Greetings

If this, the eighteenth volume of the Colonial Echo,
contains certain memories
which, in the twilight days of life, will carry us back to the scenes of our Alma Mater; if it embodies those remembrances which we hold dear;
if it shall serve to kindle the fire of recollection which we would treasure,
then we have not labored in vain

Dedication

To the Mothers, Wives, Sisters, Daughters, and Sweethearts of those sons of William and Mary who gave all they had that freedom might not pass from the face of the earth, this volume is reverently dedicated.

 $\mathbb{U}$

"O combien d'actions, combien d'exploits célèbres Sont demeurés sans gloire au melieu des ténèbres, Où chacun, seul témoin des grands coups gu'il donnaît, Ne pauvuit discerner où le sort inclinait!"

To Our Alumni

Ye loyal men; ye loyal men,
Our elder brothers all,
Our Alma Mater yearns again
To hear your footsteps fall.
Each life has left its impress here,
As ye departed year by year.
We love the mother that ye knew,
We con the tasks that ye once learned,
Our youthful hearts like yours have burned,
With love as warm and true.

We love to dwell on ancient days,
Our hearts they do inspire,
For thee we sing our song of praise,
Yea, high, and even higher.
Great sons are thine, our mother kind,
Great men of hearts, great men of mind.
Thrice hath our Nation called a son
To guide the glorious ship of state;
We bide our time; we watch and wait,
To give another one.

Though death hath stricken with its darts
The good and great of thine.—
Yet sturdy sons and loyal hearts
Still worship at thy shrine.
Each chosen son hath filled a place
Which time nor memory can efface;
Another host goes forth each year
So strong, so tender and so true,
Come home again, ye sons, renew,
The love ye hold so dear.

WILLIAM HURD BOYER

- ¶ Here is a curler of the "old time" type, a chap who has wrung a degree from the obstinate faculty in three college years. His record is one to be proud of, as he has only three "C" credits chalked up against him and the majority of his work is in the "A" class.
- ¶ Boyer, we are proud of you as a student and are sure if hard work and determination bring success, you cannot fail. Our only regret is that we have not been able to know you better, for your books have been too much your friends.
- The senior class of 1920 and your Alma Mater expect much of you and hope for you a future filled with happiness and success.

JULIAN ARLINGTON BROOKS

¶ Gentlemen, we invite your attention to an all-round college man. "Judy" has proved to us that there may be exceptions to the usual opinion that one is never found who possesses the combinations of an athlete, a good student, and a literary man. He has displayed wonderful abilities in all these lines during his sojourn with us. Although small of stature, he is a Hercules in every branch of athletics. His A's on the Registrar's book speak enough for his mental abilities. It is rumored that "Judy" is considering the possibilities of entering politics as soon as Woman Suffrage seems assured. He is known to possess those peculiar qualities that make a man acceptable to that sex, so we predict a wonderful success for him in his new adventure.

JAMES DURETTE CARNEAL, JR.

- ¶ Although J. D. has left us at the time of this writing, yet his influence for good is still among us. Having secured his Bachelor of Arts degree in February, he has now launched into the great world of business. If he goes after his business as he did after good things while in college, we have nothing but the highest hopes of his ultimate success.
- ¶ This youngster took part in all college activities while in college, and everything he attempted, he did well. Many organizations and publications can proudly claim him as a member of their staffs or as a business manager. Amid all his duties, he always found time and opportunity to assist in any literary attempt around college.
- ¶ Among the "femmes," no explanation of Carneal's standing is needed. He is always found among them and can draw them to him by his magnetic powers. However, he never allowed this to detract from his college duties, and hence we find him taking his degree in the short time of three years.
- I Carneal, we expect a great deal of you; march on and don't disappoint us.

JOHN ROBERT CHAPPELL, JR.

Chappell blew into our midst just three years ago and in June he leaves us with his sheepskin tucked carefully away. We are hardly surprised, for any man who can grab "ads" for "THE FLAT HAT" with the ease that he does, would consider sticking Λ.Β. after his signature in three years time a small task. As soon as he had registered in his Freshman year, he joined the literary society and ever since his voice has rung throughout the Halls of the Phoenix. She now claims him as her "prexie." In his "duc" year, Chap won the right to represent W. and M. in the State Oratorical Contest. He didn't win, but he made a good attempt. In the classrooms Chappell is a twister, and on the campus he is known and tiked by all. The class of '20 considers itself lucky in being able to claim him among her members. We know he will succeed, and wish him good luck.

WALTER HUGHART CHEATHAM

- ¶ Now there is no connection between the face of the Charlie you see on this page and that Charlie whose name is posted in flaming colors on the front of every movie theatre, and for many weeks no such connection was formed on the campus. But one day there appeared on the upper lip of the above gentleman a growth of fuzz, the beginning of a moustache. Then and there the wireless flashed through the mind of every student on the campus, "Charlie Chaplin," and it stuck.
- ¶ But seriously, the senior class of 1920 expects great things of its black-haired President. An ability to lead men, a keen and energetic mind, backed by a cherry hail-fellow-well-met are characteristics which must carry him to the summit of success. And his accomplishments in college very strongly verify such a prediction. His numerous activities attest his interest in affairs surrounding him and a mountain of A's in the registrar's office deny any imputation that he has neglected his classes.
- ¶ A character strong as Gibraltar and a heart that is the truest of the true are qualities that will ever win him friends. Here's to you Charlie! But live up to what the senior class expects of you and William and Mary will have an alumnus before whom the world must bow in reverence and respect.

EDGAR LINWOOD CONNELLEE

- ¶ Here's the boy from the land of the Rappahannock, and a fellow worth knowing to be sure. Few men indeed have made more friends and done more good, sincere work than this light haired lad.
- ¶ Connellee believes there is a time for work and a time for play, and he knows how to do both very well. Steady, calm, always in full possession of himself, he is a man to be admired and trusted. When anyone wants anything done, he may readily call on this gentleman, for he is ever ready and willing to lend a helping hand. This characteristic has gone a long way towards making him many friends.
- ¶ Our friend formerly was quite a star among the "femmes," but for some reason, perhaps known only to himself, his pursuits have ceased to lead him in that direction. We trust that his estrangement will not prove fatal and hope to see him soon back at his old habits. But whether he returns or not, we predict for him a life of success and distinction.

ROBERT WATSON COPELAND

- ¶ We present, herewith, the ladies man of the class of '20, "Copie." Doubtless, if you were to ask him for his candid opinion of co-education, you would get a favorable reply. There's a reason! He is one of our most frequent intruders of Tyler Hall.
- ¶ Besides being a ladies man, he is an athlete of no little ability; he won considerable fame on the gridiron the past season.
- ¶ "Copie" is a quiet, unassuming fellow, who generally gets what he goes after. He answered Uncle Sam's call and was commissioned a first lieutenant in the regular army. After being released from the service, he came back to College for two reasons: first, to play football; second, to get his degree. Since he has attained his two ambitions he is ready to leave us.
- ¶ Go, Copie, success is yours.

WILLIAM WILKENS FARMER

The bearer of the above cognomen is better known as "Gric" on the campus. He has been with us so long that we cannot see how the College is going to do without "Gric" Farmer. Farmer is an ex-teacher of the Virginia young. Although he had gotten a good start in this profession, he returned to college this fall to acquire the coveted B.A., degree, which he has striven so long for, by curling the professors, and thus making them realize that the crimson dome which he possesses is only a shield of a large quantity of gray matter. "Gric" bears the reputation of being the only married man in the class, but this fact does not keep him from being a loyal son of the College, and a man that the class of '20 is proud of.

HERBERT SMITH FENTRESS

¶ We are all willing and glad to admit that we know "Specks." He is the kind of man who it is a pleasure to meet, an ever-increasing joy to know, and a source of deep regret to part with. "Specks" has always been prominently associated with all phases of college life. He is an all-round athlete and pronounced by a member of the fairer sex as, "the best looking man in a football suit," that she had ever seen. Never think, however, that all of "Specks'" activities have been confined to the college. There are many who will tell you this and "Specks" himself might be forced to admit it. We all feel that in losing "Specks" we lose one of the best all-round men we have ever known and a gentleman in the highest sense. We wish him all the success which we think he deserves, and look forward to hearing great things from him.

VAN FRANKLIN GARRETT, JR.

¶ Ladies and Gentlemen: We have before us the petite figure of Van Franklin Garrett, Jr., better known around the campus as Van. He is the ladies' man of the class. Ask anybody around Tyler Hall if they know Van. He is hard to know, but once you know him you feel that he is well worth knowing. When it comes to pulling down A's in his classes, he is right there. We entertain no fear as to his future success. Here's to you, Van. We predict for you a future filled with happiness and prosperity. Don't get discouraged because you are small, for smaller men than you have often moved great mountains; we are sure of your success.

MAJOR McKINLEY HILLARD

¶ Here comes Major McKinley, who is widely known on the campus for his achievements in pedagogical research. In other activities in which he has taken a spirited part, he has easily reached the summit. Hillard is a gentleman and an inspiration to all those who come in contact with him, and he is welcomed all over the campus as generous, well met fellow. Hillard, may your future be as bright as your past, and may you add glory and prestige to the class of '20. You are able to give a good account of yourself, so why not launch out in the great business of life. We feel sure you can do all any son of William and Mary is called upon to do.

CLAUDE ALEXANDER JOYCE

• We would like to dub him the "grind" of the Senior Class, but for the fact of his natural ability in the mental line. The seriousness and earnestness with which he started on the road to his degree stamp him a thorough and not-to-be-dismayed man in all he undertakes. While diligent and industrious in all the many activities that claim his efforts here at William and Mary, he has ever a winsome smile which displays a row of pearly teeth for any who chance his acquaintance. His specialty is logic. And his reasoning on any matter is of the best: hence the rush he gets in answering many important questions pertaining to all phases of student life. Above all he is a true and loyal Indian, and that places him above reproach. He won't tell us "her" name, but we have the "goods" on him in the evidence of his numerous letters. Joyce, you have proved your worth to us. It is only left for the world to know your good qualities as we do.

