arthur Andersen, and Doug is with Pelavin Associates.

Celia Klimock dropped me a line from Vienna. Celia just finished her master's in public policy from the University of Texas in Austin. She's looking for a job and would love any leads!

Celia wrote that Danielle Collins is in Big Blue land (Ann Arbor, Mich.) working as a technical writer for an engineering consulting firm. Lynne Schutze is in Portsmouth working as a Latin teacher.

Beth Henike is working on her master's at VCU. Stephanie Heier is in D.C. working for the Center for Strategic and International Studies.

Celia's boyfriend, Andy Bavier, is in NOVA and working for Mathematica, a D.C. consulting firm. Andy's living with his college roommate, Scott Sheldon. Scott's working for GEICO in Maryland.

Celia also noted that none of the above are planning to get married any time soon. I think that is my first letter that doesn't mention at least one engagement or marriage!

The most unbelievable news comes from Meg Madoc-Jones, who is in her second year of law school at Tulane. Meg's latest adventure happened at F&N, a New Orleans bar, the weekend of the Saints-49ers game. At 3 a.m. Meg was seen dancing on a pool table with none other than Joe Montana! (I swear this is true.) Cool Joe even bought Meg a Lite beer!

Meg reports that, no, Joe does not really wear L.A. Gear! Less exciting, but more importantly, Meg will spend her summer in Houston clerking at Fulbright and Jaworski.

Now career updates provided by the Alumni Society...

Guy Sheffleton was appointed a manager of accounting systems at RF&P Corp. in Ashland, Va.

Karen Duncan was selected as assistant to the executive director at the national office of the American Baseball Coaches Association (ABCA) in North Amherst. Karen earned her master's degree in sports management from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. She previously served as a graduate assistant at the ABCA. Congratulations, Karen!

Joseph Higinbotham was recently designated a naval aviator with Training Squadron 31 in Corpus Christi, Texas.

Douglas M. Adams and Claire M. McGinity '92 would like to announce their engagement, not wedding, as rumor would have it! A date for the wedding has been set for June of 1993.

As for Tim and me, we're still here in Cincinnati frequently attending football games and weddings. This summer we saw the marriages of Michelle Furman '89 and Alan Veeck '91; Beth Speakman '91 and David Bortz; and some other family members.

We spend every Friday watching my little, but bigger, brother play high school football. Who knows, we may see him on Cary Field next year! We've managed to attend two Notre Dame games and hope to have made it to the Tribe/Spider game in November.

We were fortunate to have met President Tim Sullivan '66 and Mark McCormack '51 at the celebration of the Campaign for the Fourth Century held in Cincinnati in September. We were excited that more than 80 alumni attended, including Phil Bluestein, who is attending the University of Cincinnati Law School, and Betsy Nyer '91, who is working for a city council member.

Hope that everyone has a wonderful and safe holiday season. Remember me when you're sending out greeting cards! And as always, thanks to those who write — you make this job easy!

Hi y'all! I hope everyone was able to make it back to the Burg for Homecoming in October. I was glad to see large numbers of familiar faces. I've kept pretty busy this fall applying to law school and working part time. But I didn't neglect my duties as Class Reporter. I've been diligently digging to try to find out all the latest on the Class of 1992.

Suzanne McCoy, who is living in Chesapeake, Va., gave me a call several weeks ago. She told me that Stephanie Monn and Kim White had both tied the knot this past summer. Stephanie wed Stephen Rodgers. Kim married Paul Kiechlin, and they are now living in Northern Virginia. Suzanne also informed me that Becca Robbins had gotten a job up in Lynchburg, Va., teaching chemistry at E. C. Glass High School.

In the international scene, I received a postcard from Hugh Conroy, who is going to be in Japan for a year studying international economics and Japanese at Kanazawa University. He told me he had been keeping up with fellow W&M alums Chris Fowle '88 and Julie Beebe, doing the occasional dinner in Tokyo. Julie is currently working in advertising sales for the Journal of the American Chamber of Commerce in Japan. Lou Ormond is another '92 W&M alum over in Japan; he's kept busy with his job with Fuji-Xerox. Hugh also informed me that he and girlfriend Jennifer Gentry are going to work to maintain their relationship long distance for the year. Jennifer is pursuing a graduate degree in English literature at the University of Maryland in College Park.

