Becoming is movement toward and movement away from. It is continuous. Slow, deliberate, and gradual at times. Furiously sudden at others. In a year, the force of shaping influences and the tension of choices created in the turmoil an elusive sense of synthesis.

"My project," he told us, "is to learn where to go by discovering where I am by reviewing where I've been — where we've all been. There's a kind of snail in the Maryland marshes — perhaps I invented him — that makes his shell as he goes along out of whatever he comes across, cementing it with his own juices, and at the same time makes his path instinctively toward the best available material for his shell; he carries his history on his back, living in it, adding new and larger spirals to it from the present as he grows."

— John Barth

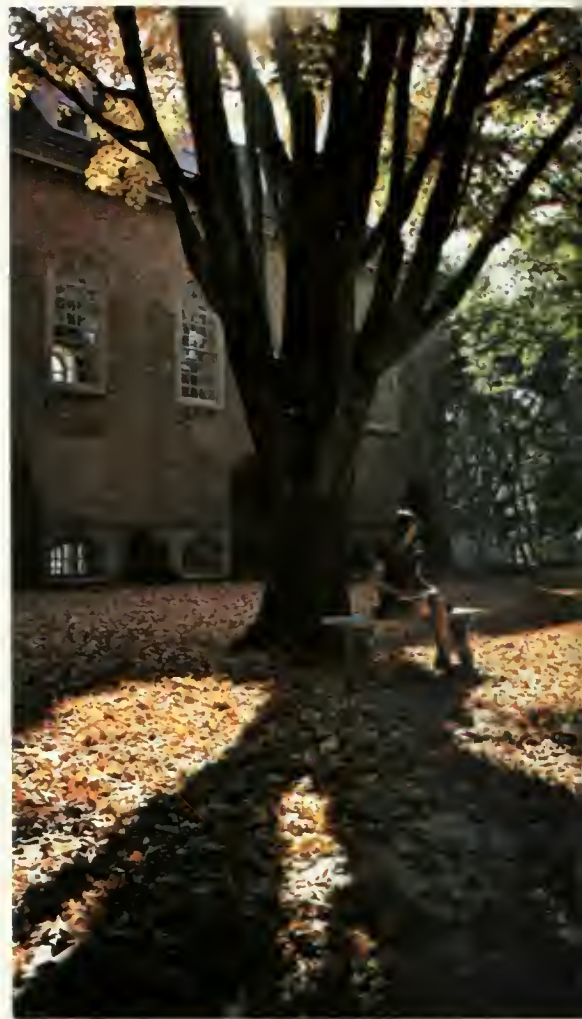

Sometimes, especially early in the year, it seemed that all they had in common was high SAT scores. It would have been difficult to find as much disparity among the students on any other campus where admissions standards were as selective. William and Mary people were more than students and professors. Other people, with different attitudes, different tastes, different lives to react to.

A renewed furor over an old but critical problem brought former New York City police officer Harvey P. Gunion to the college as the first Director of Safety and Security. The publicized reports of actual assaults and attempted rapes so alarmed the college community that by October, only the most courageous went strolling alone on campus after dark and the administration boosted the security patrol to a force of 25.

"Don't Be a Victim," the circular distributed by campus police with suggestions for defense against attackers. "If you can't run: Weaponry." Better yet, don't go out alone. But when the situation was necessary, ext.
6-ESCORT. A student-staffed, student-initiated group who provided two companions for students who had to walk the poorly lighted campus between the dark hours of 7 pm. and 4
the morning.

The routine crystallized quickly. Settling into class schedules. The post office between lunch and lab. Beating it from the newly-named Richard Morton Hall (that everybody still called “the social sciences building”) to Wren in ten minutes. Every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday eighty-three times a year. Dimming beauties like Crim Dell and Wren Courtyard into the blur of familiarity. And at the end of the day – a one-room home to collapse in.

A $75 room-damage deposit discouraging nails and cracked plaster. The college tried to maintain the appearance of new and already-renovated dorms while the others awaited their faceliftings. Freshmen were isolated in Brown instead of Ludwell, where suites were opened to upperclassmen, and the "Botetourt Residences," better, if less distinctively, known as the new housing complex, were reapportioned to include William and Mary's first language houses. Reacting to complaints from parents, alums, and Richmond, President Graves informed students that self-determination meant determining regulations as well as freedoms. Relaxing visitation policies drew complaints of cohabitation and even though no one knew how long a "visit" had to be before visitation stopped and cohabitation started, individual dorms drew up guidelines regulating visitation, and regulating quiet hours, parties, and which rest rooms should accommodate which sex.

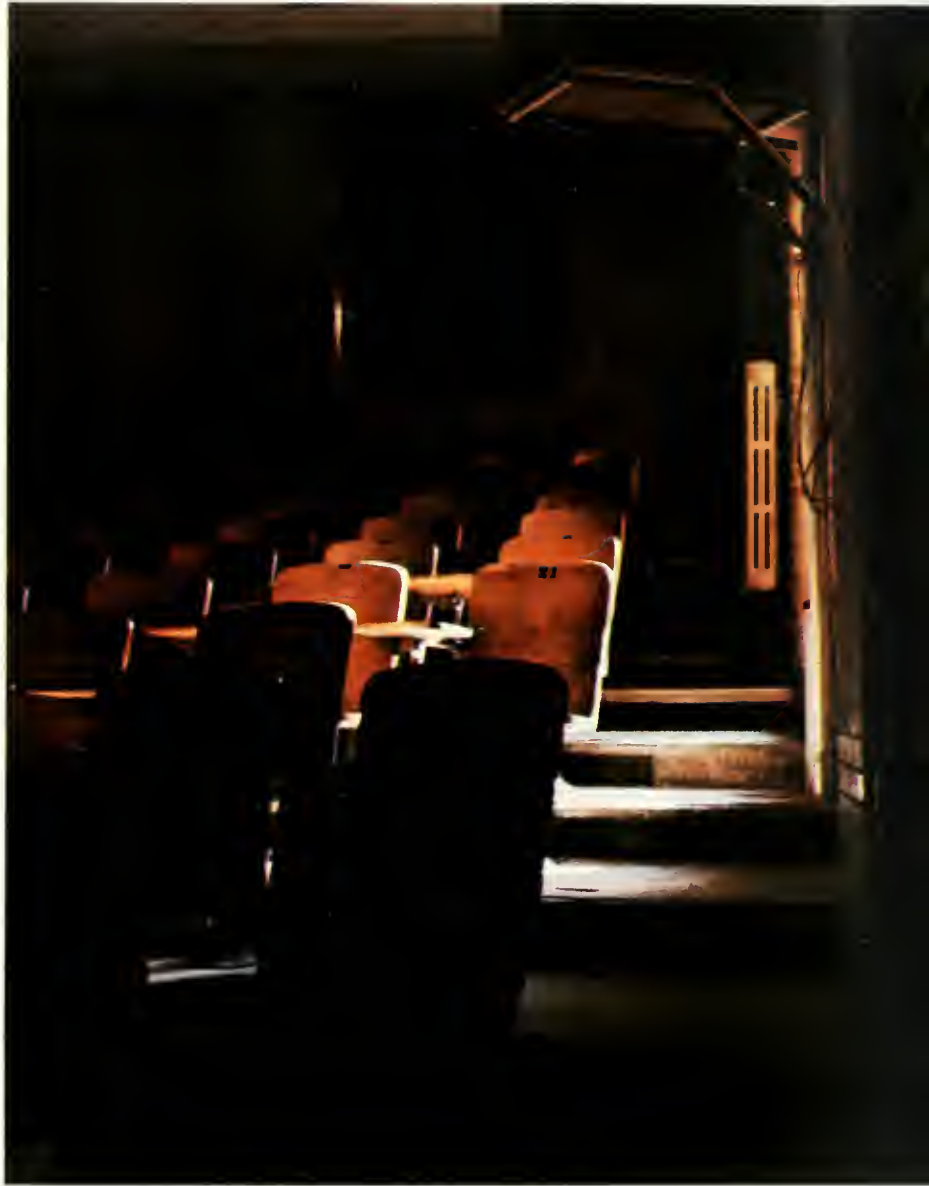

Along with the new Associate Dean for Residence Hall Life, Morris Wray, Vanderbilt gave us Interhall, a campus-wide dormitory association that spent the year getting started. An attempt to make dorm life a valuable contributor to the overall educational experience by planning cultural, intellectual, and social programs for residence hall. Unit B's Uncle Morris Coffee House, for example, and lobby showings of Walt Disney's "The Absent-Minded Professor."

If dorms were nothing else, they were packed jammed full. The lack of living space gave President Graves an argument against Richmond's pressure for a higher enrollment. The Shaver report that accused William and Mary and other State supported colleges of having too many classrooms for the number of students did not include the fact that three sections of Psych 202 had a total enrollment of 850 students.

Confronted with inadequate seating capacities and an understaffed department. Supply does not equal demand. Still the classrooms multiplied. In the shape of a gargantuan mud-hole in Phi Beta field that was soon to be filled by a new chemistry building.

Classes. A movement away from the regurgitation of facts toward an emphasis on individual, original thinking. Continuation of the freshman seminar included small discussion classes in the freshman schedule of gigantic lecture halls. For upperclassmen, the same, old routine, just differing levels of seriousness. Classes. Supposedly, that's what it was all about.

But there was so much more than those twelve or fifteen hours a week. Free University taught bridge and bike repair, folk dancing, photography, and sexuality. There was always something that could be written, played, bought, drawn, performed, looked or laughed at. CW's Occasion for the Arts and an SA Art Festival. Sports, as a participant or a spectator. Clubs, committees, and chorus. The feeling of community, of a common goal that everyone was working toward, finally began to materialize. Along with the awesome sense of tradition that comes with attending a school nearly 100 years old.

Williamsburg contributed Baskin-Robbins and 31 flavors to the year and a long-needed rival to the Pub, The Hospitality House. The novelties (and prices) of Merchant's Square and Sometime Sunday retreats farther down Dog Street for meditation or for making merry. And always, the tourists. "The Wren Building? Sure. You go right across the street and follow that brick walk to the building — you can see the weather vane on top; over the trees; see it? — That's the Wren Building . . . You're welcome."

Recollections of Homecoming, reading period, football season, of preparations for Christmas, of the total number of pages read in the past year, of the afternoons spent in the sun and of the nights spent in the library makes almost believable the passage of time.

The year was so tumultuous, it was difficult for anyone to remain calm. The vice-president resigned for the first time in U.S. history. The president lost his head and without telling took a commercial flight. The Democrats lost their heads and didn't hijack it. The energy crisis made dorms a lot colder and weekends a lot longer, at least for those who had hometowns gallons away.

People first whispered then shouted words like impeachment and rationing and amid the storm Virginia elected a governor. It was difficult to decide quite what to do about a country with a shortage of paper, a shortage of fuel, a shortage of jobs, and an extreme shortage of trust in its government.