HENRY MARTIN LEWIS, JR.

- ¶ Behold the gentleman who hails from Lynchburg. He is a science shark and a debater as well as an athlete. During his stay at William and Mary, he has stored away as many A's as any man of the class. Curling seems to have become chronic with him, although he frequently takes time to visit Tyler Hall. Lewis is a typical Virginia gentleman, possessing a high code of morals as well as a "Little Age." He has an inexhaustible supply of knowledge forever on hand and can use it to good effect. He has had experience in everything from military tactics to teaching, and success is his wherever he goes.
- ¶ Lewis, the class of '20 is honored to claim you, and is expecting great things of you.

JOHN CORIDEN LYONS

- ¶ John C. swooped down upon us three and a half years ago from the wilds north of the Mason Dixon's line, and in that brief time we have almost transformed him into a real Virginian. He didn't come to us that cold February night with any blowing of horns, but it didn't take the Faculty long to realize that a mighty curler was among them, and they were compelled to solemnly decree that A was his regular mark, and no deviation from that standard has been noted. To impress these facts upon the public he has been known to reach up and pull down one of those coveted scholarships, and it is not a wild prediction that he is fulfilling the requirements for another. □
- ¶ Aside from his conquest of faculty, French verbs and an unfaltering pursuit of biological facts through the study of catalog, no one can predict the outcome of his teachings when the girls are heard to say "Plus je le connais, plus je l'aime." He, with others, is also a past master in water tossing.
- ¶ Here's to you, J. C., an agreeable companion, a good friend, and a student par excellence!

RAYMOND SISSON

- ¶ Here we have a fair-haired, blue-eyed Senior who has come to us from the quiet seclusion of the Rappahannock valley. A man of the calm, unruffled type with a genial smile for all he meets; but that he can frown as well was proved when he sailed across the sea to help France wipe off the sort of smile he does not like from the face of von Tripitz.
- ¶ Fighting Germans was not the only thing he did in France. He learned some things as well, and when Professor Williams wanted some one to help him teach his French, he called on Raymond. His best friends have heard a good deal about the many excellent traits of the French people from him, and he is particularly fond of expatiating upon the virtues of a certain little Madamoiselle "somewhere in France."
- ¶ He is also chairman of the local post of the American Legion, and introduces the illustrious speakers, who come to address them, with consummate ease.

HOWARD CHANDLER SMITH

- ¶ "Smittie," or "Dimples," one of our frizziest curlers, and the idol of many a fair one's heart, came to us three years ago, and has proved that he can twist by taking a degree in that short time. As for the idol part of this brief biography, one glance at his dimples, his never failing smile, and an earful of his mountain dialect, are obviously enough to set any sweet young thing's heart acrobating. Howard, as his family call him, has the face of an angle, but "bum—bum—you'd be surprised."
- ¶ He had the honor of managing the championship nine of 1919. It was largely due to his efficient leadership that the team enjoyed such a successful career.
- ¶ "Smittie" can get down to work and do more in a short while than most people, and due to this, we are looking for great things from our classmate at Johns Hopkins, where he expects to take an M. D.
- ¶ The class of 1920 wishes you luck, "Smittie," and may you be a second Alexis Carrell.

DAVID GARDINER TYLER

- ¶ Behold the likeness of one of the illustrious sons of William and Mary! Gardiner came to us four years ago and entered the "Royal Road to Learning."
- ¶ "Judge," by which he is best known about College, is a great "ladies' man." His love stories are thrilling and you have only to consult him in order to be convinced. Besides making many "hits" with the ladies, "Judge" has succeeded in wresting a degree from William and Mary.
- ¶ "Judge" is prominent in literary circles as well as in many other college activities. His record shows many A's and B's to his credit. Without him, Calculus (?) and Physics would feel lost. He is a "shark" in these subjects and is well known to the professors in charge. "Judge" is ready to stand up for Newton's Theories in spite of the encroachment of one of Kaiser Bill's subjects.
- ¶ In his graduation, William and Mary will lose an energetic student, who will be missed on all sides. You can depend on him. He is loved and admired by the Faculty as well as his fellow student, and above all, loves his Alma Mater.
- ¶ "Judge," the class of '20 is proud of you and has reason to expect great things of you. But in bidding you "au revoir" we can never forget you.

ROBERT PERRY WALLACE

- ¶ Robert Perry Wallace, better known as "Fats," hails from Hampton and there they have a right to be proud of him. He came here in 1914, and has been an important person at this institution since that time.
- ¶ From his first year he has stored up A's for the reckoning day. Besides, he has proved his ability as an athlete: The football team claims him as its "Stonewall," and the basketball team claims him as its star.
- ¶ In 1917, "Fats" answered his country's call. Besides a student and an athlete, he proved a real soldier. He was formerly a member of the famous 29th Division and showed ability as a military tactician, winning a commission in the United States Army. He returned to this institution again in 1919. In the classroom he has been a "curler," in athletics, a prominent figure, and at Tyler Hall an ardent admirer. A student, athlete, soldier and gentlemen are the qualities possessed by this figure.
- ¶ "Fats," the class of 1920 is proud of you as its member, and we are expecting great things of you.

History of Class of 1920

RUE history, it has been said, cannot be written until time rolls into years and years into centuries. The deeds of Washington and the life of Lee are probably more appreciated today than they were in the years of their own lives. But the deeds and accomplishments of the class of 1920 need no centuries to brighten the record which they have established here during the four years of their work.

Year after year historians have meted out the merits of their classes. They have extolled their virtues and labored on their accomplishments. And fellow classmates, we can justly be proud that they have not exaggerated their powers nor painted too bright a picture of the things they had done and could do. For the history of William and Mary needs no corroboration from the pen of a historian so humble to prove the record of her sons.

Theoretically, the history of the class of 1920 dates back to the year 1916, when about ninety-five green, shapeless individuals timidly affixed their names to the registrar's book in the office of Mr. Bridges. Every possible specimen of humanity was represented in that class, known more commonly as "ducs," though perhaps the farmer boy held the majority. 'Twas his lot to draw the heaped-up utterances of ridicule, for his every action stamped him as the greenest product his father had ever shipped.

At the beginning of our second year we entered the gates of the campus as revengeful Sophs. We had made one round in the ladder of college life. And we assumed an attitude of all-importance to the "crystals of ignorance" who were just entering the path along which we had so recently passed. One fact was clearly proved at the beginning of our second year in college: that there is no royal road to education was evidenced by the decrease in our numbers.

Just as we had been transformed from a green and innocent Freshman to a hard and revengeful Sophomore, so from this same Sophomore we returned the following year as solemn and serene Juniors. We had viewed now our more exalted classmates for three years. We had seen them reach the goal of their present endeavor and sail out into the sea of life, eager to pass over its unknown depths. They had imbued in us aspirations which should have for us their fulfillment when the month of June rolls into its own.

And here we are at the acme of our college career, proud and dignified Seniors. Through the four years of our stay here, we have, as classes do, decreased. War and what not have thinned our ranks to our present number of nineteen. But with an insatiable ambition burning within us we have each succeeding year renewed and redoubled our efforts in the direction of our aim.

COLONIAL ECHO-1920

Part of our history is veiled in a cloud of uncertainty, and perhaps, better it were, for some of the thoughtless deeds of our infancy here at William and Mary would not elevate us in the esteem of those most sagacious of mortals, the dispensers of degrees. Throughout, our record shows that we have not centralized in any one branch of college activity. We have been characterized by a spreading influence into every phase of college life. And in this our Senior year we had four men on the football eleven, with many aspirants: one on the basketball team; and a reserved estimate that at least two of our number will grace the baseball team in the spring. This speaks well for an athletic record. We have the editor-in-chief, with three on the staff of the Colonial Echo; the editor-in-chief of our weekly, The Flat Hat with two on the staff; editor-inchief of the Literary Magazine, and officers in both literary societies; a prestige which any class may well be proud of in the literary circle of any school. Then we have managers of teams, presidents and officers of many clubs, teachers and assistant instructors, married men, near-married men, preachers, bull artists, crap artists and artists ad infinitum. We do not boast of a class of "curlers," but our marks in general, have shown that we are a bunch of equals, with a possible few rising slightly above the average, and a minimum few falling below it. Our class would not be in accord with those of former years if it could not boast of a "grind," "calico sport" and a few "sons of Take-It-Easy." As for the "grinds," we have two as typical as the original. However; we had to let them exist as such in order that our lower classmates might have good examples set for them. As for "calico sports" the whole class has been lacerated by the darts of that little bowman, Cupid. Perhaps the fact that so many of our class have become willing victims may be accounted for by the presence of our fairco-eds. You remember the triangle; man-woman-love. Of course we have those unfathomable beings, those "sons of procrastination," who never seem to have anything to do, but who wreck our reason as to how they get by.

The class of 1920 has witnessed probably more momentous issues of the world, more labor and industrial upheavals of the nation and more political and economical unrest of the state in the world's trend of events than any of its predecessors. And even here at our Alma Mater we have borne presence to many changes. By an act of the 1917 session of the General Assembly we have seen the first women admitted on an equal basis with men to the second oldest college in America. We have seen varying displacements and replacements in our beloved Faculty. And finally, we have witnessed an administration under a new head—a new era—an awakening that must surely come when a man of Dr. Chandler's qualities takes up the reius in the interests of his Alma Mater. Dr. Tyler, the retired President, whose faithful and untiring efforts have kept the old college apace with those of her standing, carries with him to his newly chosen field of endeavors, the love, the respect and the wishes of those who, as students, came into this College under his administration. Dr. Chandler comes to us with our deep-seated conviction that he will add to the lustre and lore of the old school a name that will outstretch any that her past may have attained, and give to her that pinnacle of prestige among the colleges of our nation which she so much deserves.

