To Appear November 30

Many Changes Have Been Made In Design of Magazine for Current Year.

COLORED COVER ADOPTED

The first issue of the Literary Magazine will appear on November 30. Carl Mitson, editor-in-chief, has an-

Several changes have been made in the design of the magazine for the current year. The table of selected contents is to be eliminated from the cover. The color of the cover is to be changed with each issue to reveal the season. The sole decoration of the cover will be the embossed seal of the college.

In the first issue the chief contributions consist of articles, short stories and poems. "Yellow Journalism; Past, Hearst, and Future," an article written by Cynthia Jane Crowell, shows the good side of Hearst and his lack of vindication. "Two Self-conscious Gentlemen," an article written by Dan Gregory, criticises the book "While Rome Burns," by Alexander Woollcott. W. L. Davidson's short story, "Dead Man's Revenge," shows much originality in the detective story series. "Dark Futurity" is a poem by Jack Henderson. "The Compass Point" in this issue, refers to marriage. Illustrations throughout the magazine are by Helen Rose.

The contract for the magazine was awarded to Brown, Morrison Company of Lynchburg, who now have the material ready for press. Last year the Print Craft Company printed the magazine and at that time the magazine adopted a radical cover design change and was similar in appearance to the "Reader's Digest."

The circulation of the magazine has been greatly increased this year since it was heretofore financed by optional activity fees which are now compulsory for all students. The exchange list is also being steadily increased and the magazine is sent to many alumni. Exchange of publications such as the Literary Magazine is of help to the staffs in giving them new ideas for the betterment of the publication. A section of the new issue will be devoted to criticism of exchanged magazines. It was of interest to the students and added much to the magazine last year.

At the second meeting on November 14 the contract for printing The Literary Magazine was awarded to Brown, Morrison, and Company, of Lynchburg, Virginia. It was also decided that in the case of Colonial Echo pictures the entire sum for the picture or pictures be collected before the student be shown the proofs. All organizations or individuals owing money to the Colonial Echo from past years must settle such accounts by Dec. 1, 1935, in order to secure space in this year's Echo.

Sponsors in the yearbook must pay $15 per picture before March 1, 1936, and will receive one complimentary copy for each picture. Those eligible to sponsor are as follows: President of Men's Student Body, Editor of the Flat Hat, Editor of The Colonial Echo, Editor of The Literary Magazine, Captain of Football, Captain of Basketball, Captain of Baseball, Captain of Track, President of Men's Honor Council, and President of Omicron Delta Kappa.

The program was diversified and included excellent illustrations of musical numbers from the sixteenth century to the present time. The choir's interpretations of the Old Colonial folk hymns were impressive and showed intensive training. One of these old hymns "Jesus Born in Bethlea" was said by many of those present to be one of the most beautifully quaint expressions of colonial religious thought. Miss Murrell's first two numbers, while attractive and much enjoyed, were not as well interpreted as those in her final group. Her last numbers, "Lass With the Delicate Air," by Arne, and "A Southern Song" were presented with beau-ship held at the Biltmore Hotel in Atlanta, Ga. The conference was calleed by Miss Lois Shortess, representative of the Southwest Library Association, and Mr. Stone, who represented the Southeast Library Association, for the purpose of discussing the standard of training that is going into effect. Among those attending the conference were representatives of all the southern institutions, many school people, educators, members of the National Board of Education, and the president of the American Library Association.

The general feeling of the conference was that the whole level of school librarianship should be raised, tending ultimately towards graduate work, although the southern situation pointed to no immediate change. William and Mary is one of the six colleges of the South that offers four years of librarian training.

Mr. Stone is an active member of the Library Association and at the conference presided at one of the sessions, served on committees and spoke on many of the programs.

Campus of College Was Once Fortified

Interesting History of William and Mary Recalled Through Report Made in 1865.

To look at William and Mary today in all the splendor of its physical equipment and the beauty of its campus, it is hard to visualize the picture that it presented at the close of the War Between the States as reported to the Board of Visitors at a meeting on July 5, 1865, in Richmond, by Col. Benj. S. Ewell and related in the Alumni Gazette, Alumni Association publication.

