Student Body To Nominate For Homecoming Court

The nomination for a 1952 Homecoming Queen will be conducted Wednesday, October 8, by the student body at large. Eight girls will be selected on a primary ballot which will include the names of all senior women.

Freshmen and sophomores will nominate in the main cafeteria during the hours of 12:00-1:30 p. m., and 5:00-6:30 p. m. Polls will be set up on College Corner for the benefit of juniors and seniors, and their nominations will be held during the same hours as those specified for undergraduates.

Carmen Romeo, president of the senior class, stressed the fact that only freshmen and sophomores would be allowed to nominate in the cafeteria and that the polls on College Corner would be open only to juniors and seniors. He added that the nomination of candidates for Queen by the entire student body was a new practice, and he believed that it would prove to be successful.

Under the direction of class officers, the sophomore and junior classes were each to have nominated six girls from their respective classes to appear on the ballot for attendants to the Queen.

Final balloting will be held Wednesday, October 15, during the hours and at the locations provided for the nominations. Each student will cast one vote for Queen, two votes for junior attendants, and two for sophomore attendants. The two girls to receive second and third places on the ballot for Queen will serve as senior attendants.

Her Majesty and the Royal Court will ride on the Pep Club float in the Homecoming Parade, Saturday, October 25.

Flanagan To Play

Ralph Flanagan and his band will be featured at the Friday night formal dance, October 24, of the Homecoming week end, according to a late announcement made by Bob Schauf, chairman of the Dance Committee. Detailed plans for the week end dances, including ticket prices and sales, will appear in next week's Flat Hat.

Carolyn Estes, W&M Co-ed, Selected As Festival Princess

Carolyn Estes, a senior at William and Mary, has been chosen by her home county to act as princess in the Apple Harvest Festival at Charlottesville and the Tobacco Bowl Festival which will take place in Richmond.

Carolyn Estes

Carolyn who's home is Mineral, Virginia, will represent Louisa County at both of these state festivals. She is a member of the choir, the Fencing Club, and is social chairman of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority.

Religious Week To Emphasize Theme 'Think On These Things'

By Eleanor Haynes
Flat Hat Staff Writer

Jane Carney, chairman of this year's Religious Emphasis Week, has announced that the general theme for the four day program extending from Sunday, October 12 through Wednesday, October 15, will be Think On These Things. The program is under the sponsorship and general supervision of the Student Religious Union with the Newman Club also taking an active part.

Several outstanding religious leaders will take part in the discussions, seminars and services. Rabbi Melcolm H. Stern, of the Sholem Temple in Norfolk is returning for his third year with Religious Emphasis Week at William and Mary. From the Grace Methodist Church in Newport News comes Rev. A. Purnell Baily who broadcasts every morning over WGH and whose newspaper feature, Daily Bread, is carried in fifty-one newspapers in the eastern section of the United States.

Another of the speakers, Rev. Carter H. Harrison, rector of St. John's Church in Hampton, has travelled widely and frequently lectures on international relations. He has also spoken in chapel on several occasions. Father Gabriel T. Maioriello, who is stationed at Saint Mary's Church, Norfolk, taught English at the College of William and Mary in 1945 and 1946. Paul Reich has been assistant professor of psychology at the Norfolk Division of the College since 1943, in addition to his position as Rabbi of the Congregation Beth El in Norfolk.

On Sunday, October 12th, the programs will begin with a retreat at Matoaka Shelter at 5 p. m. for the Campus Committee. In Phi Beta Kappa Hall at 7:30 an interdenominational meeting will be held at which time Father Maioriello will speak on the topic, Religion is Sanity. The Campus Committee will breakfast at seven in the Garden Room Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday mornings. During the week speakers may be present in some classes to conduct discussions on religious thinking, or the professors themselves may present

Masterful Staging Required For Presentation Of 'The First Lady'

Work began last week on the sets for The First Lady to be presented in Phi Beta Kappa Hall by the William and Mary Theater on October 29 and 30.

A double job has been cut out for the workers because the play calls for two sets: the first, a charming old fashioned, solid American living room for the home of the Secretary of State, and the second, the library of a judge of the Supreme Court.

The living room set will be the larger of the two in order to accommodate the large cast necessary for the play.

A wagon-set will be used for the library scene, which will be rolled on and off the stage when necessary. This arrangement presents more difficulties in space and time. The shift must be made between scenes instead of the usual time allowed between acts.

Al Haak, of the Fine Arts Department and The William and Mary Theater, and his student workers will be busy in the next few weeks working out the problems of staging this play.

New tools and a new tool case are being used for the first time. The large case with a place for each tool marked clearly so that it may easily be kept in place was built by members of the stagecraft class. These tools are for use by the theater and stagecraft classes only and will not be loaned out to other organizations as the old tools were.

Many freshmen have been working on the set. Anyone else, freshmen or upperclassmen, may still sign up to help with this work which is indispensable to the success of the play.

Freshmen To Elect Officers November 3

John Munger, chairman of the Men's Honor Council, announces that freshman elections for class officers and assemblymen and women will be held on Monday, November 3. Anyone wishing to run for an office must sign a petition in Dean Farrar's office between now and Monday, October 13. Freshmen are urged to form separate parties and platforms, but there must be no campaigning until two weeks before the election. Only freshmen may vote in this election which will be held in Phi Beta Kappa Hall.

'Students For Stevenson' Adopt Democratic Platform; Sancetta Denounces Administration To We Like Ike Club

Anthony Sancetta, assistant professor of economics, gave an "off the cuff" speech before the We Like Ike group on Thursday, October 2.

In discussing the maladministration in our government for the past four years, Sancetta stated that the greatest threat to our democracy is not communism but the way in which the executive office has interpreted our Constitution. He went on to say that it is impossible to have a true constitutional government when the executive office, in a broad use of so called inherent powers, believes itself all powerful in making the final decisions of our government. He added that the result of this policy during the past few years has been forms of "creeping socialism" in our government as seen in the president's attempt to seize the steel industries.

Sancetta went on to say that our government is essentially a trinity composed of legislature, executive and judicial branches. As soon as there is anyone who, through inherent political powers, is more powerful than this trinity, then the possessor of this power ceases to be a law bearer and administrator and become a law maker and a governor. This has been the pattern for our president in the past few years under the policy of the Democratic Party, stated Mr. Sancetta.

The next meeting for the We Like Ike group is scheduled for Thursday, October 16, at 7:30 p. m. in Washington 100.

Jim Chase and Don Wolfe, leaders of campus political groups, meet on College Corner.

At a meeting of the Students for Stevenson group held last Thursday evening, the fifty assembled students voted to adopt the Democratic platform of the National Party as their stand on the major issues. "The purpose of this," explained chairman of the group Jim Chase, "is to present to the student body a clear picture of the beliefs that the Young Democrats hold on this campus."

A further resolution passed at this meeting called for "academic freedom." "This is defined," stated Libby Lewis, "as freedom to hold individual opinions, selection of own ideas, and freedom of discussion. In short, a review of the Declaration of Independence."