Gentle forces. Chance stimuli that help to decide what side you're on and where you'll be tomorrow. Day-to-day decisions that, when considered individually, seem insignificant, but that compositely determine the direction of growth.

The heritage. Something that gives the sense of from where and toward what. Twenty years out of 281 that help determine perspective.

The sixties saw the de-emphasis and the decline of the Greeks, a strong institution at W&M the decade before. The frats at the lodges instead of the new complex. A very-much-the-same sorority court. The decline of the Greeks culminated in the death of Sigma Nu last year. And now a surprising resurgence. Sororities and fraternities have made some necessary changes and are attracting freshmen interest. The de-emphasis of sports, however, is a 70's thing. The years before favored pep rallies and bonfires, cheering sections and cheerleaders. Listlessness from the spectators and a lack of commitment from the players tells the story today.

Formality summarized William and Mary's social life during the fifties and sixties. A spring ball held in the sunken garden highlighted the year. Required chaperones at fraternity functions until 1965. The administration's prohibiting the consumption of alcohol on campus in the mid fifties made for very stiff, formal social affairs and for a very unpopular administration. A "Beer Rebellion" by students who claimed that the college should not serve as a parental substitute in either social, moral, or educational matters. Yet the policy stood until 1966. Now the alcohol runs freely but a statement in the new Student Life Policies Handbook prohibits the use and distribution of any drugs.

Freshmen at the college twenty years ago were required to wear "Duc Caps" at all times except on weekends "to afford upperclassmen the opportunity to get to know the new students." "Senior Day" when all seniors were excused from classes.

A common sight — hoards of college men gathered daily on the steps of the old Methodist church to watch the girls as they made their way to the P.O., then located in the arcade. Others preferred jockey corner for its "overall view." Plus "the silhouettes against the cars were terrific."

For meals and entertainment, the fifties offered the "Corner Greeks," and "Danny's Campus Hangout." More recently, Georges, the Delly's, and the "Pub, and a tendency towards decentralization as students take advantage of what little night life is available in the "Burg." The dating scene, previously as formal as the dances. Now informal relationships were often a quiet evening with wine and cheese and a good guitarist at a coffee house or a rap session in a dorm replaces the "drunken highs" of big college dances.

Dormitories — a one room home away from home, with everyone except men over 21 required to live in them. As little as $55 per semester rent in the fifties. After twenty years of steady deterioration, over $200. In some cases, occupancy was nearly twice normal capacity. Building new dorms, emphasizing smaller units and a more intimate atmosphere alleviated the problem. “Resident Assistant” no longer just a title, but a responsibility. Change comes slowly: window screens slashed and rooms entered during the sixties. Heavy duty screens installed in late 1973. Once upon a time, William and Mary coeds received demerits for breaking dorm regulations. Right up until 1971. In 1966, lates were approved for Upperclassmen. A senior was allowed nine one o'clock curfews a semester, juniors, seven, and sophomores, five. A running record of late minutes could mean a “strict campus” penalty that restricted a girl to her room for one or both nights of a weekend. A demonstration for “individual responsibility” in '67 and then the great upheaval in '69 when curfews lifted, dorms opened to visitors of the opposite sex, and off-campus housing became available to senior women, as William and Mary began to realize that with a groan, college women, even Southern belles, could take care of themselves. The long, hard road to equality. And now they're talking coed dorms. A new dean in charge of housing and a change in the view of what a dorm is. Slowing down the rate of deterioration by instilling a semblance of responsibility for one's living conditions with a room contract and a damage deposit. Attempts to make the dorm more than just a shell to crawl into at the end of the day, with creative hall painting to break the monotony of cinder block walls, and weekly programs, some social, others academic. Nevertheless, with a few exceptions, basically a one room home.

An excessive building program of the Paschall era. Expansion through the woods north of old campus. Around Lake Matoaka — a popular swimming spot during the warm months. All the way to “Jock Palace,” an unusual sight for sedate colonial Williamsburg. Now for most students, the old campus with its romantic beauty exists mainly as a good place for a Sunday afternoon stroll. But the “green machines” still make their hourly stop at “Barrett Corner.”

A history of academic pressure, 1965 marked the third upgrade in academic standards since 1950. The previous year, Vice President Lambert warned that staying in school was going to get harder. And it did. Until in 1970, the elimination of the "D" grade created a mass exodus of flunkers and droppers-out. "William and Mary students never flunk, they just NC away." As the pressures increased, the academic emphasis began to shift. The reduction and reorganization of requirements for graduation allowed students more freedom in determining their schedules. The special Curriculum Committee reported in fall, 1969, findings from the first review of the curriculum in 35 years. Recommendations included a normal course load of four courses, interdisciplinary majors, one optional pass-fail course for juniors and seniors, and freshmen seminars. Some departments began allowing concentrators to express their feelings towards the curriculum, while others saw course evaluations as of the utmost importance. The move to a "total education experience" began with Project Plus and now the language houses. Students in Project Plus organized an interim program during semester break. This year, it became school-wide. And the Free University teaching those "non-academic" courses which students today feel are relevant to their lives. And after six years of study, the college still has not decided to move exams to before Christmas.

The Statement of Rights and Responsibilities is the College's attempt at combining different groups of the college community into a purposeful unit, working for the common goal of education. The statement has become the "standard by which all rules, regulations, policies and procedures" of the college are measured. It is a beginning. In one statement of privileges, the standards provide that each member of the College community has the right to organize his or her own personal life and behavior as long as it does not violate college regulations. Taking into consideration the powers of the Board of Vistors and of the administration, the privilege sounds like an unguaranteed guarantee, to the effect that anyone can do what he likes — as long as the college likes it too. Besides; in section three of the Statement, the college is given the right "to set and enforce reasonable standards of . . . personal conduct in order to facilitate and safeguard

Statement of Rights and Responsibilities The College of William and Mary in Virginia

The unique nature of the college community suggests that its members be united in a common purpose. Because the work of each member of the community contributes to the fulfillment of the educational mission of the College, the various constituent groups—students, faculty and administrators—are dependent upon one another for the ultimate achievement of the College's goals. Accordingly, all should enjoy the same fundamental rights and privileges and be willing to accept the same responsibilities, except in those rare cases where either the rights and privileges or the responsibilities would be in conflict with existing law or with the goals and purposes of the College as an institution of higher education.

Students, faculty and administrators (hereinafter the "members of the College community") shall enjoy all rights, privileges and immunities guaranteed to every citizen of the United States and the Commonwealth of Virginia. In addition, the members of the College community shall enjoy all of the fundamental rights recognized as essential to fulfillment of the special mission of an institution of higher education. The full enjoyment of these rights, however, cannot be achieved unless certain concurrent responsibilities are accepted. Members of the College community have an obligation, therefore, to fulfill the responsibilities incumbent on all citizens as well as the responsibilities inherent in their particular roles within the academic community.

The institution and those who administer its affairs have a special responsibility to insure that in pursuance of its functions, the rights of all members of the College community are preserved. The institution also has a right to expect, and a corresponding responsibility to insure within the scope of its legitimate functions as an institution of higher education, that individual members of the College community fulfill their responsibilities to others as well as their responsibilities to the institution.

The following Statement of Rights and Responsibilities is based upon the aforesaid principles and, when adopted, shall become the standard by which all rules, regulations, policies and procedures of the College, except as otherwise prescribed by local, State or Federal law, shall be measured. No rule, regulation, policy or procedure which is incompatible with or which contradicts this document may be enacted and any such rules, regulations, policies or procedures which are in effect at the time of the enactment of this document shall be reviewed as soon as reasonably practicable to conform with this document, provided, however, that this Statement of Rights and Responsibilities shall not affect the powers of the Board of Visitors as provided by law.

I

The members of the College community, as individuals, shall enjoy all rights, privileges and immunities guaranteed every citizen of the United States and the Commonwealth of Virginia.

- A. Among the basic rights are freedom of expression and belief, freedom of association and peaceful assembly and freedom from personal force and violence, threats of violence and personal abuse.
- B. Each member of the College community has a right in his or her dealings with the institution and with members of the College community in the performance of their official duties to non-discriminatory treatment without regard to race, creed, sex, religion, national origin, or political belief.
- C. Each member of the College community has the right to organize his or her own personal life and behavior insofar as it does not violate local, State or Federal law, College regulations, or agreements voluntarily entered into, and does not interfere with the rights of others. The following specific rights apply:
 1. Right to associate with any legally established group or to create such groups, professional or other, as serve legitimate interests.
 - a. The membership, policies, and actions of an organization will be determined by vote of those who hold membership in said organization.
 - b. Affiliation with an extramural organization shall not disqualify an organization from institutional recognition.
 - c. An organization will be officially recognized after its constitution and by-laws have been approved by the appropriate body as designated by the President or his delegated representative and when consistent with the By-laws of the Board of Visitors. A current list of officers, but not a membership list, may be required as a condition of recognition.
 - d. Officially recognized organizations, including those affiliated with an extramural organization, shall be open to all on a non-discriminatory basis without regard to race, religion, creed, national origin, sex or political belief, provided, however, that to the extent permitted by law membership in honorary or social organizations may be restricted to members of the the educational process." The policy makers have not yet given students enough responsibility in determining their own life-styles during their four years at

William and Mary. It is difficult, however, to consider only parts of the Statement of Rights and Responsibilities. Such an attempt by the college would certainly have shortcomings. But the sound rationale of the document insures that it will improve in itself and that it will improve the community. The recognition that each constituent group of the college community is dependent upon the other to achieve the common goal of education suggests that each group will be respected for its own contribution and rewarded with its own responsibilities. The Statement is an honest endeavor to pull together different experiences and philosophies, to integrate the formerly disparate group at William and Mary into a working body.

DIVERSIONS

Dramatic art is aged. But old?
For some the curtain is a shroud.
For others, a magician's cape.

Is the theatre really dead?

Glenn Wade (William and Mary Theatre): I think theatre is one of the most lively arts because it depends on living human beings. Theatre is not dead because . . . it's a self-contained art that you carry around with you all the time.

Kevin Gardiner (New Shakespeare Company of San Francisco): I believe that theatre in America is dying. What we call theatre we have to redefine.

Howard Scammon (Department of Theatre and Speech): I don't think theatre is dead. This weekend there are four original plays being done here by student directors and student producers. As much as I enjoyed

As You Like It, I think there are other forms going on which are just as exciting . . .

Chris Leeper (William and Mary Theatre): The revolt against the old forms in dramatic art was the beginning of modern theatre. If there had been no revolt against stylized theatre, then theatre may have died. We need new forms, and if we can't have new forms, let's have nothing.

Neil Lerch (William and Mary Theatre): It's an exciting adventure to try to breathe your own special kind of life into something. You have to find new ways to make Shakespeare or Moliere interesting.

