Colonial Echo
1916

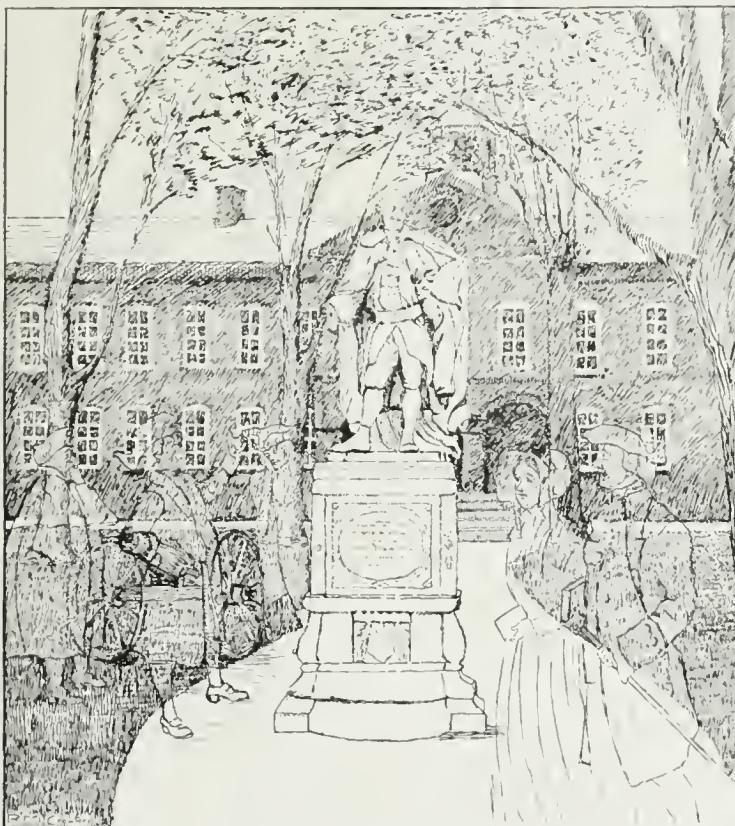

Volume Fourteen

Published by the Students of
The College of William and Mary
Williamsburg, Virginia

Greetings

Very humbly, we, the editorial staff of the Colonial Echo, lay at the feet of our beloved Alma Mater this annual, the modest result of months of patient striving to show ourselves worthy of the trust laid upon us. For any flaws that may be apparent to the critical eye and mind we accept full unconditonal blame, urging in our defense only the sincerity of our purpose. But if in these pages our bungling, well-meaning efforts have painted any true picture of the joys and sorrows of campus life that may serve to call to mind, in the days to come, the faces of long-departed friends and the memory of hours that grow sadder and sweeter with the passing years, we have not labored entirely in vain.

DEDICATION

Dedication

To a scholar, broad-minded and cultured;
a gentleman, refined and accomplished;
and an artist, able and talented.

To

Richard McLeod Crawford,
B. S., M. A.

This volume is affectionately dedicated.

Traumerei

Splendor of dawn upon the mountainside,
Glory of youth, wonder of dreams untried,
Rapture of love adventuring on the hills,—
The glad sun flashes on a thousand rills,—
Up, up, O my soul!

Burden of time, burden of dreams belied,
Burden of dusk upon the mountainside,
The wild crane veers into the setting sun,
Racing the shadows, and the day is done,—
Peace, peace, O my soul!

—MARTIN FEINSTEIN.

Sacred to the memory of Thomas Jefferson Stubbs, Ph.D.
Professor of Mathematics.

Who departed this life November 17th, 1915.
Mourned by faculty and students as a loyal and trusted friend in prosperity or adversity; honored by all for his long years of faithful service to the college.

WILLIAM WINSBRO,

Front Royal, Va.

A.B. Degree, '14; Colonial Echo Staff, '16; Instructor in French, '16.

"Billy" is what we call our lonely little M.A. applicant, and out of sheer pity we have let him attend all our Senior Class Meetings, where he keeps properly quiet and sedate, as is befitting a superior who has already borne off an A.B. degree. But being consumed by the thirst for knowledge and a keen memory of the many naps that may be snatched at college, "Billy" strayed back to us last September and announced that one A.M. degree was in danger. The Faculty resigned themselves to the prospect of being "curled" and in an effort to tame "Billy's" ferocity, they hired him into teaching French I. to the awed "Dues." "Billy" has succeeded in this Herculean task of cramming knowledge into their unresponsive skulls, nor has he slackened a moment in his pursuit of A's. He's a hard chap to stop when he goes after anything, and a harder chap to keep from liking and admiring; honest, straightforward, and sincere, he goes straight to your heart.

RAY RUFUS ADDINGTON,
Ridgeville, Ind.

Sigma Phi Epsilon; Baseball Team, 1912-'13, 1913-'14, 1914-'15; Study Hall Proctor, 1913-'14, 1914-'15; Assistant Baseball Coach, 1915-'16; Principal of Magruder School, 1915-'16.

Before us we have a real "ray-ray" college man! Ray is a pure Yankee, as we know them, having strayed down here from the farm in Indiana, and he came so near annexing a degree in three years, that he was able to make his college work only a side issue this year, and to instruct the young and ignorant of Magruder. He comes in to us nearly every day on his wheel in order to snatch away those last few credits that mean so much to him. But when spring comes and the baseball prospects begin to file out on Cary Field, we are going to miss him down at first base, and his snarl that makes an erring umpire quake in his shoes and feel to see if his gun is in position. Ray has been one of the most valued players on the team for three years and he showed his versatility by playing a new position every year.

Ray has the qualities that go a long way toward making a success in life, and one of these days he will come bobbing up into the public eye in a way to reflect honor upon his Alma Mater.

Kappa Sigma; Phoenix; German Club; Manager Football Team, '15-'16; Colonial Echo Staff, '15-'16; Inter-Fraternity Conference, '15-'16; President Tennis Club; Athletic Council, '15-'16.

The serene face that stares out at you from this page is known as "Pete," on the campus. This slim young man has a quiet way of going out and getting what he wants without the least tooting of horns or other display. The better you learn to know "Pete" the more it strikes you that he is a man to be called upon when there is work to be done and the laborers are few.

If you have ever seen "Pete" when he wasn't as neat as the proverbial pin, and as calm as the proverbial Stoic, you have seen a sight that has been permitted few of us. A lion with the ladies, when the humor seizes him, respected and admired by his fellows, and praised by the Faculty is "Pete."

It was under "Pete's" able guidance that the football team wandered up to Delaware last fall and the boys say he treated them like so many kings. If the editor wasn't so peevish, we would like to ramble on and enumerate Pete's virtues at length, but we can, at least, advise all our readers that they will do well to keep an eye upon this young gentleman after the campus gates have closed behind him.

Sigma Phi Epsilon; President Southwest Club; Big Chief, Brafferton Indians; Baseball Team, '13-'14, '14-'15; Debating Team, '16; Literary Magazine Staff, '16; Student Council, '15.

When the great Marduk, in a fit of efficiency, undertook to clear the world of chaos and disorder, he inadvertently overlooked the subject of our sketch who was created out of the material left, mixed with the radium of sincerity. His whole bearing, from his tolerant forbearance of the dues to his debonair way of pegging them to second, illustrates this. Since he has been with us, as the fly of ignorance in the ointment of college, he has achieved quite a few things worthy of enumeration. Athlete, student and literary cuss, his modesty has increased with his ability. He is a healthy example of the kind of fellow who puts his best into everything.

How many of us have forgotten that wonderful batting streak "Jawn" had one spring when he was wearing the windpad for the nine? It is whispered around the campus that Jack's heart is true to a little Lee County girl, but Jack hasn't let us on to that secret.

"Little Ferg"—smallness being only in stature. Otherwise, Ferg, the many-sided, the intelligent. His keen intellect and common sense have served to push him into every department of the great academic workshop, and his good judgment has stood him in good stead upon many occasions. His value to his fellows is manifested most eloquently by the list of his honors, and they also serve to show how he will be missed from the campus. In his graduation, William and Mary gives to the world a man that is sure to do as much good there, as he has done inside of the college gates. In a final word, one of the most real college men on the campus, he has been active in every department of college life as a worker and leader.

Dick—a real athlete, a steady student, and an ardent admirer of the ladies. He descended upon us from Portsmouth and judging from the length of his limbs, we feel sure that his early occupation was crabbing. He made his debut at William and Mary by winning fame in athletic circles, and for three successive years he has been a regular on the football and basketball teams, where his work has steadily grown better.

And we must admit that Dick is a student of parts, for he is one of the few who can wrest away a degree in three years without being a hermit or grind.

Likewise, we beg you to remember that Dick dearly "loves the ladies," and he trips through every dance like a second Castle. Have you ever attended a football game; seen Dick go smashing into the line for a good gain, and not heard the dear little damsels cheer and call him an angel?

But listen, Dick, to the frank opinion of your fellows, you are every inch a man and a credit to our class. Au revoir, success is awaiting you.

Staunton, Va.

