John Tucker's

THE TRANSIT OF MERCURY,

Happens on the 7th of May, as follows:

	H. M.
Beginning at - - - - -	3 53	} In the Morning.
Middle - - - - -	7 37
End - - - - -	11 21

The Sun will rise at 5h. 3m. Mercury being then advanced on the Solar disk, about one eighth part of the Sun's diameter, considerably to the left hand of his lower limb.

THE GENERAL MEETINGS OF FRIENDS ARE HELD,

AT Philadelphia, the Fourth First day in the Ninth month; at Wilmington, the next First day after the Spring meeting in Philadelphia, which is held the Fourth First day in the Third month; at Salem, the Third First day in the Fifth month; at Wain-oak and Black Water, in Virginia, alternately, the Third Seventh day in the Fifth month; at New York, the Fourth First day in the Fifth month; at Little Egg Harbour, the First First day in the Sixth month; at N. Rhode Island, the Second Sixth day in the Sixth month; at Baltimore, for Maryland, the Second First day in the Tenth month; at Duck-creek, the Fourth Seventh day in the Fourth month; at Shrewsbury, the Fourth First day in the Tenth month; at Martinicock, on Long Island, the Last First day in the Tenth month; at New-Garden and Symond's Creek, North Carolina, alternately, the Fourth Sixth day in the Tenth month.

Discovery of a Distillation of Potatoes.

Potatoes have been found, by repeated experiments, to yield by distillation a vinous spirit of the most exquisite quality, superior to the finest brandy; and in the quantity of about five quarts, highly rectified, from the quantity of seventy pounds weight. In the process the loss of time and expense inseparable from malt distillation are avoided; the potatoes are boiled to a thin pulp, which is diluted with hot water, and strained; the mass is then fermented with barm for about a fortnight, and then distilled in the usual way.

Remedy for the Piles.

When the Piles have continued for a long time, and produced running sores, they may often be cured by taking from thirty to sixty drops of balsam capivi or spirits of turpentine, morning and evening, in a little sugar and water.

We ought to reckon time by our good actions, and place the rest to the count of our not having lived.

Mr Kennon's receipt for Gravelts.
 An even spoonful of floppers pounded very fine & made into a Ball with flour, &
 Honey. a stiff paste with Honey; then add flour enough to make it into a Ball.
 This may be repeated at the interval of four or five days or a week.
 March - 6. 1800 - Phill tells me he has borrowed 20 Bushels of Coal of Mr. Danister.

COLLEGE OF WILLIAM & MARY

Stifle sin in the first growth. A twig may be plucked up with one hand which the whole body cannot move when it is become a tree. Think nothing in this life worth the loss of the next.

Good humour is the health of the soul; sadness its poison.
Modesty is always inseparable from true merit.

The word of God proves the truth of Religion; the corruption of man its necessity; government its advantages.
Nothing but Religion is capable of changing pains into pleasure.

Anecdote of a Sailor.

A FEW weeks ago, as I was walking along one of the back streets of this city on a rainy morning, I was very much struck with the melancholy figure of a blind man, who was endeavoring to excite charity by ballad-singing. Misery could not have found, among the numbers of distressed mortals a form more suited to her nature. Whilst I was contemplating the wretchedness of the object, and comparing it with the strain which necessity compelled him to chant, a SAILOR, who came whistling along the street with a stick under his arm, stopped and purchased a Ballad from him. "God preserve you!" cried the blind man, "for I have not tasted bread this blessed day;"—when the sailor, looking round him for a moment, sprung up four steps into a baker's shop near which he stood, and returning immediately, thrust a small loaf quietly into the poor man's hand and went off whistling as he came.

I was so affected with this singular act of generosity, that I called the honest seaman back to me. Taking the silver I had about me, which I think was no more than four shillings—"Thy nobleness of soul," said I "and the goodness of thy heart, my lad, which I have seen for bright an instance of, make me sorry that I cannot reward thee as thou dost deserve. I must however, beg your acceptance of this trifle as a small testimony how much I admire thy generous nature."—"God bless your noble honour!" said the sailor, "and thank you; but we will divide the prize-money fairly."—Stepping back therefore to the blind man; he gave him half of it;

A pleasing Anecdote of Czar Ivan.

