Tribe Football

National Semifinalists • 2004 & 2009

With 13 starters returning from last season's team that advanced to the NCAA Semifinals, W&M enters 2010 ranked as high as No. 1 in the preseason polls.

After posting a school-record tying 11-win season in 2009, including an appearance in the National Semifinals, William and Mary enters fall drills as a consensus top-five team in the preseason polls. Some would view this sort of lofty billing as added pressure, but high expectations are the norm at the College. Under the guidance of head coach Jimmy Laycock, the Tribe has set the gold standard for sustained excellence. He has led his alma mater to 200 wins and eight postseason appearances, all while never compromising the high academic standards of the College.

While none in the Tribe program are likely to get caught up in preseason predictions, there is every reason for optimism in Williamsburg, as W&M returns 13 starters from last season's squad (six on offense and defense, and one specialist). Perhaps even more encouraging is the fact that Laycock's entire full-time staff remains intact for its third-consecutive season and brings more than 100 years of combined coaching experience to the field.

A person only needed to be a casual observer of the program to know the College's calling card was its defense last season. In fact, the 2009 unit was among the nation's elite in nearly every statistical category and featured a pair of senior All-Americans, and eventual NFL draft picks, in defensive tackle Sean Lissemore and defensive end Adrian Tracy. While the loss of that duo will certainly be felt, the overall talent level of fourth-year Tribe defensive coordinator Bob Shoop's crew remains high. The return of a trio of all-conference caliber linebackers in Jake Trantin (middle), Wes Steinman and Evan Francks will form the foundation of the corps, with Trantin likely to challenge for national honors as a junior. The team's defensive backfield also returns both starting corners in senior team-captain Ben Cottingham and returning CAA Defensive Rookie of the Year B.W. Webb. Senior defensive tackles Michael Stover and Harold Robertson give the Tribe a pair of experienced veterans to anchor the front four.

W&M's offense will feature little mystery this fall, as the unit returns one of the league's most versatile and talented performers in two-time All-CAA tailback Jonathan Grimes. Though just a junior, Grimes is already one of the most-decorated players in both school and league history, collecting a total of five conference honors. Grimes, who is averaging 5.0 yards per carry during his career, enters the year on the Payton Award Watch List and is a returning first-team All-CAA selection. The battle to replace the loss of steady senior all-conference signal caller R.J.

Archer was among the most heated in the team's spring drills, and it figures to get even more intense during the fall camp. Junior transfer Michael Paulus (North Carolina) and redshirt freshman Brent Caprio will be among a group of at least five different players looking to earn the starting nod. On the offensive front, the Tribe will count on senior team-captain Keith Hill, Jr., to lead what could shape up to be a very young, but talented, group from his left tackle position. At receiver, the Tribe will rely on the sure-handed senior duo of Chase Hill and Cam Dohse to carry the load early in the season while some of the team's younger talent has a chance to adjust to increased roles.

The graduation of two-time all-conference place-kicker Brian Pate will be a difficult loss to replace, as he was a three-year starter. Coming into the season, the College will rely on two-time returning all-conference punter David Miller to assume both duties, but he figures to be pressed by promising younger talent for placement kicks. Otherwise, the Tribe's special teams should remain a strength for the College, as Webb and Grimes each return as all-conference performers at punt and kick return positions, respectively.

The Tribe's 2010 schedule is challenging, as usual, as no less than six of the 11 opponents will start the season nationally ranked. No game will be more crucial than the team's opener, which sees the program traveling to Amherst, Mass., to take on UMass in what will also be the squad's CAA opener. The College will then play a pair of non-conference opponents during the following two weeks, as it hosts Virginia Military Institute on Sept. 11 and travels to Norfolk for a meeting with Old Dominion on Sept. 18. The matchup against the Keydets will not only serve as the Tribe's home opener, but also renew a long-standing rivalry that took a one-year hiatus last season after meeting 65 consecutive years. W&M's game at ODU will mark the first meeting between the two programs.