The College had closed early in May 1861, the commencement exer cises being abandoned, and many professors and students hurrying into the Confederate Army. The faculty then consisted of seven members including President Ewell. Prof. Robert J. Morrison died during the War and also John Tyler, ex-president of the United States, an alumnus, Chancelfor of the College, and a member of the Board of Visitors had died during this period.

At the commencement of hostilities the Confederate military authorities took over the Wren Building, first as a barrack and later on as a hospital. They used it until the evacuation of Williamsburg on May 5, 1862. During the battle of Williamsburg much of the enclosure of the College was used by the Confederates as fuel and what was left was used by McClelland's troops.

When the Confederates left the College in 1862, Mrs. Virginia Southall and family moved into the President's House and remained until 1864.

The Federals used the Brafferton as an office and quarters for the officer commanding Williamsburg. The Wren Building was used as a Depot of Commissary Stores.

On September 9, 1862, the 5th Pennsylvania regiment of cavalry fired the Wren Building. Most of the books in the Library were saved by efforts of the citizens of Williamsburg, including many ladies.

During the summer of 1862 the Federals pulled down and carried off all the out houses on the campus except portions of brick kitchens that had served the President's House and the Brafferton. The present Alumni and Seal of the College were reported Restoration on the foundations of the Brafferton Kitchen.

A frame house on the campus, occupied before the war by Prof. Morrison, was destroyed and all the wood- $100,000. work in the Brafferton except in one room had been carried off.

After a raid in the spring of 1865 by the daring Mosby and his men, the Federals threw a line of defensive works across the campus of which the Wren Building, the remains of brick kitchens near it, the President's House and the Brafferton formed a part. This line was connected and flanked by a strong line of palisades that extended across the Jamestown and Richmond Roads.

After Mrs. Southall left the President's House in 1864 it was used as the headquarters of a Federal regi-

Six Wasp Regulars Held on Side-lines in Eligibility Dispute; Athletic Relations Severed.

William and Mary's Indians knocked Emory and Henry out of the state championship here last Saturday as the Indians scored a decisive 22-0 victory over the Wasps. Six of the visiting regular starters were kept on the bench by Pedie Jackson, the Wasp coach, following a dispute over their FROSH WIN OVER Indian athletic authorities had informed Jackson that the decision as to whether these players could participate in Saturday's game was up to him and the Emory and Henry mentor chose not to play them. The three year varsity competition rule was the basis of the dispute, these six players having played varsity ball during their freshman year at Emory and Henry. As a result of the dispute, athletic relations were severed and next year's contest at Bluefield, W. Va. was cancelled.

Truehart's long run, Fred Scruggs' long-distance punting, and Dick Ames' line plunging were highlights of the game. In the line the play of the brilliant Zable was up to his usual standard and McGowan, Groettum, Marino, and LeGrande were also outstanding. The play of Shumate, Spears, and Hancock was the best for Emory and Henry.

Chandlermen, With One Victory And One Defeat Record, Close Season With Spiders.

Coach Scrap Chandler's cross country team will entertain the harriers of the University of Richmond here on Saturday in their third meet of the season. The Indians have been seriously handicapped by the inability of Captain Platt Bullard to run on account of a sprained ankle suffered in the Virginia meet. Parker Crutchfield will also be out of the running because of an injured ankle.

Coach Chandler is depending on Lou Plummer, Aylett Baker, Ralph Baker, Bankhead Davies, William Blanton, and Sam Elliott to close their season with a victory. The Indian runners defeated Randolph-Macon and lost to Virginia in their first two meets and are determined to close the season with a victory over their

But the Ramblers, Coach Elmer Layden told a friend, used it in their sensational outburst against Ohio State the previous Saturday.

It seems that some years ago Notre Dame was having tough sledding in a big game. Nothing seemed to work for the South Benders.