THE czar Ivan, who reigned over Russia about the middle of the sixteenth century, frequently went out disguised, in order to discover the opinion which the people entertained of his administration. One day, in a solitary walk near Moscow, he entered a small village, and, pretending to be overcome by fatigue, implored relief from several of the inhabitants. His dress was ragged; his appearance mean; and what ought to have excited the compassion of the villagers, and ensured his reception, was productive of refusal. Full of indignation at such inhuman treatment, he was just going to leave the place, when he perceived another habitation, to which he had not applied for assistance. It was the poorest cottage in the village. The emperor hastened to this, and knocking at the door, a peasant opened it, and asked him what he wanted.—"I am almost dying with fatigue and hunger," answered the Czar: "can you give me a lodging for one night?"—"alas!" said the peasant, taking him by the hand, "you will have but poor fare here: you have come at an unlucky time: my wife's in labour, and you will be disturbed: but come in, come in; you will at least be sheltered from the cold; and such as we have you shall be welcome to." The peasant then made the Czar enter a little room full of children; in the cradle were two infants sleeping soundly; a girl, three years old, was sleeping on a rug near the cradle; while her two sisters, the one five years old, the other seven, were on their knees praying for their mother.—"Stay here," said the peasant to the emperor, "I will go and get something for your supper." He went out, and soon returned with some black bread, eggs and honey.—"You see all I can give," said the peasant; "partake of it with my children; at present I cannot eat; my heart is too full." "Your charity, your hospitality," said the Czar, "must bring down blessings upon your house; I am sure God will reward your goodness."—"Pray to God my good friend," replied the peasant, that my wife may be well, that is all

"I wish for." And is that all you wish to make you happy? Happy! judge for yourself; I have five fine children; a wife that loves me; a father and mother both in good health; and my labour is sufficient to maintain them all. Do your father and mother live with you? Certainly; they are in the next room with my wife. But your cottage here is so very small—it is large enough, it can hold us all. About an hour after the good woman was happily delivered; and her husband, in a transport of joy, brought the child to the Czar: look said he, look; this is the sixth she has brought me! what a fine hearty child he is! may God preserve him, as he has done my others! The Czar, sensibly affected at the scene, took the infant in his arms: I know, said he, from the physiognomy of this child, that he will be quite fortunate; he will arrive, I am certain, at great preferment. The peasant smiled at this prediction; and at that instant the two eldest girls came to kiss their new-born brother, and their grandmother came also to take him back. The little ones followed her; and the peasant laying himself down upon his bed of straw, invited the stranger to do the same. In a moment the peasant was in a sound sleep; but the Czar sitting up, looked around, and contemplated every thing with an eye of tenderness and emotion; the sleeping children and their sleeping father. An undisturbed silence reigned in the cottage. What a happy calm! what delightful tranquility! said the emperor: Avarice and ambition, suspicion and remorse, never enter here; how sweet is the sleep of innocence! In such reflections, and on such a bed, did the mighty emperor of all the Russias spend the night! the peasant awoke at break of day, and his guest, taking leave of him, said, I must return to Moscow, my friend: I am acquainted there with a very benevolent man, to whom I shall take care to mention your kind treatment of me. I can prevail upon him to stand godfather to your child. Promise me, therefore, that you will wait for me, that I may be present at the christening: I will be back in three hours at farthest. The peasant did not think much of this mighty promise; but in the good nature of his heart he consented, however, to the stranger's request. He immediately took his leave. The three hours were soon gone, and nobody appeared. The peasant, therefore, followed by his family, was preparing to carry his child to church; but as he was leaving his cottage, heard on a sudden the trampling of horses, and the rattling of many coaches. He looked out, and presently saw a multitude of coaches, and a train of splendid carriages. He knew the imperial guards, and instantly called his family to come and see the emperor go by. They all run in a hurry and stand before the door. The horsemen and carriages soon formed a circular line; and at last the stage-coach of the Czar stopped, opposite to the good peasant's door. The guards kept back the crowd which the hopes of seeing their sovereign had called together. The coach door was opened; the Czar alighted, and, advancing to his host, thus addressed him: I promised you a godfather; I am come to fulfil my promise; give me your child, and follow me to church. The peasant stood like a statue; now looking at the emperor with the mingled emotions of astonishment and joy; and observing his magnificent robes and the costly jewels with which they were adorned; and now turning to a crowd of nobles that surrounded him. In this profusion of pomp he could not discover the poor stranger who had laid all night with him upon the straw. The emperor, for some moments silently enjoyed his perplexity, and