Pi Kappa Alpha; Philomathean; Phi Beta Kappa Scholarship 1913-'14, 1914-'15; Tennis Manager, '16; Black Hand.

No, it is not a tornado, nor even an earthquake—it is only "Duc" Gordon going down the steps! And that electric horn? Oh! no, that is only his yell, youth must be served and, then, he has such a powerful set of lungs.

Yes, you are face to face with the youngster from Staunton, who for a wonder kept still long enough to have his picture snapped. "Wing," as his friends call him, came to us three years ago from Staunton Military Academy, which he described to us a sort of second heaven. It took us years to get him off that subject, and concentrate his attention up the damsels of our city.

He has a wonderful fund of information on a variety of subjects, and an uncanny ability to do anything he sets out to accomplish. You can't help liking him—as the town girls say after he has departed with three of their handkerchiefs and a pocketfull of their "dad's" cigars.

WILLIAM MORGAN GRIMSLY,
VanDyke, Va.

To our beloved classmate who was called suddenly from our midst into the mystery of the Other World, laying down his life in the very flower of his manhood, and when the prize for which he had so bravely striven was almost in his grasp.

We, the classmates and friends, will cherish his memory forever in our hearts, and we feel that the pride of our final achievement will be saddened by the thought of the familiar face that is gone from the campus.

Upright and honest, chaste and god-fearing, was William Grimsley, and the bitterness of our loss is abated by the reflection that he, out of many, was best prepared to pass into the Great Beyond, and to answer to his name at the Judgment Seat.

VERNON LAWRENCE GUY,
Portsmouth, Va.

Sigma Upsilon; Philomathean; Magazine Staff; Sophomore Historian; Colonial Echo Staff, '16.

All who gaze at this resemblance are sure to be impressed by the halo of intelligence emanating from it. And so it is with Vernon Guy, known to his friends as "Pnss" Guy. He is one of the most intellectual men among our number; and he can go through a German text faster than a girl can skim through a best-seller. But ask him what Physics did for him. He likes science so little that he only enters the Science Hall on flying trips to see his monthly grades, which are usually A's. This year, for some reason at which we can guess, he takes only a fatherly interest in the college and attends a few lectures a week, but most of his time is spent in a certain part of the town. It is certain that he has not yet attended a Senior Class meeting, and he doesn't take his position on the Echo Staff very seriously.

Come on, "Puss," and show your Alma Mater what you can do. In the future make the class of '16 proud of you.

WILLIAM DURHAM HARRIS,
Virgilina, Va.

Sigma Upsilon; Editor of Literary Magazine; Member of Debate Council; Highest Scholarship Honors, 1912-'13; Improvement Medal in Debate, '12; Final Debate, '15; German Club.

"W. D.'s Junior write-up is responsible for the rash assertion that our hero was born forty miles from land or water in a shadowy, unplaced land, but investigation clears him of this charge. He is a native of Virgilina, Va., and while they haven't named any streets after him yet, the town has a most worthy son to be proud of. That "W. D." stands out among us is attested by the incomplete list of his honors above. Although not physically of the bulk to represent his college in an athletic capacity, he has more than atoned for this by representing her in a literary capacity, reached by few and excelled by none. In scholarship when he has not been residing at the top, he is invariably found to be only a few strides back.

For you, "D. D." we prophesy a bright future, and as long as your loyal old heart continues (?) to beat, we'll be glad to grasp your hand and hail you as one of the class of '16.

"Pinkey" is our little crimson domed lad from Dendron, the town already made famous by Schepmoes, "The Human Question Mark," but he has been with us long enough to live down his home town. He is quite a man of parts around this camp, and his sunny head has a way of bobbing up on all occasions. Pinkey has degenerated into a Physics shark, but he does find rough going in translating the language of our southern neighbors. There have been only a few things that "Pinkey" has not tried since he came to the college, and he is one of the most faithful workers and respected men we know. Freely we prophesy a wonderful future for him if he doesn't get married too soon.

Hush! You mustn't call him "Nat" now, fellows, for he is principal of Five Fork's largest and most up-to-date school, and a person of dignity and fortune. Of course, the people up there know he is from Toano, but they forgive him as readily as we did. "Nat" is another one of those restless Seniors who finished up in February and went out into the world to gain wealth and fame before Finals. He comes in to see us on rare occasions, smoking a long black cigar and flirting calmly with the less reserved of the city damsels.

"Nat" has been the butt of more jokes since his arrival here than any man on the campus, but we have yet to see him when he did not have a quick and ready reply. That keen mind of yours, "Nat," is going to make you famous one of these days.

Hiram Howard Jones,
Williamsburg, Va.

Philomathean; Varsity Football Team, '13-'14; Captain Championship Basketball Team, '15-'16; Forward on Basketball Team for four years.

Strange will it seem that there can be a basketball team at W. and M. without one Howard Jones being present in the role of forward, for Howard has been one of the team's mainstays for four years. Speed, size, skill, and experience, coupled with a happy knack of being able to leave the floor once and to jump twice at the same time, have made him a terror to visiting teams. And the Captain of the Champions—we envy him!

In literary society work, he is no shirker, and seems to have an inexhaustible supply of data on a variety of subjects. Also, Howard, established a reputation as a twister in "Prex's" Economics Class.

Readers, in Howard Jones we have a man; patient, persevering and a true friend. Were there more space we could tell more of our hero, but we can sum him up in the phrase, a man!

This is Robert Murphy Newton. A pretty name, even poetical, so much so that our class poet might have used it in his verses. But he seldom has the pleasure of being called by this name, his lady friends—for he can smile—preferring him as Mr. Newton (dauntly), while the boys know him by the simple, old "Bob."

"Bob" came up many, many years ago out of the Academy where he had made forty minutes and entered with flying colors. He was not long in this institution, however, before he met Dr. Cally's German and since then his life has been one terrible nightmare, trying to tell the difference in the pronunciation of the German "ei" and "ie." But he is otherwise a good student and all-round college man. "Bob" is loved by the whole student body for his genuine and upright qualities.

Theta Delta Chi; Phoenix; German Club; Student Council; Teacher's Diploma; Treasurer of Senior Normal Class, '15; Athletic Council; Manager of Baseball Team, '16; Cheer Leader.

John Presson, known as "Long John," is only six foot three, and so thin that a ten-mile gale whistles around him. He is some curler and one of Dr. Hall's "much loved" science men. Chuck full of college spirit and bubbling over with love for his Alma Mater, John's elongated form is a welcome sight on the campus.

John hails from Hampton, and is very proud of the fact that he was once permitted to expound his theories to the children of Norfolk County. At one time this session, he was a steady regular at the W. F. L., but since part of the Faculty failed to return, John has gone into retirement.

As baseball manager, John has smashed all precedents, by writing a girl's school for a game, and being horrified at their offer to give him a ping-pong game.

Press on, John, we wish you God-speed!

This youthful prodigy is another of those students of ability who wring a degree away from the reluctant Faculty in three years and who never appear worked to death while they are doing it. Dean is able to address you in at least three languages which he has picked up in William and Mary class-rooms, and his knowledge of Greek would make Demosthenes envious.

The most unassuming man in college and if you don't know him, we'd hate to tell you what you have missed. For sterling worth and sincerity of character, you won't find a man in the class of '16 who can quite surpass him. His smile and unfailing good humor have made him a host of friends on the campus and in the city.

Here is the pride of our class—our most accomplished joke teller and all-round good fellow. A smile that never fades, a wit that never fails, and friends who never change; all these has "Skinny" in abundance, as some slight reward for his sunny disposition and clean manhood. The Faculty shake when he strolls leisurely up to the front seat and answers questions before they are asked; he can yell louder than the most ardent "Soph" at a game; and you can't back him down on any kind of a proposition.

Keep on wearing that magic smile, "Skinny;" the success that has come to you has been honestly earned, and the friends you have made will never forget what a sincere, lovable old chap you really are.

Jim is a great old boy, sincerely loved by his fellows, and by the ladies—for he is a thorough "realco" sport. High grades never appeal to him, but he's a wizzard with the pen. The excellence of his short stories have won him the name of the most literary man in college, which sentiment resulted in his being put in charge of the Annual. Quiet, in the confidence of his ability, he is a man to be watched in any contest he may choose to enter, for he has brain enough to stand with the keenest. A dry wit and a keen sense of the ridiculous make him welcome when good fellows gather. Let us have more men like Jim, unassuming, honest and sincere.

Still another of those vagrant Seniors who stole off after the dark days of January with the required number of credits piled up in the registrar's office. Lean close and I will tell you the real tragedy of Wilson's life; not that his name is Hi—, but that he was once so terribly weak as to spend a year at Richmond College. In order to live down that cardinal sin, he had to hustle around and show the fellows that he was a sincere and thorough convert, but he finally achieved a little distinction around the college solely upon merit. The squarest kind of boy, unoffending and sincere, he has won the respect of all in his brief stay in our midst. But we, of the Senior Class, will welcome him royally when he rolls in before Finals to take away his degree.