And now, dear classmates, we come to this, the curtain-fall in the last scene in the first drama of life. The rocky road over which we have wound our way has been rough in places, and its windings and hardships have not been overcome without a great degree of energy and determination on our part. However, with a just and helpful Faculty to guide our steps on this upward journey, and aspirations and inspirations acquired from the satellites of the sons of this, our dear "Mother of Learning" we have arrived at the mount of our endeavors. We have had our failures, disappointments, and sorrow, but we have emerged from the melee of those experiences better and wiser men. Our hopes and our aims have ever been of the highest, and we have labored with a determination that knows no failure and is strange to defeat.

The State, the Nation, the World, looks to the colleges for men—men of trained mind, strong in thought and noble of character. And we sincerely believe that the class of 1920 of the College of William and Mary will satisfy this demand to a degree that will reflect a glorious light upon her future in a manner that she has shed her illustrious light upon us in the four years of her ministering now past.

As the doors of our beloved college swing slowly open and we pass through to leave forever her hallowed and time-honored walls as students, a feeling of pride mingled with sorrow permeates our being. May that most fickle of Goddesses, Luck, bring us together and back here at times while laboring in the duties before us along the paths of our life. And may hopes, ideals and ambitions given birth in youthful hearts find a way to expressions despite the hardships of an unsympathetic world.

And now the task of your scribe is done. If in the sunset glow of later years this effort upon my part to paint a picture of our four years' stay here may recall happy events and memories, may give inspiration to any or bring a cherry smile of recollection to one of our class, then 1 quit my pen with the consolation that the effort is worth the prize.

One long, lingering, look, dear Alma Mater—a farewell—and the class of 1920 departs.

Historian.

Phrophecy of Class of 1920

O SAY that I was exasperated when I learned that my squadron had been ordered to India would be putting it mildly.

We had been in England three weeks and everyone was expected to go to France; but at retreat on the 9th of November, 1917, we were told to prepare for a trip on one of the Indian liners, and it took little imagination to decide what our destination would be.

India must be the hottest country on the globe, and as I look back on it I hardly see how I survived. The monotony was almost as deadly as the heat. However, I was able to break the former in the company of an old Hindu priest who seemed to take a sort of paternal interest in me, and often attempted to induce me to try to fathom the shadows which he claimed coming events cast before them.

Perhaps it was the heat, or it may have been a natural antipathy to things based upon such flimsy logic as the prenatural. At any rate, I was amused and nothing more.

When we were ordered out of India the old priest gave me a small crystal which he said I would be able to use only once, but that a time would come in my life when nothing could take its place. I smiled, took the crystal, more to please my swarthy friend than anything else, packed it up in my barracks bag and forgot all about it, until about a year later when I was peremptorily elected prophet of my class.

The position was quite a novel one and half amused and half angered me to think that as intellectual a class of men as I was graduating with could seriously expect me to tell what the future held for each one.

While trying to decide if either horn of my dilemma offered a solution, or if it were possible to escape between the two, the Indian crystal suddenly occurred to me. So in a whimsical mood, I went to my trunk to see if I had brought it with me, and sure enough, down in the bottom in one corner I found the little sphere all packed away in cotton just as it had been given to me. I took it up and began to examine it. My interest had grown considerably, I found, since I left the country where such things are of daily occurrence. As I inspected it, I found written on the surface: "Here lies the future of the class of 1920, as it shall be twenty years from now."

This amazed me to such an extent that I got my pen and paper and sat down in real earnest to solve my problem.

The crystal seemed cloudy at first, but gradually became clear, until a beautiful yacht stood out before me. She was steaming ahead at about full speed, I imagine, from the way she cut through the light swell of the sea. There was a man seated on her after deck, reading an editorial in the New York Times. I noticed a column headed: "Our editor takes short vacation on his yacht." This turned my attention to the man who was reading. I could hardly believe my eyes. There sat the lone M. A. of our class, A. P. Elliott.

When the mist cleared again, I was in the City of Washington. The scene glided swiftly along until it came to the Capitol Building. The next thing I saw was a man sitting in an elegantly furnished office, dictating a letter. Then the stenographer went to his machine, and I saw him write the following letter:

April 6, 1920.

Dear Dr. Chandler: It will give me great pleasure to address the students of William and Mary during your next commencement.

The amazing success with which you have met as President of my beloved Alma Mater has been a source of constant wonder to me. I think I may be pardoned for a feeling of pride which came over me a few days ago, when in comparing the two catalogues, I noticed that William and Mary had just twenty-three students more than Harvard.

Very truly yours,

The next thing I saw was the man who had dictated the letter signing his name. Mirable dictu, he wrote: "Walter H. Cheatham."

The crystal became blank and the next scene was a beautiful country home. Around it stretched broad fields of grain, and in one field there was a large herd of cattle. I was wondering who could be the proud possessor of so much worldly wealth, when the postman came along, and as he put the letters in the box, I read: "W. H. Boyer, Esq., Mr. W. H. Boyer, W. H. Boyer, Jr., Miss Ruth Boyer, Mrs. W. H. Boyer, Miss Helen Boyer," and then there was a card for Master Ernest Boyer. It was plainly evident that my old classmate had settled down and become a family man of the first water.

The picture vanished, and the next thing I saw was the Duke of Gloucester street and on one corner of one of the bank buildings I saw a row of signs hung one above the other. Beginning at the top, I read Dr. Davis, Dr. Striker, Dr. Julian Brooks, Dentists. So I thought to myself that dear old Judy has his heart's desire, and I expect business must have been pretty good, as I saw a seven-passenger Pierce-Arrow standing at the curb with J. B. on the door.

Then followed a scene in Paris. The President of France and several of his engineers were poring over a plan which seemed to interest them very much. As the mist cleared, I read in one corner of the large sheet: "Plan for the restoration of the Cathedral of Rhiems." J. D. Carneal, Jr.

Next I saw an office window in Richmond. On it was written: J. R. Chappelle, Real Estate.

Again darkness and then I found myself looking at two people walking towards me. The time seemed about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and judging from the leisurely manner in which the people were walking, I think it must have been Sunday. The place was the suburbs of a medium sized city, and the couple I had seen first seemed to be enjoying some old joke, and whenever they would pass a one-story building, it seemed to be especially funny. At length they passed directly in front of me, and I had no trouble in recognizing "Copie" and Maude. They were still inspecting bungalows.

Then followed the interior of a large hall. The scene flowed along by numerous doors until it reached one marked "Faculty Room." Within I saw a large number of men sitting around a long table. Glancing down the table, I saw M. M. Hilliard, C. A. Joyce, W. W. Farmer and my old friend, Lewis. Lying on the table was a catalogue, and I read: "Annual Bulletin of the Johns Hopkins University."

At first I could make nothing of what followed, but as it became distinct, I saw it was a copy of the New York Times. The headline ran: "The Prince of Wales Will Live," and under it, "The greatest stride towards perfection that the medical profession has yet achieved was made this morning when Dr. D. G. Tyler, Jr., announced that his operation upon the Crown Prince was a success. The Prince arrived at Dr. Tyler's private hospital late last night by aeroplane from London." I expect Elliott was glad to write that column.

After that I saw a large man sitting at a desk, and when he gave the paper that he had just signed to the man who was standing by him, I saw that it was a pardon for a circumstantial conviction for murder. He continued to gaze out of the window for some time after the man went out; but finally he turned so that I could see him, and there was "Bob" Wallace, Governor of Virginia, with a heart as big as it was when I knew him at College, preferring that the guilty go unpunished rather than that the innocent should suffer.

Again a paper appeared. This time it was the Richmond Times Dispatch, and the most interesting article I saw was: "Smith becomes senior senator from Virginia, while the junior honor is held by L. E. Bush." It is somewhat strange that both of these men should have graduated from William and Mary in the now famous class of 1920. In one corner, I saw an advertisement which read: "Fentress, Love and Sisson, Attorneys-at-Law."

The next scene was in China. The sun was sinking behind a mountain and in the valley I saw a large crowd assembled around someone who was preaching. When I could recognize him I discovered that Van Franklin Garrett, Jr., had chosen the most noble profession of any member of our class, and had become a missionary to labor for humanity among the heathen in a foreign land.

The crystal became blank, and then appeared "As for thyself, read the first sentence of the eleventh ode in the first book of Horace." It ran:

"Tu ne quaesieris, scire nefas, quem mihi, quem tibi Finem di dederint, Teucanoc, nec Babylonias Temptaris numeros."

As I closed the book, the crystal slipped from my hand, and shattered into bits.

College Years

Let's remember every day,
Every hour of the way
All the sweetness of your play,
College Years.

Let us cherish every sorrow
Even bitter memories borrow.
Just to banish some tomorrow's Haunting fear.

We have fought, forgot, forgiven, Class harassed, and coaxed, and driven, May we meet the morrow shriven, By our tears.

And the comradeships we knew, May the future hold as true! Soft we murmur sweet adieu College Years.

In the grandstand, all aghast
Screamed a tumult for a pass
Could the weary warriors last
For one score?

Floors of wax, and soap slick faces;
Black and white, and silk, and laces,
Matrons in the coziest places;
What a bore!

How we whined at chapel hour;
Met our Math with faces dour,
Yet an all night dance was our
Plea for more,

Hallowed fancies! If ow they quiver
In my fretting heart forever!
Through the time of trial ever
Bring a smile.

And the bleakest, blackest night
Lit by laughter gives us might,
Faith and fervor for the right,
All the while.

William and Mary, mater mine, Queen! And crowned by every clime, Know that all my heart is thine, All the while.