When addressed him thus: Yesterday you performed the duties of humanity, to-day I am come to discharge the most delightful duty of a sovereign, that of recompensing virtue. I shall not remove you from a situation to which you do so much honour; and the innocence and tranquility of which I envy you. But I will bestow upon you such things as may be useful to you. You shall have numerous flocks, rich pastures, and a house that will enable you to exercise the duties of hospitality with pleasure. Your new born child shall become my ward; for you may remember, continued the emperor, smiling, that I prophesied he would be fortunate. The good peasant could not speak; but, with tears of grateful sensibility in his eyes, he ran instantly to fetch the child, brought him to the emperor, and laid him respectfully at his feet. This excellent sovereign was quite affected: he took the child in his arms and carried him himself to church; and, after the ceremony was over, unwilling to deprive him of his mother's milk, he took him back to the cottage, and ordered that he should be sent to him as soon as he could be weaned. The Czar faithfully observed his engagement, caused the boy to be educated in his palace, provided amply for his future settlement in life, and continued ever after to heap favours upon the virtuous peasant and his family.

Anecdote of a Prisoner.

A PRISONER in the Fleet lately sent to his creditor, to let him know that he had a proposal to make which he believed would be for their mutual benefit. Accordingly the creditor calling on him to hear it, I have been thinking, said he, that it is a very idle thing for me to lie here, and put you to the expense of seven groats a week. My being so chargeable to you has given me great uneasiness; and it is impossible to say what it may cost you in the end. Therefore, what I would propose is this: You shall let me out of prison, and, instead of seven groats, you shall allow me only eighteen-pence a week, and the other ten-pence shall go towards the discharge of the debt.

BENEVOLENCE AND HUMANITY.

YOUTH is the proper season for cultivating the benevolent and humane affections. As a great part of your happiness is to depend on the connections which you form with others, it is of high importance that you ac-

A Farmer to his Friend.

BEFORE the dawn of day
My busy work's begun,
Nor do I homeward stray
But with the setting sun.
To tend my flock of sheep,
And guard their young from harm
A little boy I keep
While I look o'er my farm.
My time with ease I spend;
And always am content
If I can treat a friend,
And pay my yearly rent.
If you such pleasure find,
Enjoy it while you can,
And always keep in mind,
That virtue makes the man.

quire beimes the temper and manners which will render such connections comfortable. Let a sense of justice be the foundation of all your social qualities. In your most early intercourse with the world, and even in your most youthful amusements, let no unfairness be found. Engrave on your mind that sacred rule, of "doing in all things to others, according as you wish they should do unto you." For this end, impress yourselves with a deep sense of the original and natural equality of men. Whatever advantages of birth or fortune you possess, never display them with an ostentatious superiority. Leave the subordinations of rank to the intercourse of more advanced years. At present, it becomes you to act among your companions, as man with man. Remember how unknown to you are the vicissitudes of the world; and how often they, on whom ignorant and contemptuous young men once looked down with scorn, have risen to be their superiors in future years. Compassion is an emotion, of which you ought never to be ashamed. Graceful in youth is the tear of sympathy; and the heart that melts at the tale of woe. Let not ease and indulgence contract your affections, and wrap you up in selfish enjoyment. Accustom yourselves to think of the distressed of human life; of the solitary cottage, the dying parent and the weeping orphan. Never sport with pain and distress, in any of your amusements, nor treat even the meanest insect with wanton cruelty.

Ledyard's Praise of Women.

THRO' many a land and clime a ranger,
With toilsome steps I've held my way,
A lonely unprotected stranger,
To all the stranger's ill's a prey.
While steering thus my course precarious,
My fortune still has been to find Men's hearts and dispositions various,
But gentle woman ever kind.
Alike to every tender feeling,
To deeds of mercy always prone:
The wounds of pain and sorrow healing,
With soft compassion's sweetest tone.
No proud delay, no dark suspicion,
Stints the free bounty of their heart;
They turn not from the sad petition,
But cheerful aid at once impart.