Arthur Peoples Tucker—no, not that, just plain “Buck!” No introduction is necessary, everybody knows “Buck” which means that they know a man and one who stands for what is best and most wholesome in every walk of life.

And he was born a baseball player, constituting just about one leg on our '14 Championship Cup. When he dons the uniform around the third sack, the hot ones with fuzz on them are his pie. His sign reads, “Good-bye, Mr. Man, your job's gone!” And when he dons another kind of uniform before the fair dames, it's about the same tale—everybody else has to drop out.

“Buck,” you’re an important man around here, and everybody likes you, from the babies up. You have proved to us that your foundation is rock, your purpose steel, and your word gold. Here’s our hand, with the best and warmest grasp that’s in us.

"Red," so called from the color of his plume, is our jack-of-all-trades, who can yowl, perform on the piano for hours at a time, dazzle the damsels with a line of selected repartee, be an athlete of distinction, and scholar enough to rank among the best in college. Nor is there a man on the campus who can tell as good a joke, or laugh as heartily as can the innocent subject of our sketch; and many is the time that he has been the object of that touching old chorus, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow." Irving Cobb and Bud Fisher who look foolish as humorists if they had to stand beside Skinny Scott and Red, our funny lads from Brookneal. It's worth going to Dancing School to see "Red" gliding and whirling around the floor with the grace of a Greek god.

Taking him all in all, "Red" is hard to beat and still harder to keep fromliking. He has the best wishes of his class.

This black-haired lad bears the reputation of carrying around more real gray matter under his cap than any other man in the Senior Class. He doesn't know what it is to receive less than an A and if he ever studies he hides it from the student body. In Physics he has advanced until it is quite a simple matter for him to figure out the weather for months ahead by a few original formulas. But the hardest task that has ever been imposed upon his good nature is that of caring for the finances of the Colonial Echo, and trying to keep Earl Zion in the straight and narrow path at the same time. As an athlete, Woods is an earnest worker who doesn't know what it is to quit on the gridiron, and who can run a greyhound down in a handicap race.

Unless he changes quite a good deal from the boy we have known for four years, he will make his mark when he jumps out boldly into life.

WILBERT TUCKER WOODSON, Crozet, Va.

Sigma Phi Epsilon; President of Rifle Club, '15; German Club; Teacher's Diploma, '14; Vice-President of Junior Class, '14-'15; Night Librarian, '14-'15, '15-'16; Pan-Hellenic Council, '15-'16.

"Willie"—but not "Wee Willie"—is one of the most loyal and most sincere boosters around the campus. His big towering figure may be seen wherever the interests of the College are concerned and he carries his smile around at all times. Genial and ever ready to accommodate, his face will be missed next year in the library where he sits nightly to distribute books to the thirsty seekers of knowledge who come thronging to his desk. Just to show that he was one who believed in "preparedness" and all it stands for, "Willie" let the Rifle Club put him at their head, and to his efficient leadership we are trusting mightily during the dark days of the future when the Kaiser gets peeved.

Among the ladies—but hush! let the girls tell you; it's their secret. Nor do we disagree with the professor who called him the most faithful student in College.

Now! Wilbert Tucker Woodson, here's to you: an esteemed and honored member of the class of '16.

GEORGE BASKERVILLE ZEHMER,
McKenney, Va.

Theta Delta Chi; Manager Baseball Team, '14-'15; Baseball Team, '14-'15; Colonial Echo Staff, '15-'16; Student Council; Study Hall Proctor; Instructor in Williamsburg Schools; Basketball Team, '14-'15, '15-'16; Y. M. C. A. Phoenix.

Charles Darwin knew whereof he spoke when he remarked that the toughest—or his word was “fittest”—survive. G. B. is still with us after six years of hard work during which he has sampled everything from Eng. A to Educ. 21.

As a member of the Championship quint of '16, as a member for three years of the baseball team, he has carved for himself a niche in the athletic hall of fame. But to recount the conquests of this Alexander, we must pass to other worlds, and in the class room we find his ability envied by more than one. The Academy dues have felt the weight of his mighty hand as Study Hall Proctor and the High School called him in for his scientific knowledge. Athlete, student, teacher, booster, and a square, popular fellow, what more can be said!

WILLIAM EARL ZION,
Pennington Gap, Va.

Southwest Club; Baseball Second Team, '14-'15; Colonial Echo Staff, '16; Championship Basketball Team, '15-'16; Basketball Team, '13-'14, '14-'15; Secretary of Junior Class; Monogram Club; Declamation Medal, '15.

President—of the class, no, but President of the Right Honorable Board of Ramblers, Rounders, and Roughnecks. We purposely put his picture on the back page to keep our readers from pinning on his name. (He doesn't live up to it!)

The sight of him in basketball togs makes a smile of delight lit around the gallery, for in spite of the fact that he is reputed awkward in the game, he usually manages to score enough points to win the game all by himself. He is one of our Champions.

In the classroom he is a mystery, and it seems that he has a secret formula by which he mixes his loafing and his working, for he never studies and never thinks. When he gets in the humor, he can make noise enough in Ewell to wake the dead sleeping under the chapel, and his faithful old popgun is always there during a celebration.

Popular, quick, good-natured and respected, we number Earl Zion as one of the finest fellows in college.

Senior Class Prophecy

N the first place, my halo had never fitted.

Having dropped into the Official Observatory one fine morning to remedy this defect, I found to my dismay that my entire earthly record would have to be gone over before the change could be made. I protested.

"You see," explained St. Peter politely, with his eye glued to the golden telescope, "it is our custom to proportion the size of halo to your earthly good deeds, and I'll have to consult my books before giving you any decision. However, if you'll be kind enough to climb up here and keep a bright lookout upon the world for a few minutes, I'll take the matter up with the clerk in charge of that department. Simply call out your observations to my stenographer over there in the corner and he will enter them in shorthand."

I assented eagerly, and mounted to his stool as soon as the good man had quitted it. And here follows the result of my observations, exactly as I called them down to the clerk and as he recorded them:

ZEHMER, G. B.: Missionary extraordinary to the Funkli-hunchi Islands. Owns twelve children and a mortgage. Expected up here in about three weeks, that being the date of the Annual Missionary Barbeque. His hair has turned white as a result of his sejourn among his cannibalistic children and he squints.

SCOTT, "Skinny": Agriculturist, Planter and Farmer. Owns pig, horse, pipe and whiskers. For telling poor jokes to his neighbors, credit one black mark on the permanent books.

HARRIS, W. D.: Editor of the Tubville Daily and starving as his fame as a journalist increases. Having lost fifty pounds of flesh, he is recognized as a rising young author. His "Ode to a Grecian Milkcan" established his fame in Abyssinia. Has a decided knock in his heart.

CALDWELL, "Pete": Peter is at present ranked as heavy-weight champion of the world, having killed with a single blow his most dreaded opponent in a recent bout. Is minus six front teeth, has a game ear, and no nose worth mentioning. His next fight is with "Battling" Bumone for a thirty cent purse, win, lose or draw.

JAMES, "Pinkey": Pinkey likewise is famous, but in a different field, being a vivisectionist. Celebrated for his discovery that a knife inserted in the heart of a dog will cause both pain and death. Has very recently published, "The Flea from a Bisymeteratical Viewpoint." Wears a monocle and light whiskers—two black marks on permanent books.

GORDON, "Duc"; "Wing": was a singer in New York's worst choir where he overcame thousands. At present in the Tombs awaiting trial upon a charge preferred by the Anti-Ncise Society. His conviction certain.

JENNINGS, "Nat": The prosecuting attorney of the City of Toano. Widely famed for his masterly defense of a prisoner charged with expecterating on the city sidewalks on February 31, 1929. "Nat" is Captain of the Toano Baseball Team and a member of the city Rekop Club.

GAYLE, "Dick"; Handwriting expert. His testimony in the breach of promise suit of Miss Foppy Witless against Hiram Thorpe resulted in a victory for the prosecution. It is rumored that the defendant had hard feeling; charged Dick with incompetence. Judge Jennings sentenced him to twelve years at hard labor.

RIBBLE, F. D. G.; Run out of three states by the authorities. Killed six men and a dog with his Golden Discovery. Makes impassioned speeches on his trips, and 200% profit on his medicine. Has narrowly escaped lynching several times. Has grown fat on his own patented medicines.

WILLIAMS, "Reddy"; "Reddy" is divorced. Having won the affections of an unending string of ladies, his wife objected to his dancing. "Red" sued for divorce and got it when he proved that his wife had only one good eye, no true teeth, and was bald at times. "Red" is now teaching Economics in a girl's school.

WOODSON, "Willie"; Head of the Microscope Detective Agency. He worked alone on the case of the mystery of the open door. His masterly analysis of that case resulted in the discovery that the door had been left open. Changes his disguise every day and wears a razor, gun, and hatpin.

NEWTON, "Bob"; Practices upon that branch of the animal kingdom known as horses. His treatise upon, "Distemper, Its Causes and Cures," is recognized as a masterpiece of ignorance and misinformation. Inventor of the spectacles for horses that are so widely worn by those animals during the last few years.