Speaking before the Students for Stevenson assembly was Page Smith, Instructor of Early American History and Culture at William and Mary. His topic dealt with political participation and ethics in government.

The keynote of the speech concerned Stevenson's sincere regard for political ethics and morality in places of high public trust. The meeting was concluded by playing a tape recording of Stevenson's acceptance speech at the National Convention.

Young Democrats' plans for the future include a scheduled meeting for October 16 at 7:00 in Marshall-Wythe Hall. In addition, a pre-election rally has been scheduled for October 30.

Women Students To Vote Tomorrow For WSCGA Vacancies

Women students will vote tomorrow afternoon, Wednesday, October 8, for representatives to fill the vacancies existing in women's student government offices. Voting will take place from 3:30 until 6:00 p. m. Residents of Barrett, Chandler and Jefferson will vote in their respective dormitories, while pools will be set up in Phi Beta Kappa Hall for students from Brown, Ludwell and sorority court.

Nan Child, president of the Executive Council, has announced the nominations made by the Senior Nominating Committee. These were increased by nominations made from the floor of WSCGA meeting last night.

As nominees for treasurer to the Executive Council are: Virginia Broadus, Elizabeth Robinson, Lolly Egger, Lou Biggs; for secretary to the Judicial Committee: Peggy Ives, Zelda Wildman, Kathryn Binns, Jean Richmond; for senior member to Judicial Committee: Nancy Ellis, Barbara Mott, Ann Johnson, Monty (Monty) Smith; for representative at large to the Executive Council: Jane Kesler, Joan Dan-skin, Patricia Beggs, Mary Lou Riggan; for freshman representative to the Judicial Committee: Betsy Davis, Charles Foster, Dorothy Rector, Mary Metzler; for freshman representative to the Executive Council: Margo Ketchum, Victoria Stone, Marcia Page, Barbara Mitchell.

A Solution Needed

For the past few years students have griped and complained about the insufficient amount of recreation and entertainment which is available on the campus and in Williamsburg. But that's about all they have done about it. As a result almost the entire burden of providing the college's social program has fallen to the fraternities.

The eleven William and Mary fraternities have done everything but pull rabbits out of a hat to carry this burden and at the same time keep from going financially in debt. They have staged lodge parties, dances, picnics in addition to providing their usual week end hospitality.

But there is a limit to what any group can do and the fraternities have just about reached that limit. Each lodge can only hold so many people; each lodge can only provide recreation for so many students. When the number exceeds that limit which has been the case for the last year so so the result is confusion, unpleasantness and a good time for no one.

The solution to this problem is one which is long overdue. A possible temporary solution might be the development of an active sorority social program. Why couldn't sororities plan open houses, parties and social functions which would be open to fraternity men as a group. In the past they have entertained individual fraternities but such functions have met with only a limited amount of success.

It's true sororities are limited as to the types of such functions. At many other colleges and universities women's sororities stage weekly dances and parties which are welcomed and encouraged by student and faculty groups. Bridge tournaments, free movies, coffee and doughnut hours, open houses, square dances, and other similar activities add diversion to many college social programs. Many of these projects are realized through joint pan-hellenic and interfraternity co-operation.

Since the prospect of securing a Student Activities Building is still of somewhere in the future, this plan of action seems the only way to gain the desired program which the student body desperately needs and wants. However, it is up to this student body and its greek and student government leaders to go out and get it instead of sitting back and talking about how nice it will be when we finally get the long promised building.

HALESTONES

By Jane Hale

I can tolerate Rushing, but when it comes to rushing Rushing, I'm afraid that I must draw the line. My ponderous cretin-like mind has just focused on exactly what is happening to the sororities' rush system around here, and I do not like what I see.

My ancient soul gets downright sentimental when it looks back on the good old days when any sorority could bid as many girls as it wanted, and when any rushee could go the sorority of her choice. I used to chortle with a great deal of pride over the modest sorority system at William and Mary, as I compared it to the fiendish bureaucracies of other schools.

That was before we installed a Grading the Beef Plan at William and Mary. I realize that the sorority system is essentially selective (some people would say snobby), and that you cannot make it any less so by talking about it; however, you can make it more so, and I think we've done exactly that. When I was a Freshman, back in the Golden Age, one merely went in and signed the dotted line if one desired to go thru Rushing. You could do this with the fullest confidence that you had exactly a 50-50 chance, all things considered. In the end you made the decision yourself, and it was a definite black and white one: you either didn't get into the sorority of your choice, or you did, and you knew how the situation stacked up.

Now, I doubt that anything less than Einstein's theory of Relativity could explain the system, and Einstein's theory was not devised to work on the emotional level.

I am very much opposed to the Quota System which we have worked out at William and Mary; not only do I think it is unnecessary, I also think it is downright irrational and brutal. A limited system might possibly be desirable, provided it be one embodying a modicum of common sense, and every sorority could impose their own limit system. I see no reason, however, when a sorority has a limitation placed upon them by national by-laws, for every other sorority to have to comply.

If the number of girls enrolling in William and Mary as freshmen and as transfer students keep increasing, in the future some provision will have to be made to add sororities to take care of the increase, or to throw them all out the window. Because, if there isn't enough room in the boat, the boat is going to sink, or somebody is going to drown, or the people in the boat are going to become so terribly self-satisfied that they will deserve to drown.

On our present route, I predict, with the assurance and spleen of Drew Pearson, that a schism will form between the independents on campus and the sorority girls, and that being in a sorority will become a foul privilege, rather than the choice which it is now.

I suppose there is such a thing as getting a sorority so crowded that the proper sister-in-the-bond feeling cannot be propagated, but here at William and Mary, where, fortunately enough, we do not live in the houses until our senior year, I think we have a wider margin for the number of girls in one particular group.

And, as far as the sister-in-the-etc., poppycock, well, it went out with the birds, if it ever existed at all. Girls in sororities are friends, very good ones, but they are not sisters, which suits me, because, not having lived in a Harum, I'd rather count fifty friends, than fifty sisters.

To continue with a new bottle of vitriol—the Quota System, as it now stands, is rather lopsided. Upperclassmen going thru rushing are at a disadvantage, and there are many people with more depth than surface who perhaps appeared shy on the first joust with rushing.

And, though rushing is a lot of fun on both sides, it is a rather new experience for the rushees, and a rather difficult one for the members, and I see no reason why any girl who gets a bid from any sorority, should not be able to take that bid. This congo kick we are forced to keep in composing a list is totally absurd; all in all, I would rather play Russian Roulette with all six chambers of the barrel loaded.

The present system has built an unsatisfactory house of cards, and is increasingly stacking improvisation upon improvisation. Regimentation is just d-a-n-d-y, but there is no such creature as regimented chaos.