I've been wondering — do you think it's the recession or the fear of entering the real world that has driven almost everyone into graduate school? I figure it's probably a little bit of both. Dave Miller is one of the lucky ones who managed to defy the odds and get accepted into medical school. He's down at UNC-Chapel Hill. Janice Moseley also successfully completed the medical school admissions process and is currently at the University of Maryland.

It looks like Charlottesville is the trendy place to be these days. Gina Adrales and Kim Cathey are both in medical school at U.Va. Kim seemed to be surviving the transition quite well when I ran into her — everywhere I went — at Homecoming. She's living with Amy Alexander, who is at U.Va. getting her master's in accounting. I also heard that Doug Higinbotham is pursuing his graduate degree in physics at U.Va.

There are some people, though, who managed to resist the temptation of life at U.Va. Robert Kaplan and Walt Benzija even decided they could survive Williamsburg for three more years. They are both studying law at Marshall-Wythe.

Taylor Holland and Andy Corea also decided to go to law school. Heather Barton, who now has a paying job at the National Mental Health Association and who is a key source for information about the class of '92, informed me that both Taylor and Andy are up in NOVA at George Mason. Heather also managed to find out where some of her fellow psychology majors has ended up. Jessica Casey is at the Florida Institute of Technology getting her advanced degree in psychology, and Mike Etgen is in the psychology graduate program at the University of Richmond.

Cindy Paseur still has her nose in the books too. She is studying for her master's in elementary/middle school education.

Mike Roberts and Karen Wright were among those who headed down to Georgia for graduate school. Mike is at Georgia Tech, and Karen is living with fellow W&M classmate Erica Jackson at the University of Georgia where she is getting her master's in sports management.

Some former sorority presidents found a different method for avoiding the real world. Beth Miller is a traveling graduate consulting for Pi Beta Phi, and Laura Barchi has a similar position with Kappa Alpha Theta national.

Some people, however, relished finally being able to enter the real world. Some graduates even managed to turn their collegiate activities into careers. Chris Hake, former Tribe quarterback, has spent his fall as a Washington Redskins. Chris survived the cuts to make the team's final roster.

Former Flat Hat reporter Martha Slud got her journalistic efforts published in The Fauquier Citizen. I was impressed — she even had a byline with her picture!

And as far as high-profile jobs go, I think J. D. Gibbs qualifies. He's snagged a job working in the promotional arm of the Joe Gibbs racing team down in Charlotte, N.C.

Although not everyone's job can sound quite so glamorous, most of the people I've heard from have positions that seem very impressive. Kristin Eschenfelder has chosen to pursue a more humanitarian objective. She is scheduled to begin her work with the Peace Corps in Paraguay sometime this February.

In a very informative letter, David "Niagara" Hawkins told me that most of his friends had managed to find impressive jobs even if they were scattered all along the East Coast. David himself is currently employed at Bankers and Shippers Insurance Company in Burlington, N.C. He told me that Peter Barr landed a job with ITT, and Teresa Saponaro got a job working in a law firm — both are in Maryland. Jeff Heflin is in the D.C. area working for a computer programming firm. Sharon Bruens wound up the farthest north of the group. She's in New York City working for the Federal Reserve.

I'm sure no one will be surprised that the major producing the most employed individuals was accounting. Business major Kelly Perkins ended up working in Richmond at Coopers &

Brian Chabot '65 has been named associate dean of Cornell University's College of Agriculture and Life Sciences. He has served as chair of the section of ecology and systematics in Cornell's division of biological sciences for three years. Having joined the Cornell faculty in 1973, Chabot became director of research in 1990 after achieving the rank of professor of ecology in 1986. He also served on the faculty at the College and the University of New Hampshire. His new position requires a tremendous amount of facility and program planning. An elected fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Chabot's activities range from the Operating Committee of Cornell's Integrated Pest Management Program to the college's China Committee. Chabot earned his doctorate from Duke University in 1971.

