College experience knits Medallion winners

By Lisa Riess and Charlie Denn

Alumni have often said that the values, knowledge and principals instilled in them at William and Mary formed a personal foundation that would shape the rest of their lives. This year's Alumni Medallion winners are perhaps the greatest testimony to that statement.

John Harvard Randolph '64, Joseph R. Koons '68 and Austin Leonard Roberts III '69 will be honored with the Alumni Society's highest award at this year's Homecoming Ball. They join a distinguished roster of just over 200 alumni who have received the award since it was established in 1934.

All three men were able to shape an experience from their College days into a basis for their careers, and achieve professional success at an early age. They also share a common bond of personal sacrifice. In some cases, the kind of sacrifice that challenges the very core of the human spirit. Perhaps this is how they are best known—for their perseverance and a character that serves as a role model.

John H. Randolph '64

John Randolph's success as a student athlete and track star came full circle when he returned to his alma mater, first as a track coach shortly after graduation, and later as athletic director. Randolph enrolled at William and Mary in the fall of 1960 and made an immediate impact as a sprinter on the Tribe's Southern Conference track team. In his senior year he captained the team, was the state's 440 individual champion and helped the Tribe win the state outdoor meet. He also was named the school's outstanding senior athlete.

Following graduation and service in the Marine Corps, Randolph returned to his alma mater as track coach. Through his energetic guidance over a nine-year period, the team won 45 Southern Conference and Virginia Intercollegiate championships and became a national track power.

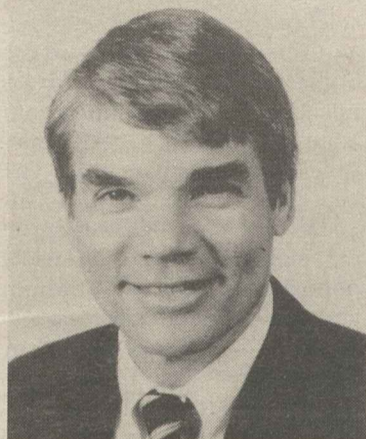

Randolph also showed his abilities as an athletic administrator. In 1971, he spearheaded a drive which raised $100,000 to build the all-weather track surrounding Zable Stadium, a facility which still serves the school today.

His talents in both areas gained national attention, and Randolph was lured to the U.S. Military Academy and later the University of Florida, serving both institutions as track coach. In 1983, he was named head coach for the American track team at the Pan American Games in Venezuela.

In 1985, the athletic director's post at W&M opened up again and Randolph saw the opportunity to come home again. The College's athletic program has shown a significant growth in support and success ever since.

The next challenge Randolph

faced was a personal one, and perhaps his greatest. Diagnosed with lung cancer, Randolph has been waging a battle against the disease through the removal of one lung and a succession of chemotherapy treatments. The physical toll has not deterred his spirit, however, nor has it prevented Randolph from maintaining his full range of professional duties. To help others deal with the illness, Randolph has organized an informal support group for fellow cancer patients in the Williamsburg area. His perseverance has served as an inspiration for many.

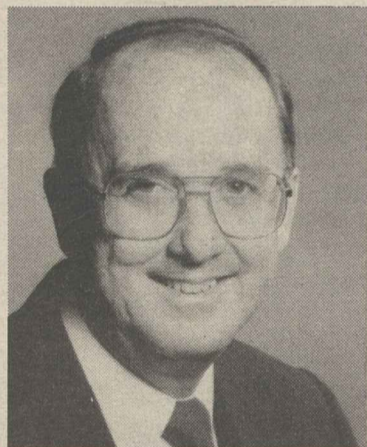

Randolph prefers, however, to direct attention away from himself and toward the next generation of athletes. This has included creating an endowment of over $12 million for scholarships and raising over $5 million to build and improve athletic facilities. He has a reputation for rating academic success as high as athletic prowess. The result has been William and Mary teams that have not only done well in national competition, but also boast a graduation rate of 87 percent, among the top three percent in the nation.

"Our program is based on integrity and an outstanding graduation rate while maintaining a broad base of participation," Randolph says.

Indeed, integrity is a hallmark of both the athletic program and John Randolph—something he will be remembered for by generations to come.

Joseph R. Koons '68

Joe Koons also came to William and Mary to participate in athletics. He was accepted to the College with a football scholarship, but a later-diagnosed tumor on his hip and sciatic nerve required surgery and prevented him from participating on the field.

That did not prevent an active student life, however, and the College allowed Koons to keep his scholarship by working in the athletic department during his freshman year. As an alumnus, Koons has repaid that kindness many times over by serving as an advocate for the College and a chief supporter of the Athletic Educational Foundation.

A lifetime member of the President's Council and a two-term member of the College's Board of Visitors, Koons also was the first president of the Greater Washington, D.C. alumni chapter.

John Randolph once spoke of Koons' leadership. "Joe makes himself a resource rather than an authority. He doesn't tell you how to think ... He's there for advice."

That same philosophy applies in Koons' professional life. At 48, he is the owner of two top-selling automobile dealerships in Virginia and Maryland. "Our success is a joint effort, every employee counts—it's like an extended family," Koons said. "You get input from everyone, you work together, not against each other, to achieve a goal."

The father of 10 children, Koons sees himself first as a family man. "You have to make time for your family; they're the most precious gift you have."

Precious gifts are very familiar to the Koons' family. Their daughter, Theresa, 11, has been called a miracle child. At birth, she suffered tremendous physical problems caused by the premature closing of cranial bones. Thanks to surgery and a miraculous healing process, Theresa has overcome almost insurmountable odds and such severe diagnoses as mental retardation, deafness and blindness.

While the surgeries, which still continue, have exacted a personal toll on the family, Koons focuses on the positive. "I can't imagine life without Theresa—the experience has brought us all closer together."

At least one tradition has maintained that togetherness, Koons said. "We have dinner together—it's our one time in the day to sit down as a family." The children's involvement in sports and the long hours required to run a business may preclude total participation from all family members or may require dinner as late as 10 or 11 at night. But the end result is a gathering around a family meal.

That kind of commitment has made Joe Koons a success in both his personal and professional life. "If there's one thing I've learned," he says, "it's that you can't buy happiness, it comes from within."

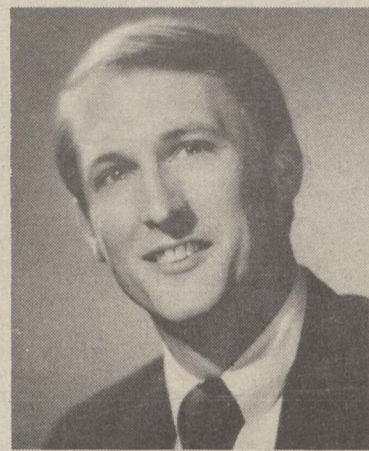

Austin Leonard Roberts III '69

For someone who never intended a career in banking, Austin Roberts has been a phenomenal financial success. As a student, Roberts was working toward a degree in accounting and had already lined up a position with the firm of Arthur Anderson in New York City, when he accepted a part-time job as a bank teller in Washington, D.C., to earn some extra money.

Like his fellow award recipients, the path that Roberts crossed while at William and Mary would forever alter the course of his professional life.

The result has been a largely unparalleled career in banking and finance. At age 29, Roberts was named president of First Peninsula Bank & Trust Company, making him the youngest bank president in Virginia. He has since continued to head up larger financial institutions and has been recognized in Who's Who in Finance and Industry and listed in Outstanding Young Men in America.

Never one to shy from a challenge, Roberts faced possibly his greatest professional risk early in his career. Shortly after he took the helm at First Peninsula, he learned conditions were worse than he could have imagined. "I walked in naive, thinking I could conquer the world, then I found out that regulatory agencies were considering closing the bank." Roberts not only turned around the troubled institution, he has since found his forte in raising a bleak bottom line to new financial heights. In 1985, he engineered one of the largest capital formations ever created on the Peninsula by raising more than $3 million to establish a new local bank. He also led the Bank of Lancaster in increasing its market share from 37 percent to 51 percent in four years.

That kind of energy and commitment has not gone without personal sacrifice. "I could not do my job without the understanding and support of my family," he said.

Roberts has also made time for his community and his alma mater. His involvements include serving as past president of the Peninsula United Way, director of the Peninsula Chamber of Commerce from 1977-84 and former director of the Virginia Peninsula Economic Development Council.

For the College, Roberts has served as a member of the President's Council and two terms on the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni, including stints as treasurer and president. He also has been a member of the Athletic Educational Foundation and served as the organization's president from 1980 to 1983.

He also has worked to give something back to the students. He co-chaired the W&M Alumni Interview Network in Lower Northern Neck, Va., spoke on opportunities in the banking field on career days and been a guest lecturer at the Business School.

For Roberts the opportunity to give back to the institution that set him on his career path is a great reward. "Each of us has a responsibility to leave the place we live a little better than when we came. That is one of our greatest roles in life."

Ringling far and near

The beat goes on

By Barry Adams

Even before the last sparks of fireworks cooled, friends and alumni alike were wondering aloud what Homecoming '94 would be like without the rush of a celebration only one other institution has ever experienced. It was a spectacular year, and perhaps no occasion other than a William and Mary Homecoming could have captured the exuberance or escalated the intent of the observance.

So now what?

This year's theme, "The Beat Goes On," reminds us that regardless of milestones and the celebratory nature of a year-long anniversary, the College and the Society continue to address needs, seize opportunities and adjust to the less-charged atmosphere of our 301st year. The beat does, indeed, go on.

Last year's Academic Festival, for example, was immensely popular and over 3,000 alumni and friends attended at least one of the 82 lectures presented by faculty members. These classroom events received high accolades from both alumni and faculty.

This year, alumni and friends will have a medley of presentations from which to choose. Ranging from "Airline Safety in a Changing World" to "Women's Rights in the Marital Context" to "Music at the Court of William and Mary," the selection offers a wide variety of stimulating, sometimes controversial, topics.

Professor John Lavach is back with his popular "Left Brain, Right Brain: Fact or Fiction?" Jack Willis, professor of English, will discuss "A Terrible Beauty is Born: The Irish Uprising of 1916 and the Poems for the Occasion." Other classes feature topics such as "Man Eats Shark—A Modern Conservation Tragedy," "Bankruptcy Law," and "Human Rights: East and West."

Alumna Sarah Kemp Brady '64 will be part of the festival too. From 3 to 4 p.m. she will discuss the "Progress and Future of the Gun Control Movement" in the University Center's Commonwealth Auditorium.

Sure to be popular will be "A

Sure to be popular will be "A Conversation with Lady Thatcher."

Conversation with Lady Thatcher, to be held in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. This will be a special venue for alumni (limited tickets—two per alumni household) to ask the College's 21st Chancellor a range of questions.

There are, of course, many other exciting sessions that space does not permit me to highlight here. A complete listing is included in the Homecoming registration supplement found in this issue.

If you have read this far, you will have already noted the change in the graphic design of the Alumni Gazette. In reality the oldest of the Society's two publications has undergone nine design changes in its 56-year history. This latest look was incorporated to respond to a desire for more information—about William and Mary faculty, the athletic program and issues impacting educational institutions. A new section, "dialogue," allows the alumni readership to inquire and comment, to facilitate more interaction and to be responsive to questions and concerns that may be of interest to others.

As we continue our march into our fourth century there are innumerable examples of progress and change. There are, fortunately, also as many examples of traditional values and expectations worth retaining.

The beat, however measured, is not far away.

In this issue, the Alumni Gazette goes interactive with dialogue, a column for your letters, faxes, phone calls and e-mail messages to the managing editor. It's your opportunity to debate, discuss, compliment, expand upon, amend and remember William and Mary. So, call us at 804/221-1703 and leave your recorded message, fax us at 804/221-1186, e-mail us at gazett@mail.wm.edu, or write us in care of the Managing Editor, Lisa Riess, at the address at left. All editorials must be submitted with your name and may be edited for clarity, length and editorial content. While we may not have room to publish all comments, you can be sure the Alumni Society will respond in your behalf.

It is difficult to put into a few words the delight and wonderful reminiscences our 50th Reunion Weekend afforded me. True, just returning to our campus brings a flood of memories of some of life's happiest and most treasured days, but this particular weekend will be—for both my husband and me—one of the most perfect ones we've enjoyed.

There was not one aspect that could be improved. ... We do thank you for your thoughtfulness and planning. More than ever, it makes me happy and grateful that I am a William and Mary alumna—and now a proud Olde Guard!—Mary Hilbert '44, Allentown, Pa.

James Ridgway '94: Unlocking a celestial mystery

By Kelley Daspit

James Ridgway '94, a double history and physics major while at William and Mary, believes he has unlocked the secret to a celestial mystery.

For centuries, historians and physicists alike have been puzzled by the supernova of 1054: Why was the exploding star visible in China and the Far East yet not anywhere in Europe?

Ridgway spent more than a year examining this question as part of his honors thesis. His experiences as a double major allowed him to see a relationship between the things he was learning in physics and those he was learning in history.

In his honors thesis, Ridgway argues that the supernova that lit up the sky in 1054 was not seen by Western Europeans because of volcanic dust from an explosion off the coast of Iceland.

Although unrecorded, Ridgway believes that sometime in the middle of June 1054, a volcano erupted off the coast of Iceland injecting large amounts of dust into the atmosphere. The dust would have blocked the brilliance of the supernova making it impossible to see in Europe and in North Africa.

However, the rest of the world played an important role in establishing the supernova's exist-

Using his education in physics and history, James Ridgway devoted more than a year to find the answer to the long-time celestial mystery of the supernova which has perplexed scientists for centuries: Why was the exploding star visible in China and the Far East yet not anywhere in Europe?

ence. Ridgway was able to confirm most Chinese observations with other independent reports around the world. There is supporting evidence in both Korea and Japan. The event was also documented in Asia and in the American Southwest through rock paintings and carvings.

The celestial explosion, heavily documented in northern Asia, was referred to as a star

Ridgway graduated last May with highest honors. While at the College, he was a member of the Alpha Phi Omega fraternity where he averaged 100 community service hours per semester. He is a Monroe Scholar, a recipient of the Ewell Award and won a national award for after-dinner speaking as a member of the College Forensics team. Ridgway has submitted his findings to the Journal of the History of Astronomy but has no plans of making a career in physics or history. Instead he will enter law school this fall at the University of Virginia in hopes of one day becoming a judge.

brighter than Venus. Records indicate the supernova lasted for a little more than a year and nine months.

Chinese chronicles first described the supernova as white and then later as red, weeks before it disappeared. This could indicate that the cloud of volcanic dust had reached Asia. "The light diffraction caused by the dust would have caused the supernova to appear red," Ridgway explained.

A volcanic eruption would also explain why German sources record famines not only in 1054, but also in 1056 as well. Dust clouds would have deprived crops of sunlight causing poor harvests, resulting in famine and dead cattle during the winter in England.

There is a strong link between volcanic eruptions and famines, said Ridgway. "The very occurrence of a famine is a strong argument that a volcanic eruption occurred."

During this period, there is an extensive collection of astronomical records from Europe which makes the absence of the supernova of 1054 from those records so confounding.

Twelve days after the supernova was said to have first appeared, the Christian church began its final East/West split into the Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox churches. It is unlikely the appearance of a new star would go unrecorded since astronomical events were believed to foreshadow developments on Earth.

The supernova of 1054 remains of interest to astronomers today because of the glowing cloud of debris, known as the Crab Nebula, that it left behind.

Ridgway first heard of the mystery of the supernova of 1054 as a freshman in an astronomy class taught by Marc Sher, physics professor at the College. As a junior, Sher reminded Ridgway of the mystery after learning he was also taking a class in medieval history.

"You needed a student who was good at both fields to put it together," said Sher.

"I was aware that the super-nova of 1054 wasn't documented in western chronicles when I was a teenager, but I always thought it was due to cultural reasons. As I learned more about the Middle Ages, this made less and less sense. Ridgway's thesis is the only plausible explanation I've ever seen," said Sher.

"Neither Sher nor I could have written this thesis," explained Maryann Brink, history professor at the College. "Our knowledge is too specialized, but together we were able to produce a student who—with only the tools imparted by an undergraduate curriculum—could answer a question that has perplexed both disciplines for decades."

Ridgway first heard of the mystery of the supernova of 1054 as a freshman in an astronomy class taught by Marc Sher, physics professor at the College.

The disciplinary skills Ridgway learned as part of a liberal arts education enabled him to evaluate what he saw and arrive at new levels of information.

Ridgway graduated last May with highest honors. While at the College, he was a member of the Alpha Phi Omega fraternity where he averaged 100 community service hours per semester. He is a Monroe Scholar, a recipient of the Ewell Award and won a national award for after-dinner speaking as a member of the College Forensics team.

Ridgway has submitted his findings to the Journal of the History of Astronomy but has no plans of making a career in physics or history. Instead he will enter law school this fall at the University of Virginia in hopes of one day becoming a judge.

"He'll make a good judge," said Brink. "He's already freed his mind and is well on the road to wisdom."

Thank you and each member of the William and Mary staff who gave of their time and talent so graciously for me to enjoy my tenure of sixty years as a member of the William and Mary Olde Guard. There was a warm feeling of friendship and love which permeated the entire day.

If there was one ingredient added to friendship, it is love. I felt grateful to be an alumnus of William and Mary, because of you and your new President, and each former member, also including the current student body extending a warm welcome. The memory of this occasion will be remembered in future years.—Frances Norvelle Spindle Harris '34, Williamsburg, Va.

I received my June Gazette today and wanted to compliment you on the eloquent tribute to Lew Puller (Ringing Far and Near). I learned of his death when I picked up a copy of USA Today, so most of the accounts I read were pretty one-dimensional. Your column put into perspective the broader picture of an obviously complex, gifted and tormented man. What you wrote offered a measure of comfort after the shocking, troubling news of his death.—Virginia Collins '77, Cooperstown, N.Y.

Splendid was your piece in the Alumni Gazette about Lewis Puller. It was most moving, and so beautifully written with an unerring sensitivity. I can tell you, both my husband and I were deeply touched.—Cornelia Wolf '45, Mount Wolf, Pa.

By now many of us have struggled to assimilate the devastating news of Lewis Puller's untimely death. I had the recent honor of speaking with Lew on a panel this past October for the Class of '69's Colloquy at the College's 300th anniversary celebration. Like many former graduates, I was touched and affected by Lew's extraordinary biography, Fortunate Son. Though neither a service brat nor veteran, I was able to identify with his pain over the war in Vietnam and the resulting tragic and senseless loss of life, and with his fight against alcoholism and the often bitter pains and truths of life that alcohol and drugs mask. ...

Lewis Puller was one of the bravest people I've had the honor of knowing. His bravery was evidenced by his commitment to lead and live his life as best he could. His bravery was evidenced by the hope he gave to thousands of men and women scarred by war and/or alcoholism and by his willingness to share their pain and suffering. Maybe only until you have experienced and shared death and despondency can you truly know the sacredness and sanctity of life and human relations. Of simply learning to love and accept each other, Lew had learned to love and gave to us all. The tragedy is that he could not find in himself that same love and acceptance for himself.

Lewis Puller was a hero not because of his actions in combat. Anyone can perform, sometimes reflexively, heroic deeds. True heroism is evidenced in the way we consciously live our lives, in the amount of integrity and honesty which we are willing to bring to it on a daily basis; in being able to honestly view our own darkness and light and live each day with a sense of love and service. These are the ideals that Lewis Puller strived for and the examples he set.

When the heart and the spirit have been gravely wounded, then the mind will take the body. God bless and love you, Lew, and may your soul have finally found its peace.—Cealy Brown '68, San Rafael, Calif.

Ukrops named grand marshals

By Anne-Evan Kale

This year's parade grand marshals exemplify the Homecoming theme, "The Beat Goes On." For more than 30 years, James E. Ukrop '60 and Barbara Berkeley Ukrop '61 have been at the very heart of William and Mary. Their loyalty is intense and their message simple. "We work for the College because we love the College; our best friends are from the College," said Jim.

As grand marshals, Jim and Bobbie hope that more alumni will become involved in the Alumni Center Expansion Campaign. "Since we are grand marshals and heading the Expansion Campaign, the project will be more visible to returning alumni," said Bobbie.

Jim Ukrop, vice chairman of the board and CEO of Ukrop's Super Markets Inc., which operates 21 stores in Richmond and Petersburg, received a bachelor's in business administration and management in 1960. While a student, he was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon and served as herald, pledge trainer, house manager, intramural manager and president. In addition, he served on the Interfraternity Council, was the chairman of the Student Assembly Cafeteria Committee and a member of the Society for the Advancement of Management.

A member of the Board of Visitors from 1985-1989, Jim also is a member of the President's Council and a board member of the Athletic Educational Foundation, serving two terms as president. Further, he is a trustee emeritus of the Endowment Association.

His business and civic involvements have been just as extensive. Jim was named to Outstanding Young Men in America in 1973. In 1976, he was named Virginia Retailer of the Year and in 1981 Richmond Retailer of the Year. His involvement in corporate organizations includes membership on the board of directors of Legg Mason Inc., Richfood Inc, First Virginia Bank/Colonial, and the Governor's Economic Advisory Council in 1986.

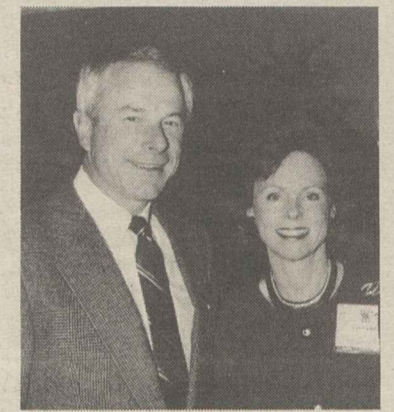

In 1992, Jim was the recipient of the Virginia Council on Human Rights Jon D. Strother Human Rights Award. The award was given to Ukrop's Super Markets for its involvement in civic, educational and sporting organizations such as Community Pride Corp., Golden Gift to the Community Program, the annual Richmond Jaycees Christmas parade, the Best of the Class This Year promotion and the Richmond Braves.

