

The image shows the front cover of an old book. The cover is decorated with marbled paper. A central vertical strip, likely made of leather or a different material, runs down the middle. The marbling consists of repeating, overlapping, teardrop-shaped patterns in shades of red, blue, and yellow. A small, white, rectangular label is affixed to the upper part of the cover, containing the handwritten number '1774'.

Here we behold huge Comets wondrous roll,
Their fires dilate; how various Suns controul
Revolving Planets---Stars unmov'd convey
To darksome orbs the bright enliv'ning ray.

KIND READER,

VANITY prompts some men to engage in public undertakings; but others, with a laudable zeal for the advantage of mankind, embark willingly in their service, with a desire to promote their welfare.

---As this is the first time I have engaged in a work of this nature, I cannot help observing, that it is entirely at the request of an intimate friend, who is desirous of assisting the Printers, who are young beginners, that I have thus presented to public view, what I composed only for my own amusement, as Astronomy has always been my favourite study, when my necessary affairs would permit it.---How far my productions this year, will merit the attention and approbation of the Public, I shall leave it to their candour to determine; but, this I can with truth assert, that I have exerted all my abilities to make the calculations accurate, and to furnish a variety of entertaining matter.

My Muse awake, my Genius bids my quill
Beg of Minerva to impart some skill:
Some skill to unveil the heav'nly canopy,
Their motions and their influx to descry.
If lofty Saturn, with a frowning look,
Or Jove's misguided zeal, condemn my book,
Or fiery Mars his angry sword should draw,
Or Sol my duty makes me stand in awe,
Or Venus' wantons in their mirth me flout,
Mercurial Wits my faults may blaze about:
Or Lunar Vulgars, Zoilus and Momus too,
Do say I meddle with what I've not to do.
I fear no censure, nor what Critics say,
My friends will meet me in the beaten way.
I care not much how men affected be,
If I my Reader please, it will please me,

RICHARD MEANWELL.

ENDEAVOUR to be religious without superstition, just without rigour, merciful without partiality, cautious without fear, valiant without rashness, and great without pride.

To superiors give respect, deference and submission to equals affection and confidence; to every body sincerity, and all the service in your power.

Be civil to all, serviceable to many, familiar with few, a friend to one, and an enemy to none.

It is not less cowardly to speak ill of the dead, than it would be to kill an enemy incapable of making his own defence.

Emulation is a noble passion; it is enterprising, but yet just; because it strives to excel, only by raising itself, and not by depressing another.

A wise man will desire no more than what he may get justly, use soberly, distribute cheerfully, and leave contentedly.

An uncultivated mind, like unmanured ground, will soon be over-run with weeds.

It is a pitiful sneaking sort of life, that of a backbiter, always to be pecking at, and feeding upon the imperfections of others.

Law and physic should only be made use of for necessity.

It is not so very difficult for men to know themselves, if they did but take the pains to enquire; but they are more solicitous to be thought what they should be, than really careful to be what they should.

None more impatiently suffer injuries than those that are most forward in doing them.

He that envieth, maketh another man's virtue his vice, and another's happiness his torment; whereas, he that rejoiceth at the prosperity of another, is partaker of the same.

Every condition of life has its disadvantages; and he only, who bears them with fortitude is victorious.

Be acquainted with yourself, and desire nothing over-much, for misery is the constant companion of discontent.

On the PLEASURES of RETIREMENT.

TO be absolute master of one's own time and actions, is an instance of liberty, which is not found but in solitude. A man that lives in a crowd is a slave, even though all that are about him fawn upon him, and give him the upper hand: They call him Master, and treat him as such; but as they hinder him from doing what he otherwise would, the title and homage which they pay him is flattery and contradiction. Some run into this sort of bondage by a fondness for popularity, and others through an impatience of being at any time by themselves. Thus it is to be weary of ourselves, and not to know, with the great Scipio, how to be least alone when we are alone: And indeed, one may always guess at peoples dispositions and parts by their love or hatred of solitude. None but an innocent or a discerning mind can be fond of it; and few that are vicious or weak care for it: It requires capacity, because we must be able to entertain ourselves; and virtue, that we may bear reflection upon our past behaviour. Behold here a lesson and reproof for those who cannot live without company.

THE POWER OF GOLD.

THE sacred power of gold! How many unequal matches dost thou make here on earth? Let a man have no more brains than a butterfly, no more sense than an ass, no better breeding than a sow, and equal in condition to the greatest brute in nature, yet, having store of money, be is the man. Be a woman discreet, wise, affable, modest, &c. in a word, be she industrious as the ant, chaste as the dove, fair as the lily, and endued with all the good qualities of mind and body, the cry still runs, But has she money? In short, it is money that sells all, money buys all, money pays all, money makes all, money mends all, and money mars all.

If you are proffered a wife with only one of these three properties, beauty, wit, wealth, choose the last; for these three are compared to a walnut: Beauty is like the rind, quickly peeled off; wit like the shell, quickly cracked; but wealth, like the kernel, brings substance with it; and therefore to be preferred to the other two.

A remarkable Instance of SELF-GOVERNMENT.

WHEN the great Scipio, the Roman General, was pursuing his conquests in Spain, a noble and beautiful Lady was made his captive. He was in the prime of life, and had a relish for pleasure, and might have used his slave as he pleased. He was smitten with her beauty, and acquainted her with it; but she received him with horror, declared she was pre-engaged to one of her own country, and even produced her lover, to plead with his potent rival. Scipio heard them with uneasiness, appeared irresolute, but said he would declare his mind at another interview. The time came, the General took his seat, the guards attended, and the Lady and her lover threw themselves at his feet all in tears, under the greatest apprehensions and perplexity. The soldiers themselves were moved with pity. Then Scipio, rising from his seat, lifted the lovers from the ground, joined their hands, dried their tears, and made them for ever happy in each other. This was a greater action than winning a battle: No man was great enough to conquer Scipio, but Scipio conquered himself.