In this column, I have been talking to upperclassmen; however, I know that some Freshman has gone off into a corner, and is chewing her fingernails trying to understand why all the yabber-yabber. Well, don't worry about it, kiddy. You will enjoy rushing as we all do. You will meet many new people and have a splendid lot of fun. And next year, I hope you will be yabbering about the same problem, and will come up with a better answer than the present one.

Since rushing Rushing seems to have several groups around campus upset, shall we now move over to pick that bone clean?

I can see it now. The rushees will be knocking on the doors that second Monday night, while the sorority girls will still be in the throes of converting their houses into facades of undersea caverns, (Continued on Page 3)

In the first concert of the year to be held next Wednesday, October 15, students and townspeople are being offered one of the finest and most popular young minstrels in the field, Richard Dyer-Bennett. During the past months, Mr. Bennett has met with nothing but good reviews in his tour around the country.

Dyer-Bennett is but the first of five well selected and varied evenings of entertainment which the committee on Lectures, Art and Music has been fortunate enough to procure. Unlike the series of the past two years which have been "packaged deals," this year's list of five programs was chosen for individual merit.

Because additional funds were appropriated by the Friends of the College to secure this series of five independent concerts, tickets are still being offered for the very low price of $5.50—an unparalleled price for the caliber of entertainment which is being presented.

Since the Concerts are brought to Williamsburg primarily for the students, it is hoped that student participation will be large this year. It would be a disappointing thing if only 10% of the student body supported the Concert Series.

We urge those students who have not yet done so, to stop by the switchboard in Marshall-Wythe and purchase their William and Mary Concert ticket before October 15 and Richard Dyer-Bennett.

The Student Voice

Perhaps some of your readers immediately concerned will be able to answer my questions about a change in rules of the college laundry.

Why is it that this year it is against the honor system for two people to send laundry together under one name, although each contributes $7.50 toward the $15.00 fee.

According to the laundry's regulations, twenty pieces may be sent each week for this $15.00 a semester fee. Many students wish to send only sheets, towels, and heavy pieces, totaling about ten pieces in one bundle. It is obvious that these people are paying for twice as much service as they need.

What difference does it make what pieces and whose belongings are put into one's laundry bag? Is it lying, stealing or cheating for roommates to send their laundry together, thus defraying their college expenses. The people at the laundry have informed me and many others that I would be violating the honor code if I shared my laundry; they seem to have had orders to that effect!

We at least deserve an answer as this is a new problem for those of us who have been used to making up our laundry without being told what must or must not be put into the bag. Some of us are in a spot as we were not informed of the policy before making plans for sharing the bill.

I would like to know who has declared this to be an added breach of the honor code, which I find hard to categorize. Have the student honor councils themselves, with the authority invested in them by the student body, sanctioned this action. If they have not, should they not be given a chance to define a breach, and to see how sharing can be called a breach of our code?

Sincerely,
Lelia Griffith

East Meets West When Asghar Ali, Native Of Pakistan, Continues Studies At W&M

Though it's a long trip from Lahore to Williamsburg, a short talk with Asghar Ali will convince you that Pakistan is almost next door after all, for the precise meeting of East and West is in Asghar's irresistible grin.

We journeyed down to Corner Greeks the other afternoon, and spent a pleasant hour talking with William and Mary's student from Pakistan. We left fully convinced that our life was a fairly colorless collection when compared with Asghar's totally different one.

The sophomore's sense of humor stands him in good stead when Americans attempt to pronounce his name, and because the nuances are so difficult, Asghar has become "Oscar" to his friends in Williamsburg. Interestingly enough, he was named by the late king of Afganistan, a very close friend of Asghar's father. And, straight from the story books, the elder Ali was standing on the right side of the King at the time of the latter's assassination. Hereditary friendships are the custom in Pakistan, as are hereditary enmities.

No Co-education

Before leaving Pakistan, Asghar had never known girls; co-education exists in one educational institution, and the girls are forbidden contact with the men. Asghar explained that this custom is dying out in the upperclasses, but in the lower veils are still worn. He quickly added, however, that Hollywood's conception of the veiled lady was entirely wrong.

Marriages are usually arranged by the family. "Before I went to England last year, I had no idea in the world what a girl would be like," said Asghar. Needless to say, he does now, at least, our informants on campus claim that Asghar is doing very well on the social side here at William and Mary.

Eventually Asghar would like to become a mechanical engineer, and toward this end he is planning to enroll in MIT for study after William and Mary. The Pakistan government allows students to enter the U. S. on an industrial basis only, and those who wish to study in the arts customarily go to England.

Since their school system is so radically different from ours, we had a difficult time equating the two. Examinations in Asghar's college came from England, and were returned there to be graded. Very few women enter higher education, but have a plan similar to our junior colleges after secondary study.

Urdu Dialects

English is normally spoken in Pakistan, in addition to the dialect. We asked Asghar to say a few sentences in his native language, and were struck by the beautifully melodious quality. There are 276 dialects spoken, and different types of script, however the major stem is either Hindi or Urdu, one from the Sanscrit, the other from Persian and Arabic roots.

Asghar flew into New York City from England, where he had been visiting his younger brother with his parents, and, as he stood at Rockefeller Center, was asked just how long he'd been in this country.

"I said fifteen minutes, but the guy thought I was joking." New York was no surprise to Asghar, "It looked exactly as I thought it would from the American movies; there is more traffic, but we have some terrific traffic jams in Punjab. Punjab, the land of the five waters, is our 'Empire State'."

"Your conception of history is rather amazing, for you think things are old if they date from 1600, whereas we are used to history going back to 2,000 B. C. at home." Asghar is extremely impressed by American friendliness, especially as contrasted to the British, "Where, if you sit down at a table, they nod, and then put a newspaper up in front of their faces."

Vacation Trips

However, the freedom of speech accorded in England was noted, especially Hyde Park. Since he arrived in New York on the 15th, Asghar came straight to Williamsburg to enroll, and hasn't had an opportunity to visit other American cities. He is planning a few jaunts to Washington and N. Y. during vacations, however.

Asghar's friends tell us that he is a whiz on the tennis courts, and swings a mean ping-pong racket. Field hockey is the national game back home, but cricket and tennis stand high. The music with which Asghar is familiar is quite different from Western tones, and of course, the oriental influence is very pronounced in art. Dancing in Pakistan is talked down, except for ballroom dancing, for it is connected with the lower classes.

There is much literature in the native language, and English books are read. American magazines find great favor: "Look, Life, Post, and the Reader's Digest, which is terrifically read."

Food Cheaper

"The food is absolutely different over here; wheat forms the staple food in the West, and the East depends upon rice. Food is, however, much more cheap at home, though manufactured items such as cars and clothes are more dear."

"Women's clothes are still cut on the Eastern lines, and the men will wear Western clothes—with a turban or a fez." Asghar claims that people look at him in amazement when he claims he often wore a turban to school when he was younger.

Harvard Zoologist To Lecture Thursday

On Thursday, Oct. 9, Dr. Carroll M. Williams, professor of zoology at Harvard University will lecture on the topic "Morphogenesis and Metamorphosis of Insects." The lecture, which is under the auspices of the committee on Lectures, Art and Music, is scheduled for 8:00 p. m. in Phi Beta Kappa Hall.