Bobbie Ukrop received a bachelor's in English from the College in 1961. While a student, she was a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority, the Pep Club, the Canterbury Club, the Mermettes and the Colonial Echo yearbook staff.

Her involvement with the College has remained outstanding even after graduation. She was a Class of 1961 25th reunion committee member and one of three national chairs of the William and Mary Annual Fund Drive in 1977-78. In addition, Bobbie served on the Alumni Society Board nominating committee in 1985. Currently, she is a lifetime member and senior fellow of the President's Council. "I am fortunate enough to live close by, so I can continue to work for the College," she said.

Bobbie also has a long history of volunteer service in Richmond. In 1993, she was the reipient of the Richmond First Club's Good Government Award for her volunteerism in such organizations as the Historic Richmond Foundation, Family and Children's Services, Leadership Metro Richmond, the Junior League of Richmond, and the United Way of Greater Richmond. Under her 1982 presidency of the Junior League, the League was noted for promoting family life education, warning teenagers about alcohol abuse, and compiling a guide to area nursing homes. Further, Bobbie is a volunteer with the Valentine Museum.

Jim and Bobbie Ukrop

The Ukrop's son, Scott, is a 1985 graduate of William and Mary.

For Bobbie, Homecoming is an event not limited to the College community. "Homecoming

By Lisa Riess

As the Miss Yorktown trolled along the Chesapeake Bay, watermen from nearby fisheries and crab houses stared casually at her payload. The chartered fishing boat did not boast the usual day's catch, but guests—William and Mary alumni and visitors.

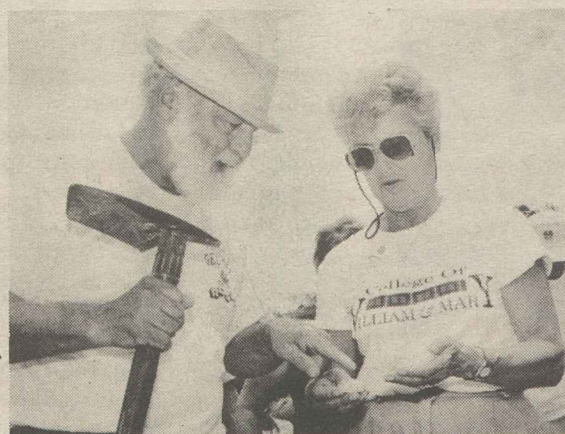

The participants—more than 80—came from as far away as California, Oregon and Florida to take part in the annual summer Alumni College hosted by the Society of the Alumni. In its seventh consecutive year, the program continues to grow in popularity, as alumni receive an intensive four-day educational program combining classroom instruction from William and Mary's faculty with local lectures, museum visits and tours.

This year's event, Exploring the Chesapeake Bay II, held June 24-26, was no exception. Alumni and their guests, led by professors from the College and the Virginia Institute of Marine Science, sifted through fossils at local landfills, listened to the tales of old watermen and explored coastal shorelines and tributaries in an effort to better understand the Chesapeake Bay.

"Today, I'm looking at the bay from an entirely different view," said Sharon Hall McBay '63, aboard the trolling Miss Yorktown. "You can only truly appreciate the beauty when you're out here." During the three-hour boat tour, McBay and other participants observed everything from family-owned fisheries and crab houses at work to marine life and the encroaching development that threatens the bay's survival.

Decades of human misuse have all but exhausted the bay's resources and disturbed its natural order. The bay has only 1 percent of the oyster beds that thrived in its waters at the beginning of this century, according Geology Professor Jerre Johnson helps Carol Achenbach Wright '49 unearth and identify fossils in the Hampton Sanitary Landfill. Sediment in this area includes deposits from four different geological ages and from three major environments, including a predecessor of the Chesapeake Bay.

However, Gene Silberhorn, professor of marine science, was able to point to signs of hope during the tour—great blue heron and osprey nests perched above sea posts in the water. Silberhorn and fellow marine science professors noted that VIMS—the largest coastal marine institute in the world—is conducting research projects in an effort to protect the bay from further decline.

If there is a positive note, McBay said, education is the answer. "I now realize how connected to the environment we all are. I lived in Williamsburg and went to school here without ever realizing just how much the Bay has been used. Now, I leave with the charge to not only become a better student of my environment, but a better person."

to the Virginia Institute of Marine Science. Forty percent of the wetlands, needed to filter out phosphates and other harsh pollutants, have been destroyed. And precious forests and vegetation that are part of the bay's intricate environmental balance are quickly deteriorating.

"Even with all the grim statistics, I don't think people understand. They don't feel we will lose the bay in our lifetime," said Charlie Parsons, who attended Alumni College with his wife, Fran Buttler Parsons '46.

Fellowship winners rewarded for the fruits of their labor

Winners of this year's Alumni Fellowship Award not only excel in the classroom but have achieved professional milestones as well. Established in 1965, the award is endowed by the Class of '68 and recognizes younger faculty members whose work in the classroom has achieved accolades among students, colleagues and staff. This year's award winners are: Carla Olson Buck, assistant professor of modern languages and literature; Tun-jen Cheng, associate professor of government; Colleen Kennedy, director of writing and assistant professor of English; Deborah Denenholz Morse, assistant professor of English; and Kimberly J. Smith, assistant professor of financial and managerial accounting.

Professor Buck joined the faculty of the College in 1986. She earned a bachelor's in Spanish and French from the University of Missouri at Kansas City and a master's and doctorate in Spanish from the University of Kansas. Buck has served on several committees at the College, including the department of modern languages budget committee. Her honors include receiving the 1989 Ford Fellowship Course Development Grant for "Women in 20th Century Europe: France, Germany and Spain." She has been published in several professional journals and her work includes "The World Turned Upside Down: The Carnavalesque in Carmen Martin Gaité's Retahilas and El Cuarto de Astras" which appeared in Romance Languages Annual.

Professor Cheng often stresses to his students that they must broaden their cultural horizons to successfully study international relations. "We learn from differences," he said. "There are different ways to manage economies and different ways to organize societies. In many ways, diversity is a virtue."

Cheng joined the faculty of the College in 1992 but is currently on leave to teach at the University of Michigan as a visiting associate professor of political science. He earned his doctorate in political science from the University of California at Berkeley.

Before joining William and Mary, Cheng was an assistant professor in the Graduate School of International Relations and Pacific Studies at the University of California at San Diego. He is the principal investigator for a project on direct local elections and political culture in China, funded by a grant from the Chiang Ching-Kuo Foundation for International Scholarly Exchange. In addition, Cheng has received two summer research grants from William and Mary—one in 1994 for the study of market reform and the prospects of democracy in China and the other in 1993 for a project on constitutional choices in Korea. Further, Cheng has published more than two dozen reviews and articles, including "Guarding the Commanding Heights: State as Banker in Taiwan," in Politics of Finance in the Developing Countries.

As an English professor, Colleen Kennedy not only stresses the importance of writing and communicating effectively, but also the importance of understanding and interpreting all forms of communication. "Interpreting a message and how that message is positioned is an important skill to have in this world," she explained. "I try to leave students with an appreciation of all languages and a savyness of any kind of communication."

Kennedy received a bachelor's in English from the University of Texas at San Antonio and a master's and doctorate, both in English, from the University of California at Irvine. Before joining the William and Mary faculty in 1988, Kennedy was an assistant professor of English at California State University at Northridge. Her research and writings include "Simulations of Transcendence in Thelma and Louise," published in Proceedings of the 1993 Virginia Humanities Conference and "Teaching Discourse Through Writing" in Developing Verbal Talent in the Gifted Learner. Among her honors, Kennedy received grants from the College in 1989 and 1990 for the May Seminar in "Teaching with Writing." Most recently, she was appointed assistant to the president at William and Mary. Kennedy's new responsibilities will not keep her from the classroom, however, as she plans to continue teaching in the spring.

Professor Morse joined the College faculty in 1988 after serving as a lecturer at the University of Wisconsin in Milwaukee. She received her bachelor's in English literature from Stanford University and a master's and doctorate, both in English literature, from Northwestern University.

Morse was selected to teach this year in the Cambridge Program for Summer. She has served on several College committees, including the Reves Center Faculty-Wide Colloquium on Globalizing the Curriculum and the College Committee on Academic Status.

Morse is the author of the book, Women in Trollope's Palliser Novels, and several articles.

Professor Smith received a bachelor's degree in business administration with a concentration in accounting from Fairmont State College, a master's in professional accountancy from West Virginia University, and a doctorate in business administration from the University of Maryland. She joined the faculty of the College in 1988. Her research focuses on postauditing and abandonment of capital investments, compensation contracts and the interaction between monitoring and incentive plans.

A member of the American Accounting Association, Smith served last year on the College's Professional Resource Center Task Force and was the coordinator of the 1993 William and Mary Interdisciplinary Conference on Managerial Pay and Firm Performance. She has published several articles, including "Postauditing Capital Expenditures and Firm Performance: The Role of Asymmetric Information" in Accounting, Organizations, and Society, and "Investment Monitoring Systems, Abandonment of Capital Assets, and Firm Performance: An Empirical Investigation" in Journal of Management Accounting Research.

In addition to her research, Smith emphasizes teaching. "The high quality students at William and Mary deserve high quality instruction," she said. "As part of this effort, I will continue to enrich my classes, in addition to supporting improvements to the entire curriculum."

brings the College and the [Williamsburg] community together. It is something for all ages and generations to get together and enjoy," she said.

In addition, both Jim and Bobbie hope that this year's Homecoming will help to strengthen the College community. "Homecoming is very important to maintaining the William and Mary community. The more the College community comes together, the more the College benefits," said Jim.

Bobbie agrees, "The more people return to the campus, the more participation grows and develops."

The Ukrops will bring their College involvement full circle this Homecoming, from participating in the parade as students to participating as the grand marshals. Said Jim, "I hope I behave better in this year's parade than I did when I was in College." Bobbie added, looking confidently to the future, "I hope the circle never ends."

Laycock begins 15th Tribe season

By Bob Jeffrey '74

Jimmye Laycock '70 was 31 years old when he accepted the head coaching job at his alma mater. Fifteen years later the hair on his temples is a little thinner and little grayer, but the football program is in full bloom.

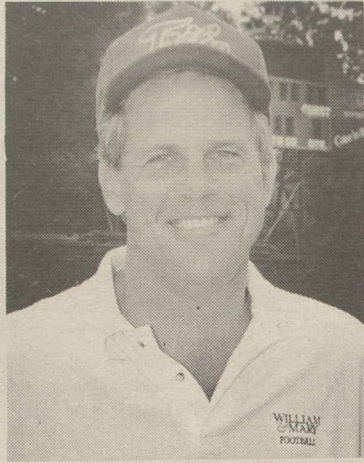

As the College enters its second century of gridiron competition, it's worth noting that Laycock has been on hand for 18 of those years, from 1967-69 as a player and 1980 to the present as coach.

"After all these years it's still exciting to get ready for a new football season," Laycock said. "It's time for the intense work and focus on football that comes with each new year."

It's also a time for reflection on the accomplishments of the recent past. Last year's squad went 9-2 in the regular season, winning the Southern division of the Yankee Conference and advancing to the NCAA playoffs for the fourth time since 1986. A narrow first round loss to McNeese State could not dim the glow of the team's achievement.

"I don't like to compare teams, but last year's was one of the best we've had here," he said of the group that ended up ranked No. 10 nationally in I-AA.

"It's the first time in 100 years of William and Mary football that we've had back-to-back nine win seasons. We take tremendous pride in the football tradition here at the College. This is a significant accomplishment."

Coach Laycock: ready for 15th season

Laycock is quick to share the credit with his assistant coaches and players. "It's not just what I've done. We've had some good assistant coaches who have been here a long time, and they've attracted a lot of great players," he said.

Recruiting coordinator and running backs coach Matt Kelchner and offensive coordinator and receivers coach Zbig Kepa are both in their 11th season with Laycock. Russ Huesman, who coached the defensive line for six seasons before taking over the secondary, is entering his ninth campaign.

Another source of pride was the improvement of the defense. "People usually talk about the offense at William and Mary, which is good, but I was really pleased with the emergence of how well we played on defense," said Laycock.

The Tribe finished first in the conference in defense and 13th nationally in I-AA. All-America defensive tackle Craig Staub was named Yankee Conference defensive player of the year.

Reflecting back over the years, Laycock expressed satisfaction at the blend of academic and athletic success that the program has achieved. "When a program isn't going well, you'll hear how they've got good students, attending class and graduating on time. Here people take for granted that we've got good students. That's not an excuse for not succeeding on the field. I'm most proud that we've won without compromising the academic side," he said.

Nor has the football program used the high academic requirements for admission to the College as an excuse for difficulty in recruiting good players. "It's true that the same pool of applicants (that other schools have) is not open to us. We've got to do a great job to attract those that are available," said Laycock.

"We try to select kids who will work hard to improve after they get here. We put lots of effort into the development phase," he said.

"I've heard coaches at other schools say, 'How did you manage to recruit this player? He's so good.' I say, 'He wasn't this good when he first came here.' Our walk-on program has been very successful," Laycock said.

Even star quarterback Shawn Knight played on the scout team his first year and never started a game until his junior season.

This year's edition of Tribe football should keep the winning tradition going strong. Led by pre-season All-America candidate Knight, the team has been ranked No. 21 in I-AA.

"I think we'll have another good team, but we've got some major holes to fill. We've got a longer way to go than last year's team," said Laycock.

Chief among those holes is on the offensive line, where only one starter, left tackle John Stem, returns. Stalwarts like AP All-America guard (second team) Tom Walters, All-Yankee Conference tackle Wally Vale, and center Tony Tomich are all graduated.

But Knight will have experienced and dangerous targets in wide receivers Mike Tomlin and Terry Hammons. "Tomlin will be a pro prospect," said Laycock.

A speedy senior from Newport News, Tomlin caught 39 passes for 674 yards and seven touchdowns last season, including an 85-yarder at Maine.

Hammons returned to form in 1993 after sitting out the previous season, catching 23 aerials for 418 yards and four tds.

The schedule is more difficult, too, with away games at Virginia, perennial I-AA powers Furman, Rhode Island, Madison, Villanova and Richmond. There are five home contests, starting with Yankee arch-rival Delaware (ranked #11 in preseason), VMI, Northeastern, Massachusetts, before ending with homecoming on Nov. 5 against Maine.

TUT BARTZEN IS SW CONFERENCE CO-COACH OF YEAR IN TENNIS

Tut Bartzen '48 was named the Southwest Conference co-coach of the year along with Texas A&M's men's tennis coach. Bartzen has been the men's tennis coach at Texas Christian for over 15 years. The Southwest Conference represents eight Texas colleges and universities.

SOCCER STANDOUT SIGNS BRAZILIAN CONTRACT

Former William and Mary soccer player Khary A. Stockton '93 has signed a six-month contract to play with the Brazilian club A.E. Velo Clube Rio Clarence of the Brazilian Second Division. Stockton played in reserve matches with a Brazilian third division team, Athletico Sorocaba, last year. Stockton is believed to be only the second U.S. player to sign with a professional soccer club in Brazil, following in the footsteps of U.S. National Team defender Desmond Armstrong. Stockton is from Alexandria, Va.

FORMER TRACK COACH SETS FLORIDA RECORDS

Former William and Mary track coach Roy Chernock set three Florida state records for seniors in the 65 to 69 age group at the state masters meet recently. He ran the 100 meters in 13.3 seconds, the 200 meters in 28.2 seconds and the 100 meter hurdles in 17 seconds, which was also a national record. Now 66 years old, Chernock coached the William and Mary men's track team from 1967 to 1990.

SETTING THE RECORD STRAIGHT ON WOOLLUM

A profile by Bob Jeffrey '74 on William and Mary's new basketball coach Charlie Woollum '62 in the Summer 1994 issue of the William and Mary Magazine reported that Woollum scored 14 points in the second half in a 1961 Tribe victory over West Virginia. In fact, Woollum scored the 14 points in a victory over George Washington, a game Coach Woollum noted that he remembered well because it was played in his home town and his parents had the opportunity to see W&M play for one of the few times in his career. The writer regrets the error.

Knight's Star Rises

After a good summer in pro baseball, Shawn's back at QB

By Bob Jeffrey '74

Shawn Knight is back from the diamond and ready to sparkle on the gridiron. The senior from Norfolk spent his summer vacation playing professional baseball for the Spokane (Wash.) Indians, a single-A farm team of the San Diego Padres. Now he's exchanging his bat and glove for pads and helmet.

"Shawn's back from Washington and ready to go," said head coach Jimmye Laycock '70. "You could travel all around the country and not see a better quarterback back at this level of college football."

Knight's speed afoot and pinpoint passing accuracy constitute an unstoppable offensive threat for the Tribe. Even among the hallowed corps of W&M signal callers, Knight's 1993 season stands out as one of the best ever.

He set an NCAA record for passing efficiency with 204.6 rating, completing almost 70 percent of his passes (138 of 199) for 2,235 yards and 22 touchdowns, while throwing only four interceptions. Knight was also the Tribe's third leading rusher with 311 yards on 81 carries for five touchdowns.

"It's hard to express what a great accomplishment this is," Laycock said. "Shawn broke the previous record by over 20 points. That's the equivalent of shooting a 52 for 18 holes of golf."

Though he didn't play baseball at the College until 1992, Knight quickly became a mainstay for Jim Farr's resurgent program, averaging over .300 for three seasons and leading the squad in stolen bases each year from his shortstop position.

Knight's prowess did not go unnoticed. The Chicago Cubs drafted him after the 1993 season. This past spring the San Diego Padres offered Knight a contract that allowed him to play professional baseball in the summer while maintaining his eligibility for one last season of collegiate football.

Tribe fans will recall that Curtis Pride had a similar agreement with the New York Mets organization which preserved his amateur status while he completed his baseball career at W&M. Pride is now with the Montreal Expos organization.

Though Knight started slowly in his first professional assignment, he improved as the season progressed. "Considering he didn't have any spring training and we just threw him into the lineup, I'd have to say he did a great job for us," said Spokane Indians manager Ty Waller.

After enduring a six for 30 slump to start off, Knight recovered to bat a very respectable .280 before he returned to campus in early August to take up football again.

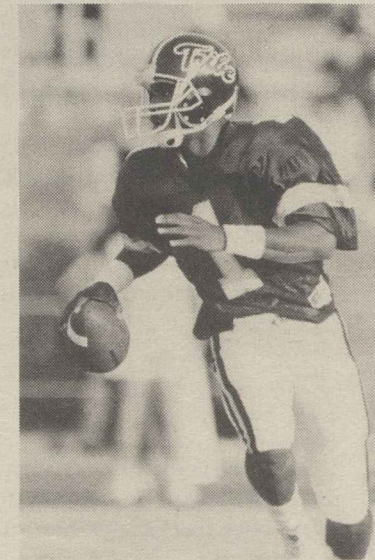

The Padres organization is eager to take another look at Knight after this football season. "Next year will give us a better read. The biggest thing is for him to be around baseball for an extended period, instead of just fits and starts. He'll be able to go through spring training and learn the fundamentals. A full season will show us what he can do," said Waller, whose brother, Reggie, directs the Padres' farm system.

Laycock wondered about another alternative. "I think Shawn has the skills to play quarterback in the Canadian Football League. Since that league has spread into the U.S. it's become a more viable option," he said.

While Knight prepares to lead the Tribe on the gridiron, a baseball manager across the country is sighing wistfully.

"In his last game he was on base five times and helped us win," said Waller. "We miss him already."

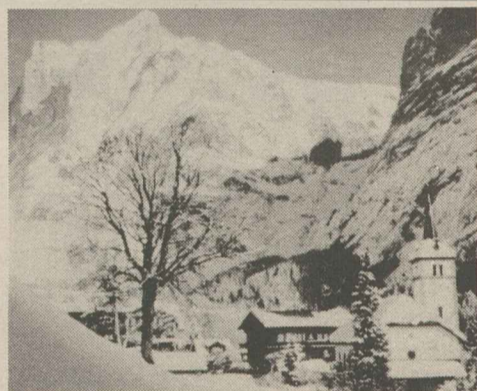

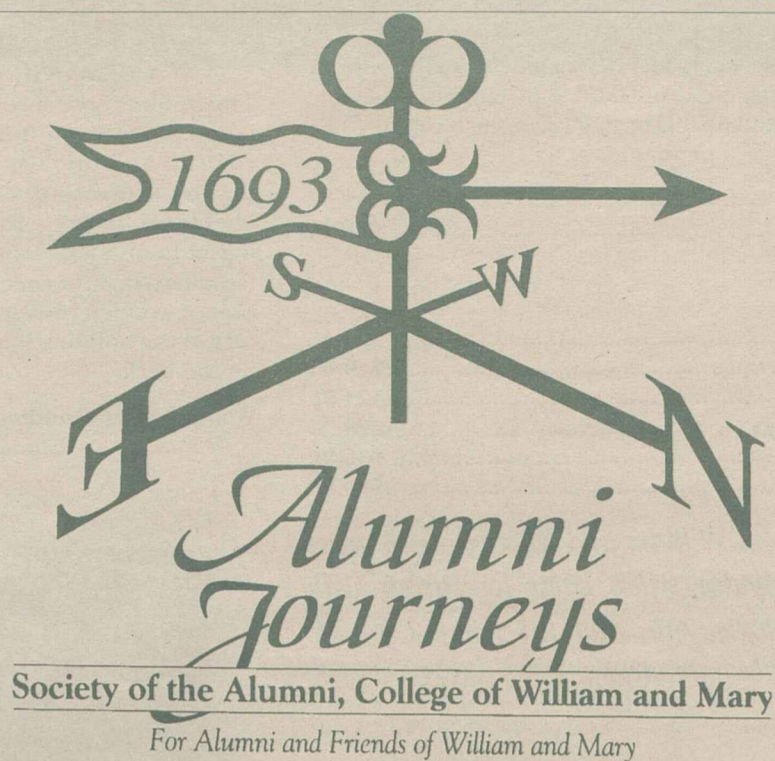

Laycock, on the other hand, is glowing. "I was attending the Yankee Conference media day up in Philadelphia recently and all the other coaches were asking, 'Is he going to be back?' I told them that Shawn wanted to prove he belonged on the first team All-Conference. Inexplicably, Knight was voted to the second team last year," said Laycock. "They all assured me that they had voted him first team," he said.