Louis E. Catron (Department of Theatre and Speech): Perhaps if you consider the involvement of the total population, theatre is dead. It is, however, a very active and dynamic force for the small percentage of the people who are involved. Just as music or sculpture, theatre is an art form which attempts to enrich the lives of its audience. Theatre is not dead. It can never die.

Susan Dandridge (William and Mary Theatre/Backdrop): Theatre is a composite art form which blends all art forms . . . I don't think it will ever be dead as long as there is any art form alive.

Chris Leeper: I was standing there wondering what was happening on that stage and why the people were there. There is a magic to the theatre . . . There is a following who feel the magic, and they won't stop coming.

Howard Scammon: . . . It's just a question of a person going, looking for it, and finding it.

"One not only heard Shakespeare; one saw it. And saw it come alive with such warmth and down-to-earth realness . . ."

Just one of the rare reviews that greeted the New Shakespeare Company of San Francisco for its vital performance of As You Like It. Director Margrit Roma drew the audience into the action of the play by staging all entrances and all exits from the aisles and by setting informal backgrounds. The outstanding acting and overwhelming enthusiasm, especially in performances by Kevin Gardiner (Orlando) and Bonnie Borenstein (Rosalind) distinguished this refreshingly original interpretation of Shakespeare.

In an art that may be showing its age

something new

The October production of Anton Chekov's The Sea Gull took the stage and held the audience with unexpected interweavings of comedy, with tragedy, of farce with melodrama; with expected excellence in set design and in performances by

Glenn Wade as Madame Treplara

Judy Webb as Nina

Neil Lerch as Konstantin.

The lack of dramatic action and the lack of a clear-cut hero reinforced Chekov's theme of man's search for order and for purpose in his existence.

Stark And Disturbing.

Meeting the challenge of Lorca's The House of Bernarda Alba, Director Louis Catron and his all-female cast powerfully portrayed the imprisonment and resulting decay of women in Spain during the 1930's. Imprisonment in the overhead rafters that pressed so relentlessly down on the stage, in the severe black of the costuming. A curious set of mores expressed in the agonizing insistence that Bernarda Alba screamed at her defiled daughter's death: "My daughter died a Virgin!" A frighteningly real sense of age, achieved by the latex make-up artfully applied by Sarah Williams. The Spanish set, designed by Doug Minnerly, was labeled "unsurpassed in the past two years of theatre," by President Thomas Graves.

Glenn Wade flawless once again as the dynamic Bernarda Alba. Kay Ferguson outstandingly successful as the bitter, tender La Poncia.

Additional fine performances by Ann Ruble as Maria Josefa, Carmella Maurizi as Magdalena, and Carol Roig as Adela. Typifying the audience's reaction, Mrs. Thomas Graves commented: "The cast did a believable job of showing the role of women during Franco's regime.

The Actresses Had Amazing Talent.

Despite some weak performances and February colds, the cast of Anything Goes entertained the audiences of both week-end runs with delightful music and uproarious comedy.

Though Nancy McMahon struggled with a cold during her first few performances as the night club singer and though Terri Bartlett's laryngitis reduced her singing to mouthing words to Lisa Liberati's voice, both girls gave admirable performances. Both, moreover, overpowered the surprisingly weak performance by the heroine of the show, Carmella Maurizi. The song and dance of Mark Martino and the antics of Keith Pickerel. The magic of Cole Porter's music. Excellence in costumes and in choreography. Both Costume Designer J. H. Bledso and Director Howard Scammon captured in the costumes and staging the flash and show of the 1930's.

Death, taxes, and Gilbert and Sullivan from Sintonicon. The inevitable came this year in the form of fairies in Iolanthe, enchanting audiences with comedy, music, and Katherine Farrell, the most notable performer in the cast. A Gilbert-and-Sullivanly large chorus successful in setting a mirthful tone. The

of Benjamin Savage and David Page. And an outstanding musical background from James Gatling and the orchestra that so pleasantly redeemed some occasional deficiencies in the production. Good. For a laugh.

Singing and dancing. Backdrop lifted numbers from Funny Girl, My Fair Lady, South Pacific, The Fantasiks, combined them with original dance and with popular music performances, threw in a magic act for good measure, and presented on December 9 a vaudevillian arrangement of fourteen acts in A VARIETY SHOW. Students doing whatever they like best. And raising money to get the student-run group out of debt, besides. The fund-raising was preparation for the annual spring production, produced, directed, and choreographed entirely by students.

In the beginning there are actors. Rehearsing on an empty stage. And then one day there are actors with make-up and costumes. Rehearsing on a stage that is no longer dark and empty but now filled with scenery and with light. The miracle of transformation known as Technical design.

This year, for the first time in William and Mary Theatre: student designers. Costume design begins with research. Hours of research to create historically accurate costumes. For Seagull this year, the costume designers recreated the dress of nineteenth century Russia; for that of Iolanthe, eighteenth century England; and for the House of Bernarda Alba, Spain in the 1930's. With the magic from student make-up artists and hair designers a young American became an old Spaniard, a member of Parliament, or a member of Queen Mab's court. Students working in set design created scenery not only to accurately portray the period but also to help convey the mood of the play. The designers produced sets and lighting effects to guide the attention of the audience toward the action of the play and to reflect themes that the scripts tried to communicate. Contributing – to the effectiveness of the theatre productions. Learning – how to use lighting sets, costumes, and make-up to transform a paper script into a living medium of expression.

Preparations for their annual program began early this fall for the Mermettes, W & M's aquatic arts group, with more than just the regular Wednesday night practice sessions. In Concert:

Big names at William and Mary Hall. The Grateful Dead opened the year with a surprise. For their encore — an unannounced second performance on Wednesday night that meant three-dollar tickets and a chance to dance to Grateful Dead live. The Trinidad Steel Band, nearly unknown before their Homecoming concert here, were little better known afterward. For a very different crowd, the very different performance of David Crosby and Graham Nash. They mixed the old with the new, the well-known with the obscure. Taj Mahal presented a combination of blues and jazz that wasn't fully appreciated by a crowd anticipating Crosby and Nash. In mid-November the J. Geils Band, after a late start, drove their audience into a foot-stomping, hand-clapping frenzy. The frenzy returned with the record-breaking crowds that came for the Allman Brothers in December. Performances with excitement — even in the spontaneous jamming — and as uproarious as the audience they played for.

Most of the large crowd that met Seals and Croft at William and Mary would agree that the word to describe their concert was short. After arriving thirty minutes late, the versatile group entertained with a mixture of old hits like "Hummingbird" and some new sounds. A concert of good music for the time it lasted. Taj Mahal surprised the Grateful Dead fans by providing excellent backup music for the Grateful Dead concert. The Hall saw James Brown perform during Black Culture Week and a dynamite performance by Linda Ronstadt and Jackson Browne. Chicago's concert in March was an emotional and colorful performance. Along with the entertainers came the crowds. Security precautions set card-key systems into effect at noon the day of the concert until the following day.

A lack of parking and a surplus of litter announced to the campus that out-of-town guests were visiting at the Hall.

Visiting speakers 1973-74 – a wide spectrum.

Topics ranging from “Higher Education in Virginia” to the “Three Ages of Walt Whitman”. Before the November gubernatorial elections, the S.A. invited the candidates, lieutenant governor Henry Howell and former governor Mills Godwin to speak on Higher Education in Virginia. The main thrust of Howell’s somewhat disjointed speech was meaningful government. A continued effort to make the election process more meaningful to all Virginia residents with the announcement of his intention of backing a measure he called “The Virginia Government in the Sunshine Bill”. The bill, if enacted, would provide that all government meetings be open to the public and the press, allowing the formulation of all public policies in the “sunshine”. Noteworthy implications in the area of public education. Since deliberation about the allocation of state funds to colleges would be open, the various reasons behind unequal expenditures among state-supported schools would be made known to the voters and subject to their approval. Godwin praised the higher education system in Virginia in an October speech, reiterating the fact that under his administration as governor the community college system was established. He pledged continuing efforts to maintain and improve the quality of education in the state. Support for a measure which would enable third-year students to practice law. With respect to Howell’s “Government in the Sunshine” Godwin contended that the state government has been open to the public for many years. The expression of confidence that there were honest attempts to represent the will of the people. John Dalton, republican candidate for lieutenant governor, in a brief speech expressed his desire to get the public more involved with government decision-making by transforming the office of lieutenant-governor into a mediator between the government and the people. By frequently touring the state, he hoped to talk with the people who would express their complaints or interests in government. The S.A. sponsored David Halberstam in an address to the college on October 10. Halberstam, discussing U.S.-Soviet relations since World War II, contended that in recent years there has been a mitigating of the harshness between the two countries. Following World War II, severe conflicts emerged between the Communist and the free countries. The “we-they” policy tactics of the cold war era have been somewhat replaced by a “Great Power Balance” foreign policy. A quite different topic, covered by James Fields, sponsored by the English department. Fields was an actor who interpreted readings from Leaves of Grass, showing the three stages of Walt Whitman’s poetry and describing the youth, middle age, and old age of Whitman’s life. Reading from “Song of Myself”, Whitman’s experiences working in a hospital, and the poem “Drum Taps”.

Distinguished poet

James Schevill visited the college in late February. Schevill read some of his original poetry, including: “A Screamer Discusses Methods of Screaming”, “Fabulous Debris”, and “The Real Parader”. A program balanced between humorous and serious poetry, both making comments on society.

Seventeen College-Wide Committees, composed of students, faculty, administrators, and staff met, and recommended proposals on topics of student affairs. Some of the more prominent committees were the following:

- the Admissions Committee that worked this year with minority affairs,
- the Affirmative Action Committee that worked with rehiring and promotions,
- the Discipline Committee that had fewer matters to deal with since dorm councils have taken over government,
- the Environment Committee that concerned itself with special programs.

Nine undergrad and three graduate students, eight faculty members and three administrators formed the twenty-three who were to allocate the Student Activities Fee and to formulate recommendations for 1973-74.

For the first time in the history of the Board of Students Affairs, a student chaired the Finance Committee, directing the $75,600 allocation.

Taking a strong stand along with the Faculty Athletic Committee, the SA persuaded President Graves not to increase the already high student fee of $80 for varsity athletics.

A study of visitation problems at the request of the president, resulting in the recommendation that the present system of self-determination be maintained.

