Some weeks ago Mrs. Carrington wrote me that, Dolly Cabell (who was then at her house) said my dear Mr. Tucker and ^{his} wife were as well and happy as possible. This I rejoiced at. The other day Judy wrote me you were in Amherst - therefore, knowing where to direct with certainty, I do myself the pleasure of scribbling a little to assure you of my steady attachment - and to congratulate Mrs. T. on the return of her son - Mr. Short has not been here very lately - we seldom dine without company - besides the city visitors we have a very thickly settled neighborhood - luckily for us we at last procured servants to do their duty - what few in this country can say - we have now four sober honest men - a hard working woman, and an excellent boy - so that the only difficulty which has ever attended me since my marriage is removed wholly for the present - my husband, who is goodness itself, leaves the entire regulation of the house to me. Truly do I wish you could witness my methodical management - not one word of discord ever passes under the roof -

Judy's sweet boy, Tudor, called here on his way to Cambridge - he has promised to visit us this winter -

Present my kindest regards to Mr. Tucker - I shall always remember your sons and daughters with tenderness - my heart was restless until I addressed a few lines to each - Adieu my beloved Friend - believe me ever yours most affectionately Ann C. Morris