Form'd in benevolence of nature,
Obliging, modest, gay and mild,
Woman's the same endearing-creature
In courtly town and savage wild.
When parch'd with thirst, with hunger wasted,
Her friendly hand refreshment gave;
How sweet the coarsest food has tasted!
What cordial in the simple wave!
Her courteous looks, her words caressing,
Shed comfort on the fainting soul;
Woman's the stranger's general blessing
From sultry India to the pole.

As a plain garment best adorneth a beautiful woman, so decent behaviour is the greatest ornament of wisdom. Yet as a veil addeth to beauty; so are virtues set off by the shade which modesty casteth upon them.

BEAUTY'S VALUE:

By SHAKESPEARE.

BEAUTY is but a vain, a fleeting good,
 A shining gloss that fadeth suddenly;
 A flower that dies when almost in the bud,
 A brittle glass that breaketh presently.
 A fleeting good, a gloss, a glass, a flower,
 Lost, faded, broken, dead within an hour.
 As goods when lost we know are seldom found,
 As fading gloss no rubbing can excite,
 As flow'rs when dead are trampled on the ground,
 As broken glass no cement can unite;
 So beauty, blemish'd once, is ever lost,
 In spite of physic, painting, pains and cost.

Gather your Rose Buds.

[A Glee for three voices.]

GATHER your rose-buds while you may,
 Old time, is ever flying;
 And that same flow'r which smiles to-day,
 To-morrow will be dying,
 That age is best which is the first,
 While youth and blood are warmer;
 Expect not, then, the last the worst,
 Time still succeeds the former.
 Then be not coy, nor waste your time,
 But, while you're young, go marry:
 For, having once got past your prime,
 You may forever tarry.

THE WHISTLE.

By DOCTOR FRANKLIN:

A True Story,

WRITTEN TO HIS NEPHEW.

WHEN I was a child, about seven years old, my friends, on a holiday, filled my pocket with halfpence. I went directly to a shop where they sold toys for children; but being charmed with the sound of the whistle, that I met with by the way in the hands of another boy, I voluntarily offered him all my money for it. I then came home, and went whistling all over the house, much pleased with my whistle, but disturbing all the family. My brothers and sisters; and cousins, understanding the bargain I had made, told me I had given four times as much for it as it was worth. This put me in mind of what good things I might have bought with the rest of the money; and they laughed at me so much for my folly, that I cried with vexation; and the reflection gave me more chagrin than the whistle gave me pleasure.

This however was afterwards of use to me, the impression continuing on my mind, so that often, when I was tempted to buy some unnecessary thing, I said to myself, 'Do not give too much for the whistle;' and so I saved my money.

As I grew up, came into the world, and observed the actions of men, I thought I met with many, very many, who 'gave too much for the whistle.'

When I saw any one ambitious of court favours, sacrificing his time in attendance on levees; his repose, his liberty, his virtue, and perhaps his friends, to attain it, I have said to

Edwin and Angelina.

A TALE.

By DR. GOLDSMITH.

TURN, gentle hermit of the dale,
 And guide my lonely way,
 To where yon taper cheers the vale,
 With hospitable ray.

For here forlorn and lost I tread,
 With fainting steps and slow;
 Where wilds, immeasurable spread,
 Seem lengthening as I go.

'Forbear, my son, (the hermit cries)
 To tempt the dangerous gloom;
 For yonder faithless phantom flies
 To lure thee to thy doom.'

Here, to the houseless child of want,
 My door is open still;
 And tho' my portion is but scant,
 I give it with good will.

Then turn, to-night, and freely share
 Whatever my cell bestows;
 My rushy couch, and frugal fare,
 My blessing and repose.

No flocks that range the valley free,
 To slaughter I condemn;
 Taught by the power that pities me,
 I learn to pity them.

But from the mountain's grassy side
 A guiltless feast I bring;
 A scrip with herbs and fruits supplied,
 And water from the spring.