A comprehensive survey returned by 78% of the student body indicated an overwhelming desire to expand co-educational dormitories. The Board's Housing Committee recommended

co-ed housing

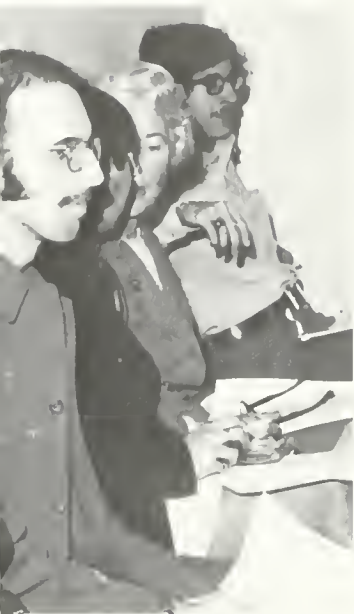

at Ludwell and Landrum, a lottery for room assignments for both men and women, and a continuation of freshman block housing.

A proposal, with the expectation of faculty approval, that students get official recognition for a double major if the requirements for both majors are met.

The suggestion that an appealed grade be reviewed by a committee of the faculty member's department peers.

Topics still under consideration: early registration system, academic calendar, course-dropping up to mid-semester, the athletic department's budget, security and lighting on campus, college busses and college laundry.

A statement from the Council soon to be included with undergraduate application forms. The William and Mary Review Guide to Better Poetry

1. Most people will dismiss as trivial any poem that uses the words "plastic", "quintessence", or "eternity" and features the death of small household pets.
2. Make it a habit to burn all poems written while stoned.
3. Feature animal personifications. General audiences blithely pass over this as an adorable Walt Disney touch and you can get away with murder with any sexual imagery thereafter. Parents have been innocently reading Lewis G. Carroll's poem about adulterous hedgehogs to their children at bedtime for years.
4. Do not use such gimmicks as "the unseen station wagon."
5. Poems about the butchering of animals for meat are fine for Pork Butcher's Weekly but will generally offend average audiences. People do not want to know where their meat really comes from and prefer to believe it is manufactured by benevolent gods from old sofa cushions.

ACADEMICS ACADEMICS ACADEMICS

administration

"We are moving from a period of plenty to a period of limited resources."

College President Thomas Ashley Graves spent this transactional year in trying to cope with the college's limited finances and in trying to prepare for possible future limitations. It was a year of self-examination. The questions asked by William and Mary's self-study "were those appropriate to a new administration." The findings and recommendations of the study zeroed in on a purpose that Graves felt was his major responsibility. "I see my major job as having a perspective on where the college is going and then to have all major decisions made with reference to that perspective." The study recommended the institution of a special office for long-range planning. Some of the action of the study included the following proposals: the careful selection and admission of fewer graduate students, a strong effort to enroll a more diversified student body with an emphasis on recruiting black students, the abolition of the swimming requirement "unless it is to be treasured as a quaint and charming academic anomaly," an increase in faculty salaries, the improvement of student housing and the expansion of student health services, the substitution of scholarships or tuition waivers for salaries of ranking staff of publications. "The challenge now," according to Graves, "is to be sure that we do not rest on our laurels.

We've got to find a way to consider and act on every recommendation made." The year of trial. This year tested the reorganization of the student affairs area of the administration. The concept involved narrowing the gap between student affairs and academics by focusing education on "the total student." During the first year of the new program, its implementation demanded an end to the artificial

between men and women and an emphasis on Dean Wray's "living-learning" concept of residence hall life. Self-determination, redefined and implemented, received the label "sensible" from Graves. "Students should be responsible for governing themselves." A year with problems. The General Assembly established a commission to research the management of the systems of higher education. Shaner's team emphasized efficiency, productivity, and accountability. "Frankly," commented Graves, "the Shaner questions were helpful in clarifying our thinking, especially in the area of Business Affairs."

The pressure for expansion came as the result of what seemed to be unused classroom space. "Technically, we do have classroom space in old, archaic amphitheatres. This does not suggest that we should add more bodies to fill up classroom space if we have no place to house them and house them well." Next year's budget will include provisions for a salaried individual to enlarge the heterogeneity of the student body by finding a way to recruit minorities. "The problem is not one of locating qualified men and women from minority groups, but one of convincing them to come here.

This could be a potentially uncomfortable atmosphere . . . We are looking for people with pioneer spirits."

The problem of minority admissions involved the tension between governmental pressure to increase minority enrollment and the college's refusal to lower admissions standards. "The Board of Visitors, the faculty, and the administration are as one in believing in the advantages for all students coming with a diversified, heterogeneous student body.

At no time and in no way will we lower either the quality of admissions standards or faculty standards." The problem of time. Graves found that he could not be as accessible to students as he was during his first two years. The changes have slowed.

"There are so darn many things we could do if we had the resources."

"During my first year or two it was so clear that there were a number of major areas needing attention and change. With change an aura of expectation developed, but change has to slow down."

President Graves' belief in a college of liberal learning that integrates extracurricular life with academics caused the reorganization that brought James C. Livingston from the religion department to the title of Dean of the Undergraduate Program. Dean Livingston's dual commitment to administration and to academics added a dedicated excitement about the quality of education to administration at William and Mary. The innovations in the restructuring planned a type of career counseling that attempted to keep students from continuing in a direction that was unsuited to their capabilities or interests. Dean Schultz, as Associate Dean for Student Development, concerned herself with the orientation and adjustment of freshmen and transfer students to William and Mary. The dormitories were visualized as a means of unity between academics and extracurricular life. There was an attempt to recreate the residence halls as a community of common interest with intellectual and cultural as well as social significance. Interhall was to establish the guidelines and programs without conflicting with the SA of BSA. The reshuffling reaffirmed William and Mary's long history of liberal arts strength and the avoidance of occupational training.

Available 24 hours a day. The noted improvement in William and Mary's health service. Free examinations and pharmaceuticals.

A more mature approach to personal matters with personal counseling and free dispensing of birth control pills. The ski-lodge like infirmary housed psychotherapy units, facilities for orthopedics, and a ward of 18 beds. An impressive reorganization under Dr. Cilley.

A new approach to budgetary control. The Board of Visitors worked on appropriations for the construction and renovation of classroom and office space. The construction of a new chemistry building on Phi Beta Field (the completion of which was originally anticipated for February) was to enable the beginning of renovation plans in Rogers. The plans for reconstruction of the Marshall-Whythe Law School allowed for expansion to an enrollment of 800.

The Board voted to increase bonds for the renovation of residence halls and undertook planning for the improvement of dorms and for a project to make more efficient use of James Blair Hall.

The proposal for an "Upward Bound" program in response to pressure from HEW. Projected to commence in fall 1974, the program would recruit and prepare students in minority groups for admission to the College.

The policy-makers gave new names to several of the buildings on campus. The new building complex became "Bottetourt Residences," the social sciences building was christened "Richard Morton Hall," the new infirmary, "David J. King Student Health Center."

Approval of a new maintenance agreement with Colonial Williamsburg to include grounds upkeep and landscaping with building maintenance in the duties of the CW work force. Authorization of a comprehensive review of W&M athletic procedures in both men's and women's physical education departments.

schools

A school in itself, separate from the liberal arts institution, the William and Mary School of Business.

"A damn good school that's come a long way in a short time."

Growth in size and prestige. With the addition of three new faculty members and with accreditation for the undergraduate program.

Not just courses, but a whole program broken down into modules to provide professional education for administration, to conduct continuing research on aspects of America's system of private enterprise, to assist business firms with placement, research, consulting, and information services.

The only W&M school with a sponsor's board to raise money for expansion of business programs.

"In earlier years the School of Business suffered from lack of visibility. Now we're getting out of this trap."

With innovations. A Bureau of Business Research that publishes reports on business affairs. Telephone to executives. A direct line to some of the top executives in the state. The line allows students to present problems and questions about management to men who can answer from experience. An instructional material

"so obvious. Why didn't someone think of it before?"

intellectually exhausting, emotionally exhausting.”*

Some seniors found one semester of student teaching “outside the ivory tower of William and Mary” an abrupt, sometimes shocking, introduction to the working world. “Even if I weren’t going to teach I would have benefitted from my professional semester.”

The School of Education is accredited by the state of Virginia and now has reciprocal agreements with thirty-one other states.

A combination of practice with theory, according to Dean Richard B. Brooks. “We emphasize theory to keep our graduates from falling for every educational fad that comes along.” The search for a new dean to replace Brooks, who departs at the end of the year.

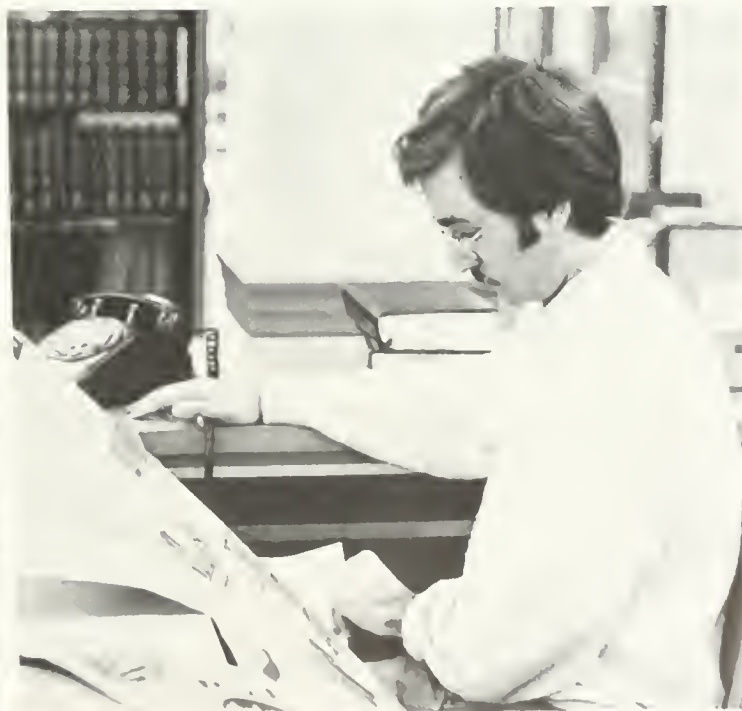

3,000 applicants for 350 openings. A tough school to get in to. The Marshall-Wythe School of Law still awaiting the General Assembly's decision on the possibility of expansion and of funding for new facilities.

"right now, a very small community filled with people who take graduate study very seriously, but it seems on the verge of a change."

In a moot court program, open to second and third year law students, the school offers opportunity for experience. Practical learning in appellate agreement and briefing. Three new courses for a broader background: Corporate Finance, Copyright, Patent, and Trademark, Law and Mass Communications. The infiltration of women. For the first time at Marshall-Wythe, a 15-20% female enrollment.

At the same time that the Evening School and Summer Sessions combined, "Special Programs", a conglomeration of total noncredit courses, began. As a result, the Evening College began offering only "purely academic" choices, without noncredit selections. An attempt to meet the needs of the graduate students and students enrolled in no particular degree program. Neither the Evening or the Summer Session has a degree program. The Summer Session operates in two five week semesters.

"In a ten-week period the Summer School serves as many students as the college serves in a whole year — 5200 all together."