Dr. Williams is recognized as one of the leading young zoologists in the country today and only recently was awarded the $1,000 prize given by the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

A native Virginian, he received his B. S. from Harvard in 1938 and 1941. In 1946 he was graduated from Harvard Medical School.

Political Situation

The internal political situation has leveled off since the partition difficulties, but Pakistan is rather disappointed in the work of the U. N. centering around Kashmir. Distances are so great that commerce is either by sea or air, overland routes have not yet penetrated the isolation. According to Asghar, the poor people are not Communist minded at all, and the great wealth is often found in the hands of those who are.

By the way, tomorrow is Asghar Ali's birthday, so you might wish him a happy one, and make it an opportunity to get to know him.

gilded palaces and snow castles. That, or the sorority girls will be hastening in from class to prepare food for 100 girls, and going on to gild themselves into the inhabitants of snow castles, undersea caverns and gilded palaces. I do not see how even a group of Amazons could do the things which must be done for that last party in the short time provided by this year's schedule.

Then, there is something about greeting new girls at five o'clock on the day before Thanksgiving, that makes me think the Pilgrims were lucky to have Indians. I would far rather be headed out on the bus for home at that time. Frankly, though, I'll stay until five, rather than get up to greet them at six in the morning. I just wouldn't be in the mood at that hour.

It isn't that I do not adore my sorority, but I like logic, and the time and date arrangement of this year's Rushing is not too logical. I realize that many events are scheduled around campus, and that rushing would conflict with them, but has there ever been a time when rushing didn't conflict with almost everything? Not on your life! And if the sorority system is going to be a part of William and Mary, I think a little consideration could be granted to that system by William and Mary.

I do not know what machine has got a hold on time around here, except a Time Machine. What's the hurry? I know the present dates of rushing are the only ones without conflicts. Of course they don't conflict—except with studying, sleeping, Thanksgiving vacation and breathing.

W & M - Go - Round

By Barry Wilson

Before I begin my column for this week, I'd like to say a few words about the caricature which accompanies it every Tuesday. It is not me. It doesn't even look like me. It is somebody else. For your information, I have a crew-cut, wear horn-rimmed glasses, am eight feet tall, weigh 125 pounds, and go everywhere. The caricature is actually an artist's conception of a young man named Arnold Peattie, who was unfortunately stoned to death for unthinkingly delivering a lecture on the benefits of oil heating at a Coal Miners' Convention. The artist, in his will, thoughtfully bequeathed the drawing to Jane Hale, knowing her interest in martyrs to any cause, and Miss Hale in turn placed it where she thought it would do the most good—or almost the most good. So much for that.

I'd like to say a few words about studying to you freshmen. You've been at school now for two weeks or so, and you have doubtless learned that, since you are too small for the football team, since the professors are too well-paid to be interested in bribes, since that sophomore Phi Bete you thought you were dating turned out instead to be a steeplejack of indifferent intellect from Toano, and since the Dean has proved stubbornly unsympathetic about your malignant brain tumor, you will just have to sit down to your studies. Don't worry about it. You've got five years to get those hours. And if you can't make it in all that time, then my name's not Fiddlebang Goldsneider.

Take history, for instance. No, on second thought, don't take history. Take government or something. The odds in your favor are better—something like 500-1, I believe. Actually, though, history is no problem. As a matter of fact, it's crisp. Merely a process of memorization, and anybody can memorize, with practice. Try learning small bits of information at first, like the constitution of the Pan-Hellenic Council, and gradually work up through T. S. Eliot essays, Scandinavian novels, and treatises on the theory of relativity. Eventually you will be able to quote from memory the whole of Tolstoy's War and Peace. Of course, by this time the semester will have come to a close, and you will have flunked the final, but boy! Will you knock 'em dead next semester!

Regardless of what science you are taking, it would be a splendid idea for you to set up a laboratory in your dormitory room. This will free you from having to attend boring afternoon lab sessions, and enable you to spend that time in more lascivious pursuits. Of course, you will hear sordid tales of the home biologist who passed away from chestnut blight a couple of years ago, and the chemistry student who now drinks his evening ovaltine through a funnel which protrudes from the top of his head, and the physics student who was unhappily garroted when he stuck his head too close to an intricate pulley system involving thirty feet of piano wire and a 500 pound weight, but don't listen to them. For the most part these stories are malicious gossip instigated by the faculty, and in any case, they are mere exceptions to the rule.

Your language requirement should present little difficulty. The best way to learn a language is to know and understand the people who speak it. If you are taking French, cultivate the friendship of a likely young member of the opposite sex who happens also to be French. Be amenable to his desires, and you may learn much of French manners and customs. Whatever he says, pretend to understand him and answer "Oui," and you may learn even more than you bargained for. If you are taking Spanish, enjoy with a Spanish companion the tasty food of his homeland like muchachos and sombros, and learn the delights of Old World customs like the afternoon hacienda and the gay evening frijoles. If your new friend is German, drop into the Corner Greek's with him and learn of his country over a few cases of Schlitz. Admittedly, students of Latin and Ancient Greek have their problems. There hasn't been a Roman around here since Julius Caesar won the Seventh Punic War in a pitched battle outside Norge, Virginia, in 1863, and I haven't seen hide nor hair of any ancient Greeks, although they say that Socrates made his famous "Cros of Gold" speech in front of the post office arcade on Flag Day, 1928, and although the Middle Greek is rumored to be pushing 45.

English, of course, will be a lead-pipe cinch. That is to say, it will be a cinch if you clubber your professor with a length of lead pipe and swipe his grade-book. As a rule, you will find this relatively simple, although you have to watch those boys. They may be old, but they're wiry. Watch for deception and concealed weapons. Dr. Summersgill has a jimdandy right hand punch, but they say he's slow in returning a left hand jab. Dr. McBurney carries a small blackjack in his left hip pocket, a relic of his Harvard days. Looking the thing squarely in the face, it might probably be better if you found some other way to get through the course. Don't worry about your spelling and grammar on the themes you hand in. This is the modern age, where everything is flexible, the English language included. Face up to your professor—tell him your personal feelings on the subject. Express your belief that the English language is a living, growing thing which must change in rhythm with its environment and times. Tell him that grammar and spelling are antiquated things of the past, worth only a fleeting glimpse. Submit your papers electrotyped on paper-thin sheets of transparent plastic, gobble vitamin pills like candy throughout his classes, and wear a red or green propellor on your beanie, so that he will know that you are a real Modern Man. Tell him you think that Edgar Guest is vastly underrated, and, when his normal color returns to his face, explain why. Above all, don't read what he assigns. Shakespeare, Milton, Keats, Shelley, and the others are obscure and overrated writers of a bygone age. Your professor is merely testing your initiative, to see if you will be spineless enough to actually read them. Don't be fooled. Those guys are pretty cagey, and they're out to get you. You get there first with the first punch, and you'll be O. K. Take my word for it.