Then, pilgrim-turn, thy cares forego;
 All earth-born cares are wrong;
 Man wants but little here below,
 Nor wants that little long.

myself, 'this man gives too much for his whistle.'

When I saw another fond of popularity, constantly employing himself in political battles, neglecting his own affairs, and ruining them by that neglect; 'He pays, indeed,' says I, 'too much for his whistle.'

If I knew a miser, who gave up every kind of comfortable living, all the pleasure of doing good to others, all the esteem of his fellow-citizens, and the joys of benevolent friendship, for the sake of accumulating wealth; 'Poor man,' says I, 'you do indeed pay too much for your whistle.'

When I meet a man of pleasure, sacrificing every laudable improvement of the mind, or of his fortune, to mere corporal sensations; 'Mistaken man,' says I, 'you are providing pain for yourself, instead of pleasure: you give too much for your whistle.'

If I see one fond of fine clothes, fine furniture, fine equipages, all above his fortune, for which he contracts debts, and ends his career in a prison; 'alas, says I, he paid dear, very dear for his whistle.'

When I see a beautiful, sweet-tempered girl, married to an ill-natured brute of a husband; 'what a pity it is,' says I, 'that she has paid so much for a whistle!'

In short I conceived that great part of the miseries of mankind were brought upon them, by the false estimate they had made of the value of things, and by their giving too much for their whistles.

* If you wish to be happy, be not fond of honours, ambitious of power, covetous of riches, or a slave to pleasure.

Soft as the dew from heav'n descends,
His gentle accents fell;
The modest stranger lowly bends,
And follows to the cell.

Far in a wilderness obscure
The lonely mansion lay,
A refuge to the neighb'ring poor,
And strangers led astray.

No stores beneath its humble thatch
Requir'd a master's care;
The wicket opening with a latch,
Receiv'd the harmless pair.

And now, when busy crowds retire
To take their evening rest,
The hermit trimm'd his little fire,
And cheer'd his pensive guest;

And spread his vegetable store,
And gaily press'd and smill'd,
And skill'd in legendary lore,
The ling'ring hours beguill'd.

Around, in sympathetic mirth,
Its tricks the kitten tries,
The cricket chirups in the hearth;
The crackling faggot flies.

But nothing could a charm impart
To sooth the stranger's woe;
For grief was heavy at his heart,
And tears began to flow.

His rising cares the hermit spied,
With answering care oppress'd;
And whence, unhappy youth, (he cried,)
The sorrows of thy breast

From better habitations spurn'd,
Reluctant dost thou rove?
Or grieve for friendship unreturn'd,
Or unregarded love?

Alas! the joys that fortune brings
Are trifling and decay;
And those who prize the paltry things
More trifling still than they.

EMILIUS AND CLARA; OR
The Happy Pair.

EACH WAS TO EACH A DEARER
SELF.
Thompson.

EVERY day, after work, Emilius congratulated himself upon the hours of relaxation, which permitted him to rejoice in Clara, in whom he felt, at every return new attractions. Seated at her side over their frugal blaze, under the thatch of their little cottage, and balancing upon his knees one of his infants, while the other hung harmlessly at the breast of its mother, he forgot his fatigues; he forgot he had been laboring ever since the sun got up, even to his going down: or, even if he did remember his weariness, the recollection of exertions by which he fed his babes, saw them innocently eating the bread he had earned, and merited a smile from his Clara, rendered the whole more touching.—Transported by these most agreeable prospects, nothing disturb'd their repose: all was truly full. The husband, the wife and their children, were together. Their imaginations could picture nothing softer, nothing happier than themselves.

The sight of their children always augmented their felicity. They were not less touched with an embarrassment they perceived in these little creatures, while they were striving to express their tenderness, and while their pains were rewarded by a thousand cares and caresses. What a source of pleasure was it to Emilius and Clara, to interpret their wills! to satisfy their desires, and to condescend even to join in their innocent pastimes!

And what is friendship but a name,
A charm that lulls to sleep;
A shade that follows wealth or fame,
But leaves the wretch to weep?

And love is still an emptier fond,
The modern fair one's jest,
On earth unseen, or only found
To warm the turtle's nest,

For shame fond youth, thy sorrows
hush,
And spurn the sex, he said:
But, while he spoke, a rising blush
His love-lorn guest betray'd.