An autonomous budget that must generate funds to pay for everything and an attempt at keeping small fees small. In the summer session, students had more flexibility in types of study, and also in the hours that they chose to study. "A full spectrum is offered in the summer curriculum. In the schools of Education and of Business Administration, more courses are offered for the graduate student in the summer than in the winter." Plans for an increase in social activities for the summer student.

"If you're here for both sessions, for twelve hours, those last three weeks are really bad . . ."

This summer the International Farm Youth Exchange will draw to Williamsburg approximately 300 students from 30 nations.

"To provide data which can serve administrators with more valid basis for formulating decisions."

Institutional Research, a new program under the guidance of Dean Herrmann, gathers information on such topics as enrollment costs, faculty loads, faculty costs and more. The use of data and of the computers to make analyses which will provide alternatives for problems.

A coordinating and reporting agency for the college to outside groups, such as HEW, that require data from colleges.

Involved in establishing a data base, in the study of limited space, and in the study of transfer students. The projected goal:

"To research how to improve educational experience on campus."

A strong effort to build ocean research capabilities on the new budget given to the Virginia Institute of Marine Science, a $504,000 ocean research vessel received top priority.

"Much needs to be known in order to consider offshore environmental needs," reasoned Dr. William J. Hargis, Jr., VIMS director.

"We need a vessel for the open sea where research on potential pollution . . . by oil spills, sewage and other waste contamination must be done so that adequate engineering skills and controls can be developed."

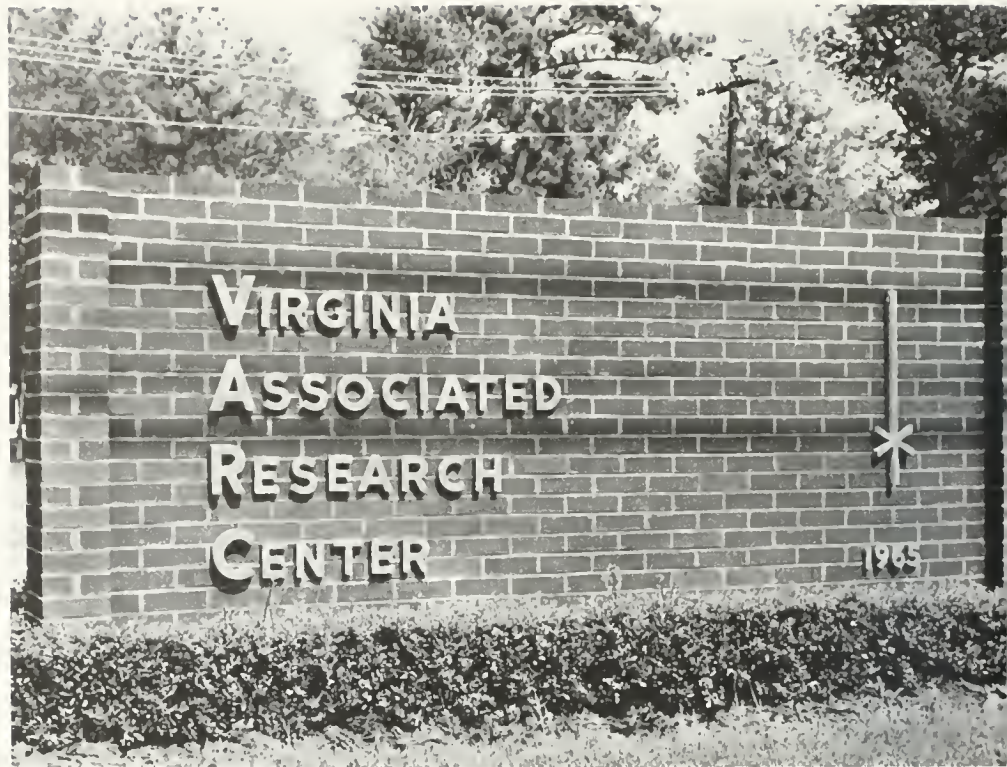

Primarily intended for the advanced student interested in specializing in Marine Science or Oceanography. Advanced training offered in Marine Pollution Biology, Invertebrate Ecology, Physiology and other topics in Marine Biology.

V.A.R.C. An extension of William and Mary located in Newport News. Providing advanced courses in Applied Sciences, Business Administration, and other fields. Research programs being conducted in such areas as space radiation effects, nuclear physics and radiation biology. Also located at V.A.R.C. is the new Office of Special Programs which offers a broad range of non-credit courses.

"For people who seek individual self-development, improvement of professional competence or intellectual experience in areas of personal interest and appeal."

"It's getting better."

On the surface, at least, the Anthro department has entirely changed. The headquarters in the basement of Washington have been painted, redecorated, and dressed up with display cases.

More change in new opportunities for field research in this "broadening department". Archaeological excavations along the nearby James River. Majors in Anthro find it ". . . a field that involves every other field. . . . The professors aren't particularly interesting, I just like the subject."

"I had an idea college courses were like this."

For freshmen, Biology 101 is still causing trauma. Dr. Coursen's objective was not to torture freshmen but to teach them, by relating lecture and laboratory.

"To try to get across some concept of the term life, whether in general or in the very specific."

For Parent's Day the Biology department opened Millington to display the electron microscope, physiology equipment, and the greenhouse. Upperclass concentrators and grad students were on hand to perform experiments and demonstrations for the parents. For upperclassmen, no trauma, but relevance.

"I don't think that any other department could be more relevant to our life today."

A new building.

"At least we won't have to overcome obstacles like falling plaster and leaky drain pipes."

Chemistry's basic philosophy is instruction by lecture and laboratory.

"The increased safety factors will allow more variability in choosing experiments for laboratory."

Fifty per cent of all graduating seniors engage in independent research. And the research program is expanding. A new course in polymers (macromolecules) and special polymer lab. Graduates pursuits ranging from medicine to law to chemical mining.

The program in classical studies includes not only ancient languages, but ancient civilizations as well. New majors in classical civilization. A part-time instructor, Professor Carol Esler, to accommodate large enrollments. According to one Latin student who spends hour translating.

"Latin's a dead language, as dead as it can be. It killed off all the Romans and now it's killing me."

A new summer course for Latin teachers, an active Classics Club, and concentrators who respect their professors.

"Classics is a fantastic department with brilliant professors who show genuine concern for their students."

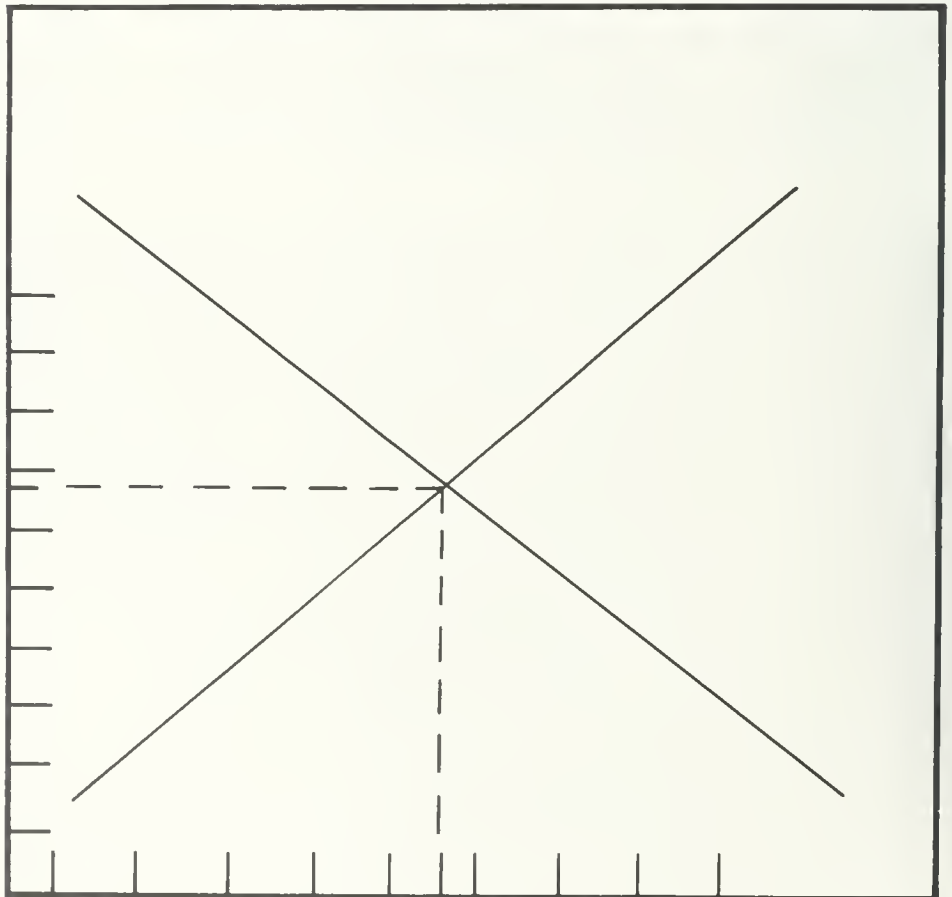

Professor Schifrin: "We are happy in our work." The work of exploring the economics of the ecology movement, of interpreting international trade, of explaining why West End is more expensive than Food Fair.

As far as the students are concerned,

"You can use it and may be even get a job."

"I flunked Econ 101, but I love it." "If you like graphs, take Econ."

New requirements for concentration in the English Department. In the opinion of Carl R. Dolmetsch, Department Head,

"This should give students a more solid basis on which to work, whether or not they plan to sequence or major in English."

New courses as well, such as "Black Literature in America," taught by the first native Black American on the faculty. New program that has worked to bring more writers to the campus to present readings and lectures. A seminar required for senior concentrators. According to one English major,

"The main requirement of the senior seminar is a research paper. That a research paper should be the crowning, climaxing accomplishment from four years of literary study is a disappointment. Somehow, literature seems more alive. There must be a lively way to study it."

A department that graduates two types of majors. Fine Arts offers a program for studio and for art history majors. Students were left mainly to discover and to develop their talents independently.

"Basic design was a frustrating course."

Drawing was offered again this year, and a new course in lithography. "Ceramics proved to be a fantastic emotional outlet."

"Although the professors are talented artists, it was impossible for them to teach their skills or communicate their ability for artistic accomplishment."

"Many students do not even know we exist."

Small wonder, buried in Bryan's basement. But things are happening down there. Two new courses, geomorphology and paleoecology. Emphasis on research and field work. Students presenting papers at the Virginia Academy of Sciences and Northeastern Section of the Geological Society of America. Instigation of the departmental honors program. A friendly department. Majors are

"a very close knit group."

A department that considers itself:

"very relevant to the student's lives in the outside world."

Government majors consider their department a necessity.

"Anybody living in a democracy should be required to take government courses just to find out how their country runs."