Following the two non-conference tilts, the Tribe will resume league play with a road contest at Maine on Sept. 25. W&M will then square off against a pair of league opponents at Zable Stadium, as the defending national champions Villanova Wildcats make a visit to Williamsburg on Oct. 2 for the College's Family Weekend before Rhode Island comes to town on Oct. 9.

After a bye week, the Green and Gold will play its third consecutive home game when longtime rival Delaware visits for Homecoming on Oct. 23.

The Tribe takes a break from conference action the following Saturday, as it looks to knock off an ACC opponent for the second consecutive year when it plays at North Carolina on Oct. 30. W&M nearly defeated the Tar Heels in the teams' last matchup in 2004, as W&M led by 10 points in the second half before UNC rallied back with three fourth-quarter touchdowns.

The College will remain on the road for two more weeks when it returns to league action, as it will play at New Hampshire on Nov. 6 and at James Madison on Nov. 13.

The Tribe closes out the regular season with a home game versus Richmond on Nov. 20. The contest will mark the 120th meeting between the two programs.

Quarterbacks

Finding a replacement for graduated all-conference quarterback R.J. Archer was the main focus on the offensive side of the ball this spring. Junior transfer Michael Paulus and redshirt freshman Brent Caprio were in a relentless competition throughout the practice season. While both showed the potential to be a solid choice under center, neither earned the starting nod coming into the fall. Likely, some of the cause for this is that an additional pair of potential starters, senior Mike Callahan and junior D.J. Mangas, will be introduced into the mix during pre-season drills. Each was forced to miss the spring due to injury. Taken as a whole, the quarterback competition first-year position coach David Corely, Jr., will oversee figures to be fierce from day one of camp.

From a physical skills standpoint, Paulus brings the complete package. He stands a solid 6-4, 220-pounds and is closing in on multiple school position records in the weight room. While he has only been working with the Tribe's system since his January arrival on campus, Paulus will be one of only two Tribe players on the current roster to have a collegiate pass attempt to his credit, as he saw limited action while playing at North Carolina. One of the nation's most highly regarded quarterback prospects out of Syracuse's Christian Brothers Academy, he has an NFL-caliber arm and the mobility to extend plays.

Caprio came into the College's fold last fall as one of the top prep players out of the state of New Jersey (as he was selected First-Team All-State by the Star Ledger). Though he was able to save his redshirt season last fall, Caprio spent the entire season on the travel squad and picked up valuable practice experience. An extremely gifted student, both on and off the field, Caprio has a solid grip on the team's schemes. He blends good athleticism with an accurate arm and will challenge for the opportunity to become just the second player in the Laycock era to start the first game of his freshman season (of eligibility) at quarterback. The last was Stan Yagiello in 1982.

Both Callahan and Mangas missed the majority of action this past spring recovering from knee injuries, but each expects to make a healthy return in time for fall drills. As a fifth-year senior, Callahan is the most experienced of all the Tribe's quarterbacks. A tireless worker, he also is one of the team's most respected leaders who can bring a great deal of intangibles to the huddle. Mangas, when healthy, is the team's most athletic quarterback candidate, as he spent his redshirt freshman season as a wide receiver. A dual threat, he was the No. 2 quarterback for the College last year before an injury ended his season.

Once Mangas was injured (prior the third game), junior Terrance Schmand took over the top reserve position for the remainder of the year. He gained valuable experience and saw some limited game action for the College. Schmand is a strong-armed quarterback with good size (6-3, 215) and potentially could also find his way into the mix at the position with a strong fall showing. Redshirt freshmen Connor Farrell and Michael Graham will add depth to the position and look to gain more experience this fall.

Running Backs

First-year Tribe tailback mentor Brendan Nugent can look at the 2010 season as a good news/bad news scenario. The good news is he has some of the top talent in the FCS football world returning to his backfield, the bad news is that there is only so many opportunities to spread the ball amongst his top three ball carriers – junior Jonathan Grimes and seniors Courtland Marriner and Terrence Riggins.