Surpris'd he sees new beauties rise,
Swift mantling to the view,
Like colours o'er the morning skies,
As bright as transient too.

The bashful look, the rising breast,
Alternate spread alarms,
The lovely stranger stands confess'd
A maid in all her charms.

And, ah! forgive a stranger rude,
A wretch forlorn (she cried);
Whose feet unhallow'd thus intrude
Where heav'n and you reside,

But let a maid thy pity share,
Whom love has taught to stray;
Who seeks for rest, but finds despair,
Companion of her way.

My father liv'd beside the Tyne,
A wealthy lord was he;
And all his wealth was mark'd as mine;
He had but only me.

To win me from his tender arms,
Unnumber'd suitors came:
Who prais'd me for imputed charms,
And felt or feign'd a flame.

Each hour a mercenary crowd
With richest proffers frow;
Among the rest young Edwin bow'd,
But never talk'd of love.

Ah! how happy was Emilius, when he felt the tender hands of his children frugging to embrace his own, hardened as they were by work and embrown'd by the wind and weather! the son, one day, was curious to know the reason of this; and why, papa (said he,) is not your hand as soft as mine? Why is it so hard, papa?—In making bread for you and your mother, replied Emilius, with paternal and gentle dignity. It is, you see, almost worn out in the service.—Oh, oh! (cried the child,) is that the case? Well, then, by the time it has made us a little more bread, mine will grow stout enough to make bread too; and then we shall see, papa, whose will be hardest. The child copied the virtuous pride of the father; Emilius blushed with joy, and Clara shed a tear.

THE FOLLY OF

Inconsistent expectations.

THIS world may be considered as a great mart of commerce, where fortune exposes to our view various commodities; riches, ease, tranquility, fame, integrity, knowledge, &c.

Every thing is marked at a settled price. Our time, our labour, our ingenuity, is so much ready money which we are to lay out to the best advantage. Examine, compare, choose, reject, but stand to your own judgment; and do not, like children, when you have purchased one thing, repine that you do not possess another which you did not purchase.

Such is the force of well-regulated industry, that a steady, and vigorous exertion of our faculties directed to one end, will generally ensure

In humble simplest habit clad,
No wealth nor power had he;
Widow and worth were all he had;
But these were all to me.

The blossom opening to the day,
The dews of heav'n refin'd,
Could nought of purity display
To emulate his mind.

The dew, the blossom on the tree,
With charms inconstant shine;
Their charms were his, but woe to me,
Their constancy was mine.

For still I tried each sickle art,
Importunate and vain;
And while his passion touch'd my heart,
I triumph'd in his pain.

Till quite dejected with my scorn,
He left me to my pride;
And sought a solitude forlorn,
In secret, where he died.

But mine the sorrow, mine the fault,
And well my life shall pay;
I'll seek the solitude he sought,
And stretch me where he lay—

And there forlorn despairing hid,
I'll lay me down and die:
'Twas so for me that Edwin did,
And so for him will I.

'Forbid it, Heav'n!' the hermit
cried,
And clasp'd her to his breast;
The wond'ring fair one turn'd to chide;
'Twas Edwin's self that prest.

'Turn, Algelina, ever dear,
My charmer, turn to see,
Thy own, thy long lost Edwin here,
Restor'd to love and thee.

success. Would you, for instance e be rich? Do you think that singl point worth the sacrificing ever thing else to? You may then be rich. Thousands have become so from the lowest beginnings, by toil, patient diligence, and attention to the minutest articles of expense and profit. But you must give up the pleasures of leisure, of a vacant mind and of a free unsuspecting temper.

But I cannot submit to drudgery like this, I feel a spirit above it. It is well; be above it then; only do not repine that you are not rich.

Is knowledge the pearl of great price? That too, may be purchased by steady application, and long solitary hours of study and reflection.
Bestow these, and you shall be learned.

You are a modest man, you love quiet and independence, and have a delicacy and reserve in your temper which renders it impossible for you to elbow your way in the world, and be the herald of your own merits. Be content, then, with a modest retirement, with the esteem of a few intimate friends, with the praises of a blameless heart, and a delicate ingenuous spirit and disposition;
but resign the splendid distinctions of the world to those who can better scramble for them.