A student-faculty liaison committee making the department "very responsive to students".

"Students respect the professors as individuals as well as learned men. The classroom atmosphere is friendly and relaxed."

This year, a celebrity. Professor George Grayson just elected to the state legislature.

Morton Hall of Social Sciences. The Social Sciences building named for the chairman of the history department from 1919-1959. A new professor to teach Asian history. And a new master's program in historical archaeology. The history department strove for a "balance between young and old." From the students, differing perspectives from their own histories in the department: "Even though grading's not easy, I'd rather take my electives in history than any other department." "History is impractical and irrelevant."

"When you think of William and Mary, you think of the History Department."

"A strong shift to computer science."

To accommodate the increased student interest in computer-oriented math, an expansion of computer science with new faculty and a new assistant director of the computer science center. The new director, Dr. O'Neil, headed the computer science department in a more social direction. Another first for math — a department beer bust.

For the most part, ROTC is "misunderstood."

Not "a definite commitment," ROTC provides the opportunity for "additional management and leadership training." One of the recent graduates from W & M's ROTC program is on commission in a Florida Med School; another is studying history in England.

Among its projects, ROTC takes on a rifle team, co-ed skydiving, a flight program, and now . . . women. Six girls enrolled in the ROTC program this year for full credit.

French, Italian, Russian, Spanish, and East Asian. The Modern Languages department teaches the spoken as well as the written language, an understanding of the literature of another country, and an appreciation of its culture. Courses in English translation for the non-major.

"Knowledge of a foreign language is necessary for the truly educated person."

For travel, for graduate school, or just for interest. For the very interested; the language houses, a chance for immersion in another language and culture. A more complete immersion in the program that allows a junior to spend a year in France.

Top: Practicing in Ewell Hall. Bottom: Dr. Fehr and Keith Savage.

The retirement of Dr. Fehr.

"The choir just won't be the same without him."

As for the rest of the department,

"the teachers love music and you can tell it in everything they do."

Courses of interest to the entire campus. Introduction to Music. A freshman seminar in Jazz. Surprising talent in nationally known performing organizations. Music courses give a sense of culture to the students. A greater appreciation of the musician as an artist. And, in Theory 101-102, an easy A.

Known campus-wide for the Raft Debate, sponsored by the Philosophy Club. Very active faculty members, highly rated by students. Among them, Frank MacDonald, winner of the Thomas Jefferson Award.

"Those of us who major in the department become very close to the faculty. There is great rapport between students and teachers."

Besides majors, many area or sequence in philosophy. So many that "student demand makes it difficult to experiment."

But students are satisfied.

"History of Philosophy has helped me in every other course I've taken at the college."

"Where else can you get free golf and tennis lessons?"

Required. Courses ranging from traditional team sports to activities for the individual.

"Before coming to William and Mary I was a total klutz, but now I can bowl, dance, and play tennis."

As for proficiency tests: "horrible".

"A P.E. major couldn't have passed that thing."

Students like gym classes for a number of reasons.

"It keeps me from gaining weight . . . I love to run."

Students do not like gym class for a number of reasons.

"If I never see the inside of a gym again it will be too soon."

"The Physics Department is an exceedingly pleasant place to work . . ."

Popular courses like Cosmology and Physics of Music. Student-faculty committees which organize plans and make recommendations.

". . . a very democratically run department"

under the

"excellent leadership" of Dr. Von Bayer.

"Everyone has their say."

Proof of the department's quality lies in their earning the last grant given by the National Science Foundation, the NSF Departmental Developmental Grant of $610,000, awarded to departments

"on the brink of excellence."

A year-long research project expected of every senior. The availability of one of the three synchro-cyclotrons in the United States at the Space Radiation Effects Laboratory is one of the reasons for the strength of the Physics Department.

Sexuality. The newest course in the psychology department, along with Cognitive Styles and Individual Differences on the graduate level. Emphases ranging from clinical to experimental psychology. Practical experience at Eastern State. On the whole

"the courses taught seem very popular with the students" may be because

"the department is very well staffed with an active faculty reflecting a great variety of interests."

Or as one student put it

"any department that gives so many A's can't be all bad."

The Religion Department graduated its first A.B. Progress since its beginning in 1968. Courses in eastern religions, and the Judaic and Christian traditions. A new course in "Religious Ethics and Social Issues." Rapidly expanding library facilities to match its increasing enrollment. Marked by

"Congeniality and a general air of competence . . . the department approaches religious scholarship with a discriminating, reigning discerning attitude."

Concentrators boast the best professors on campus.

"It gave me a different perspective toward religion. Religion courses make you really think about your beliefs."

"The department has really good courses but some of them could stand updating."

The Sociology department attempts to cover a broad range of topics from marriage and the family to criminology to urban life. And there are also attempts to update. A new course offered every semester under the broad heading, "Special Problems". This year: the Sociology of Sports and Sociology of Occupations. A temporary addition to this year's faculty. The Sociology department's One-semester guest lecturer, Linda Caveness, who spoke on criminology.

"In Theatre, there's more of a chance to get involved. We can do something other than just sitting, listening to lectures."

The technicians. Classes that teach students to design sets and costumes and to manipulate lighting. The directors. A director's workshop, required for the course in direction, that involves holding open auditions twice a semester, casting, and rehearsing for five or six weeks. The actors. Classes in acting. Practical experience in theatre productions. The playwrights. Original plays, chosen from the playwriting course, used in Premiere Theatre.

"Theatre classes are more human. You laugh more in class; you know people better. There's lots of participation."

The participation in speech finds application in radio and television broadcasting, in debate, in oral interpretation. In forensics, William and Mary judged to be in the top 5% of American colleges.

"It's like living in a house with brothers and sisters again."

The academic and residential program for rising sophomores, juniors and seniors. Project Plus.

Students participated in instructional activities separate from the rest of the college. Wednesday night forums such as: Dr. Loman on how to resolve conflicts, Two PhD's debating the Arab-Israeli confrontation, Collin Turnbull, prominent anthropologist, in lecture.

"It's an experience that changes you."

Tutorials on game theory, the nature and causes of war, interpersonal and intrafamilial conflicts.

"I came in expecting a lot — and got it all!"

A weekend retreat centered on the theme of sex roles. In the beginning, a conflict between structure and nonstructure.

"Some participants are afraid of structure."

The result: a non-structured Project Plus.

"There's more interest and involvement with no structure."

The program, however, is not utopia. Problems in living such as keeping the lobby and kitchen clean.

"Communal spirit in Project Plus . . . definitely not elite."

Participants are chosen on the basis of a 500-word essay. Not on grades alone.

"a natural situation with guys and girls living together."

Every decision affecting Project Plus is voted on by all the participants.

COLLEGE

Fiscal crunch

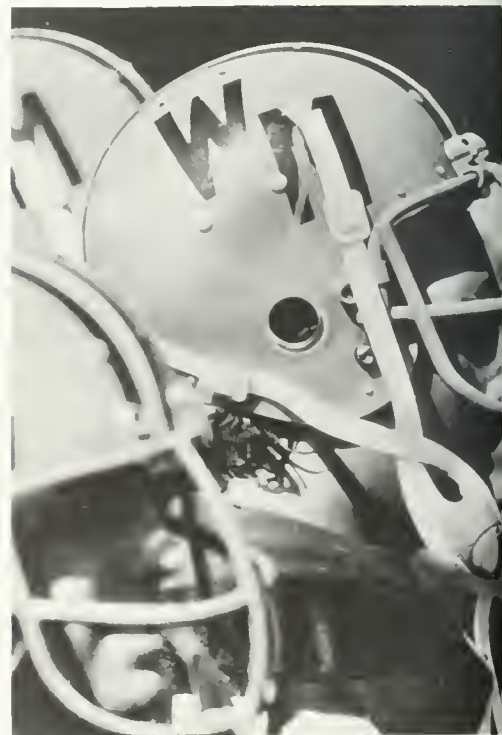

led to a re-examination of priorities. The disappointment with the football season, spurred a questioning of the apportionment of funds to sports from the Student Activities Fee. The desire to spread athletic resources more evenly throughout the athletic system, especially to some of the sports more successful in competition.

Outstanding success in William and Mary's track program. The team boasted All-American Bill Louv in cross country and national champion Reggie Clark in indoor track.

The wrestling program was also one of continued strength with Mark Belknap, one of the nation's top wrestlers in his weight class. The causes for Ashnault's leaving were never fully explained, but the fans seemed satisfied with the promotion of Balanis. The basketball season ended with the fear that Mike Arizin might transfer because of disappointment with the program's growth.

A resurgence of participation in women's sports. With scant funding, women's athletics achieved unexpected success in the basketball program. A renewed interest in health and physical fitness prompted more individual participation in sports and exercise. Campus joggers and cyclists circuted the campus from early dawn to late at night.

Full courts

for tennis and handball. A new interest in volleyball brought people together for late afternoon games in the Sunken Gardens, along with the old attraction of frisbees and touch football. Participation in karate increased and bridge remained one of the popular pastimes. Streaking, the sport of the Seventies. The Thursday night streak brought hundreds of naked men from the dorms and frat houses. Streakers set records for streaking in the lowest temperatures, in the largest crowds, and by streaking from the sky via parachutes.

and different sport.

Guarded optimism in the pre-season assessment of William and Mary's football team. The season would open with an early test in four successive away games. And after three consecutive years of five wins and six loses, it was time for a winner.

A 31-24 upset of Virginia Tech opened the season for the Indians. With four first-half fumble recoveries by an alert defense, the Tribe took an early lead and held it for the entire game. Quarterback Bill Deery, steering the ground attack with effective use of the option play, led the Indians to the first win in Blacksburg in 21 years.

And this one was no fluke."

In the next game against North Carolina's nationally-ranked Tarheels, no upset, but a praiseworthy attempt.

Rip Scherer, replacing an injured Bill Deery, was 10 for 13 in his passing game, and Doug Gerhart ground out three touchdowns. The Tarheels turned a last-minute W&M fumble into the game-winning touchdown. The "pivotal" game against Wake Forest. A mood setter, according to Root, possibly determining the remainder of the season. Atoning for its lapses against Carolina, the defense held the Deacons to 50 yards in passing and only two touchdowns. And a fourth-quarter comeback for the offense, coming from behind to score 15 points in the last quarter and squeaking by with a 15-14 victory.

Top: Craig McCurdy (55) Center: Bill Deery (14) Bottom: Greg Freaney (72), Doug Gerhart (33)

An unimpressive 24-12 win at the Citadel opened William and Mary's Southern Conference schedule. A 91 yard drive put the game away. But not until the fourth quarter. In the home debut

against Villanova, the defense allowed only one score in the last two quarters. A rally producing a 33-21 victory. Rich Hodgson and Randy Rovesti dropped the Villanova quarterback in the endzone for a crucial safety that turned the game around for W&M. Later, a controversial underhand pass from Deery to Paul Pavlich sealed the game for the Tribe.