A nice note which came in May from Emma Waring Walbridge included her plans for a very active three-month schedule. On May 22nd she left for a month's visit with her daughter in Japan. While there she helped with English classes. On her way to Japan she expected to visit a grandson in Hawaii, where he is in college. After returning in July, she went to Duluth to attend another grandson's wedding. In September she will visit with a son in Chicago and then return home to Austin, where she will spend the winter.

Raymond Levering Driscoll, who lives in Kensington, Md., reports that he is still "alive and kicking," lives on a pension, no longer makes money, does things for his health and to "please a lady." In his note he included a lovely picture of his family taken on June 12, 1985, at his golden wedding celebration. As I judged from the names he listed and the dates of birth, he has three children, a daughter-in-law, a son-in-law, and seven grandchildren.

Received a delightful and interesting letter from Doris Rathein Hubbard who is quite well and active. She has lived in Fairfax, Va., for almost eight years. She has a completely separate apartment in a daughter's home. This has worked well for her, her daughter, her daughter's husband and their three children. It has afforded Doris the joy of watching the grandchildren grow up. Her other grandchildren live abroad, three in France where their parents have been missionaries for more than thirty years. The other two have lived in Greece, Africa, and the Philippines, as their father worked for VOA and usually spent two terms of three years each in the countries to which he was assigned. This has given Doris a reason to travel abroad frequently. Her grandchildren are grown or are growing up and give her reasons to be proud. The oldest granddaughter received her A.B. and master's degree from Stetson University in DeLand, Fla. She continues to live there, and when her father retired, he and her mother moved there. This affords Doris an opportunity to spend the three winter months out of Virginia's cold weather and to do some gardening. Two of her "French" grandchildren are now in this country. The granddaughter will receive her master's degree from Michigan State University this summer and then enter its doctoral program in September. The grandson graduated Phi Beta Kappa from U.Va. in May. His mother came over for his graduation. The youngest in this family will be a teenager in October. The oldest "Fairfax" grandson has finished two years at U.Va. and the other two children are in high school.

In 1990 Doris made her last trip to Europe and took a grandson. They saw the Passion Play in Oberammergau and toured Austria, Germany, Switzerland and Monaco. She included the following information: Louise Rice Ayers and Edward Pruitt Simpkins Jr. both live in the same Westminster-Canterbury home in Lynchburg, Va. Louise lost her husband several years ago.

Very few in our class attended Olde Guard Day in April. Here is some news about those who were present. Bill Thompson and his wife, Mary, go to W&M football games when possible. They plan to move into a Virginia Beach retirement home next year. Mary has been declared legally blind but appears to be quite independent. Robert Randolph Jones and his wife, Florence, are both involved in the work of the Old Dominion Eye Bank in Richmond. Their grandson, Christopher Randolph Jones, graduated from VCU last year and is now teaching in a school for children of parents who are connected with the United Nations. Malvern H. Omohundro has just returned from spending the winter in Barbados.

R. E. Bruce Stewart '27 and his wife, Martha, joined our table. They have moved to Sunnyside Presbyterian Community at 301 Highland Place in Harrisonburg, Va.

Hope to see many of you at Homecoming, Nov. 3-6. Please send in your registration form early. The Academic Festival is a good choice of events. The theme, "The Beat Goes On," points to the beginning of the fourth century of W&M, and we are privileged to see it begin.

Please send in some news.

This class letter is due June 24. Why am I writing April 16? Reason: everything is so fresh in my mind and so enjoyable.

The College went all out to make this event the best. For our class, it was the 13th annual Olde Guard Day and our 60th reunion.

On Tuesday, April 12, at 6 p.m., we met for the reunion reception and dinner with the Class of 1929 and the Class of 1939 at the Williamsburg Hospitality House. Eleven of our class attended. Dr. Jack Watson, Theta Delta Chi, attended with his lovely daughter. We shared some good stories. The best concerned Donald Gordon, a house steward, in his attempt to keep his fraternity brothers from raiding the refrigerator at night. Gordon placed a chain with a lock around the ice box. At midnight, several of the brothers removed the hinges from the refrigerator, took out the turkey, and left the bones in Gordon's bed. Gordon never found the culprits.

On Wednesday, April 13, at 11 a.m., we met at the University Center for a reception followed by the Olde Guard luncheon.

The new University Center is located on campus, directly adjacent to Zable Stadium: a beautiful building, three floors with students everywhere.

Almost 300 Olde Guard members met in the Chesapeake Room. Familiar faces were seen and greeted, among them the Pope sisters, Sarah Pope Dix and Edith Pope Howitz, Murray Hope Harrison, Lillian Carmine Sterling, Alice Cohill Marquez, Helen Singer Dau, Winifred Hall Proctor '35 and her husband William, Bud Matheny, ex-Yankee baseball player Ernie Goodrich, Billy Rhodes '36, Leiper Rennie Gerlach, Frances Spindle Harris, R. E. B. Stuart '27, and Virginia Bryant Roper '35.

In addition, there were 26 Olde Guard members from the Class of 1934 in attendance.

Anne Reynolds Wood '37 presided at the luncheon. She welcomed the 300 members of the Olde Guard and did her usual excellent job. The members were seated by class. The William and Mary Choir was at its best. We are so pleased that director Frank Lendrim has recovered from his illness.

President Timothy J. Sullivan '66 made us feel proud as alumni and valuable to the College and current programs.

We adjourned for class photos with the classes of 1929 and 1939. Four of us wondered what the females have which we do not. Twenty-two ladies were included in the photo.

Helen Davis Lynch enclosed the following poem—"Old and Rich." I shared it with the class group at the Alumni Dinner.

Old and Rich

*We are rich when we are old,
We have silver in our hair,
Gold in our teeth,
Gas in our stomachs.
We have visitors daily—arthritis and bursitis,
When the preacher asks if we have thought of the hereafter, we say:
I think of it all the time when I go to the kitchen and say, "What am I here after?"*

I have also enclosed a poem written about Olde Guard Day by Lillian Carmine Sterling.

*What a wonderful Olde Guard Day
Especially for the class of '34
Since we celebrated our 60th reunion
And were together, again, once more.
In the 1934 "nice turn-out" were the Pope twins,
And many classmates including Helen Singer Dau
Who from Colorado was cited at the luncheon
As "one who had come so far."
With us, Cecil Harper, who carried the '34 banner
In the parade of classes in 1993 Charter Day
As famous visitor Prince Charles and others
On W&M's 300th Anniversary led the way.
As we sang our Alma Mater
Led by the William and Mary choir, so we'll
I know, class of '34, with others, feel renewed
Loyalty and love to W&M more than words can tell.
I look forward to our class picture
Taken after Olde Guard Luncheon time
It'll always bring back fond memories
Of the class of '34 to my mind.*

In addition, on June 13, I left for my grandson's graduation on June 15. David graduated from the Albany Academy for Boys. He is a cadet and likes the military. We will also be having a family reunion. My other daughter, Gayle Harper Davis '69, will join us from Farmington, N.M., with Matthew, my 13-year-old grandson. They will return to Richmond with us.

Make your plans early for Homecoming, November 3-6. The theme is "The Beat Goes On." The theme reflects the beginning of our fourth century and represents the continuing spirit of generations of William and Mary alumni. Look for more details about Homecoming in the center section of this issue of the Gazette.

Time passes so fast, I can't believe it's time for another Homecoming.

Since I last wrote, I attended Charter Day.

What a thrill to hear Lady Margaret Thatcher, the new Chancellor of the College. She gave such an enlightening and eloquent address.

This April was the annual Olde Guard Day. It was held in the new University Center. It is a beautiful building and will be used for many occasions. There were approximately 300 members present from all over the United States. The one from our class that came the greatest distance was James Cuthbert Owens from Denver, Colo.

It was such a wonderful day seeing old friends from our class: Bill Rhodes, Dr. W. C. Henderson, John Bunting, Margaret VanOot Rastetter and Judge Robert Armistead. I understand there were others that I didn't get to speak to from our class.

I wish more of you could have been there. It was a wonderful day.

On June 1, I went to the Olde Guard Council meeting. I represent you on that board. We had a most informative speaker, Stewart Gamage '72, vice president for public affairs.

She told us that the ground-breaking for the addition to the Alumni House will be next March.

I had a wonderful talk with Lorraine Emory McKenna '34 from Coronado, Calif. We talked about 30 minutes all about our days together at W&M.

She sent me a picture of her husband, pictures of her two daughters and her granddaughter. I have enjoyed showing them to her friends in Richmond.

Woodrow C. Henderson joined more than 80 alumni and guests at this year's Alumni College, held June 24-26 and sponsored by the Alumni Society. The participants came from as far away as California, Oregon and Florida for the event, titled Exploring the Chesapeake Bay II. They hunted for fossils, attended lectures and toured the Bay by boat in an effort to better understand the Chesapeake and the environmental threats to its waters. For information on next year's Alumni College, call the Society at 221-1174.

BARNES & NOBLE TO MANAGE CAMPUS BOOKSTORE

Barnes & Noble Bookstores Inc. of New York, the foremost provider of bookstore services in the country, has been selected to operate the William and Mary Bookstore for the next three years.

William F. Merck II, vice president for administration and finance, cited the company's expertise in the bookstore field, its highly competitive textbook pricing and buy-back policies, its reputation for innovative store design and its sensitivity to students' needs as among the reasons for contracting with Barnes & Noble.

Founded in 1873, Barnes & Noble is one of the nation's oldest booksellers. Barnes & Noble Bookstores Inc. is a separately operated part of Barnes & Noble's family of retail companies, which include Barnes & Noble Inc., the nation's largest trade book selling operation, B. Dalton Booksellers, Doubleday, Scribner's and Software Etc.

LAW PROFESSOR NAMED GENERAL DISTRICT COURT JUDGE

Margaret Poles Spencer, an associate professor at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, has been appointed a general district court judge by the Virginia

General Assembly. Spencer, 46, will serve as a judge in the general district court for the City of Richmond.

She is a resident of the Richmond area, and her husband, James, is a federal court judge there.

An expert in practice and procedure, Spencer will resign her position on the William and Mary faculty in order to be sworn in as a judge.

Spencer received her bachelor's from Howard University and her doctorate from the University of Virginia. Prior to joining the College faculty in 1988, she served as Virginia assistant attorney general, a senior appellate attorney in the civil rights division of the U.S. Department of Justice and an assistant U.S. attorney for the District of Columbia.

COLLEGE AND SOCIETY WIN CASE AWARDS

The Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) has named William and Mary to the 1994 Circle of Excellence in Educational Fund Raising for overall fund-raising improvement.

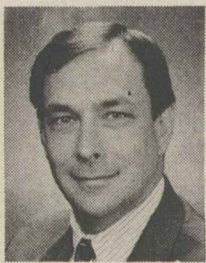

The Campaign for the Fourth Century, the largest fund-raising campaign in the College's history, came to a successful end last year with more than $153 million.

Earlier, the Alumni Society was awarded CASE's Grand Gold Award for total alumni program.

MUSEUM DIRECTOR ACCEPTS ALABAMA POST

After nine years as director of the Muscarelle Museum of Art at William and Mary, Mark M. Johnson will assume the directorship of the Montgomery Museum of Fine Arts in Montgomery, Ala.

During Johnson's tenure, the Muscarelle more than doubled the size of its facility, staff and collection. The museum's permanent collection has been enhanced through acquisitions ranging from the altarpiece by Gerard de Lairesse to modern sculptures by Alexander Calder and Lila Katzen.

Johnson initiated the Museum's Council, the docent program, children's gallery/studio classes and the "Music at the Muscarelle" concert series, among other educational programs. Under his leadership, the Muscarelle was accredited by the American Association of Museums and has been awarded numerous federal grants. Many of the grants were used to implement an art conservation program for more than 100 works of art, including most of the College's important historical portraits.

Martha Mann Connelly from Norristown, Pa., calls several times a month. She wants to be remembered to all her friends.

Anne Fauntleroy Cole wrote me such a nice letter. She lives in Coronado, Calif., near Lorraine McKenna.

I was sorry to hear that Mary Frances McClanahan Schlieser and Louise Merkle Fritsch have both died. I am sure you remember them in our class.

Since I last wrote, I have received another resolution for my husband, Edward Randolph Boisseau '35. This one, given me by the General Assembly of Virginia, states what he did for the County of Henrico and the State of Virginia.

My children and I thank you again for your many letters, cards and calls. Hope to see you at Homecoming.

Tom Crowson is a faithful correspondent. He sends me a copy of his family's Christmas letter each year and recently, in response to my question, sent more information about his family and his publications. It's surely a family to be proud of, and I'll quote directly from Tom: "Mrs. Crowson, a former professor of home economics, participates actively in church and club work. We have three children. Tommy attended West Point and Clemson University. The father of two girls, he now is associated with the National Park Service at Corpus Christi, Texas. Susan at age 18 graduated from Winthrop College, having studied there less than two years and went on to study abroad as the recipient of many honors, including a Fulbright grant. The mother of a son, she has taught at various colleges, including Clemson, and now edits. Although appointed to West Point, Richard enrolled instead in Clemson's civil engineering program. He was an engineer with Florida Power and Light, Miami, in public relations and management. He now is with the State Department in Washington." Our classmate is former president and professor emeritus in history at Winthrop University, Rock Hill, S.C. His list of published books and articles is much too long to include, but it is impressive indeed. We're proud of you, Tom! Sorry that you were not able to come to Olde Guard Day in April.

It was delightful to again be at the College in spring, and Olde Guard activities heightened my pleasure. I walked through puddles (yes, Williamsburg in spring!) to see the new Lord Botetourt, back in place where we remember the original. That was gratifying! The new University Center, just south of the stadium, made a functional and attractive setting for the Wednesday activities. The luncheon, meeting, choir and, especially, President Sullivan's remarks, emphasizing idealism and loyalty to the College, all were excellent.

These classmates and guests registered for the event: Ellen Latane Gouldman '37, Margaret Horn Booth '44, Dr. C. R. Mirmelstein and wife Evelyn, Annabel Hopkins Mitchell and husband Lee, Bert Capps Sheeran, Fran Schaaf Shepherd, Martha Moreland Thomas, Margaret Brett Honn and daughter Sarah Huddleston, Robert Simpson, Bill Anderson and wife Polly, Virginia Betts Chapman and husband Joel, and Nick and I.

The Mitchells timed their return from winter at their Florida home to be at the College for the festivities.

Virginia and Joel Chapman reported that they go to Lancaster County and Amish country almost every year. I hope they call Nick and me next time.

"Pete" Thomas is still raising and showing daffodils. She didn't say so, but when I asked, she confirmed that she's still winning ribbons, too.

Bill Anderson said that last year's visit to London, and meeting the Queen, still are hard to believe. It was Bill's son who remarked about Prince Charles' popularity at the College, causing Queen Elizabeth's pleased-mother smile.

Harold Gouldman '37 asked particularly for Carl Buffington of our class.

Mollie Waters Christie wrote that she missed Olde Guard activities because of a 12-day trip to Israel, her second, and that it was fabulous. Mollie is a knowledgeable and popular teacher of Bible studies at her church.

And now the bad news: In March a freak storm and wind shear caused the limb of a large oak tree to crash through the roof of Bert and Bob Sheeran's home in Williamsburg. The limb hit the room in which Bob was watching TV and missed his head by six inches! The rain poured in, electricity was off for six hours, but Bob seemed to be miraculously unhurt. Two days later, however, he suffered a severe stroke. When we saw him in April he seemed cheery, as always, but he was having daily therapy and learning to walk again. In early June, Bert reported that Bob was walking with a cane and having speech therapy. A rotten break, Bert and Bob, and the thoughts and prayers of your classmates are with you.

A welcome and newsy letter from Beverly Bridge Coleman: "In case anyone out there wonders or cares whether I am among the alive and well the answer is 'about what can be expected' at our age. Husband John '35 and I have been in the Washington, D.C., area for some 48 years, and in our present home, North Arlington, for 42. We have two daughters and one grandchild, produced seven years ago, and our delight. That family's move to New Hampshire was an excuse for a trip this summer...John had a career in science administration (National Academy of Sciences), has been retired for 12 years or more and has lately become a Mr. Fixit for our local senior center — very popular...The Northern Virginia Kappa Kappa Gamma alumnae have been a continuing source of social and stimulating associations for me — bridge group, book discussion, needlecraft (mostly quilts) and local tours. Other activities have been library work, either paid or volunteer, and painting — either in oils or watercolor, which I have been learning the last few years and enjoy very much. I played golf regularly for 25 years or so and enjoyed that association, but have practically given it up — aches and pains, you know. I do miss that... John and I have enjoyed several low-key cruises on the Nantucket and Yorktown Clipper. They are small ships, 125 passengers, non-ocean-going and cruise both coasts and parts of the Caribbean. We have practically given up long motor trips because of failing eyesight and reflexes. We will fly more and drive less...Sally Robbins Carmalt and her husband live in D.C. during the winter. We see each other or telephone occasionally." What a great letter, Bev; you've really caught us up!

Don't fail to notice all the activities scheduled for Homecoming (November 3-6) and make your reservations early.

Olde Guard Day was April 13 and my husband, Frank took Kay Dew '41. I had a bug so I stayed at home. Those returning from our class were fewer in number: Jack and Ann Garrett, Bud Metheny, Chet '42 and Helen Baker. They combined with '41 and had a fine time.

In May, I had a nice note from Tom Cartwright from Hollywood, asking me for the address of Bailey Wilkinson '41. I had mentioned seeing him at last year's Olde Guard Day and Tom said they had been roommates for a while. Fortunately I found Bailey's whereabouts in the Richmond phone directory. Tom had recently returned from three weeks in Virginia where his brother lives near Fredericksburg. "It's always good to be back, especially when the dogwood is coming out. Here in California we are still having aftershocks from the quake and I'm trying now to have some repairs made to my home. All of this makes Virginia look better and better even though the winters are becoming long and cold." Can't quite agree with the last phrase.

I so appreciated hearing again from Len Owen who has been such a faithful correspondent. Len says Alice's two new knees give her some of her old independence, but they are "stay home" folks and enjoy having their children and grandchildren around them. The youngest grandchild finishes elementary school in June and the next finishes high school. He is heading for Rutgers in the fall to study engineering. Another grandson, a resident of Newark, Del., is completing his freshman year at University of Delaware in chemical engineering. The other three are college grads, working and two are married. I'm sure you and Alice are proud of that record! They hope to be back for '94 Homecoming. Good!

We were sorry to learn that Hope Hunt White's husband, Gene, died last September 30. Our sincere sympathy to you, Hope, belatedly.

I also received a thoughtful note, news releases and the sad news from Grace Yeager that Frank Yeager died May 20 at his home in Walkerton, N.C., after a prolonged illness. Grace said that Hospice had made it possible for her to take care of Frank at home and they were all with him and he did not suffer. Please refer to the obituary in this issue.

On the brighter side, Nile and Gervais Brekke anchored their sail boat in Antipoin Creek in front of Kay Dew's home and stayed with her for several days during our beautiful weather in early June. Sorry we missed seeing you, Gervais.

Our good neighbors Jack and Ann Garrett enjoyed a two-week stay in Brussels with their son-in-law and daughter, Jack and Lucy West '64, who are there with Tenneco. While there, the four of them visited Paris, the Champagne country and Amsterdam, and attended the Charles Dickens Festival in Rochester, England.

I received a most welcome card from Hope Bitting Szabo, sent from Normandy. She wrote that she doesn't know when they'll be in Williamsburg, because they are making their "distant travel plans while we are able." After several weeks in France, she and George went to the D-Day observances which were very moving and meaningful. They were returning to Paris, then Texas, mid-June.

A nice note came today from my old roommate, Jean Clarahan Bratton, who just returned from a mini-reunion in Wilmington, a sort of mid-point, with 11 high school friends. In July, she's going to Colorado to attend a music festival, visit with friends, meet her daughter, Anne, and then drive back to Hastings, Neb., with her. Jean will fly home to Virginia from Lincoln. Her granddaughter, Liz, who was married last summer, graduated from Hastings College in May ("of course I was there") and is just starting a training program in a local bank. So good to be caught up, Jean.

Ann and Jack Garrett and Frank and I attended Alumni College, June 23-26, to learn more about our Chesapeake Bay. Since we live just off the Bay, and Frank's career was spent in the seafood business, it was of great interest to us. This was our first venture to Alumni College — Jack and Ann are old hands.

More than 80 alumni and friends of William and Mary spent four wonderful days learning and exploring one of our national treasures, the Chesapeake Bay. Look for details in my next column.

I do hope this heat wave will break, but on that score we have no power. Have a great summer and I'll look forward to hearing from lots of you this fall!

Whoops — forgot to mention that Homecoming will be Nov. 3-6 and the theme is "The Beat Goes On," reflecting the beginning of the Fourth Century. The Academic Festival will again be offered, so sign up early.

I feel very grateful to those of you who have sent me news. Each time before this column is due, I select at random a few names to prod into writing to me. The postage and time are worthwhile only when my classmates respond. Truthfully, until I assumed this job I was not good about writing to the Alumni Gazette. It is my loss to note that Liz Costenbader Bellis '43, my Tri Delta sister, died, and to learn that my son was getting a degree at Yale while she was nearby in Hamden, Conn. Had we known, we could have had a reunion.

Bob Baker, whose lovely sisters, Jane Baker Larson '39 and Jean Baker Watt '39, were seniors when I entered William and Mary, was a fraternity brother of Dick's at Washington and Lee. May we offer condolences to the Baker family, as we just learned the news of Bob's death from the Caduceus of Kappa Sigma. Jane and Jean passed away several years ago.