Earl Gregg Swem Library has acquired the personal papers of former Governor John Dalton '53 who served Virginia from 1978 to 1982. Dalton's papers consist of non-official correspondence, speeches, General Assembly bills, photographs, memoranda and clippings from his gubernatorial years. They are the gift of his widow, Edwina Dalton Phillips, and are closed at the family's request until 2017. They join the papers of the Governor's uncle, Ted Dalton, former U.S. District Judge for Western Virginia and Republican candidate for governor in 1953 and 1957. In addition to the papers of the Daltons, Swem Library numbers among its 20th-century political holdings the collections of Governor William M. Tuck, Governor John Garland Pollard and U.S. Senator A. Willis Robertson.

Lybrand; however, most of his fellow accounting majors have settled in the D.C. area. Michelle Manning was hired as a staff accountant in the auditing division of Arthur Andersen & Co., and Sally Pickering found a position at Bruner, Kane & McCarthy in Alexandria.

Fellow alums Wendy Long, Liliana Roman, Heather Barton and I accidentally bumped into Jen Vinter several weeks ago while socializing at Lulu's in D.C. Secure in her employment status at Arthur Andersen & Co., Jen told us that she took the summer off, even traveling to Europe, before starting her job in October.

Elizabeth Mertinko also was one of the lucky ones who found a job where she can expand her knowledge of her chosen field. She is working at Suburban Hospital in nursing administration and psychiatry.

Mary Evans '93 informed me at Homecoming that an absent Heather Briley was using her science degree working as a park ranger in Sandbridge near Virginia Beach. In D.C., Wendy Long is keeping her finance skills sharp working at a firm specializing in cellular phone satellites, and Liliana Roman managed to find a part-time internship with pay in her field of study at the Overseas Development Council.

In my research I discovered Annski Skjei is living near roomies Ali Walsh and Ashlen Cherry in NOVA. Ali informed me that Annski is working as a paralegal for Williams & Connelly and that Ashlen is employed by a small regulatory firm in D.C. Ali has been working at PRC in McLean, Va., since July. She loves the job and spends a great deal of time traveling around the country. Ali also mentioned that Ellen Lester had moved to Hebron, N.J., and is currently working as an underwriting trainee at Continental Insurance in New York City. When I ran into Ellen at Homecoming, she said she really likes New York.

Cindy Mazza is only one of a number of alums who have chosen to remain in the Burg at least for now. She teaches remedial math at Lafayette High School during the day and spends her nights working at the King's Arms Tavern. While shopping at the outlet mall, I ran into Johnetta Davis, who is working in Williamsburg during her year off from academia. I also bumped into recently married Pam Reese Scruggs at Westpoint Pepperell (you know — the sheet outlet). She was trying to shop incognito for household goods for her new home in Williamsburg.

I have more news of happy couples who either tied the knot or are planning to in the near future. Marieke Pieterman, who is in North Carolina, said yes to boyfriend Eric on July 31. According to my sources, they have set the date for Jan. 23, 1993, and are planning to hold the ceremony in the Wren Chapel.

I just recently received news of the engagement of Frederick M. Duis Jr. to Sandra Small. The announcement I came across was published in June, and according to the article, Mac and Sandra were planning the wedding for Aug. 1 in Bedford, Va. Hope everything went off without a snag!

Heidi Eger also announced her engagement, to Raymond Souza '79. Heidi has been working as an organist and free-lance pianist in the Williamsburg area. They are planning to be married Dec. 19.

This past summer was certainly full of weddings. Janet Chudoba and Hugh Berckmueller finally got married last June. Hugh's former roommate, Sean Malone, served as the best man. Hugh and Janet have moved to Cincinnati, Ohio, where Hugh is attending the College of Medicine at the University of Cincinnati.

Lisa Johnson married U.S. Army Lt. Gavin Jason Gardner on July 11 near Richmond, Va. She and her new husband will be living in Bad Krevznach, Germany. Alison Gale Clements also got married in July near Richmond to Robert Daniel Paulette.

