greatly by sending this immediately

June 1796

To my beloved friend, our poor dear Richard is on the brink of the grave.
never was there a scene of more wretchedness. he is a perfect Bedlamite, with a most violent passions fever. he does not know a creature before he became so low. the circumstance mentioned in my last, was very distressing in his delirium. I did wish to explain it to him therefore (great as my reasons were) I let it pass for a whim, and alter'd my conduct. certainly she can never endeavor to quarrel with me after this. his deed was noble and will be rewarded in Heaven & where his physician thinks he will shortly be. I do not see. I must go to soon Tudy she is quite overwhelm'd god bless you A C L