Well, kiddies, with that sage advice, you should be able to make it through your first year without much trouble. Play it safe, but stick up for your rights. Stick up for what you believe in. Stick up for a decent grade. Walk right up to your professor and say, "This is a stickup." Oh, yes—and watch that right hook of Dr. Summersgill's. It's a lulu.

Restoration Shows 'A Walking History'

Advance indications point to heavy attendance during this historic city's unique "walking history" classes in the coming winter months.

J. Neville McArthur, Director of School Activities for Colonial Williamsburg, stated today that upwards of a 1,000 school students already are scheduled to study early American life and times during classroom tours in the special "winter session" from October 1 to March 15 here. Specially trained guides show the students where historic actions that led to the Declaration of Independence took place and the way of life two centuries ago through restored colonial homes, public buildings, and craft shops.

In this troubled world with its profound complexities and problems, many grave questions plague our uneasy minds. With your kind permission, we would like to take this opportunity to ask you some of these questions now...

When William and Mary plays Navy next Saturday on the Annapolis gridiron, which team will Admiral Chandler be rooting for? Can the Indians penetrate the rugged Navy defense?

Is there anything more obnoxious than the gloating of a Yankee fan after his beloved ball club has won a game? Is Johnny Mize old enough to be Mickey Mantle's father? Can you remember a more exciting game than the Dodgers' 11 inning triumph on Sunday? Has the defensive work of the Brooklyn outfield ever been surpassed in World Series play?

Has William and Mary ever won a more stunning victory than the 20-12 upset of powerful Pennsylvania last year on frozen Franklin Field? Who will win the battle of the titans when Duke plays Virginia two weeks from Saturday?

Is there a better back in the Southern Conference than Ed Mioduszewski? Who is the only non-New Jerseyan in the Tribe's starting backfield? Did you notice that Bucky Hines kicked his first field goal against Penn State last Saturday? How do the bookies manage to predict the score of William and Mary football games so accurately?

Have you ever met a pretty girl who didn't think she was even prettier than she really was? Why are all women so bitterly jealous of Marilyn (The Body) Monroe? Do girls get dressed up to go to church on Sunday mornings or do they go to church on Sunday mornings to get dressed up?

Is there a more unorthodox sportswriter than Jimmy Cannon of the New York Post? A keener one than Red Smith of the Herald-Tribune? A more intelligent one than Arthur Daley of the Times?

Is there a baseball player in either league who can compare to Stan (The Man) Musial? Can anything match a no-hitter for sustained tension and excitement? Will Dixie Walker, the people's choice from Brooklyn, become the next manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates? Is Joe Black better than Don Newcombe?

Who will be the new William and Mary tennis coach? Have the tennis courts been properly repaired yet? Why do certain professors who live in glass houses throw rocks at the Flat Hat? Why are so many ex-Williams and Marys haunting Williamsburg these days? What would baseball coach Johnny Clements give for another Vic Raschi?

Is a five cent nickle the thing that this country really needs? Why isn't Abraham Lincoln's birthday celebrated in Virginia? Who was it who said, "Everyone is equal only some people are more equal than others?" Has a certain Williamsburg clergyman stopped snapping pictures of W&M faculty members coming out of the local ABC store?

Will the William and Mary Theater ever be the same again without Jeep Friedman? Does any group on campus, including the football team, stick together more closely than the theater people?

By the time a girl reaches the age of 18 and goes away to college shouldn't she be mature enough to take care of herself without a need for rigid social regulations? Is there anything sadder than a girl speaking Spanish with a thick southern drawl? Do you believe in the double standard? Does a boy chase a girl until she catches him?

Is the cafeteria reverting to form after a relatively auspicious start this year? How many people who have meal tickets actually eat three meals in the cafeteria every day? Are powdered eggs being served for breakfast?

Have you ever gotten a shirt back from the College laundry without a crushed collar, a missing button or an over abundance of starch? Why do the powers that be change the text books for so many courses every year? Why is Taliaferro the only dormitory on the entire campus that doesn't have a single water fountain or coke machine?

Can Adolph Rupp sleep at night with the shattered careers of Ralph Beard and Alex Groza on his conscience? Why are major league baseball players drafted only to be put on service baseball teams?

Did William Randolph Hearst die 88 years too late? Is Westbrook Pegler for real? Is there anything lower than Low Blow Joe McCarthy?

Why does fate always frown on the football fortunes of the Big Green? Was anybody sorry when Suey Eason picked up his marbles and returned to Hampton last Spring?

Does William and Mary need a new men's dormitory or a Student Union Building more urgently? Is there a man, woman or child on the Reservation who isn't unhappy about the rushing dates for this semester? Do most fraternities and sororities take themselves too seriously? Are there too many bricks and not enough brains in Colonial Williamsburg?

Who rings the College bell at three a. m.? Four a. m.? Five a. m.?

Sigma Nu, SAE, Pi KA Take League Lead As Fraternity Football Play Commences

Eight games were played in the Fraternity Football League this week and one more was forfeited. As a result of these games, Sigma Nu PiKA and SAE are tied for first place, each with two victories and no setbacks.

The Numen won their two games this week from Theta Delt, 39-0, and from Phi Tau, 38-7. The story in both games for Sigma Nu was the passing arm of Al Kersey. "The Ghost" threw five touchdown passes against Theta Delt and six against Phi Tau.

In the Theta Delt contest, Jerry Harris caught four of the five passes while Hardy Cofer snared the fifth.

Phi Tau had the same trouble, as Harris, Cofer and Jim Seu each caught two touchdown passes. Ed Novak and Cofer each scored an extra point. For Phi Tau, Bob Chandler scored the only touchdown while Mike Richardson converted the extra point.

A Real Scare

Phi Tau gave SAE a real scare, but finally lost, 12-6. Both SAE touchdowns were scored on Bob Mitchell passes. The first was caught by Freddy Allen, while John Westberg grabbed the second. George Larkin registered Phi Tau's only score by returning a kickoff all the way for paydirt. The defense of both teams in this game was excellent. SAE won their other game when Phi Alpha forfeited.

Pi KA won their two games this week from Lambda Chi, 13-7, and Kappa Sig, 13-0. Against Lambda Chi, the PiKas drew first blood when Bruce Rhea scored on a 50 yard run. Lambda Chi struck right back when George Southwell intercepted a pass and ran 50 yards for a touchdown. The extra point was made and Lambda Chi led, 7-6.

Pi KA scored the winning touchdown when Joe Burke threw a pass to Skip Risjord. This same combination also scored the point after touchdown.

Against Kappa Sig, Pi KA received and passed six straight times for a touchdown. The scoring play was a Burke to Rhea pass.

Kappa Sig came back from this defeat to nip KA in a tight 6-0 game. The score was 0-0 until the final minutes of the fourth quarter. A short pass from Alex Harper to Bob Stewart was good for six points and the ball game. Both teams played excellent defensive games.

