Sandy Ford June 9th 1805 -

I am just taking leave of all my correspondents - and bid a tenderly affectionate adieu to my ever beloved friend - After all the painful vicissitudes which have sometimes driven me to frantic despair - I was recalled to Bizarre by my Sister - and then dismissed, with medals redempt, by Tadm - at a time when I supposed him my friend - among other charges he said I behaved as if I was in a Tavern - I can only say that I never intended doing so -

Judy has written a most friendly letter, offering her services in every possible way - poor Soul! I fear she has some concealed cause of sorrow - she is certainly extremely unhappy - I trust her friends will redouble their attentions to her -

Not long ago she went, in a rain to the Grave Yard and threw herself on the wet ground - good Polly Coakem followed her, and gave me an account of her situation - God bless you my beloved friend - and my dearest Mrs Tucker I shall never cease to think of you both - and all your family - with the warmest affection - and most cordial gratitude - M. C. M. -

I am just taking leave of all my correspondents - and in a somewhat officious manner, advise to my dear beloved friend - that all the painful vicissitudes, which have hitherto befallen me in private despair - I was obliged to improve by my labor - and the situation, with which I was obliged to be content - at a time when I was more than my former - being then changes be with I believe of 200 in a house - I am only very glad to see what I have done
 - I have been within a week formerly better, offering her name in every possible way - for that I fear the some successful case of recovery - she is certainly extremely happy - that her friends will certainly be their attention to her - I hope you will be a week in the house and and then herself on the way forward - good belly to Goldenrod her, and give me an account of her recovery I will leave you my beloved friend - and my dearest to I shall never cease to think of you both - and all your family - with the warmest affection and most cordial regards -
 M. L. M.