Resignation to Providence

RECOMMENDED,

As the Duty of all.

THE darts of adverse fortune are always levelled at our heads,
Some reach us; some graze against us,
and fly to wound our neighbours.
Let us therefore impose an equal

Thus let me hold thee to my heart,
And every care resign:
And shall we never, never part,
My life—my all that's mine.

No, never from this hour to part,
We'll live and love so true;
The sigh that rends thy constant heart
Shall break thy Edwin's too.

SONG.

The Waves were hush'd the Sky serene.

THE waves were hush'd, the sky
serene,
When sailing on the main,
Ben from the maintop view'd the scene,
And sung in tender strain:
Dear Sall, this picture round my neck
Which bears thy likeness true,
Shall e'er my faithful bosom deck,
Which throbs for only you.

Still was the night when last on shore,
We took a parting kiss,
And warm the vows each other swore,
To meet again in bliss:
A token then my Sally gave,
'Tis this which I now view,
And in my heart shall ever live,
Which throbs for only you.

Sweet Sall, wherever you may rove,
Ah! kindly think on me;
And this dear 'semblance of my love
Shall prove I doat on thee:
Wherever bound, by night or day,
Still as the needle true,
My constant heart shall never stray,
Which throbs for only you.

Put a bridle on thy tongue, set a guard before thy lips, lest the words of thy own mouth destroy thy peace.
Of much speaking cometh repentance; but in silence is safety.

tempter on our minds, and pay without murmuring the tribute which we owe to humanity: the winter brings cold, and we must freeze; the summer returns with heat, and we must melt; the inclemency of the air disorders our health, and we must be sick. Here we are exposed to wild beasts, and there to men more savage than the beasts. And if we escape the inconveniencies and dangers of the air and earth, there are perils by water and perils by fire.

This established course of things it is not in our power to change; but it is in our power to assume such a greatness of mind as becomes wise and virtuous men; as may enable us to encounter the accidents of life with fortitude, and to conform ourselves to the order of Nature, who governs her great kingdom, the world, by continual mutations.

Let us submit ourselves to this order; let us be persuaded that whatever does happen, ought to happen,
and never be so foolish as to expostulate with Nature. The best resolution we can take is, to suffer with patience what we cannot alter; and to pursue without repining, the road which providence, who directs every thing, has marked out to us. For it is not enough to follow; and he is but a bad soldier who fights, and marches on with reluctance. We must receive our orders with spirit and cheerfulness, and not endeavour to sink out of the post which is assigned us in this beautiful disposition of things, whereof even our sufferings make a necessary part.

Let us address ourselves to God, who governs all, as Cleanthes did in those admirable verses:

*Parent of nature! master of the world!
Where'er thy providence directs, behold*

*My steps with cheerful resignation turn.
Fate leads the willing, drags the backward on;*

Why should I grieve, when grieving I must bear?

Or take with guilt, what guiltless I might bear.

Thus let us speak, and thus let us

act. Resignation to the will of God is true magnanimity. But the sure mark of a pusillanimous and base spirit, is to struggle against or censure, the dispositions of Providence; and, instead of amending our own conduct, to set up for correcting that of our Maker.

THE WISDOM OF PROVIDENCE

IN THE

VARIETY OF THE SEASONS.

WRITTEN IN THE SPRING.

IN contemplating on the various scenes of life, the vicissitudes of the seasons, the perfect regularity, order, and harmony of nature, we cannot but be filled with wonder and admiration at the consummate wisdom and beneficence of the all-wise and gracious Creator. His consummate wisdom and goodness have made the various seasons of the year, perfectly consonant to the refined feelings of man, and peculiarly adapted them to the universal preservation of nature. Dreary winter is past; its severe cold, is mitigated; the returning zephyrs dissolve the fleecy snow, unlock the frozen streams, which overthrow the extensive meadows, and enrich the teeming earth.

At length, the rapid streams begin to glide gently within their banks; the spacious meadows soon receive their usual verdure, and the whole face of nature assumes a cheerful aspect. By the refreshing showers and vivifying power of the genial sun, we behold the rapid and amazing progress of vegetation.