Finally, in one of the huddles, a Jewish lad chirped:

"Let's try the 'Hail Mary' play." It served to pep up the Ramblers and they went on to win . The story ing it. is legend on the Notre Dame campus

They could call it "Ave Maria" for variation.

Fifty-odd games this season have ended in scoreless ties.

It's getting to be a habit with Virginia. The Cavaliers have run into three of them, with Davidson, William and Mary and Virginia Military. DUKE UNIVERSITY No-decision verdicts resulted from the Pitt-Fordham and Kansas State-

LTHOUGH fully deserved and rightfully gained, William and Mary's victory over Emory and Henry here last Saturday smacks just a bit of hollowness. It is, after all, difficult to derive satisfaction in gloating over the result in view of the fact that Emory and Henry used only its second and third string men.

Pedie Jackson, Wasp coach, had but one first string man in the game -Benny Wild, a tackle converted to end. Every other player who saw action in the farce was a first-year man with no previous college experi-

The controversy started when William and Mary athletic officials refused to allow Emory and Henry to play men who were now in their fourth year on the team. Emory and Henry based its claims for playing the men on the childish, "If Roanoke can do it, why can't we?" Which is, figuratively speaking, true logic.

But William and Mary did not know that Roanoke was using ineligible

William and Mary is playing under Southern Conference rules and expects opponents to do the same. However, according to the Associated Press, permission was granted Emory and Henry, prior to game time, to use its fourth year men. Jackson, apparently to spite himself, refused to do so and even went to the extreme by keeping regulars out of the game that were eligible.

As a result of this, Emory and Henry lost any claims they might have made for the state championship and lost, besides, a football game Notre Dame's old "Hail Mary" play which they were highly favored to win. What Mr. Jackson's motives were for keeping his regulars on the bench are conjectural. The Wasp mentor is known for his cagyness.

But if losing a football game is considered the smart thing to do now in pigskin circles, then you're carrying cagyness too far.

The inter-fraternity basketball tournament is producing some fairly good points on how not to play this game of basketball and, conversely, the more orthodox manner of play-

LIBRARY REGULATIONS

A visiting student who once tramped through the College Library on a Monday evening was heard to remark that the noise was comparable to a boiler factory in the dark dead days of

Even with an augmented staff of librarians this situation still exists, although to a lesser egree. The real student finds it hard to concentrate among those who are seeking a social evening. The librarians make every effort to aid the students in finding their books, and in trying to preserve order and peace in the building, but they can accomplish nothing without the cooperation of the students.

On occasion the library staff has found it necessary to report noisy students to the Adninistration. Also on occasion these students have given false names when asked to sign a hip to be turned in to the College. A false signature in such a case—to escape punishment is an Honor Council offense and may lead to serious consequences. The Library officials ask only for cooperation from the students. They have no desire to see the students punished, but unless the situation nproves, drastic steps may be taken to curb the unruly "students."

LET'S DO OUR PART

One hundred and thirty-eight students of the lege are now the recipients of governmental aid in the form of N.Y.A. jobs. These jobs embrace the positions of library assistants, professors' assistants, office clerks, and manual worken on the College grounds. The federal government appropriates two thousand and seventy dollars monthly to maintain this work.

sary to remind the students of wh

iam and Mary that this timely government aid is indispensable to many students who otherrise could not finance their higher education. Hence, it is only proper to expect the recipients of this N.Y.A. support to show an attitude of appreciation to the administration. This atti-tude may be expressed not only in the quality of work returned but also in cooperating in the perfunctory matters among which the most important is the remittance of time sheets to the administration office at the proper time. These time sheets should be in at the end of each week and an entire report for the month is due today and the nineteenth of every month. This little bit of cooperation will not only permit the administration to send in their reports to the govcomment on time, but in return will bring the dent workers their pay at regular intervals. his minor consideration on the part of the student, it seems, is little for our officials, who apparently are doing all in their power to give the ess fortunate of us a college education, to ask.

THIS COLLEGIATE WORLD

Medical students at the University of West Virginia refer to their cadavers as "hicks" not, as is the almost universal custom, as "stiffs," and therein lies a tale.