That being said, it is no secret that Nugent and the offensive staff will find multiple ways to get the ball to returning first-team all-conference tailback Jonathan Grimes. Last season Grimes set the school record for single-season rushing attempts (277) and amassed the third-highest single-season rushing total (1,294), while scoring 10 total touchdowns (nine rushing, one receiving). His rushing total led the league, while he was second in total all-purpose yardage with an average of 145.9 yds/game (his 2,043 all-purpose yards set a single-season school record). Grimes was at his best in the post-season, as he ran for 331 yards during the Tribe's three-playoff competitions, including a 133-yard, three-touchdown performance over then top-ranked Southern Illinois in the quarterfinals. By earning all-conference recognition as both a running back and kick returner in 2009, Grimes now has four career All-CAA honors and is tied with all-time W&M great wide receiver Rich Musinski (2000-03) for the most in school history. Each earned the league's Rookie of the Year honors, as well. His career-rushing total of 2,223 yards ranks 10th in school history. Equally adept as a receiver, Grimes has 85 career receptions to his credit, including a career-high 46 for 289 yards last season.

Beyond Grimes, Nugent also has another two explosive tailback options in the speedy Marriner and powerful Riggins. Marriner's pure speed makes him a legitimate big-play threat from anywhere on the field, either as a runner or receiver. Not just a sprinter, Marriner has freakish strength in his compact frame and the willingness to seek contact, both with the ball and in pass protection. Last year, he was a great compliment to Grimes, as he carried the ball 93 times for 458 yards (4.9 a tote) and scored seven rushing touchdowns. At 6-1, 224-pounds, Riggins is the biggest of the Tribe's backfield options and his blend of speed and power gives him the versatility to see playing time in a variety of situations, as he can contribute in short yardage as either a tailback or fullback and also has the hands to make plays in the passing game. Last season he set his career high in carries (57), rushing for a total of 290 yards and two scores.

Look for the staff to be creative in its scheming to take full advantage of the versatility of the trio, with the likely result that two, or more, might be on the field at the same time.

The wealth of talent at tailback does not stop with the trio, however, as the Tribe also values the potential of sophomore Meltoya Jones, who has shown flashes of brilliance in his limited playing opportunities. A physical runner who has good hands out of the backfield, Jones will provide able depth if needed.

While Riggins enters the fall listed as the starting fullback, senior Jimmy Hobson also figures to see significant action in the role. Despite missing a large portion of 2009 with an injury, he still is the most experienced player on the roster in the role and brings great toughness and technique to the position. He is also versatile enough to play tailback in a pinch. When Hobson went down, sophomore John Ribble rose to the occasion and provided the team with quality snaps. His toughness and experience figure to earn him spot action this fall as a quality reserve. Also adding quality depth will be another sophomore, T.J. Ptachick, who converted to the position from linebacker last fall. As the most athletic among the options at fullback, Ptachick figures to challenge for immediate playing time in the fall.

Receivers/Tight Ends

One of the stated challenges coming into the spring drills for long-time Tribe offensive coordinator Zbig Kepa and his staff was to maximize the consistency and production from a talented corps of receivers.

A pair of seniors in Chase Hill and Cameron Dohse headline group, as each brings as wealth of experience to the field.

While Hill had an up and down '09 season (only 15 receiving yards on two catches through the first three games), he has the talent to be a playmaker for the Tribe, as witnessed by his six-catch, 148-yard effort in the win over Delaware that included a then-school record 91-yard catch and run. Standing at 6-2, 200 pounds, he has excellent size and strength to line up in the slot, while he also possesses the speed to play outside. He brings 73 career receptions to the field (907 total receiving yards) and 11 total TDs.