Theta Delt made up for their loss to Sigma Nu by downing Lambda Chi, 12-0. Both touchdowns for Theta Delt were scored in similar fashion.

Sigma Pi downed Phi Alpha, 19-0, in the other game played last week. Aubrey Witherington scored two touchdowns and an extra point while Joe Campagna tallied the other six pointer.

Fullback Bowman Impresses Experts With Powerful Running And Blocking

By Bob Neuville

Flat Hat Sports Writer

One of the mainstays of the William and Mary backfield this year is hard-hitting Bill Bowman. The rangy junior has impressed the experts this year with his ball-carrying from the fullback slot.

Bill was born in Dayton, Tenn., but makes his home in Birmingham, Alabama. He played his high school ball at three different schools, two years at Woodlawn High School in Birmingham, one season at Riverside Military Academy and two years at Emporia High School. His play at the latter school earned him the nickname of "The Emporia Express."

While at Emporia, Bill had the unique experience of playing under a head coach who also happened to be his father. Mr. Bowman, the present head mentor at Poquoson can often be found up in the younger Bowman's room spinning yarns about his old college days.

Chose W&M

Bill had his choice of most of the Southern schools when he finished his playing days at high school, but chose William and Mary upon the advice of his dad. He is an accounting major and hopes to make his career in either that field or the regular army. Billy holds the rank of second lieutenant in the ROTC although he is only a junior.

Bowman hates to lose and has the utmost of confidence in the team this year. "Our record was just the same at this time last year and look how we ended up." He also added that the boys might just "bounce back and lick somebody" as they did last year. So far he noted, "the breaks have all been against us."

The rangy Alabaman, who tips the scale at an even 200 pounds, has played under almost every type of formation imaginable. He likes the "T" the best, specifically choosing the open "T" as his favorite variation. "You can run almost any type of play under the open "T." Although the split "T" is a little more limiting, he chose that as his second favorite.

Five Letter Man

Bill was a five letter man while in high school, but limits his activity to football and baseball here at the Reservation. He managed to paste the ball at a rate well over three hundred while exhibiting his diamond talent for the first time last Spring. He also led the team in many of the other important departments.

Bill Bowman

After an exceptionally good freshman season, which was highlighted by his two touchdown runs against the Duke frosh, Bowman was handicapped much of last year with a series of injuries. In the few games in which he saw action, notably the Wake Forest encounter which saw the Indians carry home the Tobacco Bowl Trophy, Bowman looked quite outstanding.

Barring any reoccurrence of the injuries which sidelined him last season, Bill should help make the Indian's faithful forget Ed Weber who starred in the fullback slot in the past few seasons.

WOMEN'S WILES

By Sally Dahm

Flat Hat Women's Sports Editor

Tennis has once again taken the spotlight in the women's intramural tournament. This year's tournament will only last until the latter part of this month, so I would like to urge the women students to participate. Interest and not skill is stressed in these intramural contests.

Perhaps this is not the proper time to mention champions, but I feel that there are two outstanding players who have done extremely well in the last month and who are fully deserving of any praise that might come their way. These two women, separated by 48 years in age, demonstrated their skill last month before vast crowds of amazed spectators.

Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman, 65 year old grandmother, walked off with her 43rd national tennis title, winning the Women Veteran's Doubles title at Brookline, Mass. last month. Mrs. Wightman proved to the spectators at the Longwood Cricket Club that in spite of her age she is still right on top in the tennis world. With her partner, Mrs. Richard Buck, Mrs. Wightman took the title 6-0, 6-3.

Mrs. Wightman has been competing for 50 years now and holds a record no women has touched. Her first trophy was won in 1902, at the age of fifteen. Almost all the female greats—Helen Wills, Helen Jacobs, Sarah Palfrey—were her discoveries.

On the other extreme is the very young and talented Maureen Connolly. Last month 17 year old Maureen successfully defended her National Women's title at Forest Hills. To show their appreciation to this petite athlete, San Diego chipped in $2,000 to buy her a thoroughbred hunter. The mayor of San Diego also proclaimed a Maureen Connolly Day.

Miss Connolly plans to go to Australia in November to play in the Australian tournament circuit. As long as her high caliber of play is upheld, Miss Connolly is assured of an excellent showing in November.

Everything on campus has gone stark, raving

Each fraternity and independent touch football team is notified by Mr. Jensen that they are required to pay the official's fee as soon as possible. The fee is $10 for each fraternity and $6 for each independent team.

Those participants who either won first round matches or drew byes in the tennis or horseshoe tournaments should check the intramural board in Blow Gym to see their second round pairings.

Track Meeting

Coach Gil Joyner has called a meeting of all track and cross country men, including freshmen, for 7:00 p. m. on Thursday in Blow Gym. All participants are urged to attend the meeting by the coach.

Swimming Tryouts

The Swimming Club of William and Mary will hold tryouts on October 8 at 8:15 in Blow Pool. Those women interested in synchronized swimming will be given instruction for four consecutive weeks. Then new Swimming Club members will be chosen on November 4.

Gills Jr., Cadet SFC; Wayne S. Jones, Cadet SFC.

The following ROTC Cadets are appointed to the grade of Cadet Second Lieutenant and are unassigned: Vernon L. Divers Jr.,

Hosey H. Hearn, Posie J. Hundley Jr., Charles H. Jackson, Kent A. Kirwan, Peter W. Klinger, Dudley J. Martin, Richard S. McKee, Elijah G. Pillow, John D. Potts, Bruce W. Rhea Jr., Jack Steinger, Robert E. Turvene, John A. Wilkinson.

Pep Club Announces Its Coming Program

At their October 1 meeting, members of the Pep Club saw the first in a series of movies on the William and Mary football games this season.

Next week the featured film strip will be the Wake Forest game, and following that the Navy game will be shown.

In addition to their follow-up coverage of the Indians' athletic program, the Pep Club plans to charter buses for the Navy game so that William and Mary will have a substantial cheering section. Mickey MacCoy, club president, announced that tickets would be on sale this week in the cafeteria for approximately $7. The buses will leave early on Saturday morning, and return that evening.

With a successful Football Hop added to its record, the Pep Club's plans for construction of the homecoming queen's float are now the

Students To Register For Deferment Test

Applications for the December 4, 1952 and the April 23, 1953 administration of the College Qualification Test are now available at Selective Service System local boards throughout the country.

Eligible students who intend to offer this test on either date should apply at once to the nearest Selective Service local board for an application and a bulletin of information.

Following instructions in the bulletin, the student should fill out his application and mail it immediately in the envelope provided. Applications for the December 4 test must be postmarked no later than midnight, November 1, 1952.

According to Educational Testing Service, which prepares and administers the College Qualification Test for the Selective Service System, it will be greatly to the student's advantage to file his application at once, regardless of the testing date he selects. The results will be reported to the student's Selective Service local board of jurisdiction for use in considering his deferment as a student.