It was a long night at Vanderbilt that resulted in the end of a three-game winning streak. Falling behind early, W&M was forced to pass. Deery, two for eleven, with two interceptions, justified the worry over the pass attack. The effort, according to Root, "very poor offensively."

After being contained by Vanderbilt, the offense exploded for 96 points in its next two games. Davidson was a 51-35 Homecoming victim, as the Indians came from 14 points back to roll up 38 points in the second half. A good team effort against VMI. The Indians outmanned and outplayed the Keydets in a 45-14 romp highlighted by Rick Pawlewicz's 89-yard kickoff return. Even the passing attack revived to score three touchdowns.

Only to die again at East Carolina. A deciding game for the Southern Conference crown. ECU decided against the Indians by rolling up 34 points in a nightmare game. After the ECU mistake that gave the Tribe a 3-0 lead, the Pirates stopped making mistakes. W&M was not able again to mount a scoring threat.

Dominating offenses staged a wild scoring exhibition in Colgate's upset at Cary Field. Unfortunately for W&M, the total 96 points scored broke down into a disappointing 49-42 final score.

The defense that had been bending throughout the season broke when they allowed Colgate 552 yards, 320 allotted to Raiders quarterback Tom Parr. The first shutout suffered by the Tribe in 47 games ended the season not with a bang but a whimper.

A dying offense joined the already lifeless defense in giving Richmond an easy 31-0 victory. A total gain of 111 yards that penetrated Richmond territory only once in the second half. Ending it all at 6-5.

Expectations that the loss of graduating seniors would be felt but not devastating. Yet, after the disappointment of 1973, it was hard to accept promises for the next year.

The JV team chalked up a 3-2 season, led by sophomores Ken Ahles and Paul Krus teaming with frosh Gary Leclair and Tom Smith to produce most of the scoring punch. A crushing 52-14 win over Ferrum. Victories over USMA Prep by 10-9 and Fork Union Military Academy 13-6, countered by losses to Staunton Military Academy and Richmond.

Close, low-score games indicating a strong defense and weak offense. Strengths and weaknesses formed in part by role-playing for the Varsity. The JV defense benefitted from taking on the Varsity since their sets in practice were much the same as those used in games. The JV offense grew weaker, practicing only plays run by the Varsity's opponents. A system for benefit of the Varsity as much as for the JV's.

After an 11-0 season, the undefeated cross country team swept the Southern Conference meet by taking the first seven places and running an eighth man in the top ten. Under the tremendous leadership of co-captains Bill Louv and Ron Martin, the team was geared for Penn State and for the Nationals in Spokane, Washington. For Penn State, their first defeat in three years, engineered in part by Ron Martin's setting a new Penn State course record. The culmination – fourth in the country.

A young but talented team promised the chance for a winning season in fiery Coach Ed Ashnault's second year. With Captain Mark Ritter the only senior to return, Matt Courage, Tom Pfingst, and Rookie All-American Mike Arizin presented a more-than-mild threat to conference foes. Launching the season with an exciting victory, the Indians broke 100 against mediocre Appalachian State. The team stuck with the strong Blue Devils from Duke, but to the disappointment of the wildly cheering fans in the Hall, poor shooting lost the game. Against ACC foe Wake Forest, the Tribe fell as again, poor shooting and numerous turnovers marked the unseasoned team's effort.

The Citadel made surprisingly easy work of the Indians, streaking to an early 14-point lead and squelching all Indian attempts at a rally. The excitement, missing since the season's opener, finally returned, when the Tribe squeaked past Richmond 73-71, in an overtime bout. Arizin's consistently outstanding shooting and rebounding culminated in the last two points that gave William and Mary the victory. The Richmond defeat proved to be not representative of the season. The team,

managing a win
only against VMI,

lost ten of the next eleven games.

Nationally ranked Providence had little trouble with the Tribe but the team gave talented Rutgers a good contest.

Coming from behind, the Indians came within one basket of a win with 1:30 to go.

Ashnault directed the team to work deliberately for sure points. The Indians, with only ten seconds left, called on Rod Musselman, who missed a long jump shot.

Against tenth-ranked Pitt, a poor night for the Panthers and heady play by the Tribe made an exciting game out of a lopsided match.

The game went into overtime, where the superior shooting talent of the Panthers finally prevailing, gave them a 68-62 win.

By mid-season the noticeable youth of the team became more noticeable when senior Mark Ritter was changed from starter to super sub, and junior guard disheartened by his performance during the season, then left school. The loss of Pfingst was great, but not as damaging as expected, as Rod Musselman and talented freshman Ron Satterthwaite filled in.

Inexperience showed in numerous turnovers and the team's inability to handle a full-court press. Inconsistent shooting forced the Indians to work patiently for openings and produced a deliberate offense, almost slowdown in style.

The Indians avenged an earlier loss to the Citadel by zooming to a 14-point lead in the last eight minutes of the game to win it 64-57. After VMI narrowed the Indians' lead from a comfortably seven to a shaky one point, Ron Satterthwaite's clutch foul shot made in the last five seconds preserved the victory for William and Mary. East Carolina trounced the tribe and VPI repeated the insult with little trouble.

The day after the Tech game, W&M suffered a very different kind of loss, the loss of a coach. When he explained that both "personal and professional reasons" prompted his decision. A controversy from the beginning, Ashnault sometimes alienated the press with curt remarks and surprised William and Mary fans with his demonstrative on-court style. The disappointing 6-14 record suggested to some that Ashnault's resignation was a mere compliance with request. Assistant George Balanis stepped up to the position to the apparent pleasure of William and Mary fans who greeted the new coach with a spontaneous ovation when he entered the court before the Iona game. The team response: two narrow victories. At Norfolk

Ashnault announced his resignation,

Scope, W&M upset small college power Old Dominion.

A 5-6 Conference record matched William and Mary with East Carolina in the Southern Conference tournament. Even though ECU had twice beaten the Tribe, the Indians sent the game into double overtime and finally took ECU in the last overtime period. The team gave Furman a scare but could not sustain the power long enough and lost to the eventual tournament winner. Athletic Director Ben Carnevale ended the season with the announcement that

Balanis would stay
on as Indian head coach.

Initiated to give good ballplayers without scholarships a chance to play on the intercollegiate level. The junior varsity basketball team, although containing some varsity potential, for the most part "played for the fun of it." While most opposing teams were manned with freshmen preparing for varsity, tribe jayvees were recruited from campus talent.

A spirited team. Though the 5-9 does not boast a good season, the team was rarely out of contention in any game. The Indians lost by only seven points to a powerful Virginia Tech jayvee team and almost beat an Old Dominion team that had defeated UNC's jayvees.

Victories over UVA and Tech showed the ability to pull out the close ones in the last events. According to Coach Gauthier, "It is reassuring to have a tandem like Martin Rich and Don Fergusson to clean up for us on the high bar, and the pommel horse contingent of Steve Hardzel, Bob Lamberson, and Jim Harbert has proven to be one of the strongest in the area."

Striving for an 8-3 record, the team has only one senior and with returning sophomore stalwarts, the future looks bright.

The school's strongest sport.

The running talent that Coach John Randolph harnessed for William and Mary's cross-country team returned in distance men Ron Martin, Bill Louv, Mac Collins, Tim Cook, John Greenplate and Reggie Clark. Charlie Dobson, defending IC4A champion in hurdling, backed up sprinters, Ben Helmandollar, Les Ayce, and Walter Cooke. Last year's top pole vaulter, Pete Hammond, was joined by freshman Steve Natusch and Alphonse Irving, another freshman and holder of the Virginia scholastic record in the high jump, added strength in that event. Southern Conference champion Dave Ruch returned to throw the javelin and newcomer Drexell George boosted the tribe's traditionally weak shot putting. The Millrose Games at Madison Square Garden, the Philadelphia Track Classic, the Southern Conference Indoor Games, and the IC4A Championships at Princeton highlighted the indoor season. At the Virginia Intercollegiate Indoor Meet, shot-putter Drexell George set a new William and Mary record. School records set in the two-mile by Chris Tulou, in the triple-jump by Al Irving and in the three-mile by Bill Louv who also broke a meet record. After winning the team trophy at the Virginia Intercollegiate,

the trackmen became champions again at the Southern Conference meet. Louv in the two-mile, Reggie Clark in the 1,000-yard run, Mac Collins in the 880 and Al Irving in the high jump. Collins was named the meet's outstanding performer. A re-enactment of last year's fine performance in the IC4A Indoor Championship sent several men to the Nationals in Detroit. Dobson successfully defended his title in the 60-yard high hurdles and Collins qualified for the NCAA mile championship. A finish of eighth out of 76 competing schools. At the Nationals, the outstanding performance was Reggie Clark's victory in the 880. The outdoor season could be met only with optimism and confidence. The new tartan track at Cary Field. The Colonial Relays came back to Williamsburg as did the Virginia Intercollegiate Outdoor Meet. Not only the hope but also the expectation of continued success.

First year coach Ed Steers brought a new look to a young William and Mary wrestling squad. Steers, quickly proved talent and effective coaching could overcome inexperience.

The season-opening tournament in Millersville, Pennsylvania, and the Virginia Intercollegiate Wrestling Tournament revealed the team's strength. Mark Belknap, the Tribe's 134-pound All-American candidate, named outstanding wrestler in both tournaments. Greg Freaney, Mike Furiness and Rick Dixon firsts in the Virginia tournament.

Back in Williamsburg, the Indians crushed three state opponents. The Indians then took F&M 24-11 and Princeton, 20-15, but lost to perennial power Clarion State, 37-6 and to ACC power Maryland. Steers used only two starters in a return match with Old Dominion, a move he came close to regretting, since the Indians barely escaped with a 25-18 win over the improving Monarchs.

Preparation for the Southern Conference Tournament in decisive victories over state rivals, UVA and Virginia Tech. A 13-3 record, more victories than any previous W&M Wrestling team. Despite Steers' confidence, the Indians could manage only third place in the Conference meet with 111½ points. Illness and injury, keeping Dixon and Furiness, both outstanding during the season, from placing, crippled the squad. Mark Belknap (134) and Bob Stark (167) were the Tribe's only

Champions. A disappointing finish

The fifth coach in four years.

Coach Tony Zontini hoped to bring continuity to the system. Strength in the pitching staff of Scott Kramer, Mike Bujakowski, John Mileson, and freshman Kevin Greenan. With Mike Marino at second, first base went to captain Corky Bishop, who was hoping to improve his outstanding .312 batting average of last year. Expectations of more hitting power from Phil Scofield, Roger Keener, and newcomer Rick Schwartzman. Trying to recuperate from an 11-14 season, the team faced another tough schedule. ACC champion North Carolina State and Colgate added challenge this year to the old threat of national power Maine and VPI. The pressure games, however, were to come from within the Conference. According to Zontini, "We think we can take the Southern Conference," a necessary accomplishment if the team is to reach the NCAA Regionals.