Dohse is team's leading returning receiver with 1,141 yards on just 63 grabs (an average of 18.1 yds/catch). He is the epitome of a player maximizing his abilities, as he has deceptive speed along with exceptional hands and toughness. After being one the team's more pleasant surprises during his sophomore season in 2007 (31 grabs for 557 yards and five TDs), multiple nagging injuries limited him to just spot action as a junior. However, he reemerged with a vengeance late in the 2009 season, as he went over the 100-yard receiving mark twice in the last four games (130 at Richmond and 148 at Villanova) including a school- and NCAA-Playoff record 98-yard catch and run in the National Semifinals. Dohse will enter the fall poised to have a breakout senior year as the squad's No. 1 receiver.

All-CAA Candidate
Chase Hill, WR

Senior Terreon Conyers and sophomore C.J. Thomas fill out the two deep, but each will be pushed for playing time by a group of younger players, led by sophomore Ryan Moody. Conyers has seen spot action in the program for the last three seasons and blends this experience with good hands. Thomas seems to have the most physical promise, as he is coming off a tremendous spring, where he used his size and speed to showcase his playmaking ability. Moody was among the team's top-three receivers at the start of last season before an injury ended his year in the second game. Prior to his injury, he had a standout performance in the team's season-opening upset at Virginia, as he turned in three catches for 70 yards. He made a healthy return this spring, though, and will seriously challenge for reps in the fall.

Beyond this group, senior Marshall Dill, junior Ryan Woolfolk and a host of others all have the potential to challenge for reserve rolls in the fall.

At tight end, junior Alex Gottlieb will enter his first season as the starter after backing up the graduated all-conference standout Rob Varno the last two years. Gottlieb is the complete package in terms of size, strength and physicality for the position and should compete for postseason honors. At 6-3, 240-pounds, Gottlieb is ready for an increased role in both the run and pass games for the College. He has eight career receptions to his credit for 131 yards and a TD.

Depth at the tight end will come in the form of sophomore Nolan Kearney and senior Gareth Hissong. Kearney converted to the position from quarterback at the start of last fall camp and has made tremendous strides. With excellent size (6-4, 246-pounds) and athleticism, he will look to make an impact this season as he continues to improve on his work at the line of scrimmage. Hissong is another player with great character who maximizes both his abilities and any opportunity to see playing time. He is versatile enough to also see action at h-back, should the need arise.

All-CAA Candidate
Alex Gottlieb, TE

Offensive Line

Veteran Tribe offensive line coach Bob Solderitch returns three starters to his offensive front for the 2010 season. He will count on the senior duo of tackle Keith Hill, Jr., and guard Derek Toon for leadership and to be the foundation of the crucial unit.

Hill, one of five team captains, comes into his final year with 24 games of starting experience and the size (6-4, 312 pounds) and strength to be an all-conference caliber performer. Despite his extensive game experience, he will be seeing his first action at left tackle this fall after spending the previous two years at the right side position. He made the switch during spring drills and his successful transition to the role will be one of the keys to the Tribe's offensive successes this year. Sophomore Mike Salazar comes into the fall at top of the depth chart in Hill's old position and will look to make an immediate impact. The projected first-year starter showed well in the spring and has good size (6-5, 296) and footwork. If he is able to continue his development and meet his potential, he will have a major impact on the team's attack.

At the guard position, Toon is currently paired with redshirt freshman James Johnson III as the starting duo. At 6-3, 288 pounds, Toon is the most physical and aggressive of the Tribe's front five. He converted from defensive tackle in the fall of 2008 and saw starting action later the same season. With a complete year of experience under his belt, he should be poised for a standout senior campaign.

Johnson came to the College as a walk-on last fall, but earned his way onto the travel squad by season's end. This spring he earned the starting role but will be pushed throughout camp by the incumbent, junior Chris Sutton (6-2, 295). Johnson (6-1, 299) quickly proved to be the best athlete among the Tribe's offensive front and has the strength and toughness to be an immediate asset. Sutton started 13 of the team's 14 games a year ago at left guard and will challenge for playing time.

Coming into the fall, junior James Pagliaro (6-3, 284) is listed as the squad's starter at center. He brings a very physical presence to the middle of the Tribe's front five, and, like Toon, is a converted defensive lineman. He will be pushed for playing time throughout the fall by both Sutton and redshirt freshman Matt Crisafi (6-4, 302). Crisafi has good size and strength and could make contributions at any of the middle three positions up front.