Dean Wyatt's Wide Range Of Interests Includes Problems Of Other Nations

By Kay Palmer
Flat Hat Feature Writer

One of the most interesting and stimulating people on the William and Mary campus this year is our new Dean of Women, Miss Dorothea Wyatt. Although she is at present concerned mainly with our local college affairs, her wide range of interests includes people and problems of other nations.

During a trip which she took to Europe last summer, she was very much impressed by the underlying sadness and poverty which she found in supposedly gay "Paris." She said that most of the students whom she met were also aware that the outward gaiety was not real. Of the many social problems existing in France, one of the most notable, in her eyes, is the vast surplus female population. The toll of war deaths is still felt. In the economic realm, she learned that France's problem is similar to that of other European countries. Everywhere inflation is running rampant.

Visited Italy

One extremely interesting phase of her European visit was a meeting of the International Federation of University Women held at Menaggio, Italy. Although not a delegate herself, Dean Wyatt was able to learn much of this organization through her traveling companion, the U. S. delegate to the I.F.U.W. Some twenty-five or twenty-six countries were represented, and Dean Wyatt made the most of her opportunity to meet women active in university educational circles in many parts of the world.

Before coming to William and Mary, Dean Wyatt had never had any direct connection with it. However, it is interesting to note how many times her path has crossed those of outstanding William and Mary graduates. While a graduate student at Stanford, she became acquainted with Elizabeth Lam, a former William and Mary student, who now holds the important position in Washington, D. C. of administering Fulbright awards. At Goucher she met Mrs. Elizabeth S. Dow, a Physical Education instructor, who is also a William and Mary graduate. Even in the Women's Coast Guard she found one of our alumna in the person of Lucille Lowry, a staff member at the Coast Guard base in New London, Connecticut. Then, just prior to her coming here, she learned that Dr. Thomas G. Pullen, who is State Superintendent of Education in Maryland and a man whom she had known a long time, is a graduate of this distinguished institution. Perhaps it was fated that she come here eventually.

Impressed With College

Dean Wyatt's first visit to William and Mary was May Day Week end last year. At that time she was impressed with the warmth, vitality, and strength of the college. She really felt that it was a family community. She was also pleased to find that everyone was interested in keeping things at a high standard. Even her understandable regret at leaving her friends and colleagues at Goucher was assuaged by the knowledge that the people here were friendly and natural—"just like the gals back home."

'Flat Hat' Announces New Staff Members Selected In Try-Outs

New additions to the Flat Hat staff have been announced as a result of the try-outs which were held on Wednesday, September 24, in the publications office. Positions were granted on the basis of ability demonstrated in the try-out assignments.

Madge Cushing, News Editor, selected the following for her staff: Carl Anderson, Bette Bodley, Dot Chapman, Mary Jane Compe, Cynthia Frye, Sally Ives, Cynthia McCalla, William Molinoux, Margaret Morgan, Jane Taylor, and Mary Ellen Wortman. Copyreaders Martha Jordan, Sally Little, Marcia Silfen, and Carol Pugh, typist, will assist on the staff.

The two openings on the Business Staff, which is headed by Peggy Ives, are filled by Bay Campbell and Harlan Reynolds.

Sara Wachtman, editor of the feature staff, announced that the new members are Jay Palmer, Barbara Huber, Monty Reitz, and Wilson Sweeney.

Lee Everitt, Marje Williard, and Gary Joachin are the new members of the advertising staff, which is under the management of Donnie Spotts.

Those who were selected for the sports staff will be announced in the next Flat Hat issue.

James Nimmo Hubbard III Follows Family's Footsteps

By Wilson Sweeney
Flat Hat Feature Writer

Maybe you've seen him bowling low before Lord Botetourt, or in Williamsburg, or strolling around the campus... he's James Nimmo Hubbard III, and the third James Nimmo Hubbard to attend William and Mary. Around forty-five years ago, his grandfather came here, and in 1927 his father did likewise. Jim's father went on to Harvard Business School, and upon graduation, settled down in Somerville, Massachusetts, where Jim was born. He had three sisters, ages six, nine, and seventeen.

Jim attended Somerville High School. While there, he played baseball and varsity basketball. He also served on the Student Council. His favorite pastime is fishing, which he has done often along the James River with his grandfather, who owns a farm near Charles City. Jim loves hill-billy music, and is an ardent fan of Tex Ritter. On Sunday mornings Jim served as an acolyte at his church. During this last summer he worked as a soda jerk in a drug store.

On September fourteenth, Jim arrived on our campus, escorted by the two other members of his family who were, by no means, stepping on unfamiliar grounds. He quickly settled down in Old Dominion Hall. Since then, he has been continually busy and is enjoying himself thoroughly at William and Mary. While here, he expects to enter basketball, baseball, and other extra-curricular activities. When asked how he likes the college, Jim said, "It's a great place. I'll definitely send James N. Hubbard IV here, too!" On the other hand, his remark about Lord Botetourt was of a different nature. He said, "I think that Old Botetop needs a good scrubbing and I'll keep that in mind when I'm a sophomore."

Jim mentioned casually that at the moment he is free of any female entanglements, so any fresh girls who is interested, is invited to look him up. Here are the clues to his identity. He is eighteen years old, slender, and about six feet tall. He has dark brown hair, crew-cut style, and dark brown eyes.

Religious Speakers To Hold Conferences

Dwight Taylor, chairman of the Personal Conference committee of Religious Emphasis Week, urges that those students who would like a personal talk with one of the speakers of the week sign up with a committee member. A member of the committee will be waiting at the end of each program held during Religious Emphasis Week to make arrangements for the time and place for a conference.

Wesley Foundation

Under the leadership of Bill Hilliard, manager, and Bill Nixon, captain, the Wesley Foundation is organizing its football team for this year. The team's first game of the season is to be October 3 against the "Nemo's." This year the Wesley team should be even better than last year's because added to last year's squad are six powerhouse transfers from Norfolk. As the only religious group to play in the intramurals, the Wesley team made a very good showing in a scrimmage against last year's intramural champs, the Sigma Nu's, scoring two touchdowns in an 18 to 12 defeat.

The program for this week will be integrated with Religious Emphasis week. The supper group will attend the Matoaka Lake retreat of Religious Emphasis Week. Also this week the members of Wesley will participate in the Workshop Conference held here by Methodist students from all over Virginia.

A round table discussion will be held on Wednesday afternoons at 3:00 p. m. in the office of the Director of the Wesley Foundation.

Canterbury Club

The Canterbury Club held its regular supper meeting on Sunday night. Following the supper Dean Dorothea Wyatt spoke to the group.

Newman Club

Dr. and Mrs. O. Schuette gave a tea at their home on October 2 in honor of the new women members of the Newman Club.

Bob and Ed Coco have recently been appointed co-chairmen of publicity.

There will be no scheduled meeting of the group on October 12 because of the activities of Religious Emphasis Week.