It seems that in the old days the cadavers were entrusted upon arrival to the one and only university janitor, a campus character who spent much of his time loitering in the class ms. One day he heard a professor of Latin, who was discussing the Aeneid, use the phrase Hic jacet" (here he lies).

Stratosphere Flight Is Help to "Man on Street"

While such peculiarities cent. would have only an indirect effect on weather at the surface of the earth, meteorologists believe that only by studying such phenomena can more accurate weather forecasting be done. Dr. Lyman Briggs sees in the spore studies a possibility of new light on causing human and plant diseases. A tube with a sticky coating on the inside was dropped from the highest altitude of the flight, collecting spores on the sticky substance. When the tube reached the bottom of the stratosphere it was automatically sealed. Doctor Briggs is director of the national bureau of standards and chairman of the scientific advisory committee of the National Geographic society-army air corps stratosphere

Flying There Impractical

From this experiment it is hoped to discover if spores live at the rarefied heights and if they are similar to those lower down.

Mr. Doe isn't going to catch the "stratosphere express" for London, though, until a good deal more is added to the sum of flying knowledge. "At the present time it wouldn't be possible to build planes capable of commercial service in the higher parts of the stratosphere," said Dr.

"By building a stripped plane just light enough to get up there, aviators have taken the heavier-than-air ships up close to 45,000 feet. But thus far airplanes have not been developed to the point where a large ship, carrying a pay load and sufficient fuel for long hops, can be built. Theoretically Ideal

"From the standpoint of transportation, the stratosphere is ideal in theory, however. Its thinner air would make for great speeds."

Airplane designers now have in view the building of planes which will fly normally at about 15,000 feet and one commercial airline has its pilots fly regularly at 10,000 feet.

Although on the short end of the more, the team that most impressed me was Alpha Phi Delta. Those boys handled the ball nicely and were, in my opinion, superior to any other team in floor work. Joe Marino, varcity football guard, was especially neat in handling the ball.

Despite this, though, the team failed to click as one would expect it to. Their shooting was unusually poor, and in the long run, the team which makes the most baskets is inevitably the winner.

Literary Guidepost By JOHN SELBY

By JOHN SELBY What Is a Book? Thoughts About Writing," edited by Dale Warren; (Houghton Mifflin).

A few people have been amused for long while by the naivete of writers, which leads them to suppose that the general public is interested in discussions of writing technique.

It is obvious that a pianist, for example, would not write a book on the technique of his art and expect the general public to buy it-in spite of the fact that music is a far more generally used art than is writing when the latter is considered in its artistic, not utilitarian, aspect. Nor would a surgeon expect the general public to buy a book on the technique of surgery in spite of that fact that surgery is likewise a matter of huge interest to the world.

Dale Warren has collected from various sources the intimate opinion of 20 writers on their art. Many, in fact most, of the 20 take their subject with commendable though dry seriousness. Valentine Williams makes a brave effort to justify and create respect for his specialty, which of course is the detective story. Gertrude Atherton describes her way with her specialty, which is the ladylike novel. Ellen Glasgow, who does not approve of the "hard boiled" fiction school, takes vicious swings at the Caldwell-Faulkner cabal.

Mary Agnes Hamilton defends writers for children, lest they be thought lesser fry. Frances Lester write a certain chapter, discussing same with the family in the kitchen, revising as the family dictated. Rafael Sabatini writes a splendid blurb for his next historical novel. And soand so- and so-

Perhaps Gertrude Atherton's contribution is the most frank and revealing. She is one of those authors whose characters chase them around. She even wants to murder them sometimes. And she is tired of several things, among them books which picture war as turning men into brutes. "Personally," she writers, "I have stanzas in Spencer's measure." These met quite a number of men who have stanzas, with a few odd relics, he got been through several wars and they from his trunk and tossed to Dallas.

When Byron returned in 1811 he brought with him "Hints From Horace," a satiric poem which he valued very highly and which was pretty bad.