Junior Dan Donker (6-3, 311) and Robert Gumbita (6-5, 300) add depth at the left and right tackle positions, respectively. Donker has the athletic potential to be an impact player with continued development in the Tribe's system, while Gumbita saw starting action one game last fall, subbing at guard for an injured Sutton.

Defensive Line

When Sean Lissemore, Adrian Tracy and C.J. Herbert collected their respective diplomas this past May, the Tribe's defense lost not only the core of what was arguably one of the greatest defensive lines in school history, but also more than 120 games of combined starting experience. The trio combined for more than 44 TFLs, including 23 sacks, and powered what was the nation's stingiest rush defense (which allowed just 61.5 yds/game last season). While a team does not reload and replace this sort of production and leadership over the course of an offseason, veteran Tribe defensive line coach Trevor Andrews is optimistic the talent remains to field another extremely effective unit.

In drastic contrast to last season, the 2010 Tribe front four will feature just one senior listed as a starter on the preseason two-deep – defensive tackle Michael Stover. Stover is the embodiment of the type of player that has served as the backbone of the Tribe program under Laycock, as he came in as a walk-on and tirelessly worked his way into an all-conference caliber performer. He collected 12 TFLs and 2.5 sacks in 13 games last season, playing through several injuries along the way. Perhaps his most impressive accomplishment was being named as the team's Defensive MVP in the team's final two postseason games (at Southern Illinois and at

All-America Candidate
Keith Hill, Jr., LT

Villanova). A leader by example in all phases of game, Stover will be counted on to keep the unit focused.

Working alongside Stover on the inside will be standout junior run-stopper, Harold Robertson. Robertson and Stover shared starting duties at tackle for much of last season, while Robertson made every start in 2008 as a redshirt freshman. Always a strong run-stopper, he has made significant strides in gaining more lean muscle mass in the off-season and will be a more active force along the line of scrimmage this fall and could play his way into an all-conference caliber performer.

The Tribe will feature a pair of active defensive ends in the junior duo of Ravi Pradhanang and Marcus Hyde. The defensive staff believes Pradhanang has the potential to be an elite talent, as he possesses all of the necessary physical tools and intangible skills to be a dominant player. At 6-3, 250-pounds, his blend of speed, strength and technique has made him a productive player when healthy. In just four starts last season, he collected 20 tackles, 4.0 TFLs, including 3.5 sacks. However, injuries have taken its toll in each of the last two seasons, as a concussion severely limited his playing time last fall. He has a clean bill of health coming into 2010 and should be full go at the start of camp. Hyde (6-3, 242 pounds) will enter his first year as a starter, after being a key reserve in each of the last two seasons. A converted linebacker, Hyde has been very productive in limited playing time, collecting a remarkable 7.0 TFLs, including 4.5 sacks last season. He plays with a high motor and his speed and quickness make him a challenging match-up for most offensive tackles. He could also be poised for a breakout season, as he is exposed to significantly more playing time this fall.

While on the subject of breakout seasons, versatile senior Brian Jean-Pierre is yet another player with all the tools to be an impact player. Standing at 6-4, 275 pounds Jean-Pierre is extremely athletic for his size. Whether he is slotted at tackle or end, he will bring a unique set of skills to his position. He made tremendous strides in all phases of the game the past two years and his continued development will provide the College with another premier force along the defensive front.

Fellow senior Kyle O'Brien (6-0, 247) is another key reserve who can spot at either tackle or end. A special team's staple, O'Brien plays with a great motor and brings tremendous toughness to the field. He is a proven contributor who has seen spot action in each of the last two seasons. Sophomore Nick Zarembo (6-2, 224) and redshirt freshman Bryan Stinnie (6-4, 230) are a pair of promising young players who will also challenge for reserve rolls this fall at tackle and end, respectively.