Margaret Kelly Dunham, who ably organized our 50th reunion, loved the W&M 300th anniversary. She wants to audit some courses at our alma mater if she can find time between Woman's Club, Garden Club, church, AARP, Olde Guard Council and many cultural activities. She went on a cruise through the Panama Canal in April and visited Cartagena, Colombia, the San Blas Islands (home of the Kuna Indians), Curacao and Aruba. Her son lives in Wellfleet, Mass., and has bought land on Cape Cod. Margaret will see her only grandchild, 5, all summer when she goes to her vacation home near Wellfleet. Margaret's daughter Amy teaches middle school in Glade Spring, Va. Eleanor Nottingham Dudley lives in Williamsburg. She and Margaret get together often.

Class notes

Natalie Rogers Mabry spent five-and-a-half weeks in Naples, Fla., and talked with Marion Smith Turner '43, who lives there all year. Natalie and husband Bob went to London, where their son and his family live. They hadn't seen their two granddaughters, 9 and 3, for over a year. At the end of June the Mabrys go to their cottage at Lake Canandaigua, N.Y., which they describe as the prettiest of the Finger Lakes.

Dick and I had one of our best ever trips in April. We were in Turkey for three weeks. This time we went not only to Istanbul, but also to Anatolia, and took in scenes that surpassed our expectations. The history of the regions around Cappadocia and the rock formations, such as the fairy chimneys, are unique. We had a Herndon reunion at Massanutten, Va., in May, and entertained family and friends in our exchange time-share there. Our theater reading group presented our program to Morse Gallery in Winter Park, Fla., and events such as the bridge marathon ended with luncheons and dinners. We celebrated with four other couples at Boca Grande, Fla. I never knew of some of the islands in the gulf until we visited them on our friend's boat. Places like Cabbage Key, occupied in the 1920s by novelist Mary Roberts Rhinehart and her son and his wife, are indescribably picturesque.

Emalee Ewing Durbin and Sol are still on the go, but they have adopted a black poodle puppy with an interesting name, Teenoncey, which means "tiny." It came from a book by Theodore Taylor about the Outer Banks of North Carolina. A child rescued from a shipwreck was very small and could remember nothing of her past, so she was given this name. All sorts of interesting information comes to your reporter.

My next deadline will be October 28. By then, all of you should have some news which will make Homecoming, Nov. 3-6, even better for those who read the December Alumni Gazette. Think of yourselves as liaisons for those of us who are aging in body, but not in spirit.

We all have been saddened at the news of Tex Warrington's death. His last letter supplied much information about Vision Quest, the program he developed to help troubled youth. It was a major commitment of his lifetime and an example to us all of the ways in which we must help the next generation. His hopes and plans for this work were never diminished by the cancer he was fighting.

News has also reached me that Albert Webster Clay died in Foster City, Calif., nearly three years ago. Before his retirement ten years ago, he had served for 36 years with Liberty Mutual.

Jack Bellis sent news of the death of Liz Costenbader Bellis '43. They were married from 1947 to 1961 and had a son. Liz was associate dean of the department of epidemiology and public health at the Yale School of Medicine, and was awarded many honors in connection with her work for the rights of women and people of color. Her full obituary was printed in the last issue of the Gazette.

Bill King, longtime officer of the Riggs Bank and vestryman at St. John's Church, Georgetown, died last February in Washington, D.C.

Remember these dear friends in your prayers, giving thanks for their lives.

Here's the roster of those who came to the 50th: Elizabeth and Bill Albert, Emily Snyder Alexander and Jim, Gunde and Ted Bailey, Ann Washington Beard and Jim, Jack Bellis and Joyce, Ruth Waters Berry '45, Mary Elizabeth Bitzer, Freda Nevias Bloch, Jean Bulette Boggs, Margaret Horn Booth and Warren, Peggy and Iver Brook, Mary Scott Buck, Brendan A. Burns Jr. '42, Susan Whitehead Byars, Helen Smith Campbell and Frank '53 M.Ed., Billie Davison Cantlay and Gordon, Joan Worstell Carter '45 and Jack Carter, Huldah Stainback Champion, Jacqueline and Bernie Chovitz, Jo Cornell Clarke '45 and Buddy, Dee Dee Armor Cochrane and Ed, Bob Conkey, Diane '43 and Scotty Custis, Barbara Widmer Dinwoodie and David, Ann and Bill Ditto, Mary Dilts Dixon and Bob, Lois Spratley Donald and Doug, Lane Dudley and Connie, Barbara Durling, Dorothy Agurk Edmunds and David, Marilyn Miller and Johnny Entwisle, Muriel Koch Ernstmeyer and Milton, Nancy Norris Foster and Dixon '47, Elaine McDowell Fuerst and Bob, Marjorie Retzke Gibbs and Wayne Gibbs, Anne Smith Goldston, Anna Edwards and Jim Harnsberger, Martha Eddy Hassell, Mary Koehler Hilber and Bert, Louise Spalding and John Hollis, Walter Horvitz and Maxine, Janet and Bernie Keppler, Jean Boyd Lacy and Ben, Matilda Gentile Lewis, Alice Peebles Lilley '48, Barbara Gray Macondray and Stewart, Hallie Rennie Martin and Joe, Ann James May and George, Charlotte Parker McQuade and David '49, Nancy Jones Meissel and William, Marge Talle Merriman and Jack '45, Bill Morris and Hazel, Anne Dobie Peebles, Monty Purviance and Elizabeth, Jean Lochridge Quin and Langdon, George Rafey and Nadia, Don Ream and Genevieve, Arthur Reisfeld and Adelaide, Mary Wilson Carver Sale and Graham, Prickett Carter Saunders and Jim, Henry Schutz and Betty Aurell Schutz '45, Eleanor Dumper Singer and Bill, Bill Smith and Jane Spencer Smith '48, Edie Burkard Thompson, Honora Thompson, Mabel Dunn Torrey, Ellie Ramsdell Van Scherpe and Peter, Sally Snyder Vermilye, Katie Rutherford Watson and John, Walt Weaver, Eugenia Kellogg Williams and Dick, Sunny Trumbo Williams and Rolf, and David S. Williamson.

It was a lovely, hospitable three days that we had, filled especially with the sheer joy of seeing each other. I didn't hear much of the sort of competitive bragging about grandchildren that is so easy to caricature, nor of the equally competitive comparing of personal fortunes or the garnering of laurels of any sort — there was just good-humored affection and an appreciative desire to hear each others' stories and the life-wisdom we have gleaned.

The College did its part handsomely. All the official functions were well-planned by our allies in the Alumni Society office, including the banquet at which we were inducted into the Olde Guard and received our medallions. And we did our part handsomely, too — Marilyn and John Entwisle, our gift chairs, presented our class gift to President Timothy Sullivan '66: $373,437 from about 125 of us, the largest reunion gift ever given to the College. The money will benefit the new Alumni House expansion, the Honor System and the Swem Library.

On Sunday morning, we had a brief Memorial Service in Wren Chapel and remembered by name all our classmates who have died. I will be glad to send copies of the brief address to any of you who want them.

We enjoyed the Commencement, the field house crammed with the rejoicing young people, their proud families, and faculty, administrators and friends of the College, including ourselves. Several articles in the last Gazette gave an account of the sequence of events and some of the highlights. Those of you who could not be with us missed something very fine.

Jerry Hyman, New York City; Jeanne Mencke McAfee, Durham, N.C.; Alex Rosovsky '43 (now Alex Ross), New York City; Bob Weinberg, Baltimore; Lucile Fizer Gooch, Troy, Va.; and David McNamara, Averill Park, N.Y., all wrote or telephoned to express regret at not being able to be with us for the Reunion. Jerry was in the countdown stage before a major overseas trip and winding up necessary duties, Jeanne had family and church responsibilities, Alex had continuing business obligations, Bob was recovering from surgery, Lucile, head of her local Arts Council, was heading the launch of a $150,000 campaign, and Dave was on a grandparent-type trip to San Francisco.

At the registration for the Reunion, we were given a copy of the Colonial Re-Echo, with an introductory essay by Katie Rutherford Watson, and thumbnail biographies. There was also a roster of the Class, with addresses. It is astonishing to see the extent of the globe in which we have served, the talents we have developed and used, and the consistently high level of appreciation we all share for the blessings we have received along the way.

Though we have now joined the general alumni category of the Olde Guard, none of us really want to lose our Class identity in the overall meld of it. Dixon Foster and others have expressed the same feeling. So don't be surprised if, at some proper interval, we plan other get-togethers just for our group.

Gloria Hall and Ralph Lipfert, Sue Whitehead Byars, Mary Dilts Dixon and Bob joined more than 80 alumni and guests at this year's Alumni College, held June 24-26 and sponsored by the Alumni Society. The participants came from as far away as California, Oregon and Florida for the event, titled Exploring the Chesapeake Bay II. They hunted for fossils, attended lectures and toured the Bay by boat in an effort to better understand the Chesapeake and the environmental threats to its waters. For information on next year's Alumni College, call the Society at 221-1174.

Many made promises to send me news for the Class Letter on a regular basis. Please — all of you — keep those letters and postcards coming!

JIM KELLY '51 MARKS 40 YEARS AT COLLEGE

James S. Kelly '51 came to William and Mary in the summer of 1954 as executive secretary of the Society of the Alumni. This summer, Kelly was surprised by President Sullivan and his staff with a party celebrating Kelly's 40th anniversary at the College, which has included service to five presidents. Three associates who have worked with Kelly joined him for the celebration: (left to right) Violet R. Chalkley, Sandy Wilms, Kelly's current administrative assistant, and Trudy Topping, who worked for Kelly when he first came to William and Mary. In addition to serving as executive secretary of the Society, Kelly has served as director of development and assistant to College presidents Thomas A. Graves Jr., Paul R. Verkuil '61 and Timothy J. Sullivan '66.

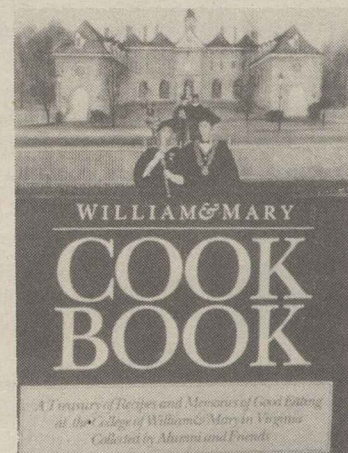

The William and Mary Cookbook

Dear Friends!

I just unpacked my copy of the William and Mary Cookbook and decided to take a glance before gift-wrapping it for my daughter. At the rate I am going, I will be lucky if it's wrapped in time for her to open on Saturday. What a beautiful addition to her personal library. Indeed, I never expected to receive something so special. Not only the recipes, but the precious photos—I have been glued to the pages for the past hour! I know Lisa will be thrilled with her gift and I thank everyone for all the many hours of work involved. Happy Holidays.

Fondly,
Joan Ferrante

FAMILIAR FACES RETIRE

Three familiar faces representing 84 years of collective service retired from William and Mary this summer. Posing with President Sullivan and W. Samuel Sadler '64, vice president for student affairs, they are (seated, left to right): Stanley E. Brown, Robert P. Hunt and Teresa (Pete) Freeman. Brown came to William and Mary 25 years ago as assistant director of financial aid and has served since 1985 as director of career services. A veteran of 37 years at the College, Hunt has served under five College presidents as dean of admissions and as associate director of career services. Freeman is well known to many alumni and students as secretary to Sadler for the past 21 years.

UNIVERSITY RELATIONS HEAD GOES TO RUTGERS

William N. Walker, director of university relations at William and Mary for the past nine years, has accepted the position of executive director of university communications at Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey. At Rutgers, Walker, who led W&M's communications program through the successful $150 million Campaign for the Fourth Century and the Tercentenary Celebration, will be the university's chief media spokesperson. He will have primary responsibility for planning and management of all internal and external communications at the 48,000-student university, which includes 27 colleges and schools on three campuses and an 8,500-member faculty.

President Sullivan praised Walker as "a first-rate professional who has made a significant contribution to the College's welfare," adding that Walker's abilities contributed significantly to the successful completion of the Campaign for the Fourth Century and Tercentenary Celebration.

It's early summer as I start this class letter, and that means many of you are either traveling or preparing for house guests, children and grandchildren. I'm sure the latter will be stocked and restocked many times along with the "changing of the sheets"...and wouldn't it be too bad if we didn't have this to anticipate each year?

I was certainly happy to hear the travel plans of one of our classmates. Jay McOuat Hyle was unable to attend Homecoming '93 because she was in I.C.U. following cancer surgery. In her letter of May 19, 1994, she reported that she was in remission, back singing in her church choir and planning a trip to Alaska with her two daughters in June. I hope it was a wonderful trip, Jay.

Lois Willis Vorhis and her husband, Don, have moved to Brandermill Woods in Midlothian, Va., but that didn't deter their traveling. Lois wrote that they moved April 1 and left for Europe April 3. They returned April 22 and then started to unpack! I'm sure they are enjoying their new home, which is 50 miles closer to Williamsburg than their former home in Annandale.

Ed Griffin and Rose are also avid travelers. Just recently they spent a week touring Lake Powell and the Grand Canyon. Ed said Lake Powell was fine but nothing could compare to the Grand Canyon.

I have enjoyed several short trips recently. I went to my 50th high school reunion in Lovettsville, Va., and had a wonderful evening renewing friendships. A highlight of the occasion was a visit with my cousin, Elizabeth Potterfield Leonard '33, who graduated from Lovettsville High School in 1929. Elizabeth (we always called her "Sis") lives in Arizona, had flown in for her 65th Reunion, and was going on to Newport News to visit some William and Mary friends before heading home.

And, speaking of reunions, you will notice that this issue of the Gazette is the '94 Homecoming Issue. Please pay close attention to the insert, and start making plans for the weekend of November 3-6.

Hansai Wright and Lucy Buran Cornett joined more than 80 alumni and guests at this year's Alumni College, held June 24-26 and sponsored by the Alumni Society. The Alumni Society sent me a copy of a very touching tribute to Carl A. Fehr, submitted by Fred Tubbs. With their approval, I feel privileged to take excerpts from Fred's beautifully written description of the enduring relationship between these two individuals.

They met when Fred returned to William and Mary in 1947 following two years in the Army and approached Dr. Fehr about voice lessons. Fred soon discovered that "Pappy" Fehr was a demanding teacher but he never demanded more than he was sure his pupil could produce. He was also just as quick with praise when that student achieved his goals.

A warm and lasting friendship developed between Dr. and Mrs. Fehr and Fred and Margaret (Fred's fiancée, then wife). A daughter was named "Carol," the closest name to Carl befitting a girl. There were visits to the Fehrs here in Williamsburg and to the Tubbses in New York. In fact Fred mentions that the Fehrs were visiting him and Margaret in Warwick the night Old Phi Beta Kappa Hall burned.

So you can see that so many memories center around Fred's life here and the impact Pappy Fehr had. Fred has been the director of church choirs as well as a soloist. Much of his musical library was developed during his association with Carl Fehr.

Finally, I would like to quote from Fred's last paragraph. "Now Pappy Fehr is gone. He is remembered fondly by generations of students for whom he was the same warm but demanding person he was for me. My life has been richer because of him and Alice, and many other students feel the same way. Henry Adams once wrote that a good teacher affects eternity. The saying is eminently true of Pappy Fehr. He lives on in the hearts of the many young people whose lives he touched, and through them he reaches out to generations who are still to come."

One nice letter was recently received from Larry Johnson, to wit: After graduation from W&M, my wife Penny and I went to Champaign-Urbana for graduate school at University of Illinois. After graduate school, we lived and I worked in New York, Connecticut, Los Angeles and the Midwest, mainly the Kansas City area. Along the way we had three children, three grandchildren, and a 34-year business career, over half of which was spent as the senior marketing executive for three Fortune 500 companies. After retiring from business, I spent nine years teaching, consulting, and heading the advertising sequence at the William Allen White School of Journalism of the University of Kansas, before more or less retiring again in May 1993. We immediately moved to Gainesville, Fla., to be close to the family mining business, teach an occasional course, consult a little, travel a lot, and nothing new — enjoy life.

Information has been received from the Alumni Society that Robert F. Boyd of Virginia Beach, president of the law firm of Boyd and Boyd, P.C. in Norfolk, has been appointed to the Committee on Corporate Counsel of the American Bar Association, Section of Business Law. Boyd's involvement in the civic life of Hampton Roads recently garnered him the Cox Cable "Great Citizen of Hampton Roads" award for "outstanding service and community contributions." He serves on numerous charitable and philanthropic foundation boards, both locally and nationally. He is listed in the Marquis publication of Who's Who in American Law and the World's Who's Who in Finance and Industry.

Some years prior to my stint as Class of '50 reporter, I was dismayed by the general lack of interest on the part of class members in sharing their experiences and matters that would clearly be of interest to not only Class of '50 friends, but also to people in classes both before and after us. My frustration with this problem has continued over several years, and I've concluded that many of you feel embarrassed to see your name in print and probably others are just complacent or don't want to bother with the column. In either event, those who do have an interest are the losers, and it's a shame.

It occurs to me that perhaps it's time to hang up the pen and typewriter and pass this task on to a more enterprising class reporter. Thanks for giving me the opportunity, and I extend my best wishes to the new reporter.

My special thanks go to Phyllis Reardon Morrison and Ruth Barnes Jorgensen without whose contributions this column wouldn't have existed.

Since the BIG ONE is coming up this fall for the Class of '54, I'm using this space to remind you, though you'll get a letter specifically about the occasion.

Sara Miller Boyd '55 is joining our committee to help put together a weekend you'll all be glad you attended.

We have Bob Neville already on board. Jim Duff is back in town, as of the last couple of years. He and his wife, Trina, have offered to help us with plans. Others on our committee are Terry Hamilton Carter, Carol Raymond DeSamper and Luther Kiger.

At last year's Homecoming, all the stops were out, and the turnout was spectacular. This year's Homecoming will be a very special time for us in the Class of '54, and I'm looking forward to a great crowd attending.

Even if you're not sure you can make it, won't you use this as a reminder to call or write someone you knew well in college and get caught up on what's going on in his or her life? Obviously, you'll like coming back yourself if you know that certain of your special friends will be there. Check it out. Let your friends know you're coming.

I'm happy to report that the Class of '54 has a new reporter: Bob Neville. You'll see his first column in the December issue of the Gazette. Please send all your news directly to Robert W. Neville, 64 Evergreen Dr., North Caldwell, NJ 07006.

Lance and Jan Mason Trusty report all goes well with them, and are looking forward to family merriment.

Ginny von Breitenfeld Ferre has moved into an apartment in Kilmarnock, just up the road from me. She and Dave hope to move into their house sometime in November. They were headed for Disney World later in the summer.

Ginny and Dave, Mary Tine and Dave Penkins, Bobbie Campbell Wenger and Phil, and Barbar Lynn Wheller and Larry joined more than 80 alumni and guests at this year's Alumni College, held June 24-26 and sponsored by the Alumni Society. Dottie Guthrie Wilson visited Paris for a few weeks in the spring, accompanied by her older daughter. They had a grand time going on picnics, boat rides and plopping in sidewalk cafes. Still more trips planned.

Chris Elmes Schlatter '58 and Bob '57 have moved into a larger house with bags, baggage and four cats. They sound very busy and happy.

Milt '55 and Alice Glover Glasser got back to Puerto Rico for a few days in the spring. London is their next stop. Their grandchildren are growing "like weeds."

I received a phone call from Virginia Beach and Sue Robertson Shephard was on the line. She and I had a great conversation. Sue and her husband, Bill, have three sons. Two are married and the youngest is a student at Old Dominion University. Sue said they didn't have grandchildren yet. Sue is very involved with the lay ministry at her church.

The phone also provided the following information: Mary Alice Adams Betts is working on a reunion for Gamma Phi Beta members from the Class of '62. She is still in Winter Park, Fla. Any members who would be interested in a reunion, let me know.

Jackie Fleming has opened a counseling office in Leesburg, Va., and also works in Arlington, Va., where she does counseling. She commutes from Upperville, where she is remodeling her family home.

News was very scarce. I need you to drop a line or phone (703/586-9242). Remember, Homecoming is Nov. 3-6 and the theme is "The Beat Goes On." This will be the first one of the Fourth Century! The Henrys will see you there!

Bubba Crone, D.J. extraordinaire, will host "Get Ready... 'Cause Here We Come" for our 30th Reunion, November 3-6. Yes, "The Beat Goes On," and so will we. Whether this will be your first trek back to the Tribe or whether you've now powwowed every year for Homecoming, don't miss this one. This is not the year to be shy and stay at home. This is your year to revisit the campus because there's so much new and exciting to see. If you haven't been back since graduation, you must plan a stroll down to Crim Dell, the most beautiful spot on a college campus, and cross over the bridge that was our class gift to the College. Note the plaque on the bridge and don't forget that a kiss with your sweetheart in the middle of the bridge brings good luck. And you can't miss the wonderful surprise in front of the Wren Building — the new statue of Lord Botetourt, resurrected to his original place. There's also a new statue of Thomas Jefferson next to Washington Hall (of course, they were good friends), and new buildings, the University Center and Tercentenary Hall. It's also your year to attend the second annual Academic Festival, a series of educational seminars led by William and Mary professors. This was a huge success last year. This is your year to view the Homecoming Parade from College Corner and notice that some floats have changed for the better, but others never will. This is your year to have lunch on the lawn and to be in the class photo. It's your year to watch the Tribe play the University of Maine, a first in football since we changed to the Yankee Conference. This is your year to reminisce and catch up with old friends. This is your year and you're in for a real treat. The Reunion Committee has planned a very special, casual get-together for our classmates, families and friends to enjoy one another's company.