LESLIE ELEY BUSH*

• We now have the pleasure of introducing to you this lad with the "brown velvet eyes." If there can be any doubt in anyone's mind, especially among those who have known "Leslie" since he appeared on our horizon three years ago, about his great ability along some lines, attend French lectures! The professor of Modern Languages admits that he saves time by asking Bush a question when he wants to find out what Zirkie knows, for conversation during lectures prepare "Bush," to impart all that both know. If then one is not satisfied that our lad is of such ability that we feel proud to have him in our class, consider him as one of the "chief watchdogs" at Tyler Hall, though he never barks aloud—or recall his being Assistant Librarian and having had his name placed among those of our Honor Rolls with the various "curlers."

VIRGINIUS JEFFRES LOVE*

- ¶ And now, gentle friends, let us take a look at "Mike." He is a fellow who is loved by all those who know him and is one of the most popular fellows on the campus. He has been a member of the Monogram Club for four years and as captain of the baseball team of 1919 and as second baseman, he has won decided honors for himself. When a ball comes anywhere in his reach, he is sure to get it and his wonderful plays have meant many a victory for the Indians.
- ¶ But do not let us think for a moment that this is all due him. As a dancer he is most excellent and is a fond lover of the ladies. But how could we expect him to be other than a lover when his name is Love? Frequently he visits Tyler Hall, but he never lets the ladies come between him and his books.
- ¶ Here's luck to you "Mike." We know you'll succeed.

MARTHA BARKSDALE

Tabs," our best all round-good on the hockey field, basketball floor and excellent in the class room. Such attributes are seldom found in one person who is also very intellectual and studious. Martha is at once a thoroughstudent and a sure enough sport. Babsadjectives weren't made with which to describe vou.

LOREN BENNETT

¶ Can it be possible that this lad is a junior? Yes, the smiling angel of the campus is numbered among those favored few. Bashfulness, youth and intelligence are some of the characteristics of the youngest junior in college. Loren has never told anyone what profession he expects to follow, but it is hinted that he will be a clock fixer. We have every reason to believe that he will make a good one.

HERBERT LEE BRIDGES, JR.

¶ Lee is, beyond doubt, the curler of the class. He is always in good humor and always busy, either talking to the ladies or expounding some new theory in physics, though occasionally he condescends to brave the paths of the scholars who have gone before. Lee makes a success of everything that he undertakes and, knowing that he will persist in this, the class is sure of his ultimate success.

LUCILE BROWN

¶ "Brownie"—isn't she cute? Brownie is small but her scholastic attainments are vast in comparison. Wherein lies the life and soul of the Whitehall Literary Society in its President—Lucile. She is demure and pleasing, full of college spirit and an interested promoter of school activities. What more can we ask of one girl?

RUTH CASHION

¶ "Cashion" has come to us from the great wide West, bringing with her an atmosphere of its characteristic thoroughness and simplicity. "Cashion" is one of these frank, openhearted, thorough-going girls that seem to us to typify the West. We like her for all her "Westernisms" and would not have her changed for all the world.

AL BERNICE CLARKE

¶ Here is a man of untiring energy, striving conscientiously to attain those high ideals necessary for good citizenship and a career that will justify the consideration of men. "A. B." has a tender heart which seems to burst forth in spontaneous sympathy for those who are sick or distressed. Clarke, there is no doubt but that success will crown your endeavors.

ECHO~ 1920

JAMES ANDERSON CONWAY, IR.

¶ "Jimmy" comes to us from the Academy, where he first proved his ability to obtain his portion of A's and B's. His congenial personality has won for him the favor of his fellow students. As a musician he leads his class. If you doubt his ability, ask him to play his violin, mandolin, or guitar. He can find your responsive chord with each of them. He is deeply imbued with college spirit and is a true son of William and Mary.

MORRIS WILLIAM DERR

¶ This majestic looking youth goes to college for his health, to wit, ere he wandered to our ancient halls. He spent a year at Nashota House, Wisconsin, but did not like the climate; from there he went to Racine College, and after spending two years there, came to us. Since his arrival he has done several things, among which is to amass eighteen credits in Greek, which is a most extraordinary accomplishment these days. In love he is less successful. If you doubt it just ask "Shorty."

CHARLES J. DUKE

¶ From Wake Forest has come to us here the specimen who has been accused of having such an "aristocratic air." Duke does not deserve such to be thrust on him. He is well known on the campus and appears to have a talent in some lines that most Mexican Athletes do not possess. He will very likely show us later some of his talents as a physicist!!

COLONIAL

ECHO~ 1920

MALCOLM DEWEY FOSTER

¶ M. D., our Northern Neck product, is so congenial, so quiet, and so unassuming that we are coming to look for his broad smiles every day. He is the type of fellow you can always get along with. He is a lover of good music, dancing and athletics. He possesses the distinguishable qualities of a good student, too, as his grades will show. The class is glad to boast of him as being one out of the three of the class to get the W & M sweater decoration in football.

WALTER EDWARD GARBER

¶ "Joe" is the faithful Indian who returned to College this year after serving overseas; he helped to compose Coach Driver's football team which was made up mostly of old veterans both on the gridiron and battle field. "Joe" has a very calm appearance, but when in football togs this mild face is transformed and becomes one of stone, which spells defeat to his adversary. Aside from his athletic powers he curls the professors, too. "Joe" is an all-round sport and one who strives to put William and Mary at the top of the ladder. Meet him, fellows, he'll not disappoint you.

ALPHEUS HERMAN GOSLEE

There is "Mutt," a shark on the gridiron. He has attained the height of athletic glory. "Mutt" is a scholar as well as an athlete. He has specialized in "Co-education," and seems to have won a good deal of renown in that field of research. To this we might add that he is an active participant in everything our Alma Mater undertakes and will be "some pumpkins" next year, as a Senior.

¶ Luck to you, "Mutt," we are proud of you.

COLONIAL

ECHO~ 1920

EDWIN S. H. GREEN

¶ Edwin hails from the northern part of the State. During the war he developed his pugilistic instinct and now challenges anyone to don the gloves against him. His combative instinct, however, does not keep him from admiring the girls, and Tyler Hall is often enlivened by his smiling countenance. Edwin is an all around college student. He stars on the track team, and frequently "curls" in the class room. We predict that his success will do honor to his Alma Mater.

RICHARD LEONARD HENLEY

¶ Now you may consider for a moment this tall, stately looking individual from the city of Williamsburg. Dignified to the last notch, he adds dignity to everything he touches. Then, too, he is a useful man to have around, for he can always be relied upon to do what is expected of him. Here's to you, Dick, nothing bad can happen to a man of your character.

HOWARD STUART HOLMES

The object of this sketch is to introduce you to one of William and Mary's most loving sons. A man's love is seldom stronger than that of Holmes'. If you have noticed his interest in his Alma Mater, you will be thoroughly convinced. It would take a column to do him justice, although he is not the author of the "Autocrat at the Breakfast Table." We can say no more than when God made him, He made him well,

COLONIAL

ECHO~ 1920

EDWARD DEWEY HUDSON

¶ Behold the quiet and unassuming lad! He is a genius, a gentleman, and an athlete. He is a specialist in biology, and, if you are seeking information of that nature, consult him. He is a charter member of the W. T. C. U. club. During his stay with us, he has not distinguished himself only in science, but he has also won equally as much eclat on our "quint." Keep it up, E. D., we are behind you. Who knows what the future has in store for you?

WALTER ROBERT HUDSON

¶ Walter Robert Hudson, better known as "Num," comes to us from Orange County. He is a hard working student and with his curling hopes to be an agriculturalist some day. He is seen at all bon fires and increases the joy of the celebration by giving us a snappy foot shake. He has a strong desire for the opposite sex. Keep curling, Num, and you will succeed.

ARTHUR WARREN JOHNSON

¶ "Deacon," as he is generally known, is one of those pleasing personalities who makes life run smoothly and who radiates a pleasant spirit among his fellow students. When it comes to popularity, "Deacon" cannot be surpassed. He is a lover of philosophy and if you are in doubt as to a philosophical question, see him. He is quite a student, too, and we hope the future has great things in store for him.

ALEXANDER DAVID JOYNER

¶ Here we have an unusual combination! Joyner is a good student though he is very seldom in his "boudoir" on the east side of Ewell Observatory.

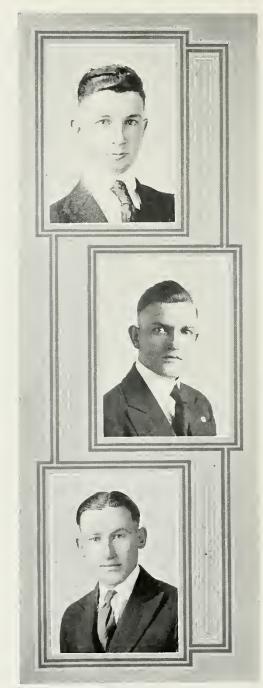

¶ "Red" is one of the most determined of our Indian eleven. The harder he has to fight in a football game the better he likes it. Football is by no means the only branch of athletics in which "Red" shows ability. He has made other contestants go down in defeat in track, has knocked several out on the basketball court and played baseball abroad. Though he is not a woman hater, he must not be called a nonpareil in the power of persuasion—to say the least he is nonchalant, How will you judge him?

BLANCHE KENNEDY

■ Straight A's on Calculus and Physics—can you beat that? Blanche can do it. 1s there any wonder that we look on her with admiring eyes and feel proud that she is among us? Though quiet and unobtrusive, she responds so generously to situations that we feel the personality back of it all.

HORTENSE LEWIS

¶ "Tense" is a clever little girl. Her specialty is domestic science. We wonder if she won't make practical use of it and that soon. School spirit, joviality, and good comradeship are personified in Hortense. "Tense," old dear, you're a good sport and charming girl. Can we pay you a bigger compliment?