COLLEGE RENDEZ-VOUS

Government to Give Student Scholarship For Foreign Study

The United States Government, through the establishment of International Education, is offering grants for study abroad. The grants are financed out of the sale of war surplus property left in foreign countries and provide generous scholarships for foreign study.

Any senior at the College of William and Mary is eligible and each year a large number of applications are reviewed by a local selection committee. Each year a student from William and Mary has gone abroad under this grant. Miss Mary Alice Slauson, a student from the College, is presently enjoying this opportunity. Miss Elizabeth McClure, Miss Margaret Pitz and Professor Moss are members of the faculty who have spent years abroad under this grant.

Qualifications are not solely that of high grades, although a good average is of course expected. The student should be a person who can profit by a year of study abroad and who holds promise of being an able person in the chosen field. Seniors who are interested in applying for this scholarship should communicate with Professor Moss, in room 319 of the Marshall Wythe Building between 8:00 and 10:00 any morning.

Methodist Students To Hold Religious Workshop Soon

Virginia Methodist Student Movement will hold its first experimental leadership workshop here at the college on October 11 and 12. The purpose of this workshop is to train delegates in five major fields to carry information back to their own Wesley Foundations and Student Movements for the improvement of their respective organizations.

The 5 topics for conference discussions are as follows: (1) "Christian Foundations for Human Rights" will be led by Miss Thelma Stevens. Miss Stevens is the executive secretary of the department of Christian social relations and local church activities of the woman's division of Christian service of the board of missions and church extension of the Methodist Church. (2) "Christian Witness on the Campus" is to be led by Mr. Howard Ellis of Nashville, Tennessee. Mr. Ellis is a member of the staff of the general board of evangelism of the Methodist Church.

(3) "Recreational Leadership..." will be under the direction of Mr. Harold Hipps who is the associate minister of the West Market Street Methodist Church, Greensboro, N. C. Mr. Hipps has recently taught similar groups at the Methodist Student Movement Regional Conferences at Lake Junaluska, N. C. (4) "World Friendship" will be headed by Miss Dorothy Nyland, secretary of student work of the board of missions and church extension of the Methodist Church. (5) "Worship" is to be led by Miss Terry Artman, new director of the Wesley Foundation of the College.

Also included on the program will be Mrs. LeRoy Ober of Norfolk, devotional leader for the three worship services which will be held during the conference. Between 75 and 100 students from 14 Virginia colleges are expected to participate in this workshop. Any students on campus are invited to sit in on conferences of their interest.

Jim Barham and Gina Bell are chairman and co-chairman for the workshop.

Formal rushing for men and women is scheduled from November 19-26.

Religious Emphasis Activities

the religious implications of their individual subjects.

Seminars Begin

The first seminar will be held on Monday at 3:30. The subject is The Modern Psychology of the Mass. At 4:30 a Seminar based on race problems entitled The Scientific Basis for Human Equality will be offered. At the same time a faculty seminar on Religious Perspectives in College Teaching will be held in Brafferton Lounge and will be led by Rev. Harrison. A dinner will be given for the speakers and Campus Committee heads at 6:00 p.m.

Monday evening will be highlighted by bull sessions which will be held at 7:30 in the sorority houses, fraternity lodges, women's dormitories, and in Monroe dormitory for the men.

Members of the faculty, local ministers, students from Union

Theological Seminary, and religious leaders from Norfolk and Richmond will lead the discussions.

America at the Crossroads of History is the topic for Tuesday's seminar at 4:30. Here the problem of communism will be discussed. Rabbi Stern will lead the chapel service on Tuesday at 5:30 with Some Thoughts on Faith. This will take the place of the regular Wednesday night chapel service. At 6:30 a seminar on Marriage and Birth Control will be conducted by Father Maioriello, Dr. Court Gibson, from the Medical College of Virginia, and Anthony Lascara, a social worker. A Coffee Hour for the campus leaders, administration, and the Campus Committee will be held in Barrett East Living Room at 7:30. At 8:00 Rev. Harrison will conduct a seminar entitled Fit to Be Tied. The topic under discussion will be courtship and marriage.

Wednesday's Program Youth and a Better World is the topic for discussion at Wednesday's first seminar at 2:30. At 3:30 the Church's Challenge for Today will be discussed. The Sceptics' Hour will be held in the Dodge Room at 4:00. Another interdenominational meeting, led by Rabbi Reich at 5:30 in Phi Beta Kappa Hall, will end Religious Emphasis Week.

Throughout the week personal conferences can be held with the speakers on secular or religious problems. These conferences will be in Barrett West Living Room. There will be a book display of outstanding authors of the three faiths in the library, and the students will be able to order any of the books, if desired.

Students are urged to take part in Religious Emphasis Week and so take advantage of the great opportunity that is being offered to them.

Freshmen Prove Superior In Tug-O-War With Juniors

The Class of 1956 proved its worth in more way than one last Friday, October 3. Clad in raincoats, old clothes, and "duc" caps, the freshmen not only won the Tug-O-War, they showed their willingness to participate in school activities by turning out in large numbers for the event. Almost 300 freshmen and 50 juniors took part in the Tug-O-War which was easily won by the freshmen. Cary Skates, president of the junior class, said, "I was somewhat disappointed in the number of juniors who participated in the event, but I believe everyone who was there had a good time."

The Tug-O-War, which lasted approximately two minutes, turned into complete chaos when the seniors aimed the fire-hose at the frosh. Immediately, each freshman rushed for the hose, and a brief struggle ensued until the freshmen gained control and proceeded to drench anyone within reach.

After the action had subsided, Bud Jay presented a gold thur-dercup to freshman Bob Levine who will keep it for his class. "1952 Junior - Freshman Tug-O-War" is engraved on the side of the cup.

At eight o'clock Friday evening in Blow Gym, the Barefoot Ball began, which was held in honor of the transfers and freshmen, both as newcomers and winners of the Tug-O-War. The dance was termed a success by many members of the junior class. A band from Hampton furnished music for the evening.

New Dorm Named

The twentieth president and the fourth American chancellor of the College of William and Mary will be honored by the new men's dormitory under construction near the Cary Field Stadium. President Alvin Duke Chandler announced last week that the Board of Visitors had decided to name the large structure for John Stewart Bryan, president from 1934 to 1942.

Fehr Urges Students Audition For Choir

Carl A. Fehr, director of choral activities at the college, has once again issued a plea to all students—particularly the men—who are interested in auditioning for both the choir and chorus. Auditions are held by appointment in the Music Building.

Mr. Fehr reports that he has 150 girls in the chorus alone at the present time. However, he feels that there are many fine male voices on this campus and they are absolutely necessary if the choir and chorus are to measure up to the standards achieved in the past.

Judicial Tea

On Tuesday, September 30, the Judicial Committee of the Women's Student Government gave a tea in honor of the housemothers. The tea was held in the Dodge room of Phi Beta Kappa hall. Special guests were Mrs. Chandler, wife of the president of the college, and Miss Wynne-Roberts, assistant dean of women.