What is more pleasing to the eye, or grateful to the imagination, than the agreeable and delightful return of spring? The beauties of nature at once expel the gloomy cares of dreary winter. The benign influences of the sun give a brisk circulation to the animal fluids, and happily tend to promote the propagation of animated nature. In the spring we behold the buds putting forth their blossoms; in summer we meet with the charming prospect of enamelled fields, which promise a rich profusion of autumnal fruits.

These delightful scenes afford to man a pleasing anticipation of enjoying the bounties of providence; cheer him in adversity, and support him under the various misfortunes incident to human life. In the spring, when we behold plants and flowers peeping out of the ground, reviving and flourishing at the approach of the vernal sun—when we behold the seed, which the laborious husbandman casts into the earth, starting into life, and rising into beauty, from the remainder of that which perished in the preceding autumn, we are filled with the most pleasing sensations of the universal reviviscence of Nature.

The warm and invigorating sun produces myriads of insects, which have been lifeless through the hoary frosts of winter. The herds now go forth to graze on the verdant plains. The innumerable flocks quit their folds, with their young to feed on the distant mountains. The matin lark, with all the charming choir, whom kind nature wakes to cheerfulness and love, tune their melodious voices to hail the welcome returning spring. The busy bee flies over the fields, and extracts the liquid sweets from every flower. How pleasing! how wonderful! are the scenes presented to our view.

The spring of the year seems strikingly emblematical of that grand and universal resurrection, which shall commence at the final consummation of all things; may its beauties therefore raise our affections to those superior regions of bliss, into which the truly virtuous shall then enter, and forever enjoy an unfading and eternal spring.

A rich man beginning to fall, is held up of his friends; but a poor man being down, is thrust away by his friends. When a rich man is fallen, he hath many helpers; he speaketh things not to be spoken, and yet men justify him: the poor man slipt, and, they rebuked him; he spoke wisely, and could have no place.—When a rich man speaketh, every one holdeth his tongue, and look, what he saith they extol it to the clouds; but if a poor man speaks, they say, what fellow is this?

'Tis wit to pick a lock and steal a horse; but 'tis wisdom to let him alone.

He is a fool that cannot be angry; but he is a wise man that will not.

A N E C D O T E S.

A LADY observing in company how glorious and useful a body the sun was—The sun to be sure, says an Irish gentleman present, is a fine body; but in my opinion, the moon is much more useful; for the moon affords us light in the night-time, when we really want it; whereas we have the sun with us only in the day-time, when we have no occasion for it.

THE late lady Tyrawly, who was very short sighted, being on a christening visit, her ladyship waited below-stairs a considerable time with much impatience to see the child, which was to be bro't down to her. The footman, in the mean time, entered the apartment with a coal-scuttle; who approaching the fire, near which her ladyship was seated, she immediately rose, and being extremely desirous of complimenting the family with a thousand commonplace observations on the bantering, run on in the following manner, with great volubility—La! it is the sweetest creature I ever beheld! my Lord Duke's nose! my Lady Duchess's mouth!—Dear nurse, this is an universal joy; for sure no mother ever had so sweet a creature! The company stared; and her ladyship, who did not discover her error, called for her chair, congratulated herself on having paid her visit, and returned home full of the praises of his grace's delightful baby.

A young gentleman desirous of being admitted into the law, was asked a question by one of the gentlemen of the long robe—Suppose, says he, your client had a debt owing him of nine pounds nineteen shillings and the plaintiff was going to leave his country, how would you act. Why, says the young student, I would lend him another shilling. This answer so well pleased the judges, that they afterwards consulted, and admitted him.

A drunken fellow having sold all his goods to maintain himself at his pot, except his feather bed, at last made away with that too; when being reproved for it by some of his friends; why, said he, I am very well, thank God, and why should I keep my bed

A preacher lecturing on Easter-day, and discussing the reason why Jesus Christ, after his resurrection, appeared first to the two Mary's, said coldly, that the reason of this was, that Christ wished to make public the mystery of his resurrection, knew that, by intrusting so important a matter to women, it would soon be spread all abroad.