CHAPMAN SOCRATES MOORMAN

- ¶ If any of our dear readers don't know or haven't seen "Turkey," why something is terribly wrong with them. His famous shriek is a pleasant sound to every Indian, and as it pierces the air, all are reminded of the time of Pocahontas and John Smith.
- ¶ "Socks" is a killer among the fair ones, and spends a large part of his time with them. Go to it, old boy, all of us would do it, if we could.

ALBERT ROSS MUSICK

- ¶ Before us appears the face of a "Curler," who came to us from the wild, wooly Southwest, bringing with him those philosophical tendencies which have been constantly developing ever since. He is a "Peptonist" in the real sense of the word, and when there is a difficult problem to be solved, he is the first on the job. His record as a student, and in the service of his country is one to be envied, and since he has been visiting Tyler Hall, some of the co-eds are becoming very Musickal.
- $\P$  Here's wishing you, Musick, much success in the future.

ROBIN H. OWEN

¶ Focus your optics for a moment upon the "Socrates" of our class. "Pinkie," as the ladies call him, is always attracting attention around the campus but not without cause. His ever smiling countenance and friendly disposition have won for him a host of friends around the campus. Besides being a ladies man, Pinkie is a "twister," and an athlete of no mean ability, a good all around man, and we are proud to have you in our class. No matter what vocation you may pursue, success is yours. We hope to hear of you later.

THORPE L. PURCELL

¶ Allow us to present to you now the real and genuine Prodigal Son. He often wanders away to other institutions of uncertain merits, but each time he finds his way back to dear old William and Mary. Thorpe is a great fellow to have around, and when he leaves us next year, we shall surely miss him. T. L. is a scream when it comes to politics; he can secure more votes in an hour than every man on the campus combined.

INGER SCHEIE

¶ Inger is a profound student and an enthusiastic follower of Domestic Science training. Her marks betray the unusual ability she possesses. Although we don't know Inger very well, we delight in having with us such a gentle, kind-hearted and amiable girl. In her, Farmville lost a gem which it was our luck to find,

LUNSFORD HALEY SETTLE

- ¶ Lunsford Haley Settle; how college batters do tremble before his powerful frame!
- ¶ Haley is quite a quiet fellow until you get him started and then there is something doing.
- ¶ He is our star twirler and loves it dearly, but still, always finds time for his classes. He is a steady and strong fellow and all of us are watching him. Take life easy, old boy, and you will reach your goal all right.

JAMES BATHURST SMITH

- ¶ Some people call him Mr. Smith, but most of us call him "J. B." And that appellation is quite sufficient, for he is not at all particular about his name. His handsome face and black hair are the "apples of his eye," and he guards them with great care and anxiety.
- ¶ Go to it Smith, old boy, a great reputation lies in waiting for you.

HERBERT L. SPAIN

¶ Espagnol hails from Dinwiddie county. He is a typical student, faithful in all his college duties and the various activities of college life. His great outdoor sport is tennis, and he is an ardent supporter of the "movies." In the social life of Williamsburg he is well know, and always enjoys the social gatherings of the young people. Espagnol has a combination of humor and imagination along with the sterner qualities of character. His future prospects are bright.

JOSIAH ALBERT STANLEY

¶ "Joe," as he is generally known, is just about as sincere and open-hearted a chap as you ever run across. He is a true Indian through and through. He is quite a student, too, and the seriousness with which he has undertaken his work spells success for him. He is going to make good. Watch him.

EMORY VOORHEES STOWITTS

¶ A clever fellow well met! Though he has been absent from W. & M.'s walls since '15, he by no means lost his ability to "curl." Just a glance at his report will prove his ability to wring A's from the professors. Last, but not least, he is often seen all "diked out," sauntering over to Tyler Hall, and it is rumored that he often finds it "pleasant" there.

RUSSELL RANDOLPH THOMPSON

¶ Meet "Tommy," a true Indian, a youngster who is full of real college spirit. You can't find a better friend than "Tommy" in College. He loves athletics and never tires working on Cary Field. His greatest ambition is to make the varsity team in football before he graduates next year. Tommy doesn't feel satisfied with helping carry the banner of the College in athletics. He is a good student. We find that he is one of those fellows we like to associate with. We look forward to his success in accomplishing his ambition. He will make good.

W. F. WARD

¶ We hail you, "Slim," from Emory and Henry College. "Slim" is a suitable name for this boy of wit and humor. He has a shapely head, full of "rare knowledge." His opinions on Genesis should not be doubted. He is a man of high ideals and aspirations. "Slim" is a good worker, he has the inclination to purr around the ladies like a veteran. Each term he puts away about eighteen credits for future use. Wait and see the results.

CARL ALBERT ZOLLINGER

¶ Here's the happy boy from Saxe, Virginia. Fellows, it's a treat to know Zollinger. If you want to pass off your blues, just go around and visit this individual. He has never been seen looking sad or despondent and has never been seen without a healthy ha! ha! Surely, he will never die of the blues. Zol, old boy. we like you, keep on smiling.

History of Class of 1921

O, we did not enter here three years ago and remain here until the present time. Out of our great number, there are five of us who entered five years ago, but were called away to help stem the tide of the great conflict which has just past. There were many who lost their lives, some re-entered College earlier and have graduated, but we count ourselves over very often to see if we are still here.

Since returning, we find there have been many changes and many traditions broken. First, we find a new President. Second, we find our roster is not composed of men alone. Naturally the love for old College has been re-enforced since the Ante Bellum days. It is with pride that we point to this class and say it is the largest Junior class in the history of the College, composed not only of young men and young women from various parts of our own state, but throughout the United States. We are large in number, and we have no fear of what the future will hold in store for us; only wait until we get a swing at a degree next year. Things so important and so many in number have been done by our members that neither by boasting could I exalt their deeds, nor could I within this space tell the whole truth, but I will say this, out of our class we find enrolled poets, priests, prophets, orators, scientists, and philosophers. Let me start off my story with "Chief" Settle, our President, the man who caused V. M. I. and V. Va. to go down to defeat in baseball, and also helped to put safely away the cup last spring. Just the way he looks when crossing the campus is the attitude he assumes when there are three men on base and he strikes out the next three men that face him.

Next, we turn to "Joe" Garber. Just ask Coach Dobson of Richmond College what he thinks of him on the gridiron. He is one that has never lost that old "pep," regardless of how the game runs. Now we turn to "Turkey" Moorman, representing us in the Intercollegiate Triangular debate. This opportunity should not pass without mentioning the "Marys." If Dr. Geiger wants to get curled properly let him ask Miss Brown something in Psychology; the same holds true for Miss Kennedy in Physics and Mathematics.

I might go on and fill volumes with the deeds of the mighty and valiant sons and daughters of this class. I might relate to you how we have put physics, philosophy, and mathematics on a sound basis, but I fear space will not permit.

Now dear readers, there is one more thing I will say even if the Editor-in-Chief does get angry at the length of my rambling; we have established a record as "calicoists." When you see one of our members put on that bow tie with the orange dots in it that has caused so many to think it was the sun rising, you may know he is "Fraushack" bound.

When Duty Whispers Low, Thou Must

He wanted to study his Latin and Greek, But a skirt fluttered up the street, So he joyfully chucked his books away And followed with flying feet. Oh, silk, or satin, or calico, A glance and a smile, and away we go.

The Annual Staff met in the Faculty room;
The Editor—where was he?
Ask of the winds which far and near
With calico strewed the lea.
Oh. silk, or satin, or calico,
A glance and a smile, and away we go.

He's up for debate on Saturday night,
In the Philomathean halls,
But all such trash must go to smash
When the lure of the calico calls.
Oh, silk, or satin, or calico,
A glance and a smile, and away we go.

Will the time ever come to this suffering place,
When business may have its fling—
Societies, lectures and Annual Staff—
When the students will cease to sing
Oh, silk, or satin, or calico,
A glance ond a smile, and away we go.

History of Class of 1922

ISTORY looks backward into the past. The further back it looks, the dearer are the recollections it brings to the minds of those who helped to make it. It is with this in view that the Sophomore Class History is written. It is not intended to be a history of each individual member, but of the class as a whole, as if it were a closely connected family.

Let us look back to our Freshman year. We must admit that on our first arrival in Williamsburg we were confident that we should take the College by storm and capture A's and B's at our ease. It was not until we had attended lectures several times that we reluctantly watched our assurance fade away. But after recuperating we entered again into the fray with added vim and energy which carried us through the session with honors.

At the beginning of this session we entered with that grim determination that means certain success. Very few, if any, sophomores have been listed as delinquents, so well have their duties been performed. Of course we do not mean to classify ourselves as "curlers," although several of our members wear such an appellation. Besides doing full justice to our academic work, we have taken important parts in all of the student activities.

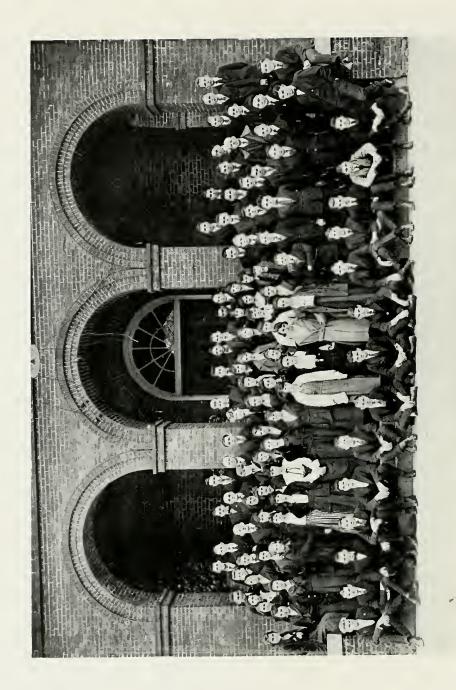

In athletics we have been well represented. In that great game, football, several of our members did honor to us by winning places on the first and second teams. The basketball teams were fortunate in having sophomores to hold important positions with such efficiency. Although at the time of this writing the baseball season has not yet arrived, we feel positive that some of our number will make good showings.