WINSBORO, "Bill"; Strong man, extraordinary in a circus. Is kept under the closest confinement on account of his ferocity and a certain appetite for human flesh. Was a piano mover until he upset several houses, when he joined the circus to escape the militia.

THORPE, "Hiram"; "Yours Truly" is at present intensely interested in the construction of State roads, so intensely interested that he is breaking rock for them in a striped suit. Was sent up for bigamy when his twelfth wife showed up as he was at the altar. His term has expired, but he prefers to remain, for reasons he won't divulge. His twelve spouses are waiting at the prison gate.

ADDINGTON, "Ray"; "Ray-Ray" is Mayor of Magruder, beating out Farmboy Simple in the recent election and rolling up a record vote of seven. Has put baseball upon the civil service list and given up umpiring in order to take life insurance. His factory reforms have done a great deal to increase his salary.

PRESSON, "Jawn"; Speaker on Equal Suffrage. His motto is to please the ladies. Has been confined several times for breaking windows in demonstrations, but has escaped by using the "hunger strike." On one occasion he fell away to fifty pounds. Is one of the principal speakers at the coming Convention in Five Forks.

FERGUSON, W. C.; "Ferg" is a Spiritualist, Seer and Prophet. Foretold with astounding accuracy the coming of 1917. Credited with being the first to predict that Haley's New Comet would not strike the earth. The police are his friends; the superstitious his meal-ticket.

MONCASTER, C. A.; "Monk" is the prodigy who squared the circle. Is also quite an authority in the medical world. He performed the delicate operation of removing John D.'s appendix only two days before the patient died of heart trouble. Diagrams all his cases before he operates; and never misses cutting in the wrong place, to which his fame is due.

WOODS, B. W.; Country parson of the Faith Healer Church. Tramps twenty miles to church every Sunday, and has given up his loud ties. Is a widower with twelve children and no income.

COMBS, R. L.; "Jawn" is the sternest Circuit Judge in Virginia. Some of the most talked-of cases on record have been tried in his court. No one had ever been acquitted in this court, as his guilt is taken for granted. His remarks to "Hiram" Thorpe whom he sentenced for bigamy, may be read in Dr. Dryasdust's "Court Mis-prcedure."

TUCKER, A. P.; "Buck" is a traffic cop in Merry Mount, the city of his birth. Hours from six to six. Resigned as World Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. to take this responsible and lucrative position. He has been given a holiday on the Fourth of July when he will address a gathering on the subject of, "The Delicate Responsibility of My Position."

JONES, H. H.; Howard is at present the leading actor in a local picture company that is about to produce, "The Romance of John Smith." Howard is playing with the greatest success, the villain. Has sold his farm and rides in limousines. Is in danger of getting married.

GUY, V. L.; Vernon was practicing medicine in Squeedunk, but he appeared to be really practicing for all his patients died. He is in jail, waiting impatiently to be lynched tonight.—

Here St. Peter came hastening back to tell me that my halo had been forfeited for some misdeed that he had only then discovered, owing to poor bookkeeping. I climbed slowly down and went out.

And walking sadly down the street, I bumped squarely into Zion with a halo on his head large enough for an umbrella. After all, it seemed only appropriate that he should be there.

The Regetary

The hours I spent with thee, dear heart,
Have brought a string of D's to me,
I look them o'er, each D apart,
My goodness me!

Each hour a cut, each cut a flunk,
To still a "prof" by absence wrung,
I tell each cut unto the end and there
A D is hung.

Oh! memories that bless—and burn!
Oh! barren gain, and bitter thunk!
I check each cut and strive at last to learn,
To take my D.
Sweetheart,
To take my D.

PAUL DEERING
Sigma Upsilon

Somewhat, words fail when we try to write about Paul. The usual expressions will not satisfy. Those of us who have been privileged to be his classmates, and in fact all who are part of the college, admire and love him. Perhaps that is the best testimonial any man can have—the love of all his fellows. He has served his college well, and by sheer force of ability has won his high position in the student body of William and Mary. His position in our hearts he won because he is Paul Deering, strong, gentle and true.

GEORGE WYTHE BOOTH

Sigma Phi Epsilon

George, the smiling Bean Brummel of our class, carts about a shapely head chock full of hard common sense. Never have we seen him when he was not as an immaculate as a darning master. We want to know what George did with his monogram—watch him blush.

WILLIAM SEYMOUR BRENT

Pi Kappa Alpha

The laziest of humans, the wittiest of mortals, and the noblest of friends—that's Bill. If you want to see that golden smile, offer him a cigar or tell him a joke. Duck quick, Bill, a girl is looking straight at this page!

DAVID GILLIONS

Phoenix

Dave, our Northern Neck farmer, is so genial and so cherry that we are coming to look for his smiling face every day, and his fund of common sense is the envy of the dues. He's from the land of oysters and boats, and proud of it. You can't down Dave!

RAYMOND MAFFETTE

Phoenix

Behold the only man who has ever been known to ask sensible questions in the Education Classroom. A steady influence to the Ewell dues, and ex-teacher of Virginia's young, he is an enigma to the faculty, who usually call him "Majet," in an effort to pronounce his sonorous name.

WALTER LEE McCORMICK
Southwest Club

Tall, thin, witty, here he comes across the campus, cane in hand, hat pulled down over his eyes, and smiling genially at the world in general. Then you may know that something is in the wind. Often mistaken for his better looking namesake,

JOHN WILMER HEDRICK
Southwest Club

The tallest of our tribe greets you; looks down upon you from his six foot four. He is another of our mountain lads, and as solid as the hills of his native county. An athlete of distinction and a "curler" of parts.

DAVID ORGAIN RASH
Philomathcean

Rash, but not to excess, sunny-tempered and optimistic, a gentleman and above all, a man. On every Sunday he dresses up in his best, combs his hair carefully, and sets out downtown—to mail a letter to the bright-eyed lass he left behind him.

JENNINGS JUDY SWECKER
Phoenix

This is Judy, the joy of the class and the terror of the dues. They all tremble at his nasal invitation to "Let's buck a due, fellers!" But for all his ferocious air, his heart is kind and his only fault is that he rises early every morning and wakes the unfortunate with song. For which he has been cursed.

WILLIAM BENJAMIN TILLEY

Kappa Alpha

"BILL" is what we call this pleasant-faced lad for short. Shows the faculty what amazing marks he can wring from them while taking an active interest in campus life. Nor do the young ladies of the town call this accomplished youth by his last name.

JAMES THOMAS WADDILL

Sigma Phi Epsilon

Our "Tommy" greets you! The most indifferent of the class; a lover of ease—see the pun—; and a procrastinator who comes into action at the last minute. Quiet, reserved and respected. He made quite a reputation as an orator in Public Speaking.

FRANK BOWIE TOLSON

Pi Kappa Alpha

A perfect edition of the Sphinx, faultless in appearance, and steady in his classes. A hard boy to know, but one worth knowing. If you want to see Jack blush, ask him what club he was President of last year. And make him tell you.

ROBERT PERRY WALLACE

Captain Football Team, 1915-'16, Re-elected

He used to carry the ball through,

With six men on his back.

This is Robbie, "Hip" or "Fats"; he answers to them one and all, although his lady friends protest that it is an outrage. Robbie, king of the Annex, is feared by the dues as a dreaded executioner, by the faculty as a curler, and by other colleges as an athlete of ability. Modest, and good natured, few are more popular.

Junior Class History

Do not fear, gentle reader; do not turn away in horror! We positively refused to allow our history to be written in doggerel and you have nothing further to fear. But you may turn over, if you do not wish to hear of the miraculous adventures of this class of thirteen unusual humans.

We are thirteen, and we have no fear of what the future will hold in store for us; only wait until we get our swing at a degree next year. Let me start off my story with "Bill" the auburn-haired lad from Heathsville; Bill has a pessimistic habit of announcing positively that he will never return to this place again, only to be the first to arrive in the fall. He is coming back next year principally to take an advanced course in Physics. From the same land as Bill is Dave, who got into our history by missing the monthly boat Christmas and catching up on his work. If one of our class drops out, it will be George who we expect to see married in a few months. His bridesmaids will be Raymond Maffette, Mac, Shorty Hedrick, and Rash, who are already preparing their clothes. George didn't tell us this, but he did tell Paul, who told it confidentially to "Hip," who mentioned it to Tilley, who in turn confided it to Judy, who is responsible for the report. But George is one of the old guard, ranking with Maffette, Hedrick, Gilliams, and Brent, and perhaps we will let him off.

The dues will tell you the history of Judy, and Robbie, and we tremble for our mates if their future approaches the hopes of these enraged young freshmen.

Now we will start to brag about our accomplishments. When such overpowering lady-killers as Mac, Maffette, Bill Brent, and Dave Gilliams array themselves in their Sunday peg-leg pants and set out, we consider that our social welfare is in capable and zealous hands. Jack Tolson and Tommy Waddill are our leading conversationalists, while Robbie is our athlete par excellence. Ask him what the Farmville girls said when he played against Hampden-Sidney and Thurman up there in '13.