Our Reunion Headquarters is the Williamsburg Hilton, about 5 miles east of the College near Busch Gardens. If you have not already done so, make your reservations now so all our class can be together; include friends and family, too. The hotel has an indoor pool and game room, and children under 18 are admitted free. The hotel will be the focal point for our class activities. We will have a Hospitality Suite open from Friday at 4 p.m. through Sunday midday. Saturday evening there will be a cocktail reception and buffet dinner/dance featuring Bubba and all our old favorite tunes from the best four years of our lives. As we step back into the early '60s, we'll enter the atmosphere of the lodges, as we fondly remember them...therefore, casual attire is a must. Enter the 45s on the turntable playing "Runaway," "You Talk Too Much," "I Like It Like That," "Mother-in-Law," "Peppermint Twist," "Loco-Motion," "Duke of Earl," and "Louie, Louie." Bring your dancin' shoes and your shoutin' voices. And come ready for a wonderful time.

Already I've heard rumors of some classmates planning special group reunions for Friday night. John Slifka told me he talked recently with Bob Soleau; perhaps there's a football huddle in the works. Call John for the reunion plays, 703/750-2745. John lives in Springfield, Va., with wife Pat, who is an editor/writer for the Commerce Department. John is a guidance counselor at Langley High School in Fairfax County; he also directs the School Team working with substance abuse. I had the pleasure of teaching this past year with John at Langley. This will be John's first trip back to William and Mary since graduation. He's hoping his old buddies will join him.

Another first time Homecoming returnee will be Frank Govern. Frank writes from Huntington Beach, Calif., where he lives with wife Sharon, who owns a business in the visual merchandising industry, and step-daughter Kelly who has completed her second year at Vanderbilt, majoring in biology and Spanish. For 25 years, Frank enjoyed a career in the bio-technology industry. After retiring in 1987, he volunteered in an elementary school where all the students spoke Spanish. That ignited a second career as a bilingual elementary teacher with the Long Beach Unified School District. Frank hopes that others will join him for this 30th reunion.

Bill Saunders, also from California, recently called searching for Jon Shidler. Bill has worked for Lockheed for 26 years as a deep-ocean engineer. He has two children. His wife, Joke, is from Holland.

Bill Fleming called recently, too. He wanted to make sure he was off the "missing" list. Bill and wife Pam Wandell '65 have returned to many reunions and plan to return to this one as well. Bill is chief of the Program Management Office with the Defense Intelligence Agency and Pam is the vice president of marketing for C-SPAN in Washington; they live in Gaithersburg, Md. Bill keeps in touch with Lew Wehner who lives in Rockwall, Texas, and is a pilot, recently promoted to captain, for one of the major airlines. Bill also mentioned his freshman class friend Mark Z. Alley, now no longer on the missing list, who has recently moved to Portland, Ore., with his wife, Melisse.

Congratulations to John Randolph, who was honored with this year's Alumni Medallion for his outstanding work for the College as athletic director and his commitment to the community. The awards will be presented Nov. 4 at the Homecoming Ball, so show your support by attending! Register in the Homecoming Supplement in this Gazette.

The Alumni Society has already registered many of our class for the reunion. They remind us not to register too late so there is no disappointment over tickets or space availability for the Homecoming events. Also plan ahead for small group reunions — for example, on Friday night. The Thetas have already booked their reunion dinner reservations for Christina Campbell's at 8:30, Friday, November 4. If you plan to attend, call me at 703/768-7546. Friends and family should be included!

Our Reunion Committee has been hard at work to make this 30th reunion a fun time for you. Co-chairs Phil Van Kirk and Joanne Arnett Tutschek are covering all bases. Joanne is director of debt and equity, marketing communications, for Merrill Lynch in New York. She and Phillip Tutschek live in Mountain Lakes, N.J. Her son, Spencer, is studying maritime law at Tulane University and daughter Elizabeth has just finished seventh grade and spends the year going from one sport to the next. Phil Van Kirk lives minutes away from the Tutscheks in Mt. Kemble Lake. Phil is a partner with Ernst and Young management consultants. He is also a trustee for a local land and environmental trust. He is married to Mary Van Lear '67; their daughter Laris '89 and their son Greg just returned from graduate studies in Japan. Phil is also on the ballot for Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni.

Sharon Heffington Dearth joined more than 80 alumni and guests at this year's Alumni College, held June 24-26 and sponsored by the Alumni Society. The participants came from as far away as California, Oregon and Florida for the event, titled Exploring the Chesapeake Bay II. They hunted for fossils, attended lectures and toured the Bay by boat in an effort to better understand the Chesapeake and the environmental threats to its waters. For information on next year's Alumni College, call the Society at 221-1174.

Well, that's all for now. I look forward to getting all your news at Homecoming and our 30th Reunion. Plan now so you won't be disappointed later. Call your friends, your old roommates, your team mates, your sorority sisters, your fraternity brothers, your club and activity mates, your dorm mates. Don't just come on your own. Make sure that everyone you want to see is coming, too. The committee can provide the place and plan the festivities, but it won't be anything without you. Only you can make this the special reunion that we all want it to be. Call me at 703/768-7546 if you need addresses and phone numbers, if you need any help in planning, or have any questions. Or feel free to contact any of the other Reunion Committee members: Phil Van Kirk, Joanne Arnett Tutschek, Don Beck, Vee Jones Davis, Kay Bonner Drews, Dick Goodwin, Hugh Miller III, Carol Evans Miller, Bob Buckley, Roger Hardy, Greg Presnell, and Harriet Nachman Storm. See you at our 30th Reunion November 3-6.

After a newsy report last time, this will be very short. I have sent out postcards to several classmates, and am hoping to hear from many of them before the next deadline. Of course, if you haven't received a postcard, I'd still love to hear from you.

As a Class Reporter, I do find that information comes from many sources. Last month I delivered Mobile Meals with a fellow William and Mary grad — Sue Spindle Mosier '63. She and her husband, Steve '64, are in touch with Bill and Connie Hudson Harris, who live in Reston, Va. Bill is with the National Science Foundation. I'd love to hear more details from Bill and Connie. Steve is director of research services at UNC-Greensboro. He earned his master's and doctorate in physics at the University of Iowa.

Now in the small world department. Last Christmas I had some W&M football films from the mid-'60s put on video tape for my husband, Dick '64. The videographer recently did a wedding for some local people, and in their hours together, William and Mary football was mentioned. The local client turned out to be a friend of the mother of the late T. W. Alley '64. The friend was then able to get copies of the films made for Mrs. Alley.

We were invited to Mary Ellen Coleman Culp's fiftieth birthday bash in Key Largo, Fla., but were unable to attend. Mary Ellen did send pictures, and the Marilyn Monroe look-alike contest was hysterical, as was the clever party invitation. Dick managed to surprise me with a party — wouldn't you think we fifty-year-olds would be expecting a surprise party — you must get stupid at this age.

Our youngest son, Michael, is engaged and will marry next July after he and his fiancée graduate from Clemson University. Michael is in mechanical engineering and Stacey in ceramic engineering. His aunt, Sandy McNeill Kern '68, will put her preaching skills to use and perform the ceremony. Yesterday's mail brought an invitation to the wedding of Dianne and Bill Banner's '65 daughter this July — another sign of how quickly the years are going by for us.

Pat Trefry Ellis joined more than 80 alumni and guests at this year's Alumni College, held June 24-26 and sponsored by the Alumni Society. The participants came from as far away as California, Oregon and Florida for the event, titled Exploring the Chesapeake Bay II. They hunted for fossils, attended lectures and toured the Bay by boat in an effort to better understand the Chesapeake and the environmental threats to its waters. For information on next year's Alumni College, call the Society at 221-1174.

To those I sent postcards to — Pat Patterson Riley, Dave Olson, Mary Kathryn Sweeney McIntosh, Connie Hudson and Bill Harris, Betty Staton Hogan, and Glad Bulwinkle '67 and Russ Hatchl — please send me your news.

Arthur has been on the faculty since 1979 and has twice been awarded the Thomas Branch Award for Excellence in Teaching.

NEW MEMBERS APPOINTED TO COLLEGE BOARD OF VISITORS

Gov. George Allen has appointed four new members, including three alumni, to the Board of Visitors. Appointed to a four-year term ending in June 1998 were:

• Marguerite Bozarth Davis '53, a former public school teacher in Fairfax, who served as assistant to the director for overseas graduate programs run by Boston College in the early 1980s. Since moving to Williamsburg about five years ago, she has worked at Royal Travel Center.

Along with her William and Mary degree, Davis holds a master's in education from George Washington University and has taken postgraduate courses at the College, the University of Virginia, George Washington University and the University of Maryland.

• William F. Mirguet Jr. '62 of Newport News, executive vice president of the FCR Group Inc., who spent more than 20 years in the banking industry before joining the FCR Group. A former member of the William and Mary Athletic Educational Foundation's Board of Trustees, former chair of the AEF Endowment Fund and former president of the Alumni Society's Lower Peninsula Chapter, Mirguet currently belongs to the Association of 1775, an organization of the Society of the Alumni that recognizes alumni who have served in the military, and the Order of the White Jacket. Mirguet is a graduate of the Kellogg Management School for Corporate Bankers at Northwestern University.

• Linda Arey Skladany '66 of Alexandria, executive director of The Foundation for Environmental and Economic Progress in Washington. Skladany has practiced legal advocacy and regulatory law with the Washington firm of Holland & Hart and was commissioner of the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission from 1988 to 1989. A Republican candidate for Congress in the 1987 special election for Virginia's 5th District, she has also served on the Advisory Committee for Trade Negotiation in 1988 and as special assistant to school teacher in Fairfax, who served as assistant to the director for overseas graduate programs run by Boston College in the early 1980s. Since moving to Williamsburg about five years ago, she has worked at Royal Travel Center.

Along with her William and Mary degree, Davis holds a master's in education from George Washington University and has taken postgraduate courses at the College, the University of Virginia, George Washington University and the University of Maryland.

• William F. Mirguet Jr. '62 of Newport News, executive vice president of the FCR Group Inc., who spent more than 20 years in the banking industry before joining the FCR Group. A former member of the

Jo Lynne Stancil DeMary became Virginia's division chief for instruction in July. Prior to this appointment, she was an assistant superintendent for instruction in Henrico County.

Ronald Kephart writes that after receiving his degree at W&M, he "went on to receive the M.A. (Latin American Studies) and Ph.D. (anthropology) from the University of Florida. He is now as assistant professor in language and literature at the University of North Florida, Jacksonville, where he teaches courses in Spanish, linguistics, foreign culture and anthropology. Ronald met his wife, Whilelmina, while serving as a Peace Corps volunteer in the eastern Caribbean. Their son, Thomas, 18, is serving in the U.S. Marine Corps; they also have a daughter, Aimee, 9. In August they celebrated their 20th wedding anniversary."

Warren D. Knowlton became president of building products-Europe for Owens-Corning in January. He has responsibility for all European building products and associated operations. Chip regrets that pressing business and his upcoming move to Brussels, Belgium, kept him from attending our reunion, but he is excited about living and working in Europe. He is a member of the Society of the Plastics Industry and the American and Ohio Bar Associations. He serves as a charter member of the advisory board at the master's in manufacturing management program at the Kellogg School of Business, Northwestern University.

Candy Beal joined more than 80 alumni and guests at this year's Alumni College, held June 24-26 and sponsored by the Alumni Society. The participants came from as far away as California, Oregon and Florida for the event, titled Exploring the Chesapeake Bay II. They hunted for fossils, attended lectures and toured the Bay by boat in an effort to better understand the Chesapeake and the environmental threats to its waters. For information on next year's Alumni College, call the Society at 221-1174.

Congratulations to our very own Joe Koons, who will be presented with the Alumni Medallion at this year's Homecoming Ball. Show Joe your support and plan on attending the ball to be held Nov. 4 of Homecoming weekend! Register in the Homecoming Supplement in this Gazette.

Greetings to Ludwell 304-A and Gamma Phi Beta buddies from Lynne Hagelin of Wilmington, Del. Lynne is a psychiatrist in private practice in Philadelphia and also runs a clinic with the Delaware State Hospital. Her profession is quite a change from her "earlier life" as a physicist with the government doing infrared optics research. Lynne commemorated her third year as a survivor of breast cancer by joining the Breast Health Institute's Race for the Cure last May in Philadelphia.

Our oldest child, Martha, graduated with the centennial graduating class of Haworth Public School last June with honors and the All-Round Musician Award. Marty pitched her school softball team last spring to an historic first place season — the highlight being the 13-strikeout win of their last game!

Bill Cole and his mother, Hildred W. Cole of Courtland, presented a plant and an inscribed copy of Poplar Forest and Thomas Jefferson to the Earl Gregg Swem Library in memory of Elizabeth B. Dickens, reserve book librarian at the College from 1958 to 1972. Dickens' daughter, Ellen Dickens Bielaski '64, was also present.

George De Vilbiss Gowan is happily painting full time in Kent, Conn. After 24 years as dean of students at Kent School, Don is looking forward to teaching history full time and coaching football and basketball.

From June 23-26 this year, Janet Smith attended Alumni College and reports that the four days were a wonderfully balanced mix of field trips, lectures, and opportunities to become acquainted with other attendees. This was Janet's second Alumni College, and she was the only member of the Class of '70 at both the 1993 and 1994 sessions. "Once you attend one Alumni College, you'll be excited about going back again!" wrote Janet. Janet is currently director of publications for the National Association for Law Placement, an association of law schools and legal employers in Washington, D.C.

Best wishes and congratulations to Dale Brubeck, who was married to John Merola in Columbus, Ohio, on December 18, 1993! John and Dale are living in Worthington, not far from Columbus, where Dale continues as executive director at Kappa Kappa Gamma headquarters. John has retired as professor of medical biochemistry at Ohio State University Medical College and continues to do work in that field.

I hope you've all enjoyed a nice summer. Keep in mind that we have another big reunion ... 25th! ... coming up in the fall of 1995!

I hope you all enjoyed your summer, which always seems to be over too quickly. In Northern Virginia, as in other parts of the country, we became more familiar with the real meaning of "heat wave" that I cared to be, but we had our share of the normal lazy, hazy days, too.

In our last column, I wrote about Randy Porter, who has recently co-authored a book titled A Cyclist's Guide to the Shenandoah Valley. The book was reviewed in the May '94 issue of Southern Living, which is pretty exciting in itself. To borrow a statement from the review, "Subtitled Exploring the Past and Present on Rural Routes, this guide maps trips in the countryside as well as points out history and lore along the way." Randy wrote to say the book has done very well and a second printing is already planned. So, those of us who frequent outdoor outfitters, bike shops and various bookstores, check out the bookshelf. He is working on a second book, A Mountain Biker's Guide to the Shenandoah Valley, and he hopes to be a full-time writer/publisher at some point. After W&M, he received a master's in education at Virginia Commonwealth University and holds a job teaching emotionally disturbed adolescents at the DeJarnette Center in Staunton. He and his wife have a 7-year-old, Chris, who is already talking about going to W&M.

A name from the past, Jeff Steckroth, decided to surface after 22 years and fill us in on his whereabouts and goings-on. His life is very full with teaching math and coaching soccer and more soccer, plus a family. He accepted a new position with the Virginia Beach City Schools as chair of the math department at a new high school, Ocean Lakes. He will also coach the boys' soccer team, a position for which he sounds exceptionally qualified. He has taught and coached soccer for 20 years since leaving W&M. He was math chair at the Literacy Center, an alternative school for students in Virginia Beach who have not passed the state's Literacy Passport Test, and he was selected to work on a task force to re-evaluate the math portion of that test. Jeff's love of soccer is obvious from the amount of time he has dedicated to coaching. This year he was involved with four soccer teams at the same time — a JV team, a varsity team, a U-11 boys' team and a U-17 Olympic Development Program girls' team! Somehow he managed to find time last summer to play for W&M in a men's baseball league, but reluctantly has postponed further baseball because of his summer schedule. He and his wife of three years, Nikki, welcomed Alexander to their family in August 1993. Nikki teaches English at Virginia Beach Middle School and I'll bet Alexander will have a shot at World Cup soccer play in the years to come.

Some of you may remember reading about Karen Devitt in one of our previous class columns. She is a professional musician, a jazz vocalist and pianist, who performs in the Northern Virginia area and recently released her first album. Peter '68 and Alison White Lattu '68 heard her perform at the Old Post Office Pavilion in Washington, D.C., in May and then caught up on news since college over lunch. Karen was the resident W&M folk singer in the late sixties, but after college she became a computer systems analyst. About five years ago she got married, and although her husband's day job is with the Naval Academy, he is also a musician. Three years ago, Karen decided to make a go of it as a professional musician. She faced a difficult time for a while, but now she has several jobs a week. On May 11, she fulfilled a dream of performing at Blues Alley, a top DC jazz club! She has two teenage stepchildren.

Thanks to those of you who wrote. We'd love to hear from more of you who have disappeared for the last 22 years. Think about it and drop me a note.

Soon we'll be celebrating our 20th Class Reunion in Williamsburg. I hope you've already marked November 3-6 on your calendar and are planning to attend. The 20th reunion traditionally draws more classmates than any other reunion, so this is the one you can't afford to miss!

This issue of the Alumni Gazette is the official Homecoming issue, with schedule and registration information. Your committee — Jim Rees, Maud Ann Sharp Wilson, Chris Honenberger, Sara Thomas Hunt, Craig Cornwell, Joe Montgomery, and me — has done its best to plan activities that are as informal and as reasonably priced as possible. But you are the key to a successful reunion. Please call or write your friends in the class, members of your fraternity, sorority, sports team, academic department, or dorm, and encourage them to attend.

Our official Class of '74 hotel is the Williamsburg

Catch the Homecoming

Whether or not you're planning to attend Homecoming, make sure you order a '94 Homecoming t-shirt. This 100% cotton, pre-shrunk shirt displays the green and gold Homecoming '94 logo — "The Beat Goes On" — representing the continuing spirit of generations of William and Mary alumni. Catch the spirit and order yours! See the registration form in the Homecoming supplement.

20TH REUNION

Hilton on Route 60. The College has reserved a block of rooms at a special rate but they are being held only until Sept. 30, so DON'T DELAY. Book your room NOW!

We have planned a wine and cheese party Friday night at the Williamsburg Winery (no, it wasn't there when we were in school) with Lewis McGehee providing entertainment. Saturday night's buffet supper party at the University Center (no, it wasn't there when we were in school) features Jim Theobald and John Walk '77 and their rock band, "Not Our Real Job," playing music you used to love to dance to. Kids are welcome at all events — as are friends and spouses of any W&M alumni.

And now for the news: In April Navy Commander Charles P. Mott participated in a major fleet exercise in the western Atlantic Ocean involving more than 20 navy ships, 100 aircraft and 13,000 personnel from all of the military services. The operation featured a relatively new concept for afloat forces — the use of Army and Air Force helicopters and special operations units operating from Navy ships at sea. I remember Monsieur Mott in my French class and can only hope he isn't acting as liaison with any French-speaking nationals, or the fate of the civilized world may be at risk ... just kidding, Phill

Congratulations to Glenn Close for winning the L.A. Drama Critic's Award for her portrayal of Norma Desmond in Sunset Boulevard. She brings this Andrew Lloyd Webber musical to Broadway in November.

Also in New York City, Tom Spivey starred in a new musical theater piece, Bertolt Brecht: In Dark Times, playing at the Samuel Beckett through April.

And John Finta wrote too, about foreign tourists flooding D.C. and the exchange rate and why Steve Slagle's residence in the Netherlands is no excuse for his not attending Homecoming. Sorry we can't reproduce your graph of how the dollar has fared against the Dutch guilder, John, but space limitations preclude such things... Maybe Steve will read this and change his mind.

Dr. Susan Early Otero wrote recently that Dr. Kathy McMullan and her husband, Mike Lahey, just had their second child, a daughter they named Sadie Katherine. They live in Missoula, Mont., with their son, where Kathy practices part time and Mike has an orthopedic practice. Susan and her husband, Pablo, adopted their third child last April. They now have two sons, Pablo, 5-1/2, Luis, 5, and a daughter Elisa who is 2-1/2. Susan writes that she now has to go to work to get any rest! She is in private practice in D.C. and chief of plastics at the Washington Hospital Center. Bring pictures to Homecoming — heck, bring the kids!

Susan wrote also about Carse Webber and her husband, Bill, who are now living in Blacksburg, Va., where they are both studying for their Ph.D.s in business. There must have been two Carse Webbers in the class of '74 because this doesn't sound at all like the one I knew from Dupont Third East.

See you in the 'Burg for Homecoming!

Robert S. Cavaliere

Fairfax, VA 22030

Greetings, classmates. Things are HOT in the D.C. area as I write this in mid-June. If you did something cool over the summer, why not let us know?

Heard from fellow math grad and actuary Carol Gramer, who really is a fellow now — of the Society of Actuaries, that is. Carol is a consulting actuary and a principal in the New York office of William M. Mercer. She is also a member of the Board of Directors of The American Heritage Dance Co. and a dancer with the West Side Dance Project, both in Manhattan. She was married earlier this year to John Belmonte, an independent journalist and author whom she met in dance class.

Got a long letter from Bob Gessner, out in Massillon, Ohio. He and wife Nancy Esper '77 are doing great and doing great things for their community. They live in the house Bob's parents bought when the family moved to town in 1965, when Bob's dad started the local cable TV company, in which Bob is now heavily involved. Recently he arranged for the governor to visit the local high school and the students produced a live video teleconference, which was broadcast to 300 other schools and 210,000 households. Nancy is, as Bob put it, "a living anachronism: mother, homemaker and volunteer extraordinaire," active in church, school and the community. Their two daughters, ages 13 and 11, are active in just about anything you can think of. Bob's 40th birthday in February was marked by a tombstone-shaped handicapped sign in his parking space at work, a staff dressed in black, and black crepe hanging everywhere. See, Bob, they do care about you. Thanks for your letter. Really great to hear from you.