PREVIEW | 2010 SEASON OUTLOOK

Linebackers

W&M linebackers coach Scott Boone finds himself in the enviable position of overseeing a unit that returns talent, experience and depth this fall. In terms of playing time, five of the top six linebackers from the 2009 squad are back in the fold, including all-conference junior middle linebacker Jake Trantin and both of his senior running mates, outside backers Wes Steinman and Evan Francks.

While the Tribe's front four collected most of the national attention a year ago, the squad's starting trio of linebackers was amazingly productive, as they collectively accounted for the following stat line: 223 total tackles, 29 TFLs, 8.5 sacks, 10 PBUs, four interceptions and four fumble recoveries.

Leading the way for the unit was Trantin, who had a team-high 90 stops, three interceptions and 10 TFLs last fall. Moving forward, the staff will rely heavily on Trantin's on-field leadership abilities to get the defense organized and aligned. Already one of the league's top playmakers, Trantin is more than capable of challenging for the highest national honors. Entering his third season as a starter, Trantin has demonstrated the ability to make plays from sideline-to-sideline, or to attack the backfield. His toughness and athleticism make him equally dangerous for opponent pass or running games.

All-America Candidate
Jake Trantin, LB

Francks, who shares part of the team captaincy with Trantin, is another proven player who has appeared in all 36 games (with 22 starts) over the last three years. Despite being slightly undersized (5-11, 212), he uses all of his physical skills to his best advantage and understands and executes his role. While finishing just one tackle shy of the team lead with 89, there is no argument he was one of the team's most consistent playmakers (7.5 TFLs, six PBUs, three fumble recoveries). Francks was typically at his best during the team's biggest games, as he had double-digit tackle totals in the homecoming win over James Madison and in the NCAA quarterfinal victory at Southern Illinois. He also played a pivotal role in the season-opening triumph at Virginia with five stops, two TFLs, a pair of fumble recoveries and a PBU.

Steinman had a breakout year in 2009, as he earned the starting OLB job during fall camp and never looked back. An athletic 6-2, 225-pound frame makes him the ideal fit for his role in the defensive scheme, as he has the size and strength to attack the line of scrimmage and the speed and quickness to play in space. Last season he proved to be an extremely capable playmaker, as he contributed 11.5 TFLs, 3.5 sacks and an interception. Like Trantin and Francks, he continued the momentum of a solid season by turning in an impressive showing in spring drills and appears poised for a stellar senior campaign.

The Tribe can feel good about its depth at the position, as explosive sophomores Dante Cook and Jabrel Mines back up at the outside positions. Cook was a valuable special teams performer a season ago who also saw situational defensive reps. He turned in one of the most impressive springs on the defensive side of the ball and will see increased playing time this fall. Mines has a solid grasp of the Tribe scheme and will be a key reserve and special teams player. After a solid spring showing, redshirt freshman Ben Casper enters the fall backing up Trantin in the middle. He impressed the staff with his feel for the game and should challenge for reps while contributing on special teams.

Defensive Backs

While defensive coordinator Bob Shoop will have the luxury of entering the fall with two proven performers as his starting corners, graduation was unkind to the middle of his backfield, as a pair of veteran starters in free safety Robert Livingston and all-conference strong safety David Caldwell finished stellar careers last fall.

Sophomore B.W. Webb headlines the returnees, as he made quite a splash in his debut season, earning the CAA's Defensive Rookie of the Year honors. He led the league, and was tied for second nationally, with eight interceptions. Webb, who was also earned second-team all-conference honors, literally burst on the scene with a historic performance in the Tribe's season-opening win at Virginia, as he recorded three interceptions — including a fourth-quarter 50-yard return for the game-sealing points. This effort earned him the FWAA Bronko Nagurski National Defensive Player of the Week honor, making him the first FCS player selected for the recognition in the history of the award. Webb had an equally important touchdown return in the first-round playoff win against Weber State, as his pick-six came with just 0:12 remaining in the first half and put the Tribe up 17-0. A sure tackler, Webb also contributed 23 total tackles and three TFLs. His impact was not just limited to defense, as he also handled all the Tribe's punt return chores and was second in the league with an average of 8.2 yards per attempt, earning him third-team all-league recognition. While his resume is already impressive, it is likely Webb could come out with an even better sophomore year, as he has all the tools to challenge for national honors and be the premier cover corner in the FCS world.