We are such a good class, so representative, and composed of so many individuals of distinction, that we would like immensely to ramble on up and down three more pages, but the Editor-in-Chief is getting fearfully peevish, and he insists that he can't turn over but two pages to my insane ravings, so I'll spite him by stopping short at this critical point in the history of the Junior Class.

Drawing Two

SCENE I.

Curtain coming up discloses Bayle, coatless and collarless, working frenziedly at the table. His hair is disheveled and he swears feinely at frequent intervals. Freshman enters noisily, flings his book on the bed, and follows it. Bayle pauses for an instant to glare at him.

FRESHMAN (gaily)—Don't you ever smile, sadness?

BAYLE (peevishly)—Not on Tuesday or Thursday! (Sighs deeply and returns to his work.)

FRESHMAN—But why the funeral air?

BAYLE—Drawing Two. Don't you ever get tired of asking fool questions? (Sarcastically) And get your dirty feet off the bed, young man!

FRESHMAN (lazily)—Tomorrow's wash day. Never heard before that you were an artist, old lady.

BAYLE (snorting)—Nor did I! But what can I do when the faculty says take Drawing Two and my degree says make Drawing Two? Answer me that, freshie!

FRESHMAN (rolling languidly off the bed)—You're getting too philosophical for me. Guess I'd better ambulate down town; I'm out of coffin tacks anyway.

BAYLE—See here, freshie, know anything about art?

FRESHMAN (complacently)—Sure!

BAYLE (hands him drawing he has been working on)—Cast your peepers over this, young prodigy, and see how you like it.

FRESHMAN (surveying the picture with a critical air)—Perfectly executed, old chap! But just what were you trying to—er—draw?

BAYLE (seriously)—Don't dare get funny, freshie. Can't you see that it is a drawing of scrummage?

FRESHMAN—Can't say I do. Looks like a mud cake to me.

BAYLE (eagerly)—It's an end run, young one. Old Baker tries to be an athletic fiend and he is always slapping that kind of work on us.

FRESHMAN (sadly)—But it's not an end run? It's a splash of paint, a blurred—

BAYLE—Hold your tongue, young man! I know I'm a stick in Drawing, but you shan't rub it in!

FRESHMAN (soothingly)—Keep your shirt on, old lady. Merely friendly advise, nothing more. Now I'll be running on down town before I have to spank you.

BAYLE—Going by the Arts Building?

FRESHMAN—I can.

BAYLE (eagerly)—Won't you sneak that serimnage thing along and sneak it up on old Baker's desk. I've got my name on the back of it, and you'll save me a walk. I'm busy as a minister today.

FRESHMAN (tucking the drawing carelessly under his arm and taking up his hat)—Trust me to get it up there, old lady. I never fail you, do I?

BAYLE—Don't force me to get sarcastic. But don't forget it; it ought to have been in six days ago and old Baker, drot his cross-eyed time, has been getting mean about it.

FRESHMAN—I'll do the dirty work, never fear. (Exit, whistling.)

BAYLE (sighs. Then he clears his table of drawing apparatus with a single angry sweep and takes out writing paper)—With that off my mind, I'll grind out a few heart throbs to the damsels. Hope that ass don't forget to slip my drawing in old Baker's desk.

SCENE II.

A deserted classroom in the Arts Building. Freshman enters softly and slips up to the instructor's desk.

FRESHMAN (running idly through a neat stack of drawings)—Whew! what's old Baker got these things piled up here for? I'll just slip Bayle's effort in the middle of the pile and he'll think it's been there all the time. (Slips Bayle's drawing carefully into the center of the pile.) What kind of rotten drawings are these anyway? But hello! here comes someone! (Makes hastily exit through side door.)

(Old Baker enters hurriedly and goes directly to his desk.)

BAKER (to himself)—All here, just as I left them. Today's the last day of the contest and I'll have to hustle to get them off on the noon train.

He seizes the pile of drawings, wraps them up hastily, directs the package to the "New Art Contest, N. Y., " puts it under his arm and makes his exit.

SCENE III.

Interior of Bayle's room in even greater disorder.

The curtain rises upon Bayle sprawled on his bed, fast asleep. A full-dress suit is scattered carelessly over the floor.

The freshman enters noisy, knocking over a chair.

FRESHMAN—Get up, old lady! It's twelve o'clock now. One more ball and you'll degenerate into a Rip Van Winkle.

BAYLE (sleepily)—Get out of here, you pest! I didn't turn in until four and—

FRESHMAN—"Early to bed and early to rise"—But here's a couple of letters for you, old top.

BAYLE (sitting up in bed and rubbing his eyes)—Read them to me, freshie. Where are they from?

FRESHMAN (squinting at one with a puzzled air. Reads)—"Return in ten days to the New Art Contest, N. Y." What's the idea?

BAYLE—Haven't any idea. Sure it's for me?

FRESHMAN—Got your name on it.

BAYLE (peevishly)—Well, read it to me, freshie. Don't stand there yapping at me all day.

FRESHMAN (reading)—"Mr. Bayle, Dear Sir: It is my pleasant duty to inform you that your excellent impressionistic painting, "The Scrimmage," has won first honors in our recent contest. The first prize, a priceless painting in the same style, by Sir Worstan Foolishe, has been shipped and should reach you in a few days.

(Signed) D. F. Prejndice, Sec'y."

BAYLE (sternly)—Freshman, is this one of your infernal jokes? Don't get gay with me, young man, just because the session is over.

FRESHMAN (earnestly)—On my honor, I don't know a thing about it. I put your drawing on old Baker's desk last month and that is all I know.

BAYLE (sarcastically)—What the dence do I want with an impressionistic painting? Nice mess you got me in! But read the other letter. Where's it from?

FRESHMAN—From the Registrar's office. (Tears open letter and reads it.)

BAYLE (quickly)—What's wrong, freshie?

FRESHMAN (weakly)—Everything. It's from the faculty; they beg to inform you—sad duty, etc.—that you have flunked Drawing Two!

Curtain.

Requiem

*A "due" by the name of Billy,

Of the freshman's name, I reckon,
And we're kind o' glad its so.*

The Cannon Scrap

Rules and Regulations adopted by representatives from Freshman and Sophomore Classes:

1. The scrap shall take place annually on Cary Field on the first Saturday after classes begin.
2. The Spottswood Cannon shall be defended by the Sophomores.
3. The Freshman shall endeavor to capture and take the Cannon from the field.
4. The Freshman shall be allowed 30 minutes to complete the task.
5. The use of soap, tar and grease is prohibited.
6. A contestant shall be disqualified for any unnecessary roughness, for losing temper, or clothes.
7. The judges shall be Profs. Clark, Keeble, and Calhoun.
8. The victors shall be presented with a banner, especially designed for the occasion.

The first Cannon Scrap was held on September 25, 1915, and resulted in a victory for the Freshman, who achieved their purpose after a desperate defense of the prize by the Sophomore. But the Freshman hopelessly out-classed their opponents in numbers and size, and although the Cannon had been placed in the farthest corner of the field, they dragged it out from its defenders and straight across the field to the gate. There, the Sophomores were re-inforced and for a moment it seemed that the cannon would be checked. But the Freshman, by sheer numbers, cleared the wheels of the grasping hands, and rolled their prize with a mighty yell out of the gate and into the road, in only twenty minutes from the commencement of hostilities.

Prof. Keeble presented the Banner of Victory to the winners who dragged their trophy down the street amid wild rejoicing. Their victory was well earned, in spite of their great number, for the gun had been carefully placed in a protected corner, and they finished well within the time limit. May they retain it next year when it will be their turn to defend it!

Order in Court!

And so the court came to order.

From his lofty seat, the Judge of the Supreme Court, convened yearly to try the more flagrant offenses against the Commonwealth of William and Mary, looked down upon the faces before him, and frowned angrily. Whereat, little chills went chasing up and down the spines of the dues here trapped by the courtesy of the older classmen. Silence.

"The Lord High Sheriff will bring forward the prisoner?"

He was the meekest of the meek as he came forward slowly, supported by the gigantic Sheriff and his corpulent deputy, and his last ounce of self-possession left him as he looked up and found himself in the presence of the Court. At first he tried to look unconcerned, at which the Judge stared at him stonily; changed his mind and decided to look tolerantly amused, at which the Attorney for the Prosecution coughed angrily; so he shifted to his other foot and looked miserable, at which the jury nodded approvingly. The sonorous voice of the Clerk, reading the indictment, aroused him with a start:

"—for the unheard of crime against the College of William and Mary

COLONIAL ECHO

of appearing on the campus wearing purple socks, in the presence of responsible witnesses?"

He concluded with a flourish, and a groan of horror ran through the crowded room at the very enormity of the crime, for which the prisoner was about to be tried. He was trying feebly to explain that it was all a mistake, when he was seized and dragged rudely up to be sworn. After he had sworn to tell the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help him Billiken, he kissed a green Geometry with a resounding smack, and tottered back to his chair.

Weakly he crossed a leg.