In literary fields our representatives have done most excellent work. Executive positions in the three literary societies are held by sophs. Our debators and orators have won fame by exhibiting their talents.

What more can be expected of a class? The Sophomore Class is undoubtedly worthy of the honor of its position. We hope that next year may bring even greater and richer success to us.

History of Class of 1923

ROM the battle-fields of France, from the deep waters of the Atlantic, and from the hills and valleys of our own Virginia, they came in answer to the call of Knowledge. The tolling of the Chapel bell soon caused them to forget the rousing cry of the bugle, the shrill whistle of the Boatswain's pipe, and the murmuring of the wind through the pipes. Each entered the melting-pot of our Alma Mater and emerged—a Freshman.

The men and women of the class of '23, the largest class since the founding of the College, have the happy faculty of appearing in all places where fame is to be won and where glory is to be attained. In every college activity some "dues" presence has been very much in evidence. There are students, athletes, orators, debators, and musicians among its members. Their influence has been great and far-reaching.

When the mid-year examinations ended the first term, this class shared in the honors that were won. The burners of the midnight oil came into their own, and many Freshmen were among them.

Many Freshmen spent the afternoons of their first ten weeks on Cary Field. When Thanksgiving Day closed the football season, White, Hall, Cooke, Lowe, and Davies had won their monograms. In basketball, the work of Young speaks for itself. You will have to go outside of the Virginia Inter-Collegiate Athletic Association to find a better stationary guard. In the national sport, too, there are "dues" who are ambitious enough to hope for berths in the regular line-up.

The women have also won honor in athletics. Eifert led all of the women in the fall Tennis Tournament. The "ducs" repeatedly thrashed the Sophs in hockey. McMurran, Green, Berger and Davis represented the College in basketball.

Whenever there is anything that concerns the College going on, there you are sure to find "dues." In numbers, it is the largest of the two hundred and twenty-six classes that have claimed William and Mary as their Ahna Mater. In scholarship, the standard of our College has not suffered by this class. We are proud of our athletics. Our interest in all college activities is marked.

The achievements of the individuals of the class have been many. Theirs have been records of which we are proud. But these are not our greatest pride. They are but manifestations of the real spirit that is existent with every man and woman of the class of '23. The love of our class is great; the love and reverence for our Alma Mater is first and perpetual.

HISTORIAN.

Campus Buttercups

Ah, buttercups on the campus,
You have waited well for a song;
But the daisies have bent to kiss you.
And our hearts have loved you long.
The birds have sung you their earols,
And the poets in their lays
Have woven the gleam of your brightness
In their metodics of old days.

Embroidered with silver daisies,
You have covered in days of old
These ways where men have tradden
To fame o'er a cloth of gold.
Oh, buttercups on the campus!
Was it very hard to wait
While your shining potens of gold-dust
Ensaffroned the feet of the great?

Or is it that He, the Master,
Who wrought the wonder of spring
And mixed with the oil of His colors
An immortal blossoming;
Hath given to you His secret
For your little petals to hold,
And printed across the canvoss,
His name in letters of gold?

Ah, buttercups!—
Oh! listen!
Who hath shamed the bird-song so?
Is it spring with the blooms for the roses,
Who bringeth the lilies their snow?
What dream of a God hath wandered
So far 'mid the hounts of men!
I slept, but now I have awakened,
And never can sleep again.

Ah, buttercups on the campus,
I thought to sing you a song;
But a caroling maid in the pathway
Hath wrought you a grievous wrong;
The gleom from your petals hath faded,
Your tinsel is twisted and old;
Her eyes have robbed you of brightness,
Her heart hath plundered your gold.

Literary Societies

HE many strange surroundings which face every young man entering college are naturally somewhat puzzling at first. There are forces and influences at work with which no college man can afford not to sympathize, and in which a student must participate if he is to receive the most good to be gained at the institution. Many students spend four years in college without being able to conceive of the numerous advantages and opportunities that are at their disposal. It is my purpose to deal with, in this article, only one of the numerous college activities—The Literary Societies.

I do not intend to give a lengthly review of the literary society work during the past year, reserving most of my space for discussing some of the opportunities and advantages it affords. Their accomplishments during the current year are sufficiently known. The work on the whole is to be commended. A number of students have shown a keen interest and remarkable ability in their work. We have an inter-collegiate debate scheduled with Richmond College and numerous other activities under contemplation. It is a deplorable fact, however, that the membership of both the societies is not as large as it should be. This is doubtless due, in part, to the numerous other activities which detract the students' attention from literary society work.

Possibly one of the principle reasons for the lack of interest which is manifested in the literary society halls is due to the fact that the amount of credit that one receives for work accomplished is not in proportion to the amount of credit he is accorded when he attains an honored position in some of the other activities. For the purpose of illustration, let's take the man who is an all-around athlete. By making use of an unlimited amount of physical energy he becomes the idol of the student body. On the other hand, the man who, by making use of his mental powers, wins a victory for his college in debate or oratory is scarcely known beyond the literary society halls. He has accomplished a fête equally as great, and until we accord him an equivalent amount of praise, we cannot hope for the attainment of wonders in this field. One of our recent speakers at vesper services remarked: "If I had a son at college, the highest honor that I would have him attain, next to being initiated into Phi Beta Kappa, would be a high standing in a literary society. When the college community accepts this point of view we shall have our society halls filled to their capacity.

COLONIAL ECHO-1920

Now let us pass on to some of the advantages obtained from literary society work. One of the first things that it does is to drive that sadness of tone out of the inexperienced student. Most new men, in an effort to be serious, become so sad that if we were to judge from their tone we would believe that some great calamity was about to overtake us. The thing that they need is to get a little of that crepe out of their throats which they can do with proper training. A cheerful young fellow, having heard a speech by a new man in literary society work, remarked afterwards that he expected him to close by saying: "This speech will be concluded at 2:00 P. M. in the cemetery." That type of fellow needs sufficient training within a society hall to cause him to get a little of that bottled lightning effect which is so characteristic of the American people.

Again, many of us use a style that is stilted, artificial, and bombastic. These are not the essential qualities of an effective speaker. I have also seen some new men that one would believe had mapped out all of his gestures and then wrote his speech to fit the gestures. The display that one makes of his gestures belongs to the distinguishing marks of a new man. Another is his unsteadiness of poise which forces him to seek support by leaning on the nearest object. Eloquence is not to be attained in this way, but you can make an eloquent orator out of a man of this type. Success in this field depends on cultivating unaffected naturalness and the power to express one's self in vigorous and forceful language. Be natural, therefore, if you wish to make progress in the direction of perfection.

I am not the first to say it, but this is an age of public speaking, and America, on account of its democratic ideas, is as much, if not more than any other country, a land where the public speaker has a large amount of influence in every walk of life. Men may ridicule the popular orator and hold up the political speaker to scoru, but both are a power on the land. The living speech of the orator has more direct influence in controlling the masses of people than any other means of communication.

The art of expression speech is only attained by those who apply themselves diligently and with a determination to overcome all impeding difficulties. We are told that Demosthenes, by declaiming against the roaring sea waves with pebbles under his tongue, overcame a habit of lisping and developed a weak into a strong voice. What shall we do? Are we going to be baffled by the few difficulties that hinder us? I would urge that one learn all possible from every speaker about the art of speaking. Be yourself in public speaking as in all other things. Imitate no man as your ideal but be the creator of your own ideal. The literary society affords a place for this which no one can afford to miss.

A Song

If I were a poet my song should be Of the ships that rot in the ocean deeps,

Of the pearl that lies in a selfish sea

And the arrow, spent, and the lute that sleeps.

I would sing of hands that were never pressed,

Of hearts that withered, of cheeks that paled;

I would sing of lips that were never kissed,

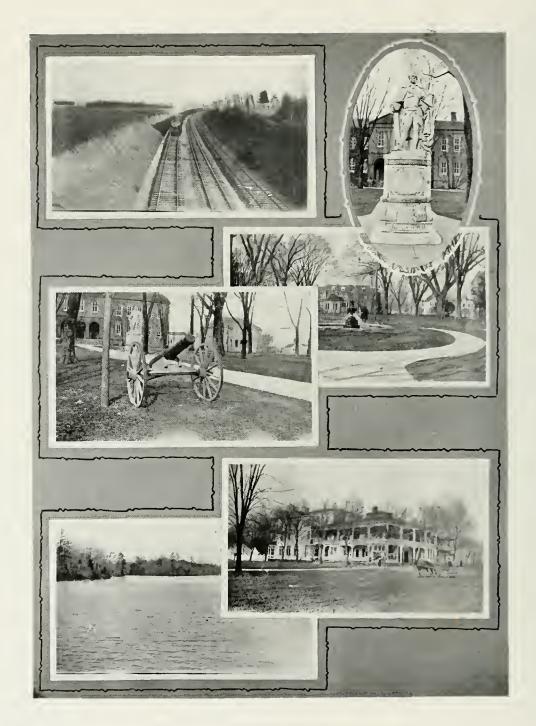

Of him who strove and failed.

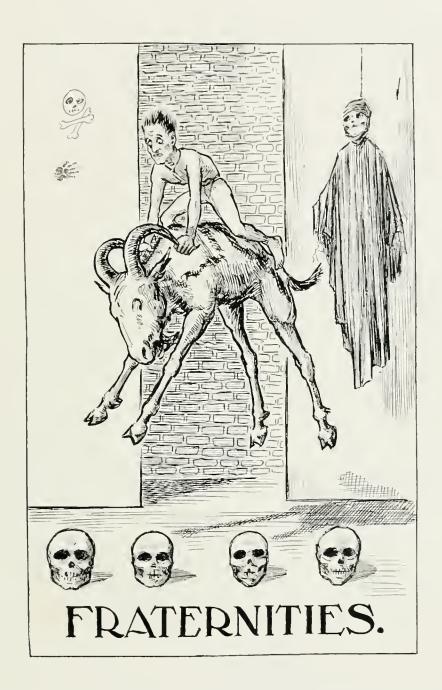

And thus I would sing eternally

And this my song would be.