Scott Shafer finds it hard being a Redskins fan in Houston. Since Oct. 1992, he has been operations vice president for the southern zone of E-Z SERVE Management, a company which operates 500 convenience stores in the southeast and southwest U.S. Finally, the mother of Steve Dalton wrote, saying that Steve suffered a most debilitating stroke in 1992. He would dearly love to hear from old friends and classmates. How about starting a letter writing campaign to Steve, his wife and 3 children at 137 Riner Run, Queenstown, MD 21658?

Be cool. Yours in air conditioning, Bob.

As I am sure you have seen in this issue of the Alumni Gazette, Homecoming is just around the corner! (I haven't recovered fully from last year yet.) While this Homecoming is not a milestone for us, there will be many interesting events taking place that you may want to attend. In particular, the Academic Festival will be repeated, which I understand was quite good last year. The dates this year are Nov. 3-6. I hope to see many of you again this year!

This is a first in recent months — I am in Richmond for the due date of this column. My life has been a blur since last fall with all the travel in my job. The gain-sharing project I have been working on is in the final approval and implementation stages, which should mean a significant reduction in time on the road.

Other changes at work include Bruce Bender's promotion to vice president, national marketing manager, agency market, with American Bankers Insurance Company of Florida. Bruce has been with American Bankers for over three years. His newest responsibilities are managing the development of new products, as well as the marketing and sales of property, surety and student accident insurance programs. In addition, he serves on the board of the American Surety Association. He and his family reside in the Pinecrest area of Miami.

Wayne Humphreys is now the senior vice president of Commerce Bank's Construction Loan Department in Portsmouth, Va. Prior to this promotion, Wayne had been a commercial loan officer with Commerce.

Kevin King thought he wanted to be a vet when he studied biology at W&M. He was even accepted at Ohio State University's veterinary school. It was then that he learned he was allergic to animals. So Kevin returned to W&M in '85 to study accounting and now is a CPA and senior manager with Ernst and Young in Richmond. He handles the bulk of the individual tax business that the international accounting firm does in the Richmond office. In January, Kevin was featured in an article in the Richmond Times-Dispatch describing a day in the life of a professional accountant. The reporter admitted that accounting is far more varied and interesting than the average person expects from "an often misunderstood profession."

Congratulations to David Smith on his marriage to Martha Purvis in April. They are living in Richmond, where Dave is a partner with Spotts, Smith, Fain and Rawls, P.C.

Robert and Sheryl Lukasuk Bass enjoyed a fun- and family-filled '93 with everything from ballet recitals to a visit to the baseball hall of fame, a family Polish/Lithuanian wedding, and a new arrival — a 5 lb. 9 oz. 12-inch largemouth bass, which Robert proudly displays with all the Bass family pictures! They enjoyed our Homecoming reunion and the chance to renew old friendships in the fall.

Frank Hyre may just win the class award for never missing a Homecoming — it is one of his goals! Just as Sheryl and Robert enjoyed last year's reunion, Frank was pleased to see how "well preserved, successful and happy our class was." To catch up on Frank's post-W&M history, he married Susan Anne Pantzer in '90. They now have two sons, Frank Jr. and John, and live in Alexandria. Frank is working as an asset manager for Alex. Brown Kleinwort Benson, doing the commute to Baltimore. George Duke '76 is also in that office. As for the commute, "it's old and we hope to move when we get enough sleep to rationally plan it."

And finally, the Class of 1979 has invited us to attend any of their reunion events at Homecoming in November. Lela Early Martin '79 is their chair and she asked me to let you know to check the special Homecoming insert in this issue of the Alumni Gazette for the details of their events and to join in the fun. I would love to hear from more of you — drop me a quick note so that I can pass along your news in our next column!

I hope this finds everyone well and enjoying what's left of summer. I apologize for missing the last column. I had it almost all set to go and then work had to get in the way! Work is something that you can apologize for and hope it won't interrupt again, but then one never knows. I will need some more news for the next column though, so be sure to write and let me know what's been happening.

Mark your calendars for November 3-6 for Homecoming! We all have received a very gracious invitation from the class of 1979, who will be celebrating their 15th reunion, to join in their festivities. It's sure to be a great time! You also know what that means ... our 15th reunion is just around the corner! Something else to look forward to!

Audrey Sussman Gauna recently began law school at Southwestern University School of Law in Los Angeles. Audrey is very ambitious, as she is taking evening classes, which leads me to believe that she is taking classes on top of a full-time job! Good luck, Audrey!

Mark Hollberg was recently re-elected to the board of directors of the (Shenandoah) Valley Conservation Council. Mark, who holds a master's in forestry from Duke, is the Augusta-area forester for the Virginia Department of Forestry, and serves as chairman of the Comprehensive Plan Citizens Advisory Committee for Staunton.

Cindy Hughes was married last October to Robert Davis. They are residing in Arlington. Cindy was (or is) group account director for Tracy-Locke Advertising Agency, based in Dallas, and Robert is regional vice president of operations for Embassy Suites Hotels.

Dick Fronko writes from sunny California, quite a ways from his old home of Madison, Wis. The reason for the move is Dick's marriage to Darlene van der Zon in July of 1993. Dick and Darlene are living in Milpitas, which is in the San Francisco area. Dick works at Microcide Pharmaceuticals, a start-up company in Mountain View, where he manages the NMR facility and other instrumentation, and assists with site planning and overseeing construction; the job is exciting and challenging. Darlene works at Varian Associates and is taking a few courses at a local college. In what little spare time exists, Dick and Darlene find time to redo their house and, might I add, wouldn't mind a bit of help, since you can always find more to do to fix-up a house!

Greg Fronczak writes from North Miami Beach, where he has lived for about five years. Greg has his own business which specializes in leather and latex products. When not busy addressing the concerns facing any entrepreneur, Greg can be found on the tennis court or the golf course or on the water — that is, if he isn't working on renovating his second house!

Sarah Peyton and Bill Weiser, who you probably recognize as our class agents for the Annual Fund, have been extremely busy. Sarah and Bill are now the proud parents of a second little girl, Catherine Stuart, born in November 1991. Catherine's big sister, Caroline, who is now five years old, helps Mom as much as she can, and has a ball with her little sister. The Weisers live in Chapel Hill, N.C., where Sarah works part-time at Blue Cross/Blue Shield as a research analyst in the Health Economics Research department, and Bill is an analytical chemist with Burroughs-Wellcome Company in the area of drug development, a very hot topic these days. In the spring of 1991, Bill was employed in an exchange program with Wellcome, U.K., and the family lived outside of London in Dartford. Sarah and Bill, and even Caroline, enjoyed their stay immensely, toured the countryside in southeast England, and a bit in France. I'm not sure when they have spare time, but both Sarah and Bill remain active with their music — Sarah

MELFI WINS GRANT

Mary Ann Melfi, a visiting assistant professor of English, has won a $3,000 National Endowment for the Humanities study grant, which sponsors six weeks of study in self-designed projects. For her project, Melfi researched the use of the past in British fiction and composed a reading list of personal and cultural memories of such British authors as Virginia Wolfe, E. M. Forster, Joseph Conrad and D. H. Lawrence. She has been a faculty member at the College for 10 years.

MEDIA SINGS PRAISES OF BIOGRAPHY ON HOLLYWOOD VIRTUOSO

Nancy Shoenberger, an assistant professor of English, and her husband, Sam Kashner, have resurrected a Hollywood legend in their biography of Oscar Levant, titled A Talent for Genius. Levant (1906-1972) was a classical pianist, author, and radio and television personality who was also recognized as the premier interpreter of George Gershwin's music. Together Shoenberger and Kashner interviewed more than 60 people, including Doris Day, Gene Kelly and Lauren Bacall, and traveled to California, New York and Washington, D.C., several times to complete their research. Their book has gained widespread media attention in recent months, including favorable reviews in The Washington Post and The Los Angeles Times as well as appearances by the authors on radio and television programs such as Entertainment Tonight.

HISTORIAN RECOUNTS LIFE OF EARLY ACTIVIST

History Professor Philip J. Funigiello recounts the life of a dedicated social and political activist of the early 20th century in a new biography, titled Florence Lathrop Page. A prominent woman of her time, Page was a life-long activist for the causes of public health and charitable, artistic and educational programs. As the wife of the U.S. ambassador to Italy during World War I, Page was a key provider of assistance and aid to the people of Italy. Funigiello is also the author of Toward a National Power Policy: The New Deal and the Electric Utility Industry, 1933-1941; Challenge to Urban Liberalism: Federal-City Relations in World War Two; and American-Soviet Trade in the Cold War.

COMMEMORATES
ALUMNUS' BIRTHDAY

More than a few nice words were spoken about C. Alton Lindsay '25 on his birthday. On June 3, 1994, Lindsay's 90th birthday, a 233-page biography was released commemorating his many contributions to the community and his life-long work as superintendent in Hampton, Va., public schools. The book, C. Alton Lindsay: Educator and Community Leader, was distributed following a ceremony at the C. Alton Lindsay Middle School. Lindsay came to Hampton in 1927 to become the principal of Armstrong Elementary School; he was appointed superintendent of the city schools in 1942. When Lindsay retired in 1968, the number of schools in Hampton and the budget for public education had nearly tripled.

WATKINS NAMED
DAINABOT
PRESIDENT

H. Thomas Watkins III '74 has been promoted to president of Dainabot Co. of Japan and area vice president of the Asia/Pacific diagnostics division of Abbott Laboratories. Dainabot was formed in 1962 as a joint venture with Dainippon Pharmaceutical Ltd. of Japan and Abbott Laboratories. Watkins joined Abbott Laboratories as a business unit director in the pharmaceutical products division in 1985 and later was divisional vice president of the benchtop systems sector, which designs and produces laboratory instruments. Abbott Laboratories is a worldwide manufacturer of health care products. Watkins is the son of Hays T. Watkins '82 LL.D., former rector of the College.

in the Durham Symphony for the sixth year and Bill with the Durham Civic Choral Society. Sarah did put out a special request for GINNY KIRBY to drop her a line in Chapel Hill — she'd love to hear from you!

Mike Caldwell is wondering where Mark Eversole, Bruce Hatrak and Trisha Flaherty '82 are. He is also looking to get in touch with any Sig Eps or friends from Tyler. Mike can be found in Zachary, La., where he lives with his wife, Marie; son, Ryan, 10; and daughter, Courtney, 5. Mike is the manager of hydrogeological services for RUST Environment and Infrastructure in Baton Rouge. RUST is one of the world's largest environmental assessment and remediation companies. RUST was involved in a remediation project in Guadelajara, the site of the devastating explosion of April 1992, to address subsurface contamination possibly linked to the explosion. The project team was headed by none other than Mike Caldwell!

Tom Morris writes from Long Beach, Calif., where he is director of applications consulting for information resources. Tom had a bit of news from a few others. Bill Grayson lives in Hamilton, Va., and works for British Aerospace, handling contracts with South American clients. Paul Carrazzone lives in Tampa, and works for the Cuban Mission to the U.S. Joel Sternberg, his wife Beverly, and one-year-old son live in Tucson; Joel teaches economics at the University of Arizona. Tom and Bill were two of the lucky few who had front row seats for the Homecoming parade; Bill Vandeventer '81 and his wife, Paula Schoen '81, rented one of the houses in Colonial Williamsburg for the weekend and were joined by Tom and Bill as well as Brian Rubenking '81. They had a blast!

Mike Renforth Jenkins and Pam J. Partain joined more than 80 alumni and guests at this year's Alumni College, held June 24-26 and sponsored by the Alumni Society. The participants came from as far away as California, Oregon and Florida for the event, titled Exploring the Chesapeake Bay II. They hunted for fossils, attended lectures and toured the Bay by boat in an effort to better understand the Chesapeake and the environmental threats to its waters. For information on next year's Alumni College, call the Society at 221-1174.

That's all for now. Again, sorry for missing the last column. For those who haven't written in a while, please be sure to drop me a line! Take care and remember November 3-6! The registration form is in this issue! THE BEAT GOES ON!

At the office recently, I mentioned to a co-worker (a young man named Chris Bartle) that I had gone to William and Mary. He replied that his aunt and several cousins had also attended W&M. As it turns out, his cousin is Sherri Sell Phillips '83, wife of our classmate Buddy Phillips. I placed a call to Sherri and learned that the couple have recently built a new home and are expecting their second child this summer. Congratulations!

Stacy Sterling Robinson wrote to tell me about a new venture. She has started her own business — Elegant Traditions — specializing in antique christening gowns, bonnets, children's dresses, and bibs. These classic clothes are meant to become family heirlooms. Stacy is also very active in the Junior League, serving as co-chair of the "Career Closet." Through this project, the League supplies professional clothing to women in need who are entering the work force. Stacy and her husband have two children: a daughter, 7, and a son, 6.

Another classmate with his own business is Wayne Curtis, whose graphic design firm has grown substantially during the past year. Wayne, who lives in Brookline, Mass., also teaches adult education courses in the area. In addition, for the past four years, Wayne has been singing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra's choir, the Tanglewood Festival Chorus. He has been selected several times to record with both the Symphony and the Boston Pops, and has appeared on Pops television specials. Most recently, Wayne was invited to tour with the symphony. The orchestra and chorus will leave in November for Hong Kong and will also make several appearances in Japan. While Wayne had to replace the expired passport he used for the W&M Choir's 1981 European tour, he is very pleased about this upcoming opportunity.

David Crank, who received his M.F.A. from Carnegie Mellon, is pursuing a successful career in scenery and costume design. David's television credits include American Playhouse and the PBS series Wonderworks. He has also worked in film (Heart of Darkness, Holy Matrimony, and the revival of Lassie) and theatre (Andrew Lloyd Webber's Aspect of Love). David is presently serving as design and technical director for William and Mary.

My freshman RA, Kathy Dolan Bechtold '81, wrote that her brother Skip Dolan is married and living in the Chicago area. Kathy and her husband, who have three children, live in Davis, Calif., where she is director of physical therapy for a local hospital.

Attorney Thomas W. Brooke, practicing with Gadsby and Hannah in Washington, D.C., has been appointed chair of the International Roundtable's Subcommittee of the Forums Committee of the International Trademark Association. The subcommittee coordinates events relating to intellectual property issues in countries around the world. As chair, Tom will work with industry representatives and other lawyers to expand the committee's activities. He received his law degree from Marshall-Wythe in 1990.

Finally, I've learned that Vanessa Boyer has joined the Frito Lay marketing department of PepsiCo in Florida.

You will notice that this issue of the Gazette contains registration materials for Homecoming '94, being held November 3-6. A number of events are planned, and early registration is encouraged.

I hope to hear from more of you soon. Please take a few minutes to drop me a quick note. Thanks.

OK, fellow classmates, it is time to make plans to come to Homecoming. I can not believe it has been ten years since we graduated and there is much to celebrate. So, please make plans to join your W&M friends back in Williamsburg, November 3-6. I will look forward to seeing you there and hearing all of your news that's fit to print! The reunion committee, Fraser Hudgins, chair, Anne St. Clair Woron, Justina Johnson Head, Chris Kontos and I are excited about our class events and we hope that you will join the festivities!

Some fun festivities top the column this issue, including the wedding of David J. Kiracofe to Corina Ruth Ladd on March 19 in Waltham, Mass. They held their reception at the historic Colonial Inn in Concord. After a wedding trip to Maine, they returned home to Waltham, where they are pursuing their doctorates in colonial history and international politics.

Sheryl T. White, CPA, has returned to Surles and Associates Ltd. in Culpeper, Va., where she brings network computer troubleshooting experience along with her strong background in compliance work. Before returning to Surles and Associates Ltd., Sheryl was employed as an accountant with Trenis Inc. After working for Trenis, Sheryl developed her CPA practice in the Warrenton area.

On the military front, Brian Black just returned from a five-month Mediterranean Sea deployment aboard the submarine USS Sand Lance, home-ported in Charleston. While deployed, Brian visited Toulon, France; Naples and La Maddalena, Italy; Monaco; and Gibraltar. Navy Lt. Black was one of 100 crew members aboard the nuclear sub.

While visiting New York City for the Alumni Society board of directors meeting in March, I noticed in the New York Auction program that our own Guy Crittenden donated one of his own paintings (The Homestead) to the big event. Guy is one of W&M's premier painters and is a nationally acclaimed wildlife artist.

One of the happiest events that I know of this spring occurred right here in Charlotte, N.C. Good friends Tom '82 and Dana Disque Hearn '82 joyfully announced the birth of their incredibly good-looking son, William Patton, on April 20. He's going to be another cutie and is already flirting with all the W&M ladies! Congratulations to two wonderful parents!

I don't know what I would do without Jeff Cole. He is one of our most avid contributors to the column and he always thinks to send in news of our classmates. Thanks so much, Jeff for ALL of the following updates! Jeff, Mike Hobbs and Carl Adkins all are looking forward to attending Homecoming!

First, let's hear about Jeff, who is the assistant vice president of the data processing subsidiary of First Virginia Banks Inc. Jeff recently bought a lakefront condo in Falls Church and is renting a room to his brother Brian '92, who also works at First Virginia, as an assistant branch manager in the Tyson's Corner area. Jeff received his M.B.A. from George Mason in May 1993, and worked at First Virginia part-time while he was a student. Jeff celebrated his ten-year anniversary at First Virginia in July and will celebrate his ten-year W&M reunion in November — a big year! Jeff's other brother, Chris '85, lives in Butler, Pa. Chris works at Slippery Rock University as the coordinator of student standards and the Interfraternity Council. Last August, Chris and his wife, Brenda, had their first child, Matthew Austin Cole, who is probably the cutest baby ever born, claims Jeff!

Mike Hobbs is the assistant manager at AMC Theaters at Union Station in D.C., and is living in an apartment in Alexandria. He drove to the Grand Canyon last summer to go sightseeing. Daring Mike rode a mile into the canyon, rode a raft through it, and flew an airplane over it. By the way, Mike hopes to hear from fellow W&Mer Doug Dix.

Richard Hill works for Fannie Mae in D.C. and bought a house in Merrifield last year where he is also renting a room to his brother. Ed Healey is still the financial manager at Greater Southeast Hospital in D.C. and lives in a condo in Alexandria.

Good buddy Carl Adkins lives in Cherry Hill, N.J., and continues to do well as the ambulatory care administrator for the Fox Chase Cancer Center in Philadelphia. He started his own singles club a few years ago, which is still going strong! In fact, kudos to Carl are in order, because 10 couples who met through the club have since married!

Gordon and Mary Trigg MacArthur have just moved back to Chicago from Toronto. Gordon works for Royal Bank of Canada. They have a daughter, Emily, and a son, Cameron, who was born in February.

Joe and Linda Ritter Carroll have two children, Jack, 5, and Ann, 3, and are living in Lynchburg, where Joe is the accounting manager at JAMCO, a company which distributes advertising inserts for newspapers. Fellow Pi Kappa Alpha Al Robinson and his wife, Elaine Bogan Robinson, are living in Leesburg and have two daughters, Kathryn and Stacey. Al works for Allstate Insurance Company and Elaine works for a bank. Al reports (after meeting up in Disney World) that Andrew Lagomasino is married and working as a counselor in the Boston area.

Another PiKA, Rob Lind and his lovely wife, Diane McGimpsey Lind, recently had twin girls, which make three Lind girls (+ Diane!). The Lind family is living outside Boston, Mass., where Rob is a cardiologist and will be finishing school in June 1994. In Atlanta, Paige Boykin Edeburn and her husband had twins just a few days after! Another PiKA doctor is living in Dallas — Greg Hundley and his wife, Kim Staples Hundley. They just sent me a postcard from the wild west — Yellowstone to be exact — where they are vacationing!

Reston is the home of newlyweds Pat Vaughan and Laura Funkhouser. Laura is a teacher and Pat works for LaFarge Corporation. Chris and Wendy McKee Hambleton are living in Burtonsville, Md. Chris works for a family coin store, Kildahls, and Wendy is an accounting manager with Seidman and Seidman.

Tim Steeg adds some extra pizzazz to this edition with the news that he married Lisa Rossman last year in Seattle, after proposing while they were bungee jumping off a bridge! They live in Hailey, Idaho, near Sun Valley, where they bump into Bruce Willis, Demi Moore, Sly Stallone, Clint Eastwood and other celebs on a frequent basis!

Back in the D.C. area, Christine Villar '85 lives in McLean and works in Vienna, after obtaining a master's degree in operations management from George Mason in '93. Mary Ruth Uhrig Phillips '85 also received her master's degree from GMU in operations management in '93 and married Kevin Phillips. They have two children.

Nearby Alexandria is the home of Caleen Norrod, who has become famous for throwing wonderful Christmas parties. She owns a condo and just started a new job with the National Taxpayers Union. Mary Lida '85 also owns a condo in Alexandria and is self-employed.

The D.C. area is home to Gary Bland as well, who has quite a prestigious work address. His office is in the Smithsonian Castle on the Mall. He works at the Woodrow

10TH REUNION

Class notes

Wilson International Studies Center and was married in June 1993.

Chongmin (Jerry) Kim owns a home in Annandale, works as a dentist in Falls Church and married Jun Ji in December 1993.

Bruce Britton and his wife, May, have the most unique housing report in the column. In their home town of Norfolk, they have lived in three different locations on Redgate Avenue! Bruce is a family doctor who works through Portsmouth Family Practice and teaches classes occasionally at Eastern Virginia Medical School. May is working on obtaining an art degree from ODU.

A bit west, in Richmond, is the home of Ron and Lilly Armistead Andrews. Ron is an assistant vice president at Signet Bank, and they recently had their first child. Apollo Leong is working as a family doctor in Midlothian, just outside of Richmond.

Jeff ran into Bob Beckwith at Homecoming last year, and reports that Bob is a stock broker in Key West, Fla. Jeff also saw Brian Cuthrell, who is studying applied history at the University of South Carolina in Columbia. Another student to report on is Ung Lee, who is working toward his doctorate in economics from the University of Chicago. He and his wife, Jae, have one son, Kevin.