"Hold the prisoner!" roared the Judge. "Take his life if necessary," he added fiercely, as a deputy sprang to the prisoner's side.

And then the Clerk called the witnesses for the prosecution.

They came forward smiling, perjury written all over their faces, and the heart of the prisoner sank within him at the murmur of approval that ran through the room—the Clerk had done his work well, the witnesses, one and all, enjoyed wide reputations for their carelessness with the truth.

And they added many enbits to their fame that night. One after the other, they were sworn and took the stand to assert positively that they knew the prisoner well and had, they blushed to admit it, seen him commit the offense with which he was charged. And the heart of the prisoner was quite in his shoes by the time they were done.

"The prisoner will take the stand in his own defense," was the arbitrary announcement of the Court, when the perjuring gentlemen were through.

"Your name," snarled the Prosecuting Attorney, as soon as the luckless defendant was uncomfortably settled in the witness chair.

"Wishi Nevercame," was the reply, scarcely audible.

"Where from, Mr. Nevercame?"

"Toamo, sir, I—" A moan of horror, of disbelief swept over the spectators; the jury looked astounded; and the Judge turned pale.

"Where?" asked the attorney for the defense innocently. He has been trying to bum a cigarette, to the detriment of his client's case, or he would never have been so foolish.

The prisoner wet his lips bravely; something was wrong, perhaps they had not understood him. "Toamo," he explained patiently. "You know I am a cousin of Nat—"

He got no further. A concerted roar of dismay, of consternation stopped him abruptly. The prosecuting attorney smiled broadly; the jury fixed upon the witness a look of dire destruction, and the attorney for the defense, as soon as he could make himself heard, asked to be relieved.

"Your request MUST be granted," said the Judge slowly, while a hundred heads nodded solemn approval. "Is there any rising young legal talent in the court room who wishes to take this desperate case. I appeal to your sympathies; the prisoner at the bar has unwittingly convicted himself of a most serious charge and is in great danger of losing his head. Will no one volunteer?"

Perfect silence in the room.

"Then," continued the Judge, "there is nothing to do but to leave the fate of the prisoner in the hands of the jury. Gentlemen of the jury," turning toward that prejudiced-looking body, "heinous as is the crime with which the prisoner is charged, and which has been fully proven by the testimony of that entirely veracious group of witnesses for the prosecution, we must take into consideration the astonishing admission of the prisoner in this very court, while practically in the shadow of the gallows, and the abominable effrontery which he has exhibited at all times of the trial. His superhuman efforts to escape from the custody of the court officers are not to be overlooked, and the fact that he dared to take the stand in his own defense is, in the opinion of the Court, a mark of the hardened criminal. The Court in his instructions to the jury always strives to be perfectly unprejudiced, and I flatter myself that my instructions in no way assail the innocence of the prisoner. In closing, I would like to suggest that in considering the case, you disregard any evidence in favor of the accused as tending to interfere with a true conception of his guilt. The jury will retire."

The jury retired, rather hastily, to a corner of the room, and the favour of their debate would be judged from the remarks of "Death, certainly!" "A cousin, you know!" "Guilty!"

In a few moments they filed solemnly back to their seats and met the entreating looks of the prisoner with cold scorn. The foreman stood up.

"After due deliberation," he stated, with provoking slowness, "the jury stood six to six upon the question of putting the prisoner to death or forcing him to take Physics III—an extreme punishment from which they refuse to budge. So, it was compromised, and he is fined the sum of 23c."

The prisoner's face brightened.

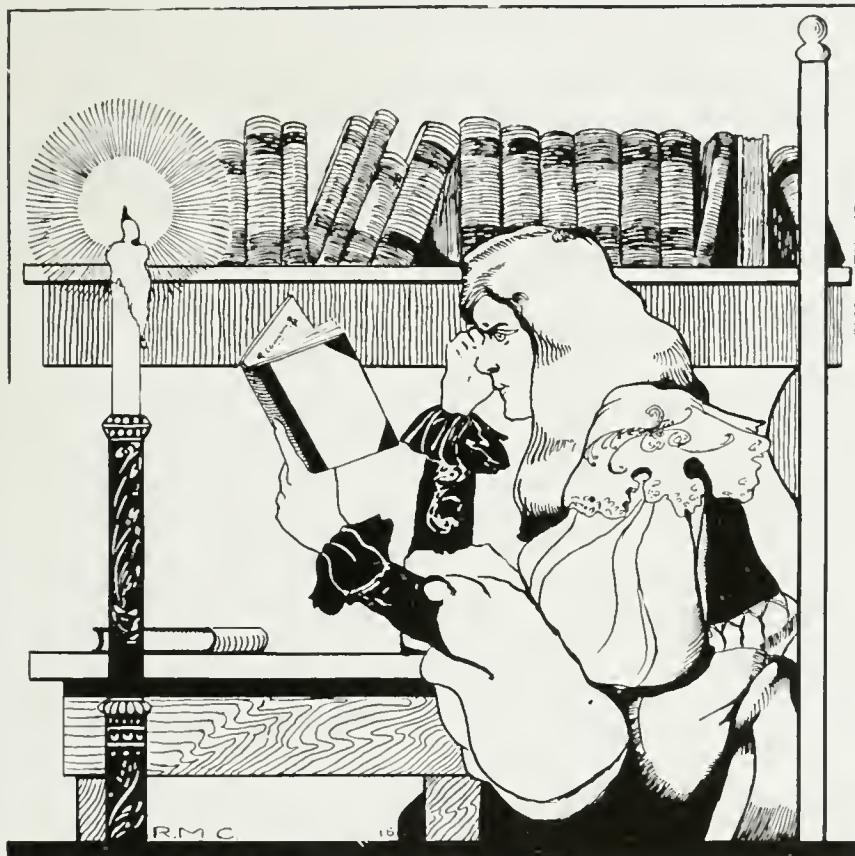

"Plus ten cents for contempt of Court," said the Judge as the foreman sat down. "He showed his relief!"

The Lord High Sheriff approached the prisoner to escort him to the back of the room where a scowling deputy waited to collect the fine.

"Order in Court!" roared the Judge. "The Clerk will please read the next case on our docket."

Song of the Syrian Priest

Here on the desert sands I kneel,
Under the stars,
Open the singing gates, O love, reveal
Thy templed panoplays.

See! as the moon-washed sands are clean,
Clean is my heart,
Long have I served thee, Isthar, though unseen,
Grown wise in thy holy art.

Here in the silent night I kneel,
Facing the sky,
Isthar, orient goddess of Love, reveal
Thy presence, lest I die!

'Twas the Night Before Exams—

The Night After

Flunked! Flunked! Flunked!
On these darned old 'exams again,
And I would that my tongue could utter
My thoughts of direst pain.

Alas! for the weary hours
I spent with my books one day!
Alas! for the cherished hopes
That go melting fast away!

And the stately seniors go on
To their final great reward
But oh! for the sight of a cherished A,
The thought of a chance that is gone.

Flunked! Flunked! Flunked!
Off this campus soon I'll be,
For a desperate cram didn't pass the 'exam.

College Definitions

GRIND—A student who comes to college for an education, who deigns to look at a book occasionally, and who burns the midnight oil over a poker game.

BOOZE-ARTIST—An unfortunate who having once "celebrated" not wisely but with spirit, becomes by the courtesy of his friends, a hopeless drunkard and a desperate jailbird.

DILL-PICKER—A student who regards a professor as a human being; who is not above speaking to them on the street; and who does not always define them as hardened criminals and disguised executioners.

STUDY-HALL—A highly-perfected relic of the Inquisition.

FACULTY—A class-name for a species belonging to the same general family as umpires and tax-collectors. Are very friendly during most of the year, but during the twice-recurring "Dark Ten Days" are as prompt to assassinate you with a D or E.

MONTHLY GRADES—A graded system of gnessing.

HOLIDAY—A day granted the students to enable them to catch up with their work. Special holidays are usually obtained by yelling, en masse, for a few minutes before the President's door.

PROBATION—A dangerous position attained by sleeping through chapel and by being marked absent on classes you don't take. Also the result of "lemonading."

FLUNK—The dismal result of being unable to memorize a 800 page book in a single night, or of having original ideas.

CITRILER—Usually, a person with a good disposition, who keeps his eyes and book open in class.

WHURLEY—A lineal descendant of the hemlock made famous and fashionable by Socrates. An unanalyzed compound served the dormitory dues, in which can be recognized old friends of the street and field.

BUT NOT IN LAND

"Champ" Armistead, who had been eagerly making conversation of John Tyler's diplomacy in securing options during the Dupont boom, ended by remarking, in a tone of admiration:

"Gosh! but John pulled off a big one last night!"

"Champ"—"His shoe."

IS ENGLISH BECOMING CORRUPT?

"Polly" Stryker (yelling from a third-story window)—"Hey, Fats, have you worked them Physics?"

REASON ENOUGH

Prof. Ferguson, in his Ethics class, had been busily building up a model moral situation, and creating a dense moral atmosphere. He finished thus: "Now, Mr. Zion, what was it that kept you from getting drunk last night?"