-- Wim. Kavanaugh Doty.

Alpha Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa

Founders

JOHN HEATH
THOMAS SMITH

RICHARD BOOKER
ARMISTEAD SMITH

John Jones

HE Phi Beta Kappa Society was organized at the College of William and Mary, December 5, 1766, and was a combination of a Greek letter fraternity and a debating society. From this humble beginning has grown the widely-known honor society, having upon its rolls some of the most distinguished men in America.

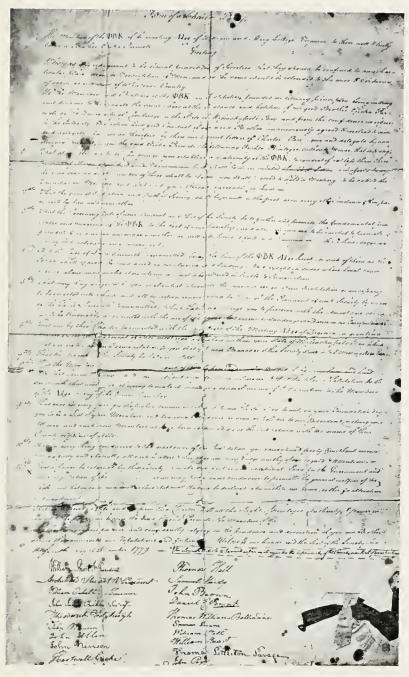

The mother chapter's first period of existence was brief. In 1781, the scene of war shifted to the Virginia peninsula and when the college closed its doors, the few members gave up their archives and minutes into the hands of the college steward. The Society slumbered until 1849; the papers disappeared, but finally fell into the possession of the Virginia Historical Society which restored them to Alpha in 1893.

In this same year, Col. William Lamb revived the Society; the faculty were initiated; and a new era of prosperity began. Chapters had been established in the leading Northern colleges where they throve from the first, and did much to elevate the fraternity to its present high rank.

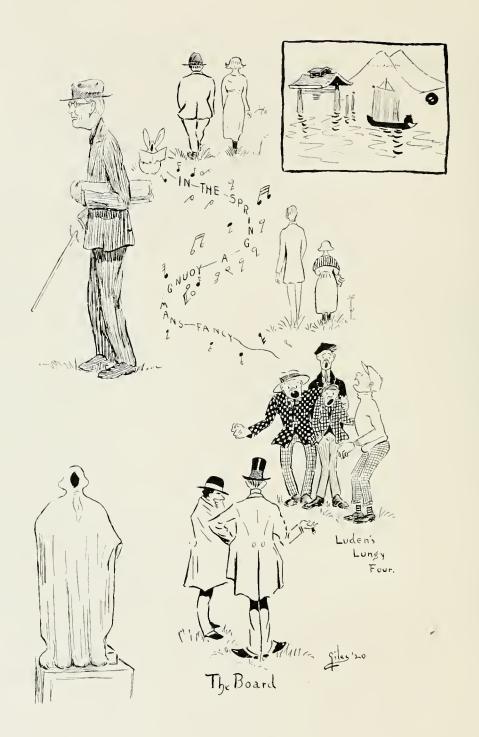

For its size (there are about two hundred names on the rolls), Alpha of Virginia, is one of the largest, strongest chapters, numbering among its members the most distinguished scholars and litterateurs of Virginia.

At William and Mary there are two classes of members; men distinguished in letters and science whom the College wishes to honor; and former students who have gone out into life and shown promise in literary or scientific paths. Any student on the rolls has it within his power to wear the key and win the honor that is so highly esteemed among educated and cultivated men of this land.

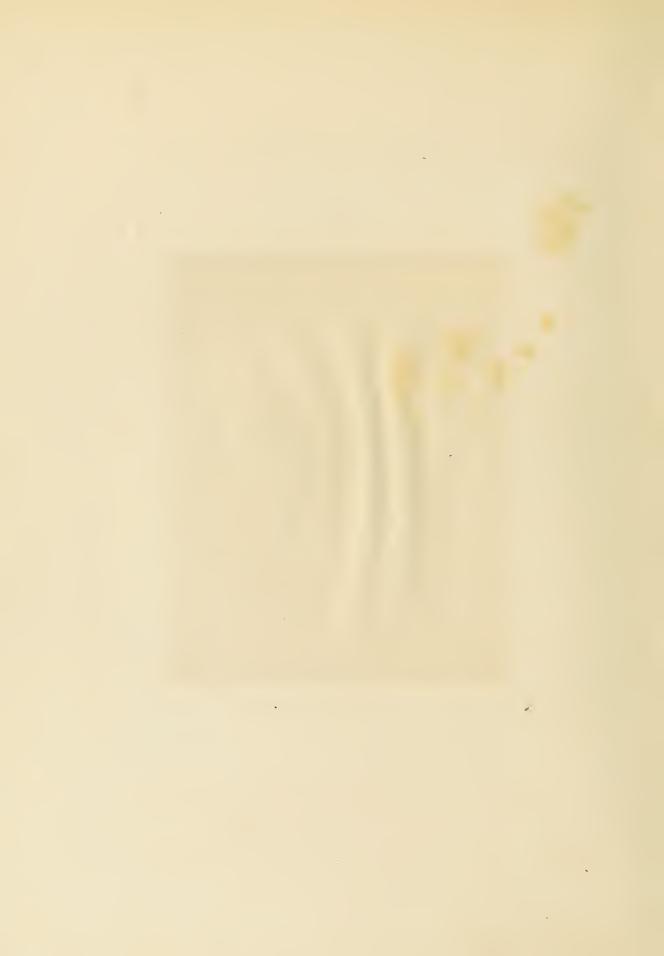

Phi Beta Kappa is not a secret fraternity, competing with other fraternities, but a "brotherhood of scholars."

"Y" Notes

NDERGOING such difficulties as probably College Y. M. C. A.'s have never experienced before, or certainly in the same light against which they have had to struggle this session, we can at least look on our "Y" work and the organization itself with pride and reflect on its inspiration as advantageous. The antagonizing spirit between war Y. M. C. A. and men was introduced at the opening of the term by some exservice students. That and many other obstacles the organization had to combat, but in spite of hindrances, the imperfections and incompleteness of the local organizations, it has accomplished good. That like any institution that means well, performing its tasks cheerfully, seeking to help and to serve all with whom it comes in contact, and desirous that should be many and its field be large, possessing the altruistic and sincere spirit the influence will undoubtedly be felt.

The object of the Y. M. C. A, and desire of its leaders is to promote a good fellowship among the students, to create and maintain a Christian spirit throughout the campus, to bring student and student, faculty and student in closer touch with each other, to make the school more home-like and to exercise a spiritual and moral influence in general.

The "Y" gave its annual reception at the opening of the school year. The reception was held in the College library. It was a very joyous and beneficial occasion.

One of the important features is the "Y" room of the second floor of the "Gym" which is used as a recreation center. This contains a pool-table, victrola, reading material, games of various kinds, etc.

The twice-a-week "movies", Monday and Thursday nights, given in the chapel, have proved well worthwhile and seem to be appreciated.

The Thursday Chapel services conducted under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. by some student or member of the faculty have been exceeding inspiring and helpful.

One of the great opportunities of the students has been to attend the vesper services. In these services, great moral, spiritual and educational lessons have been outlined and presented in the addresses delivered by such able speakers as Douglas Freeman, Wyndham Meredith, and Hon. R. M. Hughes.

We state with great pleasure that our Y. M. C. A. and College was well represented at the Student Volunteer Convention held at Des Moines, Iowa, by such a competent delegation as Prof. J. R. Geiger, Messrs. A. W. Johnson and R. Burden. Their reports were, to say the least, very uplifting and interesting. We feel that the knowledge gained at this convention is being keenly felt through their work in the organization. We also expect to have a full delegation at the State conventions which will soon be held in Richmond and Lynchburg.

Let us give due credit of our success to the several visits, much correspondence and great interest taken by Mr. J. W. Gainfort, State Secretary. Thanks to Mr. Gainfort.

Probably and most likely one of the greatest features and most helpful branches of the "Y" work this session are the Bible study course. We have a well organized system in this course. Weekly classes are held throughout the dormitories and fraternity houses. The leaders of the groups meet in a normal class conducted by Prof. Bennett, in which the lessons are outlined and discussed, before the leaders meet their respective classes.

Great harmony and co-operation have existed between the students and faculty, without which the efforts of the Y. M. C. A. would have counted for nothing. The interest, co-operation and help from the faculty is distinctly felt and much appreciated.

Taking the advice of the State Board next year's cabinet was elected early. The selection of these men was a matter of great consideration and careful choice. I have no doubt but that their work will be of the highest type and under their leadership we predict and hope great efficiency will be reached.

The American Legion

William and Mary Post No. 90

HE American Legion is sufficiently well known to require no introduction. It is the outgrowth of ideas and suggestions broached by members of the A.E.F. at a dinner in Paris. As a national organization of men and women who served in the military and naval forces of the United States during the Great War, its history is only just begun, but it has already proved itself a power to be reckoned with. That it has great potential possibilities and can wield a mighty influence in America, and therefore in world politics and policy of all kinds can not be doubted by any student of present-day conditions. The great question which the world asks is, "Will this power and influence be for good or evil, for selfish ends or patriotic service?" The answer of the American Legion is found in the record of its numbers in the war and as citizens since the armistice as well as in the preamble to the Constitution adopted by the first National Convention on November 12, 1919, which reads; "For God and Country we associate ourselves together for the following purposes:

"To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one hundred per cent. Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the Great War; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy to consecrate and sanctify our comradship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness." With these ends in view and led by the calm, competent, men of America, the Legion's influence cannot fail to be wholesome or its power directed toward the attainment of the highest ideals of our civilization.