The Chicago area is also home to Brad Flecke, his wife, Susan, and daughter, Rachel, who live in the Church of the Brethren Commune in Evanston, Ill. Susan is a nurse in the intensive care unit of a local hospital and Brad continues to practice immigration law. Pete Tantilio, his wife, Carolyn, and son, Kevin, live in Marlton, N.J. Just north of the Tantilios, Jon Leibowitz has made it big as host of the Jon Stewart show on MTV weekdays at 7 p.m. Be sure to tune in!

Another classmate working in the television industry is Dabney Carr, who is the director of properties for the Family Channel in Virginia Beach. Dabney has worked on the TV series Big Brother Jake.

Amy Anderson and her husband, Patrick Bobst, recently moved to Charlottesville. Their first child, Claire, was born in August 1993.

Kevin Corning wrote to say that he and his wife, Casey Sponski Corning '87, became the parents of a baby girl, Emily Claire, in November 1993. They had been living in Evanston, Ill., where Kevin worked for Kraft General Foods and Casey had an organizational development consulting business. They moved to Singapore in July, where Kevin works for Whirlpool as director of consumer marketing. Kevin added, "Please don't hesitate to call if you ever find yourself in Singapore."

Again, very special thanks go to Jeff Cole for providing so much information for this column. Classmates like Jeff make writing this column a treat and really make a difference in keeping up with our many W&M friends!

On a more personal note, I would like to announce that I am turning over the duties of class reporter to my good friend Alison Horrocks Miller. I would like to thank each of you who have contributed during my ten years of service as class reporter. Together, we met every deadline with news from classmates far and near. It has been especially gratifying to me to correspond with each of you who have written or called. I hope you have enjoyed the column as much as I have enjoyed writing it for you.

Greetings to all W&M alums! And how goes life for the Class of 1986? By the time you receive this, another summer will be drawing to a close and it will be time to plan for Homecoming, November 3-6, once again!

Should we start with the baby count? Rebecca Stack Campbell '85 and husband Todd '85 welcomed son Sam into their family last September. Rebecca continues her work as an attorney at Covington and Burlington here in Washington, while Todd is working hard as a doctor. Betsy Tinsley Wood and her husband, Richard, have added another bird to the nest; son Chip was born in December, and joins sisters Caroline and Catherine. Deb Hollen Wallhermfecht and husband Scott are the proud parents of son Michael James, who was born in February. Also making the scene that month was William Louis Sorber; parents Terry and Darby Drew Sorber are thrilled!

Christine Ferguson Myers and husband Tom have entered the exciting (sleepless) world of parenthood. Thomas Wayne Myers Jr. arrived in March and is keeping his parents busy. Baby Tommy is very cute and mom and dad are so happy! Christine is back at work at ATandT while Tom continues as a stockbroker.

Susan Zanetti Harrison and husband Rich welcomed son William Allan Talbot into their home in March as well. Sue and Rich assure me that parenthood is rewarding!

What a wonderful surprise it was to receive a letter from Regina Femminella de Vargas '88 this past May. As part of her master's program at Radford University, Regina studied in the beautiful colonial town of San Miguel de Allender in central Mexico, where she met her future husband! Regina and César Vargas were married in June 1992 in Mexico, and this past spring brought the birth of their beautiful son, Daniel Roberto! Regina and César now live in Santa Rosa Jaurequi, Querétaro, Mexico, where Regina continues to teach high school part time. What a treat to hear from you!

Also born in April was John Ross Wimmer. John Ross joins his 6-year-old sister, Whitney, and parents Mary Katharine Morgan and Johnny Wimmer in Roanoke, where M.K. continues to teach elementary school.

Mary Guzzo and Jeff Nelms welcomed their second son, Benjamin Joseph, into the world in May. Jeff is now in charge of a software development project at AMS here in Virginia, while Mary is enjoying her maternity leave from TRW. Thanks for writing!

Elizabeth Beal Murphy '84, husband Kevin '81 and son Brian have a new addition to their family! Baby Conor James was born on my birthday in May! Elizabeth reports that all are well.

Diane Inderlied Pyle and husband Allen celebrated the birth of son Nathan Andrew in late May. And finally, by the time this reaches you, James Parkman Shuler will have a baby sibling, as Jane Butler Shuler and husband Mike '83 were expecting this summer.

Mia Amaya Kilby wrote to say she now works as an attending fellow in General Pediatrics at The Children's Hospital of Alabama in Birmingham. She and husband Michael (who's also a physician) are enjoying life with their 14-month-old son, Matthew. Mia tells me that Mary Lynn Bowles Fothergill and husband Bobby '87 are living in Petersburg with 17-month-old daughter Erin. Finally, Mia mentioned that Desmond Longford is now a supervising chemist at a Knoxville, Tenn., hospital. Thanks for writing!

As for engagements, Terry Boyle, who just completed her first year of M.B.A. school at the University of Maryland, wrote to say that she and Maryland grad Scott McDougall will be married next May at the University of Maryland's picturesque chapel. Congrats! As for the Yates 3rd Center gang, Terry writes that Marsha Domzalski Hope and husband Chris live near Kansas City, Kan., where Chris works for Sprint. Are you still work-

COCHRAN NAMED

And Other Portraits of People At Play

Saturday, Nov. 5, 10:30-11:30 a.m.

Rizzoli Bookstore

423 W. Duke of Gloucester St., Merchants Square
Williamsburg, VA / 804-229-9821

D'Orso's new book, Pumping Granite, is a collection of stories that probes the lives of people at play. From rock climbing to rodeo, sumo wrestling to slow-pitch softball, and boomeranging to bowling, the sporting life is laid bare in this intimate look at our sports passions and obsessions. It is D'Orso at his best, examining the nooks and crannies of the culture of people at play.

"Mike D'Orso is one hell of a fine writer." -- Alex Haley

If you're unable to attend this Homecoming event, you may order Pumping Granite ($25 plus shipping) from Rizzoli Bookstore, 1-800-727-4282, or directly from the publisher:

Texas Tech University Press

law firm in Williamsburg. Twiford is secretary to the board of governors of the General Practice Session of the Virginia State Bar, and Blanton is president of the Matthew Whaley Elementary School PTA.

LEICESTER PROFESSOR COMPLETES THIRD BOOK

Shearer West '82, a professor of art history at the University of Leicester in England, has just completed her third book, Fin de Siècle, a study of European art at the end of the 19th century. West moved to England after graduating W&M to earn her doctorate at St. Andrews University, and in 1985 she became a British subject.

WOOD NAMED JOHNS HOPKINS DIRECTOR

Sherri Moore Wood '79 has been named director of business and information services in the School of Continuing Studies at Johns Hopkins University. Wood joined the School of Continuing Studies in 1988 as a facilities/equipment coordinator and was later appointed assistant and then associate director of business services. She served most recently as director of student academic support services. In Wood's new position, she will oversee all revenue and expense budgets and direct computer, networking and telecommunications activities for the school.

ALUMNA HONORED BY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Mazie Coggin Sanders '40 has been recognized by the Warsaw/Richmond County (Va.) Chamber of Commerce as Business Person of the Year. After graduation, Sanders was the first instructor of distributive education in Virginia, a program where high school students share time between school and the work place.

ing with the KC symphony, Marsha? Cynthia VanLandingham '87 is a police officer in Richmond, while June Sherry works for AT&T in Silver Spring, Md. Pat McParland works for Dow Jones online information services and lives in Princeton, N.J.

Weddings abound, as always. As of this writing, Celeste Gilbertie and Peter Vodola (a Boston University grad and first-year law student at the University of Connecticut) were planning to be married in July. Celeste continues to work as General Manager at her family-owned business, Gilbertie's Herb Gardens Retail in Westport, Conn., one of the largest growers and sellers of herbs in the country.

Jenny Thompson wrote that Maryanne Kondracki '87 and John Sparks, a Virginia Tech grad, tied the knot last October here in Arlington. Attendees included Paula Goggin '87 and Jean Pommerening '88. The guest list included Carol Kondracki Kerins '81, Caroline Sparks '76, Philip Pommerening '87, Andy and Kaky Spruill Lingle '88, Jeff '85 and Sherry Leigh Gill Hughes '85, Jeff '84 and Diana Heady Huber '87, Tim Hugo, Mary Tod Haley Gray '82 and Jenny Thompson. The newlyweds live in Manassas, Va. Maryanne works for Malcolm Pernie while John works at Atlantic Research.

Polly Gladding also married a Tech grad. She and Jim Stern tied the knot in April on the Eastern Shore. Chris Meily Foreman (who recently returned from a fun European vacation), Jeff Genereux (living in Boston and working for Alan H. Gray and Associates), Ed Holt (now a Planner for Abercrombie and Fitch in Columbus, Ohio) and Jenny Thompson were among the guests. The happy couple recently purchased a flower shop, and I'm told the wedding flowers were gorgeous!

Roy Sauberman and Stacey Mark tied the knot in March in Short Hills, N.J. Stacy, a Boston University grad, is a human resources manager at Bloombetg L.P., a financial and news services information company in New York, while Roy, having earned his medical degree from Yale, is a cardiology fellow at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center in New York.

Belle Crawford McBride '90 and Ryan McBride '92 took their vows in Williamsburg in early May. Bridesmaids included Carolyn Lampe '89, Jennifer Griffin '90, Patty Stanhope Baker '90 (I hear husband Biff '90 was quite the amateur photographer), Annamaria Desalva '90, Mary-Stuart Pearson '90 (who was a bride herself this past June), and Debbie Cerrone '90, while the groom's attendants included, among others, brother-of-the-bride Bill Crawford '88. From what I'm told, after a beautiful ceremony at Bruton Parish, the wedding party were led down Duke of Gloucester Street by a bagpiper, then enjoyed a reception at one of the Williamsburg Inn's colonial homes before seeing the newlyweds off to two weeks in sunny Hawaii.

By the time this reaches you, Bob Lian (a Colby College grad and lawyer here at Akin, Gump) and Jennifer Sage '89 will have taken the proverbial plunge. Bob and Jen's wedding was set for July here in Old Town, Alexandria, and included a two-week honeymoon on the Caribbean islands of Tortola and Barbados. And finally, Linda Habgood '88 and Gary Zanfagna '88 were to tie the knot in Philadelphia in late June. A host of W&M alums were on the guest list for their summer wedding, so I'll fill you in next issue!

Kim Moses Perry wrote to say that she is an actuarial analyst for Hutchison and Associates, Inc., an employee benefits consulting firm in Raleigh, N.C. Kim and husband Danny, who were married last September, have a new home in Raleigh, where they live with their cats. Kim tells me that Janet Sever works for Atlanta Casualty, Debbie Boyles is living in Greensboro, N.C., and Una Brien works for the INS here in Washington. Mia writes that she would love to hear from any of the old ROTC crowd or fellow Chinese students. Drop her a line!

Congrats to Lynn Taber Peters, who earned her master's at the University of Richmond this past May. Lynn and husband Danny recently purchased a home in the Fan section of Richmond.

It sounds as if Beth Clancy has an exciting and interesting job. Beth (whose artwork was recently sold at Christie's!) designed costumes for a production at the Cornish College of the Arts in Seattle this past April. In May, Beth designed costumes for the Pennsylvania Stage Company's production of Lost in Yonkers, which featured none other than Laura Carson '88. I'm sure we'll see Beth earning an Oscar or a Tony for costume design sometime soon!

J. Michael McLeod wrote to say that he's working on a Ph.D. in public administration at Syracuse University, where he's researching self-employment among women and minorities in the U.S. Michael presented a paper in April at a conference in London, and hopes to become a tenured professor of public administration in the future.

Thanks to Scott Coval for responding to my "where-are-you-now" query. Scott sounds like he's doing incredibly well as both the head basketball coach and varsity golf coach at Allentown College, a small liberal arts school in Pennsylvania. Scott lives in Bethlehem, Pa., and encourages any of you passing through to look him up! Many thanks for writing, Scott. Keep up the good work!

Heidi Carr recently landed what she calls her dream job with The Miami Herald. Quite impressive! Heidi, who most recently was the Virginia editor for the Roanoke Times and World-News, where she won a Landmark Award for Excellence in Copy Editing, reports that the Miami weather is wonderful and that she's even managed to get a tan!

Congratulations to Lynn Hale Riggs and husband Billy, who are expecting a baby in December. You'll be wonderful parents! Lynn tells me that she and Billy recently spent a fun weekend in the Big Apple with Margaret Eklind, who is now with American Express and loving it!

Cathy Creekmore Decker says that life in the advertising field in Philadelphia is keeping her busy. Husband Ted '85 is putting his M.B.A. to good use at Scott Paper. Cathy and Ted bought a house in Wallingford, Pa., this past spring and are busily renovating and landscaping. Sutton Stephens Hamlin and husband Jeff are new homeowners as well, having moved back to the Highland Park section of Dallas, where both grew up. Jeff earned his M.B.A. and master's in engineering from M.I.T. in May and has accepted a job with McKinsey and Co. in Dallas. Must be great to be back home with friends and family!

Liese Cochran Mosher '87 recently accepted a new job in the world of public relations with the well-known agency of Powell, Tate. Congratulations! Liese tells me that Alex Cochran and wife Irene have moved back to Germany with the Army and are having a wonderful time.

Doug and Ellen Thompson Brinkley continue to enjoy parenthood. Baby Jack is such a delight, and recently enjoyed his first airplane trip to the Cayman Islands with the Brinkley clan. How was that sand, Jack? Did it taste good?

Julie Wallace Dunn is thriving at The New Yorker while husband Tom '87 is working hard and learning a great deal at Cravath, Swaine and Moore. When are you coming to

Class notes

D.C. for a visit, Julie? Julie tells me that she and Tom spent a fun-filled Memorial Day weekend in California with Mary Kosko Oates and her doctor/surfer husband, Dave. Congrats to Mary on passing her medical boards. Quite an accomplishment!

Congratulations to Tom Noble, who is off to Europe with that famed ad agency, Wieden and Kennedy, where he'll be working in Amsterdam for two years. Lucky you!

As for my "where-are-you-now" query, what are you up to, Alec Murphy, Becky Browning, Dan Scerbo, Betsy Fulcher, and Mark Decker? I'd love to hear from you! Please write and let me know how you've been!

As for me, I finally earned my master's degree in May. Mom and Dad came down for what was a beautiful ceremony and a gorgeous weekend. We all had a wonderful time. Wish me luck with the job search. And please write with any and all advice!

That's all for now. My next deadline is October 28, so please send any and all bits of news before then! Many thanks, as always, to all of you who have written with news. To those who haven't, please write, as I'd love to find out what you're up to! Until the next issue of the Alumni Gazette, stay happy and healthy. Take care!

Hello everyone! I hope your summer is going well. There's not a lot of news this issue (but I hope your summer goes so well that there will be a lot of news for the next issue!), but here it is:

News from the Alumni House:

In April, Susan Campbell began a three-month volunteer term for Habitat for Humanity in Americus, Ga.

Joseph Clark Fisher and Susan Victoria Strobach '89 were married on March 26, 1994, at Wren Chapel. The bride works for J. W. Fergusson and Sons Inc., and the groom works for the American Tobacco Company. The newlyweds are living in Richmond, Va.

Lt. Michael Studeman recently received the Navy Achievement Medal in January. Michael was cited for superior performance of duty while serving at Fleet Ocean Surveillance Information Facility, Naval Station, Rota, Spain. Congratulations!

Lt. Rodney Alejandro recently returned from a six-month Mediterranean Sea and Indian Ocean deployment with the 22nd Marine Expeditionary Unit. Rodney's unit served as part of the USS Guadalcanal Amphibious Ready Group, and, among other things, supported U.N. humanitarian operations in Somalia.

Lt. j. g. Timothy Denby was recently designated a Naval Aviator. Tim was presented with his "wings" after completing months of flight training with Helicopter Training Squadron Eight, Naval Air Station Whiting Field, Milton, Fla.

Laura Carson recently starred in the Pennsylvania Stage Company's production of Lost in Yonkers, with costumes designed by none other than another W&M alum, Beth Clancy '86.

Tom Lewis married Meggan Mitchell on June 26, 1994, at the Walnut Hills Baptist Church in the 'Burg.

William Connolly has been hired as an associate at the law firm of Riker, Danzig, Scherer, Hyland and Perretti in Morristown.

Mary Gallagher writes that she attended two May weddings: Jen Cox '85 married Rick Evans on May 14 in Richmond, Va. Mary said that she spent the weekend at the home of Brian '83 and Kim '85 Eckert Failon, and Dr. Mary Kosko Oates '86 flew in from California on Saturday after taking her medical board exam on Friday. Other Pi Phi's in attendance were Anne Kirk Gensheimer '84, Tracy Sinnott '85, Janice Harrup '85 and Mary Jo Lock '91. Anne's four daughters were the flower girls.

The following weekend, Mary attended the wedding of Eleanor Carroll '89 and Joel Lewin '89 in Long Beach, N.Y. In attendance were Mary's sister Kathy Gallagher '91, Mike Luparello '89, Mary Feltovic '89, Tim and Lauri Gabig Dragelin '89, Megan Holden '91 and Tracie Mertz '89, who was one of Eleanor's bridesmaids.

Mary says that she has been living in New York since graduation and now has a great roommate — her sister! She has been working at Tiffany and Co. for the past several years and has recently started an exciting new position in the Crystal Buying Office.

I heard from Amy Hoyt who said she recently attended the wedding of Tim McEvoy and Carol Kingsley in Georgetown. In the wedding party were Johnnie McGranahan '87, Steve Lewis, Fred Federici, and Anson Christian '89. Among others at the wedding were Catherine Policastro Freiling and husband Paul '87, and Maggie Margiotta.

Sally Andrews is still pursuing her M.B.A. at American University, and will graduate in December.

Dan Scerbo '86 and Cathy Riley Scerbo had a little boy named Sean in June. They are living in New Hampshire, and Kathy is working for John Hancock in Boston.

Leslie Hornaday Hoff and her husband Bob just bought a home in Sterling, Va., and are expecting their first child in the fall.

Renee Snyder is the guidance counselor for a secondary school in Warrenton, Va. She's spending her summer as an Outward Bound instructor.

Well, that's about it for this issue. If we haven't heard from you in a while (or even if we have) please keep those letters, faxes and phone calls coming in and let us know what you're up to! Take care and KEEP IN TOUCH!!

Greetings, classmates! By the time you read this, Tim and I hope to be the proud parents of a baby boy or girl. Our "official" due date is September 15. We've been very busy preparing for this lifestyle change. We moved into a house in May — please note our new address when you send any news — and have a Winnie the Pooh room ready to fill.

It seems that we're not the only ones who are being visited by the stork. Fellow Kappa Deltas Diana Shelles '91 and Jodi Boyce Seitz '89 are also expecting. Jennifer Jones and Jeremy Lowrey '91 J.D. had their first child, Madeleine Rose, on January 13. Jennifer is teaching voice lessons at a studio in Enid, Okla., and Jeremy is practicing law at a small firm in town. They would love to hear from any other alumni in the area.

Class notes

Dana Weittenhiller Maurice and husband Dale had twin boys, Hunter and Blake, this summer. Dana is teaching part-time in the Virginia Beach schools and is enjoying motherhood. Would love to hear from any other moms- or dads-to-be!

Lots of brides and grooms out there as well! Celia Klimock and Andrew Bavier were married on July 30 at St. Bede's Church in Williamsburg. Danielle Collins, Scott Sheldon, Lynne Schutze, Beth Henika, Tom Tomassin, and Cyndi Yackow '89 were all in the wedding. Celia has a master's in public affairs from the University of Texas and is a research associate at the Center for Development Policy in Alexandria. Andy is completing his master's degree in computers at the University of Arizona where the couple is currently living.

Celia also wrote of Beth Henika's marriage on July 16 in Richmond. Beth completed her master's in recreational therapy at VCU.

Leigh Walters and Trey Kelleter married on June 18. Leigh works in the Chesapeake Public Schools, and Trey is employed by Senator George Mitchell.

Catherine Belle Crawford married John McBride '92 on May 7, in Bruton Parish. Jennifer Griffin, Carolyn Lampe, and Annamaria Desalva were all bridesmaids. The bride is a manager for First Union Bank of Virginia in Reston. John is a consultant with CEXEC Inc.

Susan Chapman wed Stephen Howland on September 11 in Annandale. Susan earned a M.S. in gerontology from the University of Southern California and is director of the Center for Successful Retirement in Pasadena, Calif.

Betty Baffer and Henry Wilson were married on May 21, in the Wren Chapel. After honeymooning in Hawaii, the couple returned home to Washington, D.C.

Joyce Flood wrote of her June marriage to James Tuten. Rebekah Jo Brawley Bearse, Al Grant, Mark Scott, and Erik Dutton were all in the wedding party. Kenny Bloom, Mike Bujewski, Kery Wahrsager, Jim Morris, Jim Graham, Sydney Merritt, Maura Cavanagh Dick, Kennon Dick '92, and Aris Bearse '91 were all in attendance. Joyce has completed her M.S. in Nutritional Sciences from Rutgers University. James is a lieutenant in the U.S. Army. They are currently stationed in Nuremberg, Germany.

In case you're wondering, much of this information comes from press clippings, so any additional perspective, names, etc., that you can add is greatly appreciated!

Gabe Halko wrote from her new home in Kalamazoo, Mich., where she is working on her Ph.D. at Western Michigan. She just earned her M.F.A. from Bowling Green University. Gabe was maid of honor for Kimber McCauley '88 who married Nick Helms last September. Kirstin Coffin '88 was also in the wedding party. Marike Van Der Veen '88, Michael Saunders '88, and Vernon Jones '89 all attended the festivities.

Kristin Palm, who is still in Sri Lanka, does a good job of keeping us all updated through long letters produced on her new word processor. Her latest note included a xeroxed copy of her left hand with a rather beautiful diamond ring! She has managed to find an enthralling Brit named Richard Jones who has captured her heart and hand. Plans are still sketchy as the couple jets off around the Far East (so far they have managed to meet in Hawaii, Singapore, London, and Brunei), but they hope to marry next August here in the States.