Zion (promptly)—"I didn't have nolicker!"

WHY THE GIRLS SCREAMED

Hedrick, arrayed in his best, was on his way to Lexington with the football team, having carefully strapped his togs on the outside of his suitcase, for reasons of his own. To the intense delight of the squad, he approached two unknown young ladies, suitcase in hand, hoping by his charms to make an acquaintance. His introduction, accompanied by a company bow, was as follows:

"Hello, girls, I'm only a college 'chappie' on my way to play football!"

THE EFFECT OF HORACE'S PATHOS

Prof. Clark (with tearful pathos)—"Oh! fratres avec—" A peculiar noise interrupted him. Whereupon the instructor was very much incensed and was reprimanding Stryker for punctuating the pathos when Gayle spoke up in a weak voice:

"It was I, Professor; I cannot tell a lie. I was just swallowing my Adam's Apple!"

AN ENTERTAINING CONVERSATION

One afternoon at the depot, "Peanut" Dalhouse recognized a young lady on the train, who was signaling to him, but he was unable to understand, so racing up close to the window, he remarked:

"Can't hear you, can you see me?"

Dr. Goodwin (in Zoology)—"Mr. Gordon, what are the three classes of foods?"

Gordon—"Grapenuts, beefsteak, and biscuits."

POLITICAL SCIENCE IGNORANCE EXPOSED

Dr. Tyler—"Mr. Crymes, which party won?"

"Phi Beta Kappa" Crymes (starting out a profound slumber)—"The Republican Party."

Dr. Tyler—"Won what?"

Mr. Chymes—"The question."

Dr. Tyler—"What question?"

Crymes—"The question you were talking about."

Dr. Tyler (irritated)—"Well, what in the thunder question was it?"

Crymes—"I don't know, Doctor."

Letters of a Lady Killer

Williamsburg Jail,
February 27, 1916.

My Dearest Angela:

Alas! my heart is broken, my hopes are fled! True to my promise, I last night journeyed to your little city of Grove and after waiting for hours in the dark, it seared my heart to think that you had deceived me. So I sorrowfully took the road to Williamsburg, when I was met by your charming father who had been delayed by a hold-up on the road. In my delight at his warm reception and courtesy, I confided to him my faithful gun. Whereupon, I regret to say, his mien changed, and he laid violent hands upon me, asking why I had written such letters to you, my beloved. I was dragged, fighting bravely, my dear Angela, to a car crowded with ruffians and hurried protesting into Williamsburg. I had a very enjoyable ride, but I would blush to record your father's rudeness and the low speech he heaped upon me during the ride. But, never once, did I lose courage, thinking of you, my brown-eyed darling.

At the city hall, terrible to relate, I was taken by force from the car and left in the care of your unsympathetic father while the ruffians went off to obtain the prison keys. But, by sheer strength, I overcame your unmannerly father and made my escape, fleeing through the city.

Now I lie in my dungeon, taken by the police, and I kiss the picture that you, my darling, sent me. Perhaps by the time you read these lines I shall be confronting your father in court, but not for a moment will I forget you, my queen of Grove. With a heart full of love,

Devotedly,

Hugh.

P. S.—Ask your esteemed father to return my gun—it was borrowed.

These Really Happened

"Doc" Nichols—"Say, Mr. Wallace, are State students required to take shower baths?"

"Fats"—"Well, not exactly; but they do have to go past the Annex to their meals, and it amounts to the same thing."

"Dumbell" Ellis entitled the masterly short story he produced for English I., "Behind the Curtain" and thought that his fame as an author was secure.

It came back to him ten days later marked, "Behind the Procession," D.

Psychology Examination—"Why does a repeated action tend to become a habit?"

Chorus of answers—"Because it forms a habit."

"Buddie" Green (scratching his head in despair)—"Darned if I see why this spleen looks so funny under my microscope."

Dr. Godwin (taking a squint at the "spleen")—"Rather inconsiderate of the spleen, Green. But you happen to have your instrument focused on the window-pane."

Prof. Crawford—"Why was the Yorktown Monument erected?"

Perfect silence.

W. D. Harris—"To celebrate the landing at Jamestown."

Jim Early—"Lend me your pen, Kent."

Kent—"Which one; frat or fountain?"

The Chapel Bell

"Doc, the wretch, is ringing the bell,
Would to heaven he was in—well,
This aching head and heavy tongue
Are beginning to pay for my night of fun!"

"Here's it's eight A. M., and a rainy day,
And "Doc," the brute, is ringing away,
While the old bell sounds a mournful call,
To the path of duty and the Science Hall.

"I'll turn over now for another nap,
For a fellow can't always be on tap,
Tho', if they get my name at chapel today,
It's "props" for me and the deuce to pay!"

Alpha Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa

WILLIAM AND MARY

FOUNDERS

Armistead Smith

John Jones

The Phi Beta Kappa Society was organized at the College of William and Mary, December 5, 1776, and was a combination of a Greek letter fraternity and a debating society. From this humble beginning has grown the widely-known honor society, having upon its rolls the names of some of the most distinguished men in America.

The mother chapter's first period of existence was brief. In 1781, the scene of war shifted to the Virginia peninsula and when the college closed its doors, the few members gave up their archives and minutes into the hands of the college steward. The Society slumbered until 1849; the papers disappeared, but finally fell into the possession of the Virginia Historical Society which restored them to Alpha in 1893.

In this same year, Col. William Lamb revived the Society; the faculty were initiated; and a new era of prosperity began. Chapters had been established in the leading Northern colleges where they thrived from the first, and did much to elevate the fraternity to its present high rank.

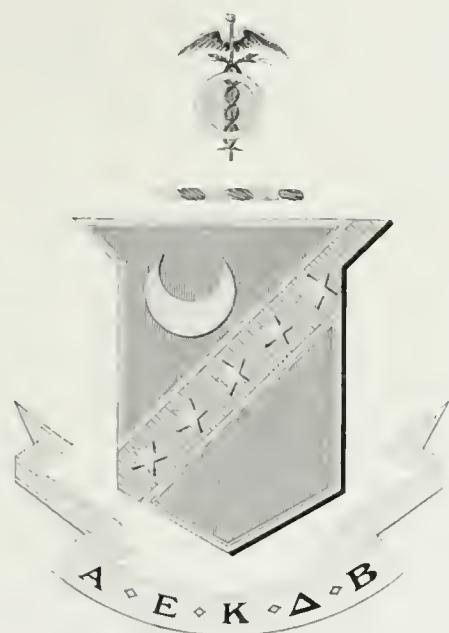

For its size (there are about two hundred names on the rolls), Alpha of Virginia, is one of the largest, strongest chapters, numbering among its members the most distinguished scholars and litterateurs of Virginia.

At William and Mary there are two classes of members: men distinguished in letters and science whom the College wishes to honor; and former students who have gone out into life and shown promise in literary or scientific paths. Any student on the rolls has it within his power to wear the key and win the honor that is so highly esteemed among educated and cultivated men of this land.

Phi Beta Kappa is not a secret fraternity, competing with other fraternities, but a "brotherhood of scholars."

The All-Classic Steeple Chase, the Derby of William and Mary sport lovers, was run January 23, over an exceedingly heavy track and under very adverse weather conditions. Several of the jockeys were painfully over-crammed, a regrettable fact that made consistent riding impossible, while some of the mounts showed the evil result of hasty training. The race was marred by a series of most distressing accidents: "Polly" Stryker being unseated and badly shaken at the Periphrastic Jump when his mount stumbled; young "Hercules," in spite of his earnest efforts, was hopelessly left at the post; and Campbell Deane met disaster when Virgil refused the Potential Jump. "Characteristic Subjunctive" Maffette, one of the spectators, in his enthusiasm, ran out into the track and was painfully injured by "vun swift kick" of the speeding Agamemnon.

The finish was hotly fought and brought the big crowd to their feet. Nathau, riding Ovid, was closely pressed at the wire by "Jersey" on Agamemnon, and "Jawn" Combs, who had had trouble with his mount at the Quis-Que-Quo Ditch, was only two lengths behind. Early on, Cicero failed to finish and his fate is problematical, although Hiram Thorpe reported seeing him thrown at the Ablative Absolute Jump.

The winner, Ovid, finished under the whips, but showed remarkable stamina for a four-year-old. Her trainer, Mr. Cramit Interlinear, of the Stone stables, is quoted as saying that the victory is due entirely to the excellent horsemanship of Nathan, who at all times, handled his steed with the skill and wisdom of long experience.

At the end of the race, the Judges called the jockeys to the stand and congratulated them upon their splendid showing. With tears in his eyes, Judge Clark declared that he was most strongly reminded of the palmy days when he, too, rode winners in similar races.

Eight-forty and the chapel bells,
And one sad call for me,
And ah! how sadly total ignorance dwells,
On faces that I see.