The local organization of the American Legion in the College, now known as William and Mary Post No. 90, was unofficially organized through the interest and help of the Williamsburg Post No. 39, by Channing Hall, the commander of the latter Post. A meeting of students who had been in service applied for a charter and sent Raymond Sisson, a veteran of the 80th Division, to the first State convention of the ninety-three posts in Virginia.

The State Convention, organized the Virginia Department of the Legion which on October 13, 1919, granted a charter to William and Mary Post No. 90.

Persuant to this charter and the national constitution the local college post was organized officially on October 16, 1919. Raymond Sisson was elected the first commander and the official history began.

In the six months since its organization the local post has had several pleasant and helpful functions for its members and the public, bringing speakers of note on such days as November 11 and February 22 to foster and keep alive the ideals for which our anniversaries stand. The organization has been perfected and has met problems and questions, not always dealing with them in the wisest way perhaps, but at least in the best way its limited experience could suggest. Holding to the paramount principles of justice and fair dealing at all times, may William and Mary Post No. 90 of the American Legion weather safely all her storms, profit by her mistakes and be a power for good to the College and the community now and in all the years to come.

Our Campus

I strolled beneath the shady clms,
One balmy spring-time day,
And breathed the fragrance of the flowers
That bloom in merry May.
The modest little violet
And dandelion were there,
And golden, shining buttercups
Were scattered everywhere.

The snowy webs that floated dawn,
From massive cottonwood trees,
And scurried o'er the wavy grass
With every balmy breeze.
Drifted along the pebbly walk
Like snow so pure and white,
And by the children in their play
Again were put to flight.

The live oak at the College gate,
Stood pointing as of yore,
With outstretched arm and stately mein,
To his maternal shore.
Lord Botetourt stood silent there,
Majestic, grand, and tall.
To guard the dear old College.
With its ivy-covered wall.

In the foliage overhead,
And among the lilac leaves,
I heard the bluebird and the wren
And martin under the caves.
Thus strolling neath the stately trees,
The noblest thoughts arise.
And carry my ambitions high
Beyond the azure skies.

Athletics at William and Mary

The athletic awakening has not been confined to any one branch of sport; rather, the three main sports, football, basketball, and baseball, have received a profound boost. Every indication is that a genuine revival is taking place here. The ability displayed this season paves the way for a highly successful year in 1920-21.

The football material was gratifying to the coach; the closeness of the scores tells its own story of William and Mary's hard fight. The Indians won only two out of six championship games, but they took the scalp of the Richmond College Spiders on Cary Field for the first time here in eight years. Everyone drank deep of this cup of nectar. Despite the presence of White, the Speed boy, the backfield lacked the punch displayed by opponents. It was on the defensive that the Orange and Black gridironists played their best game. The championship scores follow:

William and Mary 7	Richmond College 0
William and Mary 3	Randolph-Macon College 0
William and Mary 3	Hampden-Sidney College 7
William and Mary 0	Richmond College
William and Mary 6	Randolph-Macon College 7
William and Mary 6	Hampden-Sidney College 7

In the exhibition contest with Richmond College in Richmond on Thanks-giving Day the Indians lost a 21-0 score. A large crowd witnessed the game Turkey Day.

Injuries slowed up Coach Jimmy Driver's regulars after we had won our first two games. Visions of a championship loomed on the horizon. With Kenneth Close as captain and good material in college, the Indians will make another effort to ensuare a gridiron championship this fall. Attention will be centered in football, since William and Mary has never won a football championship.

Basketball proved a repetition of the football season, in that an equal number of victories was concerned. Captain C. Pierce's stalwarts lifted their banners on high in two out of six games. Of the three contests staged in the college gymnasium, the affair with Richmond College provided thrills galore. Two extra periods were required before the visitors secured a 41-38 victory. No more exciting game has been seen in Williamsburg in the memory of the city's oldest inhabitant. The championship scores follow:

William and Mary38	Randolph-Macon College50
William and Mary22	Richmond College20
William and Mary16	Hampden-Sidney College24
William and Mary33	Hampden-Sidney College24
William and Mary38	Richmond College41
William and Mary14	Randolph Macon College42

Total, 101; opponents' score, 201.

Since the spirit in which athletic competition is conducted is of greater value in character building than the number of games won or lost, undergraduates and alumni feel proud of the year's work. The determination and clean playing of the Indians won the praise of lovers of college athletics.

The Race for Fame

Upon the road of life a shining light
Gleamed brightly, urging me upon my way,
Nor foded ever from my coger sight,
But shone upon my pathway night and day.

A golden crown it seemed beset with gems; I longed to gain and place it on my head, The fairest, richest of all diadems Was this to which my footsteps ever led.

Upon my path oft lay a barbed thorn,
Which pierced my feet and left a crimson stain,
Yet on I pressed, onward, forever on,
Forgetting sorrow, heedless of all pain.

Beside the path weary travelers lay,

No longer to endure the strife;

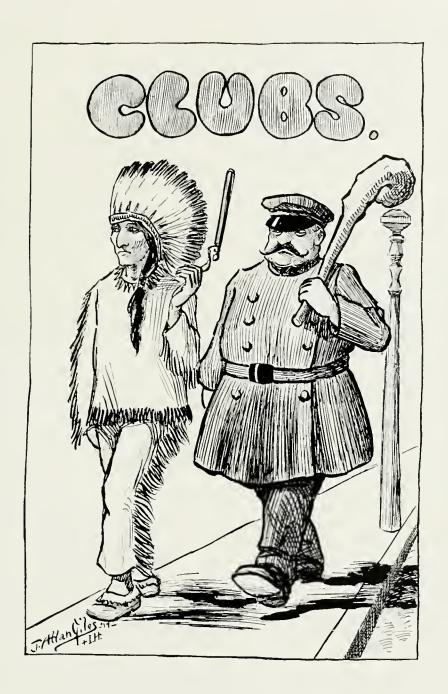

They cried for help in vain, I could not stay,

Lest I should lose the triumph of my life.

And priceless jewels shone about my feet,
Yet dared I not to claim one for my own,
Lest someone, pressing me with footsteps fleet,
Might win the crown and gain the priceless throne.

I won the crown, the golden crown of fame, But as I placed it proudly on my head I felt the sting of pain and saw with shame That from the hidden thorns my forchead bled.

With angry brow I cast the crown away
And turned to help the weary, footsore men;
"Too late! Too late!" I heard a traveler say,
"Another hand has sent them on again."

Register

Total number of men in College............210.

Only forty men are engaged, not counting those since the mid-winter dances.

One hundred and thirty smoke their own smokings; forty smoke the other fellow's.

About thirty-five dance, while dozens of others make the attempt.

Sixty-nine play cards—for amusement; "Holy Rollers" and all pious men not included.

Eighty men attend lectures at Tyler Hall (all of whom passed mid-term examinations in that course).

Twenty-one chew tobacco, but it is difficult to detect it, for they swallow the juice.

Eighty sleep at night; all the rest sleep in daytime.

All worth mentioning are pious men. They attend church every New Year.

"African golf" claims most of them. It is a most "elevating pastime."

One hundred and forty attend special lectures offered in No. 5, Taliaferro Building. (Ask the proprietors.)

Nobody drinks. This applies to daytime only.

- P In this Pleasant Parrish, where are Pettis, Phillips, Pollard and Puckett, Palmer (little but loud) Pierces many a Person's ears, while Purcell loses his Pate climbing to the Peak of the Pil and pays the Price of his Pride for Powell.
- Q Questions answered by Quillan.
- R A. Rice-bird perched with a Rorrer on a Reed, 'neath which were Robinsons, Reynolds and Ramsey and Reeve. To kill a Roach, Rowell crushed the Reid. Now Ruffin answer my Riddell, What did he leave?
- Swift to its close ebbs life's little day,
  But not so does the S's tedious lay;
  The Sapp flows Straughan in the Stout hearts of Spain;
  The Shell sounds long for those who are slain,
  And forth come Stanley, Starnes and Stephens to cast their lot
  With Stebbins, Shipman, Shumate and Scott,
  That they may Settle the score of Schenek, Simmons and Smoot,
  Killed by Smith, Snyder and Stallard in the loot
  Of Somerville, so long defended by Stringfellow's lance
  Against Stowitts and his host from Sisson's "Beautiful France."

- Y Buck Young and Duc Yound Which has the better lung?
- Z Zirkle is for Zirkle who encircles Zehmer. Zollinger and all who enter her circle.

Real Definitions

A QUEEN: An unseen, unknown angel, whom, to oblige your friend, you agree to take to an Easter game or a dance.

A SOCIETY MAN: A dress suit, a lot of gab, mostly nothing, and at last a lost degree.

A GOAT: A pin wearing a one day old "Duc."

A STUDENT: We don't know of one, therefore can't attempt to describe him.

A FLUNKER: Any man on the campus fills this bill.

A LADIES' MAN: Usually a fool; very few exceptions.

A SPORT: Absolutely nothing.

AN ATHLETE: A man who gets his name in the paper every day.

A GOOD PROFESSOR: One who meets his classes once a week.

REQUISITES FOR STUDYING THE MINISTRY: Join the "Holy Rollers."

A CURLER: He who spends three-fourths of his time at Tyler Hall.

A BOOZE-ARTIST: A poor fellow who, having made a slight noise many, many years ago, has now earned the name of roughneck and jailbird.

MONTHLY GRADES: A graded system of guessing.

CURLER: Most frequently one who either keeps his or her book open in class.