The DIFFERENT EFFECTS of LOVE.

NOTHING shews the dignity of love more, than that it has all the other passions in avowed subordination to it; anger, pity, hope, and terror are all its servants and dependants: It soothes or inflames us at pleasure, and we are gay or gloomy, just as the little blind boy would have us: How many shapes does he wear? Nothing is more solemn, nothing more whimsical! He makes the mad man grave, and the sober man mad: He brings pride and ambition to humility and their knees; and the miser, when love has once warmed his frozen heart, unclutches both his fists, and throws away his money in handfuls. Love is a thing which all people feel, most people talk of, and what but few understand.

The DESTRUCTIVE TENDENCY of AVARICE.

AVARICE, or the inordinate desire of what we do not want, or of what others possess, is, in its effects, the most comprehensive and most wicked of all the passions and vices, and of the most general ill tendency. There is nothing which so much disturbs the peace and property of mankind. If every man would be but content with his own, every man might quietly enjoy his own: But when ever Avarice bids us take, we will still be finding reason to follow its advice; and, indeed, considering the corruption of mankind, and how much we are prompted by evil inclinations and examples, the wonder is not great, if, when we are our own judges, we generally give sentence in favour of ourselves. What passion or appetite is there, which is not an underling and a tool to Avarice? Ambition is an avarice of power, and hunger is an avarice of food; Pride is an avarice of respect, and cruelty of revenge; and love is an avarice of possessing what is beautiful, or what appears so. It is the quality and curse of this passion, that it can never be satiated: It still urges to be possessing, and yet can never enjoy what it already does possess. It is not necessary to the gratification of this passion, which indeed can never be gratified, that the covetous person succeeds and fills his bags: For, it is not enough that he has received a great deal, but he must be still receiving: Nor then is it possible he should be satisfied, because he can never receive so much as he would receive.

No mortal is so miserable from his own inborn spirit as a covetous man. A choleric fellow does not always boil with warmth, but is sometimes pleased and at rest. Food allays hunger, and lasciviousness meets with a cure, or at least an allay in enjoyment: But covetousness is a dry, stupid passion, which never abates; it cannot cool, for it is always cool. Were there any thing of violence in it, or heat of blood, there might be some hopes of curing it, or, at least of bringing it to an intermission; but having nothing volatile nor warm in it, it is only a dull industrious passion, a drudge of a vice, without a bit of fire in it, and quite destitute of delight.

CONTENT TRUE HAPPINESS.

IS Happiness your point in view?
 (I mean the intrinsic and the true)
 She not in camps nor courts resides,
 Nor in the humble cottage hides;
 Yet found alike in every sphere,
 Who finds Content, will find her there:
 'Tis to no rank of life confin'd,
 But dwells in every honest mind:
 Be Justice then your sole pursuit,
 Plant Virtue, and Content's the fruit.

ON FLATTERY.

PARENT of wicked, bane of honest deeds,
 Pernicious flatt'ry, thy malignant seeds
 In an ill hour, and by a fatal hand,
 Sadly diffus'd o'er virtues gleby land,
 With rising pride amidst the corn appear,
 And choak the hopes and harvest of the year.

To a YOUNG LADY with an ALMANACK.

HOW small the volume! Yet in this you see
 The Sun's whole labour in epitome.
 So if kind Venus aid the poet's art,
 And swell with soft desires my Celia's heart.
 Here she shall find one Epigram contain,
 More than a thousand folio's can explain.

ON FANCY.

WHERE'ER we turn, by fancy charm'd, we find
 Some sweet illusion of the created mind;
 Oft, wild of wing, she calls the soul to rove
 With humbler nature, in the rural grove,
 Where swains contented, own the quiet scene,
 And twilight fairies tread the circled green;
 Dress'd by her hand, the woods and vallies smile,
 And spring diffusive decks the enchanted isle.

APPROVED REMEDIES.

FOR THE CHOLIC.

TAKE half a drachm of powder of Rhubarb toasted a little before the fire.

FOR DEAFNESS.

SYRINGE the ears well with some warm milk and oil, then take a quarter of an ounce of liquid Opodeldoch, and as much oil of Almonds, mix them well, and drop a few drops into each ear, stopping them with a little cotton or wool; repeat this every night going to rest.

FOR A COUGH.

TAKE oil of sweet Almonds and syrup of Balsam, of each two ounces, four ounces of Barley-water, and and thirty drops of Spirits of Sal Volatile; shake them well together, and take two large spoonfuls when the cough is troublesome: If this medicine does not remove the cough in a few days, it will be absolutely necessary to be blooded.

FOR THE GRAVEL AND STONE.

TAKE one pound of calcined oyster shells, and pour thereon twelve pints of boiling water, strain it when cold, and take half a pint mixed with a little new milk three times in a day, gradually increasing the quantity, till it amounts to four pints a day. If the patient is costive, two ounces of Manna dissolved in a quart of whey, should be taken for one dose, once or twice every week.

FOR GRIPES.

TAKE half a drachm of powdered Rhubarb, and toast it a little before the fire, then add a little of powder of Ginger to it, and mix it for one dose, to be repeated as occasion requires.

FOR THE HEAD-ACH.

APPLY Leeches behind the ears, and take twenty drops of Tincture of Castor in a glass of water frequently.