While Webb understandably garnered most of the recognition, senior team-captain Ben Cottingham quietly and consistently holds down the boundary corner position. A three-year veteran, Cottingham sets the gold standard for preparation and approach to the game. No better example of his work ethic and character is needed than the fact that he worked his way from being a school-start walk-on to his current leadership position. A sure tackler with outstanding technique, he set his personal single-season best with six PBUs last season.

All-CAA Candidate
Ben Cottingham, CB

Looking toward the safety positions, the staff was excited with the spring showing by junior Terrell Wells at free safety. He has the most game experience of any of the candidates for the role, as he has seen action in 26 career games at cornerback. He proved to have great instincts for the position and is a physical presence. Wells also has the speed and ball skills to play in space and will excel playing over slot receivers.

Sophomore Brian Thompson enters the fall as the No. 1 strong safety, as he proved to be the most consistent of all the safeties during the spring session. Primarily a special teams performer a year ago, Thompson is a hard-hitting compliment to Wells. A dedicated player to the off-season training program, he has the strength to hold his own at the point of attack and be a force in the run defense.

Also positioned to see significant action in the defensive backfield is talented sophomore Ethan Lee. The Buckingham, Va., native emerged from a walk-on to a valued special team's contributor a season ago and has played his way into an expanded role this fall, as he can fill in at either safety or corner. He will see game action as both a defensive back and special team's performer.

Also pushing for reps in the secondary will be junior Jake O'Connor and a trio of redshirt freshmen in Jerome Couplin III, Takeo Hester and Ryan Smith. O'Connor has experience at both safety positions and is versatile enough to provide quality depth at either position. One of the team's most coachable athletes, O'Connor possesses a premier work ethic and will contribute on special teams while challenging for defensive reps. Couplin will mainly focus on the strong safety position, after seeing spring action at free. A physical player, he will focus on continuing to learn the new position this fall while contributing on special teams. Hester is the primary reserve behind Webb at field corner and has a wealth of athletic ability for the position. His primary goal this fall will be to work on improving his overall consistency that, when successful, will make him a dangerous cover corner. Smith was solid this spring and will be a key reserve at the boundary corner position.

Special Teams

Just as the quarterback position holds a special place in the Tribe program's tradition, the punting and kicking specialists have been no less credentialed. Since starting league play in 1993, the program has earned a total of 17 all-conference honors between the punter and placekicker positions.

Returning senior punter David Miller figures to continue to build on this legacy, as he has already earned two all-conference certificates, including first-team accolades this past fall. He has averaged nearly 40 yards an attempt for his career and last season helped the College have the league's best net punting average (35.9 yds/att). As one of the top returning punters in the FCS world, he will challenge for national honors this fall. As an added responsibility, Miller's powerful right leg may also be called on to handle the team's placement kicks as the replacement for graduated two-time all-conference honoree Brian Pate.

While Miller enters the camp with starting place-kicking duties, he will be pushed throughout by group of younger talent led by redshirt freshman Drake Kuhn.

The Tribe will also have the luxury of returning key talent at both return specialist positions, as both Jonathan Grimes (KR) and B.W. Webb (PR) were all-conference caliber players a season ago. Grimes has averaged better than 21 yards an attempt over his 47 career kick returns, while Webb was one of the top punt return specialists in the league with an average of better than 8.0 yards a return. While each possesses the speed and quickness necessary to excel in the role, both are also sure-handed with outstanding ball security. In fact, the staff will likely take advantage of Webb's sure hands and give him the added duty of holding on placement kicks.

The College also returns Chase Hill for his third season of handling the long-snapping duties, while sophomore Andy Topping will assume his first full year of short snapping, after seeing limited duty at the end of last season.
