Dec. 19, 1808

As my Refrigerator is not at the freezing point this morning, I will once more address my much-loved Friend and then bid him adieu until, with other Frogs, I can announce the return of a less inclement Season - I daily expect M<sup>rs</sup> Pollock, and am to accompany her on a visit to M<sup>rs</sup> P's niece (my kind friend) who resides in Stratford. seven miles eastward of this quiet village. I blushed at the black patch on my last - a good tempered acquaintance insisted on displaying her skill in sealing - as it was - I hastened away with it to the Office - Every person here, performs their own errands. If well, two or three days, I forget sickness - and a retrospective view of Bizarra, Hay-market, and New York, induces me to rejoice at the quietude - and depy the Inconveniences of Fairfield - The friendliness of its inhabitants augments - I permit not perspective to dismay me - In quitting Virginia every chord of my heart burst asunder - Let us have justice done to Dick's memory - Kidder Mandolph's family have through the medium of Major Symon's - reported that Jack made humble concessions to William for ever having resented any treatment received by his brother from the Tuckahoe family - that he followed him, to ask his pardon - and that they are now very intimate - Jack surely is not aware of the evils he prepares for Tuder, in such a world as this — For myself — after being confined to an house of deceit, succeeded by abuse, from the twenty third of October till good-Friday — last year — the simple privilege of walking abroad, with kind greetings, is inconceivable — A M<sup>r</sup> Abbot, Deputy collector of the Richmond port — declared that Dick died just before my departure from Virginia — and that Judy, and Jack immediately turned me out of the house — a measure long wished by them — but prevented by Dick — The gentleman in question was in New York when I left it — and gave M<sup>r</sup> Carrington up as his informant — I never beheld his face — tho' he said he had long known me — M<sup>r</sup> George Shipwith I had never seen except once, for the space of a few hours — Perhaps Lucy Dr — formerly Miss Beverley — may have got some of my letters in M<sup>r</sup> Carrington's hands — I have only one object in view — namely, that of defending Dick's memory — and guarding Judy against future insult — Even that would have been impossible had I continued at Hay-market — for I must have lost my small portion of reason — For M<sup>r</sup> Tucker, Henry, Beverley, Polly, and Charles, I retain unabated affection — Offer my love to Virginia and Wilson Cary, if you please —

During the horrible visit my brother caused me to make M<sup>r</sup> D. M — when not quarrelling with her husband — she was just actually telling me how cheaply I could live in New York — and how friendly her acquaintances would be to me — After the six months passed at Hay-market I thought any place on the Globe would be better On writing to my brother for money to buy food, he enclosed me an order which was protested and now charges that sum to me — altho' the order was returned to me — and then to him — consequently he knew I did not receive a cent for it — Such, recapitulation tho' is futile

With Friendly feelings I remember M<sup>r</sup> Beachey's family, Judge Prentiss's — and — indeed many other good neighbors of yours — my dearest Friend — It gratified me, beyond expression, again to see your well-known hand writing — I wish you had mentioned the health of your dear family — I feel delighted at hearing your brother, Doctor T. T. Tucker, spoken of in this place — it seems he passed several days here, a few years ago — God bless you — I do indeed love you with the fondest gratitude —
A. C. M