Fellow Flat Hatter Dave Lasky sent me a sample of his latest BoomBoom comic books from AEON publishers, based in Seattle. His works include BoomBoom Stages, BoomBoom David, BoomBoom Bloom, Ulysses, and Zen and the Art of David Lasky. You, too, can laugh with Dave by writing for a catalog: Box 181, 4505 University Way NE, Seattle, WA 98105. It's worth the dollar!

Dave enjoys hanging with the other comics in Seattle and lives with his girlfriend, LeeAnn, and her cat, Katherine Hepburn. When he's not drawing, Dave's working temp jobs. Several other Flat Hatters are getting Dave's work including:

Martha Slud '92, who is working for the A.P. in Richmond, Becca Fitzgerald, who is publishing in Birmingham, Ala., and Kendrick Goss, who is living outside New York with his wife, Dora, and many cats. Kendrick is also keeping up with his drawing. Thanks for the update, Dave!

John Foubert wrote from the University of Richmond, where he was serving as area coordinator for residence life. He received his master's in psychology at Richmond, and will be starting his Ph.D. in college student personnel administration at the University of Maryland. He someday hopes to be a Dean Sadler!

John wrote that Lane Schonour and Sarah Jane Dressler '91 were married on July 30 in Roanoke. Suzanne Day married Seth Weildreyer (whom she met while at Michigan State) on June 18. Suzanne also served as an area coordinator at the University of Richmond.

Deb Ansbacher wrote to me some time ago — unfortunately I had misplaced the letter in the move, but here is her delayed news! Deb is working with the American International Group. She underwrites management and professional liability for foreign financial institutions. She left for a year of work in London early this year. Hope all is going well!

Deb has been attending many weddings including Sara Olson and Scott Conner and Kelly Coolican and Jim Bedingfield (which included Kathy Caggiano, Christen Laney, and Krissy Lucido '91 in the wedding party).

Spence Cook visited Deb in the Big Apple. He is in the flower business in Norfolk. Deb managed a visit to Charleston, S.C., to see Louis and Kristine Long Nelson.

Deb also wrote that Cameron Baker is working for a law firm in Dallas. Julie Gaydos is working hard, but having fun in Arlington. Kevin and Sam Hancock Collins bought a townhouse and are doing well.

Deb also clarified that she and Annamaria Desalva see each other frequently in N.Y.C., but have not lived together. Annamaria is living in Manhattan, while Deb stayed out on the island! Annamaria is still in PR.

Other career updates... Stacy Colvin was hired by Woods, Rogers, and Hazlegrove in Roanoke. She graduated cum laude from Washington and Lee University where she was the securities editor for the Law Review, vice president of PR for the Women's Law Student Organization, and a member of Phi Delta Phi. Kathleen McCauley was elected notes editor of the Dickinson Journal of International Law this past February.

In addition to preparing for the baby, Tim and I made a trip to New York in June for a wedding reception. We stayed with Doug and Dr. Jennifer-Ashley Lane Hillman. Doug is working at Smith Barney in government bonds. JA received her Ph.D. in social psychology from Adelphi University in May. She was the first person to complete the program in three years! She is continuing her studies in clinical psychology at Adelphi.

They surprised us with a "stork shower." Several W&M friends, including Meg Madoc-Jones, Rob Kreiling, Colin '89 and JoAnn Adrales Ruh '89, Cheryl Lynn Valentino, Jodie Jones '89, Jodi Boyce Seitz '89, Beth Speakman Bortz '91 and Michelle Furman Vecek '89 sent gifts for us. It was great fun opening presents at 1:30 a.m. after a delayed flight!

Homecoming is right around the corner. Details and a registration form are in this issue. Remember to drop me a line after all the festivities! Next year will be our fifth reunion — start planning your trip now!

Hi, y'all! How are things out there in the real world? Please let me know — there are a lot of you that I haven't heard from since graduation. Things are going great for me down South. As you may notice, I have moved again (really HUGE bugs in the last place). After spending the summer back in Virginia working as a law clerk, I have returned to Atlanta to start my second year at Emory Law School. I'm hoping to find time between classes to continue my summer project — inspired by Jeff Davis, I survived my first triathlon last June!

I don't think that I am quite up to speed with Jeff Hough though. Jeff broke the state record running at a 4:40 pace to win the Road Runners Club of America Virginia State 5K Championship last May. Maybe someday....

I keep hearing that there are too many lawyers in the world already, and our class has done nothing to disprove that theory. Kevin (K.) Eberle is only one of several '92 grads that will be one of my future legal colleagues. He is currently at the University of South Carolina. Katie Meighan and Kim Dailey decided to stay in Virginia and are respectively going to U.Va. and George Mason Law Schools. While Daryl Taylor also decided to stick it out in Virginia at Marshall-Wythe, Lisa Harding and Thomas Johnson headed south to North Carolina to pursue their legal studies. Lisa is at North Carolina Central in Durham, and Thomas has finished his second year at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem. Jamie Troy decided to leave Virginia mid-stream — transferring from the University of Richmond Law School to Lewis and Clark in Portland, Ore.

Not surprisingly, Washington, D.C., has been a magnet for budding attorneys. Dave Viscovich, who works part-time at a consulting firm with fellow alum Kathy O'Brien, is starting his second year at Georgetown Law Center. Marcus Jackson is attending law school at Howard University, joining Jane Carpenter, who is in graduate school there.

Chip Smith is studying law at S.M.U. And, as I understand it, John Marcoux has managed to continue his festive lifestyle in New York through his second year at Cornell Law School. Tom Classic has also decided to enter the wonderful world of law but at press time was still undecided as to where he would end up.

Well, now that I'm totally out of space for the rest of the column. ... (Just kidding!) Continuing in the field of higher education, I would like to correct a mistake in my last column — Heather Barton IS in Chicago studying psychology, but is at the University of Illinois. Rob Perks is also heading west to study public policy at the University of Michigan. Julia Bruggemann decided to remain on the east coast after returning from Germany. She is pursuing a Ph.D. at Georgetown.

Vera Mazo has finished her graduate study at the Fashion Institute of Technology and is working in the fashion industry in New York. Seth Bromberger also completed his graduate study, getting an M.S. in computer science at the University of Pennsylvania. He is currently working at the Federal Reserve Bank. Melinda Irwin is almost finished with her graduate study at UNC-Chapel Hill. Leigh Smith '93 is among those who will be starting grad school this fall. She has been accepted at the American University for study in journalism. Christian Powers '93 will begin his graduate studies in architecture at M.I.T. Craig Phillips has abandoned New York for Los Angeles, where he will be attending the University of Southern California's graduate school for film production. Tom Stoudt will be remaining in the Washington, D.C., area to pursue his graduate studies in business at the University of Maryland in College Park.

I received a letter from David Hawkins last May following his engagement to Myriam Kati Fizazi, who is from Casablanca, Morocco. They met at William and Mary while finishing their master's in government. Dave and Myriam plan to be married in the Wren Chapel in October, and Warren Griffith will serve as an usher during the ceremony. Dave also told me that Tim Histen, who is working on his Ph.D. in chemistry at the University of Texas at Austin, and Herb Tobias, who is doing the same at Cornell, are doing great. Don't forget to drop me a line about the reception, Dave.

Scott Mayer and Jake Talmage have managed to combine the world of academia with the necessity of having gainful employment. Scott is working in admissions at Lafayette College in Pennsylvania. Jake is doing the same at the University of Vermont.

As for those people who have entered the rat race full force. ... Neill Wright has risen to the top very quickly. He is the executive vice president at the First Tuskegee Bank in Alabama. David Becher has also entered the world of finance via his job with the Comptroller of the Currency in Washington, D.C.

Don Noone returned from a stint as a wine expert in London to pursue his career in the restaurant business in New York. Cliff Krug works/owns a family moving business in Springfield, Va. He and his fellow W&M alums Whitney Lester '93, Rob Russell, Jason Elliot, Chris Marston '93 and Jay Saunders have formed a softball team in their spare time. Jason is still happily married to a fellow grad, the former Holly Bienia. They just celebrated their second anniversary.

Kristin Wilderotter is close by in Northern Virginia. She is doing very well in her job at Allnet Communications in Arlington. Having moved halfway across the country from Washington, D.C., Matt Stearns is working for SEI Information Technology outside of Chicago. Matt's company sells computer programs which allow your car to give you directions. Neat, huh? Karin Brower and Daria Comuzzi have also relocated. They live near each other in Philadelphia. Karin is living with Kim Lannon '93, and is coaching and playing for an all-American lacrosse team. Erik Brandt went a little further afield to pursue his career in professional athletics. He is playing pro basketball in Japan in the recently-organized Asian Pro Basketball League. He went to Japan to teach English, but his height made him stand out. He was spotted by a Japanese coach and recruited for the league.

Jon Baron, on the other hand, has decided to remain in Williamsburg and is working on becoming quite politically active in Richmond. Jon Birdsall and his wife, Betsy Carroll Birdsall, are also living in Williamsburg, busy raising their son. Adrian Rich has a little girl. He and his wife, Tylis, are getting ready to celebrate her first birthday this November.

Doug Ketterer dropped me a short note a couple of months ago. He is living in

During World War II, Saunders became the acting postmaster in Warsaw. In 1949, she purchased Coggins Furniture Company, which she has owned and operated for the past 55 years.

ALUMNI JOIN UNIVERSITY STAFF IN CHICAGO

Alumni often return to Williamsburg for reunions with classmates, but now the William and Mary family is growing on yet another college campus. Michael T. Kelly '89 Ed.S., '91 Ed.D. was recently promoted to associate dean of student affairs and director of the Office of Student Judicial Affairs at the Chicago campus of the University of Illinois. Kelly then brought on Elizabeth Yarger '90 as the new assistant to the dean. Kelly also has recently completed a monograph on choosing college or university presidents titled Improving the Residential Search and Selection Process. The book is based on research Kelly conducted while a doctoral student at William and Mary.

DIEHL NAMED BANK DIRECTOR IN VIRGIN ISLANDS

Larry Diehl '74 has been named director of the banking and insurance division of the U.S. Virgin Islands. A graduate of Dickinson School of Law in Carlisle, Pa., he had been counsel to the banking and insurance committee of the Pennsylvania Senate until his recent appointment. In making the announcement, Virgin Islands Lt. Gov. Derek Hodge cited Diehl's legal training and "extensive background with insurance legislation." Diehl said that in his new position he hopes to initiate an organized system of regulations for the statutory law of the Virgin Islands.

ACCOUNTING FIRM PROMOTES ALUMNUS

Harold G. Martin Jr. '79 has been named director of the Virginia Litigation and Claims Services Group for Coopers & Lybrand. Martin is a certified public accountant and specializes in providing consulting services to law firms and their clients for litigation involving financial, accounting and economic issues. Coopers & Lybrand is one of the world's leading accounting and consulting firms and employs 67,000 professionals in over 700 offices worldwide.

SOUTHERN NAMED TO HOSPITAL BOARD

Ana Maria Smith Southern '81 has been appointed to the Children's Seashore House board of trustees. Children's Seashore House is a regional teaching hospital that provides specialized care to children with physical and developmental disabilities and chronic illnesses. Southern is a senior vice president of Corestates Bank, a subsidiary of CoreStates Financial Corporation. She manages the sales and marketing unit and is a member of the Philadelphia and national Treasury Management Association.

PATENT-PENDING DISCOVERY

The collaborative efforts of two William and Mary alumnae may not only revolutionize the aircraft industry, but also earn the two a patent. Patricia McDaniel '94 Ph.D and Joy Bryant '94 Ph.D, two graduates from the applied science graduate program, are working together to acquire a patent for McDaniel's doctoral project. McDaniel did most of her student work in the labs at the NASA Langley Research Center in Hampton, where she helped to develop a strong lightweight material that may someday be used in the construction of airplanes. McDaniel turned to classmate Bryant for assistance with the patent. Bryant, who spent two years in the patent section of the Falls Church, Va., at 7103 Norwalk Street (ZIP = 22043) and working for Mobil Oil. He and fellow alums Greg Miller, Andy Stephenson and Steve Reed hope to start a '92 alum group to celebrate Grand Illumination. They want everyone to join them at the Cheese Shop at 1 p.m., the Saturday of Grand Illumination.

Perhaps, Charity Kirby and Phil Sharkey will plan their wedding at St. Bede's to coincide with this celebration of the Christmas season. Charity and Phil recently got engaged and should be married sometime soon.

Matt Peterson and Meredith Sund are another '92 couple who plan to tie the knot in the very near future. Their wedding should take place sometime this month. Shannon VanHook met her new husband, Neil Harris, while pursuing her Ph.D. in chemistry at N.C. State. Shannon and Neil were married in Burlington, N.C., in August.

James Slaughter and his bride, Christee Lynn Barger, exchanged their wedding vows last May. James attends the Cumberland School of Law in Birmingham, Ala., where the couple are living.

Corey O'Brien '93 and Jennifer Zinn were married at Graves Mountain Lodge in the mountains of Virginia on May 21st. Amy Stackhouse and Yoram Sussmann were among those in the wedding party. Two months later, Corey and Jennifer returned the favor as Amy and Yoram were married in Boston during July. Amy and Yoram are entering Ph.D. programs at the University of Maryland at College Park this fall. Amy will study English, and Yoram is in the computer science program.

Shanna Verma and Wes Kautzmann '91 celebrated their first anniversary last July. Shanna is in her third year at Eastern Virginia Medical School in Norfolk. Fellow alums Karen Broyles, Lara Wheeler, Steve Capizzi and Tom Hollandsworth are among her classmates at EVMS.

Andrew and Kathy Kuhler Skinner are also about to celebrate their first anniversary. Kathy and Andrew are still in Texas, where Andrew is working at Fort Hood as an executive officer for a tank company in the Army. Kathy is employed by a local hospital where she works in the finance department. Mij Holm and Morgan Phelps are also stationed at Fort Hood. They got engaged over last Christmas and should be married sometime this month.

While I did spend a great deal of time working this past summer, I did get to travel some. I only wish you could get frequent flyer miles for driving/riding in a car. Over Memorial Day weekend, I headed to Harrisonburg, Va., to visit my ex-roommate Nancy Wood, who is quickly approaching the end of her graduate studies at J.M.U. While there, Nancy, Liliana Roman and I were only a few of the many W&M alums at brother and sister Shannon '93 and Sean Malone's pig roast. We had a lot of fun talking to Sean about his graduate study in bug science at Virginia Tech. Sean really enjoys his program, but he seems more interested in perfecting his fishing techniques. One reason for the party was to celebrate Shannon's acceptance into physical therapy school at Shenandoah State.

I am sure you have already made plans for Homecoming in November. If not, this Gazette will have all the info you need to get moving. While I'm sure you think it won't be as big a deal as last year, I understand they have a lot of events planned. I hope to be there, so look for me to give me all your gossip for my next column. My next deadline is in late October, so don't forget to keep writing. Thanks.

By the time most of you receive this, your first issue of the Alumni Gazette as full-fledged alumni of the College, most of you will have already recovered from the shocking truth that the days of college are no longer. Hopefully that isn't such a bad thing after all.

Most of us have plans of one sort or another — jobs, travel or grad school. But, regardless of your locality, I encourage you all to make the trek to Homecoming '94 and keep strong ties with the College and your classmates. And, if you miss the classroom atmosphere so desperately after just a few months of freedom, you can register for a session or two of the Academic Festival. Be sure to visit the tent on the Alumni House Front Lawn, and get ready to cheer on the Tribe as they battle it out against Maine at Zable Stadium on Saturday, Nov. 5.

News this issue is sparse due to my being completely away from reality since beach week. Mail is slow getting here to the Outer Banks of North Carolina, and the deadline for this issue arrived just days before I realized that I was in fact the official reporter for the Class of 1994.

Many classmates have made their way up to the William and Mary haven of Washington, D.C. Catherine Clifford landed a job on the Hill with her congressman from Chapel Hill, N.C. She loves her work and has settled into an apartment with Cathy Russell, who is also employed in D.C. The two of them spend free time with Jenny Burke, who is working in Rosslyn for USA Today.

Somewhere in Northern Virginia are other classmates — Colin Moore, Michelle Milich, Tim Curran and many others. Drop me a line and let me know what is new in your lives.

Sue Engel is also employed in D.C. She is working for Peterson Consulting and has sent word that she absolutely loves it. In her free time she is training for a marathon and playing volleyball and football with friends. She has also started gardening in her spare time. Life in the big city is treating Sue well.

The biology department had a lot of exciting news to share about its grads. Aaron Reeves will be attending graduate school in the biology department's botany program at Colorado State University. Betsy Larsen is working as a wrangler and trail guide in Rocky Mountain National Park. Christina Nyhus will be leaving for Mauritania in northwest Africa for a Peace Corps stint in a disease control program after she spends the summer guiding trips in Alaska. Karyn Kolman is spending a year in Israel working in ecology, and Heather Wood has plans to teach elementary school, either in Warsaw, Poland or Virginia. Have you selected yet, Heather?

Erica Dearstyne is entering the environmental toxicology graduate program at Oregon State University. Hugo Valverde has a one-year internship in tropical small farm agriculture and gardening with Educational Concerns for Hunger Organization at Fort Meyers, Fla. In the fall of 1995 he will be studying environmental management at Duke University.

Amy Thompson will begin Ph.D. work in the department of molecular biology at Princeton University. Her interests are to research genetics and developmental biology. Christopher Sharp has a fall internship at the Cetacean Research Unit in Gloucester, Mass. He plans to apply to graduate programs in marine/estuarine/coastal biology and ecology for fall 1995.

Christine Warren will serve as fertility researcher at the Howard and Georgeanna Jones Institute for Reproductive Medicine in Norfolk. Lori Chaffin will be doing medical research at either Johns Hopkins or the Oklahoma Medical Research Foundation before applying to medical school, and Kristin Gould will be working in a molecular genetic laboratory in the department of embryology at the Carnegie Institution in D.C. and applying for medical school.

Cynthia Vanson will become a laboratory specialist in the department of toxicology at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond. Joining her are Lakeita Smith as a med student and Jay Bukzin as a dental student.

Other med school attendees include: Kelly Butler, Christopher Alan Marek and Seth Roberts, who will be attending U.Va. Kristen Albright will also join them on a Health Professions Scholarship from the U.S. Navy. Eastern Virginia Medical School-goers include: Erin Doherty, Shannon Miller, Adrienne Leigh Prestridge, Michelle Trabert, and Erik Schobitz (rumor has it that Erik is planning to tie the knot). Congratulations!

Out-of-state grad school attendees include: Karyn Stocks (Univ. of Pittsburgh Medical School), Lance Hoffman (University of Nebraska Medical Center), Brice McKane (University of San Antonio Medical School), Leanne Yanni (SUNY Health Center at Syracuse), Victoria Currall (Georgetown University Medical School), Eric Cairns (California College of Podiatric Medicine in San Francisco).

Mark Takata will be studying marine biology for a year in Washington, Jamaica and Massachusetts under the East/West Program offered by Northeastern University. Adrian Felts hopes to find employment at the National Institutes of Health and Patricia Houston is looking to start working on a master's in genetic counseling.

Travis Sipe is studying as a grad student at the College and working as a teaching assistant in the biology department.

That's about all the news I have to update you all on right now! I myself have been working in the promotions and advertising department for Ferguson Enterprises Inc. since July. I spent the first portion of my summer driving the bar cart on Nags Head Golf Links and truly enjoying the freedom from College.

I wish you all the best and hope that all of the aforementioned plans that you have come to a pass. Please write and let me know how you all are doing and keep me updated on your futures. See you at Homecoming!

MINER CARL ANDREWS '27 of Roanoke, Va., died June 9, 1994. As editorial editor of the Roanoke World-News for nearly 25 years, he crusaded for change in Roanoke and challenged Virginians and residents of the Roanoke Valley to be progressive in outlook—especially in the improvement of park lands, upgrading public schools, building roads and complying with the U.S. Supreme Court's initial school desegregation decree. He was instrumental in Roanoke's honor as an All-America City in 1952. After Andrews' retirement, he continued to encourage the development of tourist facilities, including a restaurant on Mill Mountain, and was chairman of Mill Mountain Development Committee. Commissioned by the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce to write a biography on Gov. Mills E. Godwin Jr.'s first term, Andrews authored No Higher Honor. He was a founding member of the National Conference of Editorial Writers, president of the Roanoke Rose Society and a leader of the Roanoke Rotary Club. An active member of the First Presbyterian Church, he sang in the church choir for 55 years. A Phi Beta Kappa graduate of William and Mary, Andrews was a member of the Men's Honor Council, Pi Delta Epsilon journalism fraternity and the Debate Council. He also participated in track and joined the YMCA, Omicron Delta Kappa, the Phoenix Literary Society, Phi Kappa Tau fraternity, the Student Association and the Interfraternity Council. He belonged to Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity and was editor of the Flat Hat. As an alumnus, Andrews served on the Board of Visitors, was a member of the Society of the Alumni Board of Directors and was awarded the Alumni Medallion in 1943. '93 ALUMNUS WRITES MONITOR ARTICLE

Lukas Haynes '93 is the co-author of an article on the United Nations that appeared in the July 5, 1994, issue of the Christian Science Monitor. Titled "The UN Needs a 'Fire Brigade' to Douse Regional Conflicts," the article discusses the need for a UN quick-response force to stop low intensity-conflicts before they rage out of control. The article points to Rwanda where 300,000 people had died in two months of civil war while United Nations efforts to send troops to stop the fighting were paralyzed by lack of resources and bureaucracy. Haynes, who majored in international relations, is a paid intern at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. He will enter Oxford University in England this fall to pursue his doctorate.

GOOD ADVICE: BERGIN NAMED NATION'S TOP SCHOOL COUNSELOR

James J. Bergin '74 Ed.D. of Statesboro, Ga., has been named the nation's "Post Secondary Counselor of the Year" by the American School Counselor Association.

Professor and chair of the department of student development programs at Georgia Southern University, Bergin was nominated for the award after winning top honors in Oklahoma where he was a professor at East Central University and chaired a task force to require K-12 counseling in all public schools in that state.