Two-thirty and the evening bell,
And after that, no more
Of time is left than which to say Farewell,

Yet through from out my store of literal Greek,
Mistakes bear me away.
My name upon the board I hope to meet,

Athletics

The year of 1915-6 has seen the acquisition of one Championship Cup, and the birth of a growing optimism among faculty and undergraduates in regard to athletics at William and Mary. The Alumni have been aroused to lend their aid, a new spirit has arisen, and a firm base laid for future power in the various branches of sport.

Our football team gave promise of great power until the backfield was broken up by the severe injury of Doynes, the speedy quarterback, around whose aggressiveness the offensive of the team had been planned. His injury was followed by many shifts in an effort to balance the secondary defense and better a rather erratic line. Captain Wallace, shifted to quarterback, played a star game, as did Gale, the fullback, while Wilson proved to be the best center in the league. But as a whole, the season was not a success, and the only encouraging feature is the promise shown by some of the men who expect to return to the campus next fall.

Our Basketball Team was heavy, fast, and scrappy, and they were never headed in the race for the cup, losing only one of the six championship games, and making a runaway race of it. The stellar work of the Gayle and Zion was largely responsible for the high position of the team, while the sudden rise of "Polly" Stryker into the position of a star guard, was the surprise of the season. Hail to the Champions of 1916!

In baseball, our prospects are rather bright, with five letter men on hand and a crowd of new men of ability to select from. Captain Garnett is a team in himself when he is on the mound, and Zehmer, his catcher, looks to be in his usual good shape. At the present time, adverse weather conditions have interferred seriously with practice, and the team finds itself on the eve of its Southern trip without the practice that is so necessary for their triumph. Only one member of the famous infield is on hand this year, but Addington, the assistant coach, is confident of building up a combination that will be able to hold its own in the coming Championship battles.

Tennis and track are receiving more attention than ever, as a result of the elevation of these sports to a higher rank, and the determined efforts of the Athletic Council to suitably reward the contestants in these branches of sport. The new tennis courts are in good shape, and there is no longer a congestion of players on one court. Manager Woods of the track team is working a goodly squad, and hopes to discover some point winners for the coming Meets. The manager recently won a place in the Church Hill Marathon in Richmond, against some of the best long distance men in the State.

Looking back over the athletic records of the year, we find much to be proud of, and more to praise, while we see in the defeats of the past, the baptism of fire that is fitting us for a year of victories in 1916-7.

Indians Capture Trophy

Aided by Garnett's pitching and fifteen sate blows, the William and Mary Indians won the baseball championship of the Eastern Virginia Intercollegiate Association yesterday afternoon at Broad Street Park, when they defeated the Randolph-Macon Yellow Jackets by the score of 7 to 2.

In the first inning the Indians got to Woodfin for one run. Heflin, the Indian third sacker, greeted Woodfin by hitting one of his offerings to the fence in left center for three bases. Woodfin seemed to find himself after that wallop, and the next two batters were retired on strikes. M. Williams, however, scored Heflin with a single, but Stryker was retired, on strikes. The Yellow Jackets drew blanks in their half of the first frame and in every inning thereafter with the exception of the ninth, when they scored two runs. William and Mary seemed to find the offerings of Woodfin to their liking, and scored six runs during the remainder of the game, two counters each being registered in the second, fourth and sixth innings.

The game was featured mainly by the hitting of the Indians, with Goslee, the chief swatter of the day. Goslee got four hits out of the five trips to the plate. P. Williams and Heflin ran him a close second by getting three out of five times up. Chief Garnett demonstrated that he could hit some, as well as pitch, by getting two hits out of four rips. Although he was defeated, Woodfin, of the Yellow Jackets, pitched a good game and struck out eight batters.

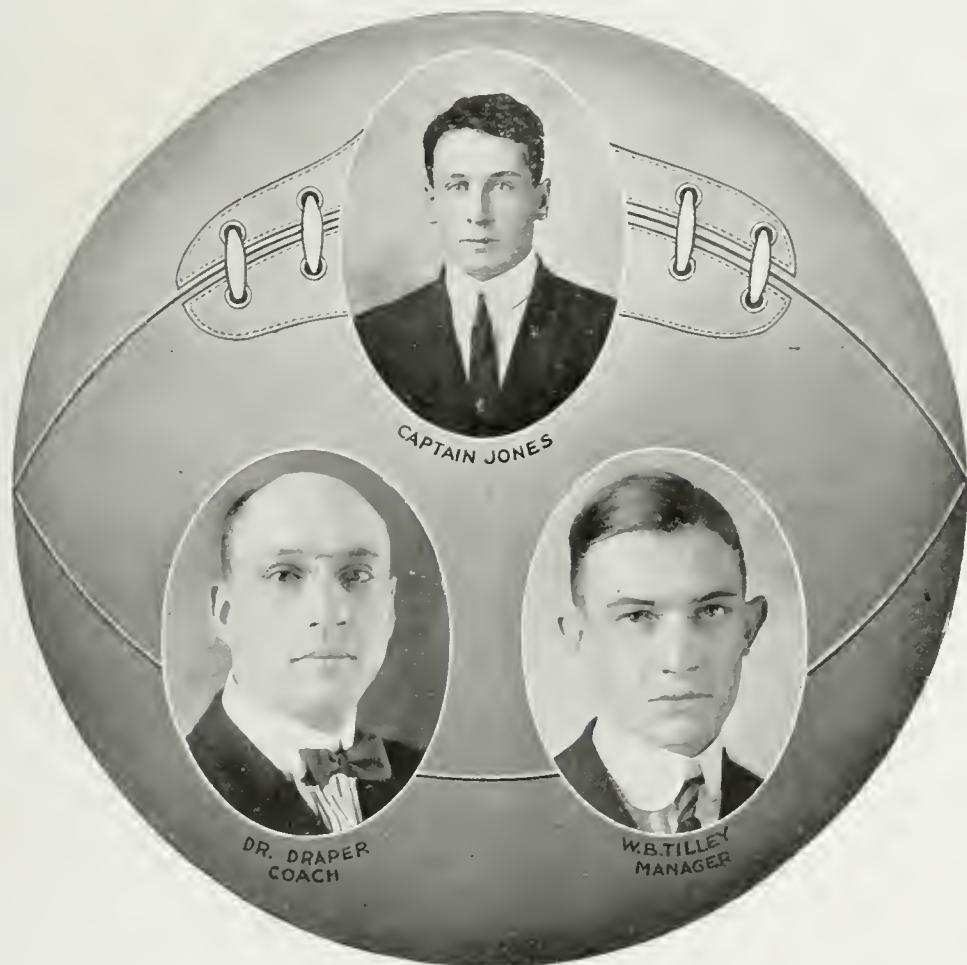

This was the third time in the last six years that these teams have been tied for first honors, and each time the Indians have come out victorious.

Academy History

The history of the Academy is a glorious chronicle of still more glorious deeds. From the standpoint of scholastic achievements, the session of 1915-16 has been most successful; the student body coming through the cross-fire of mid-term exams with colors flying, proving invincible even in the face of "Pap's" English and "John's" Math. Curling has become an art, and Nicholson, Johnson, Aeree and Somers are its devotees.

While work in the Jefferson has not been up to par, a great many changes are being made and we predict that finals will find the society in its old time form.

But as Prof. Schepmoes would say, "Much study is a weariness of the flesh," so let us turn to a more pleasant topic—athletics. Through the untiring efforts of Coach Hubbard and under his masterly hand, the teams this year have proved themselves to be the best ever produced in the Academy. The football team ably proved its claim to distinction. The backfield, led by Capt. Somers, was a winning combination of speed, weight and power. "Monk" Ellis developed into a phenomenon, playing behind a powerful line, that had for its keystone, Joe Garber, the massive center. This eleven dropped only one game, and played high class football throughout the season.

The basketball team hardly developed to its maximum efficiency, owing to lack of veterans and limited gymnasium facilities, but it made up in "pep" all that was lacking in skill. Also, the memory of the Newport News game is pleasant to us.

With a wealth of new material on hand, it appears that our baseball team will hold its own with the best teams that appear on the schedule. Captain "Monk" Ellis, a wonderful batter and pitcher, is not at all disengaged at the outlook, and Coach Hubbard is working faithfully to produce a fast, well-balanced nine.

The introduction of frequent hare and hound hunts has done a great deal to revive the interest in track and field activity, and the number of men who have reported makes it practically certain that the Academy will make a creditable showing in the coming Interscholastic Meet to be held on Cary Field.

The writer feels that the task of Historian, while pleasant, is beyond his humble ability and regrets that he cannot do full justice to his splendid subject. Men of 1916, you are the fortunate inheritors of a rich legacy in the opportunity that was yours to participate in the stirring events of the past years. Let us work together, to end the year in a way that will reflect honor upon us and our school!

Song

See, Love, the day is dying,
Wearp and still;
Night like a lone sad mourner comes sighing
Over the hill;
Now moves soft-footed through the sky,
And lights the stars to their watch close by.

Hark, 'tis the night-bird singing,
Mournfully sweet;
Up from the dusky garden winging,
Now song-mad fleet
He shrills his sorrow to the sky,
And weeps that day should ever die.

Martin Feinstein.

good night!