Later in the summer, on Aug. 8, Anne Perks wed fellow W&M alum George Curtis Overman III '89 near Richmond. The happy couple took a honeymoon cruise to the Bahamas following the ceremony. Upon returning from their trip, they have settled down to life in Richmond where Anne works as an instructor at the Richmond Child Development Center.

Rebecca Brooks got married toward the end of the summer in Grafton, Va. She wed Mark Warren on Sept. 5. Rebecca is a piano instructor in York County where she and Mark are now living.

I certainly hope to hear from more of you next time. Thanks to all of my sources — without your help I would have been truly stuck! I am still trying to broaden the scope of my information, so I am working on creative ways to encourage you guys to participate. You can add me to your holiday card list, send me a postcard from your next vacation, anything. Just make it your New Year's resolution to write me at least once next year. There are no excuses!

A SHARED INHERITANCE

A life-size statue of Thomas Jefferson, the gift of the University of Virginia to the College for its Tercentenary, was dedicated on Nov. 18 in an area next to Washington Hall. The work of sculptor Lloyd Lillie, it is similar to one by Lillie that is located on the University of Virginia campus. John T. Casteen III, president of the University of Virginia; Hays T. Watkins, rector of the College; and President Timothy J. Sullivan participated in the afternoon ceremony. The three principals took a lighthearted approach to the occasion, and Mr. Jefferson took some ribbing about not repaying a debt owed William and Mary. President Casteen said he hoped that the gift of the statue would erase any debit still on the books. The gift was, said Watkins, a gracious one, "a tangible remembrance from Jefferson's "junior" college to his "senior college." Along with the humor were also expressions of appreciation for the Jeffersonian heritage that binds the two universities. "How proud he would be of both universities," said President Sullivan, "William and Mary where he studied, and the University of Virginia, which he founded." Sullivan is shown in the accompanying photo with Mayor Trish McConnell of Williamsburg.

CHARLOTTE ANNE FEAZEL '32 of Cleveland, Ohio, died May 29, 1992. She was executive secretary to three presidents of the Cleveland Crankshaft Co. until she retired in 1970. A Cleveland native, she graduated from Allegheny College and earned a master's degree in marketing at the University of Pittsburgh. She then worked for the American Association of University Professors in Washington, D.C. before joining Cleveland Crankshaft in 1935. While at William and Mary, she belonged to Kappa Alpha Theta sorority. Because of her interest in genealogical studies, she was a member of the Cleveland Historical Society and the Mayflower Society. She also belonged to the Cleveland Senior council. Surviving is one sister.

JULIA FAYE SAWYER '32 of Chesapeake, Va., died Sept. 14, 1992. She had retired from the Virginia Beach public schools and had taught at Princess Anne High School for most of her career. Among survivors are two sisters, including Alice Sawyer Nettles '35; and a cousin, Sharyn Hope Skillman Skinner '69.

CATHERINE EMBREY HOWARD '34 of Kinston, N.C., died Aug. 17, 1992. She was a retired elementary schoolteacher, having taught at Carrolton Oaks School for many years, and was a substitute teacher in the Norfolk public schools. At William and Mary, she joined Chi Omega sorority. Surviving are her husband, William; a daughter; a step-daughter; a son; a sister; and three grandchildren.

EDNA HALL MacGILLIVRAY '34 of Williamsburg, died June 29, 1992. She is survived by her husband, Rayner; a daughter; and a son, Roderick Paul MacGillivray '74.

She was a charter member of North Carolina Administrative Women in Education. During her undergraduate years, she belonged to the Monogram Club, the Biology Club, the YWCA, the Literary Society and the Board of Student Affairs. She also played several women's team sports, including basketball, field hockey, track, lacrosse and baseball. She earned a master's degree from East Carolina University. In Murfreesboro prior to World War II, she was the first president of the Junior Woman's Club and was a member of the Murfreesboro Historical Association. She also was active in the North Carolina Museum of History Associates. Surviving are a daughter; a son; a sister; a brother; three grandchildren; and one great-grandchild.

AUBREY ADDISON ROBERTS '35, '74 LL.D. of Rosemont, Pa., died Sept. 27, 1992. He retired in 1976 as chairman of the board of Reliance Insurance Companies.