“This year’s field hockey team is one of the best ever, and getting better with every workout,” according to Coach Joy Archer. A good season highlighted by competition against Towson, Ursinus, and Gaucher in the Gaucher Round Robin. New strong freshman additions to the team – additions that lessen the blow of the graduation of Mary Anne Blazek, Laurie Merner and Toni Hoke.

to help the girls spark enthusiasm in the crowds at football and basketball games. After all the clapping and jumping; serving as bat girls for the baseball team selling booster buttons and balloons serving dinner to the teams making posters for games and for the training table.

Involving over half of all male students in 20 different activities—Intramurals. Under the direction of Coach Ed Jones. Co-ed volleyball and three-man basketball remained popular in their second year in the program.

Something new

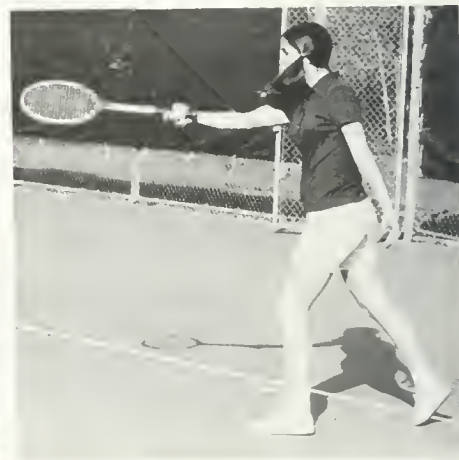

in the selection of a football all-star team from the independent leagues to pit against the fraternity all-stars in a play-off between the leagues. "Thunderchickens," the independent all-stars, beat a powerful Sig Ep team to become All-College football champions.

Getting people out of their rooms.

Providing a place for uninvolved people to get involved. Competition in everything from bowling to tennis to bridge to basketball. For more incentive, a point system to reward participation. An Orientation introduction for Freshmen women. Awards picnic in the spring. A chance to exercise. But mainly, fun.

The students at Marshall-Wythe Law School found extracurricular opportunities in the law fraternities, in the Student Bar Association, which sponsored the school newspaper, Amicus Curiae. The paper, according to the law students, was "bigger this year and improved." Other publications of the Law School included the Colonial Lawyer and the Law Review.

A hypothetical case, supposedly argued before the Supreme Court. Considered as one of the best competitions in the country, William and Mary's Moot Court affords competition in arguing an appeal case. The three rounds of argument consist of the teams finding errors in the trial record and basing an appeal on these errors. This year the case involved decisions based on the violation of the right to privacy and the freedom of the press to publish results of personal questionnaires. Competitors from William and Mary, the University of Maryland, University of Virginia, and Duke argued before an impressive panel of judges.

Imitations

and exaggerations of personality traits, mannerisms, and habits in a night of comedy, lunacy and satire. In its second year, Libel Night entertained the law school with satirizations of its faculty members by its students. The format of a television show – WARP-TV. With the intention of improving student faculty relations, the law school held Libel Night for the second time in the hopes of making it traditional.

Mortar Board-ODK Co-Sponsor Activities Again This Year

Omicron Delta Kappa and Mortar Board, honoraries that recognize men and women, respectively, for significant contributions to the college community through action and through leadership, worked jointly again this year to sponsor and to host traditional and new activities. Mortar Board continued the custom of selling Homecoming Mums to finance the traditional Yule Log Ceremony, a Christmas event co-sponsored by Mortar Board and O.D.K. The two honoraries co-hosted a February reception in honor of the new Student Affairs administrators and entertained themselves with a picnic to start off the year.

Omicron Delta Kappa, founded on the idea that exceptional leadership should be recognized and that leaders from all phases of college life should cooperate in worthwhile endeavors, selects for membership junior and senior men who have displayed leadership in two out of five areas of college life: scholarship, athletics, student government and social and religious affairs, publications, and the arts.

This spring, as a result of a national level fraternity decision, O.D.K. selected for the first time junior and senior women to join the previously all male membership.

Business School Honorary Established on Campus

The School of Business Administration, having received accreditation from the American Association of College Schools of Business in 1972, became eligible for a chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma. The purpose of the honorary is "to encourage and reward scholarship and accomplishment among students of business and administration, to promote the advancement of education in the art and science of business, and to foster integrity in the conduct of business operations. "Because membership in Phi Beta Kappa is limited to recipients of liberal arts degrees, the business major who receives a BBA is ineligible for membership in that honorary. Students in Business Administration, therefore, in the upper five per cent of their junior class or the upper 10 percent of their senior class or who rank in the upper twenty percent of those receiving masters degrees, are recognized by Beta Gamma Sigma. The members are Deborah Jane Houghton and Frank Joseph Wood, III.

WE'D LIKE A FEW MOMENTS ALONE WITH YOUR YOUNG IMPRESSIONABLE MIND.

What we're talking about here is our bank, F&M, and this diabolical scheme we have to make it your bank.

First, we can threaten you with one of our free checking accounts. Which require no minimum balance, and no service charges.

Or we can angle for your cash with one of our tempting high-yield savings accounts. Or innocently invite you to apply for a special F&M Student BankAmericard.[®] (It's as handy as any other charge card, but your credit limit won't be so high as to give Pop apoplexy, if you know what we mean.)

Anyhow, these three are just a small sampling of the many financial services we have to offer at F&M.

For all we know, if we can entice you into just one of them, you'll wind up hooked on us for a lifetime.

For their time and assistance, we would like to extend our appreciation to the following people: Fritz Hafner and Dave Pagnard of Western Publishing Company for their aid in helping us straighten things out. Mr. Hugh Easler and Ken Smith, Col. Green and Dudley Jensen for their willing cooperation. To Tom Collins of the Publications Council for his understanding and advice considering the change of editors between semesters. We would also like to thank those who spent long nights on the second floor of the Campus Center – Beth Hutzler, Paula Stassi, Melissa McFarland, Susan Shank, Betsy Johnson, and Beth DiPace. And to Linda Musser for her patience and perseverance. Also to our roommates, Nancy and Les who put up with us and to Barrett 3rd for answering our numerous phone calls. But our especial thanks go to the staff as a whole for “rising to the occasion” with their tireless efforts in helping us pick up the pieces and pull the book together in the face of seemingly insurmountable odds.

RETROSPECT

It was a confused and confusing world in 1973-74. A world of tensions and conflicts; of long drawn-out developments. The American public, wearied by the Watergate trials, groaned under each new disclosure – the disappearance of the White House tapes; secretary Rosemary, her mistake and testimony; the indictment of Haldeman, Erlichman, Mitchell, and Colson; Dean's testimony that implicated Nixon in the coverup. The summer hints at impeachment grew to threats by the time William and Mary students were drifting back for exams. By March, the House Judiciary Committee had arrived at an ominous decision: "A President's actions need not include outright criminal violations to justify impeachment." It was indeed a year of shortages. A shortage of energy and of fuel, of meat and of paper, and of clothes for thousands of naked college students who shed everything except tennis shoes and stamina to invent streaking, a participation and spectator sport that found its way even to the Sunken Gardens of William and Mary. A more serious shortage for the college, the shortage of funds, and the pinch of inflation nation-wide.

Acupuncture was being hailed as the new panacea, as Secretariat captured the Triple Crown, and violent crime was on the rise. For the first time in 13 months, an attempt at skyjacking that resulted in the death of three. Gangs reappeared on the criminal scene, Detroit became the city with the highest homicide rate per 100,000 people, and Patricia Hearst didn't get home for her twentieth birthday. The Symbionese Liberation Army's abduction of Patricia Hearst signalled a treacherous new trend in crime, political kidnapping. It began last summer when J. Paul Getty, III was stolen and reappeared months later. Hearst was the next victim whose fate at this writing is still undecided, and Atlantic Constitution editor J. Reginal Murphy was stolen, paid for, and returned. Football filled TV rooms on Sunday afternoons and Monday nights and even though the Redskins disappointed thousands by losing Super Bowl eligibility to Minnesota, football fans everywhere were happy with O. J., the man who finally broke Jim Brown's rushing record by moving the ball more than 2,000 yards in a season. And everyone was looking toward spring, when Hank Aaron was expected to break Babe Ruth's record of 714 home runs. Perhaps the beginning of dynasties with Miami's second consecutive reign as World Champions of football and the Oakland A's second World Series victory in a row. The fall of a dynasty when the impossible happened. UCLA and Bill Walton lost to Notre Dame. And Oregon

State. And the University of Oregon. The same year that Wilt Chamberlain became a coach. Alexander Solzhenitsyn's exile revealed him to be no more a proponent of democracy than Marx, while President George Papadopoulos was overthrown in Greece, and a military junta displaced leftist Allende in Chile, a 12-year-old guru emerged to save the world and the beat generation became, for the first time, nostalgic. A longing for the "good old days" emerged in the revival of rock and roll, bopping, and "Smoking in the Boy's room." Movies reflected the sentimentality of the seventies with American Graffiti and in the "memories" of The Way We Were. The year of Redford in films. Redford-Streisand, Redford-Newman (again), Redford-Redford. The world lost three revered entertainers — singers Jim Croce and Bobby Darin and cartoonist Walt Kelly. A year when there were more raised eye-brows over Princess Ann's marriage to a soldier and Liz and Richard's yo-yo act than over the astronaut's marathon space voyage. Despite Billy Jean's decided victory over Bobby Riggs, the Equal Rights Amendment, could not find enough states to ratify. Mass murders in Texas horrified Americans. The horror of the violence and evil of the seventies spread sickeningly across the screen in a film that turned into a social phenomenon — The Exorcist. William Peter Blatty frightened and shocked America with his tale of demonic possession and suddenly "the devil made me do it" wasn't funny anymore.

In October on Yom Kippur, the sacred Jewish Day of Atonement, the Arabs launched a surprise attack against the Israelis. Accompanied by a proposal from Moscow to Washington of joint intervention. After the Israelis broke the cease-fire agreement, Washington received the second message, Brezhnev's threat to send troops to the Middle East. Immediately placing US troops on world-wide alert, the President waited, with the rest of the world, while Nobel Peace Prize Winner Kissinger and other negotiators worked their magic. Confused, confusing, and tumultuous. If there was a calm, it was a short one. The Vice President resigned, the trucker's strikes ended in bloody violence, and everyone watched the skies for signs of Kohoutec. At William and Mary, Deans Wray and Schultz resigned, sexual crime continued on campus, and everyone watched a world in pandemonium. In the quiet of Williamsburg, student spectators made one-at-a-time decisions and determined their directions with the realization that the confusion would be waiting.
